(2) If a son dies before partition leaving the mother as his heir, the mother is entitled, upon a partition between her surviving sons, to receive a share as heiress of her deceased son, as well as a share in her own right. The share which she is entitled to receive as the heiress of her deceased son is not stridhana for property inherited by a mother is not stridhana at all, and it is not therefore to be taken into account in determining the value of her share on partition (c) [ill. (a)].

The Calcutta High Court has held that as a share was given to the mother only in lieu of maintenance no further share should be allotted to her if what she had obtained by inheritance from her deceased son was sufficient for her maintenance (d).

(3) A Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga law may dispose of the whole of his property, ancestral as well as self-acquired, by a will so as to deprive his widow of a share on a partition between her sons. The reason is that, according to that law, a widow has no indefeasible vested right in the property left by her husband. But if the whole property be willed away, she has, by virtue of her marriage, a right to maintenance out of her husband's property (e) [ill. (b)].

(4) Under the Dayabhaga law, a sonless step-mother is not entitled to a share on a partition between her stepsons (f) [ill. (c)].

(5) On a partition between sons by different mothers, where there is more than one son of each mother, the rule is first to divide the property into as many shares as there are sons, and then to allot to each mother a share equal to that of each of her sons in the aggregate portion allotted to them (g) [ill. (d)]. A mother who has only one son is not entitled to a separate share.

---

(z) See Bhattacharya's Hindu Law, 2nd edn., p. 361; Mitra's Law of Joint Property and Partition, p. 320.

(a) (1888) 15 Cal. 292, 306-307.

(b) Kishori v. Moni Mohun (1886) 12 Cal. 165; Jogendra v. Fulkumari (1900) 27 Cal. 77.

(c) Jugomohan v. Sarodamoyee (1878) 3 Cal. 149; Poorendra Nath v. Hemangini (1909) 36 Cal. 75, 1 I.C. 523.

(d) Indu Bhusan v. Mrityunjoy (1946) 1 Cal. 128.

(e) Debendra v. Brojendra (1890) 17 Cal. 886; (1909) 39 Cal. 75, 1 I.C. 523, supra.

(f) Srimati Hemangini v. Kedarnath (1889) 16 Cal. 758, 765, 16 I.A. 115.

(g) Kristo Bhabiney v. Ashutosh (1886) 13 Cal. 39.

Her only right is to maintenance out of the portion allotted to him (h) [ill. (e)].

(6) According to the Dayabhaga law, the share allotted to a mother on a partition between her sons is given to her in lieu of, or by way of provision for, her maintenance [§ 128(1)]. Such being the case, she is not entitled to a share if a portion only of the joint property is divided and the bulk of the property remains undivided; provided that she can be adequately maintained from the undivided property (i).

(7) The mere institution of a suit for partition by a son does not entitle the mother to a share in her husband's estate. If the suit is dismissed or withdrawn, she can claim no share. It is only if a decree is passed in the suit that she is entitled to a share. It follows that if one of the properties is mortgaged by the sons, and it is sold at the instance of the mortgagee before a decree for partition is passed, she is not entitled to any share in that property. Nor is she entitled by reason of the sale of the property to a larger share in the other properties. Whether she would be entitled to any charge for her maintenance on the property sold is an open question (j).

Illustrations

(a) H dies leaving a widow A, and three sons B, C and D. B, C and D remain joint, after some time D dies intestate and unmarried. On D's death, A is entitled to his share as his heir [sec. 88]. A year after D's death, B sues C and A for partition. The property will be divided into four shares of which one will be allotted to B, one to C and two to A, one as D's heir and the other in her own right: Jugomohan v. Sarodamoyee (1878) 3 Cal. 149. [According to the Mitakshara law, D's share would pass to B and C by survivorship.]

(b) A dies leaving a widow B, and two sons, C and D. A by his will bequeaths the whole of his property, ancestral as well as self-acquired, absolutely to C and D. C sues D for partition. Is B entitled to a share at such partition? No; because the whole property has been willed away to the sons. She is entitled to maintenance only: Debendra v. Brojendra (1890) 17 Cal. 886.

(c) A dies leaving a widow B who has no son, and two sons, C and D by a predeceased wife. C sues D for partition. Is B entitled to share on partition? No, for B is not the mother, but the step-mother of C and D. [According to the Mitakshara law, B would take one-third: See § 316].

(d) A dies leaving two widows, B and C, and two sons by B, and three sons by C. On a partition between the sons of B and C, the mode of division is first to divide the property into 5 shares corresponding to the number of sons. The two sons of B will share 2/5 equally with their mother B, each taking 1/3 of 2/5, i.e. 2/15. The three sons of C will share 3/5 equally with their mother C, each taking 1/4 of 3/5, i.e., 3/20. Thus B, will take 2/15 and C will take 3/20.

(e) A dies leaving a widow B, a son C by B, and two sons, D and E, by a predeceased wife. C sues D and E for partition. Each of the three sons takes one-third. B is not entitled to share the one-third allotted to her son C with him as she has only one son. But she is entitled to maintenance out of the one-third allotted to her son C: Hemangini v. Kedarnath (1889) 16 Cal. 758, 16 I.A. 115.

354. Grandmother.—A grandmother (father's mother) cannot herself demand a partition but—

(i) if a partition takes place between her sons and grandsons, or between her sons and a predeceased son's daughter, who acquired a share as the heir of her father (k), she takes the share of a son;

---

(h) (1889) 16 Cal. 758, 16 I.A. 115, supra; Sorolah v. Bhoobun (1888) 15 Cal. 292, 307.
(i) Barahi v. Debkamini (1893) 20 Cal. 682.
(j) Baldeodas v. Sarojini (1930) 57 Cal. 597, 126 I.C. 408, ('29) A.C. 697.
(k) Sibbosoondery v. Bussoomutty (1881) 7 Cal. 191

(ii) if a partition takes place between her grandsons, she takes the share of a grandson; and

(iii) if a partition takes place between her grandsons and great-grandsons, she takes the share of a grandson (l).

In each case, if she has received any stridhana from her husband or her father-in-law, she is entitled to so much only as together with what she has already received would make her share equal to that of a son or grandson as the case may be (m).

The grandmother gets a share only if the subject matter of partition is the proper y of her husband (n).

Illustration

A dies leaving a widow B, and a son X. X dies leaving a widow C, and two sons D and Y. Y dies leaving a widow E and a son F. D, who is A's grandson, sues F, who is A's great-grandson, B, his grandmother, C, his mother, and E his brother's widow, for a partition of A's property. Here the partition is really between D, B's grandson and F, B's great-grandson. Therefore B, as grandmother of D is entitled to a share, equal to that of her grandson D. Similarly C, as D's mother is entitled to a share equal to that of her son D. What are the shares of B and C? As B is entitled to a share equal to that of a grandson, the property will first be divided into three parts of which B will take 1/3, D will take 1/3 and the heirs of Y, that is, E and F will take 1/3. Similarly as C is entitled to a share equal to that of a son and the portion allotted to the sons D and Y is 2/3, C will take 1/3 of 2/3, i.e. 2/9, D will take 2/9, and F will take 2/9. E is not entitled to share her son F's 2/9, with him, as, according to the Dayabhaga law, a mother who has only one son is not entitled to a share on partition (o).

355. Allotment of shares.—On a partition shares are allotted according to the following rules:—

(1) on a partition between brothers, they all take equally (p);

(2) the share of a brother who is dead is taken by his heir, devisee, or assignee;

(3) each branch takes per stirpes (that is, according to the stock) as regards every other branch, but the members of a branch take per capita as regards one another.

Illustration

A dies leaving two sons B and C, a grandson D by C, and two grandsons F and G by a predeceased son E. The property will be divided into three portions per stirpes, B taking one-third, C, taking one-third, and F and G together taking the one-third. F and G take per capita, that is, each taking one-sixth. D takes nothing, for under the Bengal school sons do not take any interest in ancestral property during their father's lifetime. [If B had died leaving a widow, his third would have gone to her (rule 2); according to the Mitakshara law, it would have passed by survivorship to C and E].

---

(l) Sibbosoondery v. Bussoomutty (1881) 7 Cal. 191; Purna Chandra v. Sarojini (1904) 31 Cal. 1065.

(m) Kishori v. Moni Mohun (1886) 12 Cal. 165.

(n) Kiranbala v. Sushil, 53 C.W.N. 709.

(o) Ibid.

(p) Dayabhaga, chap. iii, sec. 2, para 27.

CHAPTER XVIII

GIFTS

356. "Gift" defined.—"Gift consists in the relinquishment (without consideration) of one's own right (in property) and the creation of the right of another; and the creation of another man's right is completed on that other's acceptance of the gift, but not otherwise."

Mitakshara, chap. 3, secs. 5 and 6. See § 358, and notes "Acceptance of gift".

357. What property may be disposed of by gift.—(1) A Hindu, whether governed by the Mitakshara or the Dayabhaga school, may dispose of by gift his separate or self-acquired property, subject in certain cases to the claims for maintenance of those whom he is legally bound to maintain [§ 222]. Reference may be made to sections 18 to 22 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

(2) A coparcener under the Dayabhaga law may dispose of his coparcenary interest by gift subject to the claims of those who are entitled to be maintained by him [§ 282].

A coparcener under the Mitakshara law, however, has no such power [§ 258], unless he is the sole surviving coparcener [§ 257].

(3) A father under the Dayabhaga law may by gift dispose of the whole of his property, whether ancestral or self-acquired, subject to the claims of those who are entitled to be maintained by him (q).

The reason is that according to the Bengal school, "where property is held by the father [as the head of the family], his issue have no legal claim upon him or the property except for their maintenance. He can dispose of it as he pleases, and they cannot require a partition. The sons have not ownership while the father is alive and free from defect Upon his death the property in the sons arises, and with it the right to a partition" (r) [§§ 273, 275]. A father under the Mitakshara law has no such power over joint family property. He cannot dispose of it, not even his own interest therein, by gift. In certain cases, however, he has a special power, by virtue of his position as father, to dispose of, by gift, a small portion of joint family property [§§ 225 and 226].

(4) A female may dispose of her stridhana by gift or will, subject in certain cases to the consent of her husband [§ 143]. The rights of a female have been considerably enlarged by section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956. Reference may be made to the Notes under that post.

(5) A widow may in certain cases by gift dispose of a small portion of the property inherited by her from her husband [§ 181B (2) (v)], but she cannot do so by will. Her rights have now been considerably enlarged by section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section post.

(6) A widow governed by the Mayukha law may alienate by gift moveable property inherited by her from her husband, though she cannot dispose of it by will [§ 179]. Her rights have now been considerably enlarged by section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section post.

---

(q) Nagalutchmee v. Gopoo (1856) 6 M.I.A. 309, 344 [case of a will].

(r) Sartaj v. Deoraj (1888) 10 All. 272, 288, 15 I.A. 51.

(7) The owner of an impartible estate may dispose of it by gift or will, unless there be a special custom prohibiting alienation or the tenure is of such a nature that the estate cannot be alienated (s).

Marumakkatayyam law.—As to the effect of a gift by a husband to his wife and her children by him, her children by her former husband being alive at the date of the gift, see the undermentioned case (t).

358. Delivery of possession.—(1) A gift under pure Hindu law need not be in writing. But a gift under that law is not valid unless it is accompanied by delivery of possession of the subject of the gift from the donor to the donee (u). Mere registration of a deed of gift is not equivalent to delivery of possession; it is not therefore sufficient to pass the title of the property from the donor to the donee (v). But where from the nature of the case physical possession cannot be delivered, it is enough to validate a gift if the donor has done all that he could to complete the gift, so as to entitle the donee to obtain possession (w).

Illustrations

(a) A executes a deed of gift of certain immovable property to B. At the date of the gift the property is in the possession of C who claims to hold it adversely to A. B sues C to recover possession of the property from him, joining A in the suit as a defendant. A by his written statement admits B's claim. C contends that the gift is void, inasmuch as A was out of possession at the date of the gift, and possession was not given to B. The gift is valid, though possession was not delivered by the donor to the donee. Their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "But it must be observed that in this case the dispute as to the validity of the gift is not between the donee and the donor or a person claiming under him. The person who disputes it claims adversely to both. . . . The donor has done all that she can to complete the gift, and is a party to the suit, and admits the gift to be completed": Kalidas v. Kanhaya Lal (1884) 11 Cal. 121, 11 I.A. 218, followed in Mahomed Buksh v. Hooseini Bibi (x). See also Man Bhari v. Naunidh (y); Muhammad Mumtaz v. Zubaida Jain (z). Mahomed Buksh's case and Muhammad Mumtaz's case were both cases under Mahomedan law which, in this respect, is similar to pure Hindu law.

(b) A gift of property in the occupation of tenants may be completed by the tenants attorning to the donee at the donor's request: Bank of Hindustan v. Premchand (a).

(c) If the donee is already in possession, the gift may be completed by a declaration of gift on the part of the donor, and by acceptance on the part of the donee: Bai Kushal v. Lakhma (b).

(c1) A gift among the Hindus of Berar before the application of the Transfer of Property Act to that State is invalid unless accompanied by delivery of possession (c).

(d) It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that mere delivery of a registered deed of gift is sufficient to complete a gift (d). This view cannot be supported unless the case was one governed by the Transfer of Property Act [see sub-§ (2) below].

(e) For the purpose of making a gift of an incorporeal right, the transfer may be effected in the same manner as the transfer of a chose in action (e).

---

(s) Surtaj v. Deoraj (1888) 10 All. 272, 15 I.A. 51, Venkata Surya v. Court of Wards (1899) 22 Mad. 383, 26 I.A. 83; Rao Bhimsingh v. Fakirchand (1947) Nag. 649.

(t) Moithiyan v. Ayissa (1928) 51 Mad. 574, 110 I.C. 480, ('28) A.M. 870.

(u) Harjivan v. Naran (1867) 4 Bom. H.C.A.C. 31; Abaji v. Mukta (1894) 18 Bom. 688; Venkatachella v. Thathammal (1869) 4 Mad. H.C. 460. See also Gordhandas v. Bai Ramcoover (1902) 26 Bom. 449. Also see Mst. Nozi v. Mohanlal ('57) A. Raj. 128.

(v) Vasudev v. Narayan (1883) 7 Bom. 131; Dagai v. Mothura (1883) 9 Cal. 854; Lakshimoni v. Nittyananda (1893) 20 Cal. 464.

(w) Kalidas v. Kanhaya Lal (1884) 11 Cal. 121, 11 I.A. 218 [where the gift was effected by an ikrarnama, Joitaram v. Ramkrishna (1903) 27 Bom. 31; Rajaram v. Ganesh (1889) 23 Bom. 131; Bhaskar v. Sarasvatibai (1893) 17 Bom. 486.

(x) (1888) 15 Cal. 684, 701-702, 15 I.A. 81.

(y) (1882) 4 All. 40, 45.

(z) (1889) 11 All. 460, 475-476, 16 I.A. 205.

(a) (1868) 5 Bom. H.C.O.C. 83.

(b) (1883) 7 Bom. 452.

(c) Chandrabhaga v. Anandarao (1939) Nag. 293.

(d) Balmakund v. Bhagwan Das (1894) 16 All. 185.

(e) Chalamanna v. Subbamma (1884) 7 Mad. 23 [gift of a nibandha or corrody]; Khursedji v.

(2) As regards Hindu gifts to which the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, applies, the rule of pure Hindu law that delivery of possession is essential to the validity of a gift is abrogated by sec. 123 of that Act (f). Under that Act delivery of possession is no longer necessary to complete a gift, nor is mere delivery sufficient to constitute a gift except in the case of movable property. A gift under that Act can only be effected in the manner provided by sec. 123. That section is as follows:—

(i) "For the purpose of making a gift of immovable property, the transfer must be effected by a registered instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, and attested by at least two witnesses.

(ii) "For the purpose of making a gift of movable property, the transfer may be effected by a registered instrument signed as aforesaid or by delivery."

Gifts by Hindus to which the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, applies.—Section 123 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, has been applied to gifts by Hindus by sec. 129 of that Act. The Act came into force on the first day of July 1882. It extended, in the first instance, to the whole of British India except the territories respectively administered by the Governor of Bombay in Council, the Lieutenant-Governor of Punjab, and the Chief Commissioner of Burma. It was subsequently extended to the Bombay Presidency on the first day of January 1893, and, on the same date, to the area included within the local limits of the ordinary civil jurisdiction of the Recorder of Rangoon. The result is that the provisions of sec. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act apply to all gifts made by Hindus in the territories to which the Act applies since the date on which the Act came into force in those territories.

Writing.—Writing is not necessary under Hindu law for the validity of any transaction (g). Therefore, in cases of gifts by Hindus to which the Transfer of Property Act does not apply, a gift may be made orally or in writing.

Acceptance of gift.—"A gift," according to the Mitakshara, "consists in the relinquishment of one's own right and the creation of the rights of another. The creation of another man's right is completed on that other's acceptance of the gift, but not otherwise. Acceptance is made by three means, mental, verbal, or corporeal. In the case of land, as there can be no corporeal acceptance without enjoyment of the produce it must be accompanied by some little possession, otherwise the gift, sale, or other transfer is not complete" (h).

The effect of sec. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act is to dispense with delivery of possession (i). But the Act does not dispense with the necessity of acceptance as is clear from sec. 122. The mere execution of a registered deed by the donor is no proof of acceptance by the donee. Acceptance must be proved as an independent fact.

Gifts and bequests to unborn persons.—See §§ 360 and 373.

359. Gift to unborn person: Rule apart from statute.—Under pure Hindu law, a gift cannot be made in favour of a person who was not in existence at the date of the gift (j). This rule still applies to cases to which the provisions of the three Acts mentioned in the next section (§ 360) do not apply (j1).

---

Pestonji (1888) 12 Bom. 573 [gift of Government Promissory Notes].

(f) Kalyanasundaram v. Karuppa (1927) 54 I.A. 89, 50 Mad. 193, 100 I.C. 105, ('27) A.P.C. 42; Atmaram v. Vaman (1925) 49 Bom. 388 [F.B.], 87 I.C. 490, ('25) A.B. 210; Dharmodas v. Nistarini (1887) 14 Cal. 446; Balbhadra v. Bhowani (1907) 34 Cal. 853; Bai Rambai v. Bai Mani (1899) 23 Bom. 234; Ramamirtha v. Gopala (1896) 19 Mad. 433; Alabi v. Mussa (1901) 24 Mad. 513, 522; Phulchand v. Lakkhu (1903) 25 All. 358; Lallu Singh v. Gur Narain (1923) 45 All. 115, 68 I.C. 798, ('22) A.A. 467 [F.B.]; Ranganadha v. Baghirathi (1906) 29 Mad. 412, 415. But see Moosabhai v. Yacoobhai (1905) 29 Bom. 267. See also Sadik Husain Khan v. Hashim Ali Khan (1916) 43 I.A. 212, 222, 223, 38 All. 627, 647, 36 I.C. 104, ('16) A.P.C. 27.

(g) Balaram v. Appa (1872) 9 Bom. H.C. 121, Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dyal (1876) 26 W.R. 55, 3 I.A. 259.

(h) Mitakshara chap. iii. secs. 5 and 6; W. MacN. 212, 217.

(i) Dharmodas v. Nistarini (1887) 14 Cal. 446, 448.

(j) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 397, 400, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 67, 70; Bai Mamubai v. Dossa (1891) 15 Bom. 443; Sri Raja Venkata v. Sri Rajah Suraneni (1908) 31 Mad. 310.

(j1) Raman Nadar v. Rasalamma ('70) A.S.C. 1759.

For exception to this rule, see notes to § 372. As to bequests, see § 372. As to trusts, see § 366. As to gift to an idol, see § 410.

360. Gift to unborn person: Rules as altered by statute.—(1) The rule of Hindu law stated in § 359 that a gift cannot be made in favour of an unborn person has been altered by three Acts, namely, the Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act, 1914, the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, and the Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921. The rule as altered by these Acts may be stated as follows:—

Subject to the limitations and dispositions contained in Chapter II of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, no gift is invalid by reason only that any person for whose benefit it may have been made was not born at the date of the gift.

This rule, however, is not of universal application, but is confined to the following transfers, by way of gift:—

(i) to transfers executed on or after the 14th February 1914, by Hindus domiciled in the State of Madras except the City of Madras, and, in the case of transfers executed before that date, to such of the dispositions thereby made as are intended to come into operation at a time which is subsequent to that Act: Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act, 1914. The Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act, which applied to the State of Madras except the city of Madras, now stands repealed with effect from 1st February, 1960 and the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916 has now been made applicable to the State of Madras also.*

(ii) to transfers executed on or after the 20th September 1916, by Hindus in any part of India except the state of Madras: Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916: The Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, which originally applied to the rest of India except the State of Madras, has now been made applicable to the State of Madras also.*

(iii) to transfers executed on or after the 27th March, 1921, by Hindus domiciled within the limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Madras, and, in the case of transfers executed before that date, to such of the dispositions thereby made as are intended to come into operation at a time which is subsequent to the 14th February, 1914: Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921. The Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921, which applied to the City of Madras stands repealed with effect from 1st February, 1960 and the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916 has now been made applicable to the City of Madras also.*

(2) The limitations and provisions contained in Chapter II of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, are discussed in §§ 383 to 387 below. For the present they may be summarised as follows: (a) if the gift to an unborn person is preceded by a prior disposition, the gift shall be of the whole residue; (b) the gift shall not offend the rule against perpetuities; (c) if a gift is made to a class of persons with regard to some of whom it is void under (a) or (b), the gift fails in regard to those persons only and not in regard to the whole class; (d) if a gift to an unborn person is void under (a) or (b) any gift intended to take effect after such gift is also void.

* See Miscellaneous Personal Laws (Extension) Act XLVIII of 1959.

History of the legislation on the subject.—It was held by the Privy Council in the Tagore case in 1872 that a Hindu cannot dispose of his property by gift in favour of a person who was not in existence at the date of the gift [§ 35], nor could he dispose of his property by will in favour of a person who was not in existence at the date of the death of the testator [§ 372]. The first enactment which validated gifts and bequests in favour of unborn person was the Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act, 1914. This was an Act of the Madras Legislature. It applied in terms to the whole of the State of Madras and was intended so to apply. It was followed by Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, which was an Act of the Imperial Legislature. It applied to the whole of British India except the province of Madras for which legislation had already been made by the local Act, of 1914. After the Act of 1916 was passed, the High Court of Madras held as to the Madras Act of 1914 that the local Legislature had no power to take away the right of a Hindu domiciled within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of High Court of Madras to be governed by the Hindu law as it stood when the High Courts Act, 1861, was passed. The fact, however, was that the Hindu law as it then stood did allow gifts and bequests in favour of unborn persons, and the Tagore case had misinterpreted that law (*j*2). This led to the enactment by the Imperial Legislature of the Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921. This Act extends in effect the local Act of 1914 to Hindus domiciled in the City of Madras. It also validates gifts and bequests made by Hindus domiciled in the City of Madras subsequent to the 14th February 1914, being the date on which the local Act of 1914 came into force. The result is that as between them the Acts of 1914 and 1921 apply to the whole State of Madras, and the Act of 1916 applies to the rest of India.

It may be noted, however, that, as stated earlier, with effect from 1st February, 1960, The Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act, 1914, and The Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921 stand repealed, and The Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, has now been made applicable to the whole of India including the State and City of Madras, excepting the State of Jammu and Kashmir. See Miscellaneous Personal Laws (Extension) Act XLVIII of 1959.

Gifts and bequests, however, in favour of unborn person, could only be made subject to certain limitations and provisions. These limitations and provisions were not the same under the three Acts. To attain uniformity the three Acts were amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, being Act 21 of 1929, which came into force on the 1st April 1930. These limitations and provisions are more or iess the same both in the case of gifts and of wills and they are dealt with together in §§ 383 and 384. Except as to these, we have dealt separately with gifts and bequests in favour of unborn persons, not because there is any material difference between them, but because a separate treatment must conduce to a clear understanding of the subject. As to bequests to unborn persons, see § 373.

361. Reservation of life interest.—A gift of property is not invalid because the donor reserves the usufruct of the property to himself for life (k).

Illustration

A executes a registered deed of gift of seven villages to her daughter, and delivers immediate possession of four villages to her. As to the remaining three villages the condition is that she will retain possession and enjoy the profits thereof during her life-time, but will not have power to make any transfer in respect thereof. The gift is valid not only as regards the four villages, but as to the other three also. There being an intention to effect a transfer in praesenti of the proprietary interest in all the seven villages and to vest the same in the donee, the reservation of the right to enjoy the usufruct on the three villages during her own life-time does not make the gift invalid as to the three villages: Lallu Singh v. Gur Narain (1923) 45 All. 115, 68 I.C. 798, ('22) A.A. 467[F.B.].

---

(*j*2) Raman Naddar v. Rasalamma ('70) A.S.C. 1759.

(k) Lallu Singh v. Gur Narain (1923) 45 All. 115, 68 I.C. 798, ('22) A.A. 467 [F.B.].

362. Conditions restraining alienation or partition.—Where property is given subject to a condition absolutely restraining the donee from alienating it (l), or it is given to two or more persons subject to a condition restraining them from partitioning it (m), the condition is void, but the gift itself remains good [§ 393].

363. Revocation of gift.—A gift once completed is binding upon the donor, and it cannot be revoked by him (n), unless it was obtained by fraud or undue influence (o).

Where a gift is made by a Hindu widow, the burden lies upon the donee to show that she made the gift with a full understanding of what she was doing and was aware of her rights (p).

364. Gift in fraud of creditors.—A gift made with intent to defeat or defraud creditors is voidable at the option of the creditors (q).

365. Donatio mortis causa.—A donatio mortis causa, that is, a gift made in contemplation of death, is recognized by the Hindu law (r).

366. Trusts.—(1) Trusts are no more strange to the Hindu than to the English system of law (s). Before the enactment of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, a trust could only be created by delivery of possession, or its equivalent (t), to trustees as in the case of a gift. But a Hindu trust governed by the Act can only be created in the manner provided by sec. 5 of that Act. That section is as follows:—

(i) "No trust in relation to immovable property is valid unless declared by a non-testamentary instrument in writing signed by the author of the trust or the trustee and registered, or by the will of the author of the trust or of the trustee.

(ii) "No trust in relation to movable property is valid unless declared as aforesaid or unless the ownership of the property is transferred to the trustee" (u).

(2) A trust cannot be created except in favour of a person to whom a gift or bequest can be validly made. Nor can a trust be made a means of effecting a course of devolution opposed to the Hindu law of property and succession. In other words, trusts are to be regarded as gifts alike as to the property which can be transferred as to the persons to whom it can be transferred (v).

There is some authority for the proposition that under the Hindu law, in cases not governed by the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, a mere declaration of trust, not amounting to a legal transfer, can be enforced in favour of the object of the trust (w).

---

(l) Anantha v. Nagamuthu (1882) 4 Mad. 200; Ali Hasan v. Dhirja (1882) 4 All. 518; Bhairo v. Parmeshri (1885) 7 All. 516 [case of a deed of compromise]; Muthukumara v. Anthony (1915) 38 Mad. 867, 24 I.C. 120; Rukminibai v. Laxmibai (1920) 44 Bom. 304, 56 I.C. 361, ('20) A.B. 73 [Agrahar gift]. See Transfer of Property Act s. 10.

(m) Narayanan v. Kannan (1884) 7 Mad. 315. Transfer of Property Act, s. 11.

(n) Ganga Baksh v. Jagat Bahadur (1896) 23 Cal. 15, 22 I.A. 153; Rajaram v. Ganesh (1899) 23 Bom. 131; Ammaponammal v. Shanmugam ('71) A.M. 370.

(o) Manigavri v. Narondas (1891) 15 Bom. 549.

(p) Deo Kuar v. Man Kuar (1894) 17 All. 1, 21 I.A. 148 [gift set aside—suit brought eight years after date of gift—document not explained to donor].

(q) Nasir v. Mata (1880) 2 All. 891; Rai Bishen Chand v. Mussamat Asmaida Koer (1884) 6 All. 560, 11 I.A. 164.

(r) Visalatchmi v. Subbu (1871) 6 Mad. H.C. 270; Bhaskar v. Sarasvatibai (1893) 17 Bom. 486, 495.

(s) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 401-402, I.A Sup. Vol. 47-71-72; Sri Sri Sridhar Jiu v. Manindra Kumar Mitra (1940) 2 Cal. 285, 195 I.C. 475, ('41) A.C. 272.

(t) Gordhandas v. Bai Ramcoover (1902) 26 Bom. 449, 470-471.

(u) Ranganadha v. Baghirathi (1906) 29 Mad. 412, 415.

(v) Kahandas Narrandas, in re (1881) 5 Bom. 154, 173-174; Tagore v. Tagore (1869) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 401-402, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 71-72; Rajender v. Sham Chund (1881) 6 Cal. 106.

(w) Chatti v. Pandrangi (1884) 7 Mad. 23; Hirbai v. Jan Mahomed (1883) 7 Bom. 229; Bhaskar v. Sarasvatibai (1893) 17 Bom. 486, 498-501; Gordhandas v. Bai Ramcoover (1902) 26 Bom. 449, 472.

CHAPTER XIX

WILLS

Note.—Under Hindu law a Hindu cannot by will bequeath property which he could not have alienated by gift inter vivos. That rule is now considerably modified in case of persons governed by the Mitakshara law. Section 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, now permits a member of a Mitakshara coparcenary to dispose of by will his undivided interest in the coparcenary property. A coparcener under the Mitakshara law has no power to dispose of his coparcenary interest by gift. That rule is not affected by the new legislation but he is now entitled to dispose of such interest by will. The position of a coparcener under the Dayabhaga law has not been altered in any manner. He could always dispose of his coparcenary interest by gift or will subject to the claims of those who were entitled to be maintained by him.

367. Persons capable of making wills.—Subject to the provisions hereinafter contained every Hindu who is of sound mind, and not a minor, may dispose of his property [§ 371] by will (x).

Burden of proof.—As regards the onus of proof in cases of wills the rules of law are quite clear. The first rule is, that "the onus probandi lies in every case upon the party propounding a will, and he must satisfy the conscience of the Court that the instrument so propounded is the last will of a free and capable testator." The second rule is, that "if a party writes or prepares a will under which he takes a benefit, or if any other circumstances exist which excite the suspicion of the Court, and whatever their nature may be, it is for those who propound the will to remove such suspicion, and to prove affirmatively that the testator knew and approved the contents of the will, and it is only where this is done that the onus is thrown on those who oppose the will to prove fraud or undue influence, or whatever they rely on to displace the case for proving the will (y)." Reference may be made to the undermentioned decisions where the Supreme Court has considered the general principles relating to proof (*y*1).

Wills unknown to pure Hindu law.—The idea of a will is wholly unknown to the pure Hindu law. But the testamentary power of Hindus has now long been recognized, and must be considered as completely established (z).

Joint will.—See note below "A document described as a will may not be a will."

Minor's will.—A Hindu who has not attained majority within the meaning of the Indian Majority Act, 1875, sec. 3, is not competent to make a will. See also the Indian Succession Act, 1925, sec. 2(c), where the expression "minor" is defined.

A document described as a will may not be a will.—The expression "will" is defined in the Indian Succession Act, 1925, as the legal declaration of the intention of a testator with respect to his property which he desires to be carried into effect after his death. A document by which no property is disposed of, but which merely gives an authority to adopt, though described by the testator as a will, is not a will (c). Similarly, since a minor is not competent to make a will, any declaration by him with respect to his property cannot be said to be "legal" declaration, and the document comprising the declaration, though described as a will, is not a will at all (d).

Registration in Book not appropriate for will.—Where it appears from the terms of a document and the circumstances in which it was executed that it is a will, the fact that it is registered in Book IV (Miscellaneous Register) kept under the Registration Act, 1908, instead of in Book III, is insufficient to outweigh those terms and those circumstances (e).

---

(x) Hardwari v. Gomi (1911) 33 All. 525, 9 I.C. 1017; Bal Gulab v. Thakorelal (1912) 36 Bom. 622, 17 I.C. 86; Krishnamachariar v. Krishnamachariar (1915) 38 Mad. 166, 19 I.C. 452, ('15) A.M. 815.

(y) Lachho Bibi v. Gopi Narain (1901) 23 All. 472; Shama Charn v. Khettromoni Dasi (1900) 27 Cal. 521, 27 I.A. 10; Sukh Dei v. Kedar Nath (1901) 23 All. 405, 28 I.A. 186; Rash Mohini v. Umesh Chunder (1898) 25 Cal. 824, 25 I.A. 109.

(*y*1) Rani Purnima v. Kumar Khagendra (1962) 3 S.C.R. 195; Venkatachala v. Thimmajamma (1959) Suppl. I S.C.R. 426.

(z) Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (1862) 9 M.I.A. 123, 136; Beer Pertab v. Rajender Pertab (1867) 12 M.I.A. 1, 37-38.

(c) Jagannatha v. Kunja (1921) 48 I.A. 482, 44 Mad. 733, 64 I.C. 458. ('22) A.P.C. 162.

(d) Kondapalli Vijayaratnam v. Mandapaka Sudarsana Rao (1925) 52 I.A. 305, 48 Mad. 614, 89 I.C. 733, ('25) A.P.C. 196.

(e) Krishna Rao v. Sundara Siva Rao (1931) 58 I.A. 148, 54 Mad. 440, 131 I.C. 318, ('31) A.P.C. 109.

368. What property may be bequeathed by will.—(1) Prior to the coming into operation of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, it was a rule firmly established that a Hindu cannot by will bequeath property which he could not have alienated by gift inter vivos [§ 357]. In the undermentioned case the Supreme Court pointed out that a father in a Mitakshara family has a very limited right to make a will and the mere fact that the father after making some dispositions gave the residue to his son and the son took out probate and carried out the wishes of the father would not change the nature of the joint family property (*e*1). Even after the Succession Act, 1956, a Hindu cannot by will so dispose of his property as to defeat the legal right of his wife or any other person to maintenance. Reference may be made to sections 18 to 22 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 (f).

(2) The rule stated above that a Hindu cannot by will bequeath property which he could not have alienated by gift inter vivos is now altered by section 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, which permits a member of a Mitakshara coparcenary to dispose of by will his undivided interest in the coparcenary property. Reference may be made to Notes under that section, post.

See Indian Succession Act, 1925, Schedule III, paras. 1 and 2.

(3) As regards property which a Hindu could dispose of by will, the following propositions are to be noted:—

(i) According to all the schools a Hindu could dispose of by will his separate or self-acquired property (g) [§ 222].

(ii) According to the Dayabhaga law, a father could dispose of by will all his property, whether ancestral or self-acquired [§ 274]. Similarly, a coparcener could dispose of by will the whole of his interest in the joint family property (h) [§ 282].

According to the Mitakshara law, no coparcener, not even a father, could dispose of by will his undivided coparcenary interest (i) even if the other coparceners consented to the disposition, the reason being that "at the moment of death the right of survivorship [of the other coparceners] is in conflict with the right by devise. Then the title by survivorship, being the prior title, takes precedence to the exclusion of that by devise" (j). A sole surviving coparcener could, however, bequeath the joint family property as if it was his separate property (k).

---

(*e*1) Valliammai Achi v. Nagappa Chettiar ('67) A.S.C. 1153.

(f) For decisions prior to the Act see Sonatun v. Juggutsoondree, (1859) 8 M.I.A. 66-68; Beer Pertab v. Rajender Pertab (1867) 12 M.I.A. 1, 38; Promotha Nath v. Nagendrabala (1908) 12 C.W.N. 808.

(g) (1867) 12 M.I.A. 1, 38, supra.

(h) Nagalutchmee v. Gopoo (1856) 6 M.I.A. 309, 344; Sartaj v. Deoraj (1888) 10 All. 272, 288, 15 I.A. 51.

(i) Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma (1874) 8 Mad. H.C. 6; Lakshman v. Ramchandra (1881) 5 Bom. 48, 7 I.A. 181; Harilal v. Bai Mani (1905) 29 Bom. 351; Lalta Prasad v. Sri Mahadeoji (1920) 42 All. 461, 58 I.C. 667, ('20) A.A. 116; Venkatarao v. Venkateswararao ('56) A. Andh. Pra. 1. Reference may be made to M. N. Aryamurthi v. M. L. Subbaraya ('72) A.S.C. 1279.

(j) Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma (1874) 8 Mad. H.C. 6; Lakhmi Chand v. Anandi (1926) 53 I.A. 123, 48 All. 313, 95 I.C. 566, ('26) A.P.C. 54; Bhikhabhai v. Purshottam (1926) 50 Bom. 558, 96 I.C. 421, ('26) A.B. 378 [will though made with consent of son held void]; Anandrao v. Administrator General of Bombay (1896) 20 Bom. 450 explained; Subbarami v. Ramamma (1920) 43 Mad. 824, 59 I.C. 681, ('20) A.M. 637.

(k) Nagalutchmee v. Gopoo Nadaraja (1856) 6 M.I.A. 309; Narottam v. Narsandas (1866) 3 Bom. H.C.A.C. 6.

Since a will operated from the date of the testator's death, it was held that if a coparcener subsequently came into existence such as a son adopted by him (l), a son subsequently born to him (m), including a posthumous son (n) or the posthumous son of a deceased coparcener, the will, so far as it dealt with the coparcenary property, was inoperative and the property passed to him by survivorship. But if the son whether natural born or adopted died in the lifetime of the testator, the will stood, and the devisee was entitled to the property given to him by the will (o). See sub-paragraph (2) above.

Though a father could dispose of a small portion of ancestral movables by way of gift, he could not do so by will (p) [§§ 225, 226]. See sub-paragraph (2) above.

(iii) A Hindu female could dispose of her stridhana by will, subject in certain cases to the consent of her husband [§ 143]. After the coming into force of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, her rights are considerably enlarged. See section 14 of that Act and Notes thereunder.

(iv) The owner of an impartible estate could dispose of it by will, in the absence of a special custom prohibiting alienation, or where the tenure was of such a nature that it could not be alienated (q). See Chapter XXVII post.

Disinheritance.—There is nothing to prevent a Hindu from so disposing of his property by will as to defeat the rights of his sons, wife, or other heirs even to the extent of completely disinheriting them (r). No express words are necessary to disinherit the heirs; it is sufficient if the property is bequeathed to some other person (s). But if the bequest to that person is not valid, there will be an intestacy to that extent, and the property will go to the heir, notwithstanding express directions in the will that he shall not take. The estate must go to somebody, and if there is no valid disposition, it must go to the heir (t). Similarly, where under the terms of a will the corpus of the estate is not to vest until the happening of a certain event, it will in the meantime vest in the heir (u).

Will by father making gifts to charity.—A will by father making gifts to charity was valid if it was consented to by the sole surviving son (v).

369. Section 57 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925.—The Indian Succession Act, 1925, consists of eleven parts. Part VI relates to testamentary succession and comprises secs. 57 to 191. Of these only some apply to Hindu wills, being those, mentioned in Schedule III to the Act. But these, again, do not apply to all Hindu wills, but only to such classes of wills as are specified in sec. 57 of the Act.

S. 57 "The provisions of this Part (that is, Part VI of the Act) which are set out in Schedule III shall, subject to the restrictions and modifications specified therein, apply—

---

(l) Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal (1915) 43 I.A. 20, 39 Mad. 107, 32 I.C. 373, ('15) A.P.C. 37; Parma Nand v. Shiv Charan Das (1921) 2 Lah. 69, 59 I.C. 256, ('21) A.L. 147; Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma (1874) 8 Mad. H.C. 6; Rani Raghubans v. Raghuraj Singh (1947) All. 556.

(m) Lalita Devi v. Ishar Das (1933) 14 Lah. 178, 138 I.C. 58, ('33) A.L. 544.

(n) Hanmant v. Bhimacharya (1888) 12 Bom. 105; Minakshi v. Virappa (1885) 8 Mad. 89.

(o) Bodi v. Venkataswami (1915) 38 Mad. 369, 21 I.C. 73, ('15) A.M. 1077.

(p) Parvatibai v. Bhagwant (1915) 39 Bom. 593, 31 I.C. 280, ('15) A.B. 265; Subbarami v. Ramamma (1920) 43 Mad. 824, 59 I.C. 681, ('20) A.M. 637; Patra Chariar v. Srinivasa (1917) 40 Mad. 1122, 40 I.C. 118, ('18) A.M. 531 [where the other coparceners had consented to the bequest].

(q) Sri Raja Rao Venkata Surya v. Court of Wards (1899) 22 Mad. 383, 26 I.A. 83 [will]; Sartaj v. Deoraj (1888) 10 All. 272, 15 I.A. 51 [gift]. Thyagasundaradoss v. Pandia ('65) A.S.C. 1730.

(r) Mulraz v. Chalekany (1838) 2 M.I.A. 54; Subbayya v. Surayya (1887) 10 Mad. 251; Narottam v. Narsandas (1886) 3 Bom. H.C.A.C. 6.

(s) Prosunno v. Tarrucknath (1873) 10 Beng. L.R. 267.

(t) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 402.

(u) Amulya v. Kali Das (1905) 32 Cal. 861.

(v) Srinivasagam v. Chinmammal (1946) Mad. 676.

(a) to all wills and codicils made by any Hindu, Buddhist, Sikh, or Jain, on or after the 1st day of September, 1870, within the territories which at the said date were subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal or within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature at Madras and Bombay;

(b) to all such wills and codicils made outside those territories and limits so far as relates to immovable property situate within those territories or limits; and

(c) to all wills and codicils made by any Hindu, Buddhist, Sikh, or Jain, on or after the 1st day of January, 1927, to which those provisions are not applied by clauses (a) and (b)."

369A. Form of will.—The following Hindu wills and codicils are required to be in writing signed by the testator and attested by at least two witnesses (w), as provided by sec. 63 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925.

(a) all wills and codicils made by any Hindu, Buddhist, Sikh, or Jain, on or after the 1st day of September, 1870, within the territories which at the said date were subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal or within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature at Madras and Bombay;

(b) all such wills and codicils made outside those territories and limits so far as relates to immovable property situate within those territories or limits; and

(c) all other wills and codicils made by any Hindu, Buddhist, Sikh, or Jain, on or after the 1st day of January, 1927.

This section is but a limb of sec. 57 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. See § 369 above.

Before the Hindu Wills Act, 1870, no Hindu will was required to be in writing, the will could be oral or in writing (x). If the will was in writing, it did not require to be signed or attested (y). Probate was granted of oral wills as well as of written wills (z). The Hindu Wills Act was the first enactment which required Hindu wills to be in writing. That Act, however, applied to certain wills only, being those specified in cls. (a) and (b) of this section. Other wills were not required to be in writing. They could be made orally. By the Indian Succession (Amendment) Act, 1926, those wills also were required to be in writing. This Act is reproduced in cl. (c) of this section. The result is that every Hindu will made after the 1st January, 1927, must be in writing signed by the testator and attested by at least two witnesses as provided by sec. 63 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925.

No particular form necessary for a will.—A will need not be in any particular form. It is sufficient if it contains the testamentary wishes of the deceased. Thus a petition to the Revenue authorities (a), a statement made before a Revenue officiai and recorded by him (b), entries in a wajib-ul-arz (c), a matrimonial arrangement deed (d), a mooktiarnamah or power of attorney (e), a deed of settlement made at the time of adoption (f), and a tamlikanama or deed of assignment (g), containing testamentary dispositions of property, have been held to amount to a will.

370. Revocation of will: alterations in will.—(1) No will or codicil specified in cls. (a) and (b) of § 369A above can be revoked except in the manner provided by sec. 70 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. Nor can it be altered except in the manner provided by sec. 71 of the Act.

---

(w) Umakanta v. Biswambhar (1929) 8 Pat. 419, 117 I.C. 874, ('29) A.P. 401.

(x) Hari v. Moro Lakshman (1887) 11 Bom. 89, 93; Bhagwan v. Kala (1877) 1 Bom. 641.

(y) Tara Chand v. Nobin Chunder (1865) 3 W.R. 138; Radhabai v. Ganesh (1879) 3 Bom. 7; Bapuji Jagannath In re (1896) 20 Bom. 674; Janki v. Kallu Mal (1909) 31 All. 236, 2 I.C. 213 [draft will].

(z) Gokul Chand v. Mangal Sen (1903) 25 All. 313.

(a) Mahomed Shamsool v. Shewukram (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 226, 2 I.A. 7.

(b) Kalian Singh v. Sanwal Singh (1885) 7 All. 163.

(c) Mathura Das v. Bhikhan Mal (1897) 19 All. 16.

(d) Din Tarini v. Krishna (1909) 36 Cal. 149.

(e) Kollany v. Luchmee (1875) 24 W.R. 395.

(f) Lakshmi v. Subramanya (1889) 12 Mad. 490.

(g) Thakur Ishri Singh v. Baldeo Singh (1884) 10 Cal. 792, 11 I.A. 135.

(2) The above rule applies also to wills and codicils specified in cl. (c) of para, 369A, but only to such revocation and alterations as are made on or after the 1st October, 1929.

(3) The will of a Hindu is not revoked by the marriage of the maker thereof (h), nor is it revoked, as regards self-acquired property, by the subsequent birth or adoption of a son (§ 498).

Rule of Hindu law before legislation.—No writing was necessary under the Hindu law to make a will or to revoke a will. Nor was actual destruction of a will necessary to constitute a revocation, if definite authority was given by the testator to destroy it with the intention of revoking it (i).

371. Wills founded on the law of gifts.—Bequests stand substantially on the same footing as gifts (j). It has been so laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the Tagore case. In that case their Lordships said:—"Even if wills are not universally to be regarded in all respects as gifts to take effect upon death, they are generally so to be regarded as to the property which they can transfer, and the persons to whom it can be transferred" (k).

"Persons to whom it can be transferred."—Just as before the Acts referred to in § 360 a gift could not be made in favour of a person who was not in existence at the date of the gift, so a bequest could not before those Acts be made in favour of a person who was not in existence at the testator's death. See §§ 372, 373.

372. Bequest to unborn person: Rule apart from statute.—A person capable of taking under a will must, either in fact or in contemplation of law, be in existence at the death of the testator (l). This rule still applies to cases to which the provisions of the three Acts mentioned in the next section (§ 373) do not apply. This rule was discussed by the Supreme Court in the undermentioned case (*l*1).

Child in the womb.—A bequest to a person not in existence at the testator's death is invalid. A child in the womb and a son adopted by a widow after the death of her husband are in contemplation of law in existence at the death of the testator.

A bequest to the wife of the testator's son in case he should marry within ten years from the testator's death is valid, provided the son marries a girl who was in existence at the testator's death (m), as the rule in this section does not apply.

Illustration

A bequest to the eldest child of L takes no effect if L has no child, at the time of the death of the testator, even though L has a son born some time after the testator's death (n). The decision is also based on another ground.

Exceptions to the rule.—In laying down the above rule in the Tagore case the Judicial Committee desired "not to express any opinion as to certain exceptional cases of provisions by means of contract or of conditional gift on marriage or other family provision for which authority may be found in Hindu law or usage." Thus where a suit against a Hindu widow by a person claiming to be the adopted son of her husband was

---

(h) Indian Succession Act, 1925, s. 57.

(i) Maharajah Pertab Narain v. Subhao Kooer (1877) 3 Cal. 626, 643, 4 I.A. 228, 245; Venkayyamma v. Venkataramanayyamma (1902) 25 Mad. 678, 29 I.A. 156.

(j) Seth Mulchand v. Bai Mancha (1883) 7 Bom. 491, 493.

(k) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 399, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 69; Motivahu v. Mamubai (1897) 21 Bom. 709, 721, 24 I.A. 93, 105.

(l) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 397, 400, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 67, 70; Chandi Churn v. Sideswari (1889) 16 Cal. 71, 15 I.A. 149; Venkata v. Suraneni (1908) 31 Mad. 310; Bai Mamubai v. Dossa (1891) 15 Bom. 443.

(*l*1) Raman Nadar v. S. Rasalamma ('70) A.S.C. 1759.

(m) Dinesh Chandra v. Biraj Kamini (1912) 39 Cal. 87, 11 I.C. 67.

(n) Nakshetramali Dei v. Brajasunder Das (1933) 12 Pat. 708, 146 I.C. 865, ('33) A.P. 647.

compromised by an agreement which provided that on the plaintiff relinquishing his claim to a zamindari, the widow and her heirs holding the zamindari should pay a specified annuity to the plaintiff and his heirs from generation to generation, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that the annuity was a charge upon the estate, and the agreement was enforceable against the widow's successors. Dealing with the argument that the grant was void as offending against the rule against perpetuity, their Lordships said: "A second contention was that this was a creation of a kind of perpetuity, which the law did not allow, or an attempt to create a permanent relation which was impossible of creation. Whatever might be said about that, if this agreement lay in covenant, seeing that it lies in a charge, there is no difficulty in making it perpetual as long as there are lineal or collateral heirs of the grantee, and in our view the District Judge and Seshagiri Aiyar, J., in the High Court were right in holding that this is a charge" (o). It has also been held that an annuity left by a Hindu to his daughter for her life, and then to her son absolutely—the annuity having been made a charge on the estate—is valid, though the son might be born after the death of the testator. A grant of this description does not violate the rule against perpetuity (p).

The rule in this section applies to the office of a Shebait and a direction in the will that the office should be held by an unborn person was held to be invalid (q).

The rule laid down in this section is applicable to all wills, whether they are governed by the Dayabhaga law or the Mitakshara law (r), and whether they are or are not subject to the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, relating to Hindu wills (s). It may here be observed that the testator in the Tagore case was governed by the Dayabhaga school, and the will was made long before the Hindu Wills Act, 1870, came into force. As to the law as altered by statute, see § 373.

373. Bequest to unborn persons: Rule as altered by statute.—(1) The rule of Hindu law stated in § 372 that a bequest cannot be made in favour of a person who was not born at the date of the testator's death has been altered by three Acts, namely, the Hindu Transfer and Bequests Act, 1914, the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, and the Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921. The rule as altered by these Acts may be stated as follows:—

Subject to the limitations and provisions contained in sections 113, 114, 115 and 116 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, no bequest shall be invalid by reason only that any person for whose benefit it may have been made was not born at the date of the testator's death.

This rule, however, is not of universal application, but is confined to the following cases, namely:—

(i) to wills executed on or after the 14*th February* 1914, by Hindus domiciled in the State of Madras except the city of Madras, and in the case of wills executed before that date, to such of the dispositions thereby made as are intended to come into operation at a time which is subsequent to that date: Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act, 1914;

(ii) to wills executed on or after the 20*th September* 1916, by Hindus in any part of India except the State of Madras: Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916;

---

(o) Rajah of Ramnad v. Sundara (1919) 46 I.A. 64, 42 Mad. 581, 49 I.C. 704, ('18) A.P.C. 156. See also Khajeh Solehman Quadir v. Nawab Sir Salimullah (1922) 49 I.A. 153, 49 Cal. 820, 69 I.C. 138, ('22) A.P.C. 107.

(p) Jatindra v. Ghanesyam (1923) 50 Cal. 266, 72 I.C. 1019, ('23) A.C. 27.

(q) Manohar Mukherji v. Bhupendranath Mukherji (1933) 60 Cal. 452, 141 I.C. 544, ('32) A.C. 791 overruling Mathura Nath v. Lakhi Narain (1923) 50 Cal. 426, 75 I.C. 435, ('24) A.C. 68.

(r) Mangaldas v. Krishnabai (1882) 6 Bom. 38.

(s) Alangamonjori v. Sonamoni (1882) 8 Cal. 637; Radha Prasad v. Ramimoni Dasi (1911) 38 Cal. 188, 8 I.C. 1061, S.C. on appeal, 41 Cal. 1007, 41 I.A. 176, 23 I.C. 713, ('14) A.P.C. 149.

(iii) to wills executed on or after the 27th March, 1921, by Hindus domiciled within the limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Madras, and, in the case of wills executed before that date, to such of the dispositions thereby made as are to come into operation at a time subsequent to the 14th February, 1914: Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921.

For the three Acts mentioned in the section and the history of the legislation on the subject, see notes to § 360 above.

The limitation subject to which a bequest can be made in favour of an unborn person are set out in §§ 383-387 below.

It may be noted that with effect from 1st February, 1960, the Hindu Dispositions of Property Act, 1916 has been extended to the whole of India including the State of Madras and the City of Madras, and the Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act, 1914 and the Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921 stand repealed.

374. Election.—Though a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara law, prior to the enactment of sec. 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, could not dispose of by will his undivided interest in coparcenary property, he could bequeath his self-acquired property to his coparcener and his undivided interest in the coparcenary property to a third person. Such a disposition was valid, and the coparcener to whom the self-acquired property was bequeathed had to elect, after the testator's death, as to which of the two properties he would take. He could not take both (t).

375. Probate, letters of administration and succession certificate.—(1) In the case of Hindu wills of the classes specified in clauses (a) and (b) of sec. 57 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, [§ 369 above], no right as executor or legatee can be established in a Court of Justice, unless, a Court of competent jurisdiction shall have granted probate of the will. But no probate is necessary to establish such right in the case of other Hindu wills (u).

(2) Where a Hindu dies intestate, it is not necessary in any case to obtain letters of administration to the estate of the deceased to establish a right to any part of the property of the deceased.

(3) But where the suit is one to recover a debt due to the estate of a deceased Hindu, no decree can be passed against the debtor except on the production of a probate or letters of administration or a succession certificate.

Sub-§ (1).—Sub-section (1) is a reproduction of sec. 213 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. Where probate is necessary to establish a claim in a Court of law, it is sufficient if the probate is produced when the decree is passed. The suit may be instituted without a probate (v).

Sub-§ (2).—See the Indian Succession Act, 1925, sec. 212.

Sub-§ (3).—This sub-section is a reproduction of sec. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act, 1889, now the Indian Succession Act, 1925, sec. 214. A succession certificate

---

(t) Kishan Chand v. Narinjan (1929) 10 Lah. 389. 113 I.C. 298, ('28) A.L. 967.

(u) Ahemed v. Ghisia (1945) Nag. 562, ('45) A.N. 237.

(v) Chandra Kishore v. Prasanna Kumari (1911) 38 I.A. 7, 38 Cal. 327, 9 I.C. 22, a case under s. 187 of the I.S. Act, 1865, as applied to Hindu will by the Hindu Wills Act [now a 213 of the I.S. Act, 1925, as applied by s. 57 of that Act].

is necessary in a suit by a son to recover money which was self-acquired property of his deceased father (w) or in the execution by a widow of a money decree obtained by her husband (x). But no such certificate is necessary to recover money to which the plaintiff becomes entitled by survivorship (y).

Who may oppose grant of probate.—Where the nearest reversionary heir to a Hindu testator refuses without sufficient cause to oppose grant of probate, the next person in the line of succession may oppose it (z). In the last mentioned case the Court applied the principles stated in § 207 above.

Letters of administration where deceased was joint in estate.—No probate or letters of administration can be granted in respect of joint family property. But where such property stands in the name of the manager or other members of the family, letters of administration may be granted to the surviving coparcener as his heir to the legal estate in that property, and limited to that property, under sec. 250 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 (a). This constantly happens in the case of shares of a limited company.

376. Vesting of estate in Hindu executor or administrator.—The executor or administrator of a deceased Hindu is his legal representative for all purposes, and all the property of the deceased vests in him as such (b).

See Indian Succession Act, 1925, sec. 211, corresponding with sec. 4 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881.

No vesting of coparcenary property—Coparcenary property cannot be disposed of by will. Hence it cannot vest in the executor (c).

Character of Hindu executor.—Before the passing of the Hindu Wills Act, 1870, the estate of a deceased Hindu did not vest in his executor, even if probate was granted to him. The executor was not the legal representative of the deceased person, but was practically a manager of the estate with no greater power than the manager of the estate of a minor, unless the will gave him greater powers. The grant of probate and letters of administration took effect only for the purpose of recovering debts and securing debtors paying the same, but neither an executor nor an administrator had any such rights as are conferred upon executors and administrators by the Indian Succession Act, 1925 (d).

Such was the state of the law prior to the Hindu Wills Act, 1870. That Act incorporated sec. 179 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, which provided that "the executor or administrator, as the case may be, of a deceased person, is his legal representative for all purposes, and all the property of the deceased person vests in him as such." The Hindu Wills Act, 1870, however, did not apply to all Hindu wills. It applied only to (1) wills made within certain local limits, and (2) to wills relating to immovable property situated within those limits [see § 369]. The Probate and Administration Act, which applied to all Hindu wills, was not passed until 1881. The latter Act repealed the said sec. 179 as part of the Hindu Wills Act, but re-enacted it as part of itself in sec. 4. Both these Acts have been repealed and re-enacted by the Indian Succession Act, 1925. Section 211 of the latter Act corresponds to sec. 4 of the Probate and Administration Act.

Vesting of property in executor without probate.—The estate of the deceased vests in the executor whether he has obtained probate or not (e).

---

(w) Viravan v. Srinivasachariar (1921) 44 Mad. 499, 62 I.C. 944, ('21) A.M. 168 [F.B.]; Venkataramanna v. Venkayya (1891) 14 Mad. 377.

(x) Jadaobai v. Purammal (1944) Nag. 832.

(y) Raghavendra v. Bhima (1892) 16 Bom. 349; Jagmohandas v. Allu Maria (1895) 19 Bom. 338; Sital Proshad v. Kaifuc Sheikh (1922) 26 C.W.N. 488, 65 I.C. 367, ('22) A.C. 149. Reference may be made to Chhotki v. Chandra Prakash ('64) A. Raj. 32 [case falling under Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act 1937—Succession certificate under S. 214 not necessary].

(z) Shib Charan Das, In the goods of (1929) 56 Cal. 1070, 121 I.C. 687, ('30) A.C. 150.

(a) Gopalaswamy v. Meenakshi (1929) 7 Rang. 39, 115 I.C. 905, ('29) A.R. 99; Bank of Bombay v. Ambalal Sarabhai (1900) 24 Bom. 350; Mussamat Uttam v. Dina Nath (1819) 54 Punj. Rec. no. 139, 46 I.C. 454.

(b) Sir Mahomed Yusuf v. Hargovandas (1923) 47 Bom. 231, 70 I.C. 268, ('22) A.B. 392; Ramiah v. Venkatasubbamma (1926) 49 Mad. 261, 44 I.C. 83, ('26) A.M. 434 [F.B.]; Ganapathi v. Sivamalai (1913) 36 Mad. 575, 17 I.C. 4.

(c) Ujambai v. Harakchand Govindji (1935) 59 Bom. 644, 37 Bom. L.R. 300, 156 I.C. 621, ('35) A.B. 242.

(d) Maniklal v. Manchershi (1876) 1 Bom. 269, 275; Jagmohandas v. Pallonjee (1898) 22 Bom. 1; Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney (1878) 4 Cal. 455, 468; Sarat Chandra v. Bhupendra Nath (1898) 25 Cal. 103; Amulya v. Kali Das (1905) 32 Cal. 861; Kurrutulain v. Nuzbat-ud-Dowla (1906) 33 Cal. 116, 129, 130, 32 I.A. 244, 257-258.

(e) Mahomed Yusuf v. Hargovandas (1923) 47 Bom. 231, 70 I.C. 268, ('22) A.B. 392; Venkatasubamma v. Ramayya (1932) 55 Mad. 443, 59 I.A. 112, 136 I.C. 111, ('32) A.P.C. 92.

The contrary decision of the Calcutta High Court on the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, is now of no importance (f).

A and B are executors of C's will. A alone obtains probate. This is no bar to B's acting as a legal representative of C's estate (g).

376A. Power of Hindu executor or administrator to dispose of property.—(1) A Hindu executor has power to dispose of the property of the deceased vested in him [§ 376 above]. In the case, however, of immovable property this power is subject to any restriction contained in the will, unless he has obtained probate of the will and also leave from the Court which granted the probate to dispose of such property.

(2) A Hindu administrator has power to dispose of the property of the deceased vested in him [§ 376 above]. In the case, however, of immovable property, he cannot mortgage it or charge it or transfer it by sale, gift, exchange or otherwise, or grant a lease of it for a term exceeding five years, unless he has obtained the permission of the Court which granted the letters of administration to do so.

See Indian Succession Act, 1925, sec. 307, corresponding with sec. 90 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881.

377. Intention of testator.—"In determining the construction [of a will] what we must look to. is the intention of the testator. The Hindu law, no less than the English law, points to the intention as the element by which we are to be guided in determining the effect of a testamentary disposition; nor . . . . is there any difference between the one law and the other as to the materials from which the intention is to be collected. Primarily the words of the will are to be considered. They convey the expression of the testator's wishes, but the meaning to be attached to them may be affected by surrounding circumstances, and where this is the case those circumstances no doubt must be regarded (h)."

"In all cases the primary duty of a court is to ascertain from the language of the testator what were his intentions, i.e., to construe the will. It is true that in so doing they are entitled and bound to bear in mind other matters than merely the words used. They must consider the surrounding circumstances, the position of the testator, his family relationships, the probability that he would use words in a particular sense, and many other things which are often summed up in the somewhat picturesque figure: "The Court is entitled to put itself into the testator's armchair.' Among such surrounding circumstances which the Court is bound to consider none would be more important than race and religious opinions, and the court is bound to regard as presumably (and in many cases certainly) present to the mind of the testator influences and aims arising therefrom. . . . This fundamental principle does not clash with the principle that the Court will not necessarily apply English rules of construction to such a will as we have here to deal with. . . . Nor does this fundamental principle clash in any way with what is sometimes

---

(f) Sakina Bibee v. Mahomed Ishak (1910) 37 Cal. 839, 8 I.C. 655.

(g) Chidambara v. Krishnasami (1916) 39 Mad. 365, 368-369, 28 I.C. 221, ('16) A.M. 720.

(h) Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (1857) 6 M.I.A. 526, 551; Lakshmana Nadar v. R. Ramier (1953) S.C.R. 848.

called, 'giving a liberal interpretation' to native wills. That native testators should be ignorant of the legal phrases proper to express their intentions, or of the legal steps necessary to carry them into effect, is one of the most important of the 'surrounding circumstances' which the Court must bear in mind, and it is justified in refusing to allow defects in expression in these matters to prevent the carrying out of the testator's true intentions. But those intentions must be ascertained by the proper construction of the words he uses, and once ascertained they must not be departed from (i)." In interpreting a will the Court will be slow in accepting the contention that the testator intended to create joint tenancy which is something unknown to Hindu law (except, in a sense in case of coparcenary) (ii).

It is clear from the passage cited above that the intention of the testator is to be gathered primarily from the language of the will. Where the language is clear and consistent, it must receive its literal construction, unless there is something in the will itself to suggest departure from it (j). If the real meaning can be reasonably ascertained from the language used, that meaning is to be enforced to the extent and in the form which the law allows (k). It is a well settled rule of construction that the same words used in a document (will) are to be given the same meaning unless there is a clear intention to the contrary (*k*1). Clear and unambiguous dispositive words are not to be controlled or qualified by any general expression of intention (l). Technical words or words of known legal import, must have their legal effect, even though the testator uses inconsistent words, unless those inconsistent words are of such a nature as to make it perfectly clear that the testator did not mean to use the technical terms in their proper sense. Thus the words "become malik (owner)" confer an heritable and alienable estate, unless the context indicates a different meaning. Similarly, the words putra putrade krame have acquired a technical force, and are used as meaning an estate of inheritance (m). At the same time it must be recognized that documents in the vernacular are often expressed in loose and inaccurate language, and thus sometimes a meaning more extended or more restricted than the literal meaning may have to be given to particular words in vernacular documents provided the context justifies doing so (n). Particular words in a will should not be construed with reference to similar words in another will. The will must be read as a whole to ascertain the intention of the testator and where the intention is clearly expressed by unambiguous words in certain clauses other words in other clauses repugnant to them may be discarded (o).

---

(i) Narasimha v. Parthasarathy (1914) 37 Mad. 199, 221-223, 41 I.A. 51, 70-72, 23 I.C. 166; Sasanka Bhusan v. Gopi Ballav ('35) A.C. 716, (1936) 63 Cal. 385, 159 I.C. 437.

(ii) Venkatakrishna Rao v. Satyavathi ('68) A.S.C. 751.

(j) Gurusami v. Sivakami (1895) 18 Mad. 347, 358, 22 I.A. 119.

(k) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 395, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 65; Tarokessur Roy v. Soshi (1883) 9 Cal. 952, 10 I.A. 51.

(*k*1) Thyagasundaradoss v. Pandia ('65) A.S.C. 1730, 1733.

(l) Vasantkumar Basu v. Ramshankar Ray (1932) 59 Cal. 859, 138 I.C. 882, ('32) A.C. 600.

(m) Lalit Mohun v. Chukkun Lal (1897) 24 Cal. 834, 24 I.A. 76; Suraimani v. Rabi Nath (1908) 30 All. 84, 35 I.A. 17; Pratapsingh v. Agarsingji (1919) 46 I.A. 97, 43 Bom. 778, 50 I.C. 457, ('18) A.P.C. 192; Soorjeemoney Dosee v. Denobundoo Mullick (1857) 6 M.I.A. 526, 551; Bissonauth v. Bamasoondery (1867) 12 M.I.A. 41, 59. See also Ram Narayan Singh v. Ram Saran Lal (1919) 46 I.A. 88, 46 Cal. 683, 50 I.C. 1, ('18) A.P.C. 203.

(n) Rajendra Prasad v. Gopal Prasad (1930) 57 I.A. 296, 10 Pat. 187, 127 I.C. 743, ('30) A.P.C. 242.

(o) Kanhya Lal Missir v. Mst. Hira Bibi (1936) 15 Pat. 151, 163 I.C. 940, ('36) A.P. 323; Shib Sakti v. Piaraylal (1947) All. 403.

Where a testator bequeathed his property to his wife absolutely with a condition that if unchastity is established the reversioners should share the property equally, it was held that unchastity does not cover re-marriage in the absence of a clause prohibiting remarriage (p).

378. Ordinary notions and wishes of Hindu to be taken into consideration.—"In construing the will of a Hindu it is not improper to take into consideration what are known to be the ordinary notions and wishes of Hindus with respect to the devolution of property. It may be assumed that a Hindu generally desires that an estate, especially an ancestral estate, shall be retained to his family, and it may be assumed that a Hindu knows that, as a general rule, at all events, women do not take absolute estates of inheritance which they are enabled to alienate" (q). The predilections of the class to which the testator belongs may be kept in view (r). Where a testator gave certain properties to his daughters with a direction that they should enjoy the interest with their sons, grandsons, etc., and that neither the daughters nor their sons or grandsons, etc., should be entitled to give, sell or mortgage the properties, it was held that the daughters and the daughters' sons took only life estates (s). In construing a will made after the coming into operation of the recent legislation and particularly the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, the Court may assume that the testator knew of the radical changes that have been brought about in the general law of inheritance and that women now take absolute estates of inheritance.

Reference may be made to the Supreme Court decisions cited under § 401. Also see the undermentioned case (*s*1).

---

(p) Har Bux Singh v. Musammat Shanti Devi (1941) 16 Luck. 414, 192 I.C. 53, ('41) A.O. 353.

(q) Mahomed Shumsool v. Shewukram (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 226, 231, 232, 2 I.A. 7, 14-15; Radha Prasad v. Ranee Mani (1908) 35 Cal. 896, 902, 35 I.A. 118, 129.

(r) Sasanka Bhusan v. Gopi Ballav (1935) 159 I.C. 437, ('35) A.C. 716.

(s) Bibha Bati Debee v. Mahendra Chandra Lahiri (1937) 1 Cal. 400, 173 I.C. 857, ('38) A.C. 34.

(*s*1) Harnam Singh v. Mohan Lal ('70) J. & K. 181.

CHAPTER XX

RULES COMMON TO GIFTS AND WILLS

379. Tagore case.—The leading case on Hindu wills and gifts is the Tagore case (t) decided by the Judicial Committee in the year 1872. A synopsis of that case is given in illustration (e) to § 382 below. The rules laid down in that case and the decisions founded thereon are set out in the following sections. The fundamental principle underlying those rules may be stated as follows:—

Subject to the provisions of § 368, a Hindu may give or bequeath his property to any one he likes. He may not only direct who shall take the estate, but may also direct what quality of estate they shall take. But the person who is to take must be in existence at the date when the gift or bequest is to take effect, and the estate given to such person must be an estate recognized by the Hindu law. The validity of a gift or bequest depends on the fulfilment of the conditions not only as to the person who is to take, but also as to the estate which is to be taken by him. The mere fact that the donee is a person capable of taking under the deed or will is not sufficient to validate the gift. It is further necessary that the estate given to him must be one recognized by the Hindu law. As to what estates are not recognized by that law, see § 382 below. The rules laid down in the Tagore case as applicable to Hindu wills, are applicable to hereditary offices and endowments as well as to immovable property (u).

In cases governed by the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, a grant may be made to an unborn person subject, however, to the limitations and provisions contained in that Act [see §§ 383 to 387 below].

380. Estate of inheritance.—(1) An important rule applicable to wills and deeds of gift is that benignant construction is to be used; and that if the real meaning of the document can be reasonably ascertained from the language used, though that language be ungrammatical or untechnical, or mistaken as to name or description, or in any other manner incorrect, provided it sufficiently indicates what was meant, that meaning shall be enforced to the extent and in the form which the law allows. Accordingly, if the gift confers an estate upon a man with words imperfectly describing the kind of inheritance but showing that it was intended that he should have an estate of inheritance, the language would be read as conferring an estate inheritable as the law directs. If an estate were given to a man simply without express words of inheritance, it would, in the absence of a conflicting context, carry by Hindu law (as under the present state of law it does by will in England) an estate of inheritance. Thus a gift to A simply without the words "and his heirs" would, in the absence of conflicting context, pass by Hindu law an absolute estate. If there were added to such a gift an imperfect description of it as a gift of inheritance, not excluding the inheritance imposed by the law, an estate of inheritance would pass. If again, the gift were in terms of an estate inheritable according to law, with superadded words, restricting the power of transfer which the law annexes to that estate, the restriction would be rejected, as being repugnant, or rather, as being an attempt to take away the power of transfer which the law attaches to the estate which the giver has sufficiently shown his intention to create, though he has added a qualification which the law does not recognise.

---

(t) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47.

(u) Ganesh Chunder v. Lal Behary (1936) 63 I.A. 448, 38 Bom. L.R. 1250, 164 I.C. 347, ('36) A.P.C. 318.

(2) If, on the other hand, the gift were to a man and his heirs, to be selected from a line other than that specified by law, expressly excluding the legal course of inheritance, as for instance, if an estate were granted to a man and his eldest nephew, and the eldest nephew of such eldest nephew and so forth for ever, to take as his heirs, to the exclusion of all other heirs, and without any of the persons so taking having the power to dispose of the estate during his lifetime, then inasmuch as an inheritance so described is not legal, such a gift cannot take effect, except in favour of such persons as could take under a gift and to the extent to which the gift is not inconsistent with the law. The first taker would, in this case, take for his lifetime, because the giver had at least that intention. He could not take more, because the language is inconsistent with his having any different inheritance from that which the gift attempts to confer, and that estate of inheritance which it confers is void (v).

381. Limited estate.—A Hindu may create a life-estate or successive life-estates or any other estate for a limited term, provided the donee is a person capable of taking under the deed or will (w).

382. Estates repugnant or unknown to Hindu law.—A man cannot create a new form of estate, or alter the line of succession allowed by law, for the purpose of carrying out his own wishes or policy. Inheritance does not depend on the will of the individual owner. Inheritance is a rule laid down (or, in the case of custom, recognised) by the State, not merely for the benefit of individuals, but for reasons of public policy. It follows directly from this that a private individual, who attempts by gift or will to make property inheritable otherwise than the law directs, is assuming to legislate, and that the gift must fail, and the inheritance take place as the law directs (x). A will in favour of the testator's widow prohibiting all transfer of the property directing that all management of the property should be made after consultation of certain persons and giving her powers of nominating a legatee by her will, such legatee possessing certain qualifications is an attempt to create an estate unknown to Hindu law and is void (y).

A will or deed cannot institute a course of succession unknown to the Hindu law: and in conferring successive estates, the estate of inheritance must be such as is known to the Hindu law. All estates of inheritance

---

(v) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 395, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 66; Manikyamala v. Nanda Kumar (1906) 33 Cal. 1306.

(w) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 405, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 75; Tarokessur Roy v. Soshi (1883) 9 Cal. 952, 10 I.A. 51.

(x) (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 394-395, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 65-66, supra.

(y) Ramu v. Kashi (1944) All. 9.

created by gift or will, so far as they are inconsistent with the general law of inheritance, are void as such. An English estate tail is an estate unknown to the Hindu law; no person, therefóre, can succeed under a gift or will as heir to such an estate (z). On this ground, wills and gifts which direct an estate to go in an order of succession which excludes female heirs (a) [that is, an estate in tail male], or male heirs (b), or heirs by adoption (c), or daughters and their sons (d), or includes only some of the heirs (e) have been held invalid to that extent.

Illustrations

(a) Property is bequeathed to B, and after him to the heirs male of his body, that is, his heirs in tail male.

This case gives rise to the following three points:—

1st point.—The estate tail is void.—The bequest to B's heirs is void, for the estate attempted to be conferred upon them is an estate in tail male, and such an estate is unknown to the Hindu Law.

2nd point.—B takes an estate for life.—Does B take any interest under the will? If so, does he take an absolute estate or a life estate only? The answer is, that B takes a life estate only. He does not take an absolute estate, for the result of putting that construction on the will would be that B, as absolute owner, might mortgage or give away the property, in which case the property might pass away from the family to a mortgagee or a stranger donee. To adopt this construction would be in effect to make a new will for the testator and one which, so far from carrying his intention into effect, would be in direct opposition to his intention, and indeed to his main object, viz., to keep the property in the family. But B certainly does take an estate for life, as in respect of him "the giver had at least that intention." The presumption is that the testator intended to benefit B personally for it is clear that if the bequest to B and his heirs in tail male were valid, it would have carried with it the enjoyment by B of the property during his life. "This intention, though it is mixed up with an intention to give an estate tail, may lawfully take effect."

3rd point.—Heir-at-law entitled to whole estate after B's death.—(a) The result is that B takes an estate for life, and on his death the property will revert to the testator's estate, that is, it will go to the testator's heirs (f). The rule of English common law that the undisposed of residue of personal estate vests in the executor beneficially does not apply to the will of a Hindu testator in India (g).

(b) A, after providing for certain legacies, bequeaths the residue of his property to his executor upon trusts to pay the income to his daughter B during her lifetime and after her death upon trust to convey the property to his brothers C and D in equal shares and to the heir or heirs male of their or either of their bodies and on failure of these to the sons of his daughter B.

C had three sons living at A's death. D had no son living at A's death but two sons are born to him after A's death, and during B's lifetime. B had no son at A's death, but six sons are born to her after A's death. What are the rights of the parties under the will?

B takes an estate for life. C and D each takes an estate for his life in one moiety of the residue in remainder expectant on the death of B. The bequest to the heirs of C and D is void as it is a bequest of an estate tail. B's sons are not entitled to any (z) (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 396, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, supra; Kristoromoni v. Narendro (1889) 16 Cal. 383, 392, 16 I.A. 29.

---

(a) Tarokessur Roy v. Soshi (1883) 9 Cal. 952, 10 I.A. 51; Vullubhdas v. Gordhandas (1890) 14 Bom. 360; Venkata v. Chellayammi (1894) 17 Mad. 150; Lakshmakka v. Boggaramanna (1896) 19 Mad. 501; Bai Dhanlaxmi v. Hariprasad (1921) 45 Bom. 1038, 62 I.C. 37, ('21) A.B. 262.

(b) Kunhamina v. Kunhambi (1909) 32 Mad. 315, 1 I.C. 195; Chandrachoor Deo v. Bibhutibhushan Deva (1944) 23 Pat. 763.

(c) Suriya Rau v. Raja of Pittapur (1886) 9 Mad. 499, 13 I.A. 97.

(d) Purna Sashi v. Kalidhan (1911) 38 Cal. 603, 38 I.A. 112, 11 I.C. 412.

(e) Manohar Mukherji v. Bhupendranath Mukherji (1933) 60 Cal. 452, 141 I.C. 544, ('32) A.C. 791.

(f) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 66; Manikyamala v. Nanda Kumar (1906) 33 Cal. 1306.

(g) Lallubai v. Mankuvarbai (1878) 2 Bom. 388.

interest under the will, as none of them was in existence at the testator's death, and further, because the estate purporting under the will to be devised to them was already void before it could pass to them. The result is that on the deaths of C and D respectively, his moiety will pass to the testator's heir. If C dies in B's lifetime, and if B is the heir-at-law, C's moiety will pass to B, so that B will be entitled in possession to one moiety of the residue: Kristoromoni v. Narendro (1889) 16 Cal. 383, 16 I.A. 29.

(c) A bequeaths certain property to his three nephews, B, C and D, "for the payment of the expenses of their pious acts." He then directs as follows: "My three nephews shall possess the property in equal shares. They shall have no rights to alienate the same by gift or sale; but they, their sons, grandsons and their descendants in the male line shall enjoy the same. If any die without leaving a male child, his share shall devolve on the surviving nephews and their male descendants, but not on his other heirs.

A dies leaving him surviving the three nephews, B, C and D, and a son F. B dies unmarried. Then C dies leaving a widow, but no issue. F sues D for a declaration of his rights in the property. What are the rights of the parties at this stage in the property?

The bequest to the sons, grandsons and descendants of the nephews in the male line is void, for the effect of it is to exclude females altogether. Such an estate of inheritance is inconsistent with the general law of inheritance which admits males as well females to succession. The attempt to confine the succession to males to the entire exclusion of females, is a distinct departure from Hindu law, 'excluding' in the terms of the judgment in the Tagore case, 'the legal course of inheritance.'

On A's death, B, C and D each took an estate for life in one-third of the property. On B's death, his share went to his two brothers, C and D. On the death of C, D as the survivor of the three brothers became entitled to a life estate in the whole of the property [§ 389].

In the case on which this illustration is based, it was contended that the intention of the testator was to confer an absolute estate in B, C and D, and that the intention might be effectuated by striking out that portion of the will which excluded females from succession. But this contention was overruled. The Judicial Committee said: "To alter the words prescribing the course of succession, so as to admit females, would be in effect to make a new will for the testator and one which, so far from carrying his intentions into effect, would be in direct opposition to his intention, and indeed to his main object expressed in other parts of his will, as well as in this clause, viz., to exclude females." The result is that on D's death, the whole property will revert to A's estate and pass to his heirs. If F is alive at D's death, it will pass to him as the heir of A: Tarokessur v. Soshi (1883) 9 Cal. 952, 10 I.A. 51.

(d) Two brothers subject to the Dayabhaga school of Hindu law execute a joint will whereby they purport to provide for the permanent devolution of their respective properties in the direct male line, including adopted sons, with the conditions that on failure of lineal male heirs in one branch the properties belonging to that branch should go to the other, subject to the same rule, and that only in the absence of male descendants in the direct line in either branch should the properties go to female heirs or their descendants. The document is invalid and void. The object of the document is clearly to alter the rule of succession in the family in which the parties belonged by excluding female heirs and their descendants. Under it the female heirs and their descendants are not to receive the shares prescribed for them by the Hindu law of inheritance until there is an indefinite failure of male issue in both branches of the family. The result is that on the death of either of the two executants, his share will pass to his heirs according to the Dayabhaga law: Purna Sashi v. Kalidhan (1911) 38 Cal. 603, 38 I.A. 112, 11 I.C. 412.

Note.—The above case as well as the Tagore case [ill. (e)] must be distinguished from a case like the one in ill. (a) to § 389. The latter case does not point to an indefinite failure of male issue, but to a failure of male issue of any of the testator's sons at the time of the death of that son (h).

(e) Tagore case.—In the Tagore case property was bequeathed—

(1) to A for life;
to A's eldest son for life;
in strict settlement upon the first and other sons of such eldest son successively in tail male.
} = to A and his heirs in tail male,

(h) Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (1862) 9 M.I.A. 123, 134.

(2) "after the failure or determination" of the above estate, to B and his heirs in tail male,

(3) "after the failure or determination" of the last mentioned estate, to the heirs of C in tail male.

The will expressly adopted primogeniture in the male line through males, and excluded females and their descendants (i).

At the time of the testator's death, A, the head of the first series of estates, had no son. B, the head of the second series of estates, had a son D born in the lifetime of the testator. C was dead at the making of the will but left a grandson F born in the lifetime of the testator. The testator died leaving an only son, S. No provision was made for him in the will, as he had become a Christian. Some time after the testator's death, his son S brought a suit to set aside the will. It was held that A took an estate for life, that all other bequests were void, and that the plaintiff as the heir of the testator, was entitled to the whole estate after the death of A. The estates tail were void, for they were inconsistent with the Hindu law of inheritance. It was also held that B and D though they were in existence at the testator's death, took nothing under the will, for they were only to take "after the failure or determination" of the previous series of estates, that is to say, after the actual exhaustion of the line of A in conformity with the will. This event had not arisen and could not arise. The incapacity of A's line to succeed by reason of the illegality of the will did not entitle B or D to any benefit under the will. For the same reason, F though he was in existence at the testator's death, took nothing under the will: Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47. The plaintiff's conversion to Christianity was no bar to his succession to his father's estate, having regard to the provisions of the Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850.

Note.—A Hindu may entirely disinherit his son or other heir by bequeathing the whole of his property to another. By so doing, he does not create an estate inconsistent with the general law of inheritance: he merely exercises the power which the Hindu law allows him. But what the Hindu law does not allow is to confer upon any legatee an estate which would be inconsistent with the Hindu law of inheritance, in other words, an estate which would exclude the legal course of inheritance. An estate is said to be inconsistent with the Hindu law of inheritance if it is given to A and the heirs male of his body, for the effect is to exclude female heirs. If it were given to A absolutely, then, on A's death intestate, the estate would pass according to the general law of inheritance to A's heir, whether the heir was a son, or a widow or a daughter. But the attempt to give an estate to A and the heirs male of his body is to exclude female heirs; in other words it is an attempt to alter the line of succession allowed by law.

(f) A Hindu by a deed of settlement conveys property to trustees upon trust to pay the income arising therefrom to himself for life and after his death, as to one-fourth share, to his married daughter K "for her sole and separate use and after her death in trust for the male heirs of the said K share and share alike." K survives the settlor and dies some years after the date of the settlement leaving 6 sons all of whom were in existence at the date of the deed. The gift of the sons is an absolute gift to them of the property and they take the property as tenants-in-common in equal shares. In the course of the judgment their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "In settling the true construction of this deed, therefore, unless there is a special reason afforded by the deed itself to the contrary, the technical meaning given to words in English law must be disregarded. So also must rules like the well known rule in Shelly's case, based here upon feudal customs that have had no existence in Bombay. Further, it is to be remembered that a gift to a class of which no member existed at the date of the deed would be bad, and so also a definite attempt to create what in England would be regarded as an estate tail: see Tagore v. Tagore (j). The main part of the respondents' argument depends upon this last consideration. They assert that this was the true meaning of the gift—to the male heirs of Krishnabai after Krishnabai's death—and that it consequently failed. They further argue that the words themselves connote a descendible quality of estate with which it was the intention of the settlor to impress the property either in the gift to Krishnabai or to the male heirs. Their Lordships are unable to accept this view, which is permeated by the suggestion that the words when used in a Bombay settlement are primarily words of inheritance denoting the character of an estate. They do not think that the male heirs of Krishnabai took by inheritance from her. They are of opinion that the estate that Krishnabai took was defined and limited by her life interest, and that it was not by descent from her but by virtue of a wholly independent gift that her male heirs were beneficiaries under the deed. These male heirs being in fact living at the date of the deed, no difficulty arises. . . . Their Lordships are of opinion that the true interpretation is that the persons who answer the description of male heirs at the date of Krishnabai's death were the persons in whose favour an independent gift was made, but that by operation of the Hindu law there would be excluded from that class people who were not living when the deed was executed. There is nothing whatever in the words of the grant to show that the estate so conferred was anything but an absolute estate upon such persons. For there is nothing to suggest on the one hand, that such estate was limited to their life or, on the other, that any line of descent was marked out after their death. It is true that the gift is in the form of a gift of income but it is a gift unlimited in point of time, and if there be no restriction in the gift and no limitations beyond the actual beneficiaries at Krishnabai's death such a gift carries the whole estate": Madhavrao v. Balabhai (1928) 55 I.A. 74, 52 Bom. 176, 107 I.C. 119, ('28) A.P.C. 33. The rule in this section applies to wills providing for succession of shebaits of an endowment (k).

---

(i) See also The Administrator General of Bengal v. Lalbihari Dhar (1934) 61 Cal. 393, 152 I.C. 710, ('34) A.C. 629.

(j) (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47.

When the husband gave his wife full powers of transfer over the property but without giving her an absolute estate such a disposition is not repugnant to Hindu Law and alienations by her are binding on the reversioner (l).

383. Limitations subject to which a gift or bequest can be made to an unborn person.—As has already been stated, a Hindu may under the Acts of 1914, 1916 and 1921 referred to in §§ 360 and 373 above, dispose of his property by transfer inter vivos or by will in favour of an unborn person. This, however, can only be done subject to certain limitations and provisions. These limitations and provisions are—

(a) in respect of dispositions by transfers inter vivos, those contained in Chapter II of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and

(b) in respect of dispositions by will, those contained in sections 113, 114, 115 and 116 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925.

Chapter II of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, did not originally apply to Hindus. It has now been extended to Hindus by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act 20 of 1929, sec. 3. The sections of that Chapter material for the present purposes are secs. 13, 14, 15 and 16, which correspond to secs. 113, 114, 115 and 116 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. Both these sets of sections are similar in substance; they are therefore dealt with together in §§ 384, 385, 386 and 387 below.

All the eight sections assume that a gift or bequest can be made in favour of an unborn person. They did not apply to Hindus at first. They were gradually made applicable to Hindus. The Hindu Transfers and Bequest Act, 1914, and the Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921, incorporated only s. 14 of the Transfer of Property Act and the corresponding s. 114 of the Indian Succession Act, being the sections which relate to the rule against perpetuity. The Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, incorporated two more sections, namely, s. 13 of the Transfer of Property Act and the corresponding s. 113 of the Indian Succession Act. The first time all the eight sections were applied to Hindu gifts and wills was by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 21 of 1929, by which all the three Acts mentioned above were amended and they were all made uniform: see ss. 11, 12 and 13 of Act 21 of 1929.

384. Disposition in favour of unborn person subject to prior disposition.—Where a gift is made to a person not in existence at the date of the gift or a bequest is made to a person not in existence at the death of the testator, subject to a prior gift or bequest, the later gift or bequest shall not take effect, unless it extends to the whole of the remaining interest of the donor or testator in the property.

---

(k) Ganesh Chunder v. Lal Behary (1936) 63 I.A. 448, 38 Bom. L.R. 1250, 164 I.C. 347, ('36) A.P.C. 318. Also see Gokul Chand De v. Gopi Nath Dev ('52) A.C. 705 (deed of trust). Also see Raikishori Dassi v. Official Trustee ('60) A.C. 235, 64 C.W.N. 646.

(l) Bishun Singh v. Shri Takurji Mangla Nain Bhagwan (1944) 72 I.A. 27, (1945) All. 231.

Illustrations

(1) Gift.—A transfers property of which he is the owner to B in trust for A and his intended wife successively for their lives, and, after the death of the survivor, for the eldest son of the intended marriage for life, and after his death for A's second son. The interest so created for the benefit of the eldest son does not take effect, because it does not extend to the whole of A's remaining interest in the property.

(2) Bequest.—Property is bequeathed by a father to his son for life, after his death, to his son's wife for life and after her death to certain other persons. The son's wife was not in existence at the date of the testator's death. The bequest to her, not being of the whole interest, is void (m).

This section is a combination of s. 13 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and s. 113 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925.

385. Rule against perpetuity.—(1) Gift.—No transfer of property can operate to create an interest which is to take effect after the lifetime of one or more persons living at the date of such transfer, and the minority of some person who shall be in existence at the expiration of that period, and to whom, if he attains full age, the interest created is to belong.

(2) Bequest.—No bequest is valid whereby the vesting of the thing bequeathed may be delayed beyond the lifetime of one or more persons living at the testator's death, and the minority of some person who shall be in existence at the expiration of that period, and to whom, if he attains full age, the thing bequeathed is to belong. The rule applies to private trusts also (n).

Illustrations

(a) A fund is bequeathed to A for his life, and after his death to B for his life, and after B's death to such of the sons of B who shall first attain the age of 25. A and B survive the testator. Here the son of B who shall first attain the age of 25 may be a son born after the death of the testator; such son may not attain 25 until more than 18 years have elapsed from the death of the survivor of A and B; and the vesting of the fund may thus be delayed beyond the lifetime of A and B and the minority of the sons of B. The bequest after B's death is void.

(b) A fund is bequeathed to A for his life, and after his death to B for his life, and after B's death to such of B's sons as shall first attain the age of 25. B dies in the lifetime of the testator, leaving one or more sons. In this case the sons of B are persons living at the time of the testator's decease, and the time when either of them will attain 25 necessarily falls within his own lifetime. The bequest is valid.

(c) A fund is bequeathed to A for his life, and after his death to B for his life, with a direction that after B's death it shall be divided amongst such of B's children as shall attain the age of 18, but that, if no child of B shall attain that age, the fund shall go to C. Here the time for the division of the fund must arrive at the latest at the expiration of 18 years from the death of B, a person living at the testator's decease. All the bequests are valid.

Sub-section (1) is sec. 14 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882; sub-sec. (2) is sec. 114 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. Both these sections are the same in substance, though different in form.

The rule against perpetuity does not apply to charitable or religious endowments. See § 411 below.

---

(m) Kuppusami Pillai v. Jayalakshmi Ammal (1935) 58 Mad. 15, 154 I.C. 537, ('34) A.M. 705; Bibha Bati Debee v. Mahendra Chandra Lahiri (1937) 1 Cal. 400, 173 I.C. 857, ('38) A.C. 34.

(n) Ajitkumar Mitra v. Tarubala Dasee (1936) 63 Cal. 209.

Rule of Hindu law before legislation.—The above rules apply only to gifts and bequests which are within the Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act, 1914, the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, and the Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921, dealt with in § 360 above. As to gifts and bequests which do not come within those Acts the old rule still applies. That rule may be stated as follows:—

Where it appears from the will that the intention of the testator was not to pass the estate at all, but to create a perpetuity, as where the will contains a direction, as regards the corpus, that it should be kept intact for ever, and, as regards the income of the property, that portion thereof should be enjoyed by the testator's sons, grandsons and their descendants for ever and that the rest should be accumulated, the direction is invalid, and the estate will pass as an estate intestate. The Hindu law does not allow property to be tied up in perpetuity except in the case of religious and charitable endowments (o). The same principle applies to transfers inter vivos (gifts). This rule may be explained by the following illustration:

Illustration

A will contains as to the property purported to be bequeathed thereby the following directions:—

(1) that the property shall not be alienated at all;

(2) that six-sixteenths of the net income of the property shall be applied towards the maintenance of the members of the testator's family and the families of his sons, grandsons and their descendants in perpetuity;

(3) that the remaining ten-sixteenths should be accumulated and carried to the credit of the estate.

The will is invalid, and the property will descend to the testator's heirs as on intestacy. The above directions show that it was not the intention of the testator to pass the estate at all. It is not a case where the testator has expressed an intention to pass the estate, and has added a clause against alienation, in which case the clause against alienation would be void [§ 393], and the gift of the estate would take effect. In the case put above, the will starts with a provision against alienation, and this provision is confirmatory of the other parts of the will which clearly show an intention to create a perpetuity (p).

386. Gift or bequest to a class.—If a gift or bequest is made to a class of persons with regard to some of whom it fails by reason of the rules contained in §§ 384 and 385 above, such gift or bequest fails in regard to those persons only and not in regard to the whole class.

Illustrations

(a) A fund is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to all his children who shall attain the age of 25. [The gift to A's children is a gift to a class]. A survives the testator, and has some children living at the testator's death. Each child of A living at the testator's death must attain the age of 25 (if at all) within the limits allowed for a bequest [§ 385 (2)]. But A may have children after the testator's decease, some of whom may not attain the age of 25 until more than 18 years have elapsed after the decease of A. The bequest to A's children, therefore, is inoperative as to any child born after the testator's death and in regard to those who do not attain the age of 25 within 18 years after A's death, but is operative in regard to the other children of A.

(b) A fund is bequeathed to A for his life, and after his death to B, C, D and all other children of A who shall attain the age of 25. B, C, D are children of A living at the testator's decease. In all other respects the case is the same as that supposed in ill. (a) Although the mention of B, C and D by name does not prevent the bequest from being regarded as a bequest to a class, the bequest is not wholly void. It is operative as regards any of the children B, C or D, who attains the age of 25 within 18 years after A's death.

This is a combination of sec. 15 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, as amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act 20 of 1929, sec. 9 and sec. 115 of the (o) Shookmoy Chandra v. Monoharri Dassi (1885) 11 Cal. 684, 12 I.A. 103; Raikishori v. Debendranath (1888) 15 Cal. 409, 15 I.A. 37; Vullabhdas v. Gordhandas (1890) 14 Bom. 360; Kumara Asima v. Kumara Krishna (1869) 2 Beng. L.R.O.C. 11.

---

(p) Ibid.

Indian Succession Act, 1925, as amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 21 of 1929, sec. 14. Before the amendment, if a gift or bequest to a class failed as to any member thereof, the gift or bequest was wholly void. Since the amendment, it is not wholly void. It is void only as to those in regard to whom it fails. The above illustrations are illustrations (i) and (ii) to sec. 115 of the Indian Succession Act as amended by the Supplementary Act.

Section 15 of the Transfer of Property Act and sec. 115 of the Indian Succession Act, before they were amended as aforesaid, were enacted on the principle of the decision in Leake v. Robinson (q). That principle is thus stated in Theobold on Wills: "Where there is a gift to a class, any members of which may have to be ascertained beyond the limits of perpetuity—for instance, to the children of a living person who shall attain twenty-five—the whole gift is void."

Rule of Hindu law as to gift to a class and subsequent legislation.—Before the Acts of 1914, 1916, and 1921, relating to gifts and bequests to unborn persons [§§ 360, 373], a gift to a person who was not in existence at the date of the gift was void; and so was a bequest to a person who was not in existence at the date of the testator's death. This proceeded on the principle that a person who was not in existence at the material date was incapacitated from taking. Thus if a gift was made by a Hindu to his grandsons, and none of them was in existence at the date of the gift, none of them had the capacity to take, and the gift was therefore void. But what if a gift was made by a Hindu to his grandson S who was in existence at the date of the gift, and to other grandsons (brothers of S) who might be born after the date of the gift, and some grandsons are born after the date of the gift. It is obvious that the grandsons who were born after the date of the gift could not take, but could S take? In some of the earlier cases it was held on the analogy of the rule in Leake v. Robinson, that the gift having failed as to the other grandsons, it was wholly void, and that S too could not take. But it was held in later cases and also by the Judicial Committee that the rule in Leake v. Robinson was a rule of construction of the English law, and that it did not apply to Hindus, and that the incapacity of the other grandsons to take did not incapacitate S from taking, with the result that S took the whole of the property which was the subject matter of the gift (r). Further, the rule in Leake v. Robinson is confined in terms to cases where the members of the class may have to be ascertained beyond the limits of perpetuity. But the sections of the Transfer of Property Act and the Indian Succession Act which contain the rule against perpetuity did not then apply to Hindus and Leake v. Robinson therefore could not possibly apply to Hindu gifts and bequests.

We shall now observe the course of legislation. First came the Madras Act of 1914. It validated gifts and bequests in favour of unborn persons, and thus removed the bar of incapacity. It also applied for the first time the rule against perpetuity to cases governed by that Act. Similar provisions were introduced by the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, and the Hindu Transfers and Bequests [City of Madras] Act, 1921; see §§ 360 and 373 above. The result of all that was that in the case put above grandsons other than S. though not in existence at the date of the gift, could also take under the deed.

The Indian Succession Act in force when the three Acts were passed was that of 1865. Section 101 related to the rule against perpetuity; it is now sec. 114 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. Section 102 related to bequests to a class; this corresponds to sec. 115 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, before it was amended in 1929. Another Act in force when the three Acts were passed was the Hindu Wills Act, 1870. Certain sections of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, were made applicable to cases governed by the Hindu Wills Act, one of them being sec. 102. Section 102 was in the following terms:—

"If a bequest is made to a class of persons with regard to some of whom it is inoperative by reason of the provisions of section 100 or section 101, such bequest is wholly void."

Though sec. 101 was incorporated in all the three Acts, sec. 102 was not, the intention being to keep alive the rule of Hindu law that if a gift or bequest was made to a class of persons with regard to some of whom it was inoperative by reason of the fact that they were not in existence at the material date, the gift or bequest failed in regard to those persons only and not in regard to the whole class. But the legislature seemed to have overlooked the Hindu Wills Act, and particularly the inclusion in that Act of sec. 102. This was not noticed until the decision of the Judicial Committee in Soundara Rajan v. Natarajan (s). The will in that case was governed by the Madras Act of 1914. Amongst the properties disposed of by the will were some immovable properties situated in the city of Madras. This attracted the applicability of the Hindu Wills Act. The testator died in 1904, leaving three daughters, A, B, and C. A had four children, three born before and one after 1904. B had one child born before 1904. C had six children all born after 1904. By this will the deceased directed his trustees to apportion his residuary trust fund into as many equal shares as there were daughters, to pay the income from each of such shares to the daughters for life respectively, and after the death of each daughter to hold the share appropriated to her "upon trust for the children of such daughters who shall attain the age of twenty-one years." The testator was survived by the three daughters. After their death a suit was brought by the children of the third daughter C against the children of A and B for construction of the will and for administration of the estate of the testator. The Judicial Committee held that the bequest to the unborn children was invalid under sec. 101 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865 [now the Indian Succession Act, 1925, sec. 114], as it offended the rule against perpetuity, and that the bequest being to a class, and being invalid as to some members, it failed also in regard to the children born before the death of the testator under sec. 102 of that Act (corresponding to the Indian Succession Act, 1925, sec. 115, before it was amended in 1929). In the case under consideration the bequest to the children born after the testator's death failed not because of the rule of Hindu law that a bequest to an unborn person is void, for the Madras Act validated such bequest, but because of the rule against perpetuity contained in sec. 101. The bequest being void as to some members of the class under sec. 101 it was wholly void under sec. 102. This led to the amendment of sec. 15 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and sec. 115 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, in the manner stated above.

---

(q) (1817) 2 Mer. 363.

(r) Rai Bishenchand v. Mussumat Asmaida Koer (1884) 6 All. 560, 11 I.A. 164; Ram Lal Sett v. Kanai Lal Sett (1886) 12 Cal. 663; Bhagabati v. Kalicharan (1911) 38 Cal. 468, 38 I.A. 54, 10 I.C. 641 [affirming s.c. in 32 Cal. 992]; Rani Moni v. Radha Prasad (1914) 41 Cal. 1007, 41 I.A. 176, 23 I.C. 713, ('14) A.P.C. 149; Manjamma v. Padmanabhayya (1889) 12 Mad. 393; Ranganadha v. Baghirathi (1906) 29 Mad. 412; Mangaldas v. Tribhuvandas (1891) 15 Bom. 652; Tribhuvan Das v. Gangadas (1894) 18 Bom. 7; Krishnarao v. Benabai (1896) 20 Bom. 571; Khimji v. Morarji (1898) 22 Bom. 533; Advocate-General v. Karmali (1905) 29 Bom. 133, 155-156; Kanai Lal v. Kumar Purnendu (1944) 51 C.W.N. 227, (1947) 1 Cal. 48; Rabindra Nath v. Sushil Chandra ('52) A.C. 427.

387. Failure of prior disposition.—Where a gift or bequest fails by reason of any of the rules contained in §§ 384 and 385 above, any gift or bequest intended to take effect after on failure of such prior gift or bequest also fails.

This is a combination of sec. 16 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and sec. 116 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925.

A fund is bequeathed to A for his life, and after his death to such of his sons as shall first attain the age of 25 for his life, and after the decease of such son to B. A and B survive the testator. The bequest to B is intended to take effect after the bequest to such of the sons of A as shall first attain the age of 25, which bequest is void under sec. 114 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 [§ 385 (2) above]. The bequest to B is also void (t).

388. Independent and alternative bequests.—Where there are independent and alternative gifts or bequests, of which one is good at the time the document takes effect, and the other is void, the former will take effect, and the latter will be disregarded (u). Where a testator made some bequests of property in favour of his relations and other bequests for charitable purposes and some of the former bequests were invalid, the latter were held to be valid as they were separable from and not dependent on the former (v).

389. Grant subject to defeasance: Executory bequest.—It is competent to a Hindu to make a grant of an absolute estate defeasible on the happen-

---

(s) (1925) 52 I.A. 310, 48 Mad. 906, 92 I.C. 289, ('25) A.P.C. 244.

(t) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 410, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 80; Soudaminey Dossee v. Jogesh Chunder (1877) 2 Cal. 262; Javerbai v. Kablibai (1892) 16 Bom. 492, in app. from 15 Bom. 326.

(u) Raikishori v. Debendranath (1888) 15 Cal. 409, 15 I.A. 37.

(v) Kayastha Pathshala Allahabad v. Mt. Bhagwati Devi (1937) 64 I.A. 5, (1937) All. 3, 39 Bom. L.R. 322, 166 I.C. 4, ('37) A.P.C. 4.

ing of a subsequent event. But the event must happen, if at all, immediately on the close of a life in being, and the gift over must be in favour of some person in existence at the date of the gift or at the death of the testator, as the case may be; otherwise, the gift over is void, and the absolute estate granted to the first donee remains unaffected (w).

In cases, however, governed by the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, the gift over may be made in favour even of a person not in existence at the death of the testator.

Illustrations

(a) A Hindu bequeaths his property to his five sons in equal shares, and directs that in the event of any of his sons dying without sons or sons' sons, his share shall pass over to the sons then living or their sons. All the five sons survive the testator. One of the sons, A dies leaving a widow, but without leaving sons or sons' sons. The gift over to the surviving sons is valid, and they are entitled to the one-fifth share of the deceased son to the exclusion of his widow. The effect of the will is to give an absolute estate to each son if he dies leaving sons or sons' sons subject to defeasance in the event of his death without leaving sons or sons' sons. If A had died leaving sons or sons' sons, he would have taken an absolute estate which he could have disposed of by will (x), and which on intestacy would have passed to his heirs: Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (1862) 9 M.I.A. 123 s.c. 6 M.I.A. 526; Chunilal v. Bai Samrath (1914) 38 Bom. 399, 23 I.C. 645, ('14) A.P.C. 60; Navalchand v. Manekchand (1921) 23 Bom. L.R. 450, 62 I.C. 98, ('21) A.B. 25. [It may be observed that any son of the testator may alienate his share even before the event happens, but the alienee will in that case take the share subject to the defeasance clause: (1921) 23 Bom. L.R. 450, 62 I.C. 98, ('21) A.B. 25.]

Note.—The case put above was not governed by the Hindu Wills Act, 1870. Had it been governed by that Act, the will would have to be construed with reference to sec. 111 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, (now sec. 124 of the Act of 1925), it being one of the sections made applicable by the Hindu Wills Act to wills governed by that Act. Section 111 provides that "where a legacy is given if a specified uncertain event shall happen and no time is mentioned in the will for the occurrence of that event, the legacy cannot take effect, unless such event happens before the period when the fund bequeathed is payable or distributable." Ill. (a) to sec. 111 is as follows: "A legacy is bequeathed to A, and, in case of his death, to B. If A survives the testator, the legacy to B does not take effect."

In the case put in our illustration, the uncertain event on the happening of which the one-fifth share of a son is to go to his brothers is the death of the son without leaving sons or sons' sons. Under sec. 111 the rule has been taken from an English case which has been overruled by later English cases. The section, it has been held, should be applied strictly to cases coming within its scope (y).

Section 124 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, (sec. 111 of the Act of 1865), is one of the sections mentioned in Schedule III to that Act. Those sections applied in the first instance to wills of the classes specified in cls. (a) and (b) of sec. 57 of that Act, being wills to which the Hindu Wills Act, 1870, applied. Since the Indian Succession (Amendment) Act, 1929, those sections apply also to other wills executed on or after the 1st January, 1927. The Act of 1929 came into force on the 1st October, 1929.

(b) A Hindu testator bequeathed a moiety of his estate to his son and provided that the other moiety was to be held by the son and other persons in trust for the son's male

---

(w) Soorjemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (1862) 9 M.I.A. 123, s.c. 6 M.I.A. 526; Kristoromoni v. Narendro (1888) 16 Cal. 383, 392, 16 I.A. 29; Bissonauth v. Bamasoondery (1867) 12 M.I.A. 41, 48 [devise held absolute]; Bhoobun Mohini v. Hurrish Chunder (1878) 4 Cal. 23, 5 I.A. 138 [held gift operated as an absolute grant, as the event specified did not occur]; Tarokessur Roy v. Soshi (1883) 9 Cal. 952, 10 I.A. 51 [case of gift over of a life estate]; Lalit Mohun v. Chukkun Lal (1897) 24 Cal. 834, 850, 24 I.A. 76; Purna Sashi v. Kalidhan (1911) 38 Cal. 603, 619, 620, 38 I.A. 112, 120, 11 I.C. 412; Lakshminarayana v. Valliammal (1911) 34 Mad. 250, 11 I.C. 767; Sarajubala v. Jyotirmoyee (1931) 58 I.A. 270, 59 Cal. 142, 134 I.C. 648, ('31) A.P.C. 179: Narsingh Rao v. Maha Lakshmi Bai (1928) 55 I.A. 180, 50 All. 375, 109 I.C. 703, ('28) A.P.C. 156. See also Transfer of Property Act, 1882, ss. 28, 30; Mt. Rameshwar Kuer v. Sheo Lal Upadheya (1935) 14 Pat. 640, 156 I.C. 33, ('35) A.P. 401; Mst. Tejo v. Chhape Ram ('56) A. Punj. 45.

(x) Bhoobun Mohini v. Hurrish Chunder (1879) 4 Cal. 23, 5 I.A. 138.

(y) Bhupendra v. Amarendra (1916) 43 I.A. 12, 43 Cal. 432, 34 I.C. 892, ('15) A.P.C. 101.

issue and further provided that in case of the son's death without male issue it should go to a certain named charitable Institute. The son died without male issue. It was held by the Judicial Committee that the gift to the trust took effect on the death of the son and that the gift to charity, which was subject to the above condition, was valid (z).

(c) A executes a deed of settlement whereby he gives certain property to his daughter B absolutely with the condition superadded that the property should revert to A's heirs on failure of the male descendants of A. Here the event on the happening of which the defeasance clause is to operate, namely, the indefinite failure of male issue, may not take place at B's death. The gift over to A's heirs is therefore void, and the absolute estate granted to B remains unaffected: Sarajubala v. Jyotirmayee (1931) 58 I.A. 270, 59 Cal. 142, 134 I.C. 648, ('31) A.P.C. 179.

(d) By a deed of settlement executed in 1875 the settlor created an absolute estate in favour of his wife with a condition that if a son was born to the settlor's son (whom he had disinherited), the property should go to him. Held that the gift over to the grandson being a gift in favour of an unborn person was void, with the result that the absolute estate granted to the wife remained unaffected. Had the case been governed by any of the Acts mentioned in the second paragraph of this section, the gift over would have been valid (a).

As to Settled Estates in Bengal, see the Bengal Settled Estates Act, 1904.

390. Gift or bequest by way of remainder.—A grant by way of remainder is valid provided—

(1) the grant is to take effect immediately on the close of a life in being, and

(2) it is made to a person in existence at the date of the gift or at the death of the testator as the case may be (b).

In cases, however, governed by the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, a gift by way of remainder may be made in favour of an unborn person.

Illustration

Property is bequeathed to A for life, and after his death to B. Both A and B are in existence at the death of testator. A takes an estate for life. B takes the remainder after A's death. The bequest to B by way of remainder is valid: Ranganadha v. Bagirathi (1906) 29 Mad. 412.

391. Trust valid for valid purposes.—Trusts are not unknown to Hindu law, but they can only be sustained to the extent and for the purpose of giving effect to those beneficiary interests which are recognized by that law. A disposition of property which is inherently illegal, as where the donee is not a person legally capable of taking, or the estate which he is given is not recognized by Hindu law, cannot be made to take effect by the medium of a trust. That which cannot be done directly by gift cannot be done indirectly by the intervention of a trustee (c). See as to gifts, §§ 357, 359 and 360, and as to wills §§ 368, 372 and 373.

392. Condition repugnant to interest created.—Where by the terms of a deed or will an absolute estate of inheritance is created in favour of a per-

---

(z) Gadadhur Mullik v. Official Trustee of Bengal (1940) 1 Cal. 415, 187 I.C. 108, 67 I.A. 129, ('40) A.P.C. 45.

(a) Norendra Nath v. Kamalbasini Dasi (1896) 23 Cal. 563, 23 I.A. 18; Lala Ramjewan v. Dal Koer (1897) 24 Cal. 406.

(b) Ranganadha v. Baghirathi (1906) 29 Mad. 412; Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Deenobundoo Mullick (1862) 9 M.I.A. 123, s.c. 6 M.I.A. 526; Motirahu v. Mamubai (1897) 21 Bom. 709, 721, 24 I.A. 93; Ram Bahadur v. Jagannath (1918) 3 Pat. L.J. 199, 45 I.C. 749, ('18) A.P. 469 [F.B.].

(c) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 401-402, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 71, 72; Rajendar v. Sham Chund (1881) 6 Cal. 106; Kahandas Narrandas, in re (1881) 5 Bom. 154, 173-174.

son, any subsequent clause purporting to restrict that interest is invalid, and the donee will take an absolute estate as if the document contained no such clause (d).

393. Condition restraining alienation or partition.—Where property is given absolutely to a person, but the transfer or will contains a direction that it shall not be alienated (e), or partitioned (f), or that it shall be applied or enjoyed in a particular manner (g), such direction is inoperative, and the donee will take the property as if the document had contained no such direction [§ 362].

394. Direction postponing payment to donee or legatee.—Where a transfer or will confers an absolute estate, but directs that the property shall not be made over to the donee or legatee until he has attained a certain age beyond the period of his majority, such direction is inoperative, and he is entitled to the property on attaining majority as if the document contained no such direction. But the direction will be valid and it will take effect if during the interval the income of the property is disposed of in favour of some other person (h).

Thus if property is bequeathed to A, a minor, with a direction that it shall not be handed over to him until he attains the age of 20 years, the direction is inoperative, and A is entitled to receive the property on his attaining majority. But if the will contains a direction that until A attains the age of 20 years, the income of the property shall be given to B, then A is not entitled to receive the property until he attains the age of 20 years.

The rule laid down in this section is based on the decision in Gosling v. Gosling (i), which is the leading English case on the subject. The same rule has been applied to cases governed by the Indian Succession Act, 1925 (j).

Contingent gift.—A gift by a Hindu to a living person on his attaining a particular age, is not invalid, even if the donee has not attained that age at the date of transfer and there is no prior gift supporting it. The artificial rule of English law that every contingent gift must be supported by prior estate and it must vest eo instanti that the prior estate determines has not been applied to gifts made by Hindus (k).

395. Gift of income without limit of time.—Where a gift is made of the income, but the estate given is not in terms limited to the lives of the beneficiaries, nor is any line of descent provided after their deaths, the gift is an absolute gift (l).

---

(d) Bhaldas v. Bai Gulab (1922) 49 I.A. 1, 46 Bom. 153, 65 I.C. 974, ('22) A.P.C. 193; Ragghunath Prasad v. Deputy Commissioner (1929) 56 I.A. 372, 4 Luck. 483, 120 I.C. 641, ('29) A.P.C. 283; Sarajubala v. Jyotirmayee (1931) 58 I.A. 270, 59 Cal. 142, 134 I.C. 648, ('31) A.P.C. 179; Partap Chand v. Mt. Makhni (1933) 14 Lah. 485, 144 I.C. 651, ('33) A.L. 365; Kandarpamohan Goswami v. Akshaychandra Basu (1934) 61 Cal. 106, 150 I.C. 179, ('34) A.C. 379.

(e) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 395, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 65; Ashutosh v. Durga (1880) 5 Cal. 488, 6 I.A. 182; Gokul Nath v. Issur Lochun (1887) 14 Cal. 222; Raikishori v. Debendranath (1888) 15 Cal. 409, 15 I.A. 37; Chandi Churn v. Sidheswari (1889) 16 Cal. 71, 15 I.A. 149; Lalit Mohun v. Chukkun Lal (1897) 24 Cal. 834, 24 I.A. 76; Rameshwar v. Lachmi Prosad (1904) 31 Cal. 111; Sarajubala v. Jyotirmayee (1931) 58 I.A. 270, 59 Cal. 142, 134 I.C. 648, ('31) A.P.C. 179; Umrao Singh v. Baldeo Singh (1933) 14 Lah. 353, 143 I.C. 615, ('33) A.L. 201.

(f) Mokoondo Lall v. Gonesh Chunder (1875) 1 Cal. 104; Raikishori v. Debendranath, supra.

(g) Cally Nath v. Chunder Nath (1882) 8 Cal. 378; Motivahu v. Mamubai (1895) 19 Bom. 647.

(h) Gosavi Shivgar v. Rivett Carnac (1889) 13 Bom. 463; Husenbhoy v. Ahmedhoy (1902) 26 Bom. 319 [case of Khojas]. See also (1882) 8 Cal. 378, supra; Mussammat Ram Kuar v. Atma Singh (1927) 8 Lah. 181, 103 I.C. 506, ('27) A.L. 404.

(i) (1859) Johns, 265.

(j) Lloyd v. Webb (1897) 24 Cal. 44.

(k) Kanai Lal v. Kumar Purnendu (1946) 51 C.W.N. 227, (1947) 1 Cal. 48.

(l) Madhavrao v. Balabhai (1928) 55 I.A. 74, 52 Bom. 176, 107 I.C. 119, ('28) A.P.C. 33.

396. Immoral conditions.—A gift to which an immoral condition is attached remains a good gift, while the condition is void (m).

397. Direction for accumulation.—(1) Where the terms of a transfer of property direct that the income arising from the property shall be accumulated either wholly or in part during a period longer than—

(a) the life of the transferor, or

(b) a period of eighteen years from the date of the transfer, such direction shall, save as hereinafter provided [sub-§ (3)], be void to the extent to which the period during which the accumulation is directed exceeds the longer of the aforesaid periods, and at the end of such last-mentioned period the property and the income thereof shall be disposed of as if the period during which the accumulation has been directed to be made had elapsed.

(2) Where the terms of a will direct that the income arising from any property shall be accumulated either wholly or in part during any period longer than a period of eighteen years from the death of the testator, such direction shall, save as hereinafter provided [sub-§ (3)], be void to the extent to which the period during which the accumulation is directed exceeds the aforesaid period, and at the end of such period of eighteen years the property and the income thereof shall be disposed of as if the period during which the accumulation has been directed to be made had elapsed.

(3) This section shall not affect any direction for accumulation for the purpose of—

(i) the payment of the debts of the transferor or the testator or any other person taking any interest under the transfer or will, or

(ii) the provision of portions for children or remoter issue of the transferor or of the testator or of any other person taking any interest under the transfer or will, or

(iii) the preservation or maintenance of the property transferred;

and such direction may be made accordingly.

Sub-§ (1) of this section is sub-sec. (1) of sec. 17 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, as amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act 20 of 1929, sec. 10. Section 17 is one of the sections of Chapter II of the Transfer of Property Act, and that Chapter now applies to Hindus also.

Sub-§ (2) of this section is sub-sec. (1) of sec. 117 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, as amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 21 of 1929, sec. 14(3). By sec. 14(3) of the same Act, sec. 117 as amended was included in Schedule III to the Indian Succession Act, so as to apply to Hindu wills also.

Sub-§ (3) of this section is a combination of sub-sec. (2) of sec. 17 of the Transfer of Property Act and sub-sec. (2) of sec. 117 of the Indian Succession Act.

Both the amending Acts came into force on the 1st April, 1930. All transfers and wills executed before that date will still be governed by the rule of Hindu law as it was before those Acts.

Religious endowments.—The rules stated in this section do not apply to religious endowments. See § 411A below.

---

(m) Ram Sarup v. Bela (1884) 6 All. 313, 11 I.A. 44, Cf. Transfer of Property Act, 1882 s. 25.

Rule of Hindu law before legislation.—Whether a direction for accumulation is valid or not, is a question which depends upon the facts of each case. No hard and fast rule can be laid down; in each case the particular direction must be examined to see what the object of the testator was and what the effect of carrying out the direction would be. If there is nothing per se illegal in a direction to accumulate made in a transfer inter vivos or a will, and if such direction is neither so unreasonable in its conditions as to be void against public policy, nor given for the purpose of carrying out an illegal object nor in its effect inconsistent with Hindu law, effect should be given to the direction (n).

The period during which an accumulation can be validly directed is the period for which the absolute vesting of the entire interest can be withheld, or for so long a time as that during which the corpus of the property can be rendered inalienable or the course of its devolution can be directed and controlled by a testator (o).

Illustrations to the above rule

(a) Where the object is to create a perpetuity.—Where there is no disposition of the beneficial interest in the property of which the income is directed to be accumulated and the direction to accumulate is an attempt to create a perpetuity as in the case put in the illustration to sec. 393, the direction is invalid, and the property will pass as on intestacy: Shookmoy Chandra v. Monoharri Dassi (p), Kumara Asima v. Kumara Krishna (q).

(b) Where the direction to accumulate is repugnant to the grant.—Where there is a present gift of property to a person, but the gift is followed by provisions postponing payment and directing accumulation, such provisions are invalid, and the donee is entitled to receive the property as if there were no such directions in the deed of gift or will. The reason is that an absolute gift cannot be qualified by a direction to postpone payment and to accumulate: Cally Nath v. Chunder Nath (r), Bramamayi v. Jages Chandra (s), Mokoondo Lall v. Gonesh Chunder (t).

(c) Accumulation for payment of debts or for benefit of minors.—A direction to accumulate for the payment of debts, or for the benefit of minor donees, is not invalid: Amrito Lall v. Surnomoni (u).

(d) Accumulation for charitable purposes.—A direction to accumulate the income of property for a charitable purpose is not invalid. It has accordingly been held that a direction to accumulate the income of property until it amounted to Rs. 10,000 and then to spend the proceeds in feeding the poor is valid: Rajendra Lall v. Raj Coomari (v). See § 411 below.

(dd) Accumulation for marriage expenses.—A direction to accumulate for the purpose of providing for the marriage expenses of the testator's son is valid: Nafar Chandra v. Ratan (w).

(e) Where the direction is in its effect inconsistent with Hindu law.—A Hindu bequeathed his property to trustees upon trust to pay a fixed monthly sum to his wife during her life, and to accumulate the surplus until the death of his wife. The testator also authorised his wife and two other persons to adopt a son, with a direction that neither the corpus nor the accumulations were to be handed over to the adopted son until the death of his wife. B, alleging that he was adopted to the testator pursuant to the authority given by him, contended that the direction for accumulation till the death of the widow was void, and claimed immediate possession of the corpus and the accumulations, subject to the payment to the widow of the monthly sum directed to be paid to her under the will. Jenkins, J., held that the adoption was proved, but that the direction to accumulate was valid and that the plaintiff was not entitled to possession until the death of the widow. The learned Judge said: "It appears to me, on principle that, if accumulations are permissible, then in the absence of special provision, the limit must be that which determines the period during which the course or devolution of property can be directed and controlled by a testator." The learned Judge added: "It is true that the object of the testator's bounty is not ascertained at the testator's death [for the son was to be adopted after his death], but that in itself is not a necessary indication of illegal

---

(n) Rajendra Lall v. Raj Coomari (1907) 34 Cal. 5. See also Benode Behari v. Nistarini Dassi (1905) 32 I.A. 193, 33 Cal. 180, and the cases cited in the illustrations.

(o) Watkins v. Administrator-General of Bengal (1920) 47 Cal. 88, 93, 56 I.C. 376, ('20) A.C. 951.

(p) (1885) 11 Cal. 684, 12 I.A. 103.

(q) (1868) 2 Beng. L.R.O.C. 11, 37.

(r) (1882) 8 Cal. 378.

(s) (1871) 8 Beng. L.R. 400.

(t) (1875) 1 Cal. 104.

(u) (1898) 25 Cal. 662, 691.

(v) (1907) 34 Cal. 5.

(w) (1910) 15 C.W.N. 66, 7 I.C. 921.

remoteness": Amrito Lall v. Surnomoye (x). On appeal, it was held that adoption was invalid and it therefore became unnecessary to consider the validity of the direction for accumulation. Trevelyn, J., however, said: "I cannot see how a direction to accumulate can be valid unless there be a present gift to support the direction to accumulate"; Amrito Lall v. Surnomoni (y). The Judicial Committee agreed with the Appellate Court that the adoption was invalid and declined to enter upon the other question: Amrito Lal v. Surnomoyee (z). Referring to the observation of Trevelyan, J., Sir Lawrence Jenkins said in a later case which related to the same will: "I do not clearly understand what the learned Judge here intended to lay down," and his Lordship reiterated the views expressed in the earlier judgment.

Accumulation to follow capital.—In the absence of any direction to the contrary it is the rule of Hindu law that accumulations go with the capital (a).

398. Power of appointment.—A Hindu may, by deed or will, grant a power of appointment to a person or persons named in the will. Before the Hindu Transfer and Bequests Act, 1914, the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, and the Hindu Transfers and Bequests (City of Madras) Act, 1921, it was necessary to the valid exercise of the power that it should be exercised in favour of a person who was in existence either actually or in contemplation of law at the date of the gift or at the testator's death, as the case might be (b). Since the passing of those Acts, the power may be exercised in favour even of an unborn person subject, however, to the limitations and provisions contained in those Acts [see §§ 383-387].

When an appointment is made pursuant to a power in favour of two or more persons, and the appointment is invalid as to some or one of them, it may still be valid as to the rest (c).

Illustration

X by his will gives certain property to A for life, and at his death to A's sons, but if A dies without male issue, then to such persons as A may by deed or will appoint. A has no male issue. A, in the exercise of the power, leaves the property by his will to his own daughters C and D to be divided equally between them. C was in existence at the death of the testator. D was born after the death of the testator. C is entitled to a moiety of the property. D is not entitled to anything, as she was born after the death of X. The share appointed by A to D will go to the heirs of X as on intestacy: Javerbai v. Kablibai (1892) 16 Bom. 492. [Under the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916 the execution of the power in favour of D, though not in existence at the death of the testator, would be valid].

The leading case on the subject is that of Motivahu v. Mambubai (d), decided by the Privy Council in the year 1897. In that case it was contended that there was no place for a power of appointment in the Hindu system of law. As to this the Judicial Committee said that as X could himself have designated the person who was to take the property in the event of A dying without sons, there was nothing to prevent X from substituting A for himself and giving him power to designate the person who was to take in the aforesaid event. But to render the gift valid, the taker so designated must have been in existence at the death of X for he takes the property not from the donee of the power, but from X. At the same time the Committee observed that in their opinion the English law of power was not fit to be applied generally to Hindu wills. It has already been pointed out that in cases governed by the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, the taker need not be in existence at the death of X.

---

(x) (1897) 24 Cal. 589, 618.
(y) (1898) 25 Cal. 662, 673, 690-691.
(z) (1900) 27 Cal. 996, 27 I.A. 128.
(a) Bissonauth v. Bamasoondery (1867) 12 M.I.A. 41, 60; Sonatun v. Juggutsoondree (1859) 8 M.I.A. 66 [where there was a direction to the contrary].
(b) Motivahu v. Mambubai (1897) 21 Bom. 709, 24 I.A. 93; Upendra Lal v. Hem Chundra (1898) 25 Cal. 405; Manorama v. Kali Charan (1904) 31 Cal. 166; Brij Lal v. Suraj Bikram (1912) 39 I.A. 150, 34 All. 405, 16 I.C. 92; Mahim Chandra v. Hara Kumari (1915) 42 Cal. 561, 569, 30 I.C. 798, ('15) A.C. 487.
(c) Javerbai v. Kablibai (1892) 16 Bom. 492.
(d) (1897) 21 Bom. 709, 24 I.A. 93.

399. Caution against applying English rules.—"English rules of construction have grown up side by side with a very special law of property and a very artificial system of conveyancing. . . . It is a very serious thing to use such rules in interpreting the instruments of Hindus, who view most transactions from a different point, think differently and speak differently from Englishmen" (e).

400. Gift or bequest to two or more persons.—(1) Where a gift or bequest is made to two or more persons, the question arises whether they take as tenants-in-common or as joint tenants or as coparceners.

If the donees or legatees take as tenants-in-common, the share of each will on his death pass to his heirs by succession. If they take as joint tenants, the undivided interest of each donee will pass on his death by survivorship. If they take as coparceners, the undivided coparcenary interest of each donee will pass on his death by survivorship, and, further, the male issue of each donee will acquire an interest by birth in the property as if it were coparcenary property. [Note that the question whether the donees or legatees take as coparceners can only arise when they are members of a coparcenary. The reason is that a coparcenary is purely a creature of law; it cannot be created by an act of parties (see § 215)].

(2) Where a gift or bequest is made to two or more persons who are not members of a coparcenary without specification of shares, it has been held by the Judicial Committee that they take as tenants-in-common, and not as joint tenants (f). In the course of the argument in the above case it was contended on the authority of a Madras case (g), that where a bequest was made to two or more persons without specification of shares, the presumption was that they took the property as joint tenants, but their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the case was not rightly decided, and said: "It appears to their Lordships that the learned Judges of the High Court of Madras were not justified in importing into the construction of a Hindu will an extremely technical rule of English conveyancing. The principle of joint tenancy appears to be unknown to Hindu law, except in the case of a coparcenary between the members of an undivided family."

Illustrations

(a) A Hindu bequeaths his property to his widow and her son for their maintenance with power to them to alienate the property by sale or gift. Here the legatees take as tenants-in-common, and each takes an absolute interest in a moiety of the property, so that on the death of either of them his or her share will pass to his or her heirs by succession (h).

(b) A Hindu bequeaths his property to his two married daughters without specification of shares. The legatees take as tenants-in-common, and not as joint tenants (i).

(c) A Hindu bequeaths his property to his daughter and her husband without specification of shares. The legatees take as tenants-in-common (j).

---

(e) Per Wilson J., in Ram Lal Sett v. Kanai Lal Sett (1886) 12 Cal. 663, 678, approved by the P.C. in Bhagabati v. Kalicharan (1911) 38 Cal. 468, 38 I.A. 54, 10 I.C. 641; Narasimha v. Parthasarathy (1914) 37 Mad. 199, 222, 41 I.A. 51, 71, 23 I.C. 166.

(f) Jogeswar Narain v. Ram Chandra Dutt (1896) 23 Cal. 670, 23 I.A. 37.

(g) Vydinada v. Nagammal (1888) 11 Mad. 258.

(h) Jogeswar Narain v. Ram Chandra Dutt, supra. Also see Surareddy v. Venkata Subbareddi ('60) A.A.P. 368.

(i) Gopi v. Musammat Jaldhara (1911) 33 All. 41, 7 I.C. 697.

(j) Mst. Jia v. Mst. Rukman (1927) 8 Lah. 219, 100 I.C. 54, ('27) A.L. 126.

(3) Where a gift or bequest is made to two or more persons who are members of a coparcenary, they nevertheless take as tenants-in-common, and not as joint tenants or coparceners, unless a contrary intention appears from that grant (k).

Illustrations

(a) A Hindu executes a deed of gift by which he gives his property to A and B who are brothers and members of a joint Hindu family. The Bombay High Court held that the donees take as tenants-in-common, and on the death of either of them his share will pass to his heirs by succession (l). In the course of the judgment Fulton, J., said: "If an unexpressed intention could be presumed, it would, we think, be more reasonable to suppose that the gift was meant to be to the two brothers as coparceners; but we doubt whether such a gift could be made consistently with the principles of Tagore case for a gift in coparcenary would purport to create interests in sons and grandsons who might be unborn at the time."

(b) A Hindu father bequeaths a house to his three sons in these terms: "Therefore, my three sons shall use and enjoy the house from son to grandson and so on in succession without power to give as gift or sell the same." As regards his other properties, he directs the income thereof to be divided among his sons: "in equal shares," and the corpus to be divided among his grandsons after the death of his sons "according to their respective shares." One of the sons dies leaving a son, who dies leaving a widow. The widow claims a third share of the house, alleging that the three sons took the house as tenants-in-common. On the above facts it was held by the High Court of Madras that the sons took house as a Hindu coparcenary with rights of survivorship, and that on the death of any one of them without leaving male issue and without partitioning the property, the property passed to the survivors, and that the widow could claim no share in it. Subramania Ayyar, J., said: "In cases like the present, the question for determination is but one of intention to be ascertained with reference to the terms of the particular will. If the grant is to persons who are incapable of forming a joint Hindu family, they can of course take only as tenants-in-common. If, on the contrary, the grant is to persons who constitute such a family, even then it may be that the prima facie view is that they take in severalty and that those who argue in favour of the opposite construction have to show some clear foundation for it in the terms of the will. Of course, the donees here, the sons, were persons who could be, and were, members of a joint family. . . . And as to the terms of the gift they are clear to the effect that the donees were to take not in severalty but in coparcenary. That the distinction between the two was perfectly clear to the mind of the testator is beyond question, for where he wishes them to take as tenants-in-common, he uses apt expressions, as the words 'in equal shares' in the paragraph relating to the income, and 'according to their respective shares' in the paragraph relating to the division of the corpus of [the other properties], while with reference to the house under consideration he directs common enjoyment without any possibility of division" (m).

(c) A and his sons are members of a coparcenary. A's brother B bequeaths certain property to A and A's sons in these terms: "Items 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9, I bequeath and leave to my brother A and his sons." The legatees, though members of a coparcenary, take as tenants-in-common, there being no express words in the will that they should take as members of a coparcenary (n).

401. Gifts and bequest to widows, daughters and other females.—(1) Absolute gift and limited gift.—When property is given to a female by a deed or will, the question frequently arises whether the gift passes an estate of inheritance, that is, an absolute estate, or merely a limited estate. If a gift made to a female, e.g., the mother, daughter, brother's daughter, sister,

---

(k) Buchibai v. Nagpur University (1946) Nag. 433.

(l) Bai Diwali v. Patel Bechardas (1902) 26 Bom. 445; Kishori Dubain v. Mundra Dubain (1911) 33 All. 665, 10 I.C. 565; Bahu Rani v. Rajendra Bakhsh Singh (1933) 8 Luck. 121, 60 I.A. 95, 142 I.C. 3, ('33) A.P.C. 72; Ram Piari v. Krishna Piari (1921) 43 All. 600, 63 I.C. 301, ('21) A.A. 50. [Gift to daughter's sons].

(m) Yethirajulu v. Mukunthu (1905) 28 Mad. 363, 373. See also Sonatun v. Juggutsoondree (1859) 8 M.I.A. 66; Bissonauth v. Bamasoonderry (1867) 12 M.I.A. 41.

(n) Janakiram v. Nagamony (1926) 49 Mad. 98, 93 I.C. 662, ('26) A.M. 273.

etc., passes an estate of inheritance, she can dispose of it at her pleasure (o), but not if it passes a limited estate (p). In the former case, the property passes on her death intestate to her stridhana heirs (q); in the latter case it passes to the donor's heirs (r). The same rule applies where a gift is made by a husband to his wife, whether the gift be of movable or of immovable property. If the gift passes an absolute estate she can dispose of the property at her pleasure by act inter vivos or by will (s), but not if it passes a limited estate (t). In the former case the property passes on her death intestate to her stridhana heirs (u); in the latter case, it passes to her husband's heirs (v).

(2) Whether a gift passes an absolute or a limited estate depends on the terms of the grant in each case (w). This is so not only under the Hindu law, but under all other systems of law in force in India. The Judicial Committee laid down in an early case that in construing a deed of gift or a will made by a Hindu in favour of female relations, the Court was entitled to assume that the donor intended the donee to take a limited estate only, unless the contrary appeared from the deed or will. The basis of the rule was that females as a rule took a limited estate only in property inherited by them from male relations, and the donor must be presumed to have made the gift with that fact present to his mind. The leading case on the subject is Mahomed Shumsool v. Shewukram (x). In that case their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "In construing the will of a Hindu it is not improper to take into consideration what are known to be the ordinary notions and wishes of Hindus, with respect to the devolution of property. It may be assumed that a Hindu . . . knows that, as general rule, at all events, women do not take absolute estates of inheritance which they are enabled to alienate." In construing a will made after the coming into operation of the recent legislation and particularly the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, the Court may assume that the testator knew of the radical changes that have been brought about in the general law of inheritance and that women now take absolute estates of inheritance.

---

(o) Atul v. Sanyasi (1905) 32 Cal. 1051 [bequest to mother]; Lala Ramjewan v. Dal Koer (1897) 24 Cal. 406 [bequest to daughters and brothers' daughters]; Kollany v. Luchmee (1875) 24 W.R. 395 [gift to daughter]; Madavarayya v. Tirtha (1877) 1 Mad. 307 [gift to daughter].

(p) Mahomed Shumsool v. Shewukram (1874) 2 I.A. 7, 14 Beng. L.R. 226 [gift to daughter-in-law]; Radha Prasad v. Ranee Mani (1908) 35 Cal, 896, 35 I.A. 118 [bequest to daughter]. In both these cases it was held that the donee took a limited estate only.

(q) Ramasami v. Papayya (1893) 16 Mad. 466 [gift to daughter]; Basanta v. Kamikshya (1906) 33 Cal. 23, 32 I.A. 181 [gift to sister—Dayabhaga case].

(r) Annaji v. Chandrabai (1893) 17 Bom. 503.

(s) Surajmani v. Rabi Nath (1908) 30 All. 84, 35 I.A. 17 [will upheld]; Fateh Chand v. Rup Chand (1916) 43 I.A. 183, 38 All. 446, 37 I.C. 122, ('16) A.P.C. 20 [will upheld]; Ramachandra v. Ramachandra (1919) 42 Mad. 283, 291-292, 52 I.C. 94, ('19) A.M. 557 [will upheld]; Janki v. Bhairon (1897) 19 All. 133 [will upheld]; Padan Lal v. Tek Singh (1907) 29 All. 217 [mortgage upheld]; Damodar v. Purmanandas (1883) 7 Bom. 155 [will upheld—case of movable property]. In some of the earlier cases, it was held that a wife cannot dispose of immovable property given to her by her husband to the prejudice of her stridhana heirs, even if the gift was absolute not even after her husband's death. That view, it is submitted, is no longer law. The cases above referred to are Kotarbasappa v. Chanverova (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 403; Bhujanga Ralu v. Ramayamma (1884) 7 Mad. 387; Nunnu Meah v. Krishnaswami (1891) 14 Mad. 274. See also Rudranarain v. Rup Kuar (1878) 1 All. 734, at pp. 743-744.

(t) Jamna Das v. Ramautar (1905) 27 All. 364 [mortgage set aside]; (1891) 14 Mad. 274, supra [sale set aside].

(u) Kessarbai v. Hunsraj (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 33 I.A. 176.

(v) Harilal v. Bai Rewa (1897) 21 Bom. 376.

(w) Ram Narain v. Pearay (1883) 9 Cal. 830.

(x) (1874) 2 I.A. 7, 14-15, 14 Beng. L.R. 226, 231 [bequest to daughter-in-law held to pass a limited estate]; see also Rabutty v. Sibchunder (1854) 6 M.I.A. 1 [deed of family arrangement]. See in this connection the observation of Mukherjea in Jiban Krishna v. Jitendra Nath ('49) A.F.C. 64, 72.

Though the rule laid down by the Privy Council applied alike to all females who took a limited estate in property inherited by them, the Courts in India, following the spirit of the texts cited in § 141, drew a distinction between cases where a gift or devise of immovable property was made by a Hindu husband to his wife, and those where it was made by a Hindu to other females. In the former case, that is, where a gift was made by a husband to his wife, they started with a presumption against the gift being absolute, and held that the gift must be presumed to pass a limited estate, unless by express words or necessary implication an absolute estate was expressed to be conveyed (y). In the latter case, that is, where a gift was made to other female relations, e.g., a mother (z), they did not in all cases start with that presumption. But there was nothing in Mahomed Shumsool's case to justify this distinction. The rule there laid down purported to apply to all females who took a limited estate in property inherited by them. In fact, the Judicial Committee applied it in a later case where a bequest was made to a daughter (a). The case was one from Bengal where daughters take a limited estate. The Madras High Court applied this rule in a case where father gave on partition a share to a widowed daughter who was without children (b). But the presumption was held to be weaker where the property given was movable property (c). The rule was held not applicable to a case where there was no gift by the husband to the wife but where the widow got the property as a result of a compromise with her relations (d). The principle of Mahomed Shumsool's case applied not only to wills mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of s. 57 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 [see § 369 above], but to all other wills (e).

(3) Gift to a woman as "malik."—In most of the cases referred to above, the High Courts interpreted the rule in Mahomed Shumsool's case to mean that a gift of immovable property to a woman cannot be deemed to confer upon her an absolute estate of inheritance which she could alienate at her pleasure unless the deed or will give her in express terms a heritable estate or power of alienation. But there was no warrant for such an interpretation. In fact later decisions of the Judicial Committee made it clear "that if words [are] used conferring absolute ownership upon the wife, the wife enjoys the rights of ownership [including a full right of alienation] without their being conferred by express and additional terms unless the circumstances or the context were sufficient to show that such absolute ownership was not intended" (f); and that it was possible by the use of words of sufficient amplitude to convey in the term of gift itself the fullest rights of ownership including the power to alienate (g). Even then difficulty was felt in deducing the (y) Harilal v. Bai Rewa (1897) 21 Bom. 376 [bequest to widow—limited estate]; Jamma Das v. Ramautar (1905) 27 All. 364 [gift to wife—limited estate]; Seshayya v. Narasamma (1899) 22 Mad. 357 [bequest to widow—limited estate]; Hirabai v. Lakshmibai (1887) 11 Bom. 573 [bequest to widow—limited estate]; Nunnu Meah v. Krishnaswami (1891) 14 Mad. 274; Motilal v. Advocate-General of Bombay (1911) 35 Bom. 279, 11 I.C. 547; Janki v. Bhairon (1897) 19 All. 133 [bequest to widow—absolute estate]; Padam Lal v. Tek Singh (1907) 29 All. 217, dissenting from Surajmani v. Rabi Nath (1903) 25 All. 351.

---

(z) Atul v. Sanyasi (1905) 32 Cal. 1051. In Annaji v. Chandrabhai (1892) 17 Bom. 503 the gift was by a son to his mother and the Court started with the presumption against the gift being absolute and held that it passed a limited estate only.

(a) Radha Prasad v. Ranee Mani (1908) 35 Cal. 896, 903, 35 I.A. 118, 129 [held that the daughters took a limited estate only]. In Ammammanna v. Kodanda Rao (1940) Mad. 223, 190 I.C. 190, ('40) A.M. 210, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 188, it was held that the daughter took "a limited estate of a daughter" and the daughter's sons' interest, if any, was not vested remainder.

(b) Mangamma v. Doraiyya (1937) Mad. 335, 166 I.C. 59, ('37) A.M. 100.

(c) Koonjbehari v. Premchand (1880) 5 Cal. 684.

(d) Pandit Adya Shankar Tewari v. Mst. Chandrawat (1935) 10 Luck. 35, 150 I.C. 519, ('34) A.O. 265.

(e) Radha Prasad v. Ranee Mani (1908) 35 Cal. 896, 903, 35 I.A. 118, 130 [bequest to daughter —limited estate]; Bhoba v. Peary Lall (1897) 24 Cal. 646, 650-651 [bequest to widow—limited estate]; Caralapathi v. Cota (1910) 33 Mad. 91, 93, 3 I.C. 475, [bequest to widow—limited estate]. In Saroda v. Kristo (1900) 5 C.W.N. 300, the Court proceeded upon the plain meaning of sec. 82 of the Succession Act, and held that the bequest to the widow was absolute.

(f) Bhaidas v. Bai Gulab (1922) 49 I.A. 1, 7, 46 Bom. 153, 159, 65 I.C. 974, ('22) A.P.C. 193.

(g) Ramachandra v. Ramachandra (1922) 45 Mad. 320, 49 I.A. 129, 67 I.C. 408, ('22) A.P.C. 80; Narsingh Rao v. Maha Lakshmi Bai (1928) 55 I.A. 180, 50 All. 375, 109 I.C. 703, 703, ('28) A.P.C. 156; Shalig Ram v. Charanjit Lal (1930) 57 I.A. 282, 11 Lah. 645, 128 I.C. 265, ('30) A.P.C. 239 [waris, i.e. heir]; Jagmohan Singh v. Sri Nath (1930) 57 I.A. 291, 128 I.C. 270, ('30) A.P.C. 253 [gift to wife to be enjoyed by her generation principle of law. The matter was clarified when the Supreme Court held (h) that to convey an absolute estate to a Hindu female no express powers of alienation need be given; it is enough if the words are of such amplitude as would convey full rights of ownership. In a more recent case the Supreme Court reiterated this proposition and endorsed the view that there is no presumption one way or the other and there is no difference between the case of a male and the case of a female, and the fact that the donee is a woman does not make the gift any the less absolute where the words are sufficient to convey an absolute estate to a male (i). In effect these decisions laid down that the rule of interpretation laid down in Mahomed Shumsool v. Shewukram (j) had come to be regarded as unsound. The decisions under this head may be divided into two classes, namely—

(a) Where the gift is coupled with a power of alienation.

(b) Where the word "malik" (owner), or other words importing absolute ownership, are used in the deed or will.

In case (a), that is, where a gift is coupled with a power of alienation, the Court readily infers an intention to grant an absolute estate. Thus where a testator bequeathed certain property to his daughter and her son "for your maintenance" with power of making alienation thereof by sale or gift, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that each of them took an absolute interest in a moiety of the property, and the words "for your maintenance" did not reduce the interest of either of them to one for life only (k).

The second class of cases is the one where the word "malik" (owner) or other words importing absolute ownership are used in the deed or will. The word "malik" (owner) or "malik mustakil" (kk) imports full proprietary rights including a full right of alienation unless there is something in the context or in the surrounding circumstances to indicate that full proprietary rights were not intended to be conferred. Hence it has been held that words of disposition in a deed of gift (l) or will that the donee shall "become malik (owner) of all my properties," or similar words, confer an heritable and alienable estate in the absence of a context which indicates a different meaning (m).

---

after generation]; Lakshmeyya v. Tirupathamma ('58) A.A.P. 720; Jagannadha Rao v. Jatmal Madanlal (1957) A.P. 806, ('58) A.A.P. 662 ("for pasupukumkuma"); Krishnaswami Ayyar v. Ramachandra Rao (1934) 67 Mad. L.J. 821, 153 I.C. 1005, ('34) A.M. 646; Shivappa Rudrappa v. Rudrava Chanbasappa (1933) 57 Bom. 1, 142 I.C. 164, ('32) A.B. 410.

(h) Ram Gopal v. Nand Lal ('51) A.S.C. 139; Harnam Singh v. Mohan Lal ('70) J. & K. 181; Mohinder Singh v. Balbir Kaur ('68) A. Punj. & H. 545; Basant Kaur v. Tej Kaur ('67) A. Punj. & H. 429 [for maintenance]; Tulsan v. Sahib Ram ('66) A Punj. 262; Rampyari Kuer v. Bachuraj Kuer ('65) A.P. 217 (Malik); Madhusudhan v. Gobind Sabat ('65) A. Orissa 54.

(i) Nathoo Lal v. Durga Prasad (1955) S.C.R. 51, ('54) A.S.C. 355. Also see Seshayya v. Padalamma ('57) Andh. Pra. 534; Venkatarama v. Rajyalakshmi ('60) A.A.P. 509.

(j) (1874) 2 I.A. 7, 14 Beng. L.R. 226.

(k) Jogeswar Narain v. Ram Chandra Dutt (1896) 23 Cal. 670, 23 I.A. 37; Kesserbai v. Hunsraj (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 442, 33 I.A. 176, 186-187; Paikabai v. Anyabai (1935) Nag. 170, ('52) A.N. 327; Yadeorao v. Vithal (1952) Nag. 60, ('52) A.N. 55.

(kk) Krishna Beharilal v. Gulabchand ('71) A.S.C. 1041.

(l) Bishnath Prasad Singh v. Chandika Prasad Kumari (1933) 55 All. 61, 60 I.A. 56, 142 I.C. 6, ('33) A.P.C. 67.

(m) Lalit Mohun v. Chukkun Lal (1897) 24 Cal. 834, 24 I.A. 76, 88-89; Surajmani v. Rabi Nath (1908) 30 All. 84, 35 I.A. 17; Fateh Chand v. Rup Chand (1916) 43 I.A. 183, 38 All. 446, 37 I.C. 122, ('16) A.P.C. 20 [Malik-o-qab z, i.e. owner in possession]; Sasiman v. Shib Narayan (1922) 49 I.A. 25, 34, 1 Pat. 305, 315, 66 I.C. 193, ('22) A.P.C. 63 [Molikiyati]; Sarajubala v. Jyotirmayee (1931) 58 I.A. 270, 59 Cal. 142, 134 I.C. 648, ('31) A.P.C. 179 (gift to daughter as Malik]; Hitendra Singh v. Maharaja of Darbhanga (1928) 55 I.A. 197, 7 Pat. 500, 109 I.C. 858, ('28) A.P.C. 112 [to hold the property from generation to generation]; Lala Ramjewan v. Dal Koer (1897) 24 Cal.

In Ram Gopal v. Nand Lal (n) a Hindu widow who was entitled to maintenance as the wife of a predeceased son of the proprietor against the heir of the latter, relinquished by a deed all her rights to the property of her father-in-law in favour of the latter's heir, and as a part of the same transaction received two items of property for her maintenance by a deed of transfer, which was described as a "Tamliknama." The document expressly stated that the grantee was made a "malik" though there were no words making the gift heritable or alienable. It was held that an absolute estate was conveyed although the gift was expressed to be for maintenance and residence. The desire to provide maintenance or residence for the donee, it was observed in the judgment, only showed the motive which prompted the donor to make the gift, and it could not be read as a measure of the extent of the gift.

It has been stated above that a bequest to a woman as "malik" imports full proprietary rights unless there is something in the context to qualify it. In the undermentioned cases (o), it was held that the context cut down the absolute estate imported by the word "malik", and that the donee did not take an absolute estate.

In Bhaidas v. Bai Gulab (p) a testator (1) constituted his wife, "malik" (owner) of his property, and (2) provided that she should leave "whatever property might remain after her death" to two named daughters "as she liked." Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the widow took an absolute estate, the second clause not constituting trust in favour of the daughters as the subject-matter—namely, what might remain—was uncertain. Similarly where a Hindu transferred by way of gift to his wife "all my zamindari rights" with power to enter into possession and spend the produce of the property ba farzandan naslan bad naslan (lit., with sons generation after generation) it was held that the words "spend the produce" did not indicate that she was given a life-estate only (q). The word Malik in a wajib-ul-arz when used with reference to widows and qualified by words like 'tahayat' does not indicate an absolute estate (r). Where a testator gives a full estate to one person, he is entitled to make a gift over in favour of any one else (s).

---

406, 409; Naulakhi v. Jai Kishan (1918) 40 All. 575, 46 I.C. 905, ('18) A.A. 255 [Malik Mustaquil]; Kesserbai v. Hunsraj (1906) 30 Bom. 431, 442, 33 I.A. 176, 186-187; Wazir Devi v. Ram Chand (1920) 1 Lah. 415, 58 I.C. 988 [Kullikhtiyar wamilkiat]; Mohan Lal v. Niranjan Das (1921) 2 Lah. 175, 60 I.C. 619, ('21) A.L. 11 [Malik]; Hitendra Singh v. Rameswar Singh (1925) 4 Pat. 510, 87 I.C. 849, ('25) A.P. 625 [transfer to wife of "all my zamindari rights" with power to enter into possession and spend the produce of the property ba farzandan naslan bad naslan, i.e., with sons generation after generation]; Thakur Jagmohan v. Musammat Sheoraj (1928) 3 Luck. 19, 106 I.C. 593, ('28) A.O. 49 [F.B.]; Mussammat Ram Kuar v. Atma Singh (1927) 8 Lah. 181, 103 I.C. 506, ('27) A.L. 404; Kamla Prasad v. Murli Manohar (1934) 13 Pat. 550, 152 I.C. 446, ('34) A.P. 398; Matru Mal v. Mehri Kunwar (1940) All. 416, 189 I.C. 600, ('40) A.A. 311; Haripada Ojha v. Ichhamayee Debi (1944) 23 Pat. 404; Sita Saran v. Chandrabhan (1949) All. 368.

(n) ('51) A.S.C. 139.

(o) Mahomed Shumsool v. Shawukram (1875) 2 I.A. 7, 14 Beng. L.R. 226; Motilal v. Advocate-General of Bombay (1911) 35 Bom. 279, 11 I.C. 547 [widow's estate]; Mithibai v. Meherbai (1922) 46 Bom. 162, 64 I.C. 397, ('22) A.B. 179 [life-estate]; Ashurfi Singh v. Biseear (1922) 1 Pat. 295, 65 I.C. 977, ('22) A.P. 362 [widow's estate]; Basantkumar Basu v. Ramshankar Ray (1932) 59 Cal. 859, 138 I.C. 882, ('32) A.C. 600; Mehtab Singh v. Anrik Singh ('57) A. Punj. 146.

(p) (1922) 49 I.A. 1, 46 Bom. 153, 65 I.C. 974, ('22) A.P.C. 193.

(q) Hitendra Singh v. Rameswar Singh (1925) 4 Pat. 510, 519, 87 I.C. 349, ('25) A.P. 625.

(r) Tirbeni Sahai v. Ramsingh (1938) 13 Luck. 230, 167 I.C. 925, ('37) A.O. 361.

(s) Matru Mal v. Mehri Kunwar (1940) All. 416 189 I.C. 597, ('40) A.A. 311.

CHAPTER XXI

RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE ENDOWMENTS

404. Endowments.—A Hindu who is of sound mind, and not a minor, may dispose of his property by gift or by will for religious and charitable purposes such as the establishment and worship of an idol (t), feeding Brahmans and the poor (u), performance of religious ceremonies like shraddha, durga pujah and lukshmi pujah (v), and the endowments of a university (w) or an hospital (x). No list of what conduces to religious merit in Hindu law can be exhaustive. But when any purpose is claimed to be a valid one for perpetual dedication on the ground of religious merit though lacking in public benefit, it must be shown to have a Shastraic basis. The heads of religious purposes determined by belief in acquisition of religious merit cannot be allowed to be widely enlarged consistently with public policy and needs of modern society (y). When the question is whether the endowment is real or fictitious the mode of dealing with it by its donors and successors is an important element for consideration (z).

Doubt as to certain gifts.—The High Court of Calcutta has expressed a doubt as to whether gifts to Pundits holding tolls for learning in the country at the time of the Durga Pujah, or for the reading of the Mahabharat and Pooran, or for the prayer of God during certain months are valid (a).

Superstitious uses not forbidden.—The English law relating to superstitious uses does not apply to Hindu religious endowments. Thus a gift in favour of an idol, or for the performance of the worship of a deity is valid according to the Hindu law, though it may not be valid according to the English law (b). Dispositions for religious purposes are highly favoured by Hindu law, and the leaning of the Courts also is in the same direction. Dedication of property by a Hindu to a deity is not only lawful, but commendable in a high degree from the Hindu point of view (c).

Games or sports: Education.—In case of a trust created to set up an akhara it cannot be said that there was dedication for religious or charitable purpose even though two idols and Taswir were installed there to attract wrestlers both Hindus and Muslims. Distinction has been drawn between cases where the object of the dedication was the promotion of games and sports as part of education and cases where the object was the promotion of games or sports simplicitor. The former only have been upheld on the ground that the object was promotion of education (cc).

404A. New Legislation.—A number of statutes have been enacted by State Legislatures in the last few years dealing with Religious and Charitable Trusts and Endowments. The validity of the provisions of a number of them has been challenged under various Articles of the Constitution and

---

(t) Bhupati Nath v. Ram Lal (1910) 37 Cal. 128, 3 I.C. 642; Khusalchand v. Mahadevgiri (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 214.

(u) Dwarkanath v. Burroda (1878) 4 Cal. 443; Rajendra Lall v. Raj Coomari (1907) 34 Cal. 5; Manorama v. Kali Charan (1904) 31 Cal. 166.

(v) Prafulla v. Jogendra Nath (1905) 9 C.W.N. 528; Lakshmishankar v. Vaijnath (1882) 6 Bom. 24.

(w) Manorama v. Kali Charan (1904) 31 Cal. 166.

(x) Fanindra v. Adm-Gen. of Bengal (1901) 6 C.W.N. 321.

(y) Saraswathi Ammal v. Rajagopal Ammal (1954) S.C.R. 277, 287, ('53) A.S.C. 491.

(z) Chaturbhuj Singh v. Sarada Charan Guha (1932) 11 Pat. 701, 141 I.C. 157, ('33) A.P. 6.

(a) (1878) 4 Cal. 443, supra. But see In re Darling (1896) 1 Ch. 50.

(b) Juggut Mohini v. Sokheemoney (1871) 14 M.I.A. 289, 301-302; Khusalchand v. Mahadevgiri, supra.

(c) (1910) 37 Cal. 128, 136-137, 141, 3 I.C. 642, supra; Ananthakrishnan v. Chidambaran ('53) Tra. Co. 442; Brajabala v. Sree Saradiya Durgamata (1953) 2 Cal. 268, ('53) A.C. 285.

(cc) Ramchandra v. Shree Mahadoji ('70) A.S.C. 458.

Courts have considered those provisions inter alia in the context of property of the trust or endowment, deities, idols; temples and institutions as also the income of the same and management of the property and affairs of the same including the right to and management of the worship of certain deities and idols. It is not necessary in this Chapter to refer to those decisions in any detail or to the constitutional questions raised and it will suffice only to mention a number of those decisions:

Commissioner, Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Sri Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar (c1).—Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act (19 of 1951). Ratilal v. State of Bombay (c2).—Bombay Public Trusts Act 1950 (29 of 1950).

Sri Jagannath v. State of Orissa (c3).—Orissa Hindu Religious Endowments Act (4 of 1939).

Venkataramana Devaru v. State of Mysore (c4).—Madras Temple Entry Authorisation Act (5 of 1947).

Moti Das v. S. P. Sahi (c5).—Bihar Hindu Religious Trusts Act (1 of 1951).

State of Bihar v. Charusila Dasi (c6).—Bihar Religious Trusts Act (1 of 1951).

State of Bihar v. Bhabapritananda (c7).—Bihar Religious Trusts Act (1 of 1951).

Narayana v. State of Andhra (c8).—Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act (19 of 1951) [Extinction of Mahant's rights].

Sadavarthy v. Commissioner Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments (c9).—Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (2 of 1927) [Temple].

Sudhindra Thirtha Swamiar v. Commissioner for Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments, Mysore (c10).—Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (19 of 1951 as amended by Act 27 of 1954) [Udipi Maths founded by Shree Madhvacharya].

Tilkayat Shri Govindlalji v. State of Rajasthan (c11).—Rajasthan Nathwara Temple Act (13 of 1959).

K. A. Samajam v. Commissioner of H. R. & C. Endowments, Hyderabad ('71) A.S.C. 891.

405. Gift to dharam void.—A gift or bequest to dharam is void for vagueness and uncertainty; so also a bequest for good work (f). The objects meant by that word are too vague and uncertain for the administration of them to be under the control of a Court (g). Where the bequest is for dharam, dharmashala and Sanskrit education the bequest for dharam being void, the whole is void (h).

The new enactments indicated in § 404A above contain their own definitions and deal inter alia with public and charitable trusts as therein defined. As to the content and extent of the expressions "religion" and "matters of religion" reference may be made to the decisions of the Supreme Court referred to in § 404A above and particularly to Ratilal v. State of Bombay there mentioned.

It is a maxim of equity, that the execution of a trust shall be under the control of the Court. The trust therefore must be of such a nature that it can be under that con-

---

(c1) ('54) S.C. 282, (1954) S.C.R. 1005.
(c2) ('54) S.C. 388; (1954) S.C.R. 1055.
(c3) ('54) S.C. 400.
(c4) ('58) S.C. 255.
(c5) ('59) S.C. 942.
(c6) ('59) S.C. 1002.
(c7) ('59) S.C. 1073.
(c8) ('59) A.A.P. 471.
(c9) ('63) S.C. 510.
(c10) ('63) S.C. 966.
(c11) ('63) S.C. 1638.
(f) Gauri Shankar & Ors. v. Mohan Lal (1940) 15 Luck. 674, 187 I.C. 597, ('40) A.O. 275; Jairam v. Bhagirathi (1949) Nag. 765 (Subject matter uncertain).
(g) Runchordas v. Parvatibai (1899) 23 Bom. 725, 26 I.A. 71 affirming (1897) 21 Bom. 646.
(h) Brij Lal v. Narain Das (1933) 14 Lah. 827 146 I.C. 1013, ('33) A.L. 833.

trol. For that purpose it is necessary that the subject and object of the trust must both be such as can be ascertained by the Court. If the subject or object cannot be ascertained, the trust cannot be enforced by the Court, and it is void (i). In the case of a gift to dharam the Judicial Committee observed in Runchordas v. Parvatibai (j), that the objects which can be considered to be meant by that word are vague and uncertain. In Wilson's Dictionary the word dharam is defined to be law, virtue, legal or moral duty. Relying upon this definition of dharam, the Judicial Committee held that the word dharam was as vague as the words "purposes charitable or philanthropic" which, on account of their vagueness, render a trust for those purposes void in the English law (k). Gifts for "charitable or other purposes" or gifts expressed in other alternative terms are not charitable; for they may be executed without any part of the property being applied to charitable purposes (l). Thus a gift for "charitable or benevolent purposes" is void (m). Applying the above principles it has been held that a trust for sarakam [good work] (n), a trust for "purposes of popular usefulness or for purposes of charity as may be approved by the trustees" (o), a trust for spending money "in proper and just acts for the testator's benefit" (p), and a trust for disposing of the residue "in a righteous manner, in a pious and charitable way, as may appear advisable to all my three executors, and in such manner that people may speak well of me and that all my three heirs may acquire great fame" (q), are all void. Similarly an ultimate residuary gift to any agnate, and failing agnates to any Brahmin who would live in the testator's ancestral house, has been held to be void (r). A direction to trustees to pay a certain sum of money at their discretion towards dispensaries, hospitals, charitable societies, schools or any students' association, feeding of the poor, etc., marriage upanayan, etc., excavation and consecration of tanks, etc., or in the construction of ghats or maths, has also been held to be void (s). But a gift to sadavrat to be established at a definite place is valid (t). A gift to "such charities as the trustees may think deserving," is also valid (u); and so also a gift with power to trustees to give away the property "in charity in such manner and to such religious and charitable purposes as they may in their discretion think proper" (v).

A gift "for the performance of ceremonies and giving feasts to Brahmans" is not void for uncertainty (w). Nor is a devise of property to executors upon trust to distribute the same among the testator's poor relations, dependants and servants (x).

An endowment of property for the purpose of samadhi kainkaryam, i.e., worship of and at the samadhi (tomb) of a person, is not valid (y). A gift for spreading of Hindu religion is void (z). There is a conflict of opinion whether a gift for the spread of the Sanskrit language is void for uncertainty (a).

When there is a bequest for feeding the poor—a bequest which is valid in law—the fact that it is referred to in a later part of the same will as "dharam" does not make it invalid (b).

---

(i) Morice v. The Bishop of Durham (1804) 10 Ves. 522 [objects of benevolence or liberality]; In re Riland (1881) W.N. [Eng.] 173 [charitable or benevolent purposes]; In re Macduff (1896) 2 Ch. 451 [purposes, charitable or philanthrophic]; Blair v. Duncan (1902) A.C. 37 [such charitable or public purposes as my trustee thinks proper]; Hunter v. Att.-Gen. [1889] A.C. 309; Grimond v. Grimond [1905] A.C. 124. As to what are charitable objects, see the judgment of Lord Macnaghten in The Commissioners of Income Tax v. Pemsel [1891] A.C. 531, at p. 583.

(j) (1899) 23 Bom. 725, 26 I.A. 71.

(k) Runchordas v. Parvatibai (1899) 23 Bom. 725, 26 I.A. 71; Parthasarathy v. Thiruvengada (1907) 30 Mad. 340 [Dharam]; Gangabai v. Thavar (1863) 1 Bom. H.C. 71 [Dharam]; Advocate-General v. Damodhar (1852) Perry's Oriental cases 526 [Dharam]; Cursandas v. Vundravandas (1890) 14 Bom. 482 [Dharamada]; Devshankar v. Motiram [1894] 18 Bom. 136 [Dharamada]. See also Venkatanarasimha v. Subba Rao (1923) 46 Mad. 300, 73 I.C. 991, ('23) A.M. 376.

(l) Halsbury, Vol. IV, p. 146, art. 230.

(m) (1881) W.N. [Eng.] 173, supra. See also In re Harbinson (1902) 1 I.R. 103; Re Sidney (1908) 1 Ch. 488.

(n) Bai Bapi v. Jamnadas (1898) 22 Bom. 774.

(o) Trikumdas v. Haridas (1907) 31 Bom. 583; Jamnabai v. Dharsey (1902) 4 Bom. L.R. 893.

(p) Gokool Nath v. Issur (1887) 14 Cal. 222.

(q) Nanalal v. Harlochand (1890) 14 Bom. 476, 479.

(r) Shyama Charan v. Sarup Chandra (1912) 17 C.W.N. 39, 14 I.C. 708.

(s) Sarat Chandra v. Pratab Chandra (1913) 40 Cal. 232, 21 I.C. 194.

(t) Morarji v. Nenbai (1893) 17 Bom. 351.

(u) Smith v. Massey (1906) 30 Bom. 500; Gordhan Das v. Chunni Lal (1908) 30 All. 111; Surbomungola v. Mohendronath (1879) 4 Cal. 508.

(v) Parvati v. Ram Barun (1904) 31 Cal. 895.

(w) Lakshmishanker v. Vaijnath (1882) 6 Bom. 24; Suryanarayanarao v. Rajeshwari ('66) A.A.P. 269.

(x) Manorama v. Kali Charan (1904) 31 Cal. 166.

(y) Saraswathi Ammal v. Rajagopal Ammal (1954) S.C.R. 277, ('53) A.S.C. 491; Veluswami v. Dandapani (1947) Mad. 47; Ramanasaramam v. Commissioner H.R. and C.E. ('61) A.M. 265, (1960) Mad. 922. Also see Ravanna K. Karuppannan v. V.P. Tirmalai ('62) A.M. 500 [Samadhi and education of poor pupils].

(z) (1923) 46 Mad. 300, 73 I.C. 991, ('23) A.M. 376, supra.

(a) (1923) 46 Mad. 300, 314-315, 73 I.C. 991, ('23) A.M. 376 [Spencer, J.], 325-345 [Devados, J.], supra.

(b) Vaidyanatha v. Swaminatha (1924) 47 Mad. 884, 51 I.A. 282, 82 I.C. 804, ('24) A.P.C. 221

406. Subject of endowment.—A Hindu may dedicate for religious and charitable objects all property which he can validly dispose of by gift or by will [§ 357 and § 368].

There is nothing to prevent a Hindu from dedicating the whole of his property for religious and charitable purposes (c).

407. Endowment how created.—(1) No writing is necessary to create an endowment (d), except where the endowment is created by a will, in which case the will must be in writing and attested by at least two witnesses if the case is governed by the Indian Succession Act, 1925, s. 57 [§ 369 above]. An entry in the account of a firm of moneylenders showing that the firm is inbebted to the temple followed by crediting of interest does not create an endowment (e).

(2) A Hindu, who wishes to establish a religious or charitable institution, may, according to his law, express his purpose and endow it. A trust is not required for that purpose. All that is necessary is that the religious or charitable purposes should be clearly specified, and that the property intended for the endowment should be set apart for or dedicated to those purposes. Even in the case of a dedication to an idol, which cannot itself physically hold lands, it is not necessary, though it is usual, to vest the lands in trustees. Nor is it necessary that there should be any express words of gift to the idol (f). No religious ceremony such as sankalp, samarpan, pranapratishta or kumbhabhishekam etc. (*f*1) is necessary and a clear and unequivocal manifestation of intention to create a trust and vesting of the same in the donor or another as a trustee is enough to constitute dedication (g).

The basic concept of a religious endowment under Hindu Law differs in essential particulars from the concept of trust known to English Law as will be seen from various paragraphs in this Chapter.

The Indian Trusts Act, 1882, s. 1.—The Indian Trusts Act, 1882, does not apply to public or private religious or charitable endowments (h).

The Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 123.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras that a dedication of land for a public temple is not a gift within the meaning of sec. 122 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The provisions, therefore, of sec. 123 of the Act, which require a gift of land to be effected by a registered instrument, do not apply to such a dedication (i).

Revocation of endowment.—A valid endowment once created cannot be revoked by the donor (j).

---

(c) See Sir F. MacNaghten's Considerations on Hindu Law, p. 335.

(d) Muddun Lal v. Komul Bibee (1867) 8 W.R. 42; Ramalinga v. Sivachidambara (1919) 42 Mad. 440, 49 I.C. 742, ('19) A.M. 809; Pallayya v. Ramavadhanulu (1903) 13 Mad. L.J. 364; Gangi Reddi v. Tammi Reddi (1927) 54 I.A. 136, 50 Mad. 421, 101 I.C. 79, ('27) A.P.C. 80, on appeal from (1922) 45 Mad. 281, 70 I.C. 337, ('22) A.M. 236; R. V. Reddiar v. Krishnaswamy ('71) A.M. 262.

(e) Sooniram Ramniranjandass v. Alagu Nachiyar Koil (1939) Rang. 59.

(f) Manohar v. Lakhmiram (1888) 12 Bom. 247, 263; Bhuggobutty v. Gooroo (1898) 25 Cal. 112, 127; Prafulla v. Jogendra Nath (1905) 9 C.W.N. 528, 534; Venkatanarasimha v. Subba Rao (1923) 46 Mad. 300, 73 I.C. 991, ('23) A.M. 376; S. N. P. Nadar v. T.P.T. Charity ('71) A.M. 253 [dedication to a temple to be built for a deity].

(*f*1) Pichai v. Commissioner H. R. & C. Endowments ('71) A.M. 405.

(g) For a brief statement on the subject reference may be made to Ramchandra v. Shree Mahadeoji ('70) A.S.C. 458. Also see Prem Nath v. Hari Ram (1935) 16 Lah. 85, 154 I.C. 229, ('34) A.L. 771; Jai Dayal v. Ram Saran Das (1938) Lah. 704; Deep Lal v. Gulabchand ('56) A. Rajasthan 171; Ram Ratan Lal v. Kashinath ('66) A.P. 235.

(h) Gopu v. Sami (1905) 28 Mad. 517; Narasimha v. Venkatalingum (1927) 50 Mad. 687, 103 I.C. 302, ('27) A.M. 636 [F.B.].

(i) Pallayya v. Ramavadhanulu (1903) 13 Mad. L.J. 364; Narasimha v. Venkatalingum (1927) 50 Mad. 687, 103 I.C. 302, ('27) A.M. 636 [F.B.], supra.

(j) Dasami v. Param (1929) 51 All. 621, 116 I.C. 433, ('29) A.A. 315.

407A. Illusory endowments.—(1) The mere execution of a deed, though it may purport on the face of it to dedicate property to an idol, is not enough to constitute a valid endowment; for the real object of the executant may be to defraud creditors, or to defeat the provisions of the ordinary law of descent, or to restrain alienations and keep the property in perpetuity in the family. It is necessary for the validity of a deed of endowment that the executant should divest himself of the property. Whether he has done so or not, is to be determined by his subsequent acts and conduct. Thus, if the profits of the property are appropriated by the executant to his own use, and not to the worship of the idol, and his subsequent dealings with the property show that he did not intend to create an endowment, the dedication will be inoperative, and the property cannot be treated as debutter, i.e., belonging to the idol. The property will still continue to be his, and it may be attached in execution of a decree against him (k). Similarly, if a Hindu purchases property in the name of his idol, without setting up the idol for public worship and without appointing priests for its worship, the property does not become the property of the idol, but remains his own private property (l). When an endowment is created by a will and is to take effect on the death of the testator, then unless there is evidence to show that the testator gave directions during his lifetime contrary to the terms of the will his mode of dealing with the endowed property is irrelevant for the purpose of determining the true nature of the endowment. The conduct of the manager after the testator's death, even if it is contrary to the terms of the will, cannot also be regarded as reflecting the intentions of the testator (m).

(2) Where there is no real dedication of property for the worship of an idol, but only an attempt to create a perpetuity in favour of the settlor's descendants, the gift to the idol is void (n). The mere fact, however, that the members of the settlor's family are nominated as Shebaits or mutawallis of the temple and that they are to be remunerated out of the income of the property is no ground for holding that the dedication is not real, provided the remuneration is reasonable having regard to the income of the property (o).

408. Complete dedication—absolute grant in favour of charity.—A dedication of property to religious or charitable uses may be complete, or it may be partial. If the dedication is complete a trust in favour of public religious charity is created. If the dedication is partial, a trust in favour of the charity is not created but a charge in favour of the charity is attached to, and follows, the property which retains its original private and secular

---

(k) Watson and Co. v. Ramchund (1891) 18 Cal. 10; Konwar Doorganath v. Ram Chunder (1877) 2 Cal. 341, 349, 4 I.A. 52; Suppammal v. Collector of Tanjore (1889) 12 Mad. 387; Ram Dhan v. Prayag (1921) 43 All. 503, 62 I.C. 862, ('21) A.A. 37; Siri Thakur v. Atkins (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 533, 53 I.C. 106, Parmod Banabihari v. Atkins ('19) A.P. 442; Bhekdhari Singh v. Sri Ramchanderji (1931) 10 Pat. 388, 136 I.C. 290, ('31) A.P. 275; Mahani Dasi v. Pareshnath Thakur ('54) A. Orissa 198; Sri Gopal Thakur v. Pravasini ('67) A. Orissa 85.

(l) Brojosoondery v. Luchmee (1873) 20 W.R. 95 (P.C.).

(m) Siva Kanta v. Rajaniram ('50) A. Assam 154.

(n) Promotho v. Radhika (1875) 14 Beng. L.R. 175; Sri Thakurji v. Sukhdeo Singh (1920) 42 All. 395, 58 I.C. 583, ('20) A.A. 63 [F.B.].

(o) Jadu Nath Singh v. Thakur Sita Ramji (1917) 44 I.A. 187, 39 All. 553, 42 I.C. 225, ('17) A.P.C. 177; Chandi Charan v. Dulal Chandra (1927) 54 Cal. 30, 98 I.C. 684, ('26) A.C. 1083; Ishwari Bhuvaneshwari Thakurani v. Projonath Dey (1937) 64 I.A. 203, (1937) 2 Cal. 447, 39 Bom. L.R. 933, 168 I.C. 765, ('37) A.P.C. 185.

character (*o*1). The question whether it is complete or partial depends on the construction of the instrument of grant as a whole (p). Dedication to charity need not necessarily be by instrument or grant. It can be established by cogent and satisfactory evidence of conduct of the parties and user of the property which show the extinction of the private secular character of the property and its complete dedication to charity (*p*1).

When there was no formal dedication of a bathing ghat and the plaintiff (or his predecessors) acted as owners and not as Shebaits in effecting repairs and levying tolls it was held that the plaintiff is the owner and that there was no dedication (q).

Where the whole property is dedicated absolutely to the worship of an idol, and no beneficial interest in it is given to any person, the dedication is said to be absolute and complete. In such a case the property is held by the idol—though it is only in an ideal sense that property is so held—and it cannot be alienated except in the cases mentioned in § 415 (r).

In Ramkishorelal v. Kamalnarayan (*r*1) the Supreme Court had to construe an award embodying partition among members of a joint family. Under the award a village was given to a cosharer R "kul huq haquq samet milkiyat" and then followed mention of the purposes (meeting expenses of worship and maintenance of a public temple) for which the village was being given to R. It was held on a consideration of the instrument as a whole that the intention was not to make R the absolute owner of the village but to give him possession and management of the village for the benefit of the deity Shri Ramchandra Swamy.

408A. Partial dedication—charge in favour of charity.—Where by the grant a mere charge or trust is created in favour of an idol, the dedication is said to be partial or qualified. In such a case the property descends, and is alienable and partible, in the ordinary way; but subject always to the trust or charge in favour of the idol (s). Where the surplus income, after the ex-

---

(*o*1) Dasaratharami v. D. Subba Rao ('57) A.S.C. 797, (1957) S.C.R. 1122; Shanmugam Pillai v. K. Shanmugam Pillai ('72) A.S.C. 2069; Gouri Shankar v. Thakur Dass ('72) A.J. & K. 53 (property dedicated descendible to heirs).

(p) Pande Har Narain v. Surja Kunwari (1921) 48 I.A. 143, 43 All. 291, 63 I.C. 34, ('21) A.P.C. 20; Nirmala Bala v. Balai Chand ('65) A.S.C. 1874; Lakshminarasimhachari v. Agastheswaraswamivaru ('60) A.S.C. 622; Bhekdhari Singh v. Sri Ramchanderji (1931) 10 Pat. 388, 136 I.C. 290, ('31) A.P. 275; Ananthakrishnan v. Chidambaram ('53) Tra. Co. 442. The above statement of law was examined in Kamalnarayan v. R. Kishorelal ('58) A.M.P. 246, 252; Panchanan Dalai v. Lakshmidhar ('58) A. Orissa 65; Nirmala Bala v. Balai Chand (1959) 64 C.W.N. 546; Narasi v. Balamma ('63) A.A.P. 130; Sri Thakur Krishna v. Kanhaylal ('61) A. All. 206; Ram Ratan Lal v. Kashinath ('66) A.P. 235; Vadivelu Mudaliar v. N. S. Rajabada Mudaliar ('67) A.M. 175 [benefit meant essentially to charity].

(*p*1) Dasaratharami v. D. Subbha Rao, supra.

(q) Maharani Hemanta Kumari v. Gauri Shankar Tewari (1941) All. 401, 193 I.C. 882, 68 I.A. 53, ('41) A.P.C. 38.

(r) Jagadindra Nath v. Hemanta (1905) 32 Cal. 129, 31 I.A. 203; Jadu Nath Singh v. Thakur Sita Ramji (1917) 44 I.A. 187, 39 All. 533, 42 I.C. 225, ('17) A.P.C. 177; Shri Ganesh v. Keshavrao (1891) 15 Bom. 625; Rajendra v. Sham Chund (1881) 6 Cal. 106; Bhuggobutty v. Gooroo (1898) 25 Cal. 112; Sathinama v. Saravanabagi (1895) 18 Mad. 266; Chandi Charan v. Dulal Chandra (1927) 54 Cal. 30, 98 I.C. 684, ('26) A.C. 1083.

(*r*1) ('63) A.S.C. 890.

(s) (1905) 32 Cal. 129, 31 I.A. 203, supra; Sonatun v. Juggutsoondree (1859) 8 M.I.A. 66; Ram Coomar v. Jogender Nath (1879) 4 Cal. 56; Ashutosh v. Doorga Churn (1880) 5 Cal. 438, 6 I.A. 182; Kulada Prosad v. Kali Das (1915) 42 Cal. 536, 24 I.C. 899, ('14) A.C. 813; Mahim Chandra v. Hara Kumari (1915) 42 Cal. 561, 30 I.C. 798, ('15) A.C. 487; Gopal Lal Sett v. Purna Chandra Basak (1922) 49 I.A. 100, 49 Cal. 459, 67 I.C. 561, ('22) A.P.C. 253, (1921) 48 I.A. 143, 43 All. 291, 63 I.C. 34, ('21) A.P.C. 20, supra; (1931) 10 Pat 388, 136 I.C. 290, ('31) A.P. 275, supra; Parshadi Lal v. Brij Mohan Lal (1936) 11 Luck. 573, 159 I.C. 117, ('36) A.O. 52; Gouri Shankar v. Thakur Dass ('72) A. J. & K. 53.

penses of worship and ceremony were met, was to be invested in houses, for the residence of the settlor's descendants, it was held that there was no complete dedication (t).

In determining whether the will of a Hindu gives the estate to an idol subject to a charge in favour of the heir of the testator, or makes the gift to the idol a charge upon the estate, there is no fixed rule depending on the use of particular terms in the will; the question depends on the construction of the will as a whole. Thus although a will provides that the property of the testator "shall be considered to be the property of" a certain idol, the further provisions such as that the residue after defraying the expenses of the temples "shall be used by our legal heirs to meet their own expenses," and the circumstances such as that in respect of the ceremonies to be performed the expenditure was fixed by the will and would absorb only a small proportion of the total income, may indicate that the intention was that the heirs should take the property subject to a charge for the performance of the religious purposes named (u).

The question has to be determined by a conspectus of the entire provisions of the deed or will by which the properties are dedicated. A provision giving a right to the sevayats to reside in the properties dedicated to the idol for the purpose of carrying on the daily and periodical worship and festivals does not detract from the absolute character of a dedication to the idol (v).

409. Application of profits of property—evidence of dedication.—(1) Where there is no instrument of grant, the mere fact that the profits of any land are being used for the support of an idol is not proof that that land formed an endowment for the purpose; but where there is apparently good evidence going back for a long period, e.g., for more than half a century, that the land was given for the support of an idol, proof that from the time the profits had been so expended would be strong corroboration (w).

The fact that the deceased karta of a joint Hindu family regularly paid the expenses of a charitable institution out of the profits of a family property, those expenses however not exhausting the whole of those profits, does not establish a dedication of the property to the charity (x).

In the case last cited the Judicial Committee while reversing the decree passed by both the Subordinate Judge and the High Court, observed that the Subordinate Judge had failed to notice the distinction between meeting of the expenses of a charity out of a particular property, and applying all the receipts of that property to the charity.

(2) Though the mere fact of the profits of any land being used for the support of an idol may not be proof that the land formed an endowment for the purpose, yet it is a fact that might well be taken into consideration in cases where the intention of the founder is to be gathered from an ancient document expressed in ambiguous language (y). In the construction, again, of such a document evidence is admissible as to the manner in which the property has been possessed and used (z).

---

(t) Surendrakrishna Ray v. Shree Shree Iswar Bhubanshwari Thakurani (1933) 60 Cal. 54, 144 I.C. 792, ('33) A.C. 295; Ishwari Bhuvanshwari Thakurani v. Projonath Dey, 64 I.A. 203, (1937) 2 Cal. 447, 39 Bom. L.R. 933, 168 I.C. 765, ('37) A.P.C. 185. Also see cases under § 408.

(u) Pande Har Narain v. Surja Kunwari (1921) 48 I.A. 143, 43 All. 291, 63 I.C. 34; Parshadi Lal v. Brij Mohan Lal (1936) 11 Luck. 575, 159 I.C. 117, ('36) A.O. 52. Reference may also be made to Ram Ratan Lal v. Kashinath ('66) A.P. 235.

(v) Sree Sree Ishwar v. Sushila Bala (1954) S.C. 69, (1954) S.C.R. 407. Also see cases under § 408.

(w) Muddun Lal v. Sreemutty Komul Bibee (1867) 8 W.R. 42, 44; Konwar Doorganath v. Ram Chunder (1877) 2 Cal. 341, 349, 4 I.A. 52.

(x) Gangi Reddi v. Tammi Reddi (1927) 54 I.A. 136, 50 Mad. 421, 101 I.C. 79, ('27) A.P.C. 80, reversing on this point same case in (1922) 45 Mad. 281, 70 I.C. 337, ('22) A.M. 236.

(y) Abhiram v. Shyama Charan (1909) 36 Cal. 1003, 1012, 36 I.A. 148, 4 I.C. 449.

(z) Kulada Prosad v. Kali Das (1915) 42 Cal. 536, 543-544, 24 I.C. 899, ('14) A.C. 813.

410. Bequest to idol not in existence at testator's death.—The principle of Hindu law which invalidates a bequest other than to a person in existence at the death of the testator [§ 372], does not apply to a bequest to trustees for the establishment of the image of a deity after the death of the testator. Such a gift is valid, though the image is to be established and consecrated after the testator's death (a). Similarly a dedication of immovable property by means of an Arpannama to a number of deities some of which were installed at the date of the disposition are valid (b).

Illustration

A bequeaths his property to his executors upon trust to establish after his death an image of the goddess Kali in the name of his mother. and to devote the income of the balance to the worship of the goddess. The bequest is valid, though the image is to be installed for the first time after the testator's death. See §§ 359 to 362, and §§ 375 to 378.

Dedication to a temple.—Dedication to a temple which has yet to be built for a deity as indicated in a deed of trust and for services to be performed in the temple is valid (*b*1).

The idol must be specified.—The dedication must be to a particular deity. A dedication to "the Thakurji in my Thakurdwara" without mentioning the particular Thakurji to whom the bequest is to be given, is void for uncertainty (c). In a Madras case, however, opinion has been expressed that a gift for worship of God without mentioning any particular deity is valid (d).

Mutilation of idol.—The destruction or mutilation of the image does not affect the endowment. A new image may be established, and the endowment kept up (e). The actual installation of an idol in a temple or the construction of a temple for that purpose is not absolutely necessary for validating a settlement in favour of the idol (f).

411. Endowments and rule against perpetuities.—(1) A dedication of property for a public, religious or charitable purpose is not invalid because it transgresses the rule which forbids the creation of perpetuities. The rule against perpetuity applies to gifts and bequests in favour of private individuals [§ 385]. It does not apply to religious and charitable endowments (g).

(2) Where the estate created by a grant is in its nature secular, the mere fact that the motive for the grant was religious does not constitute it a religious endowment, so as to exempt it from the rule against perpetuities (h).

A, actuated by religious motives, makes a gift of certain property to B and C, both Brahmins, subject to the condition that they should not alienate the property and that it should be enjoyed by them and their heirs for ever. The restraint against alienation is void, and B and C take the property absolutely.

411A. Endowments and directions for accumulations.—The rule stated in § 397 as to directions for accumulations does not apply to religious endowments.

See Transfer of Property Act, 1882, S. 18.

---

(a) Bhupati Nath v. Ram Lal (1910) 37 Cal. 128, 3 I.C. 642; Mohar Singh v. Het Singh (1910) 32 All. 337, 5 I.C. 584; Chatarabhuj v. Chatarjit (1911) 33 All. 253, 8 I.C. 832.

(b) Bhoopati Nath Chakrabarti v. Vasantkumari Debee (1936) 63 Cal. 1098, ('36) A.C. 556.

(*b*1) Pachamuthu Nader v. T.P.T. Charities ('71) A.M. 253.

(c) Phundan Lal v. Arya Prithi (1911) 33 All. 793, 11 I.C. 260; Chandi Charan v. Haribola (1919) 46 Cal. 951, 51 I.C. 275, ('19) A.C. 199.

(d) Velusicami v. Dandapani (1947) Mad. 47.

(e) Bijoychand v. Kalipada (1914) 41 Cal. 57, 20 I.C. 78, ('14) A.C. 200.

(f) Sarab Sukh v. Ram Prasad (1924) 46 All. 130, 135, 78 I.C. 1018, ('24) A.A. 357.

(g) Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 18; Indian Succession Act, 1925, s. 118; Bhuggobutty v. Gooroo (1898) 25 Cal. 112; Prafulla v. Jogendra Nath (1905) 9 C.W.N. 528.

(h) Anantha v. Nagamuthu (1882) 4 Mad. 200.

412. Estate in remainder.—An endowment is not invalid because it is to take effect after the determination of an estate for life (i)

Illustration

A executes a deed by which he reserves to himself a life-estate in certain property and directs that after his death the income of the property shall be paid to his daughter for life and after her death it shall be devoted to a certain temple. The endowment is valid, though it is to take effect after the determination of the life-estate in favour of the settlor and his daughter.

413. Devasthanam, Math, Shebait, Mohunt, Debutter property.—Where property is devoted absolutely to religious purposes, in other words, where the dedication is absolute and complete, the possession and management of the property belongs, in the case of a devasthanam or temple, to the manager of the temple, called shebait; but a shebait is not mere pujari or archak of the temple. He is a human minstrant of the deity until a pujari is appointed by the founder or the shebait to conduct worship. The pujari is thus a servant of the shebait (*i*1). In case of a math, that is an abode for students of religion, the possession and management of the property belongs to the head of the math called mohunt; and this carries with it the right to bring whatever suits are necessary for the protection of the property. Every such right of suit is vested in the case of temple property in the shebait and, not in the idol, and in the case of math property in the mohunt (j). For position of shebait and mohunt see § 414 infra. Property dedicated to religious uses is called debutter property. "Debutter" means literally 'belonging to a deity.'

Succeeding shebaits of a temple and mohunts of a math form a continuous representation of the property of the idol or of the math (k).

Distinction between temples and maths.—The religious foundations known as Devasthanams or temples are the most numerous in India and have the largest endowments especially in the shape of lands, assignment of public revenue, and jewellery. These institutions have been established for the spiritual benefit of the Hindu community in general, or for that of particular sects or sections thereof. Next to the temples, the most important religious foundations in this country are the ancient maths or monasteries presided over almost invariably by sanyasis or monks. The object of these maths (or mutts) is generally the promotion of religious knowledge, and the imparting of spiritual instruction to the disciples and followers of the math. In the case of maths though there are idols connected therewith, the worship of them is a secondary matter. The two classes of institutions, namely, temples and maths, are thus supplementary to each other in the Hindu Ecclesiastical system, both conducive to spiritual welfare, the one by affording opportunities for prayer and worship, the other by facilitating spiritual instruction and the acquisition of religious knowledge. In the case of temples, the endowed property vests in the idol; in the case of maths, it vests in the math itself as a juristic person (l). The mohunt like the shebait is the manager or custodian of the institution. The view taken in Vidyapurna v. Vidyanidhi (m), that in case of maths the ideal person is the office of the spiritual teacher which, as it were, is incarnate in the person of each successive mohunt who, for the time, is a real owner is not tenable after the pronouncement of the Judicial Committee in Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami (n). The actual decision in

---

(i) Gobind v. Gomti (1908) 30 All. 288.

(*i*1) Kalimata Thakurani v. Jibandhan ('62) A.S.C. 1329.

(j) Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi (1905) 32 Cal. 129, 31 I.A. 203; Babajirao v. Laxmandas (1904) 28 Bom. 215; Bidhu v. Kuladaprasad (1919) 46 Cal. 877, 50 I.C. 525, ('19) A.C. 245; Jodhi Rai v. Basdeo Prasad (1911) 33 All. 735, 11 I.C. 47 [F.B.]; Gobinda Ramanuj Das Mohanta v. Mohanta Ramcharan Ramanuj Das (1936) 63 Cal. 326.

(k) Gulabbhai v. Sohangdasji (1928) 52 Bom. 431, 110 I.C. 263, ('28) A.B. 183.

(l) As to what is a 'Mutt' within the scope of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act, see Raghavendra Swami Mutt v. Board of Commissioners H.R.E. Madras ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 150.

(m) Vidyapurna v. Vidyanidhi (1904) 27 Mad. 435; Sammantha v. Sellappa (1879) 2 Mad. 175, 179; Giyana v. Kandasami (1887) 10 Mad. 375, 389.

(n) 48 I.A. 302.

Vidyapurna v. Vidyanidhi (o) is, however, correct for it was held there that the mohunt of an institution does not forfeit his office by reason of subsequent lunacy. So long as the duties of a mohunt or shebait can be discharged by an agent or guardian, subsequent lunacy would not occasion a forfeiture of rights or furnish any grounds of removal (p).

Arya Samajist.—An Arya Samajist, who is a Hindu can be a shebait, but the rites of the deity must be performed by a properly qualified person (q).

Property held by an idol.—"It is only in an ideal sense that property can be said to belong to an idol; and the possession and management of it must in the nature of things be entrusted to some person as shebait, or manager" (r).

Property held by a math.—"A math, like an idol, is in Hindu law a juridical person capable of acquiring, holding and vindicating legal rights, though of necessity it can only act in relation to those rights through the medium of some human agency. When the property is vested in the math, then litigation in respect of it has ordinarily to be conducted by, and in the name of, the manager [Mohunt]" (s).

Idols and maths are both juridical persons.—The Hindu law, like the Roman law and those [systems of law] derived from it, recognizes not only corporate bodies with rights of property vested in the corporation, apart from its individual members, but also the juridical persons or subjects called foundations (t). Temples and maths are both religious foundations.

Though there are some points of similarity between a minor and a Hindu idol still the idol is not a perpetual minor (u). Any next friend may sue on behalf of an idol for a declaration that certain property is debutter property. It is not necessary to ask for shebait to institute the suit before the next friend files it (v).

Suit in name of temple.—A temple is not a juridical person; no suit, therefore, relating to the temple property, can be instituted in the name of the temple (w).

Although a Hindu idol has a juridical status it cannot be regarded as a "person" capable of cultivating lands personally in the context of the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Vidarbha) Act of 1958 (*w*1). But it is a juristic entity capable of holding property and of being taxed through its shebaits (*w*2).

Right to sue.—The idol itself is a juridical person with the power of suing and being sued (x). Section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code is not a bar to the maintainability of a suit by the idol for possession of its property from a person who is in illegal possession of the same (*x*1). The Privy Council held in Maharaja Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi (y) that "possession and management of the dedicated property belong to the shebait and this carries with it the right to bring whatever suits are necessary for the protection of the property." When a shebait is unwilling or incapable of bringing a suit, such suit can be instituted by the prospective shebait, the heirs of the founder or any person interested and the deity itself can sue through a next friend (z). In any such case, as was recently pointed out by the Supreme Court (*z*1), a person interested in the worship of the idol can certainly be clothed with an ad hoc power of representation to protect its interest (*z*1). Reference may also be made to the undermentioned case (a).

---

(o) (1904) 27 Mad. 435.

(p) Nirmal Kumar Banerji v. Jyoti Prasad Banerji (1941) 2 Cal. 128, 197 I.C. 761, ('43) A.C. 562.

(q) Iswar v. Kshetra ('49) A.C. 253.

(r) Prosunno Kumari v. Golab Chand (1875) 14 Beng. L.R. 450, 459, 2 I.A. 145, 152; Pramatha Nath v. Pradyumna (1925) 52 I.A. 245, 251-252, 52 Cal. 809, 816, 87 I.C. 305, ('25) A.P.C. 139.

(s) Babajirao v. Laxmandas (1904) 28 Bom. 215, 223.

(t) Manohar v. Lakhmiram (1888) 12 Bom. 247, 263, affd. in Chotalal v. Manohar (1900) 24 Bom. 50, 26 I.A. 199; Narasimha v. Venkatalingam (1927) 50 Mad. 687, 103 I.C. 302, ('27) A.M. 636; In re Sarjubai (1944) Nag. 81 [F.B.].

(u) Tarit Bhusan Ray v. Sree Iswar Sridhar Salgramsila Thakur (1941) Cal. 477, 199 I.C. 486, ('42) A.C. 99.

(v) Thakur Sree Sree Annapurna Devi v. Shiba Sundari Dasi (1944) 2 Cal. 144.

(w) Thakardwara Pheru Mal v. Ishar Das (1928) 9 Lah. 588, 110 I.C. 384, ('28) A.L. 375.

(*w*1) Kalanka Devi Sansthan v. Maharashtra Revenue Tribunal ('70) A.S.C. 439.

(*w*2) Jogendra Nath v. I.T. Commissioner ('69) A.S.C. 1089.

(x) Pramatha Nath v. Pradyumna, (1925) 52 I.A. 245.

(*x*1) Bishwanath v. Radha Ballabhji ('67) A.S.C. 1044.

(y) 31 I.A. 203.

(z) Girish v. Upendra, 35 C.W.N. 768; Sree Sree Gopal v. Baldeo Narain (1946) 2 Cal. 447; Monmohan Haldev v. Dibhendra (1944) A.C. 199. Also see Mahadoba Devasthan v. Mahadoba (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 345, ('53) A.B. 38 (1952) Bom. 1071; Sushama Roy v. Atul Kri..r ('55) A.C. 624.

(*z*1) See Bishwanath v. Radha Ballabhji supra.

(a) Jangi Lal v. Panna Lal ('57) A.A. 743.

The Madras High Court has held in a Full Bench case that in the absence of a de jure trustee, a de facto trustee of a public religious or charitable endowment who is in possession and management of the institution is entitled to maintain a suit for recovery of trust property against an adverse claimant (b).

Female manager.—There is nothing to prevent a female from being the manager of a religious endowment, but she cannot perform any spiritual functions (c). According to the practice and precedents obtaining in the Madras State a Hindu female is not incompetent by reason of her sex to succeed to the office of Acharya in a temple and to the emoluments attached thereto (d).

Trustees.—Property belonging to a religious institution may by the usage and custom of the institution vest in trustees other than the spiritual head (e).

414. Position of shebait and mohunt.—(1) Shebait—A shebait is, by virtue of his office, the administrator of the property attached to the temple of which he is the shebait. Both the elements of office and property or duties and personal interest are blended together in the conception of shebaitship and neither can be detached from the other (*e*1). As regards the property of the temple, he is in the position of a trustee. But as regards the service of the temple and the duties that appertain to it, he is rather in the position of the holder of an office or dignity (f). It would be wrong to regard him as a mere pujari or archak (*f*1).

It was laid down by the Judicial Committee, that a shebait has not the legal ownership in, but only the title of manager of, a religious endowment (g). It follows from this that the rent of property dedicated to the services of an idol (h), as well as offerings made to the idol [§ 442], belong to the idol, and not to the shebait. A shebait being a manager only, ceases to be shebait when he ceases to manage the property and carry on the worship of the idol (h). Where the founder has reserved to himself the puja of the idol he is the shebait, but if he chooses not to administer the endowment property and appoints another to perform the duty the former is competent to dismiss the latter (i).

Benami purchase by shebait of debutter property.—As a shebait occupies a fiduciary position with respect to debutter property, a purchase of such property by him benami and without disclosing that he is the real purchaser is invalid, even if he buys at a sale execution proceedings and has paid the full market value (*i*1).

Adverse possession.—No shebait can, as long as he continues to be the shebait, claim adverse possession against the idol for that would be a notion void of all content (j).

(2) Mohunt.—The property of a math is held by the mohunt as spiritual head of the institution, but the property may by the usage and custom of the institution vest in trustees other than the spiritual head. In any case the property is held solely in trust for the purposes of the institution (k); surplus income must be added to the endowment and not applied for the personal enjoyment of the head of the math (l). A mohunt is not a trustee in

---

(b) Sankaranarayana Ayyar v. Sri Poovanatha Swami Temple (1950) Mad. 191 (F.B.).

(c) See Janoki Debi v. Gopal (1882) 9 Cal. 766, 10 I.A. 32; Keshavbhat v. Bhagirathibai (1866) 3 Bom. H.C.A.C. 75.

(d) Annaya v. Ammakka (1918) 41 Mad. 886, 47 I.C. 341, ('19) A.M. 598 [F.B.].

(e) Arunachellam v. Venkatchalapathi (1919) 46 I.A. 204, 43 Mad. 253, 53 I.C. 288, ('19) A.P.C. 62.

(*e*1) Commissioner, Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Swamiar ('54) S.C. 282, (1954) S.C.R. 1005.

(f) Ramanathan v. Murugappa (1906) 29 Mad. 283, 33 I.A. 139; Moti Das v. S. P. Sahi ('59) S.C. 942.

(*f*1) Sree Kalimata Thakurani v. Jibandhan ('62) A.S.C. 1329.

(g) Shibessouree v. Mothooranath (1869) 15 M.I.A. 270, 273.

(h) Bhuban Mohan v. Narendra Nath (1931) 35 C.W.N. 478, 135 I.C. 865, ('32) A.C. 27.

(i) Ram Das v. Shri Ram Lakshman Janki (1943) All. 845, 209 I.C. 463, ('43) A.A. 352.

(*i*1) Peary Mohan v. Manohar (1921) 48 I.A. 258, 48 Cal. 1019, 62 I.C. 76, ('22) A.P.C. 235.

(j) Sree Sree Ishwar v. Sushila Bala (1954) S.C.R. 407; Surendrakrishna Ray v. Shree Shree Ishwar (1933) 60 Cal. 54, 77.

(k) Gobinda Ramanuj Das Mohanta v. Mohanta Ramchandaran Ramanuj Das (1936) 63 Cal. 326.

(l) Arunachellam v. Venkatachalapathi (1919) 46 I.A. 204, 43 Mad. 253, 53 I.C. 288, ('19) A.P.C. 62; Ram Parkash Das v. Anand Das (1916) 43

the English legal sense of the term (m). His functions and duties are regulated by custom. His very wide discretion as to the application of the income is subject to the obligation to manage the property so as to serve effectively the objects for which the Math exists (n). In the conception of Mahantship, as in Shebaitship, both the elements of office and property are blended together and neither can be detached from the other. The personal or beneficial interest of the mahant in the endowments attached to an institution is manifested in his large powers of disposal and administration and his right to create derivative tenures in respect of endowed properties; and these and other rights of a similar character of proprietary right which, though anomalous to some extent, is still a genuine legal right. A mahant, as a superior of a Math, has, in addition to his duties, a personal interest of a beneficial character which is much larger than that of a shebait in debutter property (*n*1). Mohunt of a Math though not duly installed can maintain a suit to recover the property for its benefit from trespassers (o).

The hereditary trusteeship of a religious institution constitutes "property" within the ambit of sec. 7 of the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890 (p).

Dharmakarta.—A dharmakarta is no more than a manager, and his rights, apart perhaps from the question of personal support, are never higher than those of a mere trustee; in this respect he differs from a shebait or the head of a math. Those functionaries have a much higher right with larger powers of disposal and administration (q). Reference may be made to the recent Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court (*q*1).

Office of hereditary trustee.—The position of a hereditary trustee of a religious or charitable endowment or institution is not in any way different from that of a Dharmakarta or a mere manager or custodian of any such endowment or institution. The only difference being that he succeeds to the office as of right and in accordance with the rules governing succession. His position cannot be equated with that of a shebait or the head of a math (*q*2).

Maintenance of chela or disciple.—Though the head of a muth is bound to maintain his disciples, and such maintenance is a legitimate expenditure of the muth property, yet no specific right in favour of individual chelas can be recognised apart from usage which can be made the subject matter of a suit. The remedy in such cases is the general remedy by way of administration of trust (r).

Married Mohunts.—As a rule the Mohunt is a celibate. There are certain exceptional cases where the Mohunt who presides over the Math is permitted to marry. There are instances of Maths in which the Mohuntship descends to a personal heir of the Mohunt (s).

Personal property of Mahant.—A Mahant of a Math may own and acquire personal property. Reference may be made to the undermentioned decision of the Supreme Court (*s*1).

---

I.A. 73, 43 Cal. 707, 33 I.C. 583, ('16) A.P.C. 256; Sethuramaswamiar v. Meruswamiar (1918) 45 I.A. 1, 41 Mad. 296, 43 I.C. 806, ('17) A.P.C. 190; Balaswamy v. Venkataswamy (1917) 40 Mad. 745, 40 I.C. 531, ('18) A.M. 984.

(m) Ananta Krishna Shastri v. Prayag Das (1937) 1 Cal. 84.

(n) Mahant Kesho Das v. Amar Dasji (1935) 14 Pat. 379, 156 I.C. 1099, ('35) A.P. 111.

(*n*1) Commissioner, Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Swamiar ('54) A.S.C. 282, (1954) S.C.R. 1005.

(o) Mahadeo Prasad Singh v. Karia Bharti (1935) 57 All. 159, 62 I.A. 47, 153 I.C. 1100, ('35) A.P.C. 44; Sri Radha Krishna Asthapit Thakurdwara v. Mst. Maharaj Kunwar (1937) 12 Luck. 331, 164 I.C. 919, ('37) A.O. 69.

(p) Kanteti v. Venkateswara ('50) A.A.P. 232.

(q) Srinivasa Chariar v. Evalappa Mudaliar (1922) 49 I.A. 237, 45 Mad. 565, 68 I.C. 1, ('22) A.P.C. 325.

(*q*1) Manathunainatha v. Sundaralingam ('71) A.M. 1 (F.B.).

(*q*2) K. A. Samajam v. Commissioner of H.R. & C. Endowments ('71) A.S.C. 891.

(r) Ramamohan Das v. Basudeb ('50) A. Orissa 28.

(s) Tulasiram v. Ramprasanna ('56) A. Orissa 41.

(*s*1) Gurcharant Prasad v. Krishnanand ('68) A.S.C. 1032.

415. Alienation of debutter property.—(1) As a general rule of Hindu law, property given for the maintenance of religious worship, and of charities connected with it, is inalienable. It is competent, however, for the shebait or mohunt in charge of the property, in his capacity of shebait or mohunt and as manager of the property, to incur debts and borrow money on a mortgage of the property for the purpose of keeping up the religious worship, and for the benefit and preservation of the property. The power, however, to incur debts must be measured by an existing necessity for incurring them.

(2) The power of a shebait or a mohunt to alienate debutter property is analogous to that of a manager for an infant heir as defined by the Judicial Committee in Hunooman Persaud v. Mussamat Babooee (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393. As held in that case, he has no power to alienate debutter property except "in a case of need or for the benefit of the estate." He is not entitled to sell the property for the purpose of investing the price of it so as to bring in an income larger than that derived from the property itself. Nor can he, except for legal necessity, grant a permanent lease of debutter property, though he may create proper derivative tenures and estates conformable to usage (t). Where, however, a grant of a permanent lease has been affirmed by judgment of the Court, the judgment will operate as res judicata, and the succeeding shebait or mohunt will be bound by it (u).

Powers of shebait and mohunt.—"It is only in an ideal sense that property can be said to belong to an idol; and the possession and management of it must in the nature of things be entrusted to some person as shebait, or manager. It would seem to follow that the person so entrusted must of necessity be empowered to do whatever may be required for the service of the idol, and for the benefit and preservation of its property, at least to as great a degree as the manager of an infant heir. If this were not so, the estate of the idol might be destroyed or wasted, and its worship discontinued, for want of the necessary funds to preserve and maintain them" (v).

It was at one time held that the corpus of endowed property could not in any case be sold or permanently alienated, though the income might be mortgaged for necessary purposes (w). But this view is no longer tenable. The temple itself cannot, however, be sold in execution of a decree against the mohunt or shebait (x).

A shebait cannot delegate his duties though he may appoint a sub-agent for the purpose of carrying out his duties in the usual course of business. A lease granted by a sub-agent without the knowledge of the shebait is not binding on the temple (y).

Permanent lease.—Except for unavoidable necessity, the head of a math cannot create any interest in the math property to enure beyond his life (a). A permanent lease of temple lands at a fixed rent, or rent-free for a premium, whether the lands are agricultural lands or a building site, is valid only if made for a necessity of the institution. It is not

---

(t) Prosunno Kumari v. Golab Chand (1875) 2 I.A. 145, 14 Beng. L.R. 450 (Mortgage); Abhiram v. Shyama Charan (1909) 36 Cal. 1003, 36 I.A. 148, 4 I.C. 449 [lease]; Palaniappa v. Deivasikamony (1917) 44 I.A. 147, 40 Mad. 709, 39 I.C. 722, ('17) A.P.C. 33 [lease]; Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami (1921) 48 I.A. 302, 44 Mad. 831, 65 I.C. 161, ('22) A.P.C. 123 [lease]; Konwar Doorganath v. Ram Chunder (1877) 2 Cal. 341, 351, 4 I.A. 52, 62 [lease]; Shibessouree v. Mothoornath (1869) 13 M.I.A. 270 [lease]; Ramachandra v. Kashinath (1895) 19 Bom. 271; Prosunno Kumar v. Saroda (1895) 22 Cal. 989; Sheo Shankar v. Ram Shewak (1897) 24 Cal. 77; Parsotam Gir v. Dat Gir (1903) 25 All. 296; Ram Chandra v. Ram Krishna (1906) 33 Cal. 507; Muthusamier v. Sreemethanithi (1915) 38 Mad. 356, 19 I.C. 694, ('16) A.M. 332; Mahanth Jai Krishna v. Bhukhal (1921) 6 Pat. L.J. 638, 65 I.C. 290, ('22) A.P. 165 [lease]; Ramchandarji Maharaj v. Lalji Singh ('59) A.P. 305, 38 Pat. 49.

(u) (1869) 13 M.I.A. 270, supra.

(v) (1875) 14 Beng. L.R. 450, 459, 2 I.A. 145, 152, supra; Pashupathinath Seal v. Pradyumnakumar Mallik (1936) 63 Cal. 454.

(w) Narayan v. Chintaman (1881) 5 Bom. 393; Collector of Thana v. Hari (1882) 6 Bom. 546; Nallayappa v. Ambalavana (1904) 27 Mad. 465.

(x) Mukundji Maharaj v. Persotam Lalji ('57) A.A. 77.

(y) Shree Shree Gopal Shreedhar Mahadeb v. Shasheebhushan Sarkar (1933) 60 Cal. 111, 142 I.C. 465, ('33) A.C. 109.

(a) Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami (1921) 48 I.A. 302, 44 Mad. 831, 65 I.C. 161, ('22) A.P.C. 123. Deosthan v. Ramdayal (1944) Nag. 51.

permissible by a local custom, or by a practice of the institution, to grant lands in that manner (b). In Abhiram v. Shyama Charan (c), where the question arose as to whether a permanent lease granted by a mohunt was valid, it was held that it was not, as there was no legal necessity for it. In the course of the judgment their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "The second question is whether . . . . the mohunt had power to grant a mokarrari pottah of the mouzah. It is well settled law that the power of the mohunt to alienate debutter property is, like the power of the manager for an infant heir, limited to cases of unavoidable necessity: Prosunno Kumari Debya v. Golab Chand (d). In the case of Konwar Doorganath Roy v. Ram Chunder Sen (e) a mokarrari pottah of debutter land, was supported on the ground that it was granted in consideration of money said to be required for the repair and completion of a temple, for which no other funds could be obtained. But the general rule is that laid down in the case of Shibessouree Debia v. Mothooranath Acharjo (f), that apart from such necessity to create a new and fixed rent for all time, though adequate at the time, in lieu of giving the endowment the benefit of an augmentation of a variable rent from time to time, would be a breach of duty in the mohunt. There is no allegation that there were any special circumstances of necessity in this case to justify the grant of the pottah of 1860, which on the most favourable construction enured only for the lifetime of the grantor."

Legal necessity.—In Prosunno Kumari v. Golab Chand (g) their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "The power, however [of a shebait], to incur debts must be measured by the existing necessity for incurring them." In that case it was found that the shebait was a man of profligate habits, and that he, having spent the income of the debutter property on his own pleasures, borrowed Rs. 4,000 to defray the expenses of the worship of the idol, and mortgaged the property as security for the advance. In a suit to enforce the mortgage a decree was passed for the mortgagee providing for the realisation of the loan out of the profits of the mortgaged property. In a suit by the successor to set aside the decree, it was held that the debts having been contracted for legal necessity, the decree was binding upon the successor in office, and that decision was confirmed by the Judicial Committee. The principle of that decision was applied by the Judicial Committee in the later case of Niladri Sahu v. Mahant Chaturbhuj Das (h). In that case the mahant of a math borrowed money at 2 per cent per mensem mainly for the purpose of constructing pakka buildings for the accommodation of wealthy devotees visiting the math and in part for the ordinary expenses of the worship. Afterwards he mortgaged certain of the math properties at one per cent. per mensem in order to discharge the loan at two per cent. per mensem which was an accumulating burden upon the endowment. In a suit to enforce the mortgage it was held that the mortgage was for legal necessity so as to be within the power of the mahant, even if the original loans were incurred recklessly and not for the benefit of the math, which, however, was not shown to be the case. In the course of the judgment their Lordships said: "The importance of this case in its application to the present consists in this, that it was the immediate not the remote cause, the causa causans of the borrowing which has to be considered. The immediate cause of the borrowing was the math's need of money to carry on and pay for its services. The remote cause of the math's need was due to the profligate expenditure of the shebait. It would have been no answer to the creditor's suit to say: Your money was only borrowed because the income of the math was spent, by a profligate shebait, and there was no money available to carry on the services of the math. So in the present case. Even if the building scheme of the defendant had been reckless, inconsistent, unsound, and liable to fail, which has not been proved, what drove him to borrow this money Rs. 25,000 on mortgage, to pay old debts, and so be relieved of the oppressive burden which the exorbitant rate of interest at which the earlier loans were made imposed upon him? It was the high rate of interest, which he was already bound to pay, that was the necessary and immediate cause of his giving this mortgage, though the remote cause of it was the getting into debt by the building operation. In their Lordships' view the principle of the case above mentioned applied to this case." The principle was applied by the Supreme Court where a mahant had borrowed money to meet legal expenses of litigation against a trespasser claiming hostile title against the math and had executed a mortgage and subsequently a sale of math property (hh).

---

(b) Palaniappa v. Deivasikamony (1917) 44 I.A. 147, 40 Mad. 709, 39 I.C. 722, ('17) A.P.C. 33; Gobinda Ramanuj Das Mohanta v. Mohanta Ramcharan Ramanuj Das (1936) 63 Cal. 326; Srimath Daivasikhamani v. Periyanan Chetti (1936) 63 I.A. 261, 59 Mad. 809, 38 Bom. L.R. 702, 162 I.C. 465, ('36) A.P.C. 183.

(c) (1909) 36 Cal. 1003, 36 I.A. 148, 165, 4 I.C. 44.

(d) (1875) 2 I.A. 145, 14 Beng. L.R. 450.

(e) (1877) 2 Cal. 341, 4 I.A. 52.

(f) (1869) 13 M.I.A. 270.

(g) (1875) 2 I.A. 145, 151-152, 14 Beng. L.R. 450 [mortgage].

(h) (1926) 53 I.A. 253, 6 Pat. 139, 98 I.C. 576, ('26) A.P.C. 112; Laxmi Narasingha Swami v. Patta Sahuani ('57) A. Oudh. 86.

(hh) Biram Prakash v. Narendra Dass ('66) A.S.C. 1011.

Though a mohunt has agreed in a suit to the validity of an alienation made without legal necessity, his successor is not bound by such agreement and it cannot prevent an investigation into the original nature of the transaction (i).

Constructing pakka buildings for the accommodation of visitors to a math is a legal necessity (j). So too is the rebuilding of a dining hall for feeding visitors (k).

"For the benefit of the estate."—The phrase "benefit of the estate," as used in the decisions with regard to the circumstances justifying an alienation by the manager for an infant heir or by the trustee of a religious endowment, cannot be precisely defined but includes the preservation of the estate from extinction, its defence against hostile litigation, its protection from inundation, and similar circumstances (l). See § 233A, where this subject is fully discussed.

415A. Burden of proof of necessity.—(1) Where an alienation is made of debutter property, the burden lies on the alienee to prove either that there was a legal necessity in fact, or that he made proper and bona fide enquiries as to the existence of such necessity and did all that was reasonable to satisfy himself as to the existence of such necessity. An order of Court giving a trustee or shebait leave to mortgage the trust property on the ground of necessity may be relied on by the mortgagee as prima facie evidence of his having made due and proper enquiries as to the necessity. Such an order cannot be questioned on the ground of defect of procedure or incorrect exercise of jurisdiction (m). In fact, the rules as to burden of proof in the case of an alienee from a shebait or mohunt are the same as those which apply to the case of an alienee from the manager for an infant heir (n). Those rules are set forth in §§ 182 and 244. The notes to § 243 may also be referred to as throwing further light on the subject. Where only a portion of the loan is proved to have been applied to purposes of necessity, the rule laid down in § 245 applies (o).

(2) Where the validity of a permanent lease granted by a shebait comes in question a long time after the grant so that it is not possible to ascertain what were the circumstances in which it was made, the Court should assume that the grant was made for necessity so as to be valid beyond the life of the grantor (p).

415B. Who can maintain suit.—In § 413 reference has already been made to the right of a shebait and a mohunt to bring a suit for the protection of the property of a devasthanam, temple or math. It is also well-established that a person who has been in de facto possession and management of math properties has sufficient interest to maintain a suit for the protection of the interest of the public trust. Such a person can maintain a suit for the benefit of the math (*p*1).

---

(i) Mahanth Ramdhan Puri v. Mst. Parbati Kuer (1937) 16 Pat. 476, 171 I.C. 457, ('37) A.P. 519.

(j) Niladri Sahu v. Mahant Chaturbhuj Das (1926) 53 I.A. 253, 267, 6 Pat. 139, 98 I.C. 576, ('26) A.P.C. 112.

(k) Vibhudapriya v. Lakshmindra (1927) 54 I.A. 228, 50 Mad. 497, 101 I.C. 545, ('27) A.P.C. 131.

(l) Palaniappa v. Deivasikamony (1917) 44 I.A. 147, 155, 40 Mad. 709, 718, 39 I.C. 722, ('17) A.P.C. 33.

(m) Pashupathinath Seal v. Pradyumnakumar Mallik (1936) 63 Cal. 454.

(n) Konwar Doorganath v. Ram Chunder (1877) 2 Cal. 341, 351-352, 4 I.A. 52, 62-64; Murugesam v. Manickavasaka (1917) 44 I.A. 98, 40 Mad. 402, 39 I.C. 659, ('17) A.P.C. 6; Baidyanath v. Kunja Kumar ('49) A.P. 75.

(o) 2 Cal. 341, pp. 353-354, supra.

(p) Bawa Magniram v. Kasturbhai (1922) 49 I.A. 54, 46 Bom. 481, 66 I.C. 162, ('22) A.P.C. 163 [lease impeached after 100 years].

(*p*1) Mahanth Ram Charan Das v. Naurangi Lal (1933) 60 I.A. 124, 126; Mahadeo Prasad Singh v. Keria Bharti 62 I.A. 47; Mahant Ram Sarup Das v. Lakshmi Ojha (1957) 36 Pat. 1022. But if he claims to sue as a shebait he must make out that basis of his claim Chamelibai v. Ramchandrajee ('65) A.M.P. 167.

416. Creditor's suit for money lent for legal necessity.—(1) Where a shebait or mohunt contracts a debt for legal necessity, the creditor is entitled to a decree against him providing for the payment of the decretal amount out of the profits of the debutter property even if no charge was created on the property to secure the loan. After the death of the debtor, the creditor is entitled to a similar decree against his successor (q).

(2) In a case where the loan was made for legal necessity, the proper decree to be passed in a creditor's suit, whether the loan be secured or unsecured, and whether the suit is brought against the debtor or his successor, is one directing the defendant to pay the decretal amount within a fixed period, and directing further that if the amount is not paid within that period, a receiver shall be appointed to realise the rents and profits of the debutter property and the proceeds from offerings, etc., and after payment of all expenses connected with the institution and the performance of the ceremonies and festivals and a reasonable provision for the maintenance of the shebait or mohunt, the balance shall be applied in discharge of the plaintiff's debt until such debtor has been paid off (r).

417. Decree against shebait or mohunt, when binding on successor.—It being competent to a shebait or mohunt to borrow money for necessary purposes, it follows that judgments obtained aginst a shebait or mohunt in respect of debts so incurred are binding upon his successors who form a continuing representation of the debutter or endowed property. But before applying the principle of res judicata to such judgments, the Court should be satisfied that the judgments relied upon were not obtained by fraud or collusion, and that the necessary and proper issues were raised, tried, and decided in the suits which led to them (s). If the decree is based on a compromise, the Courts should be satisfied that the compromise was entered into bona fide in the interest of the temple or math (t). See the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, sec. 11, Expln. VI.

418. Devolution of office of mohunt.—(1) The succession to the office of mohunt depends on the usage of each particular math. As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council, "the only law as to mohunts and their office, functions and duties, is to be found in custom and practice, which is to be proved by testimony." The custom that prevails in the majority of cases is that the mohunt nominates his successor by appointment during his lifetime or by will. Where there is no such custom, or where no nomination has been made, the usage of some institutions is to have a successor appointed by a system of election by all the mohunts of the sect in the neighbourhood. In some cases, the succession depends upon election by the disciples and fol-

---

(q) Shankar v. Venkapa (1885) 9 Bom. 422; Sree Sree Iswar Gopal Jiew v. Pratapmal (1951) A.S.C. 214 affirming Pratap Mull v. Iswar Gopal Jiew, 48 C.W.N. 172; Srimath Daivasikamani v. Noor Mahomed (1908) 31 Mad. 47; Lakshmindrathirtha v. Raghavendra (1920) 43 Mad. 795, 59 I.C. 287, ('20) A.M. 678; Sundaresan v. Viswanada (1922) 45 Mad. 703, 72 I.C. 103, ('22) A.M. 402; Vibhudapriya v. Lakshmindra (1927) 54 I.A. 228, 230 (argument of counsel), 50 Mad. 497, 101 I.C. 545, ('27) A.P.C. 131.

(r) Vibhudapriya v. Lakshmindra (1927) 54 I.A. 228, 50 Mad. 497, 101 I.C. 545, ('27) A.P.C. 131; Niladri Sahu v. Mahant Chaturbhuj Das (1926) 53 I.A. 253, 6 Pat. 139, 98 I.C. 576, ('26) A.P.C. 112.

(s) Prosunno Kumari v. Golab (1875) 14 Beng. L.R. 450, 2 I.A. 145.

(t) Manikka v. Balagopalakrishna (1906) 29 Mad. 553.

lowers of the math (u). But the appointment as a general rule is to be made from among the disciples of the deceased mahant and failing disciples from among his spiritual kindred (v). Where mohant has the power to appoint his own successor, he cannot delegate or transfer that power to a mohunt of a neighbouring math or to any other person (w).

(2) It is now well established that religious offices can be hereditary and that the right to such an office is in the nature of property. In Commissioner, Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Sri Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar (x) the Supreme Court reiterated and extended the rule to the office of a Mohunt.

(3) Partition.—The headship of a math is not a matter of partition (y); nor is the property of the math (z).

In the case of a maurasi math, the senior chela succeeds a fortiori in the absence of a valid nomination by the reigning Mohunt (a). The mohunt can cancel nomination of a chela to become successor made in a will by another will (*a*1). As to succession to Turki Asthal see the undermentioned case (*a*2).

Where the appointment of a successor is not made bona fide in the interests of the math, but in furtherance of the interests of the appointor, the appointment is invalid (b). Similarly, a collusive appointment is not valid (c).

Where the head of a math designates his successor, but dies before the latter can be formally initiated, the appointment is nevertheless valid (d).

When the usage in a math consisting of several asthals has been to have only one mohunt, a separation of the office, it would seem, is improper, unless there are special circumstances justifying it (e).

419. Devolution of office of shebait.—(1) The devolution of the office of shebait depends on the terms of the deed or will by which it is created. Where there is no provision in the deed or will as to the succession or where the mode of succession prescribed in the deed or will comes to an end, the title to the property or to the management and control of the property as the case may be, follows the ordinary rules of inheritance according to Hindu law; in other words it follows the line of inheritance from the founder and passes to his heirs (f), unless there has been some usage or course of dealing

---

(u) Gredharee Doss v. Nundokissore Doss (1867) 11 M.I.A. 405, 428; Genda Puri v. Chatar Puri (1887) 9 All. 1, 13 I.A. 100; Ramalingam v. Vythilingam (1893) 16 Mad. 490, 20 I.A. 150; Ram Parkash Das v. Anand Das (1916) 43 I.A. 73, 43 Cal. 707, 33 I.C. 583, ('16) A.P.C. 256; Lahar Puri v. Puran Nath (1915) 42 I.A. 115, 37 All. 298, 29 I.C. 724, ('15) A.P.C. 4; Bhagaban v. Ram Prapanna (1895) 22 Cal. 843 [P.C.]: Madho Das v. Kamta Das (1878) 1 All. 539; Vidyapurna v. Vidyanidhi (1904) 27 Mad. 435; Trimbakpuri v. Ganga Bai (1887) 11 Bom. 514; Bishambar Das v. Mst. Phulgari (1930) 11 Lah. 673, 125 I.C. 621, ('30) A.L. 715; Premanand Bharaty v. Yogendra Bharaty (1965) Ker. L.T. 824.

(v) Sital Das v. Sant Ram ('54) A.S.C. 606.

(w) Mahanath Ramji v. Lachhu (1902) 7 C.W.N. 145.

(x) (1954) S.C.R. 1005, ('54) A.S.C. 282. Also see Raj Kali Kuer v. Ram Rattan Pandey (1955) 2 S.C.R. 186, ('55) A.S.C. 493.

(y) Sethuramaswamiar v. Meruswamiar (1918) 45 I.A. 1, 9, 41 Mad. 296, 305, 43 I.C. 803, ('17) A.P.C. 190.

(z) Gobinda v. Ram Charan Das (1925) 52 Cal. 748, 89 I.C. 804, ('25) A.C. 1107.

(a) (1925) 52 Cal. 748, 89 I.C. 804, ('25) A.C. 1107, supra.

(*a*1) Ramaprapanna v. Sudarsan ('61) A. Orissa 137.

(*a*2) Girjanand v. Bhagwan ('67) A.P. 101.

(b) Ramalingam v. Vythilingam (1893) 20 I.A. 150, 16 Mad. 490; Nataraja v. Kailasam, (1921) 48 I.A. 1, 44 Mad. 283, 57 I.C. 564, ('21) A.P.C. 84.

(c) Ram Parkash Das v. Anand Das (1916) 43 I.A. 73, 43 Cal. 707, 33 I.C. 583, ('16) A.P.C. 256.

(d) Krishnagiri v. Shridhar (1922) 46 Bom. 655, 67 I.C. 129, ('22) A.B. 202.

(e) Ram Charan v. Gobinda (1928) 56 I.A. 104, 56 Cal. 894, 114 I.C. 571, ('29) A.P.C. 65.

(f) Chokalinga Sethurayar v. Arumanayakam ('69) A.S.C. 569; Ganesh Chunder Dhur v. Lal Behary Dhur (1936) 63 I.A. 448, 38 Bom. L.R. 1250, 164 I.C. 347, (36) A.P.C. 318; Bhaba Tarini Debi v. Asha Lata Debi (1943) 2 Cal. 137, 207 I.C. 377, ('43) A.P.C. 89; Surendra Narayan Sarbadhi-

which points to a different mode of devolution (g), e.g., devolution on a single heir (h). This rule applies also where the right of nomination is given to a committee, but the committee has ceased to exist (i). But this rule cannot be applied so as to vest the shebaitship in persons who, according to the usages of the worship, cannot perform the rites of the office (j).

There is no power in a shebait to relinquish his right so as to exclude his heirs where under the terms of the endowment the right of shebaitship is inherited by heirs in direct line (*j*1).

(2) On the view that Shebaiti is property, the Supreme Court in Angurbala v. Debobrata (k) recognised the right of a female to succeed to the religious office of Shebaitship, where the question for consideration was as to the applicability of the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, 1937. But while the right to such office is property, it involves also substantial elements of duty. In the above case it was said: "both the elements of office and property, of duties and personal interest are blended together (in such offices) and neither can be detached from the other". In respect of such offices especially where they are attached to public institutions, the duties are to be regarded as primary and that the rights and emoluments are only appurtenant to the duties (l).

(3) When the office has become vested by descent in more than one person, it is lawful for the parties interested to arrange among themselves for the due execution of the functions belonging to the office in turn or in some settled order and sequence (m). If the parties do not agree, then, if the right to worship carries with it the right to receive offerings, any one of them may sue for a division of the right just as he may sue for partition of the joint family property, and to have periods fixed during which he may exercise the right. Such a right is "property" liable to partition, and the joint owners are entitled to perform the worship in turn (n). But if the right to worship does not carry with it the right to receive offerings, a suit for a division of the right does not lie. In such a case the parties are bare managers or trustees, and the debutter property must be managed by them

---

kari v. Bhola Nath Ray Chaudhuri (1944) 1 Cal. 139. Also see Manathunainatha v. Sundaralingam ('71) A.M. 1 (F.B.). Reference may also be made to Venugopala v. Krishnaswamy ('71) A.M. 262 [Right of heir of founder].

(g) Gossami Sri Gridhariji v. Romanlalji (1890) 17 Cal. 3, 16 I.A. 137; Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi (1905) 32 Cal. 129, 31 I.A. 203; Gnanasambanda v. Velu (1900) 23 Mad. 271, 27 I.A. 69; Janoki v. Gopal (1883) 9 Cal. 766, 10 I.A. 32; Rajah Vurmah v. Ravi Vurmah (1876) 1 Mad. 235, 4 I.A. 76; Rajah Muttu v. Perianayagum (1874) 1 I.A. 209; Mohan v. Madhsudan (1910) 32 All. 461, 6 I.C. 77; Sheo Prasad v. Aya Ram (1907) 29 All. 663, (1918) 45 I.A. 1, 41 Mad. 296, 43 I.C. 806, ('17) A.P.C. 190, supra; Sheoratan v. Ram Pargash (1896) 18 All. 227; Chandrika Bakhsh Singh v. Bhola Singh (1938) 13 Luck. 344, 168 I.C. 593, ('37) A.O. 373; Gulab Dass v. Manohar Dass (1938) 13 Luck. 577, 171 I.C. 81, ('37) A.O. 490; Mst. Anuragi Kuer v. Paramanand Pathak (1939) Pat. 171; Jogendra Nath v. Charan Das ('58) A. Orissa 160.

(h) Ayiswaryanandaji v. Sivaji (1926) 49 Mad. 116, 92 I.C. 928, ('26) A.M. 84.

(i) Dhram Narain v. Suraj Narain (1940) All. 815, 193 I.C. 697, ('41) A.A. 1.

(j) Mohan Lalji v. Gordhan Lalji (1913) 35 All. 283, 40 I.A. 97, 19 I.C. 337; Sri Sankareswar v. Bhagbati ('49) AP. 193.

(*j*1) Janki Raman v. Koshalyanandan ('61) A.P. 293.

(k) (1951) S.C.R. 1125, (1952) 2 Cal. 209, ('51) A.S.C. 293.

(l) Raj Kali Kuer v. Ram Rattan Pandey (1955) 2 S.C.R. 186, 189, 190, ('55) A.S.C. 493.

(m) Ramanathan v. Murugappa (1906) 29 Mad. 283, 33 I.A. 139; Meenakshi v. Somasundaram (1921) 44 Mad. 205, 59 I.C. 464, ('21) A.M. 388.

(n) Mitta v. Neerunjun (1874) 14 Beng. L.R. 166, approved in Pramatha Nath v. Pradyumna Kumar (1925) 52 I.A. 245, 52 Cal. 809, 87 I.C. 305, ('25) A.P.C. 139; Mancharam v. Pranshankar (1882) 6 Bom. 298; Limba v. Rama (1889) 13 Bom. 548; Trimbak v. Lakshman (1896) 20 Bom. 495; Sethuramaswamiar v. Meruswamiar (1911) 34 Mad. 470, 4 I.C. 76; Seshacharyulu v. Venkatacharyulu ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 876.

jointly (o). But a civil court is competent to entertain a suit the object of which is to have a scheme framed for the administration of a private Debutter. If the deity is interested in the result of the suit the deity will be made a party and, in cases in which the interests, of the Shebaits are adverse to those of the deity, it will have to be represented by a disinterested person; but if the only dispute relates to the right of management and the deity's interests will not be affected by the adjustment of the individual rights of the shebaits the deity is not a necessary party (p). A worshipper has no unqualified right to sue for a declaration that certain property is debutter property of the idol; if the shebait is negligent or alienates the property in breach of trust either a prospective shebait or a member of the family (in case of a family endowment) may maintain the suit (q). But a suit can be brought by a person who has made large donations to a private Hindu temple against a pujari (*q*1). One of two shebaits cannot sue for his half share of the royalty due to the deity under a lease (r). If the parties are members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, the senior male member is entitled to manage the property; the other members are not entitled to demand the exercise of the right by rotation (s).

The founder himself may appoint joint shebaits (t). In Pramatha Nath v. Pradyumma (u), the question arose whether one of three brothers, who was entitled under an arrangement between themselves to his annual turn of worship, had the right to remove the idol to his own house during his turn of worship. The Judicial Committee held that the idol could not be regarded as a mere chattel, and that the will of the idol as to its location must be respected, and the suit was remanded in order that the idol might appear by a disinterested next friend to be appointed by the Court.

It may sometimes become necessary to distinguish between a shebaitship and bare managership (v). Distinction has also to be drawn at times between a shebait and a pujari (w).

(4) Nomination by will.—There is a conflict of decisions as to whether a shebait can nominate his successor by will. It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that he cannot, unless there be a usage justifying a nomination by will (x). On the other hand it has been held by the High Court of Bombay, that a valid devise may be made of the office of shebait, provided the devisee is a person standing in the line of succession, and is not disqualified by personal unfitness (y). The High Court of Allahabad has taken much the same view as the Calcutta High Court (z). In view, however, of the law now wellsettled that shebaitship is property and not a mere office, shebaitship can be the subject matter of a disposition by will (*z*1). In any case it is clear that where a person is appointed shebait with a power of appoint-

---

(o) Sri Raman v. Sri Gopal (1897) 19 All. 428

(p) Bimal Krishna Ghosh v. Jnanendra Krishna Ghosh (1937) 2 Cal. 105, 172 I.C. 161, ('37) A.C. 338.

(q) Sashi Kumari Debi v. Dhirendra Kishore Ray (1941) 1 Cal. 309, 196 I.C. 241, ('41) A.C. 248.

(*q*1) Ramchand v. Thakur Janki Ballabhji Maharaj ('70) A.S.C. 532.

(r) Baraboni Coal Concern Ltd. v. Gokulananda Mohanta Thakur (1934) 61 I.A. 35, 61 Cal. 313, 147 I.C. 884, ('34) A.P.C. 58.

(s) Thandayaroya v. Shunmugam (1909) 32 Mad. 167, 2 I.C. 314.

(t) Asita Mohan v. Nirode Mohan (1920) 47 I.A. 140, 24 C.W.N. 794, ('20) A.P.C. 129.

(u) (1925) 52 I.A. 245, 52 Cal. 809, 87 I.C. 305, ('25) A.P.C. 139.

(v) Sri Kishan v. Jagannathji (1953) 2 All. 822, ('53) A.A. 289.

(w) Dharam Karan v. Shahzad Kunwar (1953) 2 All. 631, ('53) A.A. 359.

(x) Rajeshwar v. Gopeshwar (1908) 35 Cal. 226.

(y) Mancharam v. Pranshankar (1882) 6 Bom. 298.

(z) Chandranath v. Jadabendra (1906) 28 All. 689; Goswami Puran Lalji v. Ras Bihari Lal (1922) 44 All. 590, 67 I.C. 328, ('22) A.A. 285.

(*z*1) Banku B. Das v. Kashi N. Das. ('63) A.C. 85. Reference may be made to Sovabati Dassi v. Kashi Nath ('72) A.C. 95 for an analysis of the case-law on the point.

ing his successor, he may nominate his successor by an act inter vivos or by will. If he dies without exercising the power, the office reverts to the founder or his heirs (a). It is not competent for a shebait by his own act to alter the line of succession to the office of the Shebait. But if he makes a fresh grant to the existing endowment making a new line of shebaits an essential condition to the grant, the grant may be rejected on behalf of the deity but if it is accepted it must be accepted subject to the condition (b).

419A. Devolution of office of Pujari.—Though a female is personally disqualified from officiating as a Pujari for the shastraically installed and consecrated idols in the temples, the usage of a female succeeding to a priestly office and getting the same performed through a competent deputy has been well-recognised and it is not contrary to textual Hindu law nor opposed to public policy. In Raj Kali Kuer v. Ram Rattan Pandey (c) the Supreme Court upheld such usage. Subject to the proper and efficient discharge of the duties of the office being safeguarded by appropriate action when necessary, a Hindu female has a right to succeed to the hereditary priestly office of a Pujari and Panda held by her husband and to get the duties of the office performed by a substitute except in cases where usage to the contrary is pleaded and established (c).

420. Transfer of right of management.—(1) Sale.—A sale by a shebait or mohunt of his right to manage debutter property is void, even though the transfer may be coupled with an obligation to manage the property in conformity with the trust attached thereto (d). Nor can the right be sold in execution of a decree against him (e). Even if a custom be proved which sanctions the sale of such a right, the Courts should refuse to recognize it, as being against public policy, especially where the sale is made to a stranger for the pecuniary benefit of the vendor. In Rajah Vurmah v. Ravi Vurmah (f), which was a case of a sale by the Urallers (managers) of a certain pagoda of their right to manage the pagoda, the Judicial Committee said: "Their Lordships are of opinion that no custom which can qualify the general principle of law has been established in this case; and they desire to add that if the custom set up was one to sanction not merely the transfer of a trusteeship, but as in this case the sale of a trusteeship for the pecuniary advantage of the trustee, they would be disposed to hold that that circumstance alone would justify a decision that the custom was bad in law."

(2) Gift.—It has been held in Bombay that it is competent to the shebait to renounce his right of management and transfer it without receiving any consideration to a person standing in the line of succession, provided the

---

(a) Annasami v. Ramakrishna (1901) 24 Mad. 219; Ranjit Singh v. Jagannath (1886) 12 Cal. 375; Jagannath v. Runjit Singh (1898) 25 Cal. 354; Radha Nath Mukerji v. Shaktipado Mukherji (1936) 58 All. 1053, 164 I.C. 595, ('36) A.A. 624.

(b) Nirmal Kumar Banerji v. Jyoti Prasad Banerji (1941) 2 Cal. 128, 197 I.C. 763, ('41) A.C. 562.

(c) (1955) 2 S.C.R. 186, (1955) Pat. 530, ('55) A.S.C. 493.

(d) Rajah Vurmah v. Ravi Vurmah (1876) 1 Mad. 235, 4 I.A. 76; Gnanasambanda v. Velu (1900) 23 Mad. 271, 27 I.A. 69; Kuppa v. Dorasami (1882) 6 Mad. 76; Gobinda Ramanuj Das Mohanta v. Mohanta Ramcharan Ramanuj Das (1936) 63 Cal. 326; Biranchi Narayan v. Biranchi Narayan ('53) A. Orissa 333.

(e) Durga v. Chanchal (1881) 4 All. 81; Ganesh v. Shankar (1886) 10 Bom. 395.

(f) (1876) 1 Mad. 235, 4 I.A. 76, 84-85.

transferee is not disqualified by personal unfitness (g). But a transfer by way of a sale to a divided agnatic relation of the transferor will not be upheld. In Bombay the restrictions on alienations of offices are less strictly enforced when the alienee happens to be a member of the family. In the Madras Presidency greater objection would seem to have prevailed in the matter (h). The High Court of Andhra Pradesh has expressed agreement with the Bombay view (i). Where there are several joint shebaits, they may renounce their right in favour of any one of them, provided the arrangement is for the benefit of the endowment (j). The transfer of a shebait right or of the idol with the endowed property is invalid in law (k). A gift of the right of management made to a stranger is not valid, unless it is sanctioned by custom (l). A bona fide compromise by the plaintiff in a suit for the office of shebait relinquishing the claim in favour of the person in possession of the office who would be entitled to it after the plaintiff, is valid (m).

As to transfer of right to receive offerings, see note to § 422.

Removal of image from one temple to another.—The manager of a public temple has no right to remove the image from the temple, in which it is installed and install it in a new building especially when the removal is objected to by a majority of the worshippers (n).

421. Rights of Founder.—(1) According to the Hindu law, when the worship of an idol has been founded, the shebaitship is held to be vested in the founder and his heirs, unless—

(a) he has disposed of it otherwise; or

(b) there has been some usage or course of dealing which points to a different mode of devolution (o) [§ 419].

This principle applies to private as well as public trusts (p). The founder may appoint another person to manage the trust on his behalf and when he does so he can supervise his actions and remove him if he misbehaves. But where the founder hands over all his rights to another and divests himself of every vestige of interest in the matter, he cannot subsequently sue for being restored to the right of management (q).

Every donor contributing at the time of foundation of a trust does not necessarily become a founder of the trust. It may be that in a particular case all the contributors of a trust fund become the founders of the trust itself, but the question when a contributor would become in law a joint founder of the trust would depend not merely upon the fact of his contribution but also upon the surrounding circumstances and the subsequent conduct of the parties (*q*1).

---

(g) Mancharam v. Pranshankar (1882) 6 Bom. 298, 300. Also see Hanmappa v. Hanmantgauda (1947) Bom. 789, ('48) A.B. 233.

(h) Reference may be made to Sheshacharyulu v. Venkatacharyulu ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 876 where the Madras decisions are reviewed.

(i) Sheshacharyulu v. Venkatacharyulu, supra.

(j) Nirad v. Shibadas (1909) 36 Cal. 975, 3 I.C. 76; Narayana v. Ranga (1892) 15 Mad. 183. Also see Bameswar Bamdev v. Anath Nath ('51) A.C. 490.

(k) Surendra Narayan Sarbadhikari v. Bhola Nath Ray Chaudhuri (1944) 1 Cal. 139; Bairagidas v. Udayachandra ('65) A. Orissa 201 (gift).

(l) Rajaram v. Ganesh (1899) 23 Bom. 131; Ukoor Doss v. Chunder (1865) 3 W.R. 152.

(m) Srimathi Sabitri Thakurain v. Mrs. Savi (1933) 12 Pat. 359, 145 I.C. 1, ('33) A.P. 306.

(n) Hari v. Antaji (1920) 44 Bom. 466, 56 I.C. 459, ('20) A.B. 67.

(o) Gossami Sri Gridharji v. Romanlalji (1890) 17 Cal. 3, 16 I.A. 137; Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi (1905) 32 Cal. 129, 31 I.A. 203; Mohan Lalji v. Madhsudan (1910) 32 All. 461, 6 I.C. 77; Kali Krishna v. Makhan Lal (1923) 50 Cal. 233, 72 I.C. 686, ('23) A.C. 160; Sheo Prasad v. Aya Ram (1907) 29 All. 663; Mst. Anuraji Kuer v. Parmanand Pathak (1939) Pat. 171.

(p) Prakash Chandra Nag v. Subodh Chandra Nag (1937) 1 Cal. 515, 170 I.C. 290, ('37) A.C. 67.

(q) Gangaram v. Dooboo (1936) Nag. 111, ('36) A.N. 223.

(*q*1) Thenappa Chettiar v. Karuppan Chettiar ('68) A.S.C. 915.

(2) The ruling in Tagore v. Tagore (r), that all estates of inheritance created by gift or will, so far as they are inconsistent with the general law of inheritance, are void as such, and that by Hindu law no person can succeed thereunder as heir to estates described in terms which English law would designate estates tail, is applicable to an hereditary office and endowment as well as to other immovable property. A Hindu, therefore, cannot by gift or will direct that the office of shebait shall be held by his sons, grandsons and their male descendants in perpetuity (s). The right to the office of shebait is subject to the rules in §§ 372, 382 and 392 (t) above. These rules do not apply to the Dharmakarthaship of a temple, which is not a species of property like shebaitship, and therefore, where the founder provided that the office of trusteeship should be held by his descendants both in the male and the female line, it was held that the provision is valid (u).

As to the appointment as shebait of a person born after the death of the founder, see notes to § 372, "Exceptions to the rule."

(3) Where the founder has prescribed a line of succession of the office of shebait, but the succession to the office has entirely failed, the right of management reverts to the founder and his heirs (v). But the founder is not entitled to alter the line of succession or to interfere in the management, unless he has, by the deed of endowment, reserved the right to do so (w).

(4) Once a grant is made for religious purposes, it becomes irrevocable (x). The beneficial ownership cannot under any circumstances revert to the founder or his heirs. If the objects of the endowment are not carried out, the founder or his heirs may bring a suit to have the funds applied to their lawful purposes, but they cannot resume the grant (y). If the trust fails for want of objects, they may move the Court to apply the funds cy-pres, that is to say, to other objects as nearly as may be of a similar character (z).

Where a trust is made inter vivos for a charity which fails for illegality there is no scope for application of the doctrine of cy-pres unless a general charitable intent can be gathered from the document (*z*1).

---

(r) (1872) I.A. Supp. 47, 9 Beng. L.R. 377.

(s) Gananasambanda v. Velu (1899) 27 I.A. 69, 23 Mad. 271; Gopal Chunder v. Kartick Chunder (1902) 29 Cal. 716 [P.C.]; Chundrachoor Deo v. Bibhutibhushan Deva (1944) 23 Pat. 763. Also see Gokul Chand v. Gopi Nath ('52) A.C. 705 and Ralkishori Dassi v. Official Trustee ('60) A.C. 235, 64 C.W.N. 646.

(t) Manohar Mukherji v. Bhupendranath Mukherji (1933) 60 Cal. 452, 141 I.C. 544, ('32) A.C. 791; Kandarpamohan Goswami v. Akshaychandra Basu (1934) 61 Cal. 106, 150 I.C. 179, ('34) A.C. 379; Ganesh Chunder Dhur v. Lal Behary Dhur (1936) 63 I.A. 448, 38 Bom. L.R. 1250, 163 I.C. 347, ('36) A.P.C. 378.

(u) Manathunainatha Desikar v. Gopala Chettiyar & Ors. (1943) Mad. 858, ('44) A.M. 1.

(v) Jai Bansi v. Chattar (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 181; Hori Dasi v. Secretary of State (1880) 5 Cal. 228; Sheoratan v. Ram Pargash (1896) 18 All. 227; Jagannath v. Runjit Singh (1898) 25 Cal. 354; Gopal Chunder v. Kartick Chunder (1902) 29 Cal. 716; Sheo Prasad v. Aya Ram (1907) 29 All. 663; Chaturbhuj Singh v. Sarada Charan Guha (1932) 11 Pat. 701, 141 I.C. 157, ('33) A.P. 6; Radha Nath Mukerji v. Shakthipada Mukherji (1936) 58 All. 1053, 164 I.C. 595, ('36) A.A. 624; Chandrika Bakhsh Singh v. Bhola Singh (1938) 13 Luck. 344, 168 I.C. 593, ('37) A.O. 373; Gulab Dass v. Manohar Dass (1938) 13 Luck. 577, 171 I.C. 81, ('37) A.O. 490; Chundrachoor Deo v. Bibhutibhushan Deva (1944) 23 Pat. 763.

(w) Gaurikumari v. Ramanimoyi (1923) 50 Cal. 197, 70 I.C. 175, ('23) A.C. 30; Teertaruppa v. Soonderaikijien (1851) Mad. S.D.A. p. 57; Brindaban v. Sri Godamaji (1937) All. 555, 165 I.C. 217, ('37) A.A. 394; Narayan v. Bhuban Mohini, 38 C.W.N. 15; Radhika v. Amrita ('47) A.C. 301, 52 C.W.N. 447.

(x) Juggut Mohini v. Sokheemoney (1871) 14 M.I.A. 289, 302.

(y) Ram Narayan v. Ramoon (1874) 23 W.R. 76; Mohesh Chunder v. Koylash Chunder (1869) 11 W.R. 443.

(z) Mayor of Lyons v. Adv. Gen. of Bengal (1876) 26 W.R. 1.

(*z*1) Karuppannan Ambalam v. Trumalai Ambalam ('62) A.M. 500.

Where there has been no permanent endowment but only a temporary arrangement it is not irrevocable (a).

The person providing the original endowment is the founder. But persons who subsequent to the foundation, furnish additional contributions, do not thereby become founders: their benefaction is regarded as merely an accretion to an existing foundation (b).

See the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 ss. 92 and 93.

422. Offerings.—Offerings made to an idol belong to the idol as much as land dedicated to an idol, and not to the officiating priest, unless there be a custom or an express declaration by the founder to the contrary. Such offerings are intended to contribute to the maintenance of the shrine with all its rites, ceremonies and charities, and not to become the personal property of the priest (c). But there may be cases in which the offerings, though made to the idols, are received by certain persons and when they are so received independently of any obligation to render services they are alienable and attachable (d).

The right to receive offerings from pilgrims resorting to a temple or shrine is inalienable (e). By custom there can be hereditary priesthood in a family, and such right may be analogous to real property. The right to Yajman vritti is a right in property and is heritable and divisible (f).

423. Removal of shebaits and mohunts—Scheme for management.—The Courts have jurisdiction to deal with the managers of public Hindu temples, and, if necessary for the good of the religious endowment, to remove them from their position as managers (g). The Court may also remove a shebait of a private endowment for misconduct and direct him to render accounts for a certain period in its discretion. Though ordinarily all the shebaits must join in a suit on behalf of the idol when the suit is for the removal of a shebait for misconduct, this rule need not be followed. Such a suit by one of the shebaits is maintainable (h). But a shebait whether de jure or de facto must be a party to the suit before he can be removed (i). It is sufficient ground for removing a shebait from his office that in the exercise of his duties he has placed himself in a position, in which the Court thinks that he can no longer faithfully discharge the obligations of the office (j). A member of the interested community may sue in a representative capacity for rendition of accounts of the profits collected by the shebait but is not entitled to call upon the defendant to hand over the funds of the temple except on proof of gross mismanagement or misapplications of the funds (k).

---

(a) (1932) 11 Pat. 701, 141 I.C. 157, ('33) A.P. 6, supra.

(b) Appasami v. Nagappa (1884) 7 Mad. 499; Annasami v. Ramakrishna (1901) 24 Mad. 219; Gossami Sri Gridhariji v. Romanlalji (1889) 16 I.A. 137, 147, 17 Cal. 3, 23; Ananda Chandra v. Braja Lal (1923) 50 Cal. 292, 301-302, 74 I.C. 793, ('23) A.C. 142.

(c) Manohar v. Lakhmiram (1888) 12 Bom. 247, 265, affd. in Chotalal v. Manohar (1900) 24 Bom. 50, 26 I.A. 199; Girijanund v. Sailajanund (1896) 23 Cal. 645; Shibessouree v. Mothooranath (1869) 13 M.I.A. 270, 273 [as to rents].

(d) Nand Kumar Datt v. Ganesh Das (1936) 58 All. 457, 159 I.C. 812, ('36) A.A. 131.

(e) Puncha v. Bindeswari (1916) 43 Cal. 28, 28 I.C. 675, ('16) A.C. 269.

(f) Ghisibai v. Mangilal ('53) M.B. 7; Sidhe Nath v. Prem ('72) A.A. 324.

(g) Chintaman v. Dhondo (1891) 15 Bom. 612; Ram Parkash Das v. Anand Das (1916) 43 I.A. 73, 43 Cal. 707, 33 I.C. 583, ('16) A.P.C. 256; Srinivasa v. Evalappa (1922) 49 I.A. 237, 253-254, 45 Mad. 565, 583-585, 68 I.C. 1, ('22) A.P.C. 325 [concocting of accounts]; Bhagwan Dass v. Jairam Dass ('65) A. Punj. 260.

(h) Nirmal Kumar Banerji v. Jyoti Prasad Banerji (1941) 2 Cal. 128, 197 I.C. 763, ('41) A.C. 562.

(i) Doongarsee v. Tirbhawan (1947) All. 263.

(j) Peary Mohan v. Manohar (1921) 48 I.A. 258, 48 Cal. 1019, 62 I.C. 76, ('22) A.P.C. 235.

(k) Phuttibai v. Shri Dev Mandir (1942) Nag. 555, 202 I.C. 185, ('42) A.N. 105.

But a mere mistake on the part of the manager as to his true legal position or a mere laxity of management on his part not accompanied by any fraud or dishonest misappropriation, does not of necessity afford a ground for removing him from his post of manager, and entrusting it to new hands. In such a case, the Court may appoint a committee to supervise and control him, and, if necessary, frame a scheme for the management of the temple. It does not make any difference that the office is a hereditary office (l).

As to the framing of a scheme, see the Code of Civil Procedure, secs. 92 and 93. No scheme can be framed under those sections in the case of a private endowment (m).

Where a person claiming as his own what is really a public charity appoints a trustee to manage the property, the appointment is invalid (n).

423A. Sadabartas, Tanks, Seats of Learning, Homes for disabled or destitutes.—In a recent decision the Supreme Court (nn) held that a tank can be an object of charity and when a dedication is made in favour of a tank it can be considered as a "charitable institution". The Court, while referring to the statement of law in Mukerjee's standard work did not decide whether such an institution can also be considered as a juristic person.

"Though Mutts and temples are the most common forms of Hindu religious institutions, dedication for religious or charitable purposes need not necessarily take one of these forms and the maintenance of sadabartas, tanks, seats of learning and homes for the disabled or the destitutes and similar institutions are recognized by and were known to Hindu law and when maintained as public institutions, they must be taken to have a legal personality as a math or the deity in a temple has, and the persons in charge of the management would occupy a position of trust".

A school meant for imparting general education to the public would be a charitable institution and such an institution will be regarded as possessing a juristic personality and will be capable of holding property (nnn).

424. Distinction between public and private endowments: Public and Private temples.—(1) Religious endowments are either public or private. In a public endowment the dedication is for the use or benefit of the public. The essential distinction between a public and a private endowment is that in the former the beneficial interest is vested in an uncertain and a fluctuating body of persons, either the public at large or some considerable portion of it answering a particular description; in a private endowment the beneficiaries are definite and ascertained individuals or who within a definite time can be definitely ascertained. The fact that the fluctuating and uncertain body of persons is a section of the public following a particular religious faith or is only a sect of persons of a certain religious persuasion would

---

(l) Annaji v. Narayan (1897) 21 Bom. 556; Damodar v. Bhogilal (1898) 22 Bom. 493; Tiruvengadath v. Srinivasa (1899) 22 Mad. 361; Manohar v. Lakhmiram (1888) 12 Bom. 247 affd. in Chotalal v. Manohar (1900) 24 Bom. 50; Prayag Dass v. Tirumala (1900) 30 Mad. 138, 34 I.A. 78, in app. from 28 Mad. 319; Thackersey v. Hurbhum (1884) 8 Bom. 432; Sivashankara v. Vadagiri (1890) 13 Mad. 6; Nelliappa v. Punnaivanam (1927) 50 Mad. 567, 101 I.C. 420, ('27) A.M. 614.

(m) Gopal Lal Sett v. Purna Chandra Basak (1922) 49 I.A. 100, 49 Cal. 459, 67 I.C. 561, ('22) A.P.C. 253.

(n) Vaidyanatha v. Swaminatha (1924) 51 I.A. 282, 47 Mad. 884, 82 I.C. 804, ('24) A.P.C. 221.

(nn) Venkatakrishna Rao v. Sub-Collector, Ongole ('69) A.S.C. 563.

(nnn) D.A.V. College v. S.N.A.S.H. School ('72) A. Punj. & H. 245 (F.B.).

not make it a private endowment (*n*1). The essence of a public endowment consists in its being dedicated to the public; and in the absence of any document creating the endowment, long user is the material factor from which an inference of dedication may arise. Besides user by the public, conduct of the founder and his descendants is also relevant, and if they in fact held out the temple to be a public one a very strong presumption of dedication would arise (o). When property is set apart for the worship of a family god in which the public are not interested, the endowment is a private one (p). Where the main purpose of the endowment was the puja of deity established by the settlor in a house, and the surplus income was directed to be utilised for feeding the poor and helping students it was held that the trust was a private one and that all the trustees must join in its execution (q). In the Madras State "it is very unusual for a Hindu to construct a temple outside his dwelling house for private worship (r) and the general presumption is that temples in the Southern State are public temples unless the contrary is proved". There is no such presumption in Bengal. In Bombay question arose in some cases whether a temple in which the idol is worshipped by the Vaishnava devotees of the Vallabha cult is a private or public temple on the ground of dedication. It has been held that the historical origin of the temple, the rights exercised by the devotees in regard to the worship in the temple, the consciousness of the manager and the consciousness of the devotees themselves and similar other considerations have to be weighed in deciding the question. If it is shown that the rents and profits of any property are exclusively utilised for the purpose of public charity for a fairly long period, it may be possible to infer dedication of such property to public charity (s).

The question of dedication is a mixed question of law and fact. In an endowment in favour of the idol itself, proof of user by the public without interference is cogent evidence that the dedication was in favour of the public. Performance of Pratishta, which is a ceremony relating to the installation of an idol, may show that there was dedication to the public. The Court will consider all the aspects of the matter (t). When user by the public generally to the extent to which there is a worshipping public in the locality is established, it would be reasonable to presume that the user by the public was as of right, unless there are circumstances clearly suggesting that the user must have been permissive, or that the authorities in charge of the temple have exercised such arbitrary power of exclusion that it can only be ascribed to the private character of the institution (u). As mentioned above the Court will take into consideration all the aspects of the matter and the

---

(*n*1) Ram Saroop Dasji v. S. P. Sahi ('59) S.C. 951; State of Bihar v. Charusila Dasi ('59) S.C. 1002. Deoki Nandan v. Murlidhar ('57) S.C. 133; Nabi Shirazi v. Province of Bengal (1942) 1 Cal. 211, 228.

(o) Pujari Lakshmana v. Subramania, 29 C.W.N. 112 (P.C.)

(p) Reference may be made to Bihar State Board v. Palat Lal ('72) A.S.C. 57 [Bihar Hindu Religious Trusts Act, 1950]. Jugalkishore v. Lakshmandas (1899) 23 Bom. 659.

(q) Prasaddas Pal v. Jagannath Pal (1933) 60 Cal. 538, 144 I.C. 894, ('33) A.C. 519. See, however, State of Bihar v. Charusila Dasi ('59) S.C. 1002.

(r) Peesapati v. Kanduri (1915) M.W.N. 842; Nallakaruppan v. Commissioner H.R. & C. Endowments ('66) A.M. 99.

(s) Ranchhoddas v. Mahalaxmi Vahuji (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 982. Affirmed in appeal Gosvami Shri Mahalaxmi Vahuji v. Ranchhoddas ('70) A.S.C. 2025. Also see Sri Ram v. Prabhu Dayal ('72) A. Raj. 180.

(t) Deoki Nandan v. Murlidhar ('57) A.S.C. 133. The question at times becomes somewhat difficult; Sarat Chandra v. Rabindra Nath ('57) A.C. 11.

(u) Narayan v. Gopal ('60) S.C. 100.

pertinent circumstances. The grants and gifts made to the temple would be pertinent to the enquiry. The manner in which accounts of the temple have been maintained would also be a pertinent factor (*u*1). Where evidence in regard to the foundation of a temple is not clearly available the Court will consider all these aspects as also certain other facts which are treated as relevant. Is the temple built in such an imposing manner that it may prima facie appear to be a public temple? Are the members of the public entitled to take part in the festivals and ceremonies arranged in the temple? Are their offerings accepted as a matter of right? The participation of the members of the public in the darshan in the temple and in the daily acts of worship or in the celebrations of festival occasions may be very important factors to consider in determining the character of the temple (*u*2). In making the requisite induction the Court will also address to the questions such as: Are the temple expenses met from contributions made by the public? Whether the sevas and the utsavas conducted in the temple are those usually conducted in public temples? Have the management as well as the devotees been treating the temple as a public temple (*u*3)? A temple which began as a private temple may, in course of time, become a public temple by express or implied dedication (v). If a temple is proved to have originated as a private temple or its origin is unknown or lost in antiquity then there must be proof to show that it is being used as a public temple (*v*1)'.

Important legal consequences flow from the distinction between private and public endowments and they have a material bearing on the question as to what remedies are open to the parties in cases where there is maladministration of the endowment by the manager or trustee. A private endowment lies outside the purview of the Religious Endowments Act of 1863, and the Charitable and Religious Trust Act of 1920, and what is more, sec. 92 of the C.P. Code cannot be invoked unless the endowment is of public character.

In a recent decision (*v*2) the Supreme Court pointed out that the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to frame a scheme for the management of a temple even though there is a private and not a public trust. Section 92 of the C.P. Code would not apply to a suit in respect of the temple. Any person who has made large donations for the maintenance of the temple has a substantial interest to maintain a suit on behalf of the deity to prevent mismanagement and protect the property of the temple. The pujari who had set up a personal title to the temple properties and had converted the properties to his own use was removed from management and possession and appropriate directions were given by the Court.

(2) According to English law the beneficiaries in a private trust if they are sui juris and of one mind can at their option modify or put an end to the trust (w). In Konwar Doorganath v. Ram Chunder (x), their Lordships of the Privy Counsel observed: "Where the temple is a public temple the dedi-

---

(*u*1) Ranchhoddas v. Mahalaxmi Vahuji supra, affirmed in appeal, see f.n. (*u*3) below.

(*u*2) Tilkayat Shri Govindlalji v. State of Rajasthan ('63) S.C. 1638, 1648.

(*u*3) Goswami Shri Mahalaxmi Vahuji v. Ranchhoddas ('70) A.S.C. 2025.

(v) V. Mahadeva v. Commissioner, H.R.E. ('56) A.M. 522; Bala Krishna v. Ganesh Prasad ('52) A. Orissa 203.

(*v*1) see f.n. (*u*3) above.

(*v*2) Ramchand v. Jankiballabhji ('70) A.S.C. 532; Thenappa Chettiar v. Keruppan Chettiar ('68) A.S.C. 915 (foundation for conducting certain pujas).

(w) Underhill on Trust and Trustees Act, 55.

(x) (1877) 2 Cal. 341, 4 I.A. 52, 58.

cation may be such that the family itself could not put an end to it but in the case of a family idol the consenus of the whole family might give the estate another direction." The observation was an obiter dictum pure and simple, as the property in dispute was not found to be debutter at all but the observation was treated as authoritative in a Calcutta case (y) where it was held that properties dedicated to a family idol may be converted into secular property by the consensus of the family and that in that particular case the properties had been so converted with common consent. The correctness of this decision has been doubted in subsequent cases, and it has been said that even if the consent of the family could effect such a diversion, it must be the consent of all members of the family, both males and females, as they are all interested in the worship of the idol (z).

As to the tests for determining whether a temple is a public or private charity, also see the cases in foot-note (b). Where there was a complete dedication, the temple being built in a place removed from the residential house of the testator and the public having free access, it was held that the temple was a public temple and the existence of a samadhi in memory of religious persons is not inconsistent with this conclusion (c). In a case where the members of the family treated the temple as a family property, dividing profits (offerings or rents), excluding the public from worship at the time of marriages and other ceremonies in their home, erecting samadhis in honour of the dead, it was held that the mere fact the public are not turned away ordinarily from the temple worship in the temple does not show that it was a public temple (d). Remission of land revenue in respect of the land, on which the temple stands is one of the decisive factors in determining whether the temple was a public or private one (e).

The Religious Endowments Act, 1863.—The Religious Endowments Act, 1863, does not apply to private endowments (a). As to the history of the Act and the cases to which it applies, see Mulla's Code of Civil Procedure, notes to s. 92. See also Prannath Sarasvati's Tagore Lectures on the Hindu Law of Endowments.

Though maths as a rule are public endowments, a math may be a private institution (f).

425. Right of worship.—Where a temple is established for the worship of members of a particular sect, persons belonging to other sects are not entitled to worship in the temple (g).

The right of entry and worship in a public temple can be regulated as to time and hours during which members of the public would be allowed access to the shrine. It is competent to the temple authorities to make and enforce rules to ensure good order and proper worship (h).

Fees for admission to the sanctuary of a temple.—Rules prohibiting, except upon payment of fixed fees, entry into the inner sanctuary of a temple, are illegal (i).

426. Limitation.—(1) Unauthorized alienation by shebait and mohunt.—Where the head of a math grants a permanent lease of math property or sells

---

(y) Gobinda Kumar v. Debendra Kumar (1907) 12 C.W.N. 98.

(z) Gopal v. Radha (1925) 41 Cal. L.J. 396, 426, 88 I.C. 616, ('25) A.C. 996; Chandi Charan v. Dulal Chandra (1927) 54 Cal. 30, 98 I.C. 684, ('26) A.C. 1083.

(a) Protab Chandra v. Brojnath (1892) 19 Cal. 275.

(b) Puraviya v. Poonachi 40 Mad. L.J. 289, 62 I.C. 655; Parmanand v. Nihal Chand (1938) 65 I.A. 252, 1938 Lah. 453, 40 Bom. L.R. 907, 175 I.C. 459, ('38) A.P.C. 195.

(c) Premo v. Sheo Nath Pandit (1933) 8 Luck. 266, 140 I.C. 896, ('33) A.O. 22.

(d) Bhagwan Din v. Gir Harsarwoop (1940) 15 Luck. 1, 185 I.C. 305, 67 I.C. 1, ('40) A.P.C. 7. Reference may also be made to Bihar State Board of Religious Trust v. Biseshwar Das ('71) A.S.C. 2057.

(e) Laxmanrao v. Govindrao, (1950) Nagpur 1, (1950) A. Nagpur 213.

(f) Sathappayyar v. Periasami (1891) 14 Mad. 1.

(g) Sankaralinga v. Rajeswara (1908) 31 Mad. 236, 35 I.A. 176.

(h) Nar Hari Shastri v. Badrinath Temple Committee (1952) S.C.R. 849, ('52) S.C. 245; Commissioner, Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Sri Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar (1954) S.C.R. 1005, 1031, ('54) A.S.C. 282.

(i) Asharam v. Manager of Dakore Temple Committee (1920) 44 Bom. 150, 55 I.C. 956, ('20) A.B. 153.

Table showing relevant Articles relating to religious and charitable endowments under the old Indian Limitation Act, 9 of 1908 as amended in 1929 and the new Limitation Act 36 of 1963.

| Indian Limitation Act 9 of 1908 | | | | Limitation Act 36 of 1963 | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Article | Description of suit | Limitation Period of | Time from which period begins to run | Article | Description of suit | Period of Limitation | Time from which period begins to run |
| 134A | Suit to set aside a transfer of immovable property comprised in a Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist religious or charitable endowment, made by a manager thereof for a valuable consideration. | Twelve years | When the transfer becomes known to the plaintiff. | 94 | Suit to set aside a transfer of immovable property comprised in a Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist religious or charitable endowment, made by a manager thereof for a valuable consideration. | Twelve years | When the transfer becomes known to the plaintiff. |
| 48B | Like suit to set aside a sale of movable property. | Three years | When the sale becomes known to the plaintiff. | 95 | Like suit to set aside a transfer of movable property. | Three years | When the transfer becomes known to the plaintiff. |
| 134B | Suit by the manager of a Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist religious or charitable endowment to recover possession of immovable property comprised in the endowment which has been transferred by a previous manager for a valuable consideration. | Twelve years | The death, resignation or removal of the transferor. | 96 | Suit by the manager of a Hindu, Muslim, or Buddhist religious or charitable endowment to recover possession of movable or immovable property comprised in the endowment which has been transferred by a previous manager for a valuable consideration. | Twelve years | The date of the death, resignation or removal of the transferor or the date of appointment of the plaintiff as manager of the endowment, whichever is later. |
| 134C | Like suit to recover possession of movable property which has been sold by a previous manager. | Twelve years | The death, resignation or removal of the seller. | | | | |

Note: Arts. 134A and 48B (new Arts. 94 and 95) apply to suit by persons interested in the endowment. Arts. 134B and 134C (new Art. 96) apply to suits by the successor in office of the transferor or seller.

Art. 134-B (new Art. 96) would apply to suit to set aside a lease of property comprised under a religious endowment, and where more than 12 years elapse, the lease is binding on the actual mohunt and he can only recover the agreed rent (j). This Article has no application to an execution sale (k).

The transfer of a portion of a muth and the properties appertaining thereto by one mohunt in favour of another in settlement of bona fide dispute between the two mohunts about the office of the mohunt of the muth is a transfer for a valuable consideration.

(j) Ram Kishore Das Mohanta v. Ganga Gobinda Patil (1937) 2 Cal. 242, 172 I.C. 315, ('37) A.C. 305.
(k) Sudarsan v. Ram Kirpal 77 I.A. 42.

it without legal necessity, or where the math property is sold in execution of a decree passed against him for a debt not contracted for a legal necessity, the question arises as to the period of limitation for a suit by his successor for possession of the property. Difficulties frequently arose as regards this question, and the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, was amended by Act 1 of 1928 to meet those difficulties. This was done by inserting a new paragraph in sec. 10 of the Act of 1908, and four new articles in Schedule I to the Act, namely, 134A, 48B, 134B and 134C. The Act of 1928 came into force on the 1st January, 1929. The Act of 1908 has now been replaced by the new Limitation Act 36 of 1963.

Now see corresponding Section 10 and corresponding Articles 94, 95 and 96 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

When the sale is in execution of a money decree against the shebait or manager personally it is a void sale, and time runs against the purchaser from the date of sale (l).

(2) Amendments:

Originally sec. 10 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, prior to its amendment hereinafter mentioned, stood as follows:

"10. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, no suit against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for any specific purpose, or against his legal representatives or assigns (not being assigns for valuable consideration), for the purpose of following in his or their hands such property, or the proceeds thereof, or for an account of such property or proceeds, shall be barred by any length of time."

Before the Indian Limitation (Amendment) Act I of 1929, neither a shebait nor a mohunt was regarded as a trustee of the debutter property. By that Act, sec. 10 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, was amended, and the following paragraph was inserted in it:—

"For the purposes of this section any property comprised in a Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist religious or charitable endowment shall be deemed to be property vested in trust for a specific purpose, and the manager of any such property shall be deemed to be the trustee thereof."

By the same Act four new articles were inserted in Schedule I to the Act 9 of 1908. The old Indian Limitation Act 9 of 1908 has now been repealed and replaced by the new Limitation Act 36 of 1963.

(3) Where a shebait or mohunt is dispossessed of debutter property during his minority he is entitled to sue for possession within twelve years from the date of the dispossession or within three years from the date on which he attains majority, whichever is the longer period. The fact that he has no proprietary interest in debutter property does not disentitle him to the benefit of the provisions of sec. 8 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 (m).

---

(l) Subbaiya v. Mustapha, 50 I.A. 295; Sudarsan v. Ram Kirpal, 77 I.A. 42; Guranditta v. Amar Dass ('65) A.S.C. 1966 [date of effective possession where the Mahant represented the institution: Akhara].

(m) Jagadindra Nath v. Hemanta (1905) 32 Cal. 129, 31 I.A. 203.

Now see corresponding sec. 8 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

Where a shebait appointed for life died and his heirs took possession of the property, the suit by the heirs of the founder to recover the property was held to be governed by Art. 144 (Art. 65 of 1963 Limitation Act) and not by Art. 120 (n).

(4) Suit for possession of hereditary office.—A suit for possession of an hereditary office must be brought within 12 years from the date when the defendant takes possession of the office adversely to the plaintiff or the plaintiff's predecessor in title (o). See Art. 107 of the Limitation Act, 1963.

Note that the office of a hereditary priest (yajman vritti) is nibhanda and is ranked among the hereditary rights of immovable property (p).

(5) Suit by reversioner against alienee of widow for recovery of shebaiti right.—A suit by a reversioner for recovery of a shebaiti right from a person to whom a widow, who had succeeded to the right on the death of her husband, had alienated it is governed by Article 124 of the Limitation Act and not by Article 141 and the period of limitation begins to run against the reversioner only when the succession opens to him (q).

Now see Articles 107 and 65 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

---

(n) Chandrika Bakhsh Singh v. Bhola Singh (1938) 13 Luck. 344, 168 I.C. 593, ('37) A.O. 373.

(o) Gnanasambanda v. Velu (1900) 23 Mad. 271, 27 I.A. 69.

(p) Ghelabhai v. Har Gowan (1912) 36 Bom. 94, 12 I.C. 928; Dhuram Narain v. Surai Narain (1940) All. 815, 193 I.C. 697, ('41) A.A. 1.

(q) Kalipada v. Palani Bala (1953) S.C.R. 503, ('53) A.S.C. 125.

CHAPTER XXII.

MARRIAGE

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU MARRIAGE ACT, 1955

Note.—Material and important changes in the law relating to marriage have been brought about by recent legislation embodied in the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. Those changes have been briefly pointed out in the Introductory Note to that Act. The Act abrogates all the rules of the law of marriage previously applicable to Hindus, whether by virtue of any text or rule of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law, in respect of all matters dealt with in the Act. It also supersedes any other law, contained in any Central or State legislation in force immediately before it came into operation in so far as such legislation is inconsistent with the provisions contained in it. The rules in the following paragraphs of this Chapter state the law prior to the coming into operation of that Act.

427. Marriage, Minority, Lunacy, Fraud.—(1) Marriage, according to the Hindu law, is a holy union for the performance of religious duties (a). It is not a contract; the mere fact, therefore, that a marriage was brought about during the minority of either party thereto, does not render the marriage invalid (b). But even considering Hindu marriage to be entirely a sacrament, as the acceptance of the bride is a necessary and indispensable part of the ceremony a person whose loss of reason is complete should be held incompetent to accept the bride, and the marriage must be regarded as invalid on that ground. There are however degrees of insanity, and if the mental aberration is not of such a character as to make the bridegroom incapable of understanding the ceremonies of marriage and taking an intelligent part in them, the marriage should be held to be valid (c). When a congenital idiot's marriage was arranged by his father and his wife gave birth to two sons it was held that he was lawfully married (d).

(2) A marriage brought about by force or fraud is altogether invalid (e) [§ 434].

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that marriage is a sanskara or sacrament. It is the last of the ten sacraments, enjoined by the Hindu religion for purifying the body from inherited taint (f). The same view has been taken by the High Court of Madras (g).

Marriage with an impotent.—It has been held in some cases that marriage of a person who is impotent and has not been able to consummate the marriage is a nullity (h).

---

(a) Sundrabai v. Shivanarayana (1908) 32 Bom. 81.

(b) Purshotamdas v. Purshotamdas (1897) 21 Bom. 23, 30-31; Atma Ram v. Banku Mal (1930) 11 Lah. 598, 125 I.C. 369, ('30) A.L. 561. See also Khwaja Muhammad Khan v. Husaini Begam (1910) 32 All. 410, 37 I.A. 152 [a Mahomedan case].

(c) Ratneshwari v. Bhagwati, 1949 F.C.R. 715, ('50) A.F.C. 142 (per Mukherjea J); Mouji Lal v. Chandrabati (1911) 38 Cal. 700, 706, 38 I.A. 122, 125, 11 I.C. 502. But see Venkatacharyulu v. Rangacharyulu (1891) 14 Mad. 316, 318.

(d) Amirthammal v. Vallimayil Ammal (1942) Mad. 807, 203 I.C. 648, ('42) A.M. 693.

(e) (1891) 14 Mad. 316, 320, supra; Kunta Devi v. Sri Ram ('63) A. Punj. 235.

(f) (1908) 32 Bom. 81, supra. But see A v. B (1953) Bom. 486, ('52) A.B. 486.

(g) Gopalkrishnam v. Venkatnarasa (1914) 37 Mad. 273 [F.B.], 17 I.C. 308, ('14) A.M. 432, overruling Govindarazulu v. Devarabhotla (1904) 27 Mad. 206 [a case of Brahmans]; Kameswara v. Veeracharlu (1911) 34 Mad. 422, 8 I.C. 195 [a case of Sudras].

(h) Sm. Ratan Moni Debi v. Nagendra Narain Singh (1949) A.C. 404; A v. B ('52) A.B. 486. Contra Malla Reddy v. Subbama ('56) A. Andh. Pra. 237. Also see Kantilal v. Vimla ('52) A. Saurashtra 44. But see Ram Devi v. Raja Ram ('63) A. All. 564, (1963) All. L.J. 658.

Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, (XIX of 1929).—This Act restrains the solemnisation of marriages between children. The word "child" has been defined in the Act as a male under eighteen years of age and a female under fifteen years of age. It makes it penal for a male under the age of eighteen years to marry a girl under the age of fifteen years. It also prescribes punishment for parents and guardians who are parties to a marriage between a minor male and a girl under the age of fourteen years. But the Act does not affect the validity of such marriages. The material provisions of the Act are set out in Appendix III below.

428. Forms of Marriage.—(1) The ancient Hindu law recognized eight forms of marriage, of which four were approved forms, and four unapproved. The approved forms were Brahma, Daiva, Arsha and Prajapatya. The unapproved forms were Asura, Gandharva, Rakshasa and Paishacha. The only forms of marriage now recognized are—

(i) the Brahma form, which is one of the approved forms; and

(ii) the Asura form, which is one of the unapproved forms.

(2) Where the father or other guardian of the bride gives the bride in marriage without receiving any consideration from the bridegroom for giving the girl in marriage the marriage is called Brahma. But where he receives such consideration, which is technically called shulka or bride's price, the marriage is called Asura, even though it may have been performed according to the rites prescribed for the Brahma form. The test is twofold: "There shall", as the Supreme Court has laid down, "not only be benefit to the father, but the benefit shall form a consideration for the sale of the bride" (*h*1). Bearing of the expenditure of the marriage wholly or partly by the bridegroom of the parent is not a criterion of the matter. Such an indirect gain by the bride's father cannot be regarded as shulka or price for giving the bride in marriage (*h*2). The mere giving of a present to the bride or to her mother as a token of compliment to her does not render it an Asura marriage (i).

It has been held in Madras that a marriage in which memmekanom is taken need not necessarily be a marriage in Asura form. The decision would depend upon the fact as to whether payment was actually taken as a price for the bride, or as a matter of form only out of respect for a custom (j).

(3) Hindus belonging to any class may marry either in the Brahma form or the Asura form. Thus a Brahman may contract an Asura marriage, and a Shudra may contract a Brahma marriage (k).

The Brahma form is the only one now left of the four approved forms. It required that the bridegroom should be "a man learned in the Veda," and it was originally peculiar to Brahmans. But even a Shudra may now marry in that form. The Asura form is the only one now left, of the four unapproved forms. What distinguishes the one form from the other is that in the Brahma form it is a gift of the girl pure and simple, in the Asura form it is a sale of the bride for pecuniary consideration. That consideration is called shulka.

Of the other three unapproved forms, only the Gandharva requires notice. The Gandharva marriage is the voluntary union of a youth and a damsel which springs from

---

(*h*1) Veerappa v. Michael ('63) A.S.C. 933.
(*h*2) Veerappa v. Michael, supra.
(i) Chunilal v. Surajram (1909) 33 Bom. 433, 3 I.C. 765; Authikesavulu v. Ramanujam (1909) 32 Mad. 512, 3 I.C. 541; Hira v. Hansji (1913) 37 Bom. 295, 17 I.C. 949; Govind v. Savitri (1919) 43 Bom. 173, 177, 47 I.C. 883, (18) A.B. 93; Kailasanatha Mudaliar v. Parasakthi Vadivanni (1935) 58 Mad. 488, ('35) A.M. 740.
(j) Muthu v. Narayanan (1949) 2 M.L.J. 804, (1950) A.M. 351.
(k) Bhaoni v. Maharaj Singh (1881) 3 All. 738. Also see Kishan Dei v. Sheo Paltan ('26) A.A. 1.

desire and sensual inclination. It has at times been erroneously described as an euphemism for concubinage. This view is based on a total misconception of the leading texts of the Smritis. It may be noted that the essential marriage ceremonies are as much a requisite part of this form of marriage as of any other unless it is shown that some modification of those ceremonies has been introduced by custom in any particular community or caste. In an Allahabad case (*k*1) it was remarked that the Gandharva form had become obsolete. The Madras High Court has expressed the view that the Gandharva form of marriage is not obsolete in the State of Madras (l). In Calcutta the view has been taken that this form of marriage has fallen into disuse and it is only by custom that it is validated in case of Bairagis (m). It has been held in Patna that a minor girl is incompetent to contract a marriage in Gandharva form (n); the Patna High Court has decided however that the Gandharva form of marriage is not invalid according to the Mithila school of Hindu law; at any rate the relationship created by such marriage is sufficient to entitle the wife to claim maintenance from her husband (o). Among Shudras a marriage in the katar form (in which the bride is given to the bridegroom with a sword or dagger in place of the bridegroom) is not a valid marriage, in the absence of proof that the ordinary ceremonies of a Hindu marriage were performed (p). It is not necessary that a marriage should take place in the presence of a priest. Tying up of a thali in the presence of an idol was considered to be a valid form of marriage in Madras (q).

Shulka was originally regarded as the property of the bride's father. Though marriages by sale fell into disrepute, the custom of paying the shulka remained; but it was no longer regarded as the property of the bride's father; it came to be regarded as the bride's stridhana. Though shulka is now regarded as stridhana, it still preserves its original character in that it devolves in the first instance, unlike stridhana of other kinds, on the bride's mother and brothers [§ 146]. Although a marriage when performed in the Asura form is valid, an agreement to pay money to the father in consideration of such marriage is not valid and the money cannot be recovered by suit. This is on the ground that such an agreement is to be regarded as opposed to public policy (r). The questions of validity of the marriage and invalidity of such consideration require to be distinguished. Error is almost sure to arise if the distinction between a point of status and the point of a contract falling within the purview of sec. 23 of the Act is not emphasized. In a decision of the High Court of Travancore-Cochin (s) this aspect of the matter appears to have been overlooked.

429. Presumption as to form.—When there is a question as to whether a marriage was in the Brahma form or the Asura form, the Court will presume, even where the parties are Shudras, that it was in the Brahma form; in other words, that no consideration for the marriage passed from the bridegroom to the father or other guardian of the bride. But this presumption may be rebutted by showing that the marriage was in the Asura form (t).

Where a woman dies without leaving issue, if her marriage was in the Brahma form her stridhana devolves in one way, and if in Asura form, it devolves in another way (§§ 147, 151). Hence the importance of the distinction between the two forms of marriage. The essential ceremonies for these forms of marriage are the same as will be seen presently.

---

(*k*1) See foot-note (k) at page 508.

(l) Deivani v. Chidambaram (1955) 1 M.L.J. 120, ('54) A.M. 657; Brindavana v. Radhamani (1889) 12 Mad. 72.

(m) Lalit Mohan v. Shyamapada Das ('52) A.C. 771.

(n) Bamdeb Das v. Raja Brajasunder Deb (1938) 17 Pat. 134.

(o) Kamani Devi v. M. D. Sir Kameshwar Singh (1946) 25 Pat. 58.

(p) Ramsaran Singh v. Mahabir Sewak Singh (1934) 61 I.A. 106, 147 I.C. 667, ('34) A.P.C. 74.

(q) In re Ponnuswami ('50) A.M. 777.

(r) Venkata Kristnayya v. Venkatachalam, 32 Mad. 185 (F.B.). See Pollock and Mulla's Contract Act, S. 23, "Marriage brocage contracts" where some cases on the subject are considered. Also see Gopi Tihadi v. Gokhei Panda, A.I.R. (1954) Orissa 17.

(s) Chidambara Iyer v. Ananthakrishna, A.I.R. (1954) Tra-Co. 231. [It is submitted that the execution of a promissory note can make no difference].

(t) Mussumat Thakoor Deyhe v. Rai Baluk Ram (1866) 11 M.I.A. 139; Veerappa v. Michael ('63) S.C. 933; Chunilal v. Surajram (1909) 33 Bom. 433, 437, 3 I.C. 765; Jagannath v. Narayan (1910) 34 Bom. 553, 7 I.C. 459; Authikesavulu v. Ramanujam (1909) 32 Mad. 512, 3 I.C. 541; Hira v. Hansji (1913) 37 Bom. 295, 17 I.C. 949 (remarriage of divorced Koli woman); Kishan Dei v. Sheo Paltan (1926) 48 All. 126, 90 I.C. 358, ('26) A.A. 1 [marriage in Karao form]; Kamla Parsad v. Murli Manohar (1934) 13 Pat. 550, 152 I.C. 446, ('34) A.P. 398; Gopi Tihadi v. Gokhel Panda ('54) A. Orissa 17.

Pat-marriage.—A Pat-marriage of a Hindu widow, in the absence of any evidence to show payment to the bride's relations is to be regarded as marriage in an approved form (u).

Such marriage with a divorced woman would not be regarded to be in an unapproved form, because a payment was made for securing the divorce (v).

For presumption as to legality of marriage, see § 438.

430. No restriction as to number of wives.—A Hindu may marry any number of wives, although he has a wife or wives living (w), except in those States in which Anti-bigamy Acts have been passed.

The Bombay Prevention of Hindu Bigamous Marriage Act (XXV of 1946) was held to be valid when it was challenged on the ground that it contravened the fundamental rights guaranteed under Articles 14, 15 and 25 of the Constitution (x). The Madras Hindu (Bigamy Prevention and Divorce) Act VI of 1949 also was held not to offend Articles 15 and 25 of the Constitution (y).

431. Only one husband at a time.—A woman cannot marry another man while her husband is alive, except where her marriage has been dissolved by divorce [§ 441].

432. Remarriage of widows.—The remarriage of Hindu widows is now expressly legalized by the Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856.

The rule of prohibited degrees of marriage apply to the case of a remarriage by a widow except where such marriage is sanctioned by custom (a).

Forfeiture of property by remarriage.—See notes to § 43, No. 4 (widow), under the head "remarriage."

433. Who may give in marriage.—(1) The Shastras enjoin the marriage of a female before she arrives at puberty, and prescribe rules for guardianship in marriage. The following persons are qualified, in the order mentioned below, to give a girl in marrige:—

According to the Mitakshara school—

(1) the father;

(2) the paternal grandfather;

(3) the brother (b);

(4) other paternal relations of the girl in order of propinquity;

(5) the mother.

According to the Bengal school.—The Bengal school places the maternal grandfather and maternal uncle before the mother. In other respects the rules are the same as under the Mitakshara.

(2) The marriage of a male minor is not prohibited, and his lawful guardian may consent to his marriage.

---

(u) Mahadeo v. Chandrabhagabai (1946) Nag. 378.
(v) Kodu v. Lola (1947) Nag. 885.
(w) Virasami v. Appasami (1863) 1 Mad. H.C. 375.
(x) State v. Narsu Appa (1951) Bom. 775, (1951) 53 Bom. L.R. 779.
(y) Srinivasa Iyer v. Saraswathi Ammal (1953) Mad. 78, ('52) A.M. 193.
(a) Akshoy Kumar v. Jatindra Nath ('55) A.C. 612.
(b) Nek Ram v. Emperor ('35) A.A. 920.

Mother.—Though the mother is postponed to the paternal male relations, it does not follow that she, who in the absence of the father, is the legal guardian of her daughter [§ 518], is to have no voice at all in the choice of a husband for the daughter. The only reason why the mother is postponed is that she cannot perform the ceremony of giving the girl in marriage called kanyadana, and even when in default of paternal male relation she makes the gift, she has to employ some male to perform that ceremony (c). The Madras High Court has gone further and said that even if there be a paternal grandfather, the mother as the natural guardian of her daughter is entitled to select a husband for her (d). The Lahore High Court is inclined to the same view (e). A step-mother has no right to give her step-daughter in marriage, if there is a paternal grandmother (f).

Paternal relatives and maternal relatives.—So long as there are competent paternal relatives in existence, the maternal relatives of a girl have no authority to give her in marriage; but where the paternal relatives refuse to act or have disqualified themselves from acting, the maternal relatives acquire authority to contract marriage on behalf of the girl (g).

Remarriage of widows.—As to the consent necessary to the remarriage of minor widows, it is provided by sec. 7 of the Hindu Widows' Remarriage Act, 1856, that if the widow remarrying is a minor whose marriage has not been consummated, she shall not remarry without the consent of her father, or, if she has no father, her paternal grandfather, or, if she has no such grandfather, of her mother, or, failing all these, of her elder brother, or, failing also brothers, her next male relative. A marriage made in contravention of the above provisions, e.g., a marriage of a widowed girl with the consent of her mother-in-law (h), may be declared void by the Court, but not after it has been consummated. In the case of a widow who is of full age, or whose marriage has been consummated, her own consent is sufficient to constitute her remarriage lawful and valid.

The Indian Majority Act, 1875.—Minority, according to the Mitakshara school, terminates on completion of the sixteenth year; according to the Bengal school, on completion of the fifteenth year. The Indian Majority Act, 1875, does not apply to Hindus in matters of marriage, divorce and adoption.

434. Marriage without consent of guardian.—(1) The primary duty, and the correlative right, of giving a girl in marriage, rests with the father. This right is not lost merely because the father has been convicted of theft or any other offence not connected with domestic relations (i). But where the father has deserted his wife and daughter, the mother can give the daughter in marriage without the consent of the father (j). Even where the father is alive and otherwise capable of giving away his daughter, the Court will not declare a marriage invalid, merely because the daughter was given in marriage by the mother without his consent, provided the necessary ceremonies have been perfomed, and there has been no force or fraud (k). This rests on the principle that guardianship for the purpose of marriage is not so much a right as a duty, and the consent, therefore, of the guardian is not a condition precedent to the validity of the marriage (l). There is a difference of opinion among Hindu text-writers as to the correctness of this principle (m). Whatever the correct view may be, the rule established by the decisions is that a marriage which is duly solemnized, and is otherwise valid, is not ren-

---

(c) Bai Ramkore v. Jamnadas (1913) 37 Bom. 18, 17 I.C. 95.

(d) Ranganaiki v. Ramanuja (1912) 35 Mad. 728, 734, 11 I.C. 570.

(e) Mst. Indi v. Ghania (1920) 1 Lah. 146, 53 I.C. 783; Mst. Jiwani v. Mula Ram (1922) 3 Lah. 29, 67 I.C. 253, ('22) A.L. 112.

(f) Ram Bunsee v. Soobh Koonwaree (1867) 71 W.R. 321.

(g) Kasturi v. Panna Lal (1916) 38 All. 520, 36 I.C. 245, ('17) A.A. 451.

(h) Sant Ram v. The Crown (1930) 11 Lah. 178, 189, 124 I.C. 310, ('29) A.L. 713.

(i) Nanabhai v. Janardhan (1888) 12 Bom. 110, 119.

(j) Khushalchand v. Bai Mani (1887) 11 Bom. 247.

(k) Venkatacharyulu v. Rangacharyulu (1891) 14 Mad. 316.

(l) (1887) 11 Bom. 247, supra.

(m) See Ghose's Hindu Law, 3rd ed., pp. 802-803; Banerji's Law of Marriage, 5th ed., pp. 55, 56; G. Sarkar's Hindu Law, 7th ed., p. 165.

dered invalid, because it was brought about by misrepresentation to the guardian (n) or without the consent of the guardian for the purpose of marriage (o), or in contravention of an express order of the Court (p). But a marriage though performed with the necessary ceremonies, may be set aside by the Court, if it was brought about by force or fraud (q).

(2) The rule referred to in the preceding sub-section applies only where a marriage has been actually celebrated. But while there is only a contract for marriage, it is competent to a guardian to sue for an injunction to prevent the marriage of his ward to a person of whom he does not approve and the Court may grant an injunction subject to such terms as it may consider necessary to impose on the guardian for the benefit of the minor (r).

Factum valet quod fieri non debuit.—It is a doctrine of the Hindu law enunciated by the author of the Dayabhaga and recognised also by the Mitakshara school, that "a fact cannot be altered by a hundred texts." The "texts" referred to above are texts that are directory as distinguished from those that are mandatory. The meaning of the doctrine is that where a fact is accomplished, in other words, where an act is done and finally completed, though it may be in contravention of a hundred directory texts, the fact will stand, and the act will be deemed to be legal and binding. The maxim of the Roman Civil law corresponding to this doctrine is factum valet quod fieri non debuit which means that what ought not to be done is valid when done. It is otherwise where an act is done in contravention of texts which are in their nature mandatory. The texts which prescribe rules for the consent of guardians for the purpose of marriage have been held to be merely directory; hence a marriage once performed and solemnized, though it be without the consent of the guardian, has been held to be valid. But the non-observance of essential ceremonies cannot be overlooked by applying the doctrine unless it is shown that the ceremonies have been modified by custom (s).

It has similarly been held that the texts which prohibit the adoption of an only son, and those which enjoin the adoption of a relation in preference to a stranger, are only directory; therefore, the adoption of an only son, or a stranger in preference to a relation, if completed, is not invalid. In cases such as the above, where the texts are merely directory, the principle of factum valet applies, and the act done is valid and binding (t). But the texts relating to the capacity to give, the capacity to take, and the capacity to be the subject of adoption are mandatory. Hence the principle of factum valet is ineffectual in the case of an adoption in contravention of the provision of those texts (u).

435. Identity of caste or of sub-caste.—(1) A marriage between persons belonging to different sub-divisions of the same caste is not invalid (v). This

---

(n) Kshiteesh Chandra Chakrabarti v. Emperor (1937) 2 Cal. 221, 168 I.C. 708, ('37) A.C. 214.

(o) Khushalchand v. Bai Mani (1887) 11 Bom. 247; Venkatacharyulu v. Rangacharyulu (1891) 14 Mad. 316; Sivanandy v. Bhagvathyamma ('62) A.M. 400; Mulchand v. Bhudhai (1898) 22 Bom. 812; Ghazi v. Sukru (1897) 19 All. 515; Brindabun v. Chundra (1886) 12 Cal. 140; Kasturi v. Chiranji Lal (1913) 35 All. 265, 18 I.C. 927; Gajja Nand v. The Crown (1921) 2 Lah. 288, 64 I.C. 500, ('22) A.L. 139.

(p) Bai Diwali v. Moti (1898) 22 Bom. 509.

(q) (1891) 14 Mad. 316, supra; (1898) 22 Bom. 812, supra.

(r) Kashi, in the matter of (1882) 8 Cal. 266; Shridhar v. Hiralal (1888) 12 Bom. 480; Nanabhai v. Janardhan (1888) 12 Bom. 110; Kasturi v. Panna Lal (1916) 38 All. 520, 36 I.C. 245, ('17) A.A. 451 [damages for wrongful injunction].

(s) Deivanai v. Chidambaram ('54) A.M. 657, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 120.

(t) Wooma Dace v. Gokoolanund (1878) 3 Cal. 587, 5 I.A. 40; Balusu v. Balusu (1899) 22 Mad. 398, 26 I.A. 113; (1898) 22 Bom. 812, supra.

(u) Lakshmappa v. Ramaya (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 361, 398, (1899) 22 Mad. 398, 26 I.A. 113, 144, supra; Ganga v. Lekhraj (1887) 9 All. 253, 296-297; Gopal v. Hanmant (1879) 3 Bom. 273, 293-294; Padajirav v. Ramrav (1889) 13 Bom. 160, 167, (1898) 22 Bom. 812, supra; Bhanwar Lal v. Mangi Bai ('55) 5 Rajasthan 625; Nene v. Mahadeo ('52) Vind. Pra. 20.

(v) Marriage between persons belonging to Sudra sub-castes; (1869) 13 M.I.A. 141, 158-159, supra; Ramamani v. Kulanthai (1871) 14 M.I.A. 347; Upoma v. Bholaram (1888) 15 Cal. 708; Fakirgauda v. Gangi (1898) 22 Bom. 277; Biswanath v. Shorashibala (1921) 48 Cal. 926, 66 I.C. 390, ('21) A.C. 48; Sohan Singh v. Kabla Singh (1929) 10 Lah. 372, 112 I.C. 593, ('28) A.L. 706 [Jat male and Maskadi female]; Har Prasad v. Kewal (1925) 47 All. 169, 83 I.C. 163, ('25) A.A. 26 [Bisa husband and Dasa wife]; Gopikrishna Kasandhan v. Mt. Jaggo (1936) 63 I.A. 295, 58 All. 397, 38 Bom. L.R. 751, 162 I.C. 993, ('36) A.P.C. 198; Kshiteesh Chandra Chakrabarti v. Emperor (1937) 2 Cal. 221, 168 I.C. 708, ('37) A.C. 214, (A case of Brahmin sub-castes). Marriage between Golwara and Agarwala—which are two subdivisions of Vaisya caste is valid. Kashi Nath v. Bhagwan Das, 1947 All. 578.

has been expressly embodied in the Hindu Marriage Disabilities Removal Act, Act 28 of 1946, and the Hindu Marriages Validity Act, Act 21 of 1949.

Both these Acts have been repealed by sect. 30 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 25 of 1955, and their provisions have now been embodied in sect. 29 (1) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 25 of 1955.

A marriage between a Grihasth Goshain and a woman of another caste initiated as a goshain is valid (w).

(2) For the purposes of marriage, converts to Hinduism are regarded as Shudras. Therefore, the marriage of a Hindu who is a Shudra by caste with a Christian woman who has become a convert to Hinduism before the marriage, is treated as a marriage between two Shudras, and it is valid if it otherwise complies with the requirements of the Hindu Law (x).

The second marriage of a person who was reconverted from Christianity to Hinduism during the lifetime of his first wife is valid (y).

(3) As to identity of castes.—Section 3 of the Hindu Marriages Validity Act, 1949, laid down that no marriage between Hindus shall be deemed to be invalid or ever to have been invalid by reason only of the fact that the parties thereto belong to different religions, castes, sub-castes or sects. The object of the Act obviously was not only to regularise the status of husband and wife but also to confer legitimacy on the children born of the marriages validated (*y*1). The Act validated inter-caste marriages and gave retrospective effect to the Hindu Marriage Disabilities Removal Act, 1946. As regards marriages between sub-divisions of the same caste, they are regarded as valid even under the existing decisions. The provision that Hindu marriages should be valid though the parties belong to different religions, does not mean that a marriage between a Hindu and a Christian or between a Hindu and a Mohomedan would be valid, the object of the Act being to legalise marriages between Hindus, Jains and Sikhs who, though they belong to different religions, come under the description of Hindus as defined in Section 2 of the Act.

Old law.—Ancient texts prohibited prathiloma marriages, i.e., between males of lower caste and females of higher caste. Accordingly such marriages have been held by courts to be invalid (z). But Anuloma marriages were permitted and recognised by the texts (a). Accordingly the Bombay High Court held that a marriage between a Vaishya male and a Shudra female (b), or a Brahman male and a Shudra female is valid. In the latter case it was held that the son born of such a marriage is legitimate and is entitled to inherit a one-tenth share in the estate of his uncle, the other nine-tenths going to the reversioner of the uncle (c). The High Court of Calcutta has held that a marriage between a Brahman and a Shudra woman both of whom are Jati Vaishanavas is valid (d). A similar view has been taken by the Assam High Court (e). It has been held by the (w) Kaura Devi v. Indra Devi (1943) All. 703, 210 I.C. 464, ('43) A.A. 310.

---

(x) Muthusami v. Masilamani (1910) 33 Mad. 342, 5 I.C. 42, where the earlier decisions are reviewed.

(y) Goona Durgaprasad Rao alias Pedda Babu v. Goona Sudarsanswami and Ors. (1940) Mad. 653, 190 I.C. 868, ('40) A.M. 513.

(*y*1) Sadagopa v. Bakthavatsalam ('64) A.S.C. 1126.

(z) Lakshmi v. Kalian Singh (1900) 2 Bom. L.R. 128 [Kshatriya male and Brahman female]; Bai Kashi v. Jamnadas (1912) 14 Bom. L.R. 547, 16 I.C. 133 [Sudra male and Brahman female]; Manni Lal v. Shiama (1926) 48 All. 670, 97 I.C. 347, ('26) A.A. 656 [Sudra male and Vaishya female].

(a) Manu, Yajanavalkya, Sankha, Gauthama, Vyas, Vishnu and Mitakshara.

(b) Bai Gulab v. Jiwanlal (1922) 46 Bom. 871, 65 I.C. 602, ('22) A.B. 32.

(c) Natha v. Mehta Chhotalal (1931) 55 Bom. 1, 130 I.C. 17, ('31) A.B. 89.

(d) Nalinaksha v. Rajanikanta (1931) 58 Cal. 1392, 134 I.C. 1272, ('31) A.C. 741.

(e) Makhana Katani v. Thaneshwar ('56) A. Assam 11.

Madras High Court that a Nattukottai Chettiar who is a Shudra can legally marry a dancing girl who has not been dedicated to a temple. Whether he could marry a girl who was actually dedicated was not decided in the case (f).

Even Anuloma marriages were held to be invalid in Allahabad and Madras (g).

Marriage of illegitimate persons.—In the case of the marriage of an illegitimate person who, strictly speaking, belongs to no caste, he or she must be treated as belonging to the caste the members of which have recognised him or her as a caste fellow (h).

Mixed marriages.—The Hindu law lays down certain rules for determining the caste of offspring of unions between parents belonging to different castes, and gives separate names to the mixed castes to which such offspring belong. When intermarriages were permitted by ancient Hindu law, children born of mixed marriages were termed Anulomajah, that is, offspring of Anuloma marriage, and their caste was neither that of their father nor that of their mother. They belonged to an intermediate caste higher than that of their mother, and lower than that of their father. Thus a son begotten by a Brahman upon a Kshatriya wife is a Murdhavasikta, upon a Vaishya wife is an Ambashta, and upon a Shudra wife is Nishada or Parasava. A son begotten by a Kshatriya on a Vaishya wife is a Mahishya, and upon a Shudra wife an Ugra. A son born of a Vaishya by a Shudra wife is a Karana. It has accordingly been held that the illegitimate son of a Kshatriya by a Shudra woman is not a Shudra, but of a higher caste called Ugra (i).

This section does not apply to Arya Samajists (Act XIX of 1937).

The Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872.—As to marriages between Hindus and Christians, see the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, and the undermentioned cases (j).

436. Prohibited degrees of relationship.—No marriage is valid if it is made between persons related to each other within the prohibited degrees, unless such marriage is sanctioned by custom (k).

A karewa marriage between a father-in-law and daughter-in-law among the Jats (who are presumed to be Shudras) is invalid and cannot be validated by custom (l).

The following are the rules regarding prohibited degrees:—

(1) The Hindu Marriage Disabilities Removal Act, 1946, laid down that notwithstanding any text, rule or interpretation of the Hindu Law or any custom or usage, a marriage between Hindus, which is otherwise valid, shall not be invalid by reason only of the fact that the parties thereto belong to the same gotra or pravara.

Before this Act it was held that a man could not marry a girl of the same gotra or pravara the theory being that his father and the girl's father were both descendants of a common ancestor in the male line. It was held in Allahabad that where a widow had remarried a person belonging to her father's gotra the marriage was not invalid as she had not reverted to her father's gotra by her husband's death and her issue was legitimate (m). In a later case it was held in Madhya Pradesh that a widow remarrying another person in her deceased husband's gotra was validly married as she could be regarded as having reverted to her father's gotra (*m*1). The rule did not apply to Shudras

---

(f) Nagappa v. Subramanian (1946) Mad. 103.

(g) Padam Kumari v. Suraj Kumari (1906) 28 All. 458 [Brahman male and Kshatriya female]; Swayampakula Subbaramayya v. Swayampakula Venkatasubbamma (1941) Mad. 989, ('41) A.M. 513. Reference may also be made to observations in Kastoori Devi v. Chiranji Lal ('60) A. All. 446.

(h) In the matter of Ram Kumari (1891) 18 Cal. 264; Emperor v. Madan Gopal (1912) 34 All. 589, 16 I.C. 513.

(i) Brindavana v. Radhamani (1889) 12 Mad. 72, 78-80; Jwala Singh v. Sardar (1919) 41 All. 629, 51 I.C. 216, ('19) A.A. 317.

(j) Chetti v. Chetti (1909) Probate 67; Chandramani Dubey v. Dubey (1951) 2 All. 439, ('51) A.A. 529.

(k) Banerjee's "Law of Marriage," 5th ed., pp. 70-71, 269-274, 285, 289. The custom must not be opposed to public policy or abhorrent to decency and morality: Balusami v. Balkrishna ('57) A.M. 97.

(l) Jagnahar Singh v. Sadhu Ram (1934) 15 Lah. 688, 149 I.C. 94, ('34) A.L. 283.

(m) Radha Nath Mukerji v. Shaktipado Mukerji (1936) 58 All. 1053, 164 I.C. 595, ('36) A.A. 624.

(*m*1) Rewa v. Galharisingh ('61) A.M.P. 164.

the reason given being that Shudras have no gotra of their own. It has been held by the Bombay High Court that in accordance with a custom prevailing in the Deccan Brahmin community, a marriage between persons of the same gotra is valid provided before the marriage, the girl is given in adoption to a person of another gotra (n).

This rule is called exogamy. Its effect is that a man cannot marry the daughter of an agnate. The next rule provides for the case where the girl is a cognate relation of the boy, that is, related to him through a female.

(2) A man cannot marry a girl who is his Sapinda. This rule is accepted both by the Bengal and Mitakshara schools. But there is a difference of opinion between the two schools as to who are Sapindas for marriage.

Bengal school.—According to the Dayabhaga law, a man cannot marry a girl—

(a) if she is within the 7th degree in descent from his father or from one of his father's six ancestors in the male line;

(b) if she is within the 5th degree in descent from his maternal grandfather or from one of his maternal grandfather's four ancestors in the male line;

(c) if she is within the 7th degree in descent from his father's three technical bandhus, or from one of their six ancestors through whom the girl is related to him [§ 46, sub-§ (4), Pitri Bandhus];

(d) if she is within the 5th degree in descent from his mother's three technical bandhus or from one of their four ancestors through whom the girl is related to him [§ 46, sub-§ (4), Matri Bandhus] (o).

Exception.—A girl, though related within the degrees mentioned above, may be taken in marriage if she is removed by three gotras from him (p).

Mitakshara school.—According to the Mitakshara law, a man cannot marry a girl if their common ancestor, being traced through his or her father, is not beyond the seventh in the line of ascent from him or her or, if their common ancestor, being traced through their mothers, is not beyond the fifth in line of ascent from him or her (q). In other words, descendants up to the seventh degree through males or females of paternal ancestors up to the seventh degree, and descendants up to the fifth degree of maternal ancestors up to the fifth degree, are excluded as being sapindas (r).

In the Madras State the rules restricting marriages between cognate sapindas are practically obsolete, e.g., the marriage of cognate first cousins (children of brother and sister) is common among Telugus. It was recognised by Baudhayana. The marriage of a male to his sister's daughter is common among Reddis. The marriages of cognate sapindas beyond these limits has always been regarded as lawful and as not prohibited in the whole of Southern India—except between cousins who are children of two sisters.

(3) In computing the degrees for the purposes of sub-§ (2), the common ancestor and the person in question are each to be counted as one degree.

(4) Relationship by marriage is not by itself an impediment to marriage. Thus a man may marry the daughter of his wife's sister (s).

---

(n) Madhavrao v. Raghavendrarao (1946) Bom. 375.

(o) Bijan Majumdar v. Ranjit Lal Sen Gupta (1942) 2 Cal. 443, 202 I.C. 33, ('42) A.C. 458.

(p) Banerjee's "Law of Marriage," 5th ed., pp. 69-70.

(q) Ramchandra v. Vinayak (1914) 41 I.A. 290, 309-311, 42 Cal. 384, 417-419, 25 I.C. 290, ('14) A.P.C. 1.

(r) Bhattacharya's "Hindu Law," 2nd ed. p. 90.

(s) Ragavendra v. Jayaram (1897) 20 Mad. 283; Ramakrishna v. Subbamma (1920) 43 Mad. 830, 59 I.C. 268, ('20) A.M. 715.

Sagotra.—Two persons are sagotra, that is, of the same gotra or family, if both of them are descended in the male line from the Rishi or sage after whose name the gotra is called, however distant either of them may be from the common ancestor.

Samana-pravara.—Two persons are Samana-pravara, that is, of the same pravara, if they are descendants in the male line of the three paternal ancestors of the founder of a gotra (t).

Sub-sec. (2).—The following diagram (u) will enable the reader to understand the four rules applied by the Dayabhaga school to determine sapindaship:—

In the above diagram P is the bridegroom; $F^1$ is his father; $M^1$ is his mother; $M^2$ is his father's mother; $M^3$ is his mother's mother.

$F^1$ to $F^7$ are his 7 paternal ancestors in the male line $F^8$ to $F^{12}$ are his father's 5 maternal ancestors in the male line. $F^{13}$ to $F^{17}$ are his mother's 5 paternal ancestors in the male line. $F^{18}$ to $F^{20}$ are his mother's 3 maternal ancestors in the male line. $S^1$, $S^2$ and $S^3$ are his father's bandhus. $S^4$, $S^5$ and $S^6$ are his mother's bandhus.

According to sub-rule (a), P cannot marry a girl within the 7th degree in descent from any one of his 7 paternal ancestors $F^1$ to $F^7$.

According to sub-rule (b), P cannot marry a girl within the 5th degree in descent from any one of his mother's 5 paternal ancestors $F^{13}$ to $F^{17}$ [$F^{13}$ is P's maternal grandfather].

For the purposes of sub-rule (c), the father's bandhus are restricted to the three relations expressly mentioned as such in the Mitakshara, namely:—

(λ) Father's [$F^1$] father's [$F^2$] sister's [$D^1$] son, that is, $S^1$;

(β) „ „ mother's [$M^2$] sister's [$D^2$] son, that is, $S^2$;

(γ) „ „ mother's [$M^2$] brother's [$B^1$] son, that is, $S^3$.

According to sub-rule (c), P cannot marry a girl within the 7th degree in descent from—

(i) $S^1$, $S^2$ or $S^3$;

[(ii) $F^3$ to $F^7$, ancestors of $S^1$, already included in sub-rule (a)];

(iii) any one of the 5 persons $F^8$ to $F^{12}$, ancestors of $S^2$ and $S^3$;

(iv) $B^1$, father of $S^3$.

For the purposes of sub-rule (d), the mother's bandhus are restricted to the three relations expressly mentioned as such in the Mitakshara, namely:—

---

(t) G. Sarkar's "Hindu Law," 7th ed., p. 89.
(u) The diagram is reproduced from G. Sarkar's "Hindu Law," 7th Ed., p. 140.

( λ ) Mother's [$M^1$] father's [$F^{13}$] sister's [$D^3$] son, that is, $S^4$;
( β ) „ „ mother's [$M^3$] sister's [$D^4$] son, that is $S^5$;
( ν ) „ „ mother's [$M^3$] brother's [$B^2$] son, that is, $S^6$.

According to sub-rule (d), P cannot marry a girl within the 5th degree in descent from—

(i) $S^4$, $S^5$ or $S^6$;
[ (ii) $F^{14}$ to $F^{17}$, ancestors of $S^4$, already included in sub-rule (b) ]; (iii) any one of the 3 persons $F^{18}$ to $F^{20}$, ancestors of $S^5$ and $S^6$; and (iv) $B^2$, father of $S^6$.

The reader will find the above rules in Dr. Banerjee's "Law of Marriage." The rules relating to the Bengal school are set forth in Raghunandana's Udvahattattva, a work of authority in Bengal, and are repeated by Kamalakara Bhatta in his Nirnayasindhu, a work of authority in the Benares school. The Bengal rules are in accordance with the interpretation put by Raghunandana upon the text of Manu.

There is no difference between sapinda-relationship in respect of marriage and that in respect of inheritance (v).

437. Marriage ceremonies.—(1) There are two ceremonies essential to the validity of a marriage, whether the marriage be in the Brahma form or the Asura form, namely—

(1) invocation before the sacred fire, and

(2) saptapadi, that is, the taking of seven steps by the bridegroom and the bride jointly before the sacred fire.

The marriage becomes completed when the seventh step is taken; till then it is imperfect and revocable (w). Consummation is not necessary to make a marriage complete and binding (x).

(2) A marriage may be completed by the performance of ceremonies other than those referred to in sub-section (1), where it is allowed by the custom of the caste to which the parties belong (y).

If the community to which the parties belong has modified by long established usage the ceremonies prescribed by the Shastras and has adopted new forms and new conventions, they must be recognised by the Courts. But the essential requisite for recognition of such a custom is that it must be sufficiently ancient and definite, and the members of the caste or sub-caste or family must recognise it as obligatory. It should not be left to the will of the caste or sub-caste to alter it at their will and pleasure, for the essence of custom or usage is that it is an ancient one recognised and adopted by the caste and has certainty about it. The validity of a marriage has to be tested and determined in accordance with the provisions of the law governing the parties and not in accordance with the rules laid down by any association or a society. If the caste has been able to establish its usage regulating the form and the requisites of a valid marriage, such a usage being transcendant law is obligatory and it is binding not only upon the parties but also on the Courts, who are bound to recognise and give effect to the usage (z).

---

(v) Babu Lal v. Nanku Ram (1895) 22 Cal. 339; Ramchandra v. Vinayak (1914) 41 I.A. 290, 309, 311, 42 Cal. 384, 417-419, 25 I.C. 290, ('14) A.P.C. 1.

(w) Chunilal v. Surajram (1909) 33 Bom. 433, 437-438, 3 I.C. 765; Authikesavalu v. Ramanujam (1909) 32 Mad. 512, 519-520, 3 I.C. 541; Brindabun v. Chundra (1886) 12 Cal. 140, 143. Also see Sitabai v. Vithabai ('59) A.B. 508.

(x) Adm.-Gen. of Madras v. Anandachari (1886) 9 Mad. 466, 470; Dadaji v. Rukmabai (1886) 10 Bom. 301, 311; Emperor v. Munshi Ram (1936) 58 All. 402, 158 I.C. 1007, ('36) A.A. 11.

(y) Kally Churn v. Dukhee (1880) 5 Cal. 692; Hurry Churn v. Nimai (1884) 10 Cal. 138; Rampiyar v. Deva Rama (1923) 1 Rang. 129, 76 I.C. 475, ('23) A.R. 202.

(z) Deivanai v. Chidambaram, ('54) A.M. 657, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 120; Rakappa v. Chokalingam (1963) 2 Mad. L.J. 550, ('64) A.M. 126 [Nattukotta Chettys-saptapadi not essential].

Marriage of widows.—According to the Hindu law, it is sometimes said that no religious ceremonies are necessary in the case of marriage of widows. See the Hindu Widows' Remarriage Act, 1856, s. 6. As to religious ceremonies in case of such marriages see undermentioned cases (a).

Betrothal.—Betrothal precedes marriage; but unlike marriage it is revocable, so that a girl betrothed to one person may be validly given in marriage to another person though in such a case a suit may be brought for damage against the father or other guardian of the girl who brought about the contract of marriage. Betrothal is no more than a promise to marry. In the case of minors, the promise is given by the father or other legal guardian. Where there is a breach of the promise, the appropriate remedy is not specific performance, but damages (b). When the plaintiff bridegroom dies pending a suit for damages, his legal representative can only recover the out of pocket expenses incurred during betrothal (c).

438. Presumption as to legality of marriage.—Where it is proved that a marriage was performed in fact, the Court will presume that it is valid in law (d), and that the necessary ceremonies have been performed (e). A Hindu marriage is recognised as a valid marriage in English law (f).

Presumption as to marriage and legitimacy.—There is an extremely strong presumption in favour of the validity of a marriage and the legitimacy of its offspring if from the time of the alleged marriage the parties are recognized by all persons concerned as man and wife and are so described in important documents and on important occasions. The like presumption applies to the question whether the formal requisites of a valid marriage ceremony were satisfied (g). Similarly the fact that a woman was living under the control and protection of a man who generally lived with her and acknowledged her children raises a strong presumption that she is the wife of that man. But this presumption may be rebutted by proof of facts showing that no marriage could have taken place (h).

439. Special Marriage Act, 1954.—It is provided by the Special Marriage Act, 1954 (which repeals the Special Marriage Act, 1872) that a marriage may be celebrated before a Registrar between any two persons.

The marriage under the Special Marriage Act, 1954, of any member of an undivided family shall be deemed to effect his severance from such family. Further, a person marrying under the Special Marriage Act, 1954, shall have the same rights and be subject to the same disabilities (i) in regard to any right of succession to any property, as a person to whom the Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850, applies. Also the succession to the property of any such person, and to the property of the issue of such marriage, shall be regulated by the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. No such person shall have any right of adoption, but his father shall, if he has no other son living, have the right to adopt another person as a son under the law to which he is subject. See the Special Marriage Act, 1954, ss. 19-21.

440. Marriage expenses.—In the case of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, the joint family property is liable, while the family is still

---

(a) Deivanani v. Chidambaram, supra; Mahila Gumano v. Ram Dayal ('53) A.M.B. 159.

(b) Purshotamdas v. Purshotamdas (1897) 21 Bom. 23; Rambhat v. Timmayya (1892) 16 Bom. 673 [suit for restoration of presents]; Jekisondas v. Ranchoddas (1917) 41 Bom. 137, 38 I.C. 588, ('16) A.B. 51; Khimji v. Narsi (1915) 39 Bom. 682, 28 I.C. 408, ('15) A.B. 300 [procuring breach of promise of marriage]; Khubchand v. Maniklal ('53) A.M.B. 91.

(c) Balubhai v. Nanabhai (1920) 44 Bom. 446, 55 I.C. 614, ('20) A.B. 225.

(d) Inderun v. Ramasawmy (1869) 13 M.I.A. 141, 158; Fakirgauda v. Gangi (1898) 22 Bom. 277, 279.

(e) Mouji Lal v. Chandrabati (1911) 38 Cal. 700, 38 I.A. 122, 11 I.C. 502; Veerappa v. Michael ('63) S.C. 933. Brindabun v. Chundra (1886) 12 Cal. 140; Bai Diwali v. Moti (1898) 22 Bom. 509; Administrator-General of Madras v. Anandachari (1886) 9 Mad. 466; Appibai v. Khimji Cooverji (1936) 60 Bom. 455, 38 Bom. L.R. 77, 162 I.C. 188, ('36) A.B. 138.

(f) Srinivasan v. Srinivasan, 73 Law Times 102.

(g) (1911) 38 Cal. 700, 38 I.A. 122, 11 I.C. 502, supra; Subarna v. Arjuno ('51) Orissa 337; Sitabai v. Vithabai, ('59) A.B. 508.

(h) Chellammal v. Ranganathan (1911) 34 Mad. 277, 12 I.C. 247; Nagarajamma v. State Bank of India ('62) A.A.P. 260. Shivalingiah v. Chowdamma ('56) A. Mysore 17; Vishnu Namboodiri v. Kuttiparu Amma ('57) Tra. Co. 85 (F.B.); Thunthi v. Dhant Ram ('53) Him. Pra. 66; Anandi Lal v. Onkar ('60) A. Raj. 251.

(i) Reference may made to Girdharilal v. Fatechand ('55) A.M.B. 148.

joint, for the legitimate marriage expenses of male members of the family (k), and also of the daughters of male members of the family (l).

The decision in Subbayya v. Ananta, 53 Mad. 84 implies that a father in possession of a joint family property is under a legal obligation to get his daughter married. It follows that if a father so in possession neglects his duty, the mother may perform it and recover the expenses from her husband. When there is no joint family property in the hands of the father there is no legal obligation on his part to marry his daughter and bear the expenses of marriage. It is doubtful also whether the marriage of an infant girl could be brought under the head of "necessaries" within the meaning of sec. 68, Indian Contract Act (m). On the other hand the proposition of law laid down in Sundari Ammal v. Subramania Ayyar, 26 Mad. 505 that "under the Hindu law, a father is under no legal obligation to get his daughter married", appears to have been stated too broadly. The obligation may not exist when the father is not a member of a joint family and has no ancestral property.

The texts enjoin the payment of expenses of sanskaras or sacraments out of the family property. Marriage is a sanskara, and its expenses, therefore, are to be provided for out of the joint family property. A debt contracted for the marriage of a coparcener or the daughter of a deceased coparcener in a joint Hindu family is a debt contracted for a family purpose, and, therefore, for the benefit of the family. See §§ 234 and 427.

As to expenses of marriage after the institution of a suit for partition, see § 304(2). As to the power of a widow to provide for the marriage expenses of her daughter out of her husband's estate, see § 181B(iv).

441. Divorce.—(1) Divorce is not known to the general Hindu law. The reason is that a marriage, from the Hindu point of view, creates an indissoluble tie between the husband and the wife. Neither party, therefore, to a marriage can divorce the other unless divorce is allowed by custom (n).

There is no rule of Hindu law which forbids the subsistence of a marriage one of the parties to which is a non-Hindu. The law does not refuse to recognise a conjugal union merely by reason of a difference of religion (o).

(2) Change of religion or loss of caste does not operate as a dissolution of marriage, nor does the adultery of either party, nor even the fact that the wife has deserted her husband and become a prostitute (p).

(3) As to change of religion, it is now provided by the Native Converts' Marriage Dissolution Act, 1866, that where a Hindu becomes a convert to Christianity, and in consequence of such conversion, the husband or wife of the convert deserts or repudiates the convert, the Court may, on a petition presented by the convert, pass a decree dissolving the marriage, and the

---

(k) Sundrabai v. Shivnarayana (1908) 32 Bom. 81; Bhagirathi v. Jokhu Ram (1910) 32 All. 575, 6 I.C. 465; Gopalakrishnam v. Venkatanarasa (1914) 37 Mad. 273, 17 I.C. 308, ('14) Mad. 432 [F.B.] overruling Govindarazulu v. Devarabhotla (1904) 27 Mad. 206; Kameswara v. Veeracharlu (1911) 34 Mad. 422, 8 I.C. 195; Debi Lal v. Nand Kishore (1922) 1 Pat. 266, 65 I.C. 315, ('22) A.P. 22.

(l) Vaikuntam v. Kallapiran (1900) 23 Mad. 512; Vaikuntam v. Kallipiram (1903) 26 Mad. 497; Ranganaiki v. Ramanuja (1912) 35 Mad. 728, 11 I.C. 570; Srinivasa v. Thiruvengadathaiyangar (1915) 38 Mad. 556, 23 I.C. 264, ('14) A.M. 226 [unmarried sisters]; Thiruvathammal v. Vagunathan ('52) A.M. 479; Alagammai v. Veerappa ('56) A.M. 428.

(m) Sadhu Laxmi v. Sadhu Suryanarayana ('50) A.M. 274.

(n) Kudomee v. Joteeram (1878) 3 Cal. 305; Sankaralingam v. Subban (1894) 17 Mad. 479; Tatayya v. Nakaraju ('58) A.A.P. 611.

(o) Chandramani Dubey v. Dubey (1951) 2 All. 439, ('51) A.A. 529.

(p) Government of Bombay v. Ganga (1880) 4 Bom. 330; Admn. General of Madras v. Anandachari (1886) 9 Mad. 466; Ram Kumari, In the matter of (1891) 18 Cal. 264; Subbaraya v. Ramasami (1900) 23 Mad. 171, 177; Narain v. Trilok (1907) 29 All. 4; Chandramani Dubey v. Dubey, supra; Pakkiam v. Chelliah Pillai (1923) 46 Mad. 839; 75 I.C. 17, ('24) A.M. 18 [F.B.]; Gopal Krishna Kasaudhan v. Mst. Jaggo (1936) 63 I.A. 295, 58 All. 397, 38 Bom. L.R. 751, 162 I.C. 993; Banarsi Das v. Samat Prasad (1936) 58 All. 1019, 164 I.C. 1047, ('36) A.A. 641; Gul Mohammad v. King Emperor (1947) Nag. 205.

parties may then marry again as if the prior marriage had been dissolved by death. Conversion does not operate per se as a dissolution of marriage (q).

(4) In many States, however, divorce is allowed on certain grounds as the result of legislation permitting divorce.

Divorce by custom.—It has been held in Bombay that a caste custom which permits a woman to desert her husband at her pleasure and marry again without his consent is void for immorality (r). And it has been doubted by the same Court whether the custom would be valid even if it allowed her to marry with his consent (s). The Madras High Court has held that a custom which permits a divorce by mutual agreement is not void for immorality (t). A similar custom recognising dissolution of marriage followed by marriage in kudike form has been accepted as valid in case of certain castes in Mysore (u). A custom granting divorce in the Pakhali community with the consent of the husband is valid (v).

It has been held in Bombay that a custom which permits a dissolution of the marriage tie by either husband or wife against the wish of the other, the sole condition attached being the payment of a sum of money fixed by the caste, is void as being opposed to public policy (w). Nor can a marriage be dissolved by a decision of the caste Panch (x).

The Indian Divorce Act, 1869.—This Act provides inter alia for dissolution of marriage, but it applies only to cases where "the petitioner or respondent professes the Christian religion" (s. 2 of the Act). Section 7 of the Act provides that the Court shall act and give relief on principles of the English Divorce Courts. There is a conflict of opinion whether the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, applies only to monogamous marriages such as a Christian marriage or also to polygamous marriages such as a Hindu marriage where one of the parties, being the petitioner, changes his religion for Christianity after the marriage. A and his wife B, both Hindus, marry according to the rites of Hindu law. A and B subsequently become Christians. A then applies to the Court for the dissolution of the marriage on the ground that his wife has, since the solemnization of the marriage, been guilty of adultery (s. 10 of the Act). Is A entitled to relief under the Act? It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that he is, the ground of the decision being that A professed the Christian religion at the time of presenting the petition and that fact was sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Court, under the Act, though the marriage was a Hindu marriage (y). On the other hand, it has been held by the Madras High Court, that having regard to s. 7, the Act applies to monogamous marriages only, and that the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain A's petition under the Act (z).

Conversion to Islam.—It has been held by a single Judge of the Calcutta High Court, that when a Hindu wife embraces Islam the Hindu law ceases to have any control over her; the marriage becomes automatically dissolved and there is nothing in Hindu law which prevents the Court from giving a declaration to that effect (a). But see Mulla's Mahomedan Law, (1961) 15th Edition, sec. 20.

442. Marital duties.—(1) The wife is bound to live with her husband and to submit herself to his authority. An agreement enabling the wife to avoid a marriage or to live separate from her husband if he leaves the village in which his wife, and her parents reside, or if he marries another wife, is void. Such an agreement is against public policy and contrary to the spirit

---

(q) Gobardhan v. Jasadamoni (1891) 18 Cal. 252.

(r) Narayan v. Laving (1878) 2 Bom. 140.

(s) Khemkor v. Umidshankar (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 381.

(t) Sankaralingam v. Subban (1894) 17 Mad. 479. Also see Premanbai v. Channoolal ('63) A.M.P. 57 [custom among Patruas of Madhya Pradesh permitting divorce by mutual consent held valid].

(u) Shivalingiah v. Chowdamma ('56) A. Mysore 17.

(v) Jina Magan v. Bai Jethi (1941) Bom. 535, 195 I.C. 841, ('41) A.B. 298.

(w) Keshav v. Bai Gandi (1915) 39 Bom. 538, 29 I.C. 952, ('15) A.B. 107, and see Sudha v. Sankappa Rai ('63) A. Mys. 245.

(x) Bai Ganga v. Emperor ('16) A.B. 97, (1917) 19 Bom. L.R. 56, 39 I.C. 308. But see Nallathangal v. Naiuan Ambalam (1960) 1 Mad. L.J. 134, ('60) A.M. 179.

(y) Thapita v. Thapita (1894) 17 Mad. 235; Gobardhan v. Jasadamoni (1891) 18 Cal. 252.

(z) (1894) 17 Mad. 235, supra. See also Perianayakam v. Pottukanni (1891) 14 Mad. 382.

(a) Ayesha Bibi v. Subodh Ch. Chakravarty ('49) A.C. 436.

of the Hindu law. An agreement of this kind is no answer to a suit for restitution of conjugal rights by a husband against his wife (b).

(2) The husband is bound to live with his wife and to maintain her.

443. Guardianship of wife.—(1) The husband is the lawful guardian of his minor wife (c) and is entitled to require her to live with him, however young she may be, unless there is a custom enabling the wife to live with her parents until she has arrived at puberty (d).

(2) After the husband's death, the guardianship of the wife, if she is a minor, devolves on the husband's relations in preference to her paternal relations (e). But if the husband's family be extinct, or contain no male, her father or the kin of her father are the guardians of the widow (*e*1).

It has been held in a Madras case (f) that in default of the husband no other person is entitled to act as guardian de jure of the minor wife.

A co-widow is not the natural guardian of her minor co-widow (g).

The infancy of the wife is no ground for depriving the husband of his right to demand that his wife shall reside in the same house as himself though it might be right in the case of a very young girl to require the husband to show that she would be placed by him under the immediate care of some female member of his family (h). See the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, sec. 19.

444. Restitution of conjugal rights.—(1) Either party to a marriage may sue the other for restitution of conjugal rights (i). The Court may refuse to pass a decree for restitution of conjugal rights against the wife, if the husband is suffering from a loathsome disease, such as leprosy or syphilis (j), or if he keeps a concubine in the house, or is guilty of cruelty in a degree rendering it unsafe for the wife to return to her husband's dominion (k), or if he adopts another religion (l). But the mere fact of the husband marrying a second wife (m), or mere infidelity on the part of the husband (n), or the fact that the wife is a minor (o) [§ 443], is not by itself sufficient to disentitle the husband from claiming restitution of conjugal rights.

Under sec. 18(2)(d) of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act 78 of 1956, and sec. 488(3) of the Criminal Procedure Code, the taking of a second wife by a husband would constitute a ground for claiming separate residence and maintenance by the wife. It follows therefore that now the husband's claim for restitution of conjugal rights can justly be refused, if he has taken a second wife.

(2) In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights by a Hindu husband, the husband is not necessarily entitled to a decree in the absence of a plea of

---

(b) Sitaram v. Aheeree (1873) 11 Beng. L.R. 129, Tekait v. Basanta (1901) 28 Cal. 751.

(c) Dhuronidhur, in the matter of (1890) 17 Cal. 298.

(d) Arumuga v. Viraraghava (1901) 24 Mad. 255.

(e) Khudiram v. Bonwari Lal (1889) 16 Cal. 584.

(*e*1) Annapurnamma v. Ramanjaneyaratnam ('59) A.A.P. 40, 46.

(f) Ethilavulu v. Pethakkal ('50) A.M. 390.

(g) Kasubai v. Chandrabhaga (1947) Nag. 455.

(h) Kateeram v. Musammut Gendhenee (1875) 23 W.R. 178; Surjyamoni v. Kali Kanta (1901) 28 Cal. 37; Navnitlal v. Purshotam (1926) 50 Bom. 268, 94 I.C. 11, ('26) A.B. 228.

(i) Tekait v. Basanta (1901) 28 Cal. 751; Dadaji v. Rukmabai (1886) 10 Bom. 301.

(j) Bai Premkuvar v. Bhika (1868) 5 Bom. H.C.A.C. 209.

(k) Dular Koer v. Dwarka Nath (1905) 34 Cal. 971; Yamunabai v. Narayan (1876) 1 Bom. 164.

(l) Paigi v. Sheonarain (1886) 8 All. 78.

(m) Motilal v. Bai Chanchal (1902) 4 Bom. L.R. 107.

(n) Binda v. Kaunsilia (1891) 13 All. 126, 164.

(o) (1901) 28 Cal. 37, supra; (1886) 10 Bom. 301, supra.

cruelty by the wife. Where the wife has pleaded that she was deserted or neglected (q) by her husband and that the suit is not bona fide, she should be allowed to lead evidence so that the Court may be in a position to judge whether the relief sought for by the husband should be granted or not, and if so on what conditions, if any (r).

In a suit by the husband for restitution of conjugal rights the cause of action arises where the husband lives (s).

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta (t), and following it, by the High Court of Rangoon (u), that the presumption that the requisite ceremonies have been performed [§ 438] applies only to cases involving questions of inheritance so as to avoid illegitimacy, and that no such presumption arises in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights. In such a suit, where the validity of the marriage is disputed, the Court must find specifically whether the requisite ceremonies were performed.

(q) Ude Singh v. Mst. Daulat Kaur (1935) 16 Lah. 892, 158 I.C. 223, ('35) A.L. 386.

(r) Bai Jivi v. Narsingh (1927) 51 Bom. 329, 101 I.C. 403, ('27) A.B. 264.

(s) Venugopal Naidu v. Lakshmi Ammal (1936) 59 Mad. 392, 161 I.C. 485, ('36) A.M. 288.

(t) Suriyamoni v. Kali Kanta (1901) 28 Cal. 37, 50.

(u) Rampiyar v. Deva Rama (1923) 1 Rang. 129, 76 I.C. 475, ('23) A.R. 202.

CHAPTER XXIII

ADOPTION

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU ADOPTIONS AND MAINTENANCE ACT, 1956

Note.—Material and important alterations and modifications in the law relating to adoptions have been brought about by various legislations enumerated in the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. Corresponding applications have been given in that Act. Adoptions made after the commencement of that Act must be in accordance with the provisions contained in it and any adoption made in contravention of those provisions will be void. Validity of adoptions previously made is not affected in any manner. The notes in the following paragraphs of this Chapter state the law prior to the coming into operation of that Act.

Contents

1. Who may adopt—§§ 669-672.
2. Who may give in adoption—§§ 673-673A.
3. Who may be adopted—§§ 680-687.
4. Ceremonies relating to adoption—§§ 688-693.
5. Results of adoption—§§ 694-696.
6. Disowning of notice on adoption—§§ 697-698.
7. Alternatives made prior to adoption—§§ 699-699A.
8. Registration prior to adoption—§ 699AA.
9. Effects of invalid adoptions—§ 699-699A.
10. Mode of proof and registration—§§ 699-699A.
11. Simultaneous adoptions—§ 699.
12. Obvious adoptions—§ 699A.
13. Customary adoption in the Punjab—§ 699B.

665. Adoption in other systems of law.—Adoption is not recognised by the Mahommedan law (a), nor is it recognised by the Parsi law. It is recognised by the Hindu law, but even in that system of law there may be a family (aa) or caste (b) custom prohibiting adoption, and if such custom is proved, effect will be given to it by the Courts.

666. Different forms of adoption.—The ancient Hindu law recognised five kinds of adopted sons. The modern Hindu law recognises only two, namely, the dattaka and the kritrima. The dattaka form is in use all over India. The kritrima form is prevalent in Mithila and the adjoining districts.

The ancient Hindu law recognised twelve kinds of sons, of whom five were adopted sons. Of these twelve only three are now recognised, namely, sons by appointment, sons given in adoption, and kritrima or sons made. The effects of the chapter deals with dattaka adoption, kritrima adoption, and customary adoption in the Punjab.

For dvyamushyayana see § 688 infra. For custom of gods dattaka see the undermentioned case (c).

For kritrima adoption see § 699 infra.

For Hindu adoption see § 699A infra.

For customary adoption in the Punjab see § 699B infra.

---

(a) Mohammedan adoption v. Mohammad Ismail (1906) 28 All. 466, 469.

(aa) Punnamma v. Sreenivasa (1965) 1 Cut. 466, 58 L.W. 115.

(b) Pandhari v. Bai Hirabai (1965) 67 Bom. 466, 68 L.W. 1216.

(c) Tukaram v. Bhalchandra Ashraf (1965) A.P.C. 1966, 68 Bom. L.R. 476.

447. Object of adoption.—The objects of adoption are twofold: the first is religious, to secure spiritual benefit to the adopter and his ancestors by having a son for the purpose of offering funeral cakes and libations of water to the manes of the adopter and his ancestors. The second is secular, to secure an heir and perpetuate the adopter's name (y).

The Supreme Court, agreeing with earlier decisions of the Privy Council, has expressed the view that the validity of an adoption is to be determined by spiritual rather than temporal considerations and that devolution of property is only of secondary importance (*y*1).

When a Hindu gives a boy in adoption, his act is, according to the Hindu Shastras, in the nature of a sacred gift voluntarily made. It is on that account that Manu requires the gift to be "confirmed by pouring water." A daughter given in marriage, which is called kanyadan and a son given in adoption, which is called putradan, stand in this respect on the same footing. Both are gifts for religious and secular purposes (z).

448. Requirements of a valid adoption.—No adoption is valid unless—

(1) the person adopting is lawfully capable of taking in adoption [§§ 449-473];

(2) the person giving in adoption is lawfully capable of giving in adoption [§§ 474-479];

(3) the person adopted is lawfully capable of being taken in adoption [§§ 480-487];

(4) the adoption is completed by an actual giving and taking [§ 489]; and

(5) the ceremony called datta homam (oblation to fire) has been performed. It is, however, doubtful whether the datta homam ceremony is essential in all cases to the validity of adoption [§ 490].

I.—PERSONS WHO MAY LAWFULLY TAKE IN ADOPTION

449. Who may adopt.—Every male may adopt provided he is otherwise competent to do so [§ 450]. A wife also can adopt to her husband, but no other female can adopt to any other male; thus a mother cannot adopt to her son, nor a sister to her brother. A wife cannot adopt during her husband's lifetime except with his express consent (a). After his death, she may adopt, in certain parts of India, only if he has expressly authorized her to adopt, and in other parts of India, even without such authority [§ 452]. But in no case can a wife or a widow adopt a son to herself; the adoption must be made to her husband. An adoption by a woman of a son to herself is invalid and it confers no legal rights upon the person adopted (b).

It will be seen that adoption can be made by the wife to the husband. It is true that if the husband had made an adoption during his lifetime his wife would have joined him. The wife in such a case is described as pratigrihitrimata (adopted mother).

---

(y) Sitaram v. Harihar (1911) 35 Bom. 169, 179, 180, 8 I.C. 625; Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas (1915) 42 I.A. 135, 154, 39 Bom. 441, 470, 29 I.C. 639, ('15) A.P.C. 7; Lal Hukum Tej Pratap Singh v. Collector of Etah (1952) 1 All. 60, ('53) A.A. 766.

(*y*1) Chandrasekhara v. Kulandaivelu ('63) A.S.C. 185, 193.

(z) 35 Bom. 169, 179, 180, 8 I.C. 625, supra.

(a) Narayan v. Nana (1870) 7 Bom. H.C.A.C. 153.

(b) Chowdry Pudum Singh v. Koer Oodey Singh (1869) 12 M.I.A. 350, 356; Narendra v. Dina Nath (1909) 36 Cal. 824, 3 I.C. 996.

Such an adoption though in an academic sense may perhaps be called joint adoption is not an adoption by the wife to herself but the adoption is to the husband (*b*1).

It will also be seen from the above that a Hindu may either himself adopt, or delegate the power to adopt to his wife. But he cannot delegate the power to any other person. Though a Hindu widow cannot under Hindu law adopt to herself, yet when she is domiciled in French India, she can, under French law, which as the law of domicile determines her capacity to adopt a son, as well as the status of the adopter, adopt a son to herself, and the son so adopted can succeed to her estate (c). As to kritrima son see § 515. By a special custom proved to exist amongst a particular community an adoption can be made to a person after his and his widow's death by the father or other agnates of the adoptive father (d).

450. Adoption by male.—(1) Subject to the provisions of any law for the time being in force, every male Hindu, who is of sound mind (e), and has attained the age of discretion, even though he may be a minor (f), may lawfully take a son in adoption, provided he has no son, grandson, or great-grandson, natural or adopted (g), living at the time of adoption.

The High Court of Bombay has held that a Hindu, who has a son, grandson or great-grandson living at the time, cannot adopt even if the son, grandson or great-grandson, is disqualified from inheriting on any of the grounds mentioned in § 98(1) above (h), e.g. if he is a congential idiot (i). The High Court of Madras has dissented from that view and held that he can adopt (j). Even according to the Madras view, such an adoption would, since the Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, be invalid, unless the son, grandson, or great-grandson was a lunatic or idiot from birth. See § 98(2).

(2) The fact that the adopter is a bachelor (k), or a widower (l) or that his wife does not consent to the adoption (m), or that she is at the time of adoption pregnant to his knowledge (n), does not prevent him from taking a son in adoption.

Illustration

A, who has an adopted son B, adopts C. The adoption is not valid, for a Hindu cannot have two adopted sons at the same time (o).

Minor.—Under the Indian Majority Act, 1875, minority extends to the end of the eighteenth year, except in cases where a guardian has been appointed by a Court of Justice, or where the minor is under the jurisdiction of the Court of Wards, in which cases it lasts till the end of the twenty-first year. The Indian Majority Act, 1875, does not apply to Hindus in matters of adoption. Therefore, even a minor may adopt or authorise his widow to adopt, provided he has attained the age of discretion, that is, has completed the age of fifteen years (p).

---

(*b*1) Kasturi v. Ponnammal ('61) A.S.C. 1302.

(c) C. S. Nataraja Pillai v. C. S. Subbaraya Chettiar ('50) A.P.C. 34.

(d) Kasiviswanathan v. Somasundaram, 51 C.W.N. 374 (P.C.).

(e) Tayammaul v. Sashachalla (1865) 10 M.I.A. 429, pp. 434-435; Seshamma v. Padmanabha Rao (1917) 40 Mad. 660, 33 I.C. 578, ('17) A.M. 265.

(f) Rajendro Narain v. Saroda (1871) 15 W.R. 548; Jumoona Dassya v. Bamasoondari (1876) 1 Cal. 289, pp. 295-96, 3 I.A. 72, pp. 83-84; Patel Manilal (1891) 15 Bom. 565; Sattiraju v. Venkataswami (1917) 40 Mad. 925, 928-29, 40 I.C. 518, ('18) A.M. 1072; Kashinath Balkrishna v. Anant Murlidhar (1942) Bom. 782, 203 I.C. 352, ('42) A.B. 284.

(g) Gopee Lall v. Chundraolee (1872) I.A. Sup. Vol. 131.

(h) Bharmappa v. Ujjangauda (1922) 46 Bom. 455, 65 I.C. 216, ('22) A.B. 173.

(i) Krishnaji Hanmant v. Raghavendra Keshav (1942) Bom. 486, 201 I.C. 401, ('42) A.B. 178.

(j) Nagammal v. Sankarappa (1931) 54 Mad. 576, 131 I.C. 9, ('31) A.M. 264.

(k) Gopal v. Narayan (1888) 12 Bom. 329; Durga Das v. Santosh (1945) 1 Cal. 17.

(l) Chandvasekharudu v. Bramhanna (1869) 4 Mad. H.C. 270.

(m) Rungama v. Atchama (1846) 4 M.I.A. 1.

(n) In Guramma v. Mallappa (1964) A.S.C. 510, 66 Bom. L.R. 284, recently decided by the Supreme Court, the whole question was examined. Nagabhushanam v. Seshammagaru (1881) 3 Mad. 180; Daulat Ram v. Ram Lal (1907) 29 All. 310; Hanmant v. Bhimacharya (1888) 12 Bom. 105.

(o) (1846) 4 M.I.A. 1, supra; Mohesh v. Taruck (1893) 20 Cal. 487, 20 I.A. 30.

(p) Sattiraju v. Venkataswami (1917) 40 Mad. 925, 928-29, 931-33, 40 I.C. 518, ('18) A.M. 1072.

Consent of Court of Wards.—There are local Acts which constitute Courts of Wards. These Acts contain provisions prohibiting a ward of the Court from adopting without the consent of the Court.

Illegitimate son.—The existence of an illegitimate son is no bar to an adoption (q).

Illatom adoption.—See the under-mentioned case (r).

Deformity.—A person who has become blind after he was born is not disqualified from taking a son in adoption (s). Nor is a person who is suffering from leprosy which is not of a virulent form (t). Reference may be made to the Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, which it is submitted could have bearing on the question.

451. Adoption by wife.—A wife cannot adopt a son to her husband during her husband's lifetime except with his express consent (u).

452. Adoption by widow.—The law as to adoption by a widow is different in different States (v):—

(1) In Mithila a widow cannot adopt at all, not even if she has the express authority of her husband.

(2) In Bengal (*v*1), Benares (w) and Madras a widow may adopt under an authority from her husband in that behalf. Such authority may be express or implied. It cannot be implied from the mere absence of a prohibition to adopt (x).

(3) In the Madras State a widow may also adopt without her husband's authority, if where the husband was separate at the time of his death, she obtains the consent of his sapindas, and where he was joint, she obtains the consent of his undivided coparceners. This subject is considered more fully in § 462 below.

Where the husband had given authority to adopt no question of consent of sapindas can arise (*x*1).

(4) In the Bombay State a widow may adopt even without any authority. See § 463 below.

In all parts of India except Madras and Punjab, the Jains observe the custom by which a widow is entitled to adopt to her husband without his authority. The rule is so well known and so well established by judicial decisions that it is no longer necessary to plead and prove it in any part of India except Madras and Punjab (y). Such custom prevails amongst the Agarwals of Marwar who generally adhere to Jainism (z) In Munnalal v. Rajkumar (*z*1) the Supreme Court pointed out that this custom has become

---

(q) Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundaram (1925) 48 Mad. 1, 93 I.C. 705, ('25) A.M. 497.

(r) Nalluri v. Kamepalli (1919) 46 I.A. 168, 42 Mad. 805, 51 I.C. 1, ('19) A.P.C. 162.

(s) Fakirnath v. Krushanchandra ('54) A. Orissa 176.

(t) Malojirao v. Tarabai ('56) A.B. 397.

(u) Narayan v. Nana (1870) 7 B.H.C.A.C. 153.

(v) Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 435-36.

(*v*1) Biswanath v. Dhapu ('66) A.C. 13 [Proof of authority—facts to be considered].

(w) Babu Motising v. Durgabai (1929) 53 Bom. 242, 114 I.C. 379, ('29) A.B. 57.

(x) Balasubrahmanya Pandya Thalaivar v. Subbayya Thevar (1938) 65 I.A. 93, (1938) Mad. 551, 40 Bom. L.R. 704, 72 I.C. 724, ('38) A.P.C. 34.

(*x*1) Vallabhalalji v. Mahalaxmi Bahuji ('62) A.S.C. 356, 64 Bom. L.R. 433.

(y) Prem Raja v. Mulchand Karwar (1947) 74 I.A. 254; Mangibai v. Suganchand (1948) A.P.C. 177, 53 C.W.N. 112; Laxmibai v. Pushpabai ('53) M.B. 193.

(z) Govindram v. Sheoprasad (1948) Nag. 98.

(*z*1) ('62) A.S.C. 1493.

a part of the law applicable to Jains in India (except in Madras and Punjab) by a long and uninterrupted course of acceptance and held that it governed Digamber Jains of the Porval sect residing in Madhya Pradesh.

In Mysore the law in respect of the authority of a widow to adopt under Mysore Act 10 of 1933 was in line with the law in the Bombay State (z2).

Among the Raghubansi Rajputs who immigrated from Ayodhya to Chindwara a widow may adopt without authority of her husband (a).

The difference of opinion between the various schools of Hindu law noted above arises from different interpretations put upon a text of Vasistha, which says: "Nor let a woman give or accept a son, unless with the assent of her lord." All the schools accept the above text as authoritative, but the Mithila school takes it to mean that the assent of the husband must be given at the time of the adoption, and, therefore, a widow cannot adopt at all. The Benares and Bengal schools interpret the text as requiring an express permission given by the husband in his lifetime, but capable of taking effect after his death. The Bombay school explains the text away by saying that it applies only to an adoption made in the husband's lifetime, and is not to be taken to restrict the widow's power to do that which the general law prescribes as beneficial to her husband's soul. According to this school the assent of the husband is presumed, so that a widow may adopt even to her deceased minor husband (b). The law in Madras stands intermediate between the law in Bengal and the law in Bombay. According to the Dravida (Madras) school, the word "husband," or "lord" in the above text is merely illustrative, and means the guardians of the widow for the time being, so that the assent of the husband's sapindas who are the widow's guardians after her husband's death is sufficient to enable her to adopt; but she cannot adopt without their assent even if he was separate at the time of his death.

Adoption by Jain widow.—A Jain widow cannot adopt a son to her husband without the authority of her husband or the consent of his sapindas (c), in the absence of proof of custom to the contrary (d). But the custom is so universal and so well recognised in judicial decisions, that except in Madras and Punjab, the onus of proof no longer lies on those who assert it but upon those who assert an exception to it (e).

ADOPTION BY WIDOW UNDER EXPRESS AUTHORITY FROM HER HUSBAND

453. Who may give authority to adopt.—Every Hindu of sound mind who has attained the age of discretion (f) may authorize his wife (except in Mithila) to adopt a son to him after his death, even if he has not attained the age of majority (g).

The authority to adopt may be given by the husband, even if he was a member of a Mitakshara joint family at the time of his death (h). Thus if A and B are members of a Mitakshara joint family, either of them may authorize his wife to adopt a son to him after his death. As to adoption by a minor, see notes to § 450 above.

454. Authority to widow to adopt.—(1) Authority can be given to widow alone.—The authority to adopt can be given to the widow alone, and not to any other person, nor can it be given to the widow conjointly with another (i).

---

(z2) Eramma v. Muddappa ('66) A.S.C. 1137.

(a) Mst. Kesarbai v. Indarsingh (1945) Nag. 1, 71 I.A. 190.

(b) Patel Vandravan v. Patel Manilal (1891) 15 Bom. 565.

(c) Peria Ammani v. Krishnasami (1893) 16 Mad. 182; Gettappa v. Eramma (1927) 50 Mad. 228, 97 I.C. 503, ('27) A.M. 228.

(d) Lakshmi Chand v. Gatto Bai (1886) 8 All. 319; Manohar Lal v. Banarsi Das (1907) 29 All. 495; Asharfi Kunwar v. Rup Chand (1908) 30 All. 197; Harnabh Pershad v. Mandil Dass (1900) 27 Cal. 379.

(e) See foot note (y) on previous page.

(f) Reference may be made to Aravamudha Iyengar v. Ramaswami (1953) Mad. 123, ('52) A.M. 245.

(g) Patel Vandravan v. Patel Manilal (1891) 15 Bom. 565.

(h) See Bachoo v. Mankorebai (1907) 31 Bom. 373, 34 I.A. 107.

(i) Amrito Lal v. Surnomoye (1900) 27 Cal. 996, 27 I.A. 128; Bhagvandas v. Rajmal (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 241 [Jains]. As to effect of provisions of s. 37 of the P. Court of Wards Act see Thakurji v. Parmeshwar Dayal ('60) A. All. 339.

(2) Joint authority to widow and another.—Where the authority to adopt is given to the widow conjointly with another person, the authority is void and an adoption made in pursuance of such authority is invalid (j).

(3) Authority to widow to adopt with consent of a specified person.—But though a Hindu cannot join any other person with his wife in making an adoption, he may direct his wife to adopt with the consent of a specified person, or he may direct her not to adopt without the consent of a specified person. Where the direction is to adopt with the consent of a specified person, and it appears from the context and surrounding circumstances that the consent was to be a condition precedent, as where the wife is very young and the paramount intention shown by the document giving authority to adopt is not to obtain the spiritual benefits arising from the adoption but to have a son to inherit, an adoption made without the consent of the person named is invalid, whether such person be alive or dead at the time of adoption (k).

Where the boy to be adopted was to be chosen by four executors and one of the executors selected the boy after consulting the co-executors who did not express their disapproval either before or at the time of adoption, the adoption was held to be valid (l). Where the direction is that she should not adopt without the consent of a specified person, an adoption made without such consent is invalid in every case whether such person be alive or dead at the time of adoption (m). But where she is merely directed to consult or take the advice of certain persons before making an adoption, such direction is merely recommendatory and not mandatory, and an adoption made without consulting such persons is not invalid (n).

Illustrations

(a) A by his will authorizes his wife and his executors to adopt a son to him. If an adoption is made in pursuance of such authority by A's widow and his executors, the adoption is invalid. The adoption will also be invalid, even if it is made by the widow alone, for the authority to adopt is not given to her singly, but to her conjointly with others.

(b) A Hindu by his will appoints five persons as executors and trustees, and authorizes his widow to make an adoption with the consent of those persons. Four of the trustees prove the will and undertake the trust, but the fifth declines to do so. An adoption by the widow with the consent of the four who prove the will is valid: Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas (1915) 42 I.A. 135, 39 Bom. 441, 29 I.C. 639, ('15) A.PC. 7.

(c) A by his will authorises his wife to adopt a son and directs that she must adopt only a boy approved by five persons named as trustees. One of them declined to act and three others died. Adoption by the widow with the consent of the remaining trustee is valid (o).

455. Authority to co-widows.—(1) Where there are two or more widows, and the authority to adopt is given to one of them only, she may adopt without consulting the other widows, and she alone, it seems, can adopt (p).

---

(j) Amrito Lal v. Surnomoye (1900) 27 Cal. 996, 27 I.A. 128.

(k) Rajendra Prasad v. Gopal Prasad (1930) 57 I.A. 296, 10 Pat. 187, 127 I.C. 743, ('30) A.P.C. 242, reversing s.c. in (1928) 7 Pat. 245, 108 I.C. 545, ('29) A.P. 51; Radha Madhab Jiu v. Rajendra Prasad Bose (1933) 12 Pat. 727, 149 I.C. 890, ('33) A.P. 250.

(l) Rattan Lal v. Baij Nath (1938) Lah. 1 (P.C.) 169 I.C. 902, ('37) A.P.C. 292.

(m) Rangubai v. Bhagirthibai (1878) 2 Bom. 377, (1900) 27 Cal. 996, 1002, 27 I.A. 128, 132 supra; Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas (1915) 42 I.A. 135, 39 Bom. 441, 29 I.C. 639, ('15) A.P.C. 7.

(n) Surendra Nandan v. Sailaja (1891) 18 Cal. 385, cited with approval in Suryanarayana v. Venkataramana (1906) 29 Mad. 382, 33 I.A. 145; Om Prakash Goela v. Mt. Chandar Kala (1950) A.E.P. 35.

(o) Kotturuswami v. Veeravva (1959) A.S.C. 577.

(p) Strange's Hindu Law, vol. ii, 91; Mayne's Hindu Law, 118.

(2) In Narasimha v. Parthasarathy (q) a case from Madras, their Lordships of the Privy Council left it an open question, whether if a power to adopt is given to two or more widows jointly, such power would be valid, but they held that even if it were so, it must be exercised by them all and that it could not be exercised after the death of any one of them.

In that case their Lordships observed that such a power might be supported by custom, and that there were indications in the cases cited before them that in some parts of India such a power might perhaps be interpreted as giving a preferential right of adoption to the senior widow. It has since been held by the High Court of Madras that where a joint power of adoption is given to two widows, an adoption made by them jointly is not invalid, though the son adopted would in law be the son only of the senior widow who alone has the preferential right to adopt, the junior widow being considered only as his step-mother. The decision proceeds on what is called "the genius of the Hindu law" and "the custom and consciousness of the community at large at any rate in South India" (r). Where a deed conferred on both the widows authority to adopt and further provided that if any one was not willing to adopt, the other may do so, it was held that the authority was valid (s).

(3) Where the authority to adopt is given to the widows severally, the senior widow has the prior right to exercise the power of adoption. The junior widow has no right to adopt unless the senior widow refuses to do so (t). A widow cannot adopt when her co-widow has validly adopted and the adopted son is living (u). See §§ 462(8), 463(4), and 470.

Illustration

A Hindu testator, having two wives, directed by his will as follows: "You" (meaning his two wives) "should adopt a boy who is our sonnihita whenever it strikes you that our Samastanam should continue. In all matters both should act without quarrelling." Both wives survived the testator. After the death of one of the widows the other adopted a son to the testator. Held by the Privy Council that the power to adopt was joint, and that it could not be validly exercised by one widow after the death of the other, and that the adoption was therefore invalid: Narasimha v. Parthasarathy (1914) 37 Mad. 199, 41 I.A. 51, 29 I.C. 166.

456. Form of authority.—(1) The authority to adopt may be given verbally (v) or in writing. If it is in writing, it must be registered, unless the authority is given under a will (w).

(2) If the authority is contained in a will, the will must be executed in accordance with the formalities required by the Indian Succession Act, 1925, s. 63. Although a will made by an undivided member of a joint Mitakshara family, cannot take effect on the testator's interest on the joint estate, yet a power of adoption contained in a testamentary document properly executed would be a perfectly operative provision (x).

---

(q) (1914) 37 Mad. 199, 220-221, 41 I.A. 51, 69-70, 23 I.C. 166; Lachhmi v. Musammut Parbati (1920) 42 All. 266, 54 I.C. 910, ('20) A.A. 166. See also Sarada Prosad v. Rama Pati (1912) 17 C.W.N. 319, 16 I.C. 817.

(r) Tiruvengala v. Butchayya (1929) 52 Mad. 373, 113 I.C. 347, ('29) A.M. 11.

(s) Raja Ram v. Joti Prasad (1943) All. 747, 209 I.C. 169, ('43) A.A. 319.

(t) Bijoy v. Ranjit (1911) 38 Cal. 694, 12 I.C. 460; Mondakini Dasi v. Adinath Dey (1891) 18 Cal. 69; Ranjit Lal v. Bijoy Krishna (1912) 39 Cal. 582, 14 I.C. 17.

(u) Shivappa Rudrappa v. Rudrava Chanbasappa (1933) 57 Bom. 1, 142 I.C. 164, ('32) A.B. 410.

(v) Oral authority must be strictly proved, Ramnath v. Ramgopal (1951) Nag. 294, ('51) A.N. 434; Sumantrabai v. Rishabhkumar (1953) Nag. 69, ('52) A.N. 295.

(w) Mutasaddi Lal v. Kundan Lal (1906) 28 All. 377, 33 I.A. 55. Registration Act, 1908, s. 17(3). See Rawat v. Beni Bahadur (1926) 1 Luck. 403, 93 I.C. 567, ('26) A.P.C. 97.

(x) Om Prakash Goela v. Mt. Chandar Kala ('50) A.E.P. 35; whether a document is to be read as a will or a mere authority to adopt must be a matter of construction.

(3) Minor's will.—If an authority to adopt is given by a minor by a writing purporting to be a will, the document must be registered. The reason is that a minor cannot make a will (y), and the writing can only be treated as non-testamentary, in which case it must be registered as required by law (z).

457. Conditional authority.—The authority to adopt may be conditional, but the condition must not be illegal. An authority to adopt in the event of a disagreement between the widow and the natural born son, even if the son should then be living, is invalid (a); the reason is that a Hindu cannot adopt while he has a son living [§ 450]. But an authority to adopt in the event of the natural born son dying under age and unmarried is valid (b).

458. Authority must be strictly followed.—The authority to adopt must be strictly obeyed (c). The duty of the widow is to obey such directions as her husband may have given as to the way in which she should exercise the power of adoption to him (d) or as to the boy to be adopted (e). Where the husband directed that the widow should adopt a boy from his family or of his gotra the adoption of any other boy is invalid (f). Thus where the authority to the widow is to adopt within a specified period, she cannot adopt after the expiration of that period (g).

Where the widow is authorized by her husband to adopt, "If no male or female child should be born to him," she cannot adopt if a daughter is born to him, although she may be born after his death (h). It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that where the widow is authorized by her husband to adopt a boy named by him, and she adopts the boy, she is not precluded from adopting another boy after the death of the adopted boy, unless there is a direction prohibiting her from adopting any other boy. Such a direction to operate as a prohibition against the widow adopting any boy, except the boy named by him, must be explicitly made and clearly intended by the husband to limit the discretion of the widow for all time and on every occasion; otherwise after his death his widow might validly make an adoption to him (i).

Illustrations

(a) A authorised his wife, who was then pregnant, to adopt, in case "the son that might be born" dies. A dies, and after his death the widow is delivered of a daughter. The authority to adopt cannot be validly exercised (j).

(b) A authorizes his widow to adopt "one of the sons" of B. The authority to adopt will be deemed to have been strictly pursued if any one of B's sons is adopted, whether he was in existence at the date of the authority or was born thereafter. Such an authority does not limit the widow's choice to a son of B who was in existence at the date of the authority: Mutasaddi Lal v. Kundan Lal (1906) 28 All. 377, 33 I.A. 55.

---

(y) Indian Succession Act, 1925, s. 59.

(z) Vijayaratnam v. Sudarsana (1925) 48 Mad. 614, 52 I.A. 305, 89 I.C. 733, ('25) A.P.C. 196.

(a) Solukhna v. Ramdolal (1811) 1 Beng. S.D. 324 (2nd ed., 434).

(b) Vellanki v. Venkata Rama (1876) 1 Mad. 174, 4 I.A. 1.

(c) Chowdry Pudum Singh v. Koer Oodey Singh (1869) 12 M.I.A. 350, 356, 2 Beng. L.R. (P.C.) 101, 12 W.R. (P.C.) 1; Surendro Keshab v. Doorgasoondery (1892) 19 I.A. 108, 122, 19 Cal. 513; Rajendra Prasad v. Gopal Prasad (1930) 57 I.A. 296, 303, 10 Pat. 187, 196, 127 I.C. 743, ('30) A.P.C. 242.

(d) Sitabai v. Bapu (1920) 47 I.A. 202, 205, 47 Cal. 1012, 1018, 57 I.C. 1, ('21) A.P.C. 88; Yadao v. Namdeo (1921) 48 I.A. 513, 522, 49 Cal. 1, 12, 64 I.C. 536, ('22) A.P.C. 216. See Rajendra Prasad v. Gopal Prasad (1928) 7 Pat. 245, 108 I.C. 545, ('29) A.P. 51.

(e) Kalawati Devi v. Dharam Prakash (1933) 55 All. 78, 60 I.A. 90, 142 I.C. 1, ('33) A.P.C. 71; Rajgopalachari v. Venkat Chudamma ('36) A.M. Hyd. 153.

(f) Sundarasivudu v. Adinarayana (1940) Mad. 233, 189 I.C. 303, ('39) A.M. 909.

(g) Mutasaddi Lal v. Kundan Lal (1906) 28 All. 377, 33 I.A. 55.

(h) Bhagwat Koer v. Dhanukhdhari (1919) 46 I.A. 259, 47 Cal. 466, 53 I.C. 347, ('19) A.P.C. 75.

(i) Yadao v. Namdeo (1921) 48 I.A. 513, 49 Cal. 1, 64 I.C. 536, ('22) A.P.C. 216; Lakshmibai v. Rajaji (1898) 22 Bom. 996.

(j) Mohendrololl v. Rookiney Dabee (1864) 1 Coryton 42.

(c) A directs by his will that his widow W should "so far as possible adopt S, the second son of my elder brother: if he cannot be obtained, any other boy should be adopted with the advice of the trustees." In consequence of ill-feelings arising between W and S and his family, W adopts, with the consent of the trustees, her sister's son. The adoption is invalid. The words, "so far as possible," mean that unless there are conditions outside the will preventing the possibility of the adoption, the widow when she does adopt, is to exercise her power in favour of S. The boy could be obtained and mere ill-feeling between W and S and his family could not justify W in disobeying the mandatory directions of her husband: Sitabai v. Bapu (1920) 47 I.A. 202, 47 Cal. 1012, 57 I.C. 1, (21) A.P.C. 88.

459. Exercise of authority to adopt discretionary: no limit of time.—A widow who is authorised by her husband to adopt may or may not adopt at her discretion. She is under no legal obligation to adopt (*j*1), even if she has been expressly directed by her husband to do so. Her rights to the husband's estate are not in any way affected by her omission or refusal to adopt (k). Nor is there any limit to the time during which she may act upon the authority given to her [§ 471(4)]. See, however, §§ 471-472.

As the widow is under no obligation to make an adoption she can postpone making an adoption till the boy indicated by her husband whom she may not like is no longer available, and an adoption of another boy after the one selected by her husband ceases to be available is not invalid on that ground (l).

459A. Agreement not to adopt is contrary to public policy.—An agreement by a widow with a reversioner or any other person not to adopt a son to her husband, or which imposes on her power to adopt a restraint absolute or partial, is void as opposed to public policy and is not binding on her even if there is valuable consideration for the agreement. Such an agreement is also repugnant to Hindu law (*l*1).

460. Revocation of power to adopt.—(1) An authority to adopt may be revoked either expressly or impliedly.

(2) If the authority is contained in a will to which the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, apply, it can only be revoked in the manner provided by sec. 70 of that Act.

Illustration

A Hindu disposes of his ancestral property by a will made in 1889. At the date of the will he was the sole surviving coparcener with regard to that property, and as such entitled to dispose of the property by will [§ 255]. The will contains an authority to the widow to adopt V if he did not adopt him in his lifetime, and, in the event of V's death in the wife's lifetime, to adopt P. The testator adopts V in 1890, the legal result of which is that he admits V as a coparcener in the family. He then makes another will which contains a disposition of property inconsistent with the first will but contains no express revocation of the earlier will nor of the authority to adopt therein contained. The testator dies leaving his widow and V. V dies next without issue. After V's death the widow adopts P. The adoption of P is valid, for though the second will is invalid in so far as it purports to dispose of the coparcenary property [the testator not then

---

(*j*1) Chandrasekhara v. Kulandaivelu ('63) A.S.C. 185, 192.

(k) Mutasaddi Lal v. Kundan Lal (1906) 28 All. 377, 33 I.A. 55; Shamachaboo v. Dwarkadas (1888) 12 Bom. 202; Uma Sundari v. Sourobinee (1881) 7 Cal. 288; Narayana Ayyangar v. Vengu Ammal (1938) Mad. 621.

(l) Vanka Lakshminarayana v. Mangalappalli ('50) A.M. 601, (1950) 1 Mad. L.J. 537; Sri Hari Rao v. Venkaiah (1953) Mad. 624, ('53) A.M. 661.

(*l*1) Punjabrao v. Sheshrao ('62) A.B. 175.

being the sole coparcener], it does not revoke the authority to adopt contained in the first will: Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal (1916) 43 I.A. 20, 39 Mad. 107, 32 I.C. 373, ('15) A.P.C. 37.

Note.—As to the termination of a widow's power to adopt, even under the authority of her husband, see §§ 471 and 472.

Having noted the peculiar features of an adoption by a widow under an express authority from her husband, we proceed to deal with adoption by a widow without such authority. This is possible only in the Madras and Bombay States.

ADOPTION BY WIDOW WITHOUT HUSBAND'S AUTHORITY

461. Adoption by widow without husband's authority.—The only parts of India where a widow may adopt without an express authority from her husband are the Madras and Bombay States.

462. In Madras.—In the Madras State, a widow may adopt without authority from her husband, subject to the following conditions [§ 452 (3)]:—

(1) She cannot adopt, if there is an express or implied prohibition from her husband. A prohibition ought not to be inferred from the mere fact that the husband and wife were living separate (m). See § 463(1).

(2) If the husband was separated at the time of his death, she must obtain the consent of her father-in-law, and his consent as the head of the family is sufficient. If the father-in-law is then dead, she must obtain the consent of her husband's sapindas, but need not obtain the consent of the daughter's son (n) even though he be the next heir (o). But the consent necessary to validate the adoption is not the consent of every sapinda, however remote (p). The starting point relating to the doctrine of consent of the sapindas was first enunciated by the Privy Council in the case of Collector of Madura popularly known as the Ramnad case (p). It was developed by decisions of the Privy Council and the Madras High Court and culminated in the decision of the Supreme Court in Tahsil Naidu v. Kulla Naidu (*p*1). The consent required is that of a substantial majority of the nearest sapindas who are capable of forming an intelligent and honest judgment in the matter (q). For instance, where the consent of the nearest divided sapindas was sought on the ground that the only undivided sapinda was insane and some of them refused to consent alleging that he was sane, while he was really insane, it was held that their refusal may be ignored (r). Where the nearest sapindas have capriciously withheld their consent, all that is necessary is a preponderance of opinion among the reversioners in favour of the adoption. There need be no family council in the order of the degree of relationship nor is it necessary that all of them should be consulted. The widow need not consult

---

(m) Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397 [known as the Ramnad case]; Muthusami v. Pulavaratal (1922) 45 Mad. 266, 66 I.C. 504, ('22) A.M. 106.

(n) Seshamma v. Narasimharao (1940) Mad. 454, 188 I.C. 250, ('40) A.M. 356.

(o) Ghanta China v. Moparthi, 51 C.W.N. 875 (P.C.).

(p) Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397; Viswasundara v. Somasundra (1920) 43 Mad. 876, 59 I.C. 609, ('20) A.M. 451 [consent of daughter's son not necessary].

(*p*1) See f.n. (*t*1) below.

(q) Adusumilli v. Adusumilli (1920) 47 I.A. 99, 43 Mad. 650, 56 I.C. 391, ('20) A.P.C. 4; Venkatakrishnamma v. Annapurnamma (1900) 23 Mad. 486.

(r) Chellathammal alias Ammamuthammal v. Kalitheertha Pillai (1943) Mad. 107, 202 I.C. 747, ('42) A.M. 606.

her step-daughter (s). The absence of consent on the part of the nearest sapindas cannot be made good by the authorisation of distant relatives whose assent is more likely to be influenced by improper motives (t). This does not mean that the consent of a near sapinda who is incapable of forming a judgment on the matter, such as a minor or a person who being dumb is partially incapacitated (*t*1) or a lunatic is either sufficient or necessary; nor does it exclude the view that, where a near relative is clearly proved to be actuated by corrupt or malicious motives, or refuses his consent without exercising an honest judgment in breach of his duty (u), his dissent may be disregarded. Nor does it contemplate cases where the nearest sapinda happens to be in a distant country and it is impossible without great difficulty to obtain his consent, or where he is a convict or suffering a term of imprisonment. Save in exceptional cases such as those mentioned above, the consent of the nearest sapindas must be asked (v), and if it is not asked, it is no excuse to say that they would certainly have refused (w). A widow who has not been authorised by her husband has to consult all the nearest sapindas. Where out of five such sapindas she had approached only three of them and obtained their consent it was held, in a very recent decision, that it was not enough to validate the adoption (*w*1). In short, "there should be such proof of assent on the part of the sapindas as should be sufficient to support the inference that the adoption was made by the widow not from capricious or corrupt motives or in order to defeat the interest of this or that sapinda, but upon a fair consideration by what may be called a family council, of the expediency of substituting an heir by adoption to the deceased husband" (x). The assent of the sapindas is necessary because of the supposed incapacity of the widow for independent action, and not by reason of the effect of adoption upon the proprietory rights of the coparceners or reversioners; property considerations are no more paramount in the case of an undivided family than in the case of a divided family (y). In the absence of agnate reversioners, the widow can adopt with the consent of the nearest cognate reversioner, e.g., the father's sister's son (z). But the consent of cognates will be sufficient only when there are no agnate reversioners (a). It has been held in Rangoon that, if there are no sapindas, the widow has an unrestricted power to adopt (b). But this view seems to be opposed to principle and authority (c).

In Tahsil Naidu v. Kulla Naidu (*c*1) the Supreme Court recently held that a Hindu widow, even if she happens to be the nearest sapinda, would not

---

(s) Brahma Sastri v. Sumitramma (1934) 57 Mad. 411, 151 I.C. 200, ('34) A.M. 191; Subba Rao v. Venkata Satyanarayana (1953) 2 M.L.J. 97, ('53) A.M. 755.

(t) Veera v. Balasurya (1918) 45 I.A. 265, 41 Mad. 998, 48 I.C. 706, ('18) A.P.C. 97.

(*t*1) ('70) A.S.C. 1673.

(u) Chandrashekhara v. Kudandaivelu ('56) A.M. 370; Narasimham v. Venkata Narasimha Rao ('63) A.A.P. 78; Kotial v. Sitaramayya ('60) A.A.P. 578; Somiah v. Rattamma ('59) A.A.P. 244; Subbayya v. Ramakoteswara Rao ('58) A.A.P. 479.

(v) Adusumilli v. Adusumilli (1920) 47 I.A. 99, 102, 43 Mad. 650, 654, 56 I.C. 391, ('20) A.P.C. 4.

(w) Venkamma v. Subrahmaniam (1907) 34 I.A. 22, 30 Mad. 50, 53, affimg. (1903) 26 Mad. 627.

(*w*1) C. S. V. Sarma v. C. Ramalakshmamma ('72) A.A.P. 270.

(x) Vellanki v. Venkata Rama (1876) 1 Mad. 174, 190-191, 4 I.A. 11; Subba Rao v. Satyanarayana ('53) A.M. 755, (1953) 2 M.L.J. 97.

(y) Chandrasekhara v. Kulandaivelu ('63) A.S.C. 185, 194. Venneti Sundara Rama Rao v. Satyanarayanamurthi (1949) 2 M.L.J. 199, ('50) A.M. 74, (1950) Mad. 461.

(z) Kesar Singh v. Secretary of State (1926) 49 Mad. 652, 95 I.C. 651, ('26) A.M. 881.

(a) Chandrappa v. Gyanamma ('53) Hyd. 275 (F.B.).

(b) Patnaloo Appalswamy v. E. Moosalaya (1934) 12 Rang. 22, 147 I.C. 716, ('33) A.R. 334.

(c) Balasubrahmanya Pandya Thalaivar v. Subbayya Thevar, (1938) 65 I.A. 93, (1938) Mad. 551, 40 Bom. L.R. 704. 172 I.C. 724, ('38) A.P.C. 34.

(*c*1) See f.n. (*t*1) above.

be a competent adviser and, consequently, there is no requirement that her consent must be obtained for validating the adoption. The consent must be obtained from the nearest male sapindas. This conclusion was founded on the principle that if a widow cannot exercise an independent judgment in the matter of making an adoption herself it would follow that she would not be able to exercise an independent judgment in the matter of giving consent to adoption by another widow.

Where the nearest sapinda consents to an adoption but dies before the adoption, the adoption is nevertheless valid, provided there has been no material change of circumstances during the interval and there are no other grounds on which the adoption when actually made could be objected to by the then nearest sapindas. A widow may adopt with the authority of the nearest sapinda though no particular boy was mentioned, within a reasonable period and when the circumstances have not materially changed (d). The requirement of consent is not a matter of form but of substance (e). Where a Hindu dies leaving a widow and a son, the widow, of course, cannot adopt to her husband while the son is living—not even with his consent. But the son may consent to an adoption by the widow (his own mother) by his will, and such consent will validate an adoption made after his death. The fact that the son could have no interest in the estate after his death does not vitiate the consent. Nor is the adoption vitiated by the fact that the consent of sapindas living at the time of adoption has not been obtained (f). A sapinda having duly given his consent cannot arbitrarily or capriciously withdraw it (g).

12 M.I.A. 397—adoption with consent of all nearest sapindas held valid.

4 I.A. 1= 1 Mad. 174— " " " " " " "

45 I.A. 265 = 41 Mad. 998 = 48 I.C. 706 = ('18) A.P.C. 97—adoption made without consent of nearest sapindas held invalid.

47 I.A. 99 = 43 Mad. 650 = 56 I.C. 391 = ('20) A.P.C. 4—adoption with consent of 1 out of 6 sapindas, it not having been proved that the widow had applied for the consent of the rest except one, held invalid.

(3) If the husband was joint at the time of his death, the widow must obtain the consent of her father-in-law, and such consent is sufficient. If the father-in-law is then dead, the consent of all the husband's brothers or other coparceners in whom the interest of the deceased has vested by survivorship would probably be required, since it would be unjust to allow the widow to defeat their interest by introducing a new coparcener against their will (h).

Where the husband dies leaving undivided coparceners and divided sapindas, the widow should obtain the consent of the undivided coparceners. An adoption with the consent of divided sapindas, but without the consent of the undivided coparceners is, it seems, invalid (i). But when the undivided coparcener refused his assent because it

---

(d) Vasireddi Venkayya v. Gopu Sreeramulu (1942) Mad. 163, ('41) A.M. 935 [F.B.]. The consent can be in general terms and it is not necessary that the person to be adopted should be specified, see f.n. (*c*1) above.

(e) Bodo v. Dondo ('52) Orissa 307, 311.

(f) Annapurnamma v. Appayya (1929) 52 Mad. 620, 119 I.C. 389, ('29) A.M. 577 [F.B.] overruling Mami v. Subbarayar (1913) 36 Mad. 145, 19 I.C. 663.

(g) Sivasuryanarayana v. Audinarayana (1937) Mad. 347 (F.B.), 166 I.C. 339, ('37) A.M. 110.

(h) Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 441-442. But see Venkatakrishnamma v. Annapurnamma (1900) 23 Mad. 486, 487-488, and Narayanasami v. Mangammal (1905) 28 Mad. 315, 319.

(i) Sri Raghunada v. Brozo Kishoro (1876) 1 Mad. 69, 3 I.A. 154.

might injuriously affect his coparcenary rights, or for other improper reasons, such refusal might be disregarded by the widow; and in such circumstances an adoption made with the consent of the divided paternal grandfather of the widow's husband has been held to be valid (j). The widow of a member of a joint family can adopt a son to her deceased husband with the assent of the nearest divided sapindas when the only surviving coparcener is insane (k).

Though the husband was joint at the time of his death, and the coparceners afterwards separate, the widow can adopt with their consent. In this case the widow was in enjoyment of her father's property as heir and the father's reversioners questioned the validity of the adoption (l).

(4) The scope, nature and manner of the exercise of the power of sapindas to give consent to adoption by a widow was reviewed by the Supreme Court in Chandrasekhara v. Kulandaivelu (*l*1). It was held that a sapinda has no right to refuse to give his consent or impose a condition that the widow should take a sapinda in preference to a non-sapinda in adoption. Such a condition would be entirely extraneous to the question of selection.

(5) Where the consent is obtained by the widow by a misrepresentation, as, for instance, that her husband had authorized her to adopt, but no such authority was given in fact, the adoption is invalid (m).

(6) Where the consent is given by the husband's kinsmen from interested motives, the adoption is invalid (n). It is also invalid where the consent is purchased, that is obtained by the widow in exchange for a sum of money or other valuable consideration (o). But there is nothing improper in a coparcener making it a condition of his consent that his own share should not be reduced by the adoption (p).

(7) Where the consent of the husband's kinsmen has been obtained, the widow's power to adopt is co-extensive with that of the husband. She may, therefore, adopt even an only son (which, though irreligious, is not illegal), just as much as her husband could have done (q) [§ 481].

(8) An adoption made by the senior widow with the consent of the sapindas is valid, though made without the consent of the junior widow (r). But an adoption made by a junior widow without the consent of the senior widow is invalid though made with the consent of her husband's sapindas (s).

(9) As to widow's motive in making an adoption, see the undermentioned case (*s*1) and § 469 infra.

463. In Bombay.—In the Bombay State a widow may adopt without authority from her husband, subject to the following conditions [§ 452 (4)]:—

---

(f) Venneti Sundara Rama Rao v. Satyanarayanamurthi (50) A.M. 74, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 199.

(k) Chellathammal alias Ammamuthummal v. Kalitheertha Pillai (1943) Mad. 107, 202 I.C. 747, ('42) A.M. 606.

(l) Panyam v. Ramalakshmamma (1932) 55 Mad. 581, 138 I.C. 170, ('32) A.M. 227.

(*l*1) ('63) A.S.C. 185.

(m) Ganesa v. Gopala (1880) 2 Mad. 270, 7 I.A. 173; Venkamma v. Subrahmaniam (1907) 30 Mad. 50, 34 I.A. 22; Aravamudha Iyengar v. Ramaswami (1953) Mad. 123, ('52) A.M. 215. Reference may be made to Gopalaswami v. Siddammal ('58) A.M. 488.

(n) (1880) 2 Mad. 270, 7 I.A. 173, supra.

(o) Danakoti v. Balsundara (1913) 36 Mad. 19, 18 I.C. 980, explaining Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, 443.

(p) Srinivasa v. Rangasami (1907) 30 Mad. 450.

(q) Sri Balusu Gurulingaswami v. Sri Balusu Ramalakshmamma (1899) 22 Mad. 398, at p. 408, 26 I.A. 113 at p. 128.

(r) (1905) 28 Mad. 315, supra; K. Varadamma v. Kanchi Shankara Reddi ('57) Andh. Pra. 933.

(s) Raiah Venkatappa v. Benga Rao (1916) 39 Mad. 772, 30 I.C. 106, ('16) A.M. 919; Muthusami v. Pulavaratal (1922) 45 Mad. 266, 66 I.C. 504, ('22) A.M. 106.

(*s*1) Tahsil Naidu v. Kulla Naidu ('70) A.S.C. 1673, 1677.

(1) She cannot adopt, if there be an express or implied prohibition from her husband (t). A mere refusal by her husband to adopt does not of itself amount to such a prohibition (u). Further, she cannot dispute an adoption made by her husband (v), nor can she adopt during the lifetime of a son adopted by her husband, though the validity of the adoption by her husband is doubtful (w). The power of a widow to adopt after her husband's death is subject only to such restrictions if any as he may have imposed upon her (x).

As a Hindu widow in Bombay has an inherent power to adopt, a prohibition or restriction, by the husband must be explicit. Where the husband prohibited the adoption of a son of V or K, but recommended that the son of one of his nephews should be adopted and the parents of the nephews were all dead, it was held that the adoption of a son of a nephew was valid (y). The statement by the testator who gave all his property for charity that he is not going to adopt and that he is not going to give authority to his wife to adopt does not amount to an implied prohibition by him of an adoption by the widow in respect of watan property. The adoption by the widow after his death (which in Bombay requires no authority) is valid as regards that property (z). See § 462(1).

The law in respect of authority of a widow in Mysore State was in line with the law in Bombay State (*z*1).

(2) If the husband was separate at the time of his death, and the widow has succeeded to his estate as his heir, she may take a son in adoption without the consent of her husband's sapindas (a).

(3) The law relating to the power (to adopt) of a widow, where husband was joint at the time of his death, has been the subject of fluctuations. Four distinct landmarks may be recognised.

(i) (1879-1921). In 1879, a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court held (b) that such a widow cannot adopt, when she has not the authority of her husband or the consent of his undivided coparceners. In 1891, it was held that the consent of the father-in-law at the time of adoption is sufficient (c).

(ii) (1921-1925). In the case of Yadao v. Namdeo (d), which went up on appeal to the Judicial Committee from the Madhya Pradesh, the parties were Hindus to whom the Hindu law applicable to Hindus of the Mahratta country of the State of Bombay applied. The facts were that one Pundlik, his cousin Namdeo, and Namdeo's sons Rambhau and Pandurang were members of a joint family. Pundlik died childless in 1905. Soon after, Namdeo gave his son Pandurang in adoption to Pundlik's widow. The adoption was evidenced by a deed. Pandurang died unmarried in 1907 and the widow adopted a stranger without the consent of Namdeo. The Judicial Commissioner of Nagpur held that Pandurang and Namdeo's family were undivided at the time of Pandurang's death and that the adoption, having been made without the consent of Namdeo and his son, was invalid. The Judicial Committee reversed the decision and held that the adoption was valid.

---

(t) Gopal v. Vishnu (1899) 23 Bom. 250, 256; Lakshmibai v. Saraswatibai (1899) 23 Bom. 789, 795-797; Malgauda v. Babaji (1913) 37 Bom. 107, 17 I.C. 746.

(u) Sitabai v. Govindrao (1927) 51 Bom. 217, 101 I.C. 46, ('27) A.B. 151; Ishwar Dadu v. Gajabai (1926) 50 Bom. 468, 537, 96 I.C. 712, ('26) A.B. 435 [F.B.]. See Bayabai v. Bala (1870) 7 Bom. H.C. App. I discussed in Sitabai's case.

(v) Chimabai v. Mallappa (1922) 46 Bom. 946, 67 I.C. 654, ('22) A.B. 397.

(w) Bhau v. Narasagouda (1922) 46 Bom. 400, 64 I.C. 614, ('22) A.B. 300, affirmg. Bhujangouda v. Babu (1920) 44 Bom. 627, 57 I.C. 573, ('20) A.B. 115.

(x) Jagannath Rao Dani v. Rambharosa (1933) 60 I.A. 49, 141 I.C. 520, ('33) A.P.C. 33.

(y) Damodar Vishnu v. Shriram Laxman (1911) Bom. 170, 193 I.C. 413, ('41) A. Bom. 56.

(z) Vithagouda v. Secretary of State (1932) 34 Bom. L.R. 818, 140 I.C. 242, ('32) A.B. 442.

(*z*1) Eramma v. Muddappa ('66) A.S.C. 1137.

(a) Rakhmabai v. Radhabai (1868) 5 Bom. H.C.A.C. 181; Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga (1868) 12 M.I.A. 397, at p. 436; Punjabai v. Shamrao (1954) Nag. 805, ('55) A.N. 293 (parties governed by Bombay Law).

(b) Ramji v. Ghamau (1879) 6 Bom. 498 [F.B.]; Dinkar v. Ganesh (1879) 6 Bom. 505 [F.B.].

(c) Vithoba v. Bapu (1891) 15 Bom. 110; Lakshmibai v. Vishnu (1905) 29 Bom. 410 [consent of father-in-law cannot operate after his death].

(d) (1921) 48 I.A. 313, 49 Cal. 1, 64 I.C. 536, ('22) A.P.C. 216.

They observed: "Their Lordships find as a fact and hold in law that on the date of that deed Namdeo and his son Rambhau had separated from Pandurang, and had ceased to be members with Pandurang of the joint family, although no partition of the family property had been effected." Later on, they also observed referring to the decision in Bayabai v. Bala (e). "There is nothing in the judgment of Westropp, J., which confined his observations as to the power of a Hindu widow in the Mahratta country of the Bombay State and in Gujarat with the consent of relations to cases in which the widow was the widow of a separated husband; his observations appear to their Lordships to have been general and to apply to either class of cases."

(iii) (1925-1932). In Ishwar Dadu v. Gajabai (f) decided by the Bombay High Court in 1925, it was contended, on the basis of the above observations of the Judicial Committee, that the decision in Ramji v. Ghamau (g) and the decisions that followed it were overruled by the Judicial Committee. The question was referred to a Full Bench. The Full Bench held, by a majority of four against one, that the observations of the Judicial Committee were obiter and that the earlier decisions of the Bombay High Court beginning with Ramji v. Ghamau (g) were not overruled. In a later case where the coparcener was still in his mother's womb at the date of adoption, it was held that the adoption was invalid (h).

(iv) (After November, 1932). The facts of an appeal which arose from the Dharwar District of Bombay and which was decided by the Judicial Committee in 1932 were these. N, J and K were three brothers of whom N and J were undivided and K was divided from them. K died in 1932 leaving a son G. J died in 1913 leaving his widow B. N died in 1915 leaving his son D. In 1919 D died leaving his son D.T. who was born in 1918. During the lifetime of D.T., J's widow, B, adopted Narayan in 1919. Afterwards, in 1920 D.T. died. G brought the suit questioning the validity of Narayan's adoption. The High Court of Bombay, following the Full Bench judgment in Ishwar Dadu's case (i) held that the adoption was invalid as the joint family had not ceased and B could not adopt without the consent of the sole coparcener (D.T.). The Judicial Committee held that Ramji v. Ghamau (j) was overruled by Yadao's case (k) and that the decision in Ishwar Dadu's case (i) was erroneous and reversing the High Court's judgment held that the adoption was valid (l). The rule was regarded as firmly established in a later decision of the Judicial Committee from Bombay (m).

The subject-matter of §§ 462 and 463 should be carefully distinguished from that of §§ 471 and 472. The former sections deal with the question whether the widow can have a power to adopt when the husband has not given an authority; whereas the latter deal with the question as to how a widow's authority (whether from the husband, or sapindas or inherent as in Bombay) may terminate on the happening of certain events. The latter sections are not confined to Madras and Bombay, but apply to the whole of India.

(4) Case of two widows.—Where there are two or more widows, the senior widow may adopt without the consent of the junior widow or widows (n); but the junior widow cannot adopt without the consent of the senior widow, unless she has an express authority to adopt from her husband (o). Where the senior widow relinquished her right of adoption in favour of the junior widow for consideration, an adoption by her on the ground that the junior widow has not exercised the right is invalid (p).

(e) (1870) 7 Bom. H.C. Appx. 1.

(f) (1926) 50 Bom. 468, 96 I.C. 712, ('26) A.B. 435 [F.B.].

(g) (1879) 6 Bom. 498.

(h) Bala Anna v. Akubai (1926) 50 Bom. 722, 99 I.C. 417, ('26) A.B. 584.

(i) (1926) 50 Bom. 468, 96 I.C. 712, ('26) A.B. 435 [F.B.].

(j) (1879) 6 Bom. 498.

(k) (1921) 48 I.A. 513, 49 Cal. 1, 64 I.C. 536, ('22) A.P.C. 216.

(l) Bhimabai v. Gurunathgauda (1933) 57 Bom. 157, 60 I.A. 25, 141 I.C. 9, ('33) A.P.C. 1.

(m) Vijayasangji v. Shivasangji (1935) 62 I.A. 161, 59 Bom. 360, 155 I.C. 493, ('35) A.P.C. 95; Dhandi Duganoo v. Rama Bala (1936) 60 Bom. 83, 38 Bom. L.R. 94, 161 I.C. 849, ('36) A.B. 132; Balu Sakharam v. Lahoo Sambhaji (1937) Bom. 508 [F.B.], 39 Bom. L.R. 382, 170 I.C. 393, ('37) A.B. 279; Punjabai v. Shamrao (1954) Nag. 805, ('55) A.N. 293 (parties governed by Bombay law).

(n) Rakhmabai v. Radhabai (1868) 5 B.H.C. A. C. 181; Basappa v. Sidramappa (1919) 43 Bom. 481, 50 I.C. 736; Amava v. Mahadgauda (1898) 22 Bom. 416; Dundoobai Anandrao v. Vithalrao Anandrao (1936) 60 Bom. 498, 38 Bom. L.R. 193, 162 I.C. 780, ('36) A.B. 182.

(o) Basappa v. Sidramappa (1919) 43 Bom. 481, 50 I.C. 736; Padajirav v. Ramrav (1889) 13 Bom. 160.

(p) Sadashiv Waman v. Reshma (1938) Bom. 84, 39 Bom. L.R. 1115, 173 I.C. 509, ('38) A.B. 1.

If the husband was joint with his father at the time of his death, the junior widow may adopt with the consent of her husband's father, and such adoption is valid even if it is made without the consent of the senior widow (q).

As to the termination of the senior widow's power to adopt, when the junior widow has a son who dies and is succeeded by the junior widow as his heir, see § 472.

The primary object of adoption being religious and not secular the validity of adoption must be considered as at the date of adoption. In a case decided by the Bombay High Court it was held that the adoption by a senior widow when the junior widow was pregnant is valid (r).

GENERAL RULES AS TO ADOPTION BY WIDOWS

464. Extent of widow's power to adopt.—A widow has no larger powers of adoption than what her husband would have, if alive (s).

Thus a widow cannot adopt so long as there is a son, grandson or great-grandson natural or adopted, of her husband, in existence. See § 463(1).

465. Minor widow.—A minor widow may adopt in the same circumstances as an adult widow, provided she has attained the age of discretion and is able to form an independent judgment in selecting the boy to be adopted (t).

According to Bengal writers the age of discretion is reached at the beginning of the sixteenth year; according to Benares writers, at the end of the sixteenth year. The former view was taken in a Madras case (u). All authorities agree in holding that the widow must have attained competence for independent judgment. But no such judgment is required when the boy to be adopted is named by the husband in the authority to adopt. In such a case she can adopt though she has not attained the age of discretion (v).

466. Unchaste widow.—(1) An unchaste widow living in concubinage is incompetent to adopt a son, as she is incapable of performing the religious ceremonies (w).

(2) There is no such disability in the case of a Sudra widow as no religious ceremonies are essential in the case of Shudras (x). It has been held by the Bombay High Court, that even amongst regenerate classes, a widow though unchaste or otherwise impure can make a valid adoption provided she performs herself the physical act of taking the boy in adoption and delegates to somebody else the performance of religious ceremonies which are duly performed by the latter (y).

467. Remarriage of widow.—A widow cannot, after remarriage, adopt a son to her first husband (z).

---

(q) Dnyanu v. Tanu (1920) 44 Bom. 508, 57 I.C. 113.

(r) Melappa v. Guramma ('56) A.B. 129.

(s) Gopee Loll v. Chundraolee (1873) 11 Beng. L.R. 391, (1872) I.A. Sup. Vol. 131.

(t) Sattiraju v. Venkataswami (1917) 40 Mad. 925, 40 I.C. 518 [12 years old—cannot adopt]; Basappa v. Sidramappa (1919) 43 Bom. 481, 50 I.C. 736 [15 years old—can adopt]; Murgeppa v. Kalawa (1920) 44 Bom. 327, 55 I.C. 361 [12 years old—cannot adopt]; Parratava v. Fakirnaik (1922) 46 Bom. 307, 64 I.C. 899, ('22) A.B. 105 [12½ years old—cannot adopt]. Also see Paryanibai v. Bajirao ('63) A.B. 25, (1961) Bom. 963, 64 Bom. L.R. 86.

(u) (1917) 40 Mad. 925, 929, 40 I.C. 518, supra.

(v) Mondakini v. Adinath (1891) 18 Cal. 69.

(w) Sayamalal v. Saudamini (1870) 5 Beng. L.R. 362.

(x) Basvant v. Mallappa (1921) 45 Bom. 459, 59 I.C. 800, ('21) A.B. 301; Annapurnamma v. Manikyamma (1946) Mad. 755; Bhimabai v. Dattatraya ('56) A.N. 231; Deorao v. Raibhan (1954) Nag. 558, ('54) A.N. 257.

(y) Partap v. Bai Suraj (1946) Bom. 1; Govind v. Godubai (1946) A.B. 439.

(z) Panchappa v. Sangambasawa (1900) 24 Bom. 89, 94; Faikirappa v. Savtrewa (1921) 23 Bom. L.R. 482, 62 I.C. 318, ('21) A.B. 1 [F.B.]. Kishni v. Ratna ('64) A.A. 17.

468. Successive adoptions.—A widow may adopt several sons in succession one after the death of another, unless there is a specific limitation placed on her power to adopt (a).

Illustration

A authorises his wife B to adopt a son to him after his death. B adopts C. C then dies unmarried. B may adopt another son to A. The authority to adopt is not exhausted on the adoption of C.

In the above case it was argued that by the adoption of the first adopted son, all the spiritual benefit to be derived from the act was secured to the deceased, and that the adoption of a second boy was, therefore, supererogatory. But this contention was rejected by the Privy Council. As to simultaneous adoptions, see § 485 below.

469. Motive of adoption.—The motive of a widow in making an adoption is not material upon the question of its validity (b). The Court can enquire into the motives of the husband's sapindas in giving [§ 462(6)] or refusing consent to an adoption to a widow (c).

Money paid to a widow to induce her to adopt a son is in the nature of a bribe, which is condemned by smriti writers as an illegal payment (d).

470. Co-widows.—Where a Hindu dies leaving two or more widows, the adoption by the widows, where an express authority is left by the husband to adopt, is governed by the rules laid down in § 455 above. Where no such authority is given, the adoption by the widows in Madras is governed by the rule laid down in § 462(8) and in Bombay by the rule laid down in § 463(3).

The only schools which allow an adoption by a widow without her husband's authority are the Dravida (Madras) school and the Maharashtra (Bombay) school.

TERMINATION OF WIDOW'S POWER TO ADOPT

471. Generally.—(1) A widow's power to adopt continues all her lifetime—

(i) in all cases where husband has died without leaving any son [see explanation I and ills. (a) to (c)];

(ii) in cases where her husband has left a son, if the son dies leaving her (his mother) as his nearest heir (e) [see ills. (d) and (e); also see explanation I and illus. (g)].

In the first case, the widow succeeds to the estate as her husband's heir; in the second case, she succeeds to the estate as the heir of her son (i.e., as

---

(a) Suryanarayana v. Venkataramana (1906) 29 Mad. 382, 33 I.A. 145; Yadao v. Namdeo (1921) 48 I.A. 513, 49 Cal. 1, 64 I.C. 536, ('22) A.P.C. 216.

(b) Ramchandra v. Mulji (1898) 22 Bom. 558 [F.B.]; Mahableshwar v. Durgabai (1898) 22 Bom. 199. See also Raja Makund Deb v. Sri Jagannath (1923) 2 Pat. 469, 485-486, 72 I.C. 230, ('23) A.P. 423; Kandulapati Kanakaratnam v. Kandulpati Narasimha Rao (1942) Mad. 173, 198 I.C. 236, ('41) A.M. 937 [F.B.]; Vanka Lakshminarayana v. Mangalappalli ('50) A.M. 601, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 537; Govinda v. Shenfad (1949) Nag. 416; Ganu v. Shivram (1954) Nag. 646, ('54) A.M. 353; Ramamma v. Lakshminarasimham ('53) A.M. 676; Venkalakshmi Ammal v. Jagannathan ('63) A.M. 316.

(c) Vellanki v. Venkata (1876) 1 Mad. 174, 190-191, 4 I.A. 1, 14; Krishnayya Rao v. Raja of Pittapur (1928) 51 Mad. 893, 116 I.C. 673, ('28) A.M. 994 [F.B.].

(d) Shri Sitaram v. Harihar (1911) 35 Bom. 169, 8 I.C. 625.

(e) Verabhai v. Bai Hiraba (1903) 30 I.A 234, 27 Bom. 492; Gavdappa v. Girimallappa (1895) 19 Bom. 331; Mallappa v. Hanmappa (1920) 44 Bom. 297, 55 I.C. 814; Sahebrao v. Rangrao ('62) A.B. 1, (1961) Bom. 768, 63 Bom. L.R. 411.

his mother). In either case, the estate vests in her, in the one case immediately on the death of her husband, in the other case, immediately on the death of her son. By adoption she divests no estate except her own. But vesting or divesting is no longer of importance. See Amarendra Mansingh's case (f) and the decision of the Supreme Court in Gurunath v. Kamalabai (g). See also the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, under which it seems the adopted son will now take a moiety of the interest which vests in the adopting widow.

In the second case, the mere fact that the son had attained majority (which would be at the age of eighteen), or had attained ceremonial competence (which would be at the age of fifteen), does not extinguish the widow's power to adopt to her husband (h).

(2) (a) If the son dies leaving a son or a wife, the widow's power to adopt comes to an end at his death, and she cannot thereafter exercise it, though she may have been expressly authorized by her husband to adopt in the event of the son's death. The reason is that the estate then vests in an heir of the deceased son and the widow cannot adopt to her husband so as to divest the estate taken by that heir (i) [ills. (f) and (g)]. In Amarendra Mansingh's case the true reason is said to be that "where the duty of providing for the continuance of the line which was upon the father, and was laid by him conditionally upon the mother, has been assumed by the son and by him passed on to a grandson or to the son's widow, the mother's power is gone" (j) [ills. (f), (h), (i) and (j)].

In Gurunath v. Kamalabai (k) the Supreme Court cited with approval the following observations of Chandavarkar J. in a Bombay decision: "When a son dies before attaining full legal competence and does not leave either a widow or a son or an adopted son then the power of the mother which was in abeyance during his lifetime revives but the moment he hands over that torch to another, the mother can no longer take it."

(b) If the son dies leaving a daughter, it has been held in Bombay that the adoption is valid (l).

(c) If the son is a step-son of the widow having the power to adopt and dies leaving his own mother (or, the mother having predeceased him, grandmother) it was held (before Amarendra Mansingh's case) that the adoption was invalid (m). But as the son's mother or grandmother cannot discharge

---

(f) (1933) 60 I.A. 242, 12 Pat. 642, ('33) A.P.C. 155.

(g) (1955) 1 S.C.R. 1135, 57 Bom. L.R. 694, ('55) A.S.C. 206.

(h) Tripuramba v. Venkataratnam (1923) 46 Mad. 423, 72 I.C. 517, ('23) A.M. 278; explaining Madana Mohana v. Purushothama (1918) 45 I.A. 156, 41 Mad. 855, 46 I.C. 481; Venkappa v. Jivaji (1901) 25 Bom. 306; Suryanarayana v. Venkataramana (1906) 33 I.A. 145, 154, 29 Mad. 382, 389-390; Verabhai v. Bai Hiraba, supra; Anjirabai v. Pandurang (1924) 48 Bom. 492, 80 I.C. 185, ('24) A.B. 441, Shashankabhooshan Chaudhuri v. Brajendranarayan Mandal (1936) 63 Cal. 385, 159 I.C. 437, ('35) A.C. 716.

(i) Mst. Bhoobun Moyee v. Ram Kishore (1865) 10 M.I.A. 279; Padma Kumari v. Court of Wards (1882) 8 Cal. 302, 8 I.A. 229; Thayammal v. Venkatarama (1887) 10 Mad. 205, 14 I.A. 67; Tarachurn v. Sureshchunder (1890) 17 Cal. 122, 16 I.A. 166; Amava v. Mahadgauda (1898) 22 Bom. 416; Ramkrishna v. Shamrao (1902) 26 Bom. 526 [F.B.]; Anandibai v. Kashibai (1904) 28 Bom. 461; Faizuddin v. Tincowri (1895) 22 Cal. 565; Draupadi v. Sambari ('58) A. Orissa 242; Neelawwa v. Kallappa ('72) A. Mys. 218; Venkalalakshmi Ammal v. Jagannathan ('63) A.M. 316 (son predeceasing father).

(j) Amarendra Mansingh v. Sanatan Singh (1933) 12 Pat. 642, 60 I.A. 242, 143 I.C. 441, ('33) A.P.C. 155.

(k) (1955) 1 S.C.R. 1135, 55 Bom. L.R. 694, ('55) A.S.C. 206.

(l) Chanbasappa v. Madivalappa (1937) Bom. 642, 39 Bom. L.R. 591, 170 I.C. 999, ('37) A.B. 337.

(m) Anandibai v. Kasibai (1904) 28 Bom. 461; Faizuddin v. Tincowri (1895) 22 Cal. 565; Drobomoyee v. Shama Churn (1886) 12 Cal. 246.

the duty of providing for the continuance of the line, these decisions cannot be supported and must be deemed to be overruled (n).

(3) The Bombay and Calcutta High Courts held in the cases noted below that the power to adopt once it comes to an end becomes extinguished for ever, and it does not revive even when, on the death of the son's nearer heirs, the estate reverts to the widow and becomes vested in her (o). But the Nagpur High Court took the view that on the remarriage of the son's widow the property came back to the mother and then the mother could adopt—the power being only suspended and not extinguished (p). Similarly, the Chief Court of Oudh held that the power of the widow to adopt which is suspended during the lifetime of an unmarried son revives if the son marries and dies leaving a widow who too dies issueless and without making an adoption (q). The question came up for consideration before the Supreme Court in Gurunath v. Kamalabai [1955] 1 S.C.R. 1135 where after a review of the leading decisions on the subject the Court affirmed and restated the following propositions:

(i) That the interposition of a grandson, or the son's widow, competent to continue the line by adoption brings the mother's power of adoption to an end;

(ii) That the power to adopt does not depend upon any question of vesting or divesting of property; and

(iii) That a mother's authority to adopt is not extinguished by the mere fact that her son had attained ceremonial competence.

The Supreme Court observed in this case that the Nagpur and Oudh decisions referred to above were based on an erroneous apprehension of the true reasons for the rule.

(4) Subject to the above provisions a widow may adopt at any time she pleases, unless there is a direction to the contrary (r). Thus, in one case an adoption made by a widow seventy-one years after her husband's death was upheld (s). In a recent decision it was held by the High Court of Madras that an adoption by a widow was not invalidated by the fact that the adoptee was not the boy directed by her father-in-law or the fact that it was made many years after the requisite consent was obtained (*s*1).

As to reopening of partition see §§ 336-339.

(5) The provisions of this section apply to all cases governed by the Dayabhaga law, whether the husband was divided or undivided at the time of his death, and to those cases governed by the Mitakshara law where the husband was divided at the time of his death. The next section applies to

---

(n) Maruti v. Ganu (1947) Bom. 677.

(o) Krishnarav v. Shankarrav (1893) 17 Bom. 164; Ramkrishna v. Shamrao (1902) 26 Bom. 526; Shamrao v. Bhimrao (1949) Bom. 296, ('49) A.B. 311; Manikyamala v. Nande Kumar (1906) 33 Cal. 1306.

(p) Bapuji v. Gangaram (1941) Nag. 178, 195 I.C. 282, ('41) A.N. 116—followed in Govinda v. Shenfad (1949) Nag. 416.

(q) Prem Jagat Kuer v. Harihar, 21 Luck. 1.

(r) Girioica v. Bhimaji (1885) 9 Bom. 58; Mutasaddi Lal v. Kundan Lal (1906) 28 All. 377, 33 I.A. 55.

(s) Raje v. Jayavantrav (1867) 4 Bom. H.C.A.C. 191; Hari Rao v. Venkaiah (1953) Mad. 624, ('53) A.M. 661.

(*s*1) C. V. C. Chetty v. P. L. D. Chetty ('72) A.M. 233.

cases governed by the Mitakshara law, where the husband was undivided at the time of his death.

Explanation I.—"Son" in this section means a son, grandson, or great-grandson, natural or adopted.

Explanation II.—A son adopted by a widow to her husband after his death is a son left by the husband within the meaning of sub-section (1), cl. (ii) [see ill. (d)].

(6) §§ 471 and 502 may be read together.

(a) A dies leaving a widow as his only heir. The widow may adopt a son to A. [Sub-§ (1), cl. (i)].

(b) A dies leaving a widow and a daughter. The widow may adopt a son to A. It does not matter that A has left a daughter. The daughter is not entitled to succeed until after the widow, and she has no voice in the matter of the adoption. [Sub-§ (1), cl. (i)].

(c) A dies leaving two widows in whom his property vests as his heirs. The widow having authority to adopt or, in Bombay, the senior widow without any authority adopts without the consent of the co-widow. The adoption is valid (t).

(d) A dies leaving a widow W and a son. On A's death, the son succeeds to the estate. The son then dies unmarried. On his death, W succeeds to his estate as his heir (i.e., as his mother). W may adopt a son either under an authority from A (u) or in Madras, with the consent of A's sapindas (v), or in Bombay, without any authority.

In the above case, if the adopted son dies unmarried, W may again adopt with proper authority, if necessary, or in Bombay without authority (w).

(e) A dies leaving a widow and two sons. The sons die unmarried. The mother's power to adopt does not come to an end and she can adopt.

(f) If in the above case one son dies married, then a few days later his widow dies and then the second son dies, the mother's authority to adopt is terminated and she cannot adopt (x). [Sub-§ (2)].

(g) A dies leaving a widow and a grandson B. On A's death, B succeeds to the estate as A's grandson. B then dies without leaving any wife or children. On B's death, the widow succeeds to the estate as B's grandmother. The widow may adopt a son to her husband A: Narhar v. Balwant (1924) 48 Bom. 559, 80 I.C. 435, ('24) A.B. 437. But if B dies leaving a wife or child, the widow's power to adopt comes to an end. [Sub-§ (1), cl. (ii)—also Expln. I].

(h) A dies leaving a widow and a son B. On A's death the estate vests in B. B dies leaving his wife C who succeeds to the estate. A's widow then adopts a son to A during the lifetime of C.

(i) under the authority of husband—Chunderbulle's case (y).

(ii) (in Madras) with the assent of A's sapindas—Thayammal v. Venkatrama (z).

(iii) (in Bombay) under her inherent power—Keshav v. Govind (a).

In all the above cases, the adoption is invalid.

Even if B is an adopted son, the same result follows (b).

The result will be the same whether the widow adopts before or after the death of C (c).

---

(t) Mondakini v. Adinath (1891) 18 Cal. 69; Rakmabai v. Radhabai (1868) 5 Bom. H.C.A.C. 181.

(u) Amarendra Mansingh v. Sanatan Singh (1933) 12 Pat. 642, 60 I.A. 242, 143 I.C. 441, ('33) A.P.C. 155.

(v) Vellanki v. Venkata Rama (1876) 1 Mad. 174, 190-191, 4 I.A. 1, 14.

(w) Ram Soondur v. Surbanee Dossee (1874) 22 W.R. 121.

(x) Shamrao v. Bhimrao (1949) Bom. 296, ('49) A.B. 311. Some earlier decisions to the contrary are not good law and must be deemed to have been overruled.

(y) Bhoobun Moye v. Ram Kishore (1865) 10 M.I.A. 279; Padma Kumari v. Court of Wards (1882) 8 I.A. 229, 8 Cal. 302.

(z) (1887) 10 Mad. 205, 14 I.A. 67.

(a) (1885) 9 Bom. 94.

(b) Madana Mohan v. Purushothama (1918) 45 I.A. 156, 41 Mad. 855, 46 I.C. 481.

(c) Krishnarav v. Shankarrav (1893) 17 Bom. 164; Manikyamala v. Nanda Kumar (1906) 33 Cal. 1306; Shamrao v. Bhimrao (1949) Bom. 296.

(i) A dies leaving two widows R and G and a son D by the latter. D dies leaving a widow S and a son J. S dies shortly after and after some years J dies. After about thirty years G adopts the plaintiff. The adoption is invalid [Sub-§ (3)]: Gurunath v. Kamalabai (1955) 1 S.C.R. 1135, 57 Bom. L.R. 694, ('55) A.SC. 206.

(j) A dies leaving a widow W and a son B. On A's death, B succeeds to the estate. B then dies leaving a son C. On B's death, C succeeds to the estate as B's son. C dies unmarried leaving W, his grandmother, as his next heir. On C's death his estate vests in W as his heir. W then adopts a son to A. The adoption is not valid for the reasons stated in ill. (f). Ramkrishna v. Shamrao (1902) 26 Bom. 526, approved in Madana Mohana v. Purushothama (1918) 45 I.A. 156, 41 Mad. 855, 46 I.C. 481, cited in illustration (h) above. In this case also it is clear that the widow would not, by adoption, divest any estate but her own. [Sub-§ (3)].

The subject-matter of this section is closely connected with another subject, namely, divesting of estate by adoption, as to which see § 502. As to adoption by a widow with the consent of the person in whom the estate is vested, see § 503 below.

472. Is there a limit to the power of the widow to adopt when the husband was a member of the joint family at the time of his death?—(1) So long as there is a male member in the coparcenary, the power to adopt does not terminate and the adoption is valid [Ills. (a), (b) and (c)].

(2) It was at one time supposed that where the last surviving coparcener died and the property passed to his heir, such as a widow or collateral, the power of the widow of a predeceased coparcener was at an end (d). But such cases were overruled by the decision of the Privy Council in Anant v. Shankar (e) which was reaffirmed in Neelangouda v. Ujjangouda (f). It is now firmly established that the rights of the adopted son relate back to the date of the adoptive father's death and the adopted son must be deemed by a fiction of law to have been in existence as the son of the adoptive father at the time of the latter's death. If, therefore, there was a coparcenary in existence when the adoptive father died, then whether it came to an end by the death of the last surviving coparcener or by subsequent partition among the remaining members, an adoption validly made by the widow of the deceased coparcener would have the effect of divesting the estate in the hands of the heir to the last surviving coparcener in the first case and of putting an end to the partition in the second and enabling the adopted son to claim a share in the family properties (g).

This principle of relation back is subject to the exception that any lawful alienation effected by a male or female heir since the death of the adoptive father and before the date of adoption would be binding on the adopted son (h). See "Alienations made prior to adoption" §§ 507-509 post.

The principle of relation back is also subject to another limitation or exception which is to the effect that if property by inheritance goes to a collateral and a son is adopted after the death of the collateral, the adoption does not divest the property which has vested in the heir of the collateral.

---

(d) Chandra v. Gojarabai (1890) 14 Bom. 463; Adivi Suryaprakasa Rao v. Nidamarty Gangaraju (1910) 33 Mad. 228.

(e) (1944) Bom. 116, 70 I.A. 232, ('43) A.P.C. 196.

(f) (1948) 50 Bom. L.R. 682, ('48) A.P.C. 165.

(g) Tatya Shantappa v. Ratnabai (1949) F.C.R. F.L.J. 123, ('49) A.F.C. 101; Ramchandra v. Ramkrishna (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 636, ('52) A.B. 463. These decisions, however, should be read along with the recent decision of the Supreme Court referred to in f.n. (l1) below.

(h) Jivaji v. Hanmant (1950) Bom. 510, 52 Bom. L.R. 527, ('50) A.B. 360 (F.B.); Vishnu Pandu v. Mahadu (1950) Bom. 487, 52 Bom. L.R. 599, ('51) A.B. 170. (A surrender by a widow in favour of the reversioner would not rank as an alienation). See § 509A.

This limitation is also stated to be that the principle of relation back applies only when the claim is made in respect of the estate or interest of the adoptive father and does not apply when the claim relates to the estate of a collateral. There was some conflict of opinion as to the precise scope of this limitation. After a review of cases the Supreme Court, in Srinivas v. Narayan (i) approved the view taken by the Bombay High Court in Jivaji v. Hanmant (j) and dissented from the contrary view taken by the Privy Council in Anant v. Shankar (k) on this point.

"Collateral" means descended from the same stock but not in the same line (l).

(3) §§ 471 and 472 may be read with § 502 which deals with "divesting".

In Shrinivas v. Narayan the Supreme Court observed: "It (the view expressed in Anant v. Shankar on this point) is not in consonance with the principle well established in Indian jurisprudence that an inheritance could not be in abeyance, and that the relation back of the right of an adopted son is only quoad the estate of the adoptive father. Moreover, the law as laid down therein leads to results which are highly inconvenient. When an adoption is made by a widow of either a coparcener or a separated member, then the right of the adopted son to claim properties as on the date of the death of the adoptive father by reason of the theory of relation back is subject to the limitation that alienations made prior to the date of adoption are binding on him, if they were for purposes binding on the estate. Thus, transferees from limited owners whether they be widows or coparceners in a joint family, are amply protected. But no such safeguard exists in respect of property inherited from a collateral, because if the adopted son is entitled on the theory of relation back to divest that property, the position of the mesne holder would be that of an owner possessing a title defeasible on adoption, and the result of such adoption must be to extinguish that title and that of all persons claiming under him. The alienees from him would have no protection, as there could be no question of supporting the alienations on the ground of necessity or benefit. And if the adoption takes place long after the succession to the collateral had opened—in this case it was 41 years thereafter—and the property might have meanwhile changed hands several times, the title of the purchasers would be liable to be disturbed quite a long time after the alienations. We must hesitate to subscribe to a view of the law which leads to consequences so inconvenient. The claim of the appellant to divest a vested estate results on a legal fiction, and legal fictions should not be extended so as to lead to unjust results. We are of opinion that the decision in Anant v. Shankar in so far as it relates to properties inherited from collaterals is not sound."

In Krishnamurthi v. Dhruwaraj (l) the Supreme Court summarized the principles deducible from its decision in Shrinivas v. Narayan:

(i) An adopted son is entitled to take in defeasance of the rights acquired prior to his adoption on the ground that in the eye of the law his adoption relates back, by a legal fiction, to the date of the death of his adoptive father, he being put in the position of a posthumous son.

(ii) As a preferential heir, an adopted son (a) divests his mother of the estate of his adoptive father; (b) divests his adoptive mother of the estate she gets as an heir of her son who died after the death of her husband.

(iii) A coparcenary continues to subsist so long as there is in existence a widow of a coparcener capable of bringing a son into existence by adoption; and if the widow made an adoption, the rights of the adopted son are the same as if he had been in

---

(i) (1955) S.C.R. 1, 57 Bom. L.R. 678, ('54) A.S.C. 379. Also see Ramanna v. Sambamoorthy ('61) A.A.P. 361; Ganeshrao v. Ramchandra ('58) A.B. 141; Somasekharappa v. Basappa ('61) A. Mys. 141 [transferee from heir of last surviving coparcener]; Jhunparibahu v. Phoolchandra ('58) A.M.P. 261. Pardhasaradhi v. Srinivasa ('59) A.A. P. 512.

(j) (1950) Bom. 510, 52 Bom. L.R. 527, ('50) A.B. 360 (F.B.); Dattatraya v. Vaman (1950) Bom. 358, 52 Bom. L.R. 283. Similar view was taken in Raju v. Lakshmi (1955) Mad. 247, ('54) A. Mad. 705. Also see Ramakrishnayya v. Narasaya ('57) Andh. Pra. 109.

(k) (1943) 70 I.A. 232.

(l) ('62) A.S.C. 39.

existence at the time when his adoptive father died and that his title as coparcener prevails as against the title of any person claiming as heir to the last coparcener.

(iv) The principle of relation back applies only when the claim made by the adopted son relates to the estate of his adoptive father. The estate may be definite and ascertained, as when he is the sole and absolute owner of the properties, or it may be fluctuating as when he is a member of a joint Hindu family in which the interest of the coparceners is liable to increase by death or decrease by birth. In either case it is the interest of the adoptive father which the adopted son is declared entitled to take as on the date of his death. This principle of relation back, however, does not appl. when the claim made by the adopted son relates to the estate of a collateral. With respect to the estate of a collateral, the governing principle is that inheritance can never be in abeyance, and that once it devolves on a person who is the nearest heir under the law it is thereafter nor liable to be divested. In such a case the principle applicable is not that of relation back but that inheritance once vested cannot be divested.

(v) The estate continues to be the estate of the adoptive father in whosoever's hands it may be, that is, whether in the hands of one who is the absolute owner or one who is a limited owner. Any one who inherits the estate of the adoptive father is his heir, irrespective of the inheritance having passed through a number of persons, each being the heir of the previous owner.

Applying the principle enunciated in paragraph (iv) above it was held by the Supreme Court in a very recent decision that when the father of the adoptee had died many years before a partition between the adoptee's father's father and uncle the adoptee would not be entitled to more than one third share. This was on the ground that if his adoptive father had been alive at the date of the partition he could not have obtained more than one-third share. It was pointed out that the adopted son could ignore the partition effected prior to his adoption by relying on the doctrine of relation back but where succession to the property of a person other than the adoptive father was involved the severence in status effected by the partition between the adoptee's father's father and uncle could not be ignored (*l*1).

Illustrations

(a) A and B are undivided brothers governed by the Mitakshara law. A dies leaving authority to his widow to adopt a son to him. On A's death his undivided half share in the coparcenary property passes to B, the surviving coparcener. While B is still alive, A's widow adopts a son to A. The effect of the adoption is that a coparcenary interest is created in the joint property co-extensive with that which A had in the property (that is, one-half), and it vests in the adopted son (m).

(b) A and B, two brothers, are members of a joint family. A dies leaving a widow who is pregnant at the time of his death. B then dies leaving a will whereby he authorizes his widow to adopt a son to him. The day next after B's death, A's widow is delivered of a son. After three months B's widow adopts a son to B. The adoption is valid, and A's son and the adopted son will take the property as coparceners (n). See ill. (b) to § 497.

(c) Where one branch of a joint family divided amongst themselves, and the widow of another branch of the family (being its sole surviving member) made an adoption, it was held that the adoption was valid and the adopted boy was entitled to reopen the partition as a step towards getting his own share (o).

The Nagpur High Court has held that adoptions by two widows of the members of the joint family after the death of all the male members are valid (p).

(cc) One Krishnappa had five sons to wit Keshav, Anappa, Bimrao, Apparao and Madhav. Krishnappa died first, and his two sons, Bimrao and Apparao, died without male issue. Some time afterwards while the family was still joint, the three remaining brothers

---

(*l*1) Govind Hanumantha v. Nagappa ('72) A.S.C. 1401, over-ruling, to this extent, Ramchandra v. Ramkrishna ('52) A.B. 463.

(m) Surendra Nandan v. Sailaja, supra.

(n) Bachoo v. Mankorebai, supra.

(o) Bajirao v. Ramkrishna (1941) Nag. 707, 198 I.C. 581, ('42) A.N. 19.

(p) Mst. Draupadi v. Vikram (1939) Nag. 88.

then divided the joint property among themselves. On Keshav's death, his son Vishnu became entitled to his one-third share. Anappa died in 1901 leaving him surviving his widow Tungabai. On Vishnu's death in 1918, his share in the watan property, although Keshav had a daughter, went to the nearest male heir who was at that time Hanmant a collateral of Keshav. In 1922 Tungabai adopted Jivaji as son to her husband. Hanmant then filed a suit against Jivaji claiming to recover certain properties of Vishnu which were in possession of Jivaji. It was held that Jivaji could not claim against Hanmant the separate property of Vishnu, which devolved on Hanmant in 1918. This was a case in which the adopted son laid a claim to the properties, not on the ground that they belonged to the joint family into which he had been adopted but that they belonged to a collateral (Vishnu also was in position of a collateral) to whom he was entitled to succeed as a preferential heir. As already pointed out the Supreme Court approved of this decision on the ground that the relation back of the right of an adopted son did not touch property inherited from a collateral [Jivaji v. Hanmant supra].

(ccc) S and K two brothers were members of a joint family. K died in 1897 leaving his widow R. S died in 1899 leaving his son G who died in 1901 leaving his widow L. In 1901 L adopted D who died in 1935 leaving three sons Defendants 1 to 3 and his widow Defendant 4. In 1944 R adopted the Plaintiff and soon thereafter the Plaintiff sued the Defendants for partition claiming a half share in the family property. The main dispute related to certain properties which had been inherited by D in 1903 from Swamirao a collateral who represented one of the two branches of a Kulkarni Watan family. S and K represented the other branch of that family. It was held that the Plaintiff was not entitled to any claim to the properties inherited by D from the collateral Swamirao [Srinivas v. Narayan supra].

(cccc) B died in 1882 pre-deceasing his father N and leaving behind his widow T. N died in 1892 leaving behind K, who succeeded to his property as full owner. K died in 1933 and her son V who had succeeded to her property also died in 1934 leaving behind two sons, the appellants. T adopted D, the respondent in 1945. D thereupon brought a suit for recovery of the property from the appellants on the basis that his adoption had the effect of divesting them of the property. It was held that D was entitled to succeed. The title of K the daughter of N as also the title of the appellants was defeasible on the adoption of a son by T. The fact that K inherited the property of her father absolutely did not change the character of the property from coparcenary property to self acquired property of K so long as T existed and was capable of adopting a son to her husband B. This was not a case of an adopted son claiming to divest the heir of a collateral of property belonging to the collateral. The adopted son was claiming property which originally belonged to the adoptive father [Krishnamurthi v. Dhruwaraj supra].

(d) A, the zamindar of the impartible estate of Chinnakimidy in Madras, died leaving his brother R and a widow K. The widow adopted B under the authority of her husband. The adoption is valid though the zamindary was not vested in her. The result of the adoption is that a new coparcener is introduced into the senior line. The adopted son divests R and becomes zamindar. The last result is a special result on account of the impartibility of the estate (r).

(e) B, the zamindar of Dompara Raj in Orissa who had previously in 1898 given to his widow an authority to adopt, died in 1903. In 1902 a son C was born to him. C succeeded his father and died in 1922 unmarried. B's widow then adopted. At the time of C's death, there was junior branch in whom the zamindary was vested. The Judicial Committee reversing the judgment of the Patna High Court, held that the adoption was valid (s).

(f) C, the talukdar of the impartible estate of Ahima in Bombay, died in 1899 leaving his brother B, his son D and his widow K. In 1915, D was given away in adoption and then K adopted M in 1917. The Judicial Committee reversing the judgment of the High Court held that the adoption was valid (t).

(g) K, a junior member of the family of the Thakore of Gumph in Bombay, while in possession of a village granted to his ancestors, a jivai grant for maintenance on condition that it should revert to the Thakore on failure of the male line, died in 1903 leaving a widow D. D adopted P in 1904. Reversing the judgment of the High Court, the Judicial Committee held that the adoption was valid and that the Thakore was not entitled to the village. They considered the case to be similar to the Berhampore case thus implying

---

(r) Raghunada v. Brozokishoro (1876) 1 Mad. 69, 3 I.A. 154.

(s) Amarendra Mansingh v. Sanatan Singh (1933) 12 Pat. 642, 60 I.A. 242, 143 I.C. 441, ('33) A.P.C. 155.

(t) Vijaysangji v. Shivasangji (1935) 37 Bom. L.R. 562, 155 I.C. 438, ('35) A.PC. 95, reversing the judgment of the High Court.

that the village held in jivai grant must be regarded as the joint family property of both the branches though in actual enjoyment of the junior branch (u).

Watan property.—A, a watandar in Bombay, died leaving a widow. She adopted a son C. C then died and the watan devolved on a collateral G. G then gave his son S in adoption to the widow. S died leaving daughters. The widow then made a third adoption. It was held that the widow's power to adopt was not extinguished by reason of the watan vesting in G or by reason of S's leaving daughters (v). In the light of Bimabai's case (w) and this decision, the decision in Bhimabai v. Tayappa (1913) 37 Bom. 598 must be regarded as overruled.

A Hindu died leaving his widow G and son K. K then died and the watan property of the family passed to a remote collateral S. The widow G, then adopted a son. The Privy Council held that the adoption was valid and divested S of the watan properties (x) overruling the full bench decision of the Bombay High Court (y).

A similar decision had been previously arrived at by the Bombay High Court (z).

Taluqdar: Oudh Estates Act.—The position assigned to the widow of a talukdar in the matter of adoption is peculiar. The doctrine of relation back is not applicable to an adoption made by the widow of a taluqdar governed by the Act (*z*1).

473. Adoption by widow succeeding as gotraja sapinda in Bombay.—An adoption by a widow which is prima facie valid cannot be affected by the fact that certain property has devolved upon her as gotraja sapinda of the last male holder. It was held in a number of cases that in such circumstances though the adoption is valid it cannot affect the course of devolution of the property which she obtained as gotraja sapinda (a). These cases must be held to have been undoubtedly overruled by the decision of the Privy Council in Anant v. Shankar (b). The position now is that if the widow who succeeds as gotraja sapinda is a member of the joint family, an adoption by her would have the effect of displacing any title based merely on inheritance from the last surviving coparcener and conferring it on the adopted son (c).

Illustration

On the death of A, the last surviving male coparcener of a joint family, the property devolved on W who was A's grandfather's brother's widow, or a gotraja sapinda. W then adopted M. It was held that the adoption was valid and would confer on the adopted son the right to the property which was held by A (c).

II.—PERSONS LAWFULLY CAPABLE OF GIVING IN ADOPTION

474. Who may give in adoption.—The only persons who can lawfully give a boy in adoption are his father and his mother (d).

---

(u) Pratapsingh v. Agarsingji (1919) 46 I.A. 97, 43 Bom. 778, 50 I.C. 457.

(v) Chanbasappa v. Madiwalappa (1937) Bom. 642, 39 Bom. L.R. 591, 170 I.C. 999, ('37) A.B. 337.

(w) (1933) 57 Bom. 137, 60 I.A. 25, 141 I.C. 9, ('33) A.PC. 1.

(x) Anant Bhikappa v. Shankar Ramchandra (1944) Bom. 116, 70 I.A. 232, (1943) A.PC. 196. See Shripatrao v. Parvatibai (1949) Bom. 1; Ramchandra Balaji v. Shankar Apparao (1945) Bom. 353.

(y) Balu Sakharam v. Lahoo Sambhaji (1937) Bom. 508 [F.B.], ('37) A.B. 279. The cases of Tejrani v. Sarupchand (1920) 44 Bom. 483, 55 I.C. 96 and Irappa Lokappa v. Rachayya Madiwalayya (1940) Bom. 42, 187 I.C. 504, 41 Bom. L.R. 1300, ('40) A.B. 118 must be regarded as overruled.

(z) Lingappa alias Rayappa v. Kadappa Bapurao (1940) Bom. 721, 191 I.C. 504, ('41) A.B. 345.

(*z*1) Mohan Singh v. Pasupatinath ('69) A.S.C. 135.

(a) Krishnaji Raghunath v. Rajaram Trimbak (1938) Bom. 679, ('38) A.B. 383 [F.B.]; Madhavsang Haribhai v. Dipsang Jijibhai (1942) Bom. 812, 202 I.C. 648, 44 Bom. L.R. 661 ('42) A. Bom. 280.

(b) 70 I.A. 232.

(c) Bai Faiba v. Chudasma (1948) Bom. 845; Ganapati Maruti v. Anandrao (1954) 56 Bom. L.R. 317, ('54) A.B. 384.

(d) Putlabai v. Mahadu (1909) 33 Bom. 107, 1 I.C. 659.

Thus one brother cannot give another brother in adoption. Similarly a stepmother cannot give her stepson in adoption (e). Nor can a grandfather give his grandson in adoption. A woman is incompetent to give in adoption her illegitimate son, born of adulterous intercourse (f).

475. Right of father.—The primary right to give in adoption is that of the father (g).

476. Right of mother.—The mother cannot give her son in adoption, while the father is alive and capable of consenting, without his permission. But she may do so, if he has become incapable of giving his consent, e.g., by reason of lunacy or if he has renounced worldly affairs and entered a religious order, or after his death, provided there be no express or implied prohibition from him (h).

It was held by the High Court of Bombay that a widow has no power after her remarriage to give in adoption her son by her first husband, unless she has been expressly authorized by him to do so (i). In a later case, the same High Court expressed the opinion that remarriage did not deprive a widow of her right to give such son in adoption (j). Agreeing with a Full Bench decision (*j*1) of the same High Court the High Court of Allahabad has held that a widow is not entitled to give in adoption her son by her first husband after her remarriage (*j*2).

477. Delegation of power.—The power to give a boy in adoption belongs exclusively to his parents, and it can be exercised by them alone. Neither parents, therefore, can delegate that power to another person (k). But the physical act of giving the son in adoption may be delegated to another, as such an act involves no exercise of discretion (*k*1).

478. Renunciation of Hindu religion.—A Hindu father, who has become a convert to Mahomedanism, does not, by reason of his conversion, lose his power of giving his son, who has remained a Hindu, in adoption. But since the physical act of giving a son in adoption is accompanied by religious ceremonies, such act must be delegated to another person who is a Hindu (l).

This decision is based on the provisions of the Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850.

A Brahmo can give his Brahmo son in adoption. A Brahmo does not cease to be a Hindu by becoming a member of the Brahmo Samaj (m).

479. Mental capacity.—The person giving in adoption must have attained the age of discretion, and must be of sound mind (n).

479A. Consent of Government.—It is not necessary to validate an adoption that the consent of the Government should have been obtained (o).

---

(e) Haribhau v. Agabrao (1946) Nag. 978.

(f) Tirkangauda Mallangauda v. Shivappa Patil (1943) Bom. 706, 45 Bom. L.R. 992, ('44) A.B. 40; Apya Shetthaya v. Rammanakka Apya (1941) Bom. 350, 196 I.C. 42, ('41) A.B. 222, 43 Bom. L.R. 314.

(g) See Narayanasami v. Kuppusami (1888) 11 Mad. 43 at p. 47.

(h) Jogesh Chandra v. Nrityakali (1903) 30 Cal. 956; Raja Makund Deb v. Sri Jagannath (1923) 2 Pat. 469, 72 I.C. 230, ('23) A.P. 423; Shivprasad v. Natwarlal (1949) Bom. 318; Nago v. Sukya ('53) A.N. 239.

(i) Panchappa v. Sanganbasawa (1900) 24 Bom. 89.

(j) Putalbai v. Mahadu (1909) 33 Bom. 107, 1 I.C. 657.

(*j*1) See § 467 supra.

(*j*2) Kishni v. Ratna ('64) A.A. 17.

(k) Bashetiappa v. Shivlingappa (1873) 10 B.H.C. 268.

(*k*1) See Lakshman Singh v. Rup Kanwar ('61) A.S.C. 1878. Also see Ganga v. Krishna Rao ('65) A.M. 191 [mother present]; Jamnabai v. Raychand (1883) 7 Bom. 225; Shamsing v. Santabai (1901) 25 Bom. 551.

(l) Shamsing v. Santabai (1901) 25 Bom. 551.

(m) Kusum Kumari v. Satya Ranjan (1903) 30 Cal. 999.

(n) Bireswar v. Ardha Chander (1892) 19 Cal. 452, 461, 19 I.A. 101, 105, 106.

(o) Ramchandra v. Nanji (1871) 7 Bom. H.C. (A.C.) 26; Narhar v. Narayan (1877) 1 Bom. 607.

III.—PERSONS WHO MAY BE LAWFULLY TAKEN IN ADOPTION

480. Who may be adopted.—Subject to the following rules, any person who is a Hindu (p), may be taken or given in adoption:—

(1) the person to be adopted must be a male (q);

(2) he must belong to the same caste as his adopting father; thus a Brahman cannot adopt a Kshatriya, a Vaishya or a Shudra; it is not necessary that he should belong to the same sub-division of the caste (r);

(3) he must not be a boy whose mother the adopting father could not have legally married (s); but this rule has been restricted in many recent cases to the daughter's son, sister's son, and mother's sister's son (t). This prohibition, however, does not apply to Shudras (u). Even as to the three upper classes, it has been held that an adoption though prohibited under this rule, may be valid, if sanctioned by custom (See 'custom' below).

In Abhiraj Kuer v. Debendra Singh (*u*1) the Supreme Court held that a wife's sister's daughter's son can be validly adopted to a person governed by the Benaras School and that the text of Nanda Pandita "viruddha sambandha putro varjaneeyah" is merely recommendatory.

(3A) A deaf and dumb person cannot be adopted (v). A person who had become a sanyasi but has renounced the order can be taken in adoption (w).

(4) there is a difference of opinion between the schools as to the age when a boy may be adopted:—

(i) in Bengal, Benares, Bihar and Orissa, the adoption must be before upanayana, that is before the boy is invested with the sacred thread (x); it is immaterial that the adopted boy is older than the adopter (y).

(ii) the above rule applies also in the Madras State; but if the person to be adopted is of the same gotra as the adopter, the adop-

---

(p) See §§ 6 and (1903) 30 Cal. 999, supra.

(q) Gangabai v. Anant (1889) 13 Bom. 690, Ganguly v. Sarkar ('61) A.M.P. 173.

(r) Shib Deo v. Ram Prasad (1924) 46 All. 637, 87 I.C. 938, ('25) A.A. 79.

(s) Minakshi v. Ramanada (1888) 11 Mad. 49; Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (1899) 21 All. 412, 418, 26 I.A. 153, 160; Hari Das Chatterji v. Manmatha Nath Maulik (1937) 2 Cal. 265, 160 I.C. 332, ('36) A.C. 1; Priyanath v. Indumati ('71) A. Orissa 211.

(t) Ramchandra v. Gopal (1908) 32 Bom. 619; Ramkrishna v. Chimnaji (1913) 15 Bom. L.R. 824, 21 I.C. 34; Chandi Charan v. Nabagopal ('57) A.P. 365. See 'Relationship of adoptive father to natural mother, at p. 550, infra.

(u) See § 635 (1), Raj Coomar v. Bissessur (1884) 10 Cal. 688; Lakshmappa v. Ramava (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 364; Kahandas v. Jivan (1923) 25 Bom. L.R. 510, 73 I.C. 1023, ('23) A.B. 427; Subrao v. Radha (1928) 52 Bom. 497, 113 I.C. 497, ('28) A.B. 295, Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (1898) 21 All. 412, 418, 26 I.A. 153, 160; Chinna v. Pedda (1876) 1 Mad. 62; Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundaram (1925) 48 Mad. 1, 93 I.C. 705, ('25) A.M. 497; Hanumaiah v. Mallayya ('59) A.A.P. 177.

(*u*1) ('62) A.S.C. 351.

(v) Surendra Narayan Sarbhadhikari v. Bhola Nath Ray Chaudhuri (1944) 1 Cal. 139.

(w) Gulabrao v. Nagorao (1952) Nag. 591, ('52) A.N. 102.

(x) Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj (1887) 9 All. 253, 328; Raja Makund Deb v. Sri Jagannath (1923) 2 Pat. 469, 72 I.C. 230, ('23) A.P. 423; Chandreshwar v. Bisheshwar (1926) 5 Pat. 777, 101 I.C. 289, ('27) A.P. 61; Gundicha v. Eswara ('65) A. Orissa 96; Sura Bala Debi v. Sudhir Kumar Mukherji (1944) 1 Cal. 566; Deoki Nandan v. Madanlal ('58) A.A.P. 693, (1957) A.P. 607, Sukdeo v. Kapil Deo ('60) A.C. 597 (Benares School).

(y) (1926) 5 Pat. 777, 101 I.C. 289, ('27) A.P. 61 supra.

tion may be made even after upanayana, provided it is made before marriage (z). In one case the Bombay High Court decided that among the Lingayits of North Kanara a married man cannot be adopted as the law of the Madras State is applicable to them (a); but in a subsequent case the same Court held that among the Gaud Saraswat Brahmins and Daivadnya Brahmans of North Canara a married man can be adopted as they are governed by the Bombay law (b);

(iii) in the Bombay State, a person may be adopted at any age, though he may be older than the adopter and though he may be married and have children (c). The adoption is not invalid although it took place after the thread ceremony of the boy was performed (d).

(5) It has been held in Madras (e), Mysore (f), Nagpur (g) and Allahabad (h) that the adoption of a married person is not valid even among Shudras. The adoption of an illegitimate son of a Shudra is not valid (*h*1).

Relationship of adoptive father to natural mother; [Sub-§ (3)].—The rule laid down in sub-§ (3) refers to the relationship of the parties prior to marriage (i). It is founded upon the fiction "that the adopting father has begotten the boy upon his natural mother; therefore it is necessary that she should be a person who might lawfully have been his wife." For this reason a man cannot adopt his daughter's son, or his sister's son, or his mother's sister's son, for he cannot marry his daughter, his sister, or his mother's sister; such an adoption cannot be validated by the application of the doctrine of factum valet (j). If the prohibition referred to above were to be interpreted literally, there would be many other relations incapable of being adopted. But this prohibition has been confined in recent cases to the specific cases of the daughter's son, sister's son, and mother's sister's son, and it has been held that it does not extend to other relations. It has thus been held that a Hindu may adopt his half-brother (k), his brother's son's son (l), his paternal uncle's son (m), father's first cousin (n), his wife's brother (o), his wife's brother's son (p), his wife's sister's son (q), his father's sister's son (r), or his daughter's husband (s). In a Patna case, where a widow was authorised by her husband to take his stepbrother in adoption, with liberty to her to adopt another boy if there was "any obstacle to take the stepbrother in adoption according to the Shastras," it was held that the "Shastras"

---

(z) Viraragava v. Ramalinga (1886) 9 Mad. 148 [F.B.]; Pichuvayyan v. Subbayyan (1890) 13 Mad. 128.

(a) Dattatraya Maruti v. Laxman (1942) Bom. 584, 203 I.C. 139, ('42) A.B. 260.

(b) Shantaram v. Mahableshwar (1947) Bom. 798.

(c) Balabai v. Mahadu (1924) 48 Bom. 387, 80 I.C. 529, ('24) A.B. 349. See also Dharma v. Ramkrishna (1886) 10 Bom. 80; Gopal v. Vishnu (1899) 23 Bom. 250.

(d) Champabai v. Raghunath Rao (1946) Nag. 217.

(e) Vyithilinga v. Vijayathammal (1883) 6 Mad. 43; Pichuvayyan v. Subbayyan (1890) 13 Mad. 128, 129; Lingayya v. Chengalammal (1925) 48 Mad. 407, 89 I.C. 923, ('25) A.M. 272; Muthuswami Thevar v. Chidambara Thevar (1949) 75 I.A. 293, ('49) A.P.C. 18, (1949) Mad. 604.

(f) Nanjegowda v. Channamma ('52) A. Mysore 40.

(g) Himoti Bai v. Manoharsingh (1945) Nag. 425. But see Vishwasrao v. Sahebrao ('58) A.B. 375, (1958) Bom. 531, 60 Bom. L.R. 413.

(h) Jhunka v. Nathu (1913) 35 All. 263, 18 I.C. 960.

(*h*1) Tatayya v. Nakaraju ('58) A.A.P. 611.

(i) Sriramulu v. Ramayya (1881) 3 Mad. 15.

(j) Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (1899) 21 All. 412, 26 I.A. 153; Walbai v. Heerbai (1910) 34 Bom. 491, 4 I.C. 277 [mother's sister's son cannot be adopted, though he may also happen to be father's brother's son]; Ishwari Prasad v. Rai Hari Prasad (1927) 6 Pat. 506, 106 I.C. 620, ('27) A.P. 145.

(k) Gajanan v. Kashinath (1915) 39 Bom. 410, 28 I.C. 978, ('15) A.B. 99.

(l) Haran Chunder v. Hurro (1881) 6 Cal. 41.

(m) Virayya v. Hanumanta (1891) 14 Mad. 459.

(n) Mallappa v. Gangava (1919) 43 Bom. 209, 49 I.C. 517, ('19) A.B. 85.

(o) Ruee Bhudr v. Roopshunkur (1823) 2 Bor. R. 656; Champabai v. Raghunath Rao (1946) Nag. 217.

(p) Sriramulu v. Ramayya (1881) 3 Mad. 15.

(q) Ragavendra v. Jayaram (1897) 20 Mad. 283; Saraswati v. Debendra ('56) A.P. 340 (wife's sister's daughter's son).

(r) Ramkrishna v. Chimnaji (1913) 15 Bom. L.R. 824, 21 I.C. 34.

(s) Sitabai v. Parvatibai (1922) 47 Bom. 35, 69 I.C. 172, ('22) A.B. 239.

included the Dattaka Mimansa, and since the Dattaka Mimansa prohibited the adoption of a stepbrother, the widow was justified in not adopting him and in adopting another boy, even though adoption of a stepbrother was sanctioned by judicial decisions (t). In a recent case the Allahabad High Court has held that the adoption of a father's brother's daughter's son is prohibited and therefore invalid (*t*1).

A widow adopting to her husband has no larger power than the husband had to adopt. Thus she cannot adopt her husband's daughter's son or his sister's son or his mother's sister's son, these being persons whom the husband himself could not have adopted. At the same time her power of adoption is not less extensive than that of her husband. Thus she may adopt her husband's brother as the husband himself could have done (u). Similarly she may adopt her own brother's son as the husband himself could have done. The adoption is not invalid on the ground that she could not have been lawfully married to her own brother. The rule that no one can be adopted as a son, whose mother the adopter could not have legally married does not apply e converso (v).

Custom.—An adoption, though prohibited by the rule laid down in sub-§ (3), may be valid, if recognized by custom. Thus the adoption of a daughter's son, though prohibited by this rule, has been held to be valid among the Deshastha Smartha Brahmans of the Southern Mahratta Country (w). The adoption of a daughter's son is also recognized by custom among Telugu Brahmans in the Madras State (x), and among Khatris of Amritsar (y); also the adoption of a brother's daughter's son, a daughter's son and a sister's son among Tamil Brahmins (z); of a brother's daughter's son among South Kanara Rajputs (a); and of a sister's son among the Bhora Brahmans of Uttar Pradesh (b). By reason of custom prevailing in the Madras State, the adoption by a Kshatriya whose gotra is the same as that of the natural mother of the adopted boy is not invalid (c). Similarly the adoption of a sister's son amongst Vaishyas is allowed by custom (d); and of a brother's son amongst Marwari Jains who have migrated from certain places (e). In the Punjab generally a daughter's son and a sister's son have by custom been considered to be worthy objects of adoption (*e*1).

The basis of the rule being that marriage between agnates is prohibited, wherever the basis is ignored in the most prominent cases, namely, the sister's son and the daughter's son, it is submitted that the rule must be regarded as destroyed by the exceptions, in all cases where the adopted boy's mother is an agnate of the adopter.

Factum valet.—See notes under the same head to § 434 above.

481. Only son.—An only son may be given and taken in adoption (f).

Factum Valet.—See notes under the same head to § 434 above.

482. Orphan.—The adoption of an orphan is not valid (g), except by custom (h).

---

(t) Rajendra Prasad v. Gopal Prasad (1928) 7 Pat. 245, 108 I.C. 545, ('29) A.P. 51.

(*t*1) Babu Ram v. Kishen Dei ('63) A. All. 509, (1963) All. 102.

(u) Shripad v. Vithal (1925) 49 Bom. 615, 89 I.C. 197, ('25) A.B. 399.

(v) Bai Nani v. Chunilal (1898) 22 Bom. 973; Jai Singh v. Bijai Pal (1905) 27 All. 417; Puttu Lal v. Parbati Kunwar (1915) 42 I.A. 155, 37 All. 359, 29 I.C. 617, ('15) A.P.C. 15.

(w) Sundrabai v. Hanmant Gurnath (1932) 56 Bom. 298, 140 I.C. 235, ('32) A.B. 398.

(x) Viswasundara v. Somasundara (1920) 43 Mad. 876, 59 I.C. 609, ('20) A.M. 451. Also see K. S. Gopalachariar v. Krishnamachariar ('55) A.M. 559, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 523.

(y) Parma Nand v. Shiv Charan (1921) 2 Lah. 69, 59 I.C. 256, ('21) A.L. 147; Roshan Lal v. Samar Nath (1938) Lah. 173, ('37) A.L. 626.

(z) Vayidinada v. Appu (1886) 9 Mad. 44.

(a) Sooratha v. Kanaka (1920) 43 Mad. 867, 59 I.C. 585, ('20) A.M. 648.

(b) Chain Sukh Ram v. Parbati (1892) 14 All. 53.

(c) Simhadari v. Satyanarayana (1946) Mad. 475.

(d) Navaneethammal v. Kamalammal (1947) Mad. 510.

(e) Mt. Gigi v. Mt. Panna ('56) A. Assam 100.

(*e*1) Deoki Nandan v. Rikhi Ram ('60) A. Punj. 542.

(f) Sri Balusu Gurulingaswami v. Sri Balusu Ramalakshmamma (1899) 22 Mad. 398, 26 I.A. 113; Vyas v. Vyas (1900) 24 Bom. 367; Krishna v. Paramshri (1901) 25 Bom. 537.

(g) Bashetiappa v. Shivlingappa (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 268; Vaithilingam v. Natesa (1914) 37 Mad. 529, 15 I.C. 299, ('14) A.M. 460; Mareyya v. Ramalakshmi (1921) 44 Mad. 260, 60 I.C. 141, ('21) A.M. 351.

(h) Ramkishore v. Jainarayan (1921) 48 I.A. 405, 49 Cal. 120, 64 I.C. 782, ('22) A.P.C. 2 [Dhusars of the Punjab]; Parshottam v. Venichand (1921) 45 Bom. 754, 61 I.C. 492, ('21) A.B. 147 [Jains of Idar State]; Sukhbir v. Mangeisar (1927) 49 All. 302, 100 I.C. 778, ('27) A.A. 252 [Jagir situated in Gwalior]; Kunwar Basant Singh v. Kunwar Brij Raj Saran Singh (1935) 62 I.A. 180, 57 All. 494, 37 Bom. L.R. 805, 156 I.C. 864, ('35) A.P.C. 132 [Jats of Ballabgarh].

The reason of the rule is that a boy can be given in adoption only by his father or his mother, which cannot be done in the case of an orphan. The doctrine of factum valet cannot be invoked to validate such an adoption (i).

483. Stranger.—A stranger may be adopted though there are near relations (j).

Factum Valet.—See Notes under the same head to § 434 above.

484. Adoption of same boy by two persons.—Two persons cannot adopt the same boy, even if the persons adopting are brothers. In such a case, the adoption by each of them is invalid (k).

485. Simultaneous adoption.—The simultaneous adoption of two or more persons is invalid as to all (l).

Illustration

A has two wives, B and G, but has no son. A being desirous to give a son to each of them authorizes them to adopt two sons simultaneously, one to be adopted by B and the other by C. The authority to adopt is invalid, and the adoptions (if any) made pursuant to such authority are also invalid.

Sastri G. Sarkar does not approve of these decisions, and observes in his work on Hindu law that notwithstanding these decisions such adoptions are made and recognized by Hindu society. As to successive adoptions, see § 468.

486. Dvyamushyayana or son of two fathers.—(1) Where a person gives his son to another under an agreement that he should be considered to be the son of both the natural and adoptive fathers, the son so given in adoption is called "dvyamushyayana." In this form of adoption it is essential to prove such an agreement and it should also be proved that there was the ceremony of giving and taking of the adoptive son (*l*1).

(2) A dvyamushyayana inherits both in his natural and adoptive families (m). In the case of a person adopted in the nitya dvyamushyayana form his sons born after the adoption are entitled to participate in the inheritance of the adopter (n).

As to succession to a Dvyamushyayana son, see § 43 (7).

(3) Where a person gives his only son in adoption to his brother, the adoption must be presumed to be in the dvyamushyayana form, unless a stipulation is proved that the adoption was to be in the ordinary form. In Bombay, however, it has been held that there is no such presumption, and that a person alleging that an adoption was in the dvyamushyayana form must prove that there was an agreement to that effect, even if the person adopted was the only son of a brother (o).

The proposition in sub-§ (3) is supported by certain observations in Mayne's Hindu Law, (1950) 11th Edition, sec. 209, Sarkar's Hindu Law, (1936) 7th Edition Page 291, Tagore Lectures for 1888 on Adoption, p. 302, Strange's Hindu Law, vol. 1, p. 86. In the

---

(i) (1921) 44 Mad. 260, 60 I.C. 141, ('21) A.M. 331, supra.

(j) Srimati Wooma v. Gokoolanund (1878) 3 Cal. 587, 5 I.A. 40; Dharma v. Ramkrishna (1886) 10 Bom. 80.

(k) Raj Coomar v. Bissessur (1884) 10 Cal. 688, 696-97.

(l) Akhoy Chunder v. Kala Pahar (1886) 12 Cal. 406, 12 I.A. 198; Surendro Keshub v. Doorgasoonder (1892) 19 Cal. 513, 19 I.A. 108.

(*l*1) Dhani Bai v. Neem Kanwar ('72) Raj. 9.

(m) Srimati Wooma v. Gokoolanund (1878) 3 Cal. 587, 598, 5 I.A. 40, 50-51; Krishna v. Paramshri (1901) 25 Bom. 537; Behari Lal v. Shib Lal (1904) 26 All. 472.

(n) Ganpatrao Shripatrao v. Balkrishna Gururao (1942) Bom. 340, 201 I.C. 633, ('42) A.B. 193, 44 Bom. L.R. 333.

(o) Laxmipatirao v. Venkatesh (1917) 41 Bom. 315, 38 I.C. 552, ('16) A.B. 68; Huchrao v. Bhimarao (1918) 42 Bom. 277, 44 I.C. 851, ('17) A.B. 10.

Bombay State, however, where the Courts are guided in questions of adoption by the Mitakshara and the Vyavahara Mayukha supplemented by the Dattaka Mimansa and the Dattaka Chandrika, it has been held that in every case of a dvyamushyayana adoption, there must be an agreement to that effect, and that such agreement must be proved as much in the case of the adoption of an only son of a brother as in any other case.

(4) Where a dvyamushyayana dies his property is taken jointly and equally by the adoptive mother and natural mother. If, after this, the adoptive mother adopts another son the natural mother is not divested of the property inherited (p).

487. Adoption of daughters by naikins (dancing girls).—According to the Bombay and Calcutta decisions, the adoption of a daughter by a naikin or dancing girl is invalid notwithstanding a custom to the contrary, such custom being regarded as immoral (q). According to the Madras decisions, it is valid, provided the adoption is not made with the object of disposing of the girl for the purposes of prostitution (r). Even two girls may be adopted provided the practice is sanctioned by custom (s).

IV. ACT OF ADOPTION AND CEREMONIES INCIDENTAL TO IT

488. Ceremonies relating to adoption.—(1) The ceremonies relating to an adoption are—

(a) the physical act of giving and receiving, with intent to transfer the boy from one family into another [§ 489];
(b) the datta homam, that is, oblations of clarified butter to fire [§ 490]; and
(c) other minor ceremonies, such as putresti jag (sacrifice for male issue).

(2) The physical act of giving and receiving is essential to the validity of an adoption [§ 489].

As to datta homam it is not settled whether its performance is essential to the validity of an adoption in every case [§ 490].

As to the other minor ceremonies, their performance is not necessary to the validity of an adoption (t).

(3) No religious ceremonies, not even datta homam, are necessary in the case of Shudras (u). Nor are any religious ceremonies necessary amongst Jains (v) or in the Punjab (w).

---

(p) Kantawa v. Sangangowda (1942) Bom. 303, 20 I.C. 863, ('42) A.B. 143, 44 Bom. L.R. 269.

(q) Mathura v. Esu (1880) 4 Bom. 545; Hira v. Radha (1913) 37 Bom. 116, 17 I.C. 834; Hencower v. Hanscower (1818) 2 Mori Dig. 133; Ghasiti v. Umrao Jan (1893) 20 I.A. 193, 201-202. But see Manjamma v. Sheshagirirao (1902) 26 Bom. 491, 495, where the adoption was by a prostitute, who was not a naikin attached to any temple.

(r) Venku v. Mahalinga (1888) 11 Mad. 393; Muttukannu v. Paramasami (1889) 12 Mad. 214. But see Guddati v. Ganapati (1912) 23 Mad. L.J. 493, 17 I.C. 422; Venkatachallamma v. Cheekati (1953) Mad. 741, ('53) A.M. 571.

(s) Gangamma v. Kuppammal (1938) Mad. 789.

(t) Sheolotan v. Bhirgun (1917) 2 Pat. L.J. 481, 41 I.C. 375, ('17) A.P. 633; Katki v. Lakpati (1915) 20 C.W.N. 19, 27 I.C. 39, ('15) A.C. 214; Raja Makund Deb v. Sri Jagannath (1923) 2 Pat. 469, 482, 72 I.C. 230, ('23) A.P. 423; Asita Mohan v. Nirode Mohon (1916) 20 C.W.N. 901, 35 I.C. 127, ('17) A.C. 292 [sudras].

(u) Shoshinath v. Krishnasunderi (1881) 6 Cal. 381, 388, 7 I.A. 250, 255; Indromoni v. Beharilal (1880) 5 Cal. 770, 7 I.A. 24; Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas (1915) 42 I.A. 135, 151, 39 Bom. 441, 446, 29 I.C. 639, ('15) A.P.C. 7, (1916) 20 C.W.N. 901, 35 I.C. 127, ('17) A.C. 292, supra [putresti jag ceremony]; Sundari v. Bhimraj, 52 C.W.N. 339; Deorao v. Raibhan (1954) Nag. 558, ('54) A.N. 357; Nago v. Sukya ('53) A.N. 239.

(v) Lakshmi Chand v. Gatto Bai (1886) 8 All. 319. Also see Gulab v. Devilal ('51) A. Rajasthan 136.

(w) Hem Singh v. Harnam Singh ('54) A.S.C. 581; Ajit Singh v. Fateh Singh ('62) A.S.C. 412.

489. Giving and receiving.—(1) The physical act of giving and receiving is absolutely necessary to the validity of an adoption. This is so not only in the case of the twice-born classes, but also in the case of Shudras (x). This ceremony is of the essence of adoptions, and the law does not accept any substitute for it. Mere expression of consent, or the execution of a deed of adoption, though registered, but not accompanied by an actual delivery of the boy, does not operate as a valid adoption (y). To constitute giving and taking in adoption all that is necessary is that there should be some overt act to signify the delivery of the boy from one family to another. No particular form is prescribed for the ceremony, but the law requires that the natural parent should hand over the adoptive boy and the adoptive parent should receive him. The nature of the ceremony may vary depending upon the circumstances of the case. But the ceremony of giving and taking should necessarily be there (z). In case of an old adoption strict proof of the performance of the ceremonies may not be available. An adoption acquiesced in and recognised for a number of years by the person making the adoption and a long course of recognition on the part of persons who would be expected to know of the fact and who were best acquainted with the circumstances, can give rise to the inference that the conditions relating to the adoption were fulfilled (a).

(2) Diverse circumstances may necessitate that the act of actual giving or taking should be delegated to a third person and therefore the parents after exercising their volition to give and take the boy in adoption can both or either of them delegate the physical act of handing over the boy or receiving him by way of adoption to a third party (*a*1). But the power (or right) to give a son in adoption cannot be delegated to any person (b). The delegation can only be of the physical act mentioned above. Accordingly the father or mother may authorize another person to perform the physical act of giving a son in adoption to a named person (c) and can delegate someone to accept the child in adoption on his or on her behalf (d) [§ 477].

490. Datta homam.—(1) Datta homam is not essential in the case of an adoption in the twice-born classes when the adopted son belongs to the same gotra as the adoptive father (e). There is a conflict of opinion whether

---

(x) (1881) 6 Cal. 381, 7 I.A. 250, supra; Ranganayakamma v. Alwar (1890) 13 Mad. 214; Bireswar v. Ardha (1892) 19 Cal. 452, 19 I.A. 101; Balak Ram v. Nanun Mal (1930) 11 Lah. 503, 128 I.C. 532, ('30) A.L. 579.

(y) Shoshinath v. Krishnasunderi (1881) 6 Cal. 381, 388, 7 I.A. 250; Sreenarain v. Sreemutty (1873) 11 Beng. L.R. 171, I.A. Sup. Vol. 149. Reference, however, may be made to Biradh Mal v. Prabhavati 41 Bom. L.R. 1061, ('39) A.P.C. 152; Bhajandas v. Nanuram ('54) A. Rajasthan 17; Ramprasad v. Pannalal ('54) A. Rajasthan 36; Ramji Das v. Mangal Sen ('54) Pepsu 66; Neelcwa v. Gurshiddappa (1937) 39 Bom. L.R. 211, ('37) A.B. 169; Permanand v. Laxminarain ('55) M.B. 129.

(z) Lakshman Singh v. Rup Kanwar; (1962) S.C.J. 472; ('61) A.S.C. 1378; Debi Prasad v. Tribeni Debi ('70) A.S.C. 1286.

(a) Debi Prasad v. Tribeni Debi ('70) A.S.C. 1286; Pannalal v. Chiman Parkas ('47) A. Punj. 54, Balinki v. Gopakrishna ('64) A. Orissa 117.

(*a*1) Lakshman Singh v. Rup Kanwar, supra.

(b) Bhagvandas v. Rajmal (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 241; Bashetiappa v. Shivlingappa (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 268.

(c) Jamnabai v. Raychand (1883) 7 Bom. 225; Shamsing v. Santabai (1901) 25 Bom. 551.

(d) Behara Vinyamma v. Ayyagari Veera Venkata Satya Suryaprakasa Rao (1942) Mad. 608, ('42) A.M. 379; Govindram v. Sheoprasad (1948) Nag. 98.

(e) Valubai v. Govind (1900) 24 Bom. 218; Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit (1915) 42 I.A. 135, 39 Bom. 441, 29 I.C. 639, ('15) A.P.C. [F.B.]; (1915) 20 C.W.N. 19, 27 I.C. 39, ('15) A.C. 214; Vedavelli v. Mangamma (1904) 27 Mad. 538, 539.

in other cases datta homam is necessary. In Madras it was held in Singamma v. Venkatacharlu (f), a case decided in 1868, that neither datta homam nor any other religious ceremony was necessary even among Brahmans. This decision was followed in a later case where the parties were Kshatriyas (g), and in another case in which the parties were Nambudri Brahmans (h). The ruling in Singamma's case was, however, doubted by the same High Court in the undermentioned cases (i). It is now held that datta homam is not necessary for the adoption of a daughter's son (j). In a Allahabad case, where the parties were Dakhani Brahmans, it was held that when the boy was the son of a daughter or of a brother, mere giving and taking was sufficient (k). In Bombay, it has been held that datta homam is necessary (l). The Judicial Committee has not expressed any definite opinion on the question, but there is some indication of an inclination towards the view that datta homam is necessary (m).

(2) The datta homam may be performed at any time after the physical act of giving and receiving: it may be performed even after the death of the adoptive father (n), or of the natural father of the boy (o).

(3) The ceremony of datta homam may be performed by the parties who give and receive the boy in adoption, or the performance thereof may be delegated by them to others (p).

Datta homam.—Datta homam is the sacrifice of the burning of clarified butter, which is offered as a sacrifice by fire by way of religious propitiation or oblation (q).

Pollution.—It follows from sub-§ (3), that pollution on account of the death or birth of a relation does not invalidate an adoption made during the period of such pollution. The secular formalities of giving and receiving may be performed by the adopter, though he may be in a state of pollution, while the religious part of the ceremony may be delegated to a priest or to a relation free from impurity. Even the physical act of giving in adoption may be delegated to another person. But the right or the power to give in adoption can be exercised only by the father or the mother, and cannot be delegated to any person.

491. Free consent.—Every valid adoption implies the free consent to the adoption of the person giving and the person receiving in adoption, and also, it seems, of the person adopted, if he is a major at the date of adoption (r).

Where the consent to an adoption is obtained by misrepresentation, coercion, fraud, undue influence, or mistake the consent is not free, and the adoption is voidable at the

---

(f) (1868) 4 Mad. H.C.R. 165.

(g) Chandramala v. Muktamala (1883) 6 Mad. 20.

(h) Shankaran v. Kesavan (1892) 15 Mad. 6.

(i) Venkata v. Subhadra (1884) 7 Mad. 548; Govindayyar v. Dorasami (1888) 11 Mad. 5, 9-10 [F.B.]; Ranganayakamma v. Alwar (1890) 13 Mad. 214, 220 [Vaisyas]; Subbarayar v. Subbammal (1898) 21 Mad. 497.

(j) Saminatha v. Vageesan (1940) Mad. 98, 185 I.C. 37, ('39) A.M. 849.

(k) Atmaram v. Madho Rao (1884) 6 All. 276 [F.B.].

(l) Govindprasad v. Rindabai (1925) 49 Bom. 515, 87 I.C. 472, ('25) A.B. 289 [Kanoj Brahmans].

(m) Shoshinath v. Krishnasunderi (1881) 6 Cal. 381, 388, 7 I.A. 230, 255; Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit (1915) 42 I.A. 135, 149-150, 39 Bom. 441, 29 I.C. 639, ('15) A.P.C. 7.

(n) (1898) 21 Mad. 497, supra; Seetharamamma v. Suryanarayana (1926) 49 Mad. 969, 67 I.C. 615, ('26) A.M. 1184; China Ana Muthuyayyangar v. Thiruvengadammal (1942) Mad. 682, 204 I.C. 393, ('42) A.M. 395.

(o) Venkata v. Subhadra (1884) 7 Mad. 548, 550.

(p) Lakshmibai v. Ramchandra (1898) 22 Bom. 590; Santappayya v. Rangappayya (1895) 18 Mad. 397.

(q) Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit (1915) 42 I.A. 135, 148, 39 Bom. 441, 463, 29 I.C. 639, ('15) A.P.C. 7.

(r) Sircar's "Law of Adoption," 2nd Ed., pp. 279, 280; Strange's Hindu Law, vol. 1, p. 88.

option of the party whose consent was so obtained (s). But it may be ratified by such party, provided the ratification does not prejudice the rights of other persons (t).

492. Consideration for adoption.—An adoption is not invalid merely because the person giving in adoption receives a consideration for the adoption from the person taking in adoption, though the promise to pay cannot be enforced in law (u).

493. Adoption cannot be cancelled: renunciation by adopted son of right of inheritance.—A valid adoption once made cannot be cancelled by the adoptive father (v) or other parties thereto, nor can the adopted son renounce his status as such and return to his family of birth. But there is nothing to prevent him from renouncing his right of inheritance in the adoptive family, in which case the inheritance would go to the next heir (w).

V.—RESULTS OF DATTAK ADOPTION

494. Results of adoption.—(1) Adoption has the effect of transferring the adopted boy from his natural family into the adoptive family. It confers upon the adoptee the same rights and privileges in the family of the adopter as the legitimate son, except in a few cases. Those cases relate to marriage and adoption, [sub-sec (3) below] and to the share on a partition between an a .opted and an after-born son (x) [§ 497].

(2) But while the adopted son acquires the rights of a son in the adoptive family, he loses all the rights of a son in his natural family including the right of claiming any share in the estate of his natural father or natural relations or any share in the coparcenary property of his natural family. This follows from a text of Manu (IX verse 142) which is as follows:—

"An adopted son shall never take the family (name) and the estate of his natural father; the funeral cake follows the family (name) and the estate; the funeral offerings of him who gives (his son in adoption) cease (as far as that son is concerned)."

Adoption does not under the Bengal School of Hindu Law (Dayabhaga law) divest any property which has vested in the adopted son by inheritance, gift, or under any power of self-acquisition prior to his adoption (y).

As regards cases governed by the Mitakshara law, it has been held by the Madras High Court, that an adoption does not divest any property which has

---

(s) Bayabai v. Bala (1870) 7 Bom. H.C. App. 1; Ranganayakamma v. Alwar (1890) 13 Mad. 214, 220-224; Somasekhara v. Subhadramaji (1882) 6 Bom. 524; Sri Rajah Venkata v. Sri Rajah Rangayya (1906) 29 Mad. 437; Shri Sitaram v. Shri Harihar (1911) 35 Bom. 169, 179-180, 8 I.C. 625. See also Eshan Kishor v. Haris Chandra (1874) 13 Beng. L.R. App. 42.

(t) Sri Rajah Venkata v. Sri Rajah Rangayya (1906) 29 Mad. 437; contra Sattiraju v. Venkatsicami (1917) 40 Mad. 925, 930, 936-937, 40 I.C. 518, ('18) A.M. 1072.

(u) Murugappa v. Nagappa (1906) 29 Mad. 161; Narayan v. Gopalrao (1922) 46 Bom. 908, 67 I.C. 850, ('22) A.B. 382.

(v) Bhoopathi Nath Chakrabarti v. Basanta Kumaree Debee ('36) A.C. 556; Asa Bai v. Prabhu Lal ('60) A. Raj. 304, 10 Raj. 194; Deoki Nandan v. Rikhi Ram ('60) A. Punj. 542.

(w) Ruve Bhudr v. Roopshunkur (1824) 2 Bor. Rep. 656; Lakshmappa v. Ramaya (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. (A.C.) 364, 388; Mahadu v. Bayaji (1895) 19 Bom. 239; Lunkurn v. Birji (1930) 57 Cal. 1322, 130 I.C. 250, ('31) A.C. 219; Gulkandi v. Prahlad ('68) A. Raj. 51.

(x) Pratapsingh v. Agarsingji (1919) 46 I.A. 97, 43 Bom. 778, 50 I.C. 457, ('18) A.P.C. 192; Nagindas v. Bachoo (1916) 43 I.A. 56, 67-68, 40 Bom. 270, 287-288, 32 I.C. 403, ('15) A.P.C. 41; Haribhau v. Hakim (1951) A.N. 249, (1951) Nag. 99; Kalagouda v. Annagouda ('62) A. Mys. 65.

(y) Behari Lal v. Kailas Chunder (1896) 1 C.W.N. 121; Shyamacharan v. Sricharan (1929) 56 Cal. 1135, 120 I.C. 157, ('29) A.C. 337; Rakhalraj v. Debendra (1948) A.C. 356.

vested in the adopted son previous to the adoption; it has accordingly been held by that Court that where coparcenary property has already vested in a person as the sole surviving coparcener, and such person is subsequently adopted into another family, he does not, by adoption, lose his rights in that property (z). Following this decision it has been held by the Bombay High Court that a Hindu does not, on his adoption, lose the share which he has already obtained on partition from his natural father and brothers in his family of birth, the reason given being that such share cannot be said to be "the estate of his natural father" within the meaning of the above text (a). The same principle has been applied when the partition was between the grandfather and his son and grandsons and one of the grandsons who got a share on partition was subsequently adopted into another family (b). But it has been held by the same High Court that where property has vested in a person as the heir of his father, and such person is subsequently adopted into another family, he loses by adoption his rights in that property, that property being "the estate of his natural father" (c). This view has not been accepted by the Calcutta High Court which has all along take the view that a son given in adoption will not be divested of any property of which he had become owner by inheritance prior to his adoption (d). The Punjab High Court has taken the latter view (e).

(3) Though adoption has the effect of removing the adopted son from his natural family into the adoptive family, it does not sever the tie of blood between him and the members of his natural family. He cannot, therefore, marry in his natural family within the prohibited degrees, nor can he adopt from that family a boy whom he could not have adopted if he had remained in that family (f).

(4) The only cases in which an adopted son is not entitled to the full rights of a natural-born son are—(1) where a son is born to the adoptive father after the adoption, and (2) where he has been adopted by a disqualified heir. The first of these cases is dealt with in § 497 below and the second in § 102 above.

(5) Where a married person is given in adoption and such person has a son at the date of adoption, the son does not like his father lose the gotra and right of inheritance in the family of his birth, and does not acquire the gotra and right of inheritance in the family into which his father is adopted. The wife passes with her husband into the adoptive family because according to the Shastras husband and wife form one body (g). In such a case if the husband dies the wife cannot adopt her son, because she has lost the power to give and she cannot be both giver and taker (h). But it has been held that when a married Hindu is given in adoption and at the time of adoption his

---

(z) Sri Rajah Venkata Narsimha v. Sri Rajah Rangayya (1906) 29 Mad. 437.

(a) Mahableshwar v. Subramanya (1922) 47 Bom. 542, 72 I.C. 309, ('23) A.B. 297; Manikbai v. Gokuldas (1925) 49 Bom. 520, 87 I.C. 816, ('25) A.B. 363.

(b) Bahinabai v. Kisanlal, 51 Bom. L.R. 825, (1950) A.B. 47, (1949) Bom. 587.

(c) Dattatraya v. Govind (1916) 40 Bom. 429, 34 I.C. 423, ('16) A.B. 210.

(d) See Rakhalraj v. Debendra (1948) A.C. 356, 52 C.W.N. 771.

(e) Har Lal v. Ganga Ram ('51) A. Punj. 142. Also see Rampal v. Bhagwandas ('54) Ajmer 11.

(f) Mootia v. Uppon (1858) Mad. S.D. 117.

(g) Kalgavda v. Somappa (1909) 33 Bom. 669, 3 I.C. 809; Babarao v. Baburao ('56) A.N. 98; Lekh Ram v. Kishno ('51) A. Pepsu 99.

(h) Sharat Chandra v. Shanta Bai (1945) Nag. 544.

wife is pregnant, and a son is born to him, the son on his birth passes into the adoptive family and is entitled to inherit in that family, the reason given being that such a son is born into the adoptive family and should therefore be treated as a member of that family (i).

Illustrations

(a) A has two sons B and C. A gives C in adoption to X. C is not entitled to inherit to A as his son.

(b) A and B, two brothers, and their respective sons, C and D, are members of a joint family. A gives his son C in adoption to X. C loses all his rights as a coparcener in his natural family. The coparcenary which consisted of four members before the adoption will be reduced after C's adoption to a coparcenary of three members only.

(c) A and his son C are members of an undivided family. A dies, and on his death C becomes entitled to the whole of the coparcenary property as sole surviving coparcener. C's mother then gives C in adoption to X. C does not, by adoption, lose his rights in that property.

495. Succession ex-parte paterna.—Subject to the provisions of § 497, an adopted son is entitled to inherit in the adoptive family as fully as if he were a natural-born son, both in the paternal and in the maternal line. He is entitled to inherit to his adoptive father, and to the father and grandfather and other more distant lineal ancestors of the adoptive father. He is also entitled to inherit to the adoptive father's brothers, the adoptive father's brother's sons and other collateral relations (j). And conversely, the adoptive father and his relations are entitled to inherit to the adopted boy as if he were a son born in the adoptive family.

A adopts H in conjunction with his wife B. After B's death A marries C by whom he has a son G born to him. After C's death, A marries D, there is no issue of this marriage. A then dies leaving H, G and D. Subsequently D dies leaving stridhana. Who is entitled to D's stridhana? H and G as the sapindas of A are entitled in equal shares (k) [§ 147].

496. Succession ex-parte materna.—(1) An adopted son is entitled to inherit to his adoptive mother and her relations, as, for instance, her father and brothers. And conversely, the adoptive mother and her relations are entitled to inherit to him (l).

(2) Even if the wife of the adopter was dead at the date of adoption, the adopted son becomes her son by virtue of the adoption, and is entitled as such to inherit to the relations in her father's family (m). But such an adopted son cannot divest the heirs of the deceased mother of property to which they had already succeeded before the adoption took place (n).

(3) Where a Hindu, having two or more wives, makes an adoption in conjunction with one of them specially selected for the purpose, the wife so selected ranks as the adoptive mother, and the other wives as mere step-

---

(i) Advi v. Fakirappa (1918) 42 Bom. 547, 46 I.C. 644, ('18) A.B. 168.

(j) Padma Kumari v. Court of Wards (1882) 8 Cal. 302, 8 I.A. 229; Chandreshwar v. Bisheshwar (1926) 5 Pat. 777, 101 I.C. 209, ('27) A.P. 61 [Mithila].

(k) Gangadhar v. Hira Lal (1916) 43 Cal. 944, 34 I.C. 10, ('17) A.C. 575.

(l) Kali Komul v. Uma Sunker (1884) 10 Cal. 232, 10 I.A. 138; Radha Prasad v. Ranee Mani (1906) 33 Cal. 947; Dattatraya v. Gangabai (1922) 46 Bom. 54, 77 I.C. 17, ('22) A.B. 321; Sountharapandian Ayyangar v. Periaveru Thevan (1933) 56 Mad. 759, 145 I.C. 534, ('33) A.M. 550.

(m) Sundaramma v. Venkatasubba (1926) 49 Mad. 941, 97 I.C. 145, ('26) A.M. 1203.

(n) Sivagami Achi v. Somasundaram ('56) A.M. 323 overruling earlier decisions of the same High Court to the contrary. Also see Ramakrishnayya v. Narasayya ('57) Andh. Pra. 109.

mothers. The adopted son inherits only to the adoptive mother and to her relations, and she alone and her relations can inherit to him. The same principle applies when an adoption is made by one of several widows in pursuance of an authority left to her alone (o). In other cases, it is not settled whether the adopted son inherits to all the wives of the adoptive father and their relations (p). In a recent decision the High Court of Madras has held that even if two wives are associated in the adoption ceremony the senior wife by reason of the special status and priority given to her becomes the adoptive mother for tracing the line of succession ex parte materna from the adopted son (*p*1).

Illustration

A, who has two wives B and C, adopts a son D in conjunction with his wife B. A dies, and on his death D succeeds to his estate. D then dies unmarried. B is entitled to inherit to D as his mother to the entire exclusion of C: Annapurni v. Forbes (1900) 23 Mad. 1, 26 I.A. 246.

Where the adoptive father has remarried before adoption and has that wife living at the time of adoption, the deceased wife of the adoptive father cannot be designated or nominated as the adoptive mother of the adopted son (q).

497. Son born after adoption.—(1) The statement of law in the above sections that an adopted son is entitled to inherit just as if he were a natural-born son, is subject to the exception mentioned below:—

Where a son is born after adoption to the adoptive father, (a) the adopted son does not, on a partition between him and the after-born natural son, share equally with him as he would have done if he were a natural son, but he takes—

(1) in Bengal, one-third of the adoptive father's estate,

(2) In Benares, one-fourth of the estate (*q*1); and

(3) in the Bombay and Madras States, one-fifth of the estate (r); and

(b) if the estate is impartible, the aurasa son alone succeeds to it (s).

Except as aforesaid an adopted son is entitled to the same share as a legitimate son [ill. (b)].

(2) Among Shudras in Madras and Bengal, an adopted son shares equally with the after-born natural son (t); in Bombay, he takes one-fifth of the estate (u). In Central Provinces and Rajasthan where the Benares school prevails he takes one-fourth of the estate (v).

(3) The same rules apply on a partition in the lifetime of the father. Thus in Madras the father and the after-born natural son will each take four shares and the adopted son one share in the whole estate.

---

(o) Annapurni v. Forbes (1899) 23 Mad. 1, 26 I.A. 246.

(p) Mayne's Hindu Law, s. 167.

(*p*1) Venugopala Reddiar v. Krishnaswamy ('71) A.M. 262.

(q) Thriumaleshwara v. Ganapayya ('53) A.M. 132, (1952) 2 M.L.J. 716.

(*q*1) A different view has been expressed in Moti v. Lachman ('60) A. Raj. 122, 10 Raj. 225.

(r) Giriappa v. Ningappa (1893) 17 Bom. 100; Melappa v. Guramma ('56) A.B. 129; Ayyavu v. Niladatchi (1862) 1 Mad. H.C. 45.

(s) Sahebgouda v. Shiddangouda (1939) Bom. 314.

(t) Perrazu v. Subbarayadu (1921) 48 I.A. 280, 44 Mad. 656, 61 I.C. 690, ('22) A.P.C. 71; Asita v. Nirode (1916) 20 C.W.N. 901, 35 I.C. 127, ('17) A.C. 292.

(u) Tukaram v. Ramchandra (1925) 49 Bom. 672, 89 I.C. 984, ('25) A.B. 425. Guramma v. Mallappa (1964) A.S.C. 510, 66 Bom. L.R. 284.

(v) Laxman v. Bayabai (1955) Nag. 656, ('55) A.N. 241. Anandi Lal v. Onkar ('60) A. Raj. 251, 10 Raj. 160.

Illustrations

(a) A, a childless Hindu, adopts a son B. A son C is then born to A. A dies leaving property worth Rs. 3,000. In Bengal, B would take Rs. 1,000 and C Rs. 2,000. In Benares B would take Rs. 750, and C Rs. 2,250. In Bombay and Madras, B would take Rs. 600, and C Rs. 2,400.

(b) A and B are two brothers. A has a son C. B, who has no son, adopts D. The parties are all members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law. After the death of A and B, D sues C for a partition. D is entitled to a share equal to that taken by C, that is, D's adoptive father's brother's son: Nagindas v. Bachoo (1915) 43 I.A. 56, 40 Bom. 270, 32 I.C. 403, ('15) A.P.C. 41, overruling the Calcutta and Bombay decisions noted below (w), where it was held that D was entitled not to a share equal to that taken by C, but to the smaller shares as if C was an after-born son.

498. Rights of adopted son in separate property.—Power of adoptive father to dispose of separate property.—(1) A Hindu adopting a son does not thereby deprive himself of the power he has to dispose of his separate property by gift or will. There is no implied contract on the part of the adoptive father, in consideration of the gift of his son by the natural father, that he will not dispose of his property by gift or will (x).

(2) An adopted son does not stand in a better position, with regard to the separate property of his adoptive father, than a natural born son; and there is nothing in the Hindu law to prevent a father from disposing of by will his separate property, and so defeating the rights by inheritance of his son (y). But where the boy is given in adoption under an express agreement that the adoptive father shall not dispose of his property to the prejudice of the adopted son, the adoptive father cannot dispose of the property to the boy's prejudice (z).

(3) An alienation by way of gift by the adoptive father of his separate property prior to the adoption is binding on the adopted son (a).

The will of a Hindu disposing of his separate property is not revoked by the subsequent adoption of a son by him (b).

Where a Hindu disposes of his separate property by will, and an adoption is made to him by his widow after his death, the disposition by will is not affected by the adoption, for the will speaks as at the death of the testator, and the property is carried before the adoption takes place (c). The same principle applies when the last surviving coparcener of a joint family makes a testamentary disposition of his property (d) or alienates the property in any way before the adoption takes place (e). The adopted son takes subject to the provisions of the will (f), or the previous alienations.

---

(w) Raghubanund Doss v. Sadhu Churn (1878) 4 Cal. 425; Bachoo v. Nagindas (1914) 16 Bom. L.R. 263, 23 I.C. 912, ('14) A.B. 38. See also Raja v. Subbaraya (1888) 7 Mad. 523.

(x) Sri Raja Ras Venkata Surya v. Court of Wards (1899) 22 Mad. 383, 26 I.A. 83; Surendra Nath v. Kala Chand (1907) 12 C.W.N. 668; Purshotam v. Vasudev (1871) 8 Bom. H.C.O.C. 196.

(y) Purshotam v. Vasudeo (1871) 8 Bom. H.C.O.C. 196; Subba Reddi v. Doraisami (1907) 30 Mad. 869.

(z) Surendroo Keshub v. Doorgasoondery (1892) 19 Cal. 513, 536, 19 I.A. 108, 132; Nanda Krishna v. Bhupendra ('66) A.C. 181.

(a) See Kaluanasundaram v. Karuppa (1927) 54 I.A. 89, 50 Mad. 193, 100 I.C. 105, ('27) A.P.C. 42 [gift before adoption].

(b) See Vinayak v. Govindrav (1869) 6 Bom. H.C.A.C. 224, 229.

(c) Krishnamurthi v. Krishnamurthi (1927) 54 I.A. 248, 262, 50 Mad. 508, 518, 101 I.C. 779, ('27) A.P.C. 139; Udhao v. Bhaskar (1946) Nagpur 425; Lalitha Kumari v. Raja of Vizianagram ('54) A.M. 19; Ramachandra v. Anasuyabai ('69) A. Mys. 64; Mahadeo v. Rameshwar ('68) A.B. 323.

(d) Narayan v. Padmanabh (1950) Bom. 480, (1950) A.B. 319, 52 Bom. L.R. 313; Vithalbai v. Shivabai, 52 Bom. L.R. 301, (1950) A.B. 289; Bhimaji v. Hanmanrao, 52 Bom. L.R. 290, (1950) A.B. 271.

(e) Prahlad v. Seth Gendalal (1948) Nag. 271.

(f) Venkatanarasimha v. Subba Rao (1923) 46 Mad. 300, 73 I.C. 991, ('23) A.M. 376; Lakshminarasimham v. Rajeswari ('55) Andh. Pra. 278.

This section applies also to property held by a father in Bengal, he having an absolute power to dispose of his property, whether ancestral or self-acquired [§ 274].

499. Rights of adopted son in coparcenary property.—(1) An alienation of coparcenary property, valid when it was made, is binding upon a son adopted after the date of alienation [§ 270(3)] (g). Also see § 336 for the rights of a son adopted after partition.

In States referred to in § 268, an alienation by a coparcener of his share in the coparcenary property made without legal necessity or in excess of his interest in the coparcenary property, is binding upon a coparcener adopted after the date of the alienation (h).

(2) Where an adoption is made by a member of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, the adopted son becomes a member of the coparcenary from the moment of his adoption, and the adoptive father has no power either by deed or will to interfere with the rights of survivorship of the adopted son in the coparcenary property. The same principle applies where an adoption is made by a sole surviving coparcener subject, however, to any agreement binding the adopted son such as is mentioned in § 368 above (i). See also § 500.

This section applies to ancestral property in cases governed by the Mitakshara law. Just as the father cannot by deed or will defeat the rights of survivorship of a natural born son, so he cannot defeat the rights of survivorship of an adopted son.

Where the last male owner makes a valid bequest of his property and also gives his widow power to adopt, the adopted son is bound by the disposition in the will. If, under the will, the widow is entitled to a life estate in the property and the adopted son to a vested remainder and to a certain sum for his maintenance, it is competent to him to convey his interest to the widow and thus enlarge the life estate into an absolute estate in consideration of the increase of the amount of maintenance (j).

Where a Hindu (A) adopted a son and by a registered deed of adoption provided that his wife should enjoy the property in her own right for her life, it was held that the deed did not affect the rights of a son adopted by the widow of A's pre-deceased undivided brother, as it could not be regarded as a family arrangement as far as the second adopted son is concerned and he was entitled to his share (k).

500. Agreements curtailing rights of adopted son.—(1) Where the adopted son was a major at the time of the adoption, he may by an agreement with the adoptive father or the adopting widow made before the adoption, consent to a limitation of his rights in the property of his adoptive father (l).

(2) Where the adopted son is a minor, the question arises whether it is competent to his natural father to enter into an agreement with the adoptive father or the adopting widow limiting his son's rights in the property of the adoptive father. This question came up before the Judicial Committee in

---

(g) Veeranna v. Sayamma (1929) 52 Mad. 398, 118 I.C. 821, ('29) A.M. 296; Brij Raj Saran v. Alliance Bank of Simla (1936) 17 Lah. 686, ('36) A.L. 946; Puttappa v. Basappa ('53) Mysore 113; Ramachandra v. Anasuyabai supra.

(h) Basawantappa v. Mallappa (1939) Bom. 245, ('39) A.B. 178.

(i) Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma (1874) 8 Mad. H.C. 6; Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal (1915) 43 I.A. 20, 39 Mad. 107, 32 I.C. 373, ('15) A.P.C. 37; Parma Nand v. Shiv Charan Das (1921) 2 Lah. 69, 59 I.C. 256, ('21) A.L. 147.

(j) Basantkumar Basu v. Ramshankar Ray (1932) 59 Cal. 859, 138 I.C. 882; ('32) A.C. 600; Ramachandra v. Anasuyabai ('69) A. Mys. 64.

(k) Laxmibai v. Keshavrao (1941) Bom. 306, 197 I.C. 192, 43 Bom. L.R. 214, ('41) A.B. 193.

(l) Kashibai v. Tatya (1916) 40 Bom. 668, 36 I.C. 546, ('16) A.B. 312; Pandurang v. Narmadabai Ramkrishna (1932) 56 Bom. 395, 140 I.C. 200, ('32) A.B. 571; Punjabrao v. Sheshrao ('62) A.B. 175, 62 Bom. L.R. 126.

Krishnamurthi v. Krishnamurthi (m) where it was held that having regard to a consensus of judicial decisions [excepting that in Jagannadha v. Papamma (1893) 16 Mad. 400], an arrangement made on the adoption of a minor whereby the widow of the adoptive father is to enjoy his property during her life-time, or for a less period, that arrangement being consented to by the natural father before the adoption, is to be regarded as valid by custom (n). "As soon, however, as the arrangements go beyond that, i.e., either give the widow property absolutely or give the property to strangers, they think no custom as to this has been proved to exist and that such arrangements are against the radical view of Hindu law." An agreement or consent by the natural father is not effectual in law or by custom to validate any other disposition taking effect after the adoption and curtailing the rights of the adopted son in property in which he acquires a present and an immediate interest by virtue of the adoption.

The High Courts of Madras and Andhra Pradesh (o), however, have held that an agreement between the adopting mother and the natural father whereby a portion of her husband's estate is settled upon her for her absolute use and enjoyment with powers of alienation is valid and binding on the adopted son, if the agreement is fair, reasonable and beneficial to him.

(3) Though an agreement going beyond that sanctioned by custom does not bind the minor, it is not void, and it may be ratified by the adopted son on attaining majority, in which case he will be held bound by it (p).

Illustrations

(a) A, the sole surviving member of a joint Hindu family, makes a will whereby he bequeaths part of the joint family property to a son whom he is about to adopt, part to kindred and part to charity. Before the adoption takes place the natural father of the adopted boy executes a deed by which he consents to the provisions of the will. Immediately thereafter the testator adopts the son with all due ceremony. The will is not binding upon the adopted son: Krishnamurthi v. Krishnamurthi (1927) 54 I.A. 248, 50 Mad. 508, 101 I.C. 779, ('27) A.P.C. 139.

(b) A grant of an annual sum for the purpose of lighting lamps in a temple made by the adoptive father at the time of adoption out of joint family property does not bind the adopted son, though it may be made with the consent of the natural father, unless such grant is recognised by custom as a grant that can be properly made at the time of adoption: Balkrishna v. Shri Uttar (1919) 43 Bom. 542, 50 I.C. 912, ('19) A.B. 101.

(c) The following agreements are also invalid:—

(1) an agreement providing that the widow should have all the rights to which she would have been entitled in the absence of a son: Purshottam v. Rakhmabai (1914) 16 Bom. L.R. 57, 23 I.C. 599, ('14) A.B. 28.

(2) an agreement enabling the widow to make a gift of a part of her husband's property to her brother: Venkappa v. Fakirgowda (1906) 8 Bom. L.R. 346.

---

(m) (1927) 54 I.A. 248, 50 Mad. 508, 101 I.C. 779, ('27) A.P.C. 139. See also Bhasba Rabidat Singh v. Indar Kunwar (1888) 16 I.A. 53, 59, 16 Cal. 556, 564; Chitko v. Janaki (1874) 11 Bom. H.C. 199; Ravji v. Lakshmibai (1887) 11 Bom. 381; Lakshmi v. Subramanya (1889) 12 Mad. 490; Visalakshi v. Sivaramien (1904) 27 Mad. 577; Balwant Singh v. Joti Prasad (1918) 40 All. 692, 47 I.C. 599, ('18) A.A. 115; Durgi v. Kanhaiya Lal (1927) 49 All. 579, 101 I.C. 678, ('27) A.A. 387.

(n) Hemendranath v. Jnanendra (1936) 63 Cal. 155, 159 I.C. 1101, ('35) A.C. 702; Banarsi Das v. Sumat Prasad (1936) 58 All. 1019, 164 I.C. 1047, ('36) A.A. 641.

(o) Raju v. Nagammal (1929) 52 Mad. 128, 113 I.C. 449, ('28) A.M. 1289. Reference may be made to Venkatarao v. Venkateshwararao ('56) A. Andh. Pra. 1. Also see Purnananda v. Purnanadam ('61) A.A.P. 435.

(p) Ramasami v. Venkataramaiyan (1879) 2 Mad. 91, 101, 6 I.A. 196, 208; Kali Das v. Bijai Shanker (1891) 13 All. 391, 393; Subramania Chettiar v. Velayudam Chetiar (1932) 55 Mad. 408, 135 I.C. 311, ('31) A.M. 808.

(3) an agreement enabling the widow to settle immovable property forming part of her husband's estate in favour of her daughter: Vyasacharya v. Venkubai (1913) 37 Bom. 251, 17 I.C. 741.

In Krishnamurthi v. Krishnamurthi referred to above, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that the consent of the natural father as such cannot affect the rights of the boy, for those rights do not arise until after his rights as a natural father become non-existent. It was also held that the natural father cannot bind his son by his consent given as guardian and manager of the estate of his son, for "the natural father is not managing the estate of his child when the estate referred to is the estate which he will only get after adoption by another person." As to the doctrine of approbate and reprobate resorted to in some cases in support of the validity of the agreements now under consideration their Lordships said: "Next can the case be solved by the doctrine of approbate and reprobate? Their Lordships think clearly not, for the doctrine of approbate and reprobate assumes election, and the adopted son has no election. He cannot undo the adoption and be as he was." Their Lordships eventually held that the only ground on which even an agreement limiting the enjoyment by a widow of her husband's property during her lifetime could be upheld was that such an agreement was sanctioned by custom established by the consensus of judicial decisions.

VI.—DIVESTING OF ESTATE ON ADOPTION BY WIDOW

Preliminary note.—The question of divesting of estate by adoption can only arise when the adoption is made by a widow after her husband's death. It can never arise when an adoption is made by a man in his lifetime; for, in that case, his estate vests, on his death, in the adopted son as his nearest heir, and it cannot vest in any other person. But when an adoption is made by a widow after her husband's death, it may be that his estate is, at the date of adoption, vested in the widow as his heir or it may be that it has passed to others and vested in them as in illustration (c) to § 502 below. The question then arises whether the adopted son is entitled to the estate of his adoptive father in whosoever's hands it may be at the date of adoption. The answer is in the negative; he is entitled to it in certain cases only, these being the cases set forth in § 502 below.

Again, if the adoptive father was a member of joint family governed by the Mitakshara law at the time of his death, it may be that his interest which passed to his coparceners by survivorship is still vested in them at the date of adoption by the widow, or it may be that it has passed from the sole surviving coparcener on his death to his heirs. In the former case the adoption vests in the adopted son the coparcenary interest of his adoptive father. As to the latter case there was a conflict of opinion. The subject is dealt with in § 506 below.

The subject-matter of § 502 is closely connected with that of § 471, namely, "Termination of widow's power to adopt." The two sections relate to the same subject in different forms.

501. Vesting and divesting of estate.—A valid adoption by a widow, if her husband was divided at the time of his death, may divest an estate of inheritance. It may, if her husband was a member of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, divest rights acquired by survivorship. The question what estate of inheritance is divested by adoption, is dealt with in §§ 502 and 503 below. The question in what cases adoption can divest rights acquired by survivorship, is dealt with in § 506 below. [Also now see notes to §§ 471 and 472.]

501A. Vesting on adoption by widow.—There can be divesting not only when adoption is made by a widow, but also when it is made by a widower after the death of his wife. In such cases the adopted son gets the stridhana property of his adoptive mother by divesting the person in whom it had vested in the meantime, e.g., the mother or father of the deceased wife of the adopter (q).

---

(q) Subramanian v. Muthiah Chettiar (1945) Mad. 638.

502. Divesting of estate of inheritance.—Where a widow adopts, one of the objects of adoption is to perpetuate the adoptive father's name by securing an heir (§ 447). It now remains to be seen how far this object is attained. §§ 471, 472 and this paragraph may be read together.

In the cases mentioned in § 471(1) the adoption is valid. The widow divests herself and the adopted son gets the property. [Vide ills. (a), (b), (c), (d), (e) and (g) of § 471.]

In the cases mentioned in § 472(2)(a) the adoption is invalid. No question of divesting the estate arises. [Vide ills. (f), (h), (i) and (j) of § 471.]

In the cases mentioned in § 471(2)(b) the adoption is valid and divests the property.

In the case mentioned in § 471(2)(c) the same result ought to follow.

But a valid adoption does not divest the estate of a person other than the adoptive father which had passed to his heir prior to his adoption, even if the adopted son might have succeeded to it if the adoption had been made earlier, i.e., prior to the opening of the succession (*q*1). In Ramchandra v. Balaji (r) a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court held that if on the death of a sole surviving coparcener or the last male owner his property has devolved upon his heir by inheritance and on his death it has vested in his own heir, the subsequent adoption in the family of the sole surviving coparcener or the last male owner will not divest it from such heir. This decision was overruled by the Supreme Court in Krishnamurthi v. Dhruwaraj (*r*1).

Illustrations

(a) A dies leaving three widows, and SW, the widow of a predeceased son. On A's death his estate vests in his widows. SW then adopts a son to her husband. The adoption does not divest the estate vested in A's widows: Dharnidhar v. Chinto (1896) 20 Bom. 250.

(b) A dies leaving a widow W and a brother B. On A's death his estate vests in W as his heir. B then dies leaving a widow BW with authority to her to adopt a son. On B's death, his estate vests in BW as his heir. While W is still alive, BW adopts a son X to her husband B. The adoption is valid, but it will only divest the estate of B vested in BW so as to vest it in X; it cannot divest the estate of A vested in W.

(c) In the case put in ill. (b) BW adopts X after the death of W, and after the estate of A has passed on W's death to A's sapindas. The adoption will not divest the estate of A vested in his sapindas: Kally Prosonno Ghose v. Gocool Chunder (1877) 2 Cal. 295.

(d) A dies leaving a widow W, and two brothers B and B1. On A's death his estate vests in W as his heir. B dies leaving a son BS. Then B1 dies leaving a widow B1W with authority to her to adopt a son to him. While W is alive, B1W adopts a son X to her husband B1. The adoption is valid; it will divest the estate of B1 vested in B1W and vest it in X, but it will not divest the estate of A vested in W. On W's death, however, the heirs to the estate of A will be his brothers' sons BS and X, and they will inherit the property in equal shares. But if B1W adopts X after W's death and after the estate of A has vested in BS as his brother's son, X cannot on his adoption, demand from BS half the property of A, not even if the adoption was delayed beyond W's lifetime by the fraud of BS: Bhubaneswari Debi v. Nilcomul (1886) 12 Cal. 18, 12 I.A. 137. Reference was made to this case by the Supreme Court in Shrinivas v. Narayan (1954) A.S.C. 379, 57 Bom. L.R. 678, (1955) S.C.R. 1. Also see the Patna case cited below (s).

---

(*q*1) Shrinivas v. Narayan (1955) S.C.R. 1, 57 Bom. L.R. 678, ('54) A.S.C. 379. Also see § 472 ante.

(r) (1955) 57 Bom. L.R. 491 (F.B.).

(*r*1) ('62) A.S.C. 59; (1961) 2 S.C.J. 582; 64 Bom. L.R. 165 (overruling 57 Bom. L.R. 491 (F.B.); See § 472, supra.

(s) Chandrachoor Deb v. Bibhutibhushan Deva (1944) 23 Pat. 763.

In a case decided by the Madras High Court the decision on the question of relation back and divesting of estate was founded on the theory of spiritual benefit (*s*1).

It is clear from §§ 471 and 472 that adoption made by the widow relates back to the death of the adoptive father. The rights of an adopted son are not affected by reason of the fact that the joint status of the family which he seeks to enter by virtue of his adoption has become terminated either by a prior partition between the surviving coparceners or by the death of the sole surviving coparcener. Reference may be made to the recent decision of the Supreme Court in Govind Hanumantha v. Nagappa (*s*2).

503. Further case of divesting of estate in Bombay.—It is clear from § 471 that the widow's power to adopt is at an end in some cases. If she does adopt in such a case, the adoption is invalid, and it does not divest the estate vested in another. It is now settled law that the power to adopt does not depend upon any question of vesting or divesting (t). It has, however, been held by the High Court of Bombay (u), that if the widow in such cases adopts with the consent of the person in whom the estate was vested, the adoption is not only valid, but it divests the estate vested in the consenting party. The High Court of Bombay stands alone in holding this view which cannot be supported. The High Court of Madras has expressly dissented from it (v).

504. Stridhana not divested.—Adoption by a widow does not divest her stridhana (w).

505. Maintenance of widow on divesting of estate.—Subject to any agreement that may have been made by the widow prior to adoption [§ 500], a widow whose estate is divested by adoption is entitled only to maintenance out of her husband's property (x).

In fact, her rights are reduced to what they would have been if the husband had left a son.

506. Adoption by widow in a joint family.—When a member of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law dies and the widow validly adopts a son to him [§§ 462(2), 462(3), 472 and 473], a coparcenary interest in the joint property is immediately created by the adoption co-extensive with that which the deceased coparcener had, and it vests at once in the adopted son.

Illustrations

(a) In the ills. (a) and (b) to § 472 the adopted son becomes a member of the coparcenary and is entitled to the share of his adoptive father.

(b) In the ills. (d), (e) and (f) to § 472 the adopted son being in the senior line becomes entitled to zamindary, raj, or talukdary respectively by the rule of lineal primogeniture [§ 590] and thus divests the junior member of the family in whom the property has been vested in the interval between the death of the adoptive father and the adoption.

(c) In ill (g) to § 472 the adopted son P is entitled to jivai estate and divests the Thakore in whom it is vested subject to being divested by adoption.

---

(*s*1) Venkalakshmi Ammal v. Jagannathan ('63) A.M. 316.

(*s*2) ('72) A.S.C. 1401 Reference has been made to this decision in § 472 supra.

(t) See § 471(3).

(u) Babu v. Ratnoji (1897) 21 Bom. 319; Payapa v. Appanna (1899) 23 Bom. 327; Bhimappa v. Basawa (1905) 29 Bom. 400; Siddappa v. Ningangavda (1914) 38 Bom. 724, 27 I.C. 51, ('14) A.B. 107. Reference may be made to Vaman v. Venkaji (1921) 45 Bom. 829; Vasudeo v. Ramchandra (1898) 22 Bom. 551, 555 (F.B.).

(v) Annammah v. Mabbu Bali Reddy (1875) 8 Mad. H.C. 108.

(w) West and Buhler, 4th ed., 1033.

(x) Jamnabai v. Raychand (1883) 7 Bom. 225; Dalel v. Ambika (1903) 25 All. 266.

The fact that only one member of the joint family survives at the time of adoption as in ills. (a) and (b), is no bar to an adoption in the joint family. The family continues to be joint so long as any widow remains in it with a power to adopt. A & B, two brothers, were members of joint family. A died leaving a widow. B afterwards adopted D and relinquished the property to D. A's widow now adopted. It was held that the adoption was valid and that the adopted son could claim a repartition of the property in the hands of D, but was not entitled to the Watan that belonged to the family (y).

The joint family does not come to an end on the death of the last male coparcener. It continues to exist so long as a widow of a coparcener remains. If there is even one widow she can adopt, and the adopted son will divest the property, wherever it is vested at the time (z).

If there is more than one widow both can adopt; both adoptions are valid (a) except when the two widows are in the relation of mother-in-law and daughter-in-law. In the last case only the first adoption is valid.

VII.—ALIENATIONS MADE PRIOR TO ADOPTION

507. Adopted son's rights date from adoption.—The rights of an adopted son arise for the first time on his adoption. He may, by virtue of his rights as adopted son, divest other persons in whom the property vested after the death of the adoptive father, but all lawful alienations made by previous holder would be binding on him (b). His right to impeach previous alienations would depend upon the capacity of the holder who made the alienation as well as on the nature of the action of alienation. When the holder was a male who had unfettered right of transfer, e.g., the last surviving member of a joint family, the adopted son could not impeach the transfer (c). In case of females who had restricted rights of transfer even apart from any adoption, the transfer would be valid only when they are supported by legal necessity [§ 509].

The doctrine of relation back has no application to the case of any lawful alienation effected by a male or female heir since the death of the adoptive father and before the date of adoption [§ 472(2)]. This would seem to be well-settled law. A contrary view, however, has been taken in the undermentioned decisions of the Mysore High Court (*b*1). In a later decision the Bombay High Court has expressed disagreement with that view (*b*2) and held that a son adopted after the alienation by a sole surviving coparcener of the family would not be entitled to divest the alienee in whom property has vested in any such case.

508. Alienations by adoptive father prior to adoption.—An adopted son is bound by alienations made by his adoptive father prior to the adoption to the same extent as a natural-born son would be [§ 498(3), § 499(1)].

509. Alienations by widow before adoption.—(1) The rights of an adopted son spring into existence at the moment of adoption, and displace the rights

---

(y) Ramchandra Balaji v. Sankar Apparao (1945) Bom. 353.

(z) Umabai v. Nani (1936) 60 Bom. 102, 38 Bom. L.R. 100, 162 I.C. 133, ('36) A.B. 135.

(a) Mst. Draupadi v. Vikram (1939) Nag. 88.

(b) Jivaji v. Hanmant, 52 Bom. L.R. 527, (1950) A.B. 360; Pralhad v. Seth Gendalal (1948) Nag. 271.

(c) Veeranna v. Sayamma, 52 Mad. 398; Pralhad v. Seth Gendalal (1948) Nag. 271.

(*b*1) Mahadevappa v. Chanabasappa ('66) A. Mys. 15; Nandappa v. Shidgouda ('64) A. Mys. 217.

(*b*2) Babgonda v. Anna Nemgonda ('68) A.B. 8; Mahadeo v. Rameshwar ('68) A.B. 323.

of the widow and of all persons claiming under a title derived from her. The result of the adoption being to divest the widow's estate, the widow cannot after adoption alienate any portion of her husband's estate for any purpose whatever.

(2) As regards alienations made by the widow before the adoption, if they are made for a legal necessity [§§ 181A, 181B], or with the consent of the next reversioners [§ 183], the adopted son is as much bound by them as the reversioners would be (d). But if the alienation was made without legal necessity or without the consent of the reversioners, the alienation is valid to the extent only of the widow's interest in the estate up to the date of adoption. After adoption the alienee has no power to retain the property as against the adopted son unless the claim of the adopted son has become barred by limitation. The rights of the adopted son do not await the determination of the widow's estate by her death as in the case of reversioners (e). Reference may be made to the observations of the Supreme Court in Natvarlal v. Dadubhai (1954) S.C. 61, (1954) S.C.R. 339 and the Full Bench decision of the Bombay High Court referred to in § 509A.

Alienation with consent of reversioners.—If the alienation was made by the widow with the consent of the next reversioners, but under circumstances which do not raise a presumption of legal necessity, the Court will upon proof of those circumstances set aside the alienation as against the adopted son (f) [§ 183].

Limitation.—The period of limitation for a suit by an adopted son against an alienee from the widow is 12 years from the date when the possession of the alienee becomes adverse to him; see Indian Limitation Act, 1908, art. 144. Where a sale is not for legal necessity, the adopted son is entitled to treat it as a nullity, and he may sue for possession without suing to have the sale set aside (g); hence art. 91 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, will not come in his way (g). See notes to § 209.

Now see Articles 65 and 59 of the new Limitation Act 1963.

A son adopted by a widow after the death of the first adopted son divests the adoptive mother of the estate inherited by her from her first adopted son and is unaffected by alienations made by her without necessity (h).

VIII.—SURRENDER PRIOR TO ADOPTION

509A. Surrender prior to adoption.—If prior to his adoption a valid surrender is effected by his adoptive mother, the subsequently adopted son can divest the property which has already vested in the surrenderee. This view was taken by a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court (i) overruling a number of earlier decisions of that Court. The question had been expressly left open when it had been referred to a Full Bench of the same Court in an earlier case (j). [See § 197 (6)].

---

(d) Lakshmana Rau v. Lakshmi (1882) 4 Mad. 160; Lakshman Bhau v. Radhabai (1887) 11 Bom. 609; Antaji v. Dattaji (1895) 19 Bom. 36; Moro Narayan v. Balaji (1895) 19 Bom. 809.

(e) (1887) 11 Bom. 609, supra; (1895) 19 Bom. 809, supra; Ramakrishna v. Tripurabai (1909) 33 Bom. 88, 1 I.C. 647; Vaidyanatha v. Savithri (1918) 41 Mad. 75, 42 I.C. 245, ('18) A.M. 469 [F.B.] overruling Sreeramulu v. Kristamma (1903) 26 Mad. 143; Pilu v. Babaji (1910) 34 Bom. 165, 4 I.C. 584 [invalid surrender—subsequent adoption]; Sakharam v. Thama (1927) 51 Bom. 1019, 107 I.C. 265, ('28) A.B. 26 [invalid surrender—subsequent adoption].

(f) Ramkrishna v. Tripurabai (1911) 13 Bom. L.R. 940, 12 I.C. 529.

(g) Hanamgowda v. Irgowda (1924) 48 Bom. 654, 84 I.C. 374, ('25) A.B. 9.

(h) Hanmant v. Krishna (1925) 49 Bom. 604, 89 I.C. 62, ('25) A.B. 402; Pattu Achi v. Rajagopala Pillai (1941) Mad. 970, ('41) A.M. 699; Govinda v. Shenfad (1949) Nag. 416, ('52) A.N. 199.

(i) Bahubali v. Gundappa, I.L.R. (1954) Bom. 1026, 56 Bom. L.R. 501 (F.B.); Tukaram v. Mt. Gangi ('57) A.N. 28.

(j) Pandu Mari Lote v. Shripati (1954) Bom. 169 (F.B.), 55 Bom. L.R. 647, ('53) A.B. 428.

IX.—EFFECTS OF INVALID ADOPTION

510. Effect of invalid adoption.—As a general rule it may be laid down that where there has been an adoption in form, but such adoption is invalid, the adopted son does not acquire any rights in the adoptive family, nor does he forfeit his rights in his natural family (k).

511. Gift to a person whose adoption is invalid.—Where a gift or bequest is made to a person who is described as an adopted son, but such person was not adopted at all, or if he was adopted, his adoption is held to be invalid, the validity of the gift or bequest depends on the intention of the donor or testator to be gathered from the language of the deed of gift or will and from the surrounding circumstances (l).

If the intention is to benefit the donee as persona designata [that is a designated person], the addition of his supposed relationship is merely a matter of description, and the gift prevails though the description is incorrect (m). But if the assumed fact of adoption is "the reason and motive of the gift and indeed a condition of it," then the gift cannot take effect if the adoption is pronounced invalid (n). Reference may be made to the undermentioned decision of the Supreme Court (*n*1).

Illustrations

(a) A bequeaths a legacy "to Koibullo whom I have adopted," and directs his wife "to perform the ceremonies according to the Shastras and bring him up." The ceremonies are not performed, and the adoption is held invalid. The bequest, however, to Koibullo is valid, for it cannot be said in this case that the assumed fact of adoption was the reason and motive of the gift, or that it was a condition of the gift. The intention is to benefit the individual, named Koibullo. The addition of his supposed character (of adopted son) is simply a matter of description. His identification is complete, and the gift will therefore take effect, though the description (of his being an adopted son) is incorrect. In such a case it is said that Koibullo takes as a persona designata: Nidhoomoni v. Saroda (1876) 26 W.R. 91, 3 I.A. 253. See the Indian Succession Act, 1925, s. 76.

(b) A adopts a son B. He then executes a writing whereby he authorizes B to offer oblations of pinda and water to him and his ancestors "by virtue of his (B) being my adopted son," and then makes a bequest to him of all his property. It is found that the adoption is invalid. The bequest to B does not take effect, for the words "by virtue of B being my adopted son" show clearly that it was the intention of A to give his property to B as his adopted son: Fanindra Deb v. Rajeswar (1885) 11 Cal. 463, 12 I.A. 72.

X.—MODE OF PROOF: ESTOPPEL

512. Burden of proof and evidence.—The fact of adoption must be proved in the same way as any other fact. There are no special rules of evidence to establish an adoption (o). But the evidence in support of an

---

(k) Bawani v. Ambabay (1863) 1 Mad. H.C. 363; Lakshmappa v. Ramava (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 364, 397; Vaithilingam v. Natesa (1914) 37 Mad. 529, 15 I.C. 299, ('14) A.M. 460; Dalpatsingji v. Raisingji (1915) 39 Bom. 528, 29 I.C. 943, ('15) A.B. 93; Vaman v. Venkaji (1921) 45 Bom. 829, 61 I.C. 460, ('21) A.B. 55; Hari Das Chatterji v. Manmatha Nath Maulik (1937) 2 Cal. 265, 160 I.C. 332, ('36) A.C. 1.

(l) Fanindra Deb v. Rajeswar (1885) 11 Cal. 463, 12 I.A. 72, at p. 89; Panchaksharamma v. Chinnabbayi ('67) A.S.C. 207.

(m) Nidhoomoni v. Saroda (1876) 26 W.R. 91, 3 I.A. 253; Bireswar v. Ardha Chander (1892) 19 Cal. 452, 19 I.A. 101; Subbarayar v. Subbammal (1901) 24 Mad. 214, 27 I.A. 162; Murari Lal v. Kundan Lal (1909) 31 All. 339, 1 I.C. 687; Khub Singh v. Ramji Lal (1919) 41 All. 666, 52 I.C. 311, ('19) A.A. 391; Bai Dhondubai v. Laxmanrao (1923) 47 Bom. 65, 68 I.C. 504, ('22) A.B. 352.

(n) (1885) 11 Cal. 463, 12 I.A. 72, supra; Surendra Keshub v. Doorgasoondery (1892) 19 Cal. 513, 19 I.A. 108; Karamsi v. Karsandas (1899) 23 Bom. 271; Pralhad v. Shantabai (1947) Nag. 211.

(*n*1) Ranganathan v. Periakaruppan (1958) S.C.R. 214.

(o) See Huradhun v. Muthoranath (1849) 4 M.I.A. 414, 425 [acquiescence]; Chandra Kunwar v. Narpat Singh (1906) 34 I.A. 27, 29 All. 184 [admission]; Ajabsing v. Nanabhau (1898) 26 I.A. 48, 3 C.W.N. 130 [pedigree]; Lal Achal Ram v. Kazim Husein (1905) 32 I.A. 113, 27 All. 271 [tradition in a wajib-ul-arz]; Rup Narain v. Gopal Devi (1909) 36 I.A. 103, 36 Cal. 780, 3 I.C.

adoption must be sufficient to satisfy the very grave and serious onus that rests upon any person who seeks to displace the natural succession by alleging an adoption (*o*1). That onus is particularly heavy where the adoption is made a long time after the date of the alleged authority to adopt (p). But when there is a lapse of a very long period between the adoption and its being questioned, every allowance for the absence of evidence to prove such fact must be favourably entertained (q). It stands to reason that after a very long term of years, and a variety of transactions of open life and conduct upon the footing that the adoption was a valid act, the burden must rest heavily upon him who challenges its validity (r).

Failure to produce accounts may in the facts of a particular case be a very suspicious circumstance (*r*1).

The performance of the funeral rites of deceased by the person who claims to have been adopted to him thereafter by the widow of the deceased does not necessarily sustain an adoption unless it clearly appears that the adoption itself was performed under circumstances as would render it valid (*r*2). So also the performance of the marriage of the son alleged to have been taken in adoption by the alleged adoptive mother is a circumstance of neutral value when the alleged adoption is otherwise disproved (*r*3).

An ex parte statement made by a widow in mutation proceedings that she had authority from her husband to adopt is not admissible in evidence against the reversioners in a subsequent suit challenging the adoption either under sec. 32(3) or sec. 33 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 (s).

Statements made by a testator in his will to the effect that the legatee was the adopted son of the testator can be used as evidence by the legatee in a suit for a declaration of adoption (t).

513. Estoppel.—(1) A person who is otherwise entitled to dispute an adoption may, by his declaration, act or omission, be estopped from disputing it. The rule of estoppel is laid down in s. 115 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. It is as follows:

"Where one person has, by his declaration, act or omission, intentionally caused or permitted another person to believe a thing to be true, and to act upon such belief, neither he nor his representative shall be allowed, in any

---

382 [lapse of time]; Prem Devi v. Shambhu Nath (1920) 42 All. 382, 76 I.C. 601, ('20) A.A. 322 [lapse of time]; Puttu Lal v. Parbati Kunwar (1915) 42 I.A. 155, 37 All. 359, 29 I.C. 617, ('15) A.PC. 15 [aged adopter]; Diwakar v. Chandalal (1917) 44 Cal. 201, 39 I.C. 6, ('16) A.PC. 81 [absence of deed and of entries of expenditure in ceremonies]. Gokul Chandra v. Biswanath ('64) A. Orissa 160; Jagdeo Singh v. Shivadeni Singh ('65) A.P. 351.

(*o*1) For instance see Ragavamma v. Chinchamma ('64) A.S.C. 136. Also see Govinda v. Chimabai ('68) A. Mys. 309.

(p) Dal Bahadur Singh v. Bijai Bahadur Singh (1930) 57 I.A. 14, 52 All. 1, 122 I.C. 8, ('30) A.PC. 79; Devakka v. Giraddi ('56) A.B. 99; Sumantrabai v. Rishabhkumar (1953) Nag. 69, ('52) A.N. 295; Hariharsingh v. Deonarayan (1954) Nag. 692, ('54) A.N. 319; Balak Ram v. Nanun Mal (1930) 11 Lah. 503, 128 I.C. 532, ('30) A.L. 579; Biswanath v. Dhapu ('66) A.C. 13.

(q) Debi Prasad v. Tribeni Debi ('70) A.S.C. 1286 (lapse of 54 years). Ramakrishna Pillai v. Tirunarayana Pillai (1932) 55 Mad. 40, 139 I.C. 684, ('32) A.M. 198; Roshan Lal v. Samar Nath (1938) Lah. 173, ('37) A.L. 626; Venkata Rama v. Bhaskararao ('62) A.A. P. 29; Surajbai v. Sadashiv, ('58) A.M.P. 100.

(r) Venkata Seetharama Chandra Row v. Kanchumarthi Raju ('25) P.C. 201; V. Ramarao v. K. Bhaskarrao ('69) A.S.C. 1359; Nagayasami v. Kochadai ('69) A.M. 329; Nandkishore v. Brijbehari ('35) Rajasthan 65; Permanand v. Laxminarain ('55) M.B. 129; Venkateratnam v. Venkatanarasayamma ('64) A.A.P. 109; Godawari Devi v. Subh Karan ('54) Ajmer 57. Also see cases cited under § 489(1), supra.

(*r*1) See Kishori Lal v. Chaltibai (1959) S.C.J. 560, ('59) A.S.C. 504 and the cases cited at p. 510 of the report. Also see Chotibai v. Ganeshlal ('64) A.M.P. 302. As to shifting of onus of proof see, for instance, Thirumal v. Koppiah (1966) II M.L.J. 155.

(*r*2) Tayammaul v. Sashchalla (1865) 10 M.I.A. 429; Kishori Lal, supra.

(*r*3) Kishori Lal, supra.

(s) (1930) 57 I.A. 14, 52 All. 1, 122 I.C. 8, ('30) A.PC. 79, supra.

(t) Chandreshwar v. Bisheshwar (1926) 5 Pat. 777, 101 I.C. 289, ('27) A.P. 61.

suit or proceeding between himself and such person or his representative, to deny the truth of that thing" (u).

(2) Estoppel operates merely as a personal dis-qualification, and does not bind any one who claims by an independent title (v).

(2a) Estoppel does not confer status. It shuts out the mouth of certain persons if they try to deny the adoption. So if both the parties are equally conversant with the true state of facts the doctrine of estoppel can have no application (*v*1).

(3) A person may be so estopped although he was acting in good faith, or without a full knowledge of the circumstances, or was under a mistake or misapprehension (w).

(4) The misrepresentation to operate as an estoppel must be of a matter of fact. An erroneous expression of opinion that an adoption was valid in law cannot lead to an estoppel (x).

(5) Mere acquiescence in an adoption, or mere presence at an adoption, does not create an estoppel (y) or even subsequent conduct recognising the adoption (z).

J and R are two Hindu brothers. In 1908 J executes a deed purporting to adopt D as a son to him. J dies 1912. R dies in 1914 leaving a daughter S. On R's death D takes possession of his estate claiming to be entitled to it as R's brother's adopted son. S sues D for a declaration that she is entitled to R's property as his heir. D alleges that he was validly adopted by J, and that there was a giving and taking in adoption, and further, that if there was no giving or taking, R was estopped from disputing his adoption by reason of certain acts and representations of his, and S, claiming through R, was also so estopped. The acts and representations alleged to lead to estoppel are (1) that R had brought D from his village and been a witness to the deed of adoption, (2) that R had allowed D to perform the cremation ceremony of J, and (3) that at the time of D's marriage R had represented that he was the adopted son of J. No giving or taking in adoptions was proved to have taken place. [If so, though there was an adoption in fact as shown by the deed of adoption, there was no valid adoption in law.] Held by the Judicial Committee that no estoppel arose under sec. 115 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. No estoppel can arise unless there was a misrepresentation as to a matter of fact. It is clear that there was no misrepresentation on the part of R as to the fact of the adoption. An adoption in fact was there. But R may have believed, though wrongly, that the adoption was also valid in law; but that creates no estoppel at all. In the course of their judgment their Lordships cited a passage from the judgment of the Judicial Committee in Gopee Loll's case (a) which is as follows: 'But it appears to their Lordships that there is no estoppel in the case. There has been no misrepresentation on the part of [R]. [R] is alleged to have represented that [D] was adopted. The [defendants'] case is that he was in fact adopted. So far as the fact is concerned there is no misrepresentation. It comes to no more than this, that [R] arrived at a conclusion that the adop-

---

(u) Dharam Kunwar v. Balwant Singh (1912) 39 I.A. 142, 148, 34 All. 398, 15 I.C. 673 [representation by a widow that she had power to adopt]; Surendro Keshub v. Doorgasoondery (1892) 19 I.A. 108, 128, 19 Cal. 513, 532 [no misrepresentation]; Hari Shankar v. Raghuraj (1907) 34 I.A. 125, 29 All. 519 [denial of adoption by person adopted]; Dharam Prakash v. Kalawati (1928) 50 All. 885, 110 I.C. 665, ('28) A.A. 459 [adoption challenged by adoptive mother]; Laxman v. Babai ('35) A.N. 241.

(v) Dharam Kunwar v. Balwant Singh (1912) 39 I.A. 142, 148, 34 All. 398, 15 I.C. 673; Dhanraj v. Soni Bai (1925) 52 I.A. 231, 243, 52 Cal. 482, 496, 87 I.C. 357, ('25) A.PC. 118.

(*v*1) Kishori Lal v. Chaltibai ('59) A.S.C. 504; Eullamoni v. Netranand ('67) A. Orissa 103; Jagdeo Singh v. Shivadeni Singh ('65) A.P. 351.

(w) Surat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder (1892) 19 I.A. 203, 215, 20 Cal. 296, 310.

(x) Gopee Loll v. Chundraolee (1872) I.A. Sup. Vol. 131, 133, 11 Beng. L.R. 391; (1925) 52 I.A. 231, 242-243, 52 Cal. 482, 495, 87 I.C. 357, ('25) A.PC. 118, supra.

(y) Gurulingaswami v. Ramalakshmamma (1895) 18 Mad. 53, 60; Vaithilingam v. Murugaian (1914) 37 Mad. 529, 15 I.C. 299, ('14) A.M. 460.

(z) Tirkangauda Mallangauda v. Shivappa Patil (1943) Bom. 706, 45 Bom. L.R. 992, ('44) A.B. 40.

(a) (1872) I.A. Sup. Vol. 131, 133, 11 Beng. L.R. 391.

tion which is admitted in fact was valid in law, a conclusion which in their Lordships judgment is erroneous; but that creates no estoppel, whatever between the parties": Dhanraj v. Soni Bai (1925) 52 I.A. 231, 52 Cal. 482, 87 I.C. 357, ('25) A.P.C. 118. [Another point taken in the case was that an estoppel in cases of adoption was purely personal, so that if R was estopped, his daughter S could not be estopped. Their Lordships were inclined to this view, but they did not base their decision on that argument].

A situation can arise in which a previous award declaring an adoption to be invalid and acceptance of benefit under that award by the alleged adopted son and acting upon the award by the adoptive mother may create an estoppel against them from contending that the mother had not lost her right of adoption and asserting that she could adopt the same person as a son to her deceased husband. In such a case the estoppel is available to prevent fraud and a circuity of action (b).

513A. The doctrine of factum valet in relation to adoption.—The texts relating to the capacity to give, the capacity to take, and the capacity to be the subject of adoption, are mandatory. Hence the principle of factum valet is ineffectual in the case of an adoption in contravention of the provisions of those texts (c).

514. Limitation.—(1) The period of limitation for a suit to obtain a declaration that an alleged adoption is invalid, or never in fact took place, is 6 years from the date when the alleged adoption becomes known to the plaintiff [the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art. 118].

(2) The period of limitation for a suit to obtain a declaration that an adoption is valid is 6 years from the date when the rights of the adopted son, as such, are interfered with [the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art. 119].

(3) Now see Articles 57, 58 and 65 of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

Art. 118 applies only to a suit under sec. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, for a declaratory decree that an adoption is invalid or did not take place. The article applicable to a suit by a reversioner for possession of immovable property on the death of a Hindu female is art. 141 [see § 209 above], even if it is necessary to decide in the suit whether an adoption was or was not valid: Kalyanadappa v. Chanbasappa (1924) 51 I.A. 220, 48 Bom. 411, 79 I.C. 971, ('24) A.P.C. 137.

XI.—KRITRIMA ADOPTION

515. Kritrima form of adoption.—The kritrima form of adoption is prevalent in Mithila and the adjoining districts, and it is recognized by the law. Either man or woman can adopt in this form. The following are the main points of distinction between dattaka adoption and kritrima adoption:—

(1) The consent of the adopted son is necessary to the validity of the kritrima adoption. But a minor, it would seem, may be adopted with the parent's consent (*c*1). The word 'kartaputra' indicates kritrima and not dattaka adoption (d).

---

(b) Sundarabai v. Devaji (1953) 2 M.L.J. 782, ('54) A.S.C. 82.

(c) Lakshmappa v. Ramava (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 364, 398, (1899) 22 Mad. 398, 26 I.A. 113, 144, supra; Ganga v. Lekhraj (1887) 9 All. 253, 296-297; Gopal v. Hamant (1879) 3 Bom. 273, 293-294; Padajirav v. Ramrav (1889) 13 Bom. 160, 167; (1898) 22 Bom. 812, supra; Timangauda Mallangauda v. Shivappa Patil (1943) Bom. 706, 45 Bom. L.R. 992, ('44) A.B. 40; Bhanwar Lal v. Mangi Bai ('55) 5 Rajasthan 625.

(*c*1) Umesh Bhagat v. Ram Kumari Devi ('63) A.P. 362; Lalita Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (1933) 9 I.C. 491, ('33) A.P. 165.

(d) See Lalita Prasad, supra.

(2) The adopted son must belong to the same caste as the adoptive father. His age and his relationship to the adoptive father are immaterial.

(3) No ceremonies are necessary to the validity of a kritrima adoption, nor is a document necessary (e).

(4) A wife can adopt a kritrima son to herself, though her husband has adopted a son to himself. Similarly, a widow can adopt a kritrima son to herself. But neither a wife nor a widow can adopt a kritrima son to her husband, even when expressly authorised by him to do so. A wife adopting a kritrima son to herself does not require the consent of any person, not even that of her husband. A widow may adopt a kritrima son to herself without the consent of her husband's sapindas.

(5) A kritrima son does not lose his rights of inheritance in his natural family. In his adoptive family, however, he can only inherit to the person actually adopting him and to no one else (f).

Kartaputra.—As to kartaputra and his rights, see the undermentioned case (g).

XII.—ILLATOM ADOPTION

515A. Illatom adoption.—The custom of affiliating a son-in-law and giving him a share, which is called illatom adoption, has been in vogue in certain communities of the old Madras Presidency (now mainly States of Madras and Andhra Pradesh). The institution is purely the result of custom and judicial recognition has been given to it (h). The two essential conditions of this adoption are that the adoptee must marry the daughter of the adopter and there should be an agreement to give him a share. Both the conditions must be fulfilled. Merely living in the house of the father-in-law and helping him in the management of property would not result in affiliation. There must be the requisite agreement. But it is not necessary that the marriage should take place before he is admitted into the family (i). A specific agreement is the basis of this affiliation but in case of a very old adoption the fact may be proved by clear evidence of the course of conduct of the parties and circumstances of the case (j). The incidents of this custom have now been crystallised into certain rules and no extension of those incidents is permissible unless established by a special custom (k). The son-in-law does not become an adopted son in the strict or real sense of adoption.

---

(e) Kamla Prasad v. Murli Manohar (1934) 13 Pat. 550, 152 I.C. 446, ('34) A.P. 398.

(f) Lakshmi Reddy v. Lakshmi Reddy ('57) A.S.C. 314. Sarkar's Hindu Law, 7th ed., 293; Mayne's Hindu Law, section 226; Trevelyan's Hindu Law, pp. 159-161 and pp. 205-206. The rules stated here are now well established, Gokhul Rai v. Janki Kuer ('55) A.P. 487.

(g) Kanhaiya Lal v. Mussammat Suga Kuer (1925) 4 Pat. 824, 90 I.C. 26, 65 A.P. 90.

(h) Kirstnamma v. Veikatasubbayya ('19) P.C. 162 (The custom is the same in the Kamma caste and the Reddi caste); Hanumantamma v. Rami Reddi (1881) 4 Mad. 272; Narasayya v. Ramachandrayya ('56) Andh. Pra. 209; Venkayya v. Satyanarayana ('59) A.A.P. 360. Also see f.n. i below.

(i) Narasayya v. Ramachandrayya ('56) Andh. Pra. 209, 210.

(j) Pathuri Venkateswarlu v. D. Chinna Raghavulu ('57) Andh. Pra. 604; Subbarao v. Mahalakshmamma ('30) A.M. 883, 893 (claims of this nature should be very carefully scrutinised).

(k) Narasayya v. Ramachandrayya ('56) Andh. Pra. 209 (custom does not extend to marriage with foster-daughter); Muthala v. Sankarappa ('55) A.M. 3; Subbarao v. Mahalakshmamma ('30) A.M. 883.

He does not lose his right of inheritance in his natural family (l). Neither he nor his descendants become coparceners (m) in the family of adoption though on the death of the adopter he is entitled to the same rights and the same share as against any subsequently born natural son or a son subsequently adopted in accordance with the ordinary law (n). He cannot claim a partition with the father-in-law and the incidents of a joint family, such for instance as right to take by survivorship, do not apply. In respect of the property or share that he may get he takes it as if it were his separate and self-acquired property (o).

XIII.—CUSTOMARY ADOPTION IN THE PUNJAB

515B. Informal adoption in the Punjab.—A customary adoption in the Punjab is ordinarily no more than a mere appointment of an heir creating a personal relationship between the adoptive father and the appointed heir only. There is no tie of kinship between the appointed heir and the collaterals of the adoptive father. The incidents of an informal adoption of the above type as well as those of a formal customary adoption were examined by the Supreme Court in the undermentioned decision (*o*1).

---

(l) Sivada Balarami v. Sivada Pera Reddi (1883) 6 Mad. 267; Ramakristna v. Subbakka (1889) 12 Mad. 442, 444.

(m) Chenchamma v. Subbayya (1886) 9 Mad. 114; Muthala v. Sankarappa ('35) A.M. 3 (no reversionary right or right of collateral succession).

(n) Hanumantamma v. Rami Reddi (1881) 4 Mad. 272.

(o) Malla Reddi v. Padmamma (1894) 17 Mad. 48.

(*o*1) Kehar Singh v. Dewan Singh ('66) A.S.C. 1555; Sohan Singh v. Gurtej Singh ('72) A.P. & H. 152.

CHAPTER XXIV

MINORITY AND GUARDIANSHIP

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU MINORITY AND GUARDIANSHIP ACT, 32 OF 1956

Note.—Some material changes and modifications in the rules of Hindu law relating to minority and guardianship have been brought about by recent legislation embodied in the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956. The Act abrogates all the rules of the law of minority and guardianship previously applicable to Hindus, whether by virtue of any text or rule of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law, in respect of all matters dealt with in the Act. It also supersedes any other law, contained in any Central or State legislation in force immediately before it came into operation in so far as such legislation is inconsistent with the provisions contained in it. The rules in the following paragraphs of the Chapter state the law prior to the coming into operation of that Act.

516. Age of majority.—There is a difference of opinion among the Hindu writers as to the age of majority under Hindu law. According to some writers, minority terminates at the completion of the fifteenth year, according to others, at the completion of the sixteenth year. The former view is held in Bengal (p); the latter view, in other parts of India (q). This difference has lost much of its importance since the passing of the Indian Majority Act, 1875, which applies to all persons domiciled in India, and to all matters except marriage, dower, divorce and adoption. According to that Act, every minor of whose person or property a guardian had been appointed by any Court and every minor of whose property the superintendence has been assumed by a Court of Wards is deemed to have attained his majority at the completion of the twenty-first year; and in all others cases, at the completion of the eighteenth year.

Marriage.—See § 427 above. Also see sec. 5, Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.

Adoption.—See §§ 450 and 465 above. Also see sections 3(c), 10 and 11, Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

517. Guardians.—Guardians may be divided into three classes, namely—

(1) natural guardians [§§ 518-531];

(2) guardians appointed by a father by will [§ 532]; and

(3) guardians appointed—

(i) under the Guardians and Wards Act 8 of 1890 by a District Court or by a Chartered High Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction; or

(ii) by a Chartered High Court in the exercise of its inherent powers [§§ 535-537].

See sections 6 and 9, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

---

(p) Cally Churn v. Bhuggobutty (1873) 10 Beng. L.R. 231 [F.B.]; Mothoormohun v. Soorendro (1876) 1 Cal. 108.

(q) Shivji v. Datu (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 281, 290; Reade v. Krishna (1886) 9 Mad. 391, 397-398.

I.—NATURAL GUARDIANS

518. Guardianship of person and of separate property of minor.—(1) The father is the natural guardian of the person and of the separate property of his minor children (r), and next to him the mother (s), unless the father has by his will appointed another person as the guardian of the person of his children [§ 532].

(2) No relation except the parents is entitled as of right to the guardianship of a minor (t). Failing the father and mother, the Court may appoint the nearest male paternal kinsman, and, failing paternal kinsmen, the nearest male maternal kinsman as guardian of the minor (u). But the Court is not bound to do so. It may appoint a maternal relation in preference to a paternal relation, or it may even appoint a stranger, if the welfare of the minor requires it (v).

(3) The Court has no power to appoint a guardian of the person of a minor whose father is living and is not, in the opinion of the Court, unfit to be guardian of the person of the minor (w).

(4) The provisions of this section apply—

(i) to the custody of the person of a minor, whether governed by the Mitakshara law or the Dayabhaga law;

(ii) to the custody of the separate property of a minor, as distinguished from his undivided interest in coparcenary property, in cases governed by the Mitakshara law; and

(iii) to the custody of the separate property of a minor as well as his undivided interest in coparcenary property in cases governed by the Dayabhaga law [§ 279].

As to the custody of the undivided interest of a minor in cases governed by the Mitakshara law, see § 519 below.

See sec. 6, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

Father's right.—"As in this country [England] so among the Hindus the father is the natural guardian of his children during their minorities, but this guardianship is in the nature of a sacred trust, and he cannot therefore during his lifetime substitute another person to be guardian in his place. He may, it is true, in the exercise of his discretion as guardian, entrust the custody and education of his children to another, but the authority he thus confers is essentially a revocable authority, and if the welfare of his children requires it, he can, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, take such custody and education once more into his own hands. If, however, the authority has been acted upon in such a way as, in the opinion of the Court exercising the jurisdiction of the Crown over infants, to create associations or give rise to expectations on the part of the infants which

---

(r) Nanabhai v. Janardhan (1888) 12 Bom. 110, 120; Venkateswaran v. Saradambal (1935) Rang. 590, 160 I.C. 878, ('36) A.R. 67.

(s) Kaulesra v. Jorai (1906) 28 All. 233; Rangubai v. Gopal (1903) 5 Bom. L.R. 542.

(t) Subbarami Reddi v. Chenchuraghava Reddi (1945) Mad. 714; Ethilavulu v. Pethakkal (1950) A.M. 390; Kalipada v. Purnabala (1948) 2 Cal. 485, (1948) A.C. 269.

(u) Gulbai, In re (1908) 32 Bom. 50.

(v) Kristo Kissor v. Kadermoye (1878) 2 Cal. L.R. 583; Mst. Bhikuo Koer v. Chamela Koer (1897) 2 C.W.N. 191, (1908) 32 Bom. 50; Thayammal v. Kuppanna (1915) 38 Mad. 1125, 26 I.C. 179, ('15) A.M. 659; Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, s. 17; Emperor v. Sital Prasad (1920) 42 All. 146, 54 I.C. 402, ('19) A.A. 36 [Kidnapping].

(w) Guadrians and Wards Act 8 of 1890, sec. 19, cl. (b). See Besant v. Narayaniah (1914) 41 I.A. 314, 38 Mad. 807, 822, 24 I.C. 290, ('14) A.PC. 41.

it would be undesirable in their interests to disturb or disappoint, such Court will interfere to prevent its revocation" (x).

Mother's right.—When the father is alive, he is entitled to the custody of his minor child, however young it may be, in preference to the mother (y). In a Madras case, where the father had taken a second wife, the custody of a minor girl of very tender years was given to her mother (z).

Capacity of minor to act as guardian.—A minor is incompetent to act as guardian of any minor except his own wife or child [the Guardians and Wards Act 1890, sec. 21].

Adoptive father.—Where a widow adopts a son to her husband under an authority given to her by his will, the natural father should not, on the death of the adoptive mother, be appointed guardian of the person of his son where there are other suitable members of the adoptive father's family available and where the effect of appointing the natural father would be to frustrate the intention of the adoptive father expressed by him in his will (a).

519. Guardianship of property where family is joint.—If the minor is a member of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, the father as karta (manager) is entitled to the management of the whole coparcenary property including the minor's interest. After the father's death, the management of the property, including the minor's interest therein, passes to the eldest son as karta [§ 236]. The mother is not entitled to the custody of the undivided interest of her minor son in the joint property, because such property is not separate property, though she is entitled to the custody of his person and of his separate property, if any (b). If all the sons are minors, the Court may appoint a guardian of the whole of the joint property until one of them attains majority (c), specially when the widows of the father were quarrelling among themselves (d). On any one of the sons attaining majority, the guardianship of the property constituted by the Court ceases, and the Court is bound to hand over the joint family property to the adult son, notwithstanding the fact that the other sons are minors (e). See §§ 535-537 below. Also see sec. 12, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

Illustrations

(a) H, a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara law, dies leaving two sons A and B and a widow the mother of B. A is an adult, bút B is a minor. After the death of H, it is competent to A and B to live as members of a joint Mitakshara family, or to partition the property inherited by them from their father. If they adopt the former course, A as the senior male member is entitled to manage the whole joint property, including the minor's undivided interest therein. B's mother is not entitled to be appointed guardian of the undivided interest of her son B in the joint property, for such interest is not separate property. But she may be appointed guardian of B's person and of his separate property, if any. If A and B partition the property inherited by them from their father, then B's mother is entitled to the custody of the share allotted to B on partition, such share being his separate property [§ 223, sub-§ (4)]: Gourah v. Gujadhur (1880) 5 Cal. 219.

---

(x) Besant v. Narayaniah (1914) 41 I.A. 314, 320-321, 38 Mad. 807, 819, 24 I.C. 290, ('14) A.PC. 41; Sukhdeo v. Ram Chandar (1924) 46 All. 706, 83 I.C. 24, (24) A.A. 622.

(y) Empress v. Prankrishna (1882) 8 Cal. 969.

(z) In re Muruga (1950) Mad. 85.

(a) Monomohini Dasi v. Hari Prasad (1925) 4 Pat. 109, 81 I.C. 1045, ('25) A.P. 444.

(b) Gharib Ullah v. Khalak Singh (1903) 25 All. 407, 30 I.A. 165; Gourah v. Gujadhar (1880) 5 Cal. 219; Virupakshappa v. Nilgangava (1895) 19 Bom. 309 [F.B.]; Sham Kuar v. Mohanunda (1892) 19 Cal. 301.

(c) Bindaji v. Mathurabai (1906) 30 Bom. 152; Narasamma v. Satyanarayana (1951) 1 M.L.J. 436, ('51) A.M. 793.

(d) Seethabai v. Narasimha (1945) Mad. 568. Also see Rakhmabai v. Sitabai (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 55, (1952) Bom. 455, ('52) A.B. 160.

(e) Ramchandra v. Krishnarao (1908) 32 Bom. 259; Chandrapal Singh v. Sarabjit Singh (1936) 11 Luck. 67, 154 I.C. 855, ('35) A.O. 334; Rajah Yenumula v. Chitrapu Buchi Venkayya Pantulu (1949) 2 M.L.J. 774, ('51) A.M. 792.

(b) If in the case put in ill. (a), A also is a minor, the Court may appoint a guardian of the whole joint property under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, and the Court may in such a case appoint even B's mother as such guardian: Bindaji v. Mathuraba (1905) 30 Bom. 152. But the guardianship of the individual appointed by the Court ceases when A attains majority, and the management of the whole property will then vest in him as karta: Ramchandra v. Krishnarao (1908) 32 Bom. 259.

Capacity of minor to act as guardian.—There is no rule of Hindu iaw that the managing member of an undivided family should be an adult. He may be a minor in which case he is competent to act as guardian not only of his own wife and children but also the wife and children of another minor member of the family [the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, sec. 21].

520. Guardianship of a married female.—See § 443 above. Also see sec. 6 (c), Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

521. Guardianship of an adopted son.—The guardianship of an adopted son who is a minor passes on his adoption from his natural father and mother to his adoptive father and mother (f).

522. Guardianship of illegitimate children.—The mother is the lawful guardian of her illegitimate children (g). It was held by the High Court of Lahore that where the father is known he has the preferential right (h). This view has been dissented from by the High Court of Madras (*h*1). Also see section 6(b), Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956 post.

523. Remarriage of mother.—A Hindu widow does not by the mere fact of her remarriage lose her right of guardianship, in any case where remarriage is recognized by the custom of the caste to which she belongs (i).

See the Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856, secs. 3 and 5.

524. Loss of caste.—Under the Hindu law, loss of caste entailed a loss of the right of guardianship of the person and property of minors (j). But it is no longer so since the passing of the Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850 (k).

This act contains only one section which runs as follows:—

"So much of any law or usage now in force [in India] as inflicts on any person forfeiture of rights of property by reason of his or her renouncing, or having been excluded from the communion of any religion, or being deprived of caste shall cease to be enforced as law [in India]."

As to change of religion, see §§ 525-526.

525. Change of religion by father.—The fact that a father has changed his religion is of itself no reason for depriving him of the custody of his child-

---

(f) Sreenarain v. Kishen (1873) 11 Beng. L.R. 171, I.A. Sup. Vol. 149, 163; Lakshmibai v. Shridhar (1879) 3 Bom. 1. See also Nirvanaya v. Nirvanaya (1885) 9 Bom. 365.

(g) Venkamma v. Savitramma (1889) 12 Mad. 67, 68; Saithri, in the matter of (1891) 16 Mad. 307, 317.

(h) Prem Kaur v. Banarsi Das (1934) 15 Lah. 630, 156 I.C. 87, ('34) A.L. 1003.

(*h*1) Rajalakshmi v. Ramachandran ('67) A.M. 113; Dorai Raj v. S. R. Lakshmi ('47) A.M. 172.

(i) Ganga v. Jhalo (1911) 38 Cal. 862, 10 I.C. 69; Mst. Indi v. Ghania (1920) 1 Lah. 146, 53 I.C. 783, ('19) A.L. 40; Putlabai v. Mahadu (1909) 33 Bom. 107, 144, 1 I.C. 659. But see Panchappa v. Sanganbasawa (1900) 24 Bom. 89, 91; Mt. Ram Labhai v. Durga Das (1934) 15 Lah. 28, 147 I.C. 19, ('33) A.L. 817.

(j) Strange's Hindu Law, vol. I, p. 160.

(k) Kanahi Ram v. Biddya Ram (1878) 1 All. 549; Kaulesra v. Jorai (1906) 28 All. 233.

ren (l). But if at the time of conversion, the father voluntarily abandons his parental rights, and entrusts the custody of his child to another person in order that it may be maintained and educated by him, the Court will not restore back the custody of the child to the father, if such a course is detrimental to the interests of the child. In such a case the Court should be guided by what it conceives to be best for the welfare and well-being of the child (m).

See notes to § 524.

Also see proviso (a) to s. 6, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

526. Change of religion by mother.—A child in India, under ordinary circumstances, must be presumed to have his father's religion, and his corresponding civil and social status; and it is, therefore, ordinarily and in the absence of controlling circumstances, the duty of a guardian to train his infant ward in such religion. Therefore, where a Hindu mother changes her religion, the Court may, if it deems to be in the interest of the minor, remove the child from the custody of the mother, and place the child under a Hindu guardian (n).

Also see proviso (a) to sec. 6, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act. 1956.

527. Change of religion by minor.—Where a Hindu child, who has become a convert to Christianity or any other religion, leaves his parents, and proceedings are instituted by the parents for the custody of the child, the question arises as to what is the true principle by which the Courts should be guided in such cases. Is it that the minor, if he is old enough to form an intelligent preference, should be allowed to exercise his own discretion as to where he will go? Or, is it that the parents are entitled as of right to the custody of the child, irrespective of his wishes? Or is it that the Court should in each case do what it conceives to be for the welfare and interest of the child? The first view was taken in the earliest decisions on the subject. Then came a series of cases in which the second view was taken (o). The last view is the one now taken by the High Courts of Bombay (p), Calcutta (q), and Allahabad (r).

POWERS OF NATURAL GUARDIAN

528. Alienations by natural guardian.—The natural guardian of a Hindu minor has power in the management of his estate, to mortgage or sell any part thereof in a case of necessity or for the benefit of the estate (s). If the

---

(l) Act 21 of 1850; Muchoo v. Arzoon (1866) 5 W.R. 235; Shamsing v. Santabai (1901) 25 Bom. 551, 555.

(m) Mokoond v. Nobodip (1898) 25 Cal. 881; Joshy Assam, in the matter of (1896) 23 Cal. 290.

(n) Skinner v. Orde (1871) 14 M.I.A. 309, 323.

(o) The Queen v. Nesbitt (1853) Perry's O.C. 103; Reade v. Krishna (1886) 9 Mad. 391.

(p) Saithri, in the matter of (1891) 16 Bom. 307.

(q) See Joshy Assam, in the matter of (1896) 23 Cal. 290; Mokoond v. Nobodip (1898) 25 Cal. 881.

(r) Sarat Chandra v. Forman (1890) 12 All. 213.

(s) Hunooman Persaud v. Mussumat Babooee (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393, 412 [mortgage by mother upheld]; Soonder Narain v. Bennud Ram (1879) 4 Cal. 76 [sale by mother for legal necessity upheld]; Bai Amrit v. Bai Manik (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 79 [sale by mother upheld]; Murari v. Tayana (1895) 20 Bom. 286 [sale by mother of two plots of land—sale of one upheld and that of the other set aside as not being one for legal necessity]; Kandhia Lal v. Muna Bibi (1898) 20 All. 135 [mortgage by mother not upheld as not being one for necessity]; Raghubans v. Indarjit (1923) 45 All. 77, 69 I.C. 683, ('22) A.A. 526 [mortgage by mother upheld in part]: Ragho v. Zaga (1929) 53

alienee does not prove any legal necessity or that he made reasonable enquiries, the sale is invalid (t). The power of a manager of a joint family to make a suitable provision in connection with the marriage of a daughter of the family in the shape of a gift of a small portion of the family property cannot be exercised by a widow, acting as guardian of her son, who is the owner of the property (u).

Also see sec. 8, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

In Hunooman Persaud v. Mussumat Babooee (v), which is the leading case on the subject, the Judicial Committee said:

"The power of the manager for an infant heir to charge an estate not his own, is, under the Hindu law, a limited and qualified power. It can only be exercised rightly in a case of need or for the benefit of the estate. . . . The actual pressure on the estate, the danger to be averted, or the benefit to be conferred upon it, in the particular instance, is the thing to be regarded. . . . Their Lordships think that the lender is bound to enquire into the necessities for the loan, and to satisfy himself as well as he can, with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing, that the manager is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estate. But they think that if he does so inquire, and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged, sufficient and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge, and they do not think that, under the circumstances, he is bound to see to the application of the money."

Alienation by natural guardian: Legal necessity.—Where the mother of a minor as his natural guardian mortgages the minor's property for a legal necessity, and afterwards sells the property before the due date of payment of the mortgage amount, the sale itself is one without legal necessity though she applies part of the purchase money in payment of the mortgage debt. The minor therefore is entitled to set aside the sale subject, however, to payment to the purchaser of the amount applied towards payment of the mortgage debt, his estate having benefited to that extent (w). The minor will be liable in equity to make good to the purchaser the portion of the consideration by which he was benefited and the decree to be passed in his favour would be a conditional decree for possession on condition that he should pay to the purchaser the amount of consideration which has been found to be either for the benefit of his estate or for the purpose of legal necessity (x). In the case of a mortgage, by the guardian, of the minor's estate for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the minor's marriage performed in violation of the Child Marriage Restraint Act it was held that there was no legal necessity to support the mortgage (y).

Where the mother as natural guardian of her minor son sold the only house already burdened with a mortgage debt, created by her husband, as there was no possibility of being able to redeem the mortgage it was held that the sale was for legal necessity (*y*1). In the absence of her husband whose whereabouts are not known, a mother can alienate for legal necessity the joint family property of her minor son who is the karta of the family (*y*2).

For the benefit of the estate.—"Mere increase in the immediate income of the minor or of his estate does not necessarily justify the inference that the particular transaction is 'for the benefit of the estate' within the meaning of this rule, which could hardly have been intended to include cases of speculative development of estates of minors" (z). When

---

Bom. 419, 118 I.C. 555, ('29) A.B. 251 [sale by guardian of his own property and that of minor's property—one piece of land purchased with sale proceeds of both properties—sale of minor's property not upheld]; Nagalinga Konar v. Madathi ('50) A. Tr. Co. 30; Balakrishna v. Ganesa ('54) A. Tr. Co. 209 (F.B.); Rangaswami v. Marappa (1952) 2 M.L.J. 506, ('53) A.M. 230 [gift held invalid]. Keluni Dei v. Kanhei Sahu ('72) A. Orissa 28.

(t) Mallappa v. Anant Balkrishna (1936) 38 Bom. L.R. 941, 166 I.C. 154, ('36) A.B. 386.

(u) Palaniammal v. Kothandarama Goundan (1944) Mad. 418.

(v) (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393, 423.

(w) Pandharinath v. Ramchandra (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 104, 130 I.C. 594, ('31) A.B. 157.

(x) Ramnath v. Deoraj ('57) A.P. 495.

(y) Ram Jash Agarwala v. Chand Mandal (1937) 2 Cal. 764.

(*y*1) Keshavlal v. Nagarathnam, ('64) A.M. 374; Subbakhal v. Subba Gounder, ('65) A.M. 371; Kesavalu v. Nagarathnam ('64) A.M. 374.

(*y*2) Trutia Mirdha v. Basudev Singh ('64) A. Orissa 123.

(z) Kristna Chandra v. Ratan Ram (1915) 20 C.W.N. 645, 647, 35 I.C. 673, ('16) A.C. 840; Hemraj v. Nathu (1935) 59 Bom. 525, 157 I.C. 406, ('35) A.B. 295 [F.B.].

the only circumstance relied on, in justification of the sale, is that the price realised is much more than the normal value of the property, the sale cannot be regarded as one for the benefit or the estate (a). A mortgage by a mother of the property of her minor son to secure a loan to carry on a trade on behalf of the minor which was not ancestral is not a transaction for the benefit of the minor (b). Nor a sale for the sole purpose of investing the price so as to bring in a larger income (c). An alienation by a guardian to pay the barred debts of the father of the minor is not binding on the minor's interest (*c*1). But alienation of movable property in danger of deterioration in value, or lands barren and yielding no income to invest proceeds in income yielding land, may be regarded as for the benefit of the estate (d). See § 243A.

The Calcutta High Court has held in a recent case that an unauthorised sale or mortgage of the ward's property may be validated by subsequent ratification by the ward on his attaining majority (*d*1).

Burden of proof.—The burden of proof on the alienee is the same as that in the case of an alienation by the manager (e). See § 244 above.

The Guardians and Wards Act, 1890.—Where a guardian is appointed of the property of a Hindu minor under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, he cannot alienate the immovable property of the minor without the sanction of the Court, not even in a case of necessity. If he does so, the alienation is voidable at the option of the minor (f). Where a Court has sanctioned the alienation under the Guardians and Wards Act, the alienee can rely upon the order of the Court and need not prove the actual legal necessity. The omission of the mention of any legal necessity in the order is only an irregularity (g). The powers, however, of the natural guardian of a Hindu minor are larger than those of a guardian appointed under that Act: a natural guardian may alienate the minor's property even without the sanction of the Court, provided the alienation is one for necessity or for the benefit of the estate. The Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, does not alter or affect the rights of natural guardians under the Hindu law (h). But once a guardian has been appointed by the Court, the rights of the natural guardian are extinguished (i).

Limitation.—A suit by a ward who has attained majority to set aside a transfer of property by his guardian must be brought within three years from the date when the ward attains majority; the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art. 44. A transfer by a guardian is not void, but voidable at the instance of the ward (j).

Now see Article 60(a) of the new Limitation Act, 1963.

Alienation by manager of joint family of undivided interest of minor coparceners.—See §§ 242 to 244.

529. Contract by natural guardian.—(1) A natural or even a de facto guardian has always the power to charge, mortgage or sell the properties of the infant on grounds of necessity or benefits of the minor. This law is well settled by a long course of decisions since Hunooman Persaud Panday's case

---

(a) Hemraj v. Nathu (1935) 59 Bom. 525, 157 I.C. 406, ('35) A.B. 295 [F.B.]. Thota Appanna v. Nakkava ('63) A.A.P. 418.

(b) Punnayyah v. Viranna (1922) 45 Mad. 425, 70 I.C. 668, ('22) A.M. 273.

(c) Ragho v. Zaga (1929) 53 Bom. 419, 118 I.C. 555, ('29) A.B. 251.

(*c*1) Sudhanya Kumar v. Haripada, ('60) A.C. 34.

(d) Palanippa v. Harvey ('53) A. Tr. Co. 481; Rabi Narayan v. Kanak Prova Devi ('65) A.C. 444.

(*d*1) Ramlal R. & Co. v. B. C. Patel & Sons, 64 Cal. W.N. 126, 1960 Cal. 546.

(e) Kandhia Lal v. Muna Bibi (1898) 20 All. 135; Raghubans v. Indarjit (1923) 45 All. 77, 69 I.C. 683, ('22) A.A. 526. Also see Nathu v. Ganpat ('58) A.B. 25; Dhabani Dei v. Lingaraj ('71) A. Orissa 224.

(f) Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, ss. 29-30; Sinaya v. Munisami (1899) 22 Mad. 289; Tejpal v. Ganga (1903) 25 All. 59 [where the guardian appointed by the Court was also the natural guardian].

(g) Balaji Vasudeo v. Sadashiv Kashinath (1937) Bom. 1, 38 Bom. L.R. 796, 165 I.C. 530, ('36) A.B. 389.

(h) Ram Chunder v. Brojonath (1879) 4 Cal. 929 [F.B.]; Kanti Chunder v. Bishesuar (1898) 25 Cal. 585 [F.B.]; Manishankar v. Bai Muli (1888) 12 Bom. 686; Sham Das v. Umer Din (1930) 11 Lah. 312, 126 I.C. 788, ('30) A.L. 497.

(i) Arumugam v. Duraisinga (1914) 37 Mad. 38, 12 I.C. 568, ('14) A.M. 648.

(j) Laxmaya v. Rachappa (1918) 42 Bom. 626, 46 I.C. 22, ('18) A.B. 180; Fakirappa v. Lumanna (1920) 44 Bom. 742, 58 I.C. 257, ('20) A.B. 1; Pran Nath v. Bal Kishan ('59) A. Punj. 313; Brojendra v. Prosanna Kumar (1920) 24 C.W.N. 1016, 59 I.C. 589, ('20) A.C. 776; Labha Mal v. Malak Ram (1925) 6 Lah. 447, 89 I.C. 602, ('25) A.L. 619; Contra Bachchan Singh v. Kamta Prasad (1910) 32 All. 392, 5 I.C. 585; Rangaswami v. Marappa ('53) A.M. 230, (1952) 2 M.L.J. 506.

(k). There is conflict of opinion however on the point as to whether the same principle applies to cases of simple loans contracted by a natural or de facto guardian of a minor either under a suitable bond or a promissory note. In Waghela v. Sheikh Masludin (l) [ill. (a)] it was held by the Privy Council that a guardian cannot contract in the name of the ward so as to impose on the latter any personal liability and this view was affirmed by the subsequent decision of the Judicial Committee in Indur Chunder v. Radhakishore (m). On the strength of these pronouncements, it has been held, principally by the Bombay High Court, that a minor is not only exempted from personal arrest and detention in execution of a money decree but that no decree can be passed against him on the basis of a contract entered into on his behalf by his guardian in execution of which his general assets could be attached and sold (n). On the other hand, it has been held by the Madras and Patna High Courts that the principle laid down by the Privy Council in Waghela's case (o) cannot and does not affect the rule of Hindu Law which confers a power upon the guardian to bind the minor's estate for purposes of necessity or protection of the minor's interests (p). All these cases have been discussed and reviewed by the Federal Court of India in Kondamudi v. Myneni; Tadavarti v. Myneni (q). Though the views expressed by the learned Judges on the points of law involved in the case are not quite identical, they concurred in affirming the decision of the Madras Full Bench against which the appeals were directed. The propositions of law receiving the largest measure of support from the pronouncements of the learned Judges of the Federal Court may be summarised as follows:—

(i) A guardian of a Hindu minor either de jure or de facto has no authority to impose a personal obligation upon the minor or his estate by an unconditional undertaking to pay a debt or loan not contracted for legal necessity or benefit of the minor.

(ii) A guardian de jure or even de facto, provided he is not an intruder on the estate of the minor, can borrow money for the protection or benefit of the minor, so as to make the minor's estate liable for the same, but in such cases the creditor can have a decree against the estate of the infant only on the principle of subrogation to the right of indemnity or reimbursement which the guardian may have against the ward's properties. This right of subrogation can be availed of when the guardian is personally liable for the debt, and no question arises of making out a contract directly between the creditor and the infant.

This was the view taken by Kania, C.J., Fazl Ali, J., and Mukherjea, J. According to Mr. Justice Mukherjea a creditor could proceed directly against the estate of the minor if the contract was for the supply of necessaries within the meaning of sec. 68 of the Indian Contract Act. In all other cases he can have recourse to the minor's estate only (k) 6 M.I.A. 393.

---

(l) 14 I.A. 89; 11 Bom. 551.
(m) 19 Cal. 507.
(n) Maharana Shri Ranmalsingji v. Vadilal, I.L.R. 20 Bom. 61; Keshav v. Balaji (1932) 34 Bom. L.R. 996; Sankar v. Nathu (1932) 34 Bom. L.R. 1001; Nagindas v. Bhimrao, I.L.R. (1943) Bom. 117. Wallis C.J. in Ramajogayya v. Jagannadhan, I.L.R. 42 Mad. 185.
(o) 14 I.A. 89.
(p) Ramajogayya v. Jagannadhan I.L.R. 42 Mad. 185; Venkitaswami v. Muthusamy (1919) 34 M.L.J. 177; Meenakshi v. Ranga (1932) A.M. 696; Annamalai v. Muthuswami, I.L.R. 1939 Mad. 891; Satyanarayana v. Mallayya, I.L.R. 58 Mad. 735; Suchit v. Harnandan, 12 Pat. 112.
(q) (1949) 11 F.C.R. 65; Ramalinga v. Srinivasalu ('55) A.M. 657, (1955) 2 M.L.J. 173.

indirectly on the principle of subrogation provided the guardian, on the state of accounts between him and the minor, could assert a right of indemnity or reimbursement against the estate of the latter. According to Mahajan J., the creditor has the right to proceed against the estate of the minor directly without invoking the principle of subrogation if the loan was one contracted for necessity or benefit of the infant, or was for supply of necessaries as contemplated by sec. 68 of the Indian Contract Act.

(iii) The same principles are applicable to moneys borrowed on the security of negotiable instruments. A minor cannot be made liable on a pronote executed by the guardian either de jure or de facto in the name of the minor.

It was held by Kania, C.J., and Mahajan, J., that to make the minor liable in such cases, it must be established that there is cause of action independently of the note, and the conditions necessary to make the minor's estate liable in respect of that particular transaction were satisfied.

(2) It is not within the competence of a guardian of a minor to bind the minor or the minor's estate by a contract for the purchase of immovable property for the minor. As the minor is not bound by the contract there is no mutuality and the minor cannot claim specific performance of the contract. This was laid down by the Privy Council in Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin (r) [ill. (b)] and the principle has been followed in a number of subsequent cases by the different High Courts in India (s). A distinction has thus been drawn between a completed transfer of minor's property by the guardian, on grounds of legal necessity or benefit to the minor, and an executory contract of transfer entered into by the guardian on behalf of the infant for the same purpose, and specific performance has been held not to be available in the latter case because of want of mutuality. In Subramanayam v. Subba Rao (t) the Privy Council had to deal with a case where the mother of an infant as his natural guardian entered into a contract for the sale of the minor's property to a stranger. The contract was for the benefit of the minor and in pursuance of the agreement, the transferee was put in possession of the property. No sale deed was however executed, and the minor through his guardian instituted a suit for recovery of possession of the property contracted to be sold on the ground that the contract was not binding on him. It was held by the Privy Council that the defendant was protected under sec. 53(A) of the Transfer of Property Act, and the minor for whose benefit the contract was entered into answered most aptly the description of the transferor, in the sense in which the expression was used in the section.

In course of their judgment the Privy Council quoted with approval the following passage from Pollock and Mulla's Indian Contract and Specific Relief Acts (Ed. 7, p. 70) as laying down the correct law on the subject:—

"A minor's agreement being now decided to be void it is clear that there is no agreement to be specifically enforced; and it is unnecessary to refer former decisions and distinctions, following English authorities which were applicable only on the view now overruled by the Privy Council. It is, however, different with regard to contracts entered into on behalf of a minor by his guardian or by a manager of his estate. In such a case it has been held by the High Courts of India, in cases which arose subsequent to the governing decision of the Privy Council, that the contract can be specifically enforced by or against the minor, if the contract is one which it is within the competence of the guardian to enter into on his behalf so as to bind him by it, and, further if it is for the benefit of the minor. But if

---

(r) 39 I.A. 1, 39 Cal. 232.

(s) Malla v. Muhammad Sharif, 8 Lahore 212; Soham Lal v. Atal Nath, 56 All. 142; Chodavarapu v. Chennuru (1920) A.M. 423.

(t) 75 I.A. 115, A.P.C. 95.

either of these two conditions is wanting, the contract cannot be specifically enforced at all."

On the strength of this decision it has been held by Viswanath Shastri, J., of the Madras High Court (u) that when the mother of a Hindu minor entered into a contract for sale of the minor's property for purposes considered under Hindu Law as necessary, and there was no doubt about the competency of the guardian to act on behalf of the minor, the contract could be specifically enforced against the minor, and the line of authorities beginning with Mir Sarwarjan's case had no application to such circumstances.

It has been held by the Allahabad High Court (v) that although in general a claim for specific performance of a contract to sell the joint family property entered into by the manager will not be decreed against the minors, yet if fresh property has been purchased with the amount realised and the minor takes a share in the property so acquired, he will not be allowed to repudiate the contract.

As to specific performance of a contract to purchase immovable property by a competent guardian acting within his authority see the undermentioned case (*v*1).

(3) No act done by a person who is the guardian of a minor binds the minor, unless the act was done by him in his capacity of guardian. It is a question of fact in each case whether a particular act done by a person was done by him in his capacity of guardian or on his own behalf and on his own account. In the former case, the act binds the minor, provided it was otherwise within the power of the guardian; in the latter case, it does not. The mere fact that the name of the minor is not mentioned in a contract, or in a deed of sale or mortgage, is not conclusive proof that the transaction was not entered into on behalf of the minor. In each case, the language of the document and the circumstances in which it was executed must be considered (w) [ill. (c)].

(4) See sec. 8, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

Illustrations

(a) The mother of a Hindu boy, M, acting as his guardian, sells property belonging to the minor for purposes of necessity free of all Government claims for revenue. The deed of sale contains a covenant binding the minor and heirs to indemnify the purchaser against any claims for revenue which the Government might make at any future time. Some time after the sale, the Government assessed the land. The purchaser sues M, who has then attained majority, upon the covenant contained in the deed. M is not liable on the covenant, the covenant being a personal one. Such a covenant is not valid and binding on a minor either under the English law or the Indian law: Waghela v. Seikh Masludin (1887) 11 Bom. 551, 14 I.A. 89. See subs-§ (1).

(b) A, as guardian of the estate of a minor, B, agrees to purchase immoveable property from C, on behalf B. B on attaining majority sues C for specific performance. B is not entitled to specific performance, nor is C. See sub-§ (2).

(c) A dies leaving a widow, W, and a minor son, M. After A's death W enters into possession of the property left by A, and manages the same as guardian of M. After some time, in consequence of certain disputes, G applies to the Court to be appointed guardian of the person and property of M, and he is appointed such guardian. Before G can obtain possession of M's property from W, W sells the property to P for Rs. 400 and conveys the property to P as her own property and not as that of the minor. Out of the Rs. 400, she applies Rs. 200 in satisfying a decree against the estate of her deceased husband, and the rest she spends for her own maintenance. M attains majority, and (u) Ramlingam v. Babanambal (1951) A.M. 431. Also see Suryaprakasam v. Gangaraju ('56) A. Andhra 33 (F.B.).

---

(v) Sohan Lal v. Atal Nath (1934) 56 All. 142, 148 I.C. 229, ('33) A.A. 846.

(*v*1) Popat Namdeo v. Jagu ('69) A.B. 140.

(w) Indur Chunder v. Radhakishore (1892) 19 Cal. 507, 19 I.A. 90 [renewal of lease]; Nathu v. Balwantrao (1903) 27 Bom. 390 [sale by mother]; Murari v. Tayana (1895) 20 Bom. 286, 288; Watson & Co. v. Sham Lal (1887) 14 I.A. 178, 15 Cal. 8; Nandan Prasad v. Abdul Aziz (1923) 45 All. 497, 74 I.C. 367, ('23) A.A. 581 [mortgage by mother as full owner]. See also Balwant Singh v. Clancy (1912) 39 I.A. 109, 34 All. 296, 14 I.C. 629 [sale by brother].

sues P to recover the property from him. The sale is void altogether, and M is entitled to recover the property. The sale being absolutely void, P is not entitled to a return of any part of the purchase money, not even of the Rs. 200 applied by W in payment of debts binding on the estate and therefore on M: Nathu v. Balwantrao (1903) 27 Bom. 390. See sub-§ (3).

530. Compromise by natural guardian.—It is competent to a guardian to enter into a compromise on behalf of his ward (x).

531. Acknowledgment of debt by guardian.—The natural guardian of a minor as well as a guardian appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, has the power to acknowledge a debt or to pay interest on a debt so as to extend the period of limitation, provided the act was for the protection or benefit of the minor's property; but he had no power to revive a debt which was barred by limitation. Section 20 (3) (a) of the Limitation Act, 1963 includes a lawful guardian in the expression "agent duly authorised in this behalf" occurring in secs. 18 and 19 of the Act.

A de facto guardian has no authority to acknowledge a debt on behalf of the minor under sec. 18 read with sec. 20 of the Limitation Act, 1963 (b).

See the Limitation Act, 1963, secs. 18, 19 and 20 and the Indian Contract Act, 1872, sec. 25.

II.—TESTAMENTARY GUARDIANS

532. Guardians appointed by will.—(1) A Hindu father may, by word of mouth or by writing, nominate a guardian for his children, so as to exclude even the mother from the guardianship (c). The mother, however, has not the power to appoint a guardian by will (d), but the Court may have regard to her wishes, if any, expressed in her will.

(2) The power of testamentary guardian to deal with property belonging to his ward is subject to the restrictions imposed by the will (e). The father can, by his will appoint a guardian both of the person as well as the property of his minor daughter. On the marriage of the daughter, the husband becomes the guardian of the person, but the testamentary guardian continues to be the guardian of her property (f).

(3) As regards guardianship of joint family property, there is a conflict of opinion whether the father of a joint family consisting of himself and his minor sons has power to appoint a guardian by his will of the joint property during the minority of the sons. In an earlier Bombay case, it was held that he had no such power (g). In a later Bombay case, it was held that he had the power to appoint such guardian and also to authorize him to alienate the joint property, and that, where an alienation was made, it was binding on the minor sons, provided it was within the scope of the authority conferred upon

---

(x) Nirvanaya v. Nirvanaya (1885) 9 Bom. 365; Sant Bhushan Lal v. Brij Bhushan Lal ('67) A. Delhi 137.

(b) Bireswar v. Ambika, 45 Cal. 630; Ramaswamy v. Kasinath ('28) A.M. 226; Chennappa v. Onkarappa (1940) Mad. 358; Kondamudi v. Myneni (1949) 11 F.C.R. 65.

(c) Deba Nand v. Anandmani (1921) 43 All. 213, 59 I.C. 909, ('21) A.A. 346. See also Jagannadha v. Ramayamma (1921) 44 Mad. 189, 62 I.C. 437, ('21) A.M. 132 [guardian of son to be adopted]; Budhilal v. Morarji (1907) 31 Bom. 413.

(d) Venkayya v. Venkata (1898) 21 Mad. 401.

(e) Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, s. 27.

(f) Rajarajeswari v. Sankaranarayana (1948) Mad. 351.

(g) Harilal v. Bai Mani (1905) 29 Bom. 351.

him by the will (h). A Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has now adopted the earlier view (i). In Madras, it has been held by a Full Bench that it is not competent to the manager of a joint Hindu family, whether he is the father or uncle or an elder brother, to appoint a testamentary guardian to the joint property (j). It is submitted that the father has no power to appoint a guardian by his will of joint family property. At the moment of his death the property passes by survivorship to his minor sons, and he cannot by any testamentary direction authorize any person to deal with it during the minority of the sons. But it has been held by the same High Court that if the testator has no sons, he may by his will authorize his widow to adopt a son to him, and appoint a guardian to manage his estate during the minority of the adopted son (k). The decision would no doubt be correct if the property disposed of by will was the self-acquired property of the testator. But it would be questionable, if the property disposed of was ancestral.

(4) See sec. 9, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

See the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, secs. 6, 7, 17(2) and 39.

The Court is bound, in appointing a guardian, to have regard to the wishes of the father contained in his will, although probate of the will has not been obtained (l).

The judgment in the later Bombay case [38 Bom. 94], referred to in sub-§ (3), proceeds on the ground of convenience. The judgment in the Madras case proceeds upon the ground that since a Hindu cannot dispose of coparcenary property by will he cannot make arrangements for the management of that property by will after his death, or appoint a guardian to manage that property (m).

Transfer of power of management by father.—Where the father of a joint family consisting of himself and his minor sons appointed his nephew to manage the joint family property for a period of thirteen years, and the manager was under the arrangement liable only to pay a fixed sum in lieu of actual income, and the father died before the expiry of the period, it was held that the sons were not bound by the arrangement and that the manager was liable to account for the whole of the income after the father's death (n).

III.—GUARDIANS APPOINTED BY THE COURT

533. Power of Court to appoint guardian.—(1) Where the Court is satisfied that it is for the welfare of a minor that an order should be made appointing a guardian of his person or property, or both, the Court may make an order under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, appointing a guardian. [See secs. 4(4) and (5), and sec. 7 of the Act.] Where the father has appointed a testamentary guardian, the Court has no power to appoint a guardian under sec. 7 of the Guardians and Wards Act (o).

A father being the natural guardian of his minor son cannot be appointed guardian of the person of the son and no order under sec. 7 is necessary (p).

---

(h) Mahableshvar v. Ramchandra (1914) 38 Bom. 94, 21 A.C. 350, ('14) A.B. 300; Soobah Pirthee Lal v. Soobah Doorgah (1867) 7 W.R. 73, at p. 75. See also Venkatraman v. Janardhan (1928) 52 Bom. 16, 28, 30, 106 I.C. 79, ('28) A.B. 8.

(i) Brijbhukandas v. Ghashiram (1935) 59 Bom. 316, 155 I.C. 12, ('35) A.B. 124 [FB.].

(j) Chidambara v. Rangasami (1918) 41 Mad. 561, 45 I.C. 905, ('19) A.M. 1046 [F.B.].

(k) Jagannadha v. Ramayamma (1921) 44 Mad. 189, 62 I.C. 437, ('21) A.M. 132.

(l) Sarala Sundari v. Hazari Dasi (1915) 42 Cal. 953, 28 I.C. 972, ('16) A.C. 324 [will made by husband containing directions about guardianship of his minor wife].

(m) Chidambara v. Rangasami (1918) 41 Mad. 561, 570, 572, 45 I.C. 905, ('19) A.M. 1046 [F.B.].

(n) Venkatraman v. Janardhan (1928) 52 Bom. 16, 106 I.C. 79, ('28) A.B. 8.

(o) Amirthavalliammal v. Sironmani Ammal (1938) Mad. 757.

(p) Venkateswaran v. Saradambal (1935) 13 Rang. 590, 160 I.C. 878, ('36) A.R. 67.

(2) Nothing in the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, shall affect, or in any way derogate from, or take away any power possessed by a Chartered High Court. See sec. 3 of the Act.

534. Guardian of person.—(1) In appointing the guardian of a minor, the Court shall be guided by what, consistently with the law to which the minor is subject [§ 518], appears in the circumstances to be for the welfare of the minor. Reference may be made to sec. 13, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

(2) In considering what will be for the welfare of the minor, the Court shall have regard to the age and sex of the minor, the character and capacity of the proposed guardian and his nearness of kinship to the minor, the wishes, if any, of a deceased parent, and any existing or previous relations of the proposed guardian with the minor or his property.

(3) If the minor be old enough to form an intelligent preference, the Court may consider that preference.

See the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890 sec. 17.

535. Guardian of minor's separate property.—The only property of a minor of which a guardian can be appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, is the separate property of the minor. A guardian cannot be appointed under that Act of the undivided interest of a minor in coparcenary property in cases governed by the Mitakshara law. The reason is that the interest of a member of a joint Mitakshara family is not separate or individual property (q). See § 519 above. Also see sec. 12, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

536. Alienation by guardian appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890.—A guardian appointed by the Court under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, has no power to alienate the minor's property without the previous permission of the Court. An alienation without such permission is voidable at the instance of the minor and other persons affected thereby. [See secs. 29 and 30 of the Act.] Where an alienation is made with the permission of the Court it cannot be impeached by the minor or any other person except in a case of fraud or underhand dealing. The reason is that the alienee is entitled to trust to the order of the Court, and he is not bound to inquire as to the expediency or necessity of the alienation for the benefit of the minor's estate (r). See § 519. above.

537. Guardian of minor's undivided corparcenary interest.—Although a guardian cannot be appointed of the undivided interest of a minor in joint family property under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, a Chartered High Court may, in the exercise of its inherent power, appoint the managing member of the family to be guardian of such interest where such appointment is clearly for the benefit of the minor, with power to him to alienate the joint family property including the minor's interest therein, and, where the property is to be sold, impose conditions upon the managing member to secure the minor's share of the proceeds of the sale. This is the practice in Bombay (s) and Calcutta (t). In a recent Allahabad case, the High Court, while holding that it had the power to appoint a guardian, refused to do so on grounds of inexpediency and want of precedent (u). See § 519 above. Also see sec. 12, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

---

(q) Gharib Ullah v. Khalak Singh (1903) 25 All. 407, 416, 30 I.A. 165, 170; Kajikar v. Maru (1909) 32 Mad. 139, 1 I.C. 199; Mulukh Raj v. Dhanabanta ('57) A.C. 322.

(r) Gangapershad v. Maharani Bibi (1884) 11 Cal. 379, 383-384, 12 I.A. 47, 49-50 [mortgage]; Sikher Chund v. Dulputty (1880) 5 Cal. 363 [sale]; Venkatasami v. Viranna (1922) 45 Mad. 429, 65 I.C. 964, ('22) A.M. 135. See also Jugal v. Anunda (1895) 22 Cal. 545 [suit for specific performance against minor—see § 441]; Mansaram Das v. Ahmad (1916) 21 C.W.N. 63, 37 I.C. 380, ('17) A.C. 235.

Illustrations

(a) A, and his minor son B, are members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law. The only property which the family possesses is a house which is in a very bad state of repair. Besides, there are family debts which have to be paid but the family has no means either to effect the repairs or to pay the debts. C offers to buy the house at Rs. 40,000, provided A obtains the sanction of the High Court for the sale on behalf of his minor son B. A cannot apply for the sanction unless he gets himself appointed guardian of B's property. A thereupon applies to the Court that he may be appointed guardian of B's property, and that the sale be sanctioned by the Court. It is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that, if the sanction be not given, the property is not likely to realize a sum approaching Rs. 40,000. This is a fit case for the appointment of A as guardian and for sanctioning the sale: Manilal Hurgovan, in re (1901) 25 Bom. 353.

(b) The facts are the same as in ill. (a) with this difference that A does not propose to sell the property, but to raise a loan on a mortgage of the property. It is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that if the mortgage is sanctioned by the Court, better terms can be obtained from the mortgagee than without the sanction. The High Court may appoint A guardian of B's property, and sanction the mortgage: Jairam Laxman, in re (1892) 16 Bom. 634.

IV.—GUARDIAN DE FACTO AND GUARDIAN AD HOC

538. Alienations by guardian de facto and guardian ad hoc.—(1) A person who is not an ad hoc guardian and does not pose as a guardian for particular purpose, but manages the affairs of the infant in the same way as a de jure guardian does could be described as a de facto guardian although he is not a natural guardian or a guardian appointed by the Court.

(2) A de facto guardian has the same power of alienating the property of his ward as a natural guardian (v). A bona fide mortgage executed by the de facto guardian of a Hindu minor for the benefit of his estate and with due regard to his interests cannot be impeached on the sole ground that he is merely a de facto guardian (w), for example, if it is effected for the marriage

---

(s) Manilal Hurgovan, In re (1901) 25 Bom. 353; Jagannath Ramji, In re (1895) 19 Bom. 96; Jairam Laxman, In re (1892) 16 Bom. 634; Mahadev Krishna, In re (1937) Bom. 432 commenting upon the observations of Kania, J. in re Dattatreya Govind (1932) 56 Bom. 519, 141 I.C. 697, (1932) A.B. 537.

(t) Hari Narain Das, In re (1923) 50 Cal. 141, 74 I.C. 244, ('23) A.C. 409; In re Bijaykumar Singh Buder (1932) 59 Cal. 570, 138 I.C. 739, ('32) A.C. 502.

(u) Govind Prasad, In the Matter of (1928) 50 All. 709, 112 I.C. 873, ('28) A.A. 709.

(v) Hanooman Persaud v. Mussumat Babooee (1856) 6 M.I.A. 393, 412-413; Seetharamanna v. Appiah (1926) 49 Mad. 768, 92 I.C. 827, ('26) A.M. 457 [sale by maternal uncle upheld]; Mohamud v. Nafur (1899) 26 Cal. 820 [sale by paternal grandmother upheld]; Bai Amrit v. Bai Manik (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 79, 81; Lalla v. Koonwur (1866) 10 M.I.A. 454 [mortgage by stepmother held not binding on the ground that it was fraudulent]; Nathuram v. Shoma (1890) 14 Bom. 562 [mortgage by father's cousin upheld]; Komlamudi v. Myneni (1949) 11 F.C.R. 65; Palani Goundan v. Vanjiakkal ('56) A.M. 476. Also see Annapurnamma v. Ramanajaneyaratnam ('59) A.A.P. 40; Kasturi v. S. V. Rao ('70) A.A.P. 440.

(w) Kundan Lal v. Beni Pershad (1932) 13 Lah. 399, 137 I.C. 115, ('32) A.L. 293.

of the minor's sister (x). But if the alienation is for a marriage in violation of the Child Marriage Restraint Act the transaction can be challenged (y). The High Courts of Bombay (z) and Madras (a) have held that a sale by a step-mother, though she was in each case the de facto manager of the minor's estate, is a sale by an unauthorized person, and is therefore void. The question as to the validity of a mortgage by a step-mother arose before the Judicial Committee in Bunseedhur v. Bindeseree (b), where it was held that the transaction being fraudulent, the minor was not bound by it. But the power of a step-mother to alienate the minor's property as a de facto guardian was not questioned. The Bombay decision has since been overruled by the Full Bench decision of the same Court (c). The view taken by the Bombay Full Bench is fully supported by the decision of the Federal Court in Kondamudi v. Myneni (d). The right to avoid the transaction is a personal right of the minor. It is a right to sue and is not heritable (e).

(3) An alienation by a de facto guardian, which is neither for necessity nor for the benefit of the estate of the minor is void ab initio in the sense that it confers no title on the alienee (f).

(4) A sale by a guardian ad hoc, e.g., by a separated uncle who has never intermeddled or acted as a guardian is void (g).

538A. De facto guardian of lunatic.—The de facto manager of the estate of a lunatic has no power to alienate his property for necessity (h).

V.—REMEDIES

539. Procedure for recovering custody of minors.—A guardian, who has been deprived of the custody of his ward, has the following remedies open to him:—

(1) He may proceed by suit against the person alleged to be in wrongful possession of the ward.

In Besant v. Narayaniah (i), where a suit was brought by a Hindu father in the District Court of Chinglepat for the custody of his minor sons, their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "A suit inter partes is not the form of procedure prescribed by the Act [that is, the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890] for proceedings in a District Court touching the guardianship of infants." Following this decision it has been held by the Madras High Court that the proper procedure in proceedings in a Mufassal Court touching the custody of a minor

---

(x) Sheo Govind v. Ram Adhin (1933) 8 Luck. 182, 140 I.C. 556, ('33) A.O. 31.

(y) Rambhau v. Rajaram ('56) A.B. 250. Also see Tatya Mohyaji v. Rabha Dadaji (1953) Bom. 570, (1953) 55 Bom. L.R. 40, ('53) A.B. 273.

(z) Limbaji v. Rahi (1925) 49 Bom. 576, 88 I.C. 643, ('25) A.B. 499 [transferee entitled to benefit of s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882].

(a) Narayanan v. Ravunni (1924) 47 Mad. L.J. 680, 84 I.C. 973, ('25) A.M. 260, commented upon in Seetharamanna v. Appiah (1926) 49 Mad. 768, at pp. 773-774, 92 I.C. 827, ('26) A.M. 457.

(b) (1866) 10 M.I.A. 454.

(c) Tulsidas v. Vaghela Raisingji (1933) 57 Bom. 40, 141 I.C. 17, ('33) A.B. 15.

(d) 11 F.C.R. 65.

(e) Palani Goundan v. Vanjiakkal ('56) A.M. 476.

(f) Tatya Mohyaji v. Rabha Dadaji (1953) 55 Bom. L.R. 40. Contra Seetharamanna v. Appiah (1926) 49 Mad. 768, 92 I.C. 827, ('26) A.M. 457.

(g) Harilal v. Gordhan (1927) 51 Bom. 1040, 105 I.C. 722, ('27) A.B. 611.

(h) Narayan v. Ramchandra ('57) A.B. 146 (F.B.); Kanhaiyalal v. Harsingh (1944) Nag. 698.

(i) (1914) 41 I.A. 314, 322, 38 Mad. 807, 820, 24 I.C. 290, ('14) A.P.C. 41.

is by way of petition under sec. 25 of the Act, and not by way of suit (j). On the other hand, it was held by the High Court of Bombay (k), that the dictum of the Privy Council in Besant's case was not intended to be of such general application as to take away the right of suit in all cases, that the provisions of the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, were not exhaustive, and that a suit for the custody of a minor lies even in a Mufassal Court. The Chief Court of the Punjab (l) and the Allahabad High Court (m), have held that a petition is the only form of procedure allowed in matters relating to the custody of minors.

(2) He may proceed by a writ of habeas corpus under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, s. 491 and Art. 226 of the Constitution (*m*1).

For the case where a minor is confined under such circumstances that the confinement amounts to an offence, see sec. 100 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. For the case where a female minor has been detained for an unlawful purpose, see s. 552 of that Code.

---

(j) Sathi v. Ramandi (1919) 42 Mad. 647, 53 I.C. 399, ('20) A.M. 937 [F.B.], see also Ibrahim v. Ibrahim (1916) 39 Mad. 608, 33 I.C. 894, ('17) A.M. 612.

(k) Achratlal v. Chimanlal (1916) 40 Bom. 600, 37 I.C. 215, ('16) A.B. 129, following Sharifa v. Munechan (1901) 25 Bom. 574.

(l) Ghasita v. Wazira (1896) Punj. Rec. No. 41 [F.B.].

(m) Sham Lal v. Bindo (1904) 26 All. 594; Utma Kuar v. Bhagwanta Kuar (1915) 37 All. 515, 29 I.C. 416, ('15) A.A. 199.

(*m*1) Rama Iyer v. Nataraja Iyer (1948) A. Mad. 294; Gohar Begum v. Suggi 64 Bom. L.R. 54.

CHAPTER XXV

MAINTENANCE

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU ADOPTIONS AND MAINTENANCE ACT 78 OF 1956

Note.—Some material and important alterations and modifications in the rules of Hindu law relating to maintenance have been brought about by recent legislation embodied in the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. That enactment is not exhaustive of the law of maintenance but in respect of all matters dealt with in the Act it supersedes the rule of the law of maintenance previously applicable to Hindus by virtue of any text or rule of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law. It also supersedes any other law contained in any Central or State legislation in force immediately before it came into operation in so far as such legislation is inconsistent with the provisions contained in it. The rules in the following paragraphs of this Chapter state the law prior to the coming into operation of that Act. The alterations and modifications in the law brought about by that Act are pointed out in the Notes under the provisions of that Act.

CONTENTS

I.—Nature and extent of right of maintenance—§§ 540-544A.

II.—Persons entitled to maintenance—§§ 545-565.

III.—Amount of maintenance—§§ 566-568.

IV.—Transfer of family property and its effect on right of maintenance—§§ 569-572.

V.—Transfer of family dwelling-house and its effect on the right of residence—§§ 573-575.

VI.—Right of maintenance not affected by will—§ 576.

VII.—Transfer and attachment of right of maintenance—§§ 577-578.

VIII.—Suit for maintenance—§§ 579-581.

I.—NATURE AND EXTENT OF RIGHT OF MAINTENANCE

540. Priority of debts over maintenance.—Debts contracted by a Hindu take precedence over the right to maintenance (n) [§ 570]. Section 26 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, now deals with the question of priority of debts. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section.

541. Liability for maintenance of two kinds.—The liability of a Hindu to maintain others arises in some cases from the mere relationship between the parties, independently of the possession of the property [§ 542]. In other cases, it depends altogether on the possession of property (o) [§§ 543-544].

542. Personal liability: liability of father, husband and son.—A Hindu is under a legal obligation to maintain his wife, his minor sons, his unmarried daughters, and his aged parents whether he possesses any property or not.

---

(n) Adhiranee v. Shona Malee (1876) 1 Cal. 365; Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai (1878) 2 Bom. 494, 505.

(o) Savitribai v. Luximibai (1878) 2 Bom. 573 at p. 597, et seq. [F.B.]. Also see Kamalammal v. Venkatalakshmi ('65) A.S.C. 1348.

The obligation to maintain these relations is personal in character, and arises from the very existence of the relation between the parties (p).

Sections 18 and 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, now deal with the question of maintenance of wife, children and aged parents. Reference may be made to the Notes under those sections.

543. Liability dependent on possession of coparcenary property: liability of manager.—(1) The manager of a joint Mitakshara family is under a legal obligation to maintain all male members of the family, their wives and their children (q). On the death of any one of the male members he is bound to maintain his widow and his children (r) [§ 559]. The obligation to maintain these persons arises from the fact that the manager is in possession of the family property. The liability to maintain a disqualified heir is governed by the same principle (*r*1).

(2) The same principles apply to cases governed by the Dayabhaga law. But in applying these principles, it is to be remembered that there can be no coparcenary according to that law between a father and sons [§ 277].

According to both the schools, a father is under a personal obligation to maintain his minor sons. But where the father has ancestral property in his hands, then if the case is governed by the Mitakshara law, sons, even if adult, are entitled to maintenance out of the ancestral property [§ 545], but not if the case is governed by the Dayabhaga law, for under that law sons do not acquire by birth any interest in ancestral property [§ 273].

As to impartiable property, see § 589.

544. Liability dependent on possession of inherited property: liability of heirs.—An heir is legally bound to provide, out of the estate which descends to him, maintenance for those persons whom the late proprietor was legally or morally bound to maintain. The reason is that the estate is inherited subject to the obligation to provide for such maintenance (s).

Section 22 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, now deals with the question of liability of heirs for maintenance of the dependants of a deceased person. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section.

Illustrations

(a) Sister.—A Hindu is under no personal obligation to maintain his sister, but if he inherits his father's estate, he is bound to maintain her out of that estate, she being a person whom his father was legally bound to maintain as his daughter, provided, of course, that she is unmarried [§ 542].

(b) Step-mother.—A step-son is under no personal obligation to maintain his step-mother; but if he inherits his father's estate, he is bound to maintain her out of the estate, she being a person whom his father was legally bound to maintain as his wife: Bai Daya v. Natha (1885) 9 Bom. 279: Narbadabai v. Mahadev (1881) 5 Bom. 99; Audemma v. Varadareddi, (1948) Mad. 803.

---

(p) (1878) 2 Bom. 573, 597-598 [F.B.], supra.

(q) Manu. chap. 9 sec. 108; Narada, chap. 13, secs. 26, 27, 28, 33; Vaikuntam v. Kallapiran (1900) 23 Mad. 512, 516; Cherutty alias Vasu v. Nangamparambil Ravu alias Kuttaman (1940) Mad. 830, ('40) A.M. 664.

(r) Bhagwan Singh v. Mst. Kewal Kaur (1927) 8 Lah. 360, 101 I.C. 201, ('27) A.L. 280.

(*r*1) Kamalammal v. Venkatalakshmi ('65) A.S.C. 1349.

(s) Khetramani v. Kashinath (1869) 2 Beng. L.R.A.C. 15, 34, 38 [F.B.]; Kamini v. Chandra (1890) 17 Cal. 373, 376-378; Mst. Rupa v. Mst. Srivabati ('55) A. Orissa 28.

(c) Mother-in-law.—A dies leaving a widow B and a mother C. B is under no personal obligation to maintain her mother-in-law C; but if she inherits property from A, she is bound to maintain C, she [C] being a person whom A was legally bound to maintain as his mother: Bai Kanku v. Bai Jadav (1884) 8 Bom. 15.

(d) Daughter-in-law.—A dies leaving a widow W and a father F. He leaves no property. Is F under any obligation to maintain his destitute daughter-in-law W? Yes, but the obligation is only a moral one, so that he may refuse to maintain her. Suppose now that F dies leaving a widow B. On F's death, B inherits his estate as his heir. B now comes under a legal obligation to maintain W out of the estate, she being a person whom the late proprietor (F) was morally bound to maintain (t). See § 564 below.

544A. Liability of the Government.—The obligation to maintain extends even to the Government when the Government takes the estate by escheat or by forfeiture (u).

II.—PERSONS ENTITLED TO MAINTENANCE

545. Sons.—(1) A father is under a personal obligation to maintain his minor sons; therefore, he is bound to maintain them even out of his separate or self-acquired property. But he is under no such obligation to his adult sons; therefore, he is not bound to maintain them out of property which belongs exclusively to him (v).

If the father and sons are members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, and there is joint family property, the sons, even if adult, are entitled to maintenance out of the joint property. The reason is that under the Mitakshara law, sons take a vested interest in joint family property by birth (w). The liability to maintain an adult son is not limited to the income of what would have been his share on a partition of the joint family property (x).

But the sons do not, in cases governed by the Dayabhaga law, acquire any interest by birth in ancestral property [§§ 273, 274]. A father, therefore, under the Bengal school, is not bound to maintain his adult sons either out of his separate or out of ancestral property.

(2) A son who is entitled to sue for partition can sue for maintenance (y). Where he cannot sue for partition, without the consent of certain coparceners, as in Bombay (z), he is entitled to maintenance out of the joint family property (a).

(3) Section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, now provides that a Hindu father or mother is bound, during his or her lifetime, to maintain his or her legitimate or illegitimate children and that a legitimate

---

(t) Janki v. Nand Ram (1889) 11 All. 194; Rajanikanta Pal v. Sajanisundaree Dasee (1934) 61 Cal. 221, 61 I.A. 29, 147 I.C. 438, ('34) A.PC. 29; Rangammal v. Echammal (1899) 22 Mad. 305; Ganga Dei v. Jagannath, 22 Luck. 518, but see Saran Bai v. Abdul Rashid (1948) A.S. 127.

(u) Mst. Golab Koonwar v. Collector of Benares (1847) 4 M.I.A. 246.

(v) Ammakannu v. Appu (1888) 11 Mad. 91; Premchand v. Hulashchand (1869) 4 Beng. L.R. App. 23; Ramchandra v. Sakaram (1878) 3 Bom. 346, 350, 351; Bhoopathi Nath Chakrabarti v. Basanta Kumaree Debee (1936) 63 Cal. 1098, ('36) A.C. 556.

(w) See Savitribai v. Luximibai (1878) 2 Bom. 573, 597 [F.B.]; Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari (1888) 10 All. 272, 288, 15 I.A. 51.

(x) Chanviravda v. District Magistrate of Dharwar (1927) 51 Bom. 120, 100 I.C. 575, ('27) A.B. 91 [lunatic son—claim for maintenance of lunatic while in asylum—claim upheld though in excess of lunatic's share of income].

(y) Cherutty alias Vasu v. Nangamparambil Ravu alias Kuttaman (1940) Mad. 830, ('40) A.M. 664.

(z) Apaji v. Ramchandra (1891) 16 Bom. 29.

(a) Bhupal v. Tavanappa (1922) 46 Bom. 435, 64 I.C. 568, ('22) A.B. 292.

or illegitimate child can claim maintenance from his or her father or mother so long as the child is a minor. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section.

546. Daughters.—(1) A father is bound to maintain his unmarried daughters. On the death of the father, they are entitled to be maintained out of his estate (b).

A daughter on marriage ceases to be a member of her father's family, and becomes a member of her husband's family (c). Thenceforth she is entitled to be maintained by her husband, and, after his death, out of his estate [§ 559]. If the husband has left no estate, her father-in-law, if he has got separate property of his own, is morally, though not legally, bound to maintain her; but, after his death she acquires a legal right to be maintained out of his estate on the principle stated in § 544 above. If she is unable to obtain maintenance from her husband, or, after his death, from his family, her father, if he has got separate property of his own, is under a moral, though not a legal obligation to maintain her. But it is not settled whether, after the father's death, she acquires a legal right to be maintained by his heirs out of his estate. The High Court of Bombay has held that she acquires no such right (d). On the other hand, the opinion has been expressed by the High Court of Calcutta, that she does acquire such right, provided she is unable to obtain maintenance from her husband's family (e). The Madras High Court has held that a widowed daughter who is without means and whose husband's family is unable to support her is entitled to be maintained by her step-mother out of her father's estate (f).

See notes to § 544 above.

(2) See section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, and § 545(3) above. Also see sections 19 and 22 of that Act. Reference may also be made to the Notes under those sections.

547. Grandchildren.—(1) A grandfather is under no personal obligation to maintain his grandsons or granddaughters (g).

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court, that a predeceased son's daughter comes under the description of "deena Samasrita" (poor dependents) in Manu's text, and consequently there is a moral obligation on the part of the grandfather to maintain her. This moral obligation becomes a legal obligation on the part of those who inherit the grandfather's property (h).

(2) See sections 22 and 21(iv) and 21(v) of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

548. Parents.—(1) A son is under a personal obligation to maintain his aged father. He is also under a similar obligation to maintain his aged mother, and he is bound to maintain her, whether or not he has inherited property from his father (i).

Step-mother.—See § 544, ill. (b).

(2) Section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, now provides for the maintenance by a son or daughter of his or her aged or infirm parents. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section.

---

(b) Bai Mangal v. Bai Rukhmini (1899) 23 Bom. 291; Tulsha v. Gopal Rai (1884) 6 All. 632.

(c) Kartic Chunder v. Saroda Sundari (1891) 18 Cal. 642, 646.

(d) Bai Mangal v. Bai Rukhmini (1899) 23 Bom. 291.

(e) Mokhada v. Nundo Lall (1901) 28 Cal. 278, 288.

(f) Ambu Bai Ammal v. Soni Bai Ammal (1941) Mad. 13, ('40) A.M. 804.

(g) Manmohini v. Balak Chandra (1871) 8 Beng. L.R. 22; Kalu v. Kashibai (1883) 7 Bom. 127.

(h) Provash v. Prokash (1946) 2 Cal. 164.

(i) Subbarayana v. Subbakka (1885) 8 Mad. 236; Satyanarayanamurthy v. Ram Subbamma ('64) A.A.P. 105.

549. Female members of a joint Hindu family.—As to maintenance of female members of a joint Hindu family see § 543 above.

550. Disqualified heirs.—(1) Where a son or other heir is excluded from inheritance by reason of disability [§ 98], he is entitled to maintenance for himself and his family out of the property which he would have inherited but for the disability [§ 110].

(2) Section 28 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, removes all disqualification from succession on the ground of any disease, defect or deformity.

551. Illegitimate sons.—(1) The illegitimate sons of a Hindu may be divided into four classes, namely:—

(1) Illegitimate sons of a Hindu belonging to one of the three higher classes by a dasi, that is, a Hindu concubine in the continuous and exclusive keeping of their putative father.

As to the meaning of the word "dasi" see § 43, nos. 1-3 note no (v) above.

(2) Illegitimate sons of a Sudra by a dasi.

(3) Illegitimate sons of a Hindu by a Hindu woman who is not a dasi.

(4) Illegitimate sons of a Hindu by a non-Hindu woman.

(1) The illegitimate son of a Hindu belonging to one of the three higher classes by a dasi is entitled only to maintenance and not to any share of the inheritance (Mit. ch. I, s. 12, v. 3). The right of maintenance attaches in the first instance to the separate property of the father (j). Where the father has left no such property, it attaches to property of the joint family of which the father was a member (k). Such a son is entitled to maintenance for life (l). When the father was the holder of an impartible estate, the illegitimate son has no right, apart from custom, to maintenance out of the estate (m). Under the Mitakshara law an illegitimate son is entitled to maintenance as long as he lives, in recognition of his status as a member of his father's family and by reason of his exclusion from inheritance among the regenerate classes. He does not claim maintenance merely as a compassionate allowance (n).

(2) The illegitimate son of a Sudra by a dasi is entitled to a share after his father's death in the separate property of his father (Mit. ch. I, s. 12, v. 2). Where the father has left no separate property, but was joint with his collaterals at his death, the illegitimate son is not entitled to demand a partition of the joint family property in their hands, but he is entitled as a member of the family to maintenance out of that property. His position in this respect is analogous to that of widows and disqualified heirs to whom the law allows maintenance because of their exclusion from inheritance and from a share on partition, and the Court may, as in their case, award not only future but also

---

(j) Roshan Singh v. Balwant Singh (1900) 22 All. 191, 27 I.A. 51; Chuoturya v. Purhulad (1857) 7 M.I.A. 18.

(k) Ananthaya v. Vishnu (1893) 17 Mad. 160; Hiralal Laxmandas v. Meghraj Bhickchand (1938) Bom. 779.

(l) Nilmoney Singh v. Baneshur (1879) 4 Cal. 91.

(m) Harisinhji v. Ajitsinhji (1949) Bom. 342.

(n) Mothey Anja Ratna v. Koney Narayana Rao ('53) A.SC. 433, (1952) 2 M.L.J. 342.

past maintenance so far as it is not barred by the law of limitation and may direct the same to be secured by a charge on the joint family property. Such maintenance is payable to the illegitimate son for life (o).

(3) The illegitimate son of a Hindu by a Hindu woman who is not a dasi is entitled to maintenance even if he be the result of a casual (p) or adulterous (q) intercourse. During his father's lifetime, he is entitled to maintenance against him (r). After the father's death he is entitled to maintenance out of the separate property of the father. Where the father has left no such property, he is entitled to maintenance out of the estate of the joint family of which the father was a member (s). But the right of the illegitimate son to maintenance is personal to him; it does not descend on his death to his offspring. Thus, if A dies leaving an illegitimate son B, and B dies leaving a son C, C is not entitled to maintenance out of A's property (t).

According to the Dayabhaga school, the right of such a son to maintenance ceases on his attaining majority (u); according to the Mitakshara school, it extends up to his death (v).

(4) The illegitimate son of a Hindu by a non-Hindu woman is not entitled to maintenance under the Hindu law, but he may claim maintenance from his putative father under sec. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. The right under that section, however, cannot be enforced against estate of the father after the father's death; it can only be enforced during the lifetime of the father (w).

In a Madras case it was observed that the illegitimate son of a Sudra by a dasi who was not entitled to inherit, should be allowed only a compassionate rate of maintenance (x). In a later Madras case it was said that this view was not correct and that regard should be had in every case to the income of the estate left by the putative father and to the mode of life to which the son was accustomed in the lifetime of the father (y).

The illegitimate son of a Hindu who is the result of an adulterous inter-course is in no case entitled to maintenance higher than the amount of the income which he would have got out of his share had he been a dasiputra (z).

(5) Section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, now provides that a Hindu father or mother is bound during his or her lifetime to maintain his or her illegitimate children and that an illegitimate child can claim maintenance from his or her father or mother so long as the child is a minor. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section.

---

(o) Vellaiyappa Chetty v. Natarajan (1931) 55 Mad. 1, 58 I.A. 402, 134 I.C. 1084 ('31) A.PC. 294 affmg. Vellaiyappa v. Natarajan (1927) 50 Mad. 340, 100 I.C. 655, ('27) A.M. 386.

(p) Muttuswamy Jagavera v. Vencataswara (1868) 12 M.I.A. 203, 220.

(q) Rahi v. Govind (1876) 1 Bom. 97; Viraramuthi v. Singaravelu (1877) 1 Mad. 306; Subramania v. Valu (1911) 34 Mad. 68, 5 I.C. 919.

(r) Ghana v. Gereli (1905) 32 Cal. 479; Kuppa v. Singaravelu (1885) 8 Mad. 325.

(s) (1911) 34 Mad. 68, 5 I.C. 919, supra; (1857) 7 M.I.A. 18, supra; (1868) 12 M.I.A. 203, supra, (where there was a remand); Raja Parihcat v. Zalim Singh (1878) 3 Cal. 214, 4 I.A. 159; Hargobind v. Dharam Singh (1884) 6 All. 329.

(t) Roshan Singh v. Balwant Singh (1900) 22 All. 191, 27 I.A. 51.

(u) Nilmoney Singh v. Baneshur (1879) 4 Cal. 91.

(v) Hargobind v. Dharam Singh (1884) 6 All. 329; Kuppa v. Singaravelu (1885) 8 Mad. 325.

(w) Lingappa v. Esudasan (1904) 27 Mad. 13 (Christian woman); Sitaram v. Ganpat (1923) 25 Bom. L.R. 429, 73 I.C. 412, ('23) A.B. 384 (Mahomedan woman).

(x) Gopalasami v. Arunachelam (1904) 27 Mad. 32.

(y) Rathinasabapathi v. Gopala (1929) 56 Mad. L.J. 673, 121 I.C. 126, ('29) A.M. 545.

(z) Chamava v. Iraya (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 1082, 1088, 134 I.C. 1158, ('31) A.B. 492.

552. Illegitimate daughters.—(1) There is no provision in Hindu law for the maintenance of illegitimate daughters (a); but they are entitled to claim maintenance from their putative father under sec. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

This view is put on the ground that the expression "dasiputra" occurring in texts bearing on the subject applies only to an illegitimate son (putra), and not to an illegitimate daughter.

(2) See section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, and § 551(5) above. Reference may also be made to the Notes under those sections.

553. Concubine—Avaruddhastri.—(1) A Hindu is not entitled to transfer joint family property to an Avaruddhastri for her maintenance (b) nor is he bound to maintain her. He can discard her at any moment, and she cannot compel him to keep her or to provide for her maintenance (c). But if she was in his exclusive keeping until his death, his estate, in the hands of those who take it, is liable after his death for her maintenance (d). It is not a condition precedent to her right to maintenance that she should have resided in the same house as the deceased together with his wife and his family (e). But her right to maintenance is conditional upon her continued chastity (f).

Avaruddhastri.—In a Bombay case the High Court held that to constitute a concubine, an avaruddha stree, she must be a concubine with whom the connection of the deceased paramour was open and recognized and who was kept by him in his house practically as a member of the family. But this view was rejected by the Judicial Committee on appeal, and it was held that residence in the same house with her paramour together with his wife and regular family was not now necessary, whatever may have been the case when a concubine was a slave of the household (g).

Kept mistress whose husband is alive.—It has been held by the Bombay High Court that a married woman who left her husband and lived with another as his permanently kept mistress may be regarded as Avaruddhastri if she remains faithful to him and she is entitled to maintenance from his estate so long as she preserves her sexual fidelity to him (h). A Full Bench of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh has expressed the same view (*h*1). The Supreme Court has approved of the above view and held that her claim for maintenance cannot be defeated on the ground that she was a Brahmin and her paramour was a Sudra (*h*2).

Amount of maintenance.—In determining the amount of maintenance to be awarded to an avaruddhastri the Court should have regard to her age, her past mode of life, and the extent of the estate of the deceased paramour (i).

(2) The law on the question is now changed and an avaruddhastri cannot claim maintenance out of the estate of the deceased paramour where

---

(a) Parvati v. Ganpatrao (1894) 18 Bom. 177, 183; Vellaiyappa v. Natarajan (1927) 50 Mad. 340, 100 I.C. 655, ('27) A.M. 386; Champabai v. Raghunath Rao (1946) Nag. 217, ('46) A.N. 253; Pandurang v. Sonabai (1948) Nag. 653; Padmavati v. Ramchandra (1950) Cut. 532, ('51) A. Orissa 248.

(b) Thakur Rab Prasad Singh v. Chhotay Munwan (1937) 12 Luck. 469, 164 I.C. 1000, ('37) A.O. 29.

(c) Ramanarasu v. Buchamma (1900) 23 Mad. 282.

(d) Ningareddi v. Lakshmawa (1902) 26 Bom. 163; Vrandavandas v. Yamunabai (1875) 12 Bom. H.C.A.C. 229; Rama Raja v. Papammal (1925) 48 Mad. 805, 90 I.C. 983, ('25) A.M. 1230; Shiva Kumari v. Uday Pratap (1947) All. 642.

(e) Bai Nagubai v. Bai Monghibai (1926) 53 I.A. 153, 50 Bom. 604, 96 I.C. 20, ('26) A.PC. 73, reversing (1923) 47 Bom. 401, 69 I.C. 291, ('23) A.B. 130.

(f) Yashvantrav v. Kashibai (1888) 12 Bom. 26.

(g) Bai Nagubai v. Monghibai, supra. The decision in Musammat Haidri v. Narindra (1926) 1 Luck. 184, 98 I.C. 677, ('26) A.O. 294, is no longer good law.

(h) Akku Prahlad v. Ganesh Prahlad (1945) Bom. 217.

(*h*1) Ramamoorty v. Sitharamamma ('61) A.A.P. 131 (F.B.).

(*h*2) Gopal Rao v. Sitharamamma ('65) A.S.C. 1970.

(i) (1875) 12 Bom. H.C.A.C. 229, supra.

his death took place after the coming into operation of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. She is not one of the persons within the definition of dependents given in section 21 of that Act. Reference may be made to sections 21 and 22 of that Act and Notes thereunder.

Pre-existing rights of maintenance holders are not affected by that Act. A right of maintenance which an avaruddhastri had acquired prior to the Act is not nullified by the Act (i1).

MAINTENANCE OF WIFE

553A. Statutory right of maintenance.—The wife's right to separate maintenance and residence was regulated by the Hindu Married Women's Right to Separate Residence and Maintenance Act, 1946. That Act has now been repealed by section 29 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. Section 18 of that Act lays down that the wife, whether married before or after commencement of the Act, is entitled to be maintained by her husband during her lifetime unless she is unchaste or has ceased to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section. In §§ 554, 555, 556 (1) and 557 (1) the law has been stated as it stood prior to the Act of 1946 under the decided cases.

554. Wife's right of maintenance.—(1) A wife is entitled to be maintained by her husband, whether he possesses property or not (j). When a man with his eyes open marries a girl accustomed to a certain style of living, he undertakes the obligation of maintaining her in that style (k). The maintenance of a wife by her husband is a matter of personal obligation arising from the very existence of the relationship, and quite independent of the possession by the husband of any property, ancestral or self-acquired (l). The maintenance being a matter of personal obligation, she has no claim for maintenance against her husband's property in the hands of a transferee from him. Nor has she any claim against the Government, if his property has been attached under secs. 87 and 88 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, as the property of an absconder (m).

Her remedy is to obtain a decree of a Civil Court creating a formal charge on the property (n).

(2) A wife is not entitled, during her husband's life-time, to be maintained either by her relations or by her husband's relations, even if she has been deserted by him unless they have in their possession property belonging to her husband (o).

555. Separate residence and maintenance.—(1) A wife's first duty to her husband is to submit herself obediently to his authority, and to remain under his roof and protection (p). She is not, therefore, entitled to separate residence or maintenance, unless she proves that, by reason of his misconduct or by his

---

(i1) Ramamoorty supra.

(j) Narbadabai v. Mahadeo (1881) 5 Bom. 99, 103.

(k) Prem Pratap Singh v. Jagat Pratap Kunwari (1944) All. 118.

(l) Jayanti v. Alamelu (1904) 27 Mad. 45, 48.

(m) Chatru v. The Crown (1929) 10 Lah. 265, 111 I.C. 435, ('28) A.L. 681.

(n) Secretary of State for India v. Ahalyabai Narayan (1938) Bom. 454, 40 Bom. L.R. 422, 176 I.C. 453, ('38) A.B. 321.

(o) Ramabai v. Trimbak (1872) 9 Bom. H.C. 283.

(p) Sitanath v. Haimabutty (1875) 24 W.R. 377, 379.

refusal to maintain her in his own place of residence or for other justifying cause, she is compelled to live apart from him (q).

Neither unkindness not amounting to cruelty (r), nor the fact that the husband has taken a second wife (s), nor ordinary quarrels between husband and wife (t), justify the wife in leaving her husband's house. But she would be justified in leaving his house, and would be entitled to separate maintenance from him, if he kept a concubine in the house (u), or habitually treated her with such cruelty as to endanger her personal safety (v). She is not bound to prove repeated violence; nor is delay in bringing the suit a ground for refusing the relief (w).

Where a husband who was on cordial terms with his wife made a gift of his property to his wife, the ostensible purpose being her maintenance, it was held that the wife was not a creditor and that the gift in her favour could not prevail against the rights of the creditors (x).

(2) A wife living apart from her husband for no improper purpose may at any time return and claim to be maintained by him. Her right is not forfeited, but is only suspended so long as she commits a breach of duty by living apart from him (y); so, where she subsequently comes back and offers to live with him, his refusal to take her back entitles her to demand maintenance.

The suspension ceases when the husband dies. He cannot under the provisions of the Succession Act execute a Will to defeat such a right (z). The amount of maintenance to which she would be entitled depends on various circumstances, such as the past relations between the parties, their social standards and the husband's property (a). Where the wife lived with her father who was in affluent circumstances and did not claim maintenance from her husband for a long time and the husband had no property, arrears prior to the date of demand were refused (b).

Where a husband turned his wife out of doors because he suspected her chastity and the wife obtained an order against him for maintenance under sec. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, and when she proceeded to execute the order, he filed a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, it was held that it was a proper case for refusing the husband a decree (c).

555A. Statutory right of maintenance.—(1) The Hindu Married Women's Right to Separate Maintenance and Residence Act (19 of 1946), which came into force on 23rd April 1946 gave a statutory recognition to many of the principles discussed above, and at the same time liberalised the law in certain respects in favour of the married woman.

Section 2 of the Act was as under:

Notwithstanding any custom or law to the contrary at Hindu married woman shall be entitled to separate residence and maintenance from her husband on one or more of the following grounds, namely.—

---

(q) Sidlingapa v. Sidava (1878) 2 Bom. 634; Nityc v. Soondaree (1868) 9 W.R. 475 [refusal to maintain]; Sitabai v. Ramchandrarao (1910) 12 Bom. L.R. 373, 6 I.C. 525 [abandonment of wife]; Shinappaya v. Rajamma (1922) 45 Mad. 812, 69 I.C. 25, ('22) A.M. 399 [husband's leprosy]; Appibai v. Khimji Cooverji (1936) 60 Bom. 455, 38 Bom. L.R. 77, 162 I.C. 188, ('36) A.C. 138; Krishna Iyer v. Ramu Ammal ('54) Tra. Co. 221; Udayanath v. Shivapriya ('57) A. Orissa 199; Ajaib Kaur v. Uttam Singh ('60) A. Punj. 117.

(r) (1873) 24 W.R. 377, supra.

(s) Virasvami v. Appasvami (1863) 1 Mad. H.C. 375.

(t) Rajlukhy v. Bhootnath (1900) 4 C.W.N. 488.

(u) Gobind v. Dowlut (1870) 14 W.R. 451; Dular Kocri v. Dwarkanath (1905) 32 Cal. 234, 239; Mallawa v. Shiddappa (1949) Bom. 762 (even though the concubine was kept in a separate house).

(v) Matangini v. Jogendra (1892) 19 Cal. 84.

(w) Ude Singh v. Mst. Daulat Kaur (1935) 16 Lah. 892, 158 I.C. 223, ('35) A.L. 386.

(x) Brij Raj Kuar v. Ram Dayal (1932) 7 Luck. 411, 135 I.C. 369, ('32) A.O. 40.

(y) Surampalli v. Surampalli (1908) 31 Mad. 338.

(z) Periambal v. Sundarammal (1945) Mad. 586.

(a) Appibai v. Khimji Cooverji (1936) 60 Bom. 455, 38 Bom. L.R. 77, 162 I.C. 188, ('36) A.B. 138.

(b) Sobhanadramma v. Narasimhasvami (1934) 57 Mad. 1003, 150 I.C. 797, ('34) A.M. 401.

(c) Babu Ram v. Musammat Kokla (1924) 46 All. 210, 79 I.C. 634, ('24) A.A. 391.

(1) if he is suffering from any loathsome disease not contracted from her;

(2) if he is guilty of such cruelty towards her as renders it unsafe or undesirable for her to live with him (c1);

(3) if he is guilty of desertion, that is to say, of abandoning her without her consent or against her wish;

(4) if he marries again;

(5) if he ceases to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion;

(6) if he keeps a concubine in the house or habitually resides with a concubine (d);

(7) for any other justifiable cause (e).

Provided that a Hindu married woman shall not be entitled to separate residence and maintenance from her husband if she is unchaste or ceases to be a Hindu by change to another religion or fails without sufficient cause to comply with a decree of a competent Court for the restitution of conjugal rights.

It will be noticed that all the specific clauses were in the present tense. It was enough, therefore, for the purposes of the section that the grounds were in existence at the date when the claim for separate maintenance and residence was made by the wife, no matter whether they started before or after the passing of the Act.

With regard to ground (4), however, there was a difference of judicial opinion. The Nagpur High Court held that the provision was not declaratory of the existing law, under which the wife could not be allowed to reside separately simply because the husband married again. The view was taken that the provision was not retrospective and applied only if the second marriage of the husband had taken place after the Act came into operation (f). In a later ruling that view was confirmed by a Full Bench of that High Court (g). On the other hand the Madras High Court in an earlier decision (h) took the view that the expression "married again" had not been used with reference to any particular period of time and was merely a description of the position of the husband as a twice married man at the date when the wife's claim for separate residence was made. That decision has been overruled by a Full Bench (i) of the same High Court in which agreement was expressed with the Nagpur view. The Bombay High Court also agreed with the Nagpur view (j). The High Courts of Punjab (*j*1), Patna (*j*2), Andhra Pradesh (*j*3), Madhya Pradesh (*j*4), Rajasthan (*j*5) and Mysore (*j*6) have also taken the same view. But the High Courts of Allahabad (k), Orissa (l), Vindhya Pradesh (m) and Madhya Bharat (n) took the contrary view and agreed with the earlier Madras decision.

(2) Section 18 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, now lays down the grounds which entitle a Hindu wife to live separately from her husband without forfeiting her claim to maintenance. The grounds are substantially the same as under the repealed Act of 1946. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section.

556. Unchastity of wife.—(1) A wife, who leaves her home for purposes of adultery, and persists in following a vicious course of life, forfeits her right

---

(*c*1) Shyamsundar v. Shantamani ('62) A. Orissa 50; Kamala v. Rathnavelu ('65) A.M. 88.

(d) Venkataramana v. Nookalamma ('56) A. Andh. Pra. 49.

(e) Malla Reddy v. Subbama ('56) A. Andh. Pra. 237 (impotency of husband); Gopal v. Kallu ('60) A. Raj. 60; 9 Raj. 725.

(f) Sukhribai v. Pohkalsing (1950) Nag. 196, ('50) A.N. 33.

(g) Kasubai v. Bhagwan ('55) A.N. 210.

(h) Lakshmi Ammal v. Narayanaswamy (1950) 1 M.L.J. 63, ('50) A.M. 321; Nagendramma v. Ramakotayya ('54) A.M. 713, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 25.

(i) Palaniswami v. Devanai Ammal ('56) A.M. 337 (F.B.).

(j) Laxmibai v. Wamanrao (1953) Bom. 1031, (1953) 55 Bom. L.R. 357, ('53) A.B. 342.

(*j*1) Ram Parkash v. Savitri Devi ('58) A. Punj. 87 (F.B.); (1957) Punj. 1859.

(*j*2) Sarbo Gopain v. Anta Lal ('58) A.P. 613.

(*j*3) Satyanarayana v. Seetharamamma ('63) A.A.P. 270 (F.B.).

(*j*4) Padamlochan v. Sulochana ('59) A.M.P. 245.

(*j*5) Gopal v. Kallu ('60) A. Raj. 60; 9 Raj. 725.

(*j*6) Madanvali v. Padmanna ('60) A. Mys. 299.

(k) Pancho v. Ram Prasad ('56) A.A. 41, contra, Ratan Chand v. Kalawati ('55) A.A. 364.

(l) Kulamani Hota v. Parbati Debi ('55) A. Orissa 77, (1955) Orissa 354; Sashimukhi v. Brundaban Das ('59) A. Orissa 132.

(m) Baijnath v. Hiraman ('51) A.V.P. 10.

(n) Sajjanbai v. Prabhulal ('52) A.M.B. 140.

to maintenance (o), even though it is secured by a decree (p). But it would seem that if she completely renounces her immoral course of conduct, her husband is liable to furnish her with a "bare" (or what is also called "starving") maintenance, that is, food and raiment just sufficient to support her life (q). The burden of proving that the erring wife has returned to purity is on the wife herself (r).

See §§ 96 and 651.

(2) Section 18(3) of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, lays down that a Hindu wife shall not be entitled to separate residence and maintenance from her husband if she is unchaste. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section.

557. Change of religion by husband.—(1) A wife is entitled to maintenance, though her husband may abandon Hinduism (s).

(2) Where a marriage has been dissolved under the Native Convert's Marriage Dissolution Act, 1866, at the suit of a husband who has abandoned Hinduism, the Court may by its decree order the husband to make such allowance to his wife for her maintenance during the remainder of her life as the Court thinks just. An allowance so ordered ceases from the time of any subsequent marriage of the wife.

See the Native Convert's Marriage Dissolution Act, 1866, sec. 28. See aiso § 411 above.

(3) Section 18(2) (f) of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, lays down that a wife is entitled to live separately from her husband without forfeiting her claim to maintenance if the husband has ceased to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion.

558. Wife of disqualified heir.—Where the husband is excluded from inheritance on account of personal disability [§ 98], his wife is entitled to maintenance out of the property which he would have inherited but for the disability. But her right to maintenance is conditional upon her continued chastity (t).

MAINTENANCE OF WIDOW

558A. Maintenance of widow: Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937.—(1) The right of a widow, when she did not succeed to her husband's property, was one of considerable importance and consequence. The position and rights of a widow both under the Mitakshara and Dayabhaga law has been stated in the earlier Chapters. The rights of the three widows mentioned in the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, to claim maintenance were not abolished in express terms but the effect of recognition of their rights by that Act was that there was little occasion for them to claim main-

---

(o) Ilata v. Narayanan (1863) 1 Mad. H.C. 372; Debi Saran v. Daulata (1917) 39 All. 234, 39 I.C. 10, ('17) A.A. 86; Kandasami v. Murugammal (1896) 19 Mad. 6.

(p) (1896) 19 Mad. 6, supra.

(q) See Parami v. Mahadevi (1910) 34 Bom. 278, 5 I.C. 960, and the case cited in the preceding foot-note.

(r) Zuli v. Gopalia (1946) Nagpur 619, (1946) A.N. 375.

(s) Mansha v. Jiwan (1884) 6 All. 617.

(t) Yashvantrav v. Kashibai (1888) 12 Bom. 26, 28. Mitakshara, chap. ii, sec. 10, paras. 14, 15 Dayabhaga, chap. v. para. 19.

tenance since they were not excluded from inheritance and were entitled to a share on partition. There was nothing, however, in the Act to compel the widow to sue for partition where the deceased husband was a member of a joint family and it was held that her right to claim maintenance had been preserved intact and she was entitled to sue for maintenance without having recourse to the remedy of partition (u).

(2) The position and rights of a widow have been materially changed by the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and the question of a widow's right to claim maintenance must now be considered in the context of the provisions of that Act. Reference must also be made to the provisions of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 (see Notes under sections 21 and 22 of that Act). In §§ 559-565 the law has been stated as it stood prior to the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, 1937, under the decided cases.

559. Widow's right of maintenance.—(1) A widow, who does not succeed to the estate of her husband as his heir, is entitled to maintenance—

(i) out of her husband's separate property (v); also

(ii) out of property in which he was a coparcener at the time of his death (w).

(2) A widow does not lose her right of maintenance out of the estate of her husband even though she may have lived apart from him in his lifetime without any justifying cause and was living separate from him at the time of his death (x).

(3) See § 558A above.

Illustrations

(a) A Hindu governed by the Mitakshara law dies leaving a widow and male issue. He leaves self-acquired property. The male issue will inherit the property subject to the obligation to maintain the widow out of that property.

(b) A and his father F are members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law. A dies leaving a widow and F. On A's death, his undivided interest in the coparcenary property lapses so as to enlarge the interest of F in the property. A's widow is entitled to be maintained by her father-in-law F out of the coparcenary property quoad the interest of A in the property. If F refuses to maintain her, she may sue him to have her maintenance charged on a portion of the joint property, such portion not exceeding one half of the property, that being her husband's share in the property: Jayanti v. Alamelu (1904) 27 Mad. 45.

(c) A and his brother B are members of a joint family governed by the Dayabhaga law. A dies leaving him surviving a widow W, a son S, and a brother B. S will succeed to A's separate property as well as his undivided interest in the coparcenary property (§ 78), subject to the obligation to maintain W out of the property. If A dies without leaving male issue, W will succeed to the whole of his property, joint as well as separate, in which case she will take a widow's estate in A's separate property, and will be a coparcener with B as to the joint property with the right of demanding a partition of such property against B [§ 348].

Nature and extent of widow's right of maintenance.—The only person who is under a legal obligation to maintain out of his own property the widow of a deceased Hindu

---

(u) See pp. 101, 102 supra and cases cited in f.n. (i), (j) and (k) on those pages.

(v) Brinda v. Radhica (1885) 11 Cal. 492, 494; Narbadabai v. Mahadeo (1881) 5 Bom. 99, 106; Bhagabai v. Kanailal (1871) 8 Beng. L.R. 225.

(w) Devi Prasad v. Gunwanti (1895) 22 Cal. 410; Jayanti v. Alamelu (1904) 27 Mad. 45; Becha v. Mothina (1901) 23 All. 86; Adhibai v. Cursandas (1887) 11 Bom. 199; Shridar Bhagwanji Teli v. Mst. Sitabai (1938) Nag. 289, ('38) A.N. 198.

(x) Surampalli v. Surampalli (1908) 31 Mad. 388.

is her own son [§ 548]. As regards others, her only right to maintenance is out of her husband's estate. That estate may be in the hands of his male issue as in ills. (a) and (c) or it may be in the hands of his coparceners as in ill. (b). But whether it is in the hands of the one or the other, he is liable to maintain her, not because he is under a personal obligation to maintain her, but because he has in his hands her husband's estate. The property is liable for her maintenance and a charge may be created on it even if the property is attached and held by Government on the ground that the present holder has absconded (y). At the same time it is to be remembered that her maintenance is not ipso facto a charge upon her husband's estate [§ 569]. The estate may be sold for her husband's debts, or, where it is the joint property of the family for debts binding on the family [§ 570]. Even if it is sold without any justifying necessity, she cannot follow it in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value, unless she has acquired a previous charge on the estate for her maintenance (z). [§§ 569-570].

Widow's rights against joint family property.—A and B are two brothers joint in food, worship and estate. A dies leaving a widow W. W has private property of her own out of which she is able to maintain herself. Is W entitled to maintenance out of the income of the joint property which passed into the hands of B by survivorship on A's death? No according to the Calcutta High Court (a). Yes, according to the Madras High Court, subject to this that her private means should be taken into account in determining the quantum of maintenance to be decreed to her (b). According to the Madras High Court, the right of the widow of a coparcener in a Hindu family to maintenance is an absolute right due to her membership in the family and does not depend on any necessity arising from her want of other means to support herself; she is therefore entitled to some maintenance out of her husband's estate. A number of decisions on the subject were recently considered by a Full Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court (*b*1) which is in agreement with the Madras High Court.

Where a widow suing her husband's coparceners for maintenance has, at the time the suit is brought, sufficient joint family funds to provide her with maintenance for several years, the Court should refuse to decree maintenance to her, leaving her to file a fresh suit after that period (c). The same principle applies where she ought to have in her hands joint family funds which, however, are not available at the date of the suit they having been dissipated by her before suit (d). A widow inheriting some of her husband's share of the joint family property under Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, is still entitled to maintenance with reference to the other properties, but, in fixing the maintenance the property inherited by her may be taken into consideration (e). In a recent case it was held by the High Court of Andhra Pradesh (f) that a widow inheriting her husband's separate property can sue for maintenance from the joint family estate in which her husband had interest.

A prior decree obtained by her against her husband during his life-time for maintenance is no bar to her claiming a right of maintenance and right of residence against the heirs (g).

Where a widow sues for maintenance after partition among the coparceners of the joint family she is entitled to a decree only against those members who are in possession of her husband's share, such as her son (natural or adopted) and his sons and grandsons (h). But when a charge has been created by a maintenance decree prior to partition in respect to the entire family estate such charge is not affected by subsequent partition and the charge holder can proceed against any property covered by the charge (i).

Where a widow gets maintenance from the surviving members of the joint family to which her husband belonged, she is not assessable to income-tax even though there

---

(y) Secretary of State for India v. Ahyalyabai Narayan (1938) Bom. 454, 40 Bom. L.R. 422, 176 I.C. 453, ('38) A.B. 321.

(z) Kuloda Prosad v. Jageshar (1900) 27 Cal. 194; Somasundaram v. Unnamalai (1920) 43 Mad. 800, 59 I.C. 398, ('20) A.M. 722.

(a) Ramawati v. Manjhari (1906) 4 Cal. L.J. 74.

(b) Lingayya v. Kanakamma (1915) 38 Mad. 153, 28 I.C. 200, ('16) A.M. 444.

(*b*1) Varahalu v. Sithamma ('61) A.A.P. 272 (F.B.).

(c) Dattatraya v. Rukhmabai (1909) 33 Bom. 50, 1 I.C. 466.

(d) Srinivasa v. Ammani (1931) 61 Mad. L.J. 381, 134 I.C. 981, ('31) A.M. 668.

(e) Sarojinidevi v. Subrahmanyam (1945) Mad. 61.

(f) D. Rangamma v. D. Chinnabbayi ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 598.

(g) Mt. Sham Devi v. Mohan Lal (1934) 15 Lah. 591, 152 I.C. 606, ('34) A.L. 167.

(h) Narasimham v. Venkatasubbamma (1932) 55 Mad. 752, 137 I.C. 949, ('32) A.M. 351; Laxmibai Ganapatrao v. Radhabai Krishnaji (1945) Bom. 604. But see Rangaiah v. Chirinaiyah ('70) A.A.P. 33.

(i) Savitribai v. Radhakishan (1947) Nag. 381.

is a single surviving coparcener (j); Commissioner of Income-tax v. Luxminarayan (1935) 59 Bom. 618, 37 Bom. L.R. 692, 159 I.C. 424, ('35) A.B. 412. Where in a joint family consisting of females only the amount payable as maintenance to a widow is increased by an agreement the amount continues to be exempt from payment of income-tax (k).

560. Widow residing apart.—(1) A wife cannot leave her husband's house when she chooses and require him to provide maintenance for her elsewhere. But the case of a widow is different. A widow is not bound to reside with her husband's family, and she does not forfeit her right to maintenance out of her husband's estate by going to reside elsewhere, e.g., in her parent's house (l). All that is required of her is that she must not leave her husband's house for improper or unchaste purposes, and she is entitled to separate maintenance unless she is guilty of unchastity or other improper practices after she leaves that residence (m). Where the property is so small as not to admit of an allotment to her of a separate maintenance, the Court may, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse separate maintenance to her (n).

(2) Where the husband by his will makes it a condition that his wife should reside in the family house with his relatives, she is not entitled to separate maintenance if she resides elsewhere without just cause (o). Strained relations between herself and her husband's adopted son on account of former litigation between them may be a just cause (p).

(3) See § 558A above.

560A. Arrears of maintenance.—(1) A widow who has left the residence of her deceased husband, not for unchaste purposes, is entitled not only to maintenance, but also to arrears of maintenance from the date of her leaving her husband's residence, though she does not prove that she has incurred debts in maintaining herself and gives no reasons for the change of residence (q).

It is erroneous in law to fix the date of the widow's suit as the starting point of maintenance. The proper date is the date on which she left her husband's residence. If after the husband's death the widow has remained in his house and has accepted maintenance in fact and in kind, she is not entitled to arrears from the date of her husband's death except perhaps in an extreme case where she is kept under circumstances of extreme penury and oppression. Such a case, however, must be treated as most exceptional and would require unimpeachable proof. The Judicial Committee is extremely reluctant to interfere with the amount of a decree for maintenance unless there has been some miscarriage in the way the amount has been arrived at (r). Courts have got large discretion in awarding arrears (s) and may take into consideration the fact that a sudden

---

(j) Vedathanni v. The Commissioner of Income-tax (1933) 56 Mad. 1, 40 I.C. 17, ('32) A.M. 733.

(k) Commissioner of Income Tax, U.P. & C.P. v. Sarwan Kumar (1945) All. 509.

(l) Dattatraya Maruti v. Laxman Jettappayya (1942) Bom. 584, 203 I.C. 139, ('42) A.B. 260; Hari v. Narmadabai (1949) Nag. 964.

(m) Raja Pirthee Singh v. Rani Rajkooer (1873) 12 Beng. L.R. 238, 247, I.A. Sup. Vol. 203; Narayanrao v. Ramabai (1879) 3 Bom. 415, 421, 6 I.A. 114, 119; Ekradeshwari v. Homeshwar (1929) 56 I.A. 182, 8 Pat. 840, 116 I.C. 409, ('29) A.P.C. 128; Kasturbai v. Shivajiram (1879) 3 Bom. 372; Gokibai v. Lakhmidas (1890) 14 Bom. 490; Siddessury v. Janardan (1902) 29 Cal. 557.

(n) Godavaribai v. Sagunabai (1898) 22 Bom. 52; (1879) 3 Bom. 372, supra; Ramchandra v. Sagunabai (1880) 4 Bom. 261.

(o) Mulji v. Bai Ujam (1889) 13 Bom. 218; Girianna v. Honama (1891) 15 Bom. 236; Tin Couri v. Krishna (1893) 20 Cal. 15; Ekradeshwari v. Homeshwar (1929) 56 I.A. 182, 8 Pat. 840, 116 I.C. 409, ('29) A.P.C. 128.

(p) Jamuna Kunwar v. Arjun Singh (1940) All. 739, 143 I.C. 27 ('41) A.A. 43.

(q) (1929) 56 I.A. 182, 8 Pat. 840, 116 I.C. 409, ('29) A.P.C. 128.

(r) Ekradeshwari v. Homeshwar (1929) 56 I.A. 182, 8 Pat. 840, 116 I.C. 409, ('29) A.P.C. 128.

(s) Gurushiddappa v. Parwateewa (1937) Bom. 113, 38 Bom. L.R. 1293, 167 I.C. 973, ('37) A.B. 135; Manilal v. Sushila ('56) A.B. 402; Chundru Venkanna v. Chundru Satyanarayanamma ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 652.

demand for a large sum by way of arrears would be inequitable and embarrassing (t). In this case the High Court awarded arrears for 25 months against 12 years' claim. The Court may for sufficient reasons refuse to award any arrears, or it may award arrears at a rate lower than that fixed for her future maintenance (u). Arrears at an enhanced rate should be allowed only from the date of the suit for enhancement (v).

Where a widow was entitled under an agreement to maintenance at a certain rate to be paid on a particular date in each year and she dies some time before the time fixed for payment, her heir is entitled to recover the proportionate amount of maintenance due after the last payment till her death, for the right accrues from day to day (w).

(3) See § 558A above.

561. Unchastity of widow.—(1) The right of a widow to maintenance is conditional upon her leading a life of chastity. If she becomes unchaste, the burden of proving which is on the opposite party (x), the right is forfeited (y), even if it has been secured by a decree (z) or by agreement (a). But if she returns to a moral life, she is entitled to "bare" or what is also called "starving" maintenance, that is, to food and raiment just sufficient to support her life (b) [§§ 96 and 556].

(2) A charge of unchastity as disentitling a widow to maintenance must be specifically raised in the pleadings (c).

Provision for maintenance under an agreement.—It often happens that a dispute arises between the widow and her husband's relations as to the amount of maintenance and the amount is fixed amicably by an agreement between the parties. In such a case, if the husband's relations fail to pay the amount fixed by the agreement, and she sues them for maintenance under the agreement, she is not entitled to maintenance of any sort if subsequent unchastity is proved (d). But if the unchastity does not continue up to the date of the suit, and she has reformed her ways before the suit and reverted to a chaste life, she is entitled to bare maintenance (e). These cases must be distinguished from the case where the widow claims her husband's property as being his self-acquired property, and the dispute is settled by an agreement between the parties whereby her husband's relations agree to pay her a fixed sum of money monthly or annually in consideration of her releasing her claim to the property. In such a case, if the relations fail to pay the agreed amount, and the widow sues them for arrears due to her under the agreement, she is entitled to a decree for the full amount notwithstanding her subsequent unchastity (f).

---

(t) Dattatraya Maruthi v. Laxman Jettappayya (1942) Bom. 584, 203 I.C. 139, ('42) A.B. 260; Govardhan v. Gangabai ('64) A.M.P. 168.

(u) Raghubans v. Bhagwant (1899) 21 All. 183; Karbasappa v. Kallava (1919) 43 Bom. 66, 47 I.C. 623, ('18) A.B. 122; Shridhar Bhagwanji Teli v. Mst. Sitabai (1938) Nag. 289, ('38) A.N. 198; Gurushiddappa v. Parwatewwa (1937) Bom. 113, 38 Bom. L.R. 1293, 167 I.C. 973, ('37) A.B. 135. See Krishnamurthy v. Suryakantamma ('55) A. Andh. Pra. 5; Rajamma v. Varadarajulu ('57) A.M. 198.

(v) Veerayya v. Chellamma (1939) Mad. 234.

(w) Rangappava v. Shiva (1934) 57 Mad. 250, 145 I.C. 961, ('33) A.M. 699.

(x) Lakshmi Chand v. Anandi (1935) 62 I.A. 250, 57 All. 672, 37 Bom. L.R. 849, 157 I.C. 819, ('35) A.P.C. 180.

(y) Raja Pirthee Singh v. Rani Rajkooer (1873) 12 Beng. L.R. 238, 247, I.A. Supp. Vo. 203; Moniram v. Keri Kolitani (1880) 5 Cal. 776, 783, 7 I.A. 115; Valu v. Ganga (1883) 7 Bom. 84; Roma Nath v. Rajonimoni (1890) 17 Cal. 674; Vishnu v. Manjamma (1885) 9 Bom. 108.

(z) (1885) 9 Bom. 108, supra; Daulta Kuari v. Meghu (1893) 15 All. 382; Ranmalsangji v. Kundankuwar (1902) 26 Bom. 707.

(a) Nagamma v. Virabhadra (1894) 17, Mad. 392.

(b) Honamma v. Timannabhat (1877) 1 Bom. 559; Sathyabhama v. Kesavacharya (1916) 39 Mad. 658, 29 I.C. 397, ('16) A.M. 464; Bhikubai v. Hariba (1925) 49 Bom. 459, 94 I.C. 665, ('25) A.B. 153; Ram Kumar Dube v. Bhagwanta (1934) 56 All. 392, 148 I.C. 625, ('34) A.A. 78 where Rs. 15 per month were allowed, the estate paying a land revenue of Rs. 3,500.

(c) Haji Saboo Sidick v. Ayeshabai (1903) 27 Bom. 485, 30 I.A. 127.

(d) Nagamma v. Virabhadra (1894) 17 Mad. 392; Kisanji v. Lakshmi (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 510, 135 I.C. 477, ('31) A.B. 286. See also Shivlal v. Bai Sankli (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 490, 132 I.C. 444, ('31) A.B. 297.

(e) (1916) 39 Mad. 658, 29 I.C. 397, ('16) A.M. 464, supra; (1925) 49 Bom. 459, 94 I.C. 665, ('25) A.B. 153, supra.

(f) Bhup Singh v. Lachman (1904) 26 All. 321, 325.

Provision for maintenance under a will.—Where maintenance is given by a will, it is not forfeited by unchastity unless it is expressly provided that it should be so forfeited (g).

Provision for maintenance under a decree.—A decree obtained by a Hindu widow declaring her right to maintenance is liable to be set aside or suspended in its operation on proof of subsequent unchastity given by her husband's relatives either in a suit brought by them expressly for the purpose of setting aside the decree, or in answer to the widow's suit to enforce her right (h). If the decree is suspended in its operation, and she returns to a life of chastity, the Court may award her bare maintenance (i).

562. Right of widow to reside in family house.—(1) A Hindu widow is, in the absence of any special circumstances, entitled to reside in the family dwelling house in which she lived with her husband [see § 573 below].

A Hindu who died in 1888 provided by his will that his elder wife should "have the right of residence for the term of her natural life in the three-storied portion of" a specified house. Her son resided with her in that portion of the house continuously from his father's death. Upon a partition in 1898 that portion of the house was allotted to the son subject to his mother's right of residence. In 1899 the right, title and interest of the son was sold in execution, but the purchaser did not attempt to take possession for over twelve years. The son claimed that the right of the purchaser was barred by adverse possession. It was held by the Judicial Committee that upon the true construction of the will the widow had an exclusive right of residence, not merely a Hindu widow's right of residence and that the son's possession was merely by her licence, and not adverse to the purchaser (j).

(2) Section 23 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, lays down special provisions respecting dwelling-house wholly occupied by members of the family of a deceased Hindu.

563. Widow remarrying.—(1) A widow by remarriage forfeits her right of maintenance out of the estate of her first husband [the Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856, sec. 21].

The High Court of Allahabad has held that a widow who is allowed to remarry according to the custom of her caste existing from before the passing of the Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, and hence is not bound to take advantage of the provisions of the Act, does not, by reason of remarriage, forfeit her rights by inheritance to the estate of her first husband or to be maintained out of the same (k), and this view has been followed by the High Court of Madhya Bharat (l) and the Chief Court of Oudh (m). The other High Courts have held that she does (n). According to the Allahabad High Court a custom of remarriage does not necessarily carry with it, as a legal incident thereof, a further custom of forfeiture upon marriage. Anybody who claims there has been forfeiture by reason of remarriage, must prove affirmatively that such forfeiture is an incident of the custom under which the remarriage took place (o).

---

(g) Parami v. Mahadevi (1910) 34 Bom. 278, 5 I.C. 960.

(h) Vishnu v. Manjamma (1885) 9 Bom. 108; Daulta Kuari v. Meghu (1893) 15 All. 382, supra.

(i) Honamma v. Timannabhat (1877) 1 Bom. 559, as explained in Bhikubai v. Hariba (1925) 49 Bom. 459, supra.

(j) Annada Prashad v. Ambica Prashad (1926) 53 I.A. 201, 53 Cal. 948, 97 I.C. 761, ('26) A.P.C. 96.

(k) Gajadhar v. Kaunsilla (1909) 31 All. 161; Mula v. Partab (1910) 32 All. 489, 6 I.C. 116; Mangat v. Bharto (1927) 49 All. 203, 100 I.C. 734, ('27) A.A. 523; Bhola Umar v. Mst. Kausilla, 55 All. 24; Narain v. Mohan Singh ('37) A.A. 343; Md. Abdul Samad v. Girdhari Lal ('42) A.A. 175; Jileba v. Parmesra ('50) A.A. 700; Mohan Lal v. Mst. Bhudevi ('54) A.A. 588.

(l) Ram Kunwar v. Ochha Dhanpal ('51) A.M.B. 96.

(m) Ram Lal v. Musammat Jwala (1928) 3 Luck. 610, 109 I.C. 791, ('28) A.O. 338; Gajadhar v. Musammat Sukhdei (1930) 5 Luck. 689, 121 I.C. 899, ('31) A.O. 107.

(n) Vithu v. Govinda (1898) 22 Bom. 321 [F.B.]; Rama Appa Patil v. Sakhu Dattu Gharal (1954) 56 Bom. L.R. 227, ('54) A.B. 315; Rasul v. Ram Surun (1895) 22 Cal. 589; Murugayi v. Viramakali (1877) 1 Mad. 226; Suraj v. Attar (1922) 1 Pat. 706, 67 I.C. 550, ('22) A.P. 378; Santala v. Badaswari (1923) 50 Cal. 227, 75 I.C. 11, ('24) A.C. 98; Manabai v. Chandanbai ('54) A.N. 284; Hira Dei v. Bodhi Sahu ('54) A. Orissa 172.

(o) Bhola Umar v. Kausilla (1933) 35 All. 24, 140 I.C. 631, ('32) A.A. 617; Jileba v. Parmesra ('50) A.A. 700.

The whole point is whether the provisions of the Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856, apply to the case of a remarriage where such remarriage is allowed by the custom of the caste. If they do, a widow by remarriage forfeits all interest in her husband's property whether it be (1) by inheritance to her husband, or (2) by way of maintenance out of his property. If they do not, she does not forfeit either of those rights. The Allahabad High Court holds the latter view. The other High Courts hold the former view, and they have accordingly decided that a widow on remarriage forfeits her interest in the estate inherited by her from her first husband, even though the remarriage is allowed by the custom of the caste. No case has arisen in those Courts as to the right of such a widow to maintenance out of the property of her first husband; but it is clear that if such a case did arise, the right would be negatived.

See notes to § 43, under the head "Widow."

(2) Remarriage of a widow is not now under the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, a ground for divesting the estate inherited by her from her husband (see Notes under section 8 of that Act). The question of maintenance stands on a different footing since by operation of sections 21(iii) and 22 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, a widow on remarriage ceases to be a dependent. Reference may be made to the Notes under those sections.

564. Widowed daughter-in-law.—(1) What is stated in § 558A applies mutatis mutandis to a widowed daughter-in-law. Section 19 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, now deals with the question of maintenance of widowed daughter-in-law. Section 21(vii) of that Act includes a widowed daughter-in-law in the category of dependents and s. 22 lays down rules relating to maintenance of the dependents of a deceased person. Reference may be made to the Notes under those sections. The right to claim maintenance under those provisions ceases upon her remarriage. In sub-paragraphs (2) and (3) below, the law has been stated as it stood prior to the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, under the decided cases.

(2) Where there is no property left by the husband, or where the property in which he was a coparcener at the time of his death is not sufficient for the maintenance of the widow, the question arises whether she has a legal claim for maintenance either against her own relations or against her husband's relations. It has been held that she has no such claim either against her father or against his estate in the hands of his heirs [§ 546]. Nor has she any claim to maintenance against her husband's relations (p).

Even her father-in-law is not under a legal obligation to maintain her (q). But if he has got separate property of his own, he is under a moral obligation to maintain her out of such property. On the death, however, of the father-in-law, his son, widow, or other heir inheriting his property, comes under a legal obligation to carry out this moral obligation, and to maintain her out of such property. In other words, on the death of the father-in-law, the moral obligation on him to maintain his daughter-in-law ripens into a legal obligation on his heirs inheriting his estate in accordance with the principle stated in § 544 above (r). This is subject, according to the Bombay

---

(p) Ganga Bai v. Sita Ram (1876) 1 All. 170; Savitribai v. Luxmibai (1878) 2 Bom. 573 [husband's paternal uncle]; Apaji v. Gangabai (1878) 2 Bom. 632 [husband's brother]; Bai Daya v. Nathu (1885) 9 Bom. 279 [step-son].

(q) Kalu v. Kashibai (1883) 7 Bom. 127; Meenakshi v. Rama Aiyar (1914) 37 Mad. 396, 18 I.C. 34, ('14) A.M. 587.

(r) Janki v. Nand Ram (1889) 11 All. 194 [F.B.]; Siddessury v. Janardan (1902) 29 Cal. 557; Kamini v. Chandra (1890) 17 Cal. 373; Yamunabai v. Manubai (1899) 23 Bom. 608; Adhibai v. Cursandas (1887) 11 Bom. 199, 207; Ammakannu v. Appu (1888) 11 Mad. 91; Jai Nand v. Musammat

High Court, to the condition that her husband was living at the time of his death in union with his father (s). The Madras High Court has held on the other hand that this obligation exists even when the deceased husband of the widow was divided from his father and other coparceners (t).

In a case in which the father-in-law had disposed of his property by will, it was held by the High Court of Bombay, that the daughter-in-law was not entitled to maintenance out of the property in the hands of the devisee (u). This decision has been followed by the Madras High Court (v) but the Calcutta High Court has held the other way (w).

(3) The daughter-in-law does not lose her right of maintenance out of the estate of her father-in-law by declining to reside in her father-in-law's house (x).

Under the Bengal law in case of partition between a son and a grandson by a predeceased son of the deceased proprietor, the charge of maintaining the widow of the predeceased son must be placed on the share allotted to her son and not on the entire estate left by the father-in-law (y).

565. Loss of caste.—Excommunication from caste does not deprive a Hindu wife of her right of maintenance (z).

III.—AMOUNT OF MAINTENANCE

566. Amount of maintenance payable to a widow.—(1) Section 23 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, now lays down rules relating to the quantum of maintenance to be allowed inter alia to a widow and the considerations affecting the determination of the same. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section. In sub-paragraphs (2) to (5) below the law has been stated as it stood prior to that Act under the decided cases.

(2) The maintenance to be awarded to a widow should be such an amount as will enable her to live consistently with her position as a widow, with the same degree of comfort and reasonable luxury as she had in her husband's house (a), unless there are circumstances which affect, one way or the other, her mode of living there. In other words, in determining the amount of maintenance the Court should have regard to the following circumstances (b):—

(i) the value of the estate, taking the debts for which it is liable also into consideration (c);

(ii) the position and status of the deceased husband and of the widow;

(iii) the reasonable wants of the widow including not only the ordinary expenses of living, but what she might reasonably expend for religious and other duties incident to her station in life (d);

---

Paran (1929) 4 Luck. 491, 118 I.C. 419, ('29) A.O. 251 [F.B.]; Rangammal v. Echammal (1899) 22 Mad. 305.

(s) Yamunabai v. Manubai (1899) 23 Bom. 608.

(t) Appavu v. Nallammal (1949) Mad. 16.

(u) Bai Parvati v. Tarwadi (1901) 25 Bom. 263.

(v) Sankaramuthy v. Subbamma (1939) Mad. 242.

(w) Fool Coomari Dasi v. Debandra Nath Sil (1942) 1 Cal. 202, 202 I.C. 30, ('42) A.C. 474.

(x) Siddessury v. Janardan (1902) 29 Cal. 557.

(y) Abani Mohan v. Biswanath (1950) 54 C.W.N. 654, ('50) A.C. 142.

(z) Queen v. Marimuttu (1882) 4 Mad. 243. See Act 21 of 1850.

(a) Rajanikanta Pal v. Sajanisundaree Dasee (1934) 61 Cal. 221, 61 I.A. 29, 147 I.C. 438, ('34) AP.C. 29.

(b) Ekradeshwari v. Homeshwar (1929) 56 I.A. 182, 8 Pat. 840, 116 I.C. 409, ('29) A.P.C. 128; Nagendramma v. Ramakotayya (1955) 1 M.L.J. 25, ('54) A.M. 713; Kirpal Singh v. Chandrawati Devi ('51) A.A. 507.

(c) Shridhar Bhagwanji Teli v. Mst. Sitabai (1938) Nag. 289, ('38) A.N. 198.

(d) Nittokissoree v. Jogendro Nauth (1878) 5 I.A. 55; Baisni v. Rup Singh (1890) 12 All. 558; Devi Persad v. Gunwanti (1895) 22 Cal. 410;

(iv) the past relations between her and her husband (e).

(3) In calculating the amount of maintenance, the widow's stridhana must be taken into account unless it is of an unproductive character, such as clothes and jewels (f). But if the ornaments are of great value and are likely to be converted into money, that fact may be considered (g). A Full Bench of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh has expressed the view that the widow's separate property which is productive cannot be taken into account (*g*1). A voluntary payment by a brother to which she has no claim and which may be stopped at any moment ought not to be taken into account (h), nor her earnings by her own personal exertions (i). There is a conflict of opinion whether a widow is entitled to maintenance out of the property of the joint family to which her husband belonged, when the income from her stridhana is sufficient for her maintenance [see notes to § 559].

(4) The widow of a deceased coparcener is not entitled to maintenance in excess of the annual income of the share to which her husband would have been entitled on partition, if living (j). Where the estate is heavily indebted even one-fifth or one-sixth of the husband's income may be an adequate maintenance (k). No hard and fast rule can be laid down that she is entitled to a particular fraction of the income. In fixing the rate of maintenance the Court takes into consideration the income of the joint family at the time of the institution of the suit and not as on the death of her husband (l).

(5) A widow, who has once received a sufficient allotment for her maintenance, but has dissipated it, is not entitled to further maintenance (m).

Wants and exigencies.—"By the common law the right to maintenance is one accruing from time to time according to the wants and exigencies of the widow" (n).

Value of the estate.—"The amount of the property, doubtless, is an element in determining the sufficiency of maintenance, but it cannot be regarded as the criterion" (o).

Conduct of widow.—The conduct of the claimant to maintenance may also be taken into consideration (p).

Funeral expenses of the widow.—The funeral expenses of a widow are payable out of the estate of her husband. Her stridhana cannot be charged with such expenses (q).

Maintenance of wife forsaken by her husband.—Where a husband forsakes his wife without any justifying cause, she is entitled to one-third of the husband's property for

---

Dalel Kunwar v. Ambika (1903) 25 All. 266; Sundarji v. Dahibai (1905) 29 Bom. 316; Lala Maheshwari Prasad v. Mst. Sahdei Kunwar (1938) 13 Luck. 13, 165 I.C. 227, ('37) A.O. 16.

(c) Purushottamdas Harijivandas v. Bai Ruxmani (1938) Bom. 1, 39 Bom. L.R. 458, 170 I.C. 897, ('37) A.B. 358.

(f) Shib Dayee v. Doorga Pershad (1872) 4 N.W.P. 63; Savitribai v. Luximibai (1878) 2 Bom. 573, 584; Gokibai v. Lakhmidas (1890) 14 Bom. 490.

(g) Gurushiddappa v. Parwatewwa (1937) Bom. 113, 38 Bom. L.R. 1293, 167 I.C. 973, ('37) A.B. 135.

(*g*1) Varahalu v. Sithamma ('61) A.A.P. 272.

(h) Bahuri Saraswati Kuer v. Bahuria Sheoratan Kuer (1933) 12 Pat. 869, 149 I.C. 738, ('34) A.P. 99.

(i) Jai Ram v. Mst. Shiv Devi (1938) Lah. 352, ('38) A.L. 344; Bai Jaya v. Ganpatram Kalidas (1941) Bom. 483, 196 I.C. 607, ('41) A.B. 305, 43 Bom. L.R. 618.

(j) Madhavrav v. Gangabai (1878) 2 Bom. 639; Adhibai v. Cursandas (1887) 11 Bom. 199, 209; Jayanti v. Alamelu (1904) 27 Mad. 45, 48.

(k) Srimati Sabitri Thakurain v. Mrs. F. A. Savi (1933) 12 Pat. 359, 145 I.C. 1, ('33) A.P. 306.

(l) Veerraju v. Narayanamma (1953) Mad. 22, ('53) A.M. 159 (F.B.); Krishnamurthy v. Suryakantamma ('55) A. Andh. Pra. 5, (1954) 2 M.L.J. (Andh.) 170.

(m) Savitribai v. Luximibai (1878) 2 Bom. 573, 583.

(n) Narayanrao v. Ramabai (1879) 3 Bom. 415, 6 I.A. 114, 118; Rangubai v. Subaji (1912) 36 Bom. 383, 14 I.C. 821.

(o) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 413, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 82.

(p) Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 413, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 82; Surampalli v. Surampalli (1908) 31 Mad. 338, 341.

(q) Ratanchand v. Jacherchand (1898) 22 Bom. 818.

her maintenance. It has been so held by the High Court of Bombay on the strength of a text of Yajnavalkya (r).

567. Amount of maintenance for other females.—The principles upon which maintenance is allowed to a widow are to be applied mutatis mutandis in determining the amount of maintenance to be awarded to other females; that is to say, the Court must have regard to the value of the property, and it must take into consideration the independent means of support, if any, of the person claiming the maintenance (s). See § 566 (1) above.

568. Amount may be increased or decreased.—The amount of maintenance, whether it is fixed by a decree or by agreement, is liable to be increased or diminished, whenever there is such a change of circumstances as would justify a change in the rate (t). Thus the rate of maintenance may be enhanced, if the income of the estate has materially increased (u) or there has been a material increase in the cost of living (v) provided this was not anticipated and allowed for at the time of the decree (w). Similarly, the rate may be reduced, if the income of the estate has diminished (x), unless the diminution has been caused by the default or negligence of the person liable for maintenance (y). But the rate of maintenance need not vary with every fluctuation in the income (z). An agreement by a widow to receive a fixed maintenance per annum and not to claim any increase in future even in case of change of circumstances is binding upon her (a).

Section 25 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, now lays down that the amount of maintenance, whether fixed by a decree of Court or by agreement, either before or after the commencement of the Act, may be altered subsequently if there is a material change in the circumstances justifying such alteration. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section.

Procedure. A separate suit must be brought to vary the rate of maintenance fixed by a decree, unless the decree contains a clause enabling the parties to apply for a modification of its terms, in which case an application may be made to alter the rate in execution proceedings (b).

It may be asked why it is that the rate of maintenance, though fixed by agreement, may be varied by the Court in a suit brought for that purpose. The answer is that the right to maintenance does not rest on contract, but on the provisions of the Hindu law which expressly govern the rights and duties of the different members of a Hindu family (c).

---

(r) Ramabai v. Trimbak (1872) 9 Bom. H.C. 283, Mayukha, chap. 20, para. 1.

(s) Mahesh v. Dirgpal (1899) 21 All. 232, 234; Tagore v. Tagore (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 377, 413, I.A. Sup. Vol. 47, 82.

(t) Sidlingapa v. Sidava (1878) 2 Bom. 624, 630; Rajender v. Putto (1879) 5 Cal. L.R. 18; Thakur Sheo Mangal Singh v. Thakurain Bodhi Kuar (1936) 11 Luck. 607, 159 I.C. 356, ('36) A.O. 60; Saraswati v. Rupa ('62) A. Orissa 193; Sankaranarayana v. Lakshmi Ammal (1960) 1 Mad. L.J. 215; ('60) A.M. 294 [Court can enhance the amount from date of demand].

(u) Bansidhar v. Champoo (1946) 21 Luck. 152.

(v) Bangaru v. Vijayamachi (1899) 22 Mad. 175.

(w) Veerayya v. Chellamma (1939) Mad. 234.

(x) Trimbak v. Bhagu Bai (1941) Nag. 437, 185 I.C. 580, ('39) A.N. 249.

(y) Gojikabai v. Dattatraya (1900) 24 Bom. 386; Vijaya v. Sripathi (1885) 8 Mad. 94; Ruka Bai v. Ganda Bai (1878) 1 All. 594.

(z) Lala Maheshwari Prasad v. Mst. Sahdei Kunwar (1938) 13 Luck. 13, 165 I.C. 227, ('37) A.O. 16.

(a) Moheishwara v. Durgamba (1924) 47 Mad. 308, 78 I.C. 831, ('24) A.M. 687; Purushottamdas Harijivandas v. Bai Ruxmani (1938) Bom. 1, 39 Bom. L.R. 458, 170 I.C. 897, ('37) A.B. 358.

(b) Maharana Shri Ranmalsangji v. Kundankuwar (1902) 26 Bom. 707, (1878) 1 All. 594; Savitribai v. Radhakishan (1947) Nag. 381.

(c) Sidlingapa v. Sidava (1878) 2 Bom. 624; Lala Maheshwari Prasad v. Mst. Sahdei Kunwar (1938) 13 Luck. 13, 165 I.C. 227, ('37) A.O. 16.

569. Maintenance not a charge.—The claim, even of a widow, for maintenance is not a charge upon the estate of her deceased husband, whether joint or separate [§ 559], until it is fixed and charged upon the estate. This may be done by a decree of a Court, or by an agreement between the widow and the holder of the estate, or by the will by which the property was bequeathed. Therefore, the widow's right is liable to be defeated by a transfer of the husband's property to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the widow's claim for maintenance. It is also liable to be defeated by a transfer to a purchaser for value even with notice of the claim, unless the transfer was made with the intention of defeating the widow's right and the purchaser had notice of such intention. In fact, a widow's right to receive maintenance is one of an indefinite character which, unless made a charge upon the property, is enforceable only like any other liability in respect of which no charge exists (d). But where maintenance has been made a charge upon the property, and the property is subsequently sold, the purchaser must hold it subject to the charge (e). No question, however, of bona fides can arise where a transfer is made for payment of debts as stated in § 570.

Section 27 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, lays down inter alia that a widow's claim for maintenance under the Act shall not be a charge on the estate of the deceased husband or any portion thereof, unless one has been created by the will of the deceased, by a decree of Court, by agreement between the widow and the holder of the estate, or otherwise.

The Transfer of Property Act, 1882, sec. 39.—A widow's right of maintenance not being a charge, it is but equitable that it should not be enforced against transferee for value unless the transfer was made in fraud of the right of maintenance. A transferee for value may be a purchaser, or he may be a mortgagee. The provisions of sec. 39 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, are to the same effect (f). That section is as follows:—

"Where a third person has a right to receive maintenance or a provision for advancement or marriage from the profits of immovable property, and such property is transferred, the right may be enforced against the transferee if he has notice thereof or if the transfer is gratuitous; but not against a transferee for consideration and without notice of the right, nor against such property in his hands."

Decree; death of judgment debtor.—A decree for maintenance obtained against a member of an undivided family can be executed, after his death, against joint property in the hands of other members, if the decree created a charge against the joint family property (g); even when there is no charge, it may be executed against the son of the judgment debtor (h) to the extent of the ancestral property in his hands whether such maintenance was due at the time of the death of the deceased judgment debtor or became due since.

Where in execution of a decree creating a charge, the decree-holder herself purchases the charged property subject to her claim to future maintenance, it has been held that the judgment debtor's personal liability for future claims is not extinguished (i).

---

(d) Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai (1878) 2 Bom. 494; Bhartpur State v. Gopal (1902) 24 All. 160, 163; Ram Kunwar v. Ram Dai (1900) 22 All. 326; Ramanadan v. Rangammal (1889) 12 Mad. 260, 272; Jayanti v. Alamelu (1904) 27 Mad. 45, 49; Soorja Koer v. Nath Buksh (1885) 11 Cal. 102 [mere notice immaterial]; Prosonno v. Barbosa (1866) 6 W.R. 253 [charge created by will]; Sorolah v. Bhoobun (1888) 15 Cal. 292, 307; Shri Beharilalji v. Bai Rajbai (1899) 23 Bom. 342; Bhagat Ram v. Mst. Sahib Devi (1922) 3 Lah. 55, 67 I.C. 848, ('22) A.L. 273 [transfer not bona fide]. Reference may also be made to the Full Bench decision in Mst. Satwati v. Kali Shanker (1954) A.L.J. 645, ('55) A.A. 4 (case of a wife).

(e) Kuloda Prosad v. Jageshar (1900) 27 Cal. 194; Prosonno v. Barbosa (1866) 6 W.R. 253.

(f) See Shri Beharilalji v. Bai Rajbai (1899) 23 Bom. 342; Ram Kunwar v. Ram Dai (1900) 22 All. 326; Somasundaram v. Unnamalai (1920) 43 Mad. 800, 802, 59 I.C. 398, ('20) A.M. 722.

(g) Subbanna v. Subbanna (1907) 30 Mad. 324; Minakshi v. Chinnappa (1901) 24 Mad. 689.

(h) Mt. Munnibibi v. Radhay Shiam (1945) Luck. 641; Muttia v. Virammal (1887) 10 Mad. 283; Bhagirathi v. Anantha (1894) 17 Mad. 268.

(i) Sanyasi Rao v. Suryanarayanamma (1937) Mad. 324, 165 I.C. 647, ('36) A.M. 964.

Possession of property by widow for her maintenance.—It has been held that where a widow is in possession of specific property for the purpose of her maintenance, a purchaser buying with notice of her claim is not entitled to possession of the property without first securing proper maintenance for her (j). It is the settled practice of the High Court of Bombay not to allow even an heir to recover family property from a widow in possession without first securing a proper maintenance for her (k). In such a case the property may be sold subject to her right (l).

Charge may be created by a will.—A may bequeath his property to B subject to a charge for the maintenance of his widow out of the property (m).

Alienation made in husband's lifetime.—A Hindu widow is debarred from impeaching alienations of joint family property made in her husband's lifetime. The reason is that when her right of maintenance comes into existence (that is to say on her husband's death) she takes that right in the property as it stands at the time of her husband's death (n).

570. Transfer for payment of debts.—Debts contracted by a Hindu take precedence over the right of maintenance of his wife, or infant child (o), or his widow after his death (p). The same is true of debts contracted by the manager of the joint family of which the husband was a member, provided the debts were incurred for the benefit of the family (q). Similarly debts incurred by a joint family trading business take precedence over the widow's right to maintenance and residence (r). Therefore, if property belonging to the husband or to the joint family is sold in liquidation of such debts, the sale is binding on the widow, and she has no right of maintenance against the purchaser or against the property sold to him, even if the purchaser had notice of her claim for maintenance (s). But where maintenance has been made a charge upon the property, it takes precedence over the right of a subsequent purchaser of the same property in execution of a money-decree, though the decree was in respect of debts binding on the family (t). As the Privy Council has laid down in a case (u), of the two obligations which confront a joint family, viz., (1) the obligation to pay family debts and (2) the duty to provide maintenance to the widows of the family, the first would have preference over the second so long as neither of these obligations has taken the form of a charge on the family property; but if either of them assumes the shape of a charge it would take precedence over the other. If the decree of a creditor against the members of a joint family based on a family debt is to be binding on a widow in the family entitled to maintenance, it is not necessary that she should be made a party to the suit so long as the family is joint. But if a partition is effected before the suit or during the

---

(j) Rachawa v. Shivayogapa (1894) 18 Bom. 679; Imam v. Balamma (1889) 12 Mad. 334.

(k) Yellawa v. Bhimangavda (1894) 18 Bom. 452.

(l) Ram Kunwar v. Amar Nath (1932) 54 All. 472, 138 I.C. 863, ('32) A.A. 361.

(m) Prosonno v. Barbosa (1866) 6 W.R. 253. See also (1899) 23 Bom. 342, supra.

(n) Ramzan v. Ram Daiya (1918) 40 All. 96, 42 I.C. 944, ('18) A.A. 408.

(o) Sunder Singh v. Ram Nath (1926) 7 Lah. 12, 93 I.C. 1013, ('26) A.L. 167; Jawahor Singh v. Parduman Singh (1933) 14 Lah. 399, 141 I.C. 424, ('33) A.L. 116.

(p) Adhiranee v. Shona Malee (1876) 1 Cal. 365; Jayanti v. Alamelu (1904) 27 Mad. 45; Gur Dayal v. Kaunsila (1883) 5 All. 367; Natchiarammal v. Gopalakrishna (1878) 2 Mad. 126; Jamiat Rai v. Mt. Malan (1932) 13 Lah. 41, 133 I.C. 62, ('31) A.L. 718.

(q) Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai (1878) 2 Bom. 494; Ramanadan v. Rangammal (1889) 12 Mad. 260; Johurra v. Sreegopal (1876) 1 Cal. 470.

(r) Mt. Champa v. Official Receiver, Karachi (1934) 15 Lah. 9, 144 I.C. 636, ('33) A.L. 901.

(s) (1878) 2 Bom. 494; supra; (1889) 12 Mad. 260, supra; Musammat Tara v. Sarup (1929) 10 Lah. 706, 149 I.C. 707, ('30) A.L. 117.

(t) Somasundaram v. Unnamalai (1920) 43 Mad. 800, 59 I.C. 398. The dicta to the contrary in Sham Lal v. Banna (1882) 4 All. 296, 300 and Gur Dayal v. Kaunsila (1883) 5 All. 367, are not supported by any text of Hindu law or by any decided case.

(u) Mt. Dan Kuer v. Mt. Sarla Devi (1946) 73 I.A. 208, (1946) All. 756, 51 C.W.N. 81; Kaveri v. Parameswari ('71) A. Kerala 216 [enhanced maintenance].

pendency of the suit in which a separate share is allotted to her in lieu of her maintenance she ought to be made a party to such a suit (v).

Section 27 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, as stated in the preceding paragraph, lays down the manner in which a charge may be created for securing maintenance payable to a dependant. Section 26 of that Act lays down that subject to the provisions of section 27 debts of every description contracted or payable by the deceased shall have priority over the claims of his dependants for maintenance under the Act.

Illustrations

(a) A and his brother B are members of a joint Mitakshara family. A dies leaving a widow. After A's death B sells the property in order to satisfy debts binding on the family. B's widow has no claim for maintenance either against the purchaser or against the property: Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai (1878) 2 Bom. 494.

(b) A dies leaving a widow B. After A's death, C, a creditor of A, obtains a decree against B as A's legal representative, and sells the family house in execution of the decree. B has no claim for maintenance either against the purchaser or against the property: Jayanti v. Alamelu (1904) 27 Mad. 45.

(c) A and his sons B, C and D, are members of a joint family. A dies leaving a widow. After A's death, B, as the manager of the family, sells the family house in order to pay debts binding on the family. A's widow has no claim for maintenance either against the purchaser or against the property: Ramanadan v. Rangammal (1889) 12 Mad. 260.

(d) A sells certain property belonging to him for the payment of his debts. Neither A's wife nor his children have any claim for maintenance against the purchaser of the property: Gur Dayal v. Kaunsila (1883) 5 All. 367.

571. Right of maintenance against donees and devisees.—A Hindu cannot dispose of his entire property by gift or by will, so as to defeat the right of his widow to maintenance. If he does so, the donee or devisee must hold the property subject to the widow's right of maintenance, and the widow may enforce her right against it (w).

Section 22(2) of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, lays down that where a dependant has not obtained, by testamentary or intestate succession, any share in the estate of a Hindu dying after the commencement of the Act, the dependant shall be entitled subject to the provisions of the Act, to maintenance from those who take the estate. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section.

572. Transfer of property pending suit for maintenance.—If during the pendency of a suit instituted by a widow to establish a charge on specific immovable property for her maintenance, the property is transferred by any other party to the suit, and a decree is subsequently passed creating a charge on the property for the widow's maintenance, the transferee must hold the property subject to such charge, unless the transfer be effected for the purpose of paying off a debt which has priority over the widow's claim for maintenance (x). The same rule applies where the widow is a party to the suit and she has by her written statement claimed a charge on the property (y).

---

(v) Mt. Prabhawati Kuer v. Ram Saran Lal (1934) 13 Pat. 785, 152 I.C. 691, ('34) A.P. 538.

(w) Becha v. Mothina (1901) 23 All. 86; Joytara v. Ramhari (1884) 10 Cal. 638; Narbadabai v. Mahadeo (1881) 5 Bom. 99; Jamna v. Machul (1879) 2 All. 315.

(x) Dose Thimmanna v. Krishna (1906) 29 Mad. 508.

(y) Jogendra v. Fulkumari (1900) 27 Cal. 77.

The rule laid down in this section is an application of the doctrine of lis pendens as enunciated in the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, sec. 52. The rule does not apply where a widow claims maintenance without asking at the same time that it should be made a charge on the property (z).

V.—TRANSFER OF FAMILY DWELLING-HOUSE AND ITS EFFECT ON THE RIGHT OF RESIDENCE

Note.—The position and rights of a widow, daughter, predeceased son's wife and certain other female heirs of a Hindu have been materially changed by the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and the question of the right of residence of such persons must now be considered in the context of the provisions of that Act. Section 23 of that Act lays down a special provision respecting the family dwelling-house. In §§ 573 and 574 below the law has been stated as it stood prior to the coming into operation of that Act, under the decided cases.

573. Widow of undivided coparcener.—Where an undivided family consists of two or more males related as father and son or otherwise, and one of them dies leaving a widow, she is entitled to reside in the family dwelling-house in which she lived with her husband (a). If the house is sold by the surviving coparcener or coparceners without necessity, the sale does not affect her right, and the purchaser cannot evict her (b), at all events until another suitable residence is found for her (c). If the purchaser buys the house with full knowledge that the widow is residing and is being maintained in it, the purchaser is not entitled to oust her even though there may be other property belonging to the family out of which her maintenance can be derived (d). But if the sale is for a family necessity, she is liable to be evicted even though the purchaser had notice at the time of purchase that she was in occupation of the house (e). Similarly the right of residence cannot prevail against the husband's debts (f).

Illustrations

(a) A dies leaving a widow and a son. The son sells the family dwelling-house without family necessity. The purchaser is not entitled to evict the widow: 4 Beng. L.R.O.C. 72; 6 Mad. 130; 7 Bom. 282.

(b) A and B, two Hindu brothers, are members of a joint family residing together in the family dwelling-house. A dies leaving a widow W. After A's death dispute arises between B's wife and W. B offers W a residence in another house on condition of W vacating the part of the family house in her occupation. W refuses and B sues W to recover from her possession of the portion of the family house in her occupation. B is not entitled to possession. W is entitled to reside in the house: Bai Devkore v. Sanmukhram (1889) 13 Bom. 101.

(c) A and his nephew B are members of a joint family residing together in the family dwelling-house. A dies leaving a widow. After A's death B sells the family dwelling-house without family necessity. The purchaser is not entitled to evict A's widow: 1 All. 262.

---

(z) Manika v. Ellappa (1896) 19 Mad. 271.

(a) Bai Devkore v. Sanmukhram (1889) 13 Bom. 101.

(b) Venkatammal v. Andyappa (1883) 6 Mad. 130; Gauri v. Chandramani (1876) 1 All. 262; Talemand v. Rukmina (1881) 3 All. 353.

(c) Mangala v. Dinanath (1869) 4 Beng. L.R.O.C. 72; Ganga Dei v. Jagannath (1947) 22 Luck. 518.

(d) Dalsukhram v. Lalubhai (1883) 7 Bom. 282.

(e) Ramanadan v. Rangammal (1889) 12 Mad. 260. See also Johurra v. Sreegopal (1876) 1 Cal. 470, 475 [insolvency of manager]; Mt. Champa v. Official Receiver, Karachi (1934) 15 Lah. 9, 144 I.C. 836, ('33) A.L. 901.

(f) Jamiat Rai v. Mt. Malan (1932) 13 Lah. 41, 133 I.C. 62. ('31) A.L. 718.

The widow of a deceased coparcener cannot impeach an alienation of the family dwelling-house made in her husband's lifetime. Thus a daughter-in-law cannot impeach an alienation of the dwelling-house made by her father-in-law in her husband's lifetime (g).

574. Unmarried daughters of deceased coparcener.—Where an undivided family consists of two or more males related as father and son or otherwise, and one of them dies leaving unmarried daughters, they are entitled to reside, until their marriage, in the family dwelling-house in which they lived with their father, and a purchaser of the family house is not entitled to evict them unless the sale was for a family necessity (h).

Illustrations

(a) A dies leaving a son, a widow W, and two unmarried daughters *D*1 and *D*2. On A's death, the son enters into possession of the whole property including the family dwelling-house. The son then sells the house without family necessity. The purchaser is not entitled to oust the daughters. The daughters are entitled to reside in the house until their marriage.

(b) In the case put in ill. (a), the son dies leaving his mother W and his two unmarried sisters *D*1 and *D*2. After his death the dwelling-house is sold in execution of a money-decree passed against W on a personal debt of W, and is purchased by P. P is not entitled to oust *D*1 and *D*2: Suriyanarayana v. Balasubramania (1920) 43 Mad. 635, 56 I.C. 524. ('20) A.M. 106.

575. Wife and unmarried daughters of sole owner.—(1) Where a family consists only of a husband and wife, the wife cannot assert her right of residence in the family dwelling-house either against the purchaser in execution of a decree passed against her husband in his lifetime or against his estate after his death (i), or even against a purchaser under a private sale from her husband without necessity (j), though the purchaser had notice at the time of sale that she was residing in the house (k).

(2) The same rule applies to unmarried daughters. They too cannot resist the claim for possession of the purchaser at a court-auction or under a private sale (l).

Illustrations

(a) N executes a mortgage of the family dwelling-house to M. M obtains a decree on the mortgage against N. N then dies leaving a widow. After M's death the house is sold in execution of the decree and purchased by P. P is entitled to the possession of the house free from the widow's right of residence: Manilal v. Bai Tara (1893) 17 Bom. 398; Jayanti v. Alamelu (1904) 27 Mad. 45. In 17 Bom. 398, the learned judge observed that if the mortgage was not beneficial to and binding upon the wife or was in any way in fraud of her rights, her right of residence would not be affected by the sale. But these observations have been dissented from by Bhashyam Ayyangar, J., in 27 Mad. 45, at p. 51, and also by Shah, J., in Gangabai v. Jankibai (1921) 45 Bom. 337, at p. 342, 59 I.C. 583, ('21) A.B. 380, who agreed with the view taken by Bhashyam Ayyangar, J.

(b) A sells the family dwelling-house without any family necessity to P. P sues A and his wife for possession. A then dies leaving his widow. P is entitled to possession free from the widow's right of residence.

---

(g) Ramzan v. Ram Daiya (1918) 40 All. 96, 42 I.C. 944, ('18) A.A. 408.

(h) Suriyanarayana v. Balasubramania (1920) 43 Mad. 635, 56 I.C. 524, ('20) A.M. 106.

(i) Manilal v. Bai Tara (1893) 17 Bom. 398; Jayanti v. Alamelu (1904) 27 Mad. 45.

(j) Gangabai v. Jankibai (1921) 45 Bom. 337, 59 I.C. 583, ('21) A.B. 380.

(k) 17 Bom. 398, supra; 45 Bom. 337, 59 I.C. 583, ('21) A.B. 380, supra.

(l) See Suriyanarayana v. Balasubramania (1920) Mad. 635, 56 I.C. 524, ('20) A.M. 106 and 27 Mad. 45, supra.

The reason of the distinction between the rights of the females mentioned in §§ 573 and 574 on the one hand and those mentioned § 575 on the other is that the right which a Hindu wife [§ 575] has of maintenance and residence during her husband's lifetime is a matter of personal obligation arising from the very existence of the relationship and quite independent of the possession by the husband of any property, ancestral or self-acquired. The same principle applies as between daughters and their father: see § 542 above. It is different, however, in the case of the widows and daughters of deceased coparceners [§§ 573-574], whose right depends on the possession of joint property by the surviving coparceners: see § 543.

VI.—RIGHT OF MAINTENANCE NOT AFFECTED BY WILL

576. Right of maintenance not affected by will.—A Hindu cannot so dispose of his property by will as to affect the right of maintenance to which a person is entitled under the Hindu law (m).

See Restriction No. 1 of Schedule III of the Indian Succession Act, 1925.

VII.—TRANSFER AND ATTACHMENT OF RIGHT OF MAINTENANCE

577. Transfer of right of maintenance.—A Hindu female cannot transfer her right to future maintenance in whatever manner arising, secured or determined (n).

This is sec. 6, cl. (dd), of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, as amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, 1929.

The maintenance may be fixed by agreement or it may be fixed by a decree of Court. Before the amendment there was a conflict of opinion whether if the maintenance was fixed by a decree, it could be transferred by the widow, the High Court of Calcutta holding that it could (o), and the High Court of Madras that it could not (p). The Calcutta view is no longer law.

577A. Death pending suit for maintenance.—The right of a widow to claim maintenance when it has not crystallised into a definite sum is an inchoate right. In such a case if she dies pending her suit for maintenance it does not survive to her legal representative (q). But if the right has been declared, for instance, by a preliminary decree the position will be different (r).

578. Attachment of right of maintenance.—A right to future maintenance cannot be attached in execution of a decree, though arrears of maintenance may be so attached (s).

VIII.—SUIT FOR MAINTENANCE

579. Suit for maintenance.—(1) A widow, who is entitled to maintenance may sue for all or any of the following reliefs:—

(1) for a declaration of her right to maintenance;

(2) for arrears of maintenance (t);

(3) for a charge on a specific portion of her husband's estate for her maintenance and residence (u).

---

(m) Sriramulu v. Anasuyamma ('57) A. Andh. Pra. 21.

(n) Narabadabai v. Mahadeo (1881) 5 Bom. 99, 103, 104.

(o) Asad Ali v. Haider Ali (1911) 38 Cal. 13, 6 I.C. 826.

(p) Ranee Annapurni v. Swaminatha (1911) 34 Mad. 7, 9, 6 I.C. 439.

(q) Muthalammal v. Veeraraghavalu (1953) Mad. 527, ('53) A.M. 202.

(r) Dhanapala v. Krishna Chettiar (1955) Mad. 1122, ('55) A.M. 165.

(s) Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, sec. 60, cl. (n); Haridas v. Baroda (1900) 27 Cal. 38; Hoymobutty v. Koroona (1876) 8 W.R. 41.

(t) Raja Pirthee Singh v. Rani Rajkoocr (1874) 12 Beng. L.R. 238, I.A. Supp. Vol. 203.

(u) Mohalakshmamma v. Venkataratnamma (1883) 6 Mad. 83.

(2) Where a member of an undivided family comprising several branches dies, and a suit is brought by his widow for maintenance, she is entitled to a decree against all the members of the joint family, and not only against the branch to which her husband belonged and to which his share lapsed by survivorship (v).

580. Limitation.—(1) A suit for a declaration of a right to maintenance must be brought within twelve years from the time when the right is denied (w).

The refusal by a husband to maintain his wife on the ground of unchastity does not prevent a fresh cause of action arising to her on his death, if it is found that there is no unchastity. A suit within 12 years from the husband's death would be in time (x).

(2) A suit for arrears of maintenance must be brought within twelve years from the time when the arrears are payable (y). Therefore, past maintenance cannot be claimed for a period of more than twelve years.

Now see Article 105 of the new Limitation Act (3 years).

Arrears.—In order to recover arrears of maintenance, it is necessary to prove that there was a wrongful withholding of maintenance for the period for which arrears are claimed (z). It is not necessary to prove a demand for each year's maintenance as it became payable. At the same time it must be observed that mere non-payment of maintenance does not constitute conclusive proof of wrongful withholding. But it constitutes prima facie proof of wrongful withholding, and if it is coupled with a denial of the plaintiff's right to maintenance, it may constitute sufficient proof of wrongful withholding to entitle the plaintiff to arrears of maintenance (a).

Declaration of right to maintenance.—A suit by a Hindu widow for a declaration of her right to maintenance is not barred, merely because it is brought twelve years after the date of her husband's death. The period of limitation runs from the time when her right to maintenance is denied. The reason is that the right to maintenance is one accruing from time to time according to the wants and exigencies of the person entitled to maintenance (b).

581. Execution of decree.—(1) A decree which directs the payment of future maintenance from time to time can be enforced by execution (c), but a decree which merely declares a right of maintenance cannot be so enforced (d).

A decree which runs 'the plaintiff's maintenance is fixed at the rate of Rs. 30 per month which the defendant will be liable to pay her every month' is executable. An application by the defendant to reduce the rate of maintenance on the ground of diminution of income cannot be entertained by the executing court (e).

If a husband and wife resume co-habitation after a decree for maintenance the decree cannot be executed. If a fresh cause of action arises a fresh decree must be obtained (f).

---

(v) Subbarayalu v. Kamala Vallithayaramma (1912) 35 Mad. 147, 10 I.C. 347.

(w) Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art. 129.

(x) Mt. Shibbi v. Jodh Singh (1933) 14 Lah. 759, 148 I.C. 479, ('33) A.L. 747.

(y) Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, art. 128.

(z) Seshamma v. Subbarayadu (1895) 18 Mad. 403. However, see Sidramappa v. Mahadevi ('71) A. Mys. 145.

(a) Raja Yarlagadda v. Raja Yarlagadda (1901) 24 Mad. 147, 27 I.A. 151; Parwatibai v. Chatru (1912) 36 Bom. 131, 12 I.C. 708; Chandrakunverba v. Randhirsinhji ('65) Guj. 270.

(b) Narayanrao v. Ramabai (1879) 3 Bom. 415, 6 I.A. 114; Parwatibai v. Chatru, supra.

(c) Ashutosh v. Lukhimoni (1892) 19 Cal. 139. The death of the husband does not alter the foundation of the decree, Ramesh Chander v. Sh. Bibi Ved Kaur ('51) A. Punj. 129.

(d) Venkanna v. Aitamma (1889) 12 Mad. 183.

(e) Kallu Mal v. Barfo (1938) All. 535, 176 I.C. 139, ('38) A.A. 362.

(f) Vasantam Venkayya v. Vasantam Raghavamma (1942) Mad. 24, 200 I.C. 794, ('42) A.M. 1; Ansuya v. Rajaiah ('71) A.A.P. 296. Cf. Meenakshi Ammal v. P. S. Muthukrishna ('61) A.M. 380.

CHAPTER XXVI

CONVERSION FROM HINDUISM, KHOJAS, CUTCHI MEMONS AND SOME OTHERS

582. Khojas and Cutchi Memons [The whole of this section is subject to the provisions of the Shariat Act, 1937 (g)].—(1) In the absence of proof of special usage to the contrary, Khojas and Cutchi Memons in the Bombay State are governed, in matters of inheritance and succession, by the Hindu law; in other matters they are governed by the Mahomedan law (h). The only special usage opposed to the Hindu law of succession hitherto recognized is the usage of the Khojas according to which the mother is entitled to management of property and letters of administration in preference to the childless widow or sister of the deceased (i).

(2) It is now well-established that the theory of the joint Hindu family does not apply at all to Khojas and Cutchi Memons and that neither a Khoja (j) nor a Cutchi Memon son (k) acquires any interest by birth in property inherited by his father from his ancestors.

It was at one time held by the High Court of Bombay that the joint Hindu family system prevailed among Khojas and Cutchi Memons, but the decisions did not make it quite clear how far it prevailed and what incidents of joint property held by a Hindu family applied to joint property held by a Khoja or Cutchi Memon family. On the one hand it was held that a Khoja son was not entitled to a partition of ancestral property against his father in his lifetime (l). On the other hand it was held that the right of survivorship (m), the incapacity to dispose of ancestral property by will (n), and the powers of a father as manager of an ancestral business to borrow money for the business so as to bind the interest of his sons in the ancestral property (o), applied also to the joint property held by a Cutchi Memon family. The power of a Khoja father to mortgage family property for family purposes was also judicially recognized (p).

The Khojas and Cutchi Memons were originally Hindus. They became converts to Mahomedanism about 500 years ago, but retained the Hindu law of inheritance and succession. Hence the Hindu law of inheritance and succession is applied to them in the Bombay State on the ground of custom. This custom is so well established among them, that if a special rule of succession opposed to the Hindu law is alleged to exist among them, the burden of proof lies on the person setting up such rule (q). Note that customs overriding Mahomedan law are recognized by 37 Geo. III, c. 142, sec. 13, read with 4 Geo. IV, c. 71, sec. 9 (for Bombay), and by Bombay Regulation IV of 1827, sec. 26 (for the Mufassal of Bombay).

---

(g) See Mulla's Mahomedan Law.

(h) Khoja's and Memon's case (1847) Perry O.C. 119; Shivji Hasam v. Datu Mavji (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 281 [Khojas]; Ashabai v. Haji Tveb (1885) 9 Bom. 115 [Cutchee Memons]; Mahomed Sidick v. Haji Ahmed (1886) 10 Bom. 1 [Cutchee Memons]; Adv.-Gen. v. Karmali (1905) 29 Bom. 133, 148; Jan Mahomed v. Datu (1914) 38 Bom. 449, 22 I.C. 195, ('14) A.B. 59; Abdurahim v. Halimabai (1916) 43 I.A. 35, 18 Bom. L.R. 635, 32 I.C. 413, ('15) A.PC. 86; Mangaldas v. Abdul (1914) 16 Bom. L.R. 224, 23 I.C. 565, ('14) A.B. 17; Advocate-General v. Jimbabai (1917) 41 Bom. 181, 31 I.C. 108, ('15) A.B. 151. Reference may also be made to Abdul Hameed v. Provident Investment Co. Ltd. (1954) Mad. 939, ('54) A.M. 961 (F.B.).

(i) Rahimbhai, in the goods of (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 294 [Khojas].

(j) Jan Mohomed v. Datu (1914) 38 Bom. 449, 22 I.C. 195, ('14) A.B. 59.

(k) Mangaldas v. Abdul (1914) 16 Bom. L.R. 224, 23 I.C. 565, ('14) A.B. 17; Advocate-General v. Jimbabai (1917) 41 Bom. 181, 31 I.C. 108, ('15) A.B. 151; Haji Oosman v. Haroon (1923) 47 Bom. 369, 68 I.C. 862, ('23) A.B. 148.

(l) Ahmedbhoy v. Cassumbhoy (1889) 13 Bom. 534 [Khojas].

(m) (1885) 9 Bom. 115, supra [Cutchee Memons].

(n) Mahomed Sidick v. Haji Ahmed (1886) 10 Bom. 1 [Cutchee Memons].

(o) Haroon Mahomed, in the matter of (1890) 14 Bom. 189, 194 [Cutchee Memons].

(p) Shivji v. Datu (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 281.

(q) Mahomed Sidick v. Haji Ahmed (1886) 10 Bom. 1.

The following is a synopsis of decided cases:

I. Khoja cases—

1. The daughters of a deceased coparcener are entitled against the surviving coparceners to no more than maintenance until marriage and to marriage expenses, as among Hindus: Khojas and Memon's case (r).
2. A bequest in favour of dharam is void. But the word "charity" in a Khoja will made in the English form and language does not necessarily mean "dharam": Gangabai v. Thavar Mulla (s).
3. By the custom of Khoja when a widow dies intestate and without issue, property acquired by her from her deceased husband does not descend to her blood relations, but to the relations of her deceased husband: Mulbai, in the goods of (t).

Note.—The same is the rule of Hindu law in cases where the marriage is in an approved form.

4. Shivji v. Datu (u). This case is cited in sub-§ (2).
5. Rahimbhai, in the goods of (v). This case is cited in sub-§ (1).
6. There is no special usage prevailing among Khojas entitling a sister to succeed in preference to a widow: Rahimbatbai v. Hirbai (w).
7. Ahmedbhoy v. Cassumbhoy (x). This case is cited in sub-§ (2).
8. The widow of a deceased Khoja is entitled to maintenance out of his property: Rashid v. Sherbanoo (y). In this case the Court applied the Mayukha in determining the rights of the parties.
9. In Advocate-General v. Karmali (z) it was said that the will of a Khoja is to be construed on the basis of the testator having the testamentary powers of a Hindu. But the matter is not free from doubt (a).
10. A Khoja is not a Hindu within the meaning of the Hindu Wills Act, 1870: Abdul Karim v. Karmali (b).
11. A gift to a class some of whom are not in existence at the death of the testator is not void in its entirety. The gift in such a case enures for the benefit of those members of the class who were in existence at the testator's death: Advocate-General v. Karmali (c).
12. Khojas who had migrated to the former State of Hyderabad are governed by Mahomedan law (c1).

II. Cutchi Memon cases—

1. A Cutchi Memon is not a Hindu within the meaning of the Hindu Wills Act, 1870: Haji Ismail, in the matter of the will of (d).
2. Ashabai v. Haji Tyeb (e). This case is cited in sub-§ (2).

2A. Abdul Hameed v. Provident Investment Co. Ltd. (1954) Mad. 939, ('54) A.M. 961 (F.B.). In this case the parties claimed to be governed by Hindu law and the case was considered on that basis.

3. A bequest in favour of an unborn person is void: Abdul Cadur v. Turner (f).
4. Mahomed Sidick v. Haji Ahmed (g). This case is cited in sub-§ (2).
5. Haroon Mahomed, in the matter of (h). This case is cited in sub-§ (2).
6. When a Cutchi Memon testator bequeathed the residue of his property to his heirs to be divided among them "according to Mahomedan law," it was

---

(r) (1847) Perry O.C. 110.
(s) (1863) 1 Bom. H.C. 71.
(t) (1866) 2 Bom. H.C. 292.
(u) (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 281.
(v) (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 294.
(w) (1879) 3 Bom. 84.
(x) (1889) 13 Bom. 534.
(y) (1905) 29 Bom. 85.
(z) (1905) 29 Bom. 133, 148-149. See also Sallay Mahomed v. Lady Janbai (1901) 3 Bom. L.R. 785.
(a) Hassonally v. Popatlal (1913) 37 Bom. 211, 214 215, 17 I C. 17; Mangaldas v. Abdul (1914) 16 Bom. L.R. 224, 231, 23 I.C. 565, ('14) A.B. 17; Advocate-General v. Jimbabai (1917) 41 Bom. 181, 31 I.C. 108, ('15) A.B. 151 [a Khoja case].
(b) (1920) 22 Bom. L.R. 708, 58 I.C. 270, ('20) A.B. 140.
(c) (1905) 29 Bom. 133.
(c1) Noorbanu v. Dep. Cust. General ('65) A.S.C. 1937.
(d) (1882) 6 Bom. 452.
(e) (1885) 9 Bom. 115.
(f) (1885) 9 Bom. 158.
(g) (1886) 10 Bom. 1.
(h) (1890) 14 Bom. 189.

held that the heirs including the testator's widow took their respective shares absolutely, and that she did not take merely a Hindu widow's estate in the property that came to her share: Hoorbai v. Sooleman (i).

7. For the purposes of succession to the stridhana of a Cutchi Memon woman her marriage, though performed according to the Mahomedan rites, is deemed to be in the approved form. In this case the Court applied the Mayukha: Moosa v. Haji Abdul (j).

8. A Cutchi Memon widow is entitled to maintenance out of the estate of her deceased husband, and a Cutchi Memon daughter is entitled to maintenance and marriage expenses out of the estate of her father, though he might have left a will which is silent about maintenance and marriage expense: Haji Saboo Sidick v. Ayeshabai (k).

9. As among Hindus, so among Cutchi Memons, an heir who gets into possession of the estate is not bound to pay the creditors rateably as under the Indian Succession Act, 1928, s. 323: Haji Saboo Sidick v. Ally Mahomed (l).

10. As regards maintenance, Cutchi Memons are governed by the Mahomedan law: Mahomed Jusab v. Haji Adam (m).

11. A Cutchi Memon son does not acquire by birth an interest in property inherited by his father from his ancestors: Mangaldas v. Abdul (n).

12. A Cutchi Memon in Bombay may dispose of the whole of his property by will. A Cutchi Memon will is to be interpreted according to Mahomedan law: Advocate-General v. Jimbabai (o). But see No. 14 below.

13. Hindu law of joint family property is not applicable to Cutchi Memons: Same ruling as in No. 11 above. Haji Oosman v. Haroon (1923) 47 Bom. 369, 68 I.C. 862, ('23) A.B. 148.

14. The will of a Cutchi Memon is to be construed according to the rules of Hindu law: Abdulsakur v. Abubakkar (1930) 54 Bom. 358, 127 I.C. 401, ('30) A.B. 191. Abdulsattar Ismail v. Abdul Hamid Sait (1945) Mad. 276.

III. Other cases—

Memons of Mombasa.—Where Memons migrate from India and settle among Mahomedans (e.g., in Mombasa), the presumption that they have adopted the Mahomedan custom of succession should be readily made. The analogy in such a case is rather a proof of a change of domicile than a change of custom: Abdurahim v. Halimabai (p).

Halai Memons of Porbandar in Kathiawar.—They follow in matters of succession and inheritance Hindu law and not Mahomedan law, differing in that respect from Halai Memons of Bombay: Khatubai v. Mahomed (q).

Halai Memons of Morvi in Kathiawar.—These Memons who have settled at Nadiad in the Kaira district, are governed by Hindu law and not Mahomedan law, in matters of inheritance, succession and wills (r).

Sunni Bohras of Gujerat and Molesalam Girasias of Broach.—These are governed by the Hindu law in matters of succession and inheritance. These communities were originally Hindus, and became subsequently converts to Mahomedanism (s).

Sunni Bohras of Borsad.—These cannot be differentiated from Sunni Bohras of Gujerat. The presumption is that they are governed by the Hindu law of inheritance and succession as applicable to a separated person. There is no presumption that the law relating to joint family is applicable to them (u).

---

(i) (1901) 3 Bom. L.R. 790.
(j) (1906) 30 Bom. 197.
(k) (1903) 27 Bom. 485, 30 I.A. 127.
(l) (1906) 30 Bom. 270.
(m) (1913) 37 Bom. 71, 15 I.C. 520.
(n) (1914) 16 Bom. L.R. 224, 23 I.C. 565, ('14) A.B. 17.
(o) (1917) 41 Bom. 181, 283, 31 I.C. 108, ('15) A.B. 151.
(p) (1916) 43 I.A. 35, 18 Bom. L.R. 635, 32 I.C. 413, ('15) A.P.C. 86.
(q) (1923) 50 I.A. 108, 47 Bom. 146, 72 I.C. 202, ('22) A.P.C. 414 affirmg. Mahomed Haji Abu v. Khatubai (1919) 43 Bom. 647, 51 I.C. 513, ('18) A.B. 39 (Porbandar); Aisha Bee Bee v. Noor Mohamed (1932) 10 Rang. 461, 140 I.C. 143, ('32) A.R. 179 (Gondal).
(r) Adambhai v. Allarakhia (1935) 37 Bom. L.R. 686, ('35) A.B. 417.
(s) Bai Baiji v. Bai Santok (1896) 20 Bom. 53; Fatesangji v. Harisangji (1896) 20 Bom. 181. Also see Hajarkhan v. Kesarkhan ('68) A. Guj. 229.
(u) Bai Sakar v. Vora Ismail (1936) 60 Bom. 919, 38 Bom. L.R. 1034, 167 I.C. 380, ('37) A.B. 65.

Most of the cases cited above were reviewed by Beaman, J., in Jan Mahomed v. Datu (v).

583. The Cutchi Memons Act, 1920.—It is now provided by the Cutchi Memons Act, 1920, and the Cutchi Memons (Amendment) Act, 1923, that any person who satisfies the prescribed authority—

(a) that he is a Cutchi Memon and is the person whom he represents himself to be,

(b) that he is competent to contract within the meaning of section 11 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, and

(c) that he is resident in India, may by declaration in the prescribed form and filed before the prescribed authority declare that he desires to obtain the benefit of this Act, and thereafter the declarant and all his minor children and their descendants shall in matters of succession and inheritance be governed by the Mahomedan law.

A similar Act known as the Shariat Act has been passed with reference to all Muslims in India providing for the application of the personal law of Muslims instead of customary law (Act XXVI of 1937). See Mulla's Mahomedan Law.

(v) (1914) 38 Bom. 449, 22 I.C. 195, ('14) A.B. 59.

CHAPTER XXVII

IMPARTIBLE PROPERTY

LAW PRIOR TO HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

Note.—The Hindu Succession Act, 1956, has brought about radical changes in the rules of Hindu law relating to impartible property. The effect of that enactment is to abolish impartible estates save those which are expressly saved by section 5(ii) of the same. Only estates which descend to a single heir by the terms of any covenant or agreement entered into by the Ruler of any Indian State with the Government of India or by the terms of any enactment passed before the commencement of the Act are exempted from the operation of the general law relating to succession and inheritance laid down in that Act. In §§ 584-595 below the law has been stated as it stood prior to the coming into force of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, under the decided cases.

584. Impartible Property.—(1) Property, although partible by nature, may, by custom, or by the terms of a grant by Government, be impartible, in the sense that it always devolves on a single member of the family to the exclusion of the other members.

(2) An impartible estate may be ancestral, or it may be self-acquired.

The following are instances of impartible properties:—

(1) Ancient Zamindaries, which partake of the nature of a Raj or sovereignty; (2) Zamindaries which descend to a single member by special family custom (w); (3) Palayams in the Madras State (x); (4) royal grants of revenue for services, such as Jaghirs (y) and Saranjams (z) in Bombay; (5) service tenures such as Digwari tenure (a), and tenures attached to village offices in Madras (b). The discontinuance of services attached to an impartible watan does not make it partible (c). See also Bengal Regulations 11 of 1793, and 10 of 1800.

The Government has power in India by a grant of lands to limit their descent in any way it pleases, but a subject has no power to impose upon lands, or other property any limitation of descent at variance with the ordinary law applicable (d).

When such an estate is acquired by the Government and compensation is paid, the compensation received, retains the incident of impartibility (e).

There was some legislation relating to impartible estates in Madras: See Madras Impartible Estates Act 1904. Now see S. 5 Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

585. Property impartible by custom.—When there is a dispute with respect to an estate being impartible or otherwise the onus of proof lies on the

---

(w) See Baijnath v. Tej Bali Singh (1921) 48 I.A. 195, 43 All. 228, 60 I.C. 534, ('21) A.PC. 62.

(x) Kachi v. Kachi (1905) 28 Mad. 508, 32 I.A. 261.

(y) See Raghojirao v. Lakshmanrao (1912) 36 Bom. 639, 39 I.A. 202, 16 I.C. 239.

(z) Ramchandra v. Venkatrao (1882) 6 Bom. 598; Narayan v. Vasudeo (1891) 15 Bom. 247.

(a) Durga Prasad Singh v. Braja Nath Bose (1912) 39 Cal. 696, 39 I.A. 133, 15 I.C. 219.

(b) Bada v. Hussu Bhai (1884) 7 Mad. 236.

(c) Radhabai v. Anantrav (1885) 9 Bom. 198 [Service Vatan]; Mahatabsingh v. Badansingh (1921) 48 I.A. 446, 461, 48 Cal. 997, 64 I.C. 194, ('22) A.PC. 146.

(d) Rajindra v. Raghubans (1918) 45 I.A. 134, 40 All. 470, 48 I.C. 213, ('18) A.PC. 25; Ramrao v. Yeshvantrao (1886) 10 Bom. 327 [Deshpande Vatan].

(e) Rangarao v. State of Madras (1953) Mad. 479, ('53) A.M. 185.

party who alleges the existence of a custom different from the ordinary law of inheritance, according to which the estate is to be held by one member and as such not liable to partition (f). The custom must be ancient and invariable, and established by clear and unambiguous evidence. Only an estate of considerable age can be considered as being governed by an ancient and invariable custom; it is doubtful whether an estate of which the origin dated back only to 1796 could be regarded at the settlement in 1863 as being so governed (g). As to custom, family custom and proof of custom see pp. 82-84: §§ 16 to 20 ante.

A settlement or regrant by the British Government of an estate which existed before the British rule must be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to continue previously existing incidents of impartibility and descendibility to a single heir (h).

586. Accretions to impartible property.—It is open to the holder of an impartible estate to incorporate any self-acquired property of his with the estate, but an intention to do so either expressed or implied, must be established (i) and whereas in the case of a lunatic he is incapable of expressing his intention, the Court has to consider what is beneficial to him (j). The income of an ancestral impartible joint estate is not so affected by its origin that it should be assumed to accrete to the estate. The income when received is the absolute property of the holder of the estate. It differs in no way from property which he might have gained by his own effort, or acquired in circumstances entirely dissociated from the ownership of the estate. Therefore, the principle applicable to ordinary joint family estate that self-acquired moneys are to be regarded as joint property if mixed with the money of the joint family, does not necessarily apply to property acquired by the holder of an impartible estate out of the income (k).

Thus where the deceased holder of an ancestral impartible estate had applied savings out of the income to purchasing immovable properties and making loans, the rents and interest being received by the manager of the estate and treated in his books as part of the estate, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that the property so acquired had not become part of the impartible estate, but remained the separate property of the deceased holder (l). Whether any immovable property acquired out of the income has been incorporated with the impartible estate depends on the intention of the holder but movable property such as the income of the impartible estate cannot be so incorporated (m). This, however, does not mean that by a family custom family property cannot be treated as impartible. If a family custom is proved that certain category of movable property is treated by the family as impartible (e.g. jewels worn on ceremonial occasions), that custom would be recognised (*m*1). As to the doctrine of incorporation reference may be made to the decision of the Supreme Court mentioned below (*m*1).

---

(f) Chattar Singh v. Roshan Singh (1946) Nag. 159.

(g) Martand Rao v. Malhar Rao (1928) 55 I.A. 45, 55 Cal. 403, 107 I.C. 7, ('28) A.P.C. 10.

(h) Martand Rao v. Malhar Rao, supra.

(i) See f.n. (j) below. Also see Mahendrasinghji v. Ishwarshinghji (1952) Bom. 615 ('52) A.B. 243, (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 99.

(j) Someshwari Prasad v. Maheshwari Prasad (1936) 63 I.A. 441, 16 Pat. 1, 165 I.C. 347, ('36) A.P.C. 332.

(k) Jagadamba Kumari v. Narain Singh (1923) 50 I.A. 1, 2 Pat. 319, 77 I.C. 1041, ('23) A.P.C. 59; Janki Prasad v. Dwarka Prasad (1913) 40 I.A. 170, 181, 35 All. 391, 401, 20 I.C. 73; Murtaza Khan v. Muhomed Yasin (1916) 43 I.A. 269, 281, 38 All. 552, 567, 36 I.C. 299, ('16) A.P.C. 89; Srimati Parbati v. Jagadis Chunder (1902) 29 Cal. 433, 453, 29 I.A. 82, 98; Raja of Vizianagram v. Vishweshwar ('55) A.M. 219; Jitendra Pratap v. Bhagwati Prasad ('56) A.P. 457.

(l) (1923) 50 I.A. 1, 2 Pat. 319, 77 I.C. 1041, ('23) A.P.C. 59, supra; Hargovind Singh v. Collector of Etah (1937) All. 292, 169 I.C. 744, ('37) A.A. 377.

(m) Shibaprasad Singh v. Prayagkumari Debee (1932) 59 Cal. 1399, 59 I.A. 331, 138 I.C. 861, ('32) A.P.C. 216.

(*m*1) Pushpavathi Vijavaram v. Pushpavathi Viswesvar ('64) S.C. 118; Thakur Hari Singh v. I. T. Comm. ('68) Raj. 5 [crown grant: Marwar Land Revenue Act].

It follows from the principles laid down in the section that the right to recover arrears of rent, become due in the lifetime of the last holder, passes to his heirs, and not to the person who succeeds to the estate (n).

587. Impartible property whether coparcenary property.—An impartible estate is not held in coparcenary though it may be joint family property (o). But at times it is referred to as coparcenary and a distinction is drawn between present rights, that is, the right to demand a partition and the right to joint enjoyment, and future rights. In the case of an impartible estate, the right to partition and the right of joint enjoyment are from the very nature of the property incapable of existence, and there is no coparcenary to this extent. No coparcener, therefore, can prevent alienations of the estate by the holder for the time being either by gift or by will [§ 588], nor is he entitled to maintenance out of the estate [§ 589]. But as regards future rights, that is, the right to survivorship, the property is to be treated as coparcenary property, so that on the death intestate of the last holder, it will devolve by survivorship according to the rules stated in § 591 below (p). The right of a junior member to succeed to the estate by survivorship is not a mere spes successionis but a right of property which can be transferred (q).

The incidents of impartible estate were stated by the Privy Council in Rani Prayag Kumari Devi's case (qq) and as the Supreme Court observed in the undermentioned case (qqq) a full statement of the law on the subject is to be found there. The law as there stated was reaffirmed in subsequent decisions of the Privy Council. Some of the rules relating to the nature and incidents of an impartible estate and the right of survivorship were summarised by the Supreme Court in a recent decision (*q*1).

"Where property is held in coparcenary by a joint Hindu family, there are ordinarily three rights vested in coparceners—the right of joint enjoyment, the right to call for partition, and the right to survivorship. Where impartible property is the subject of such ownership, the right of joint enjoyment and the right of partition as the right of an undivided coparcener are, from the nature of the property, incapable of existence. But there being nothing in the nature of the property inconsistent with the right of survivorship, it may be presumed that that right remains" (r). The right of survivorship is not affected by the impartible nature of the property, so that if the family were joint and the last holder died intestate, the estate would devolve by survivorship according to the rules stated in § 591 below. A member of such impartible joint estate may renounce his rights of succession, but such renunciation must be in favour of all the members or of the head of the family as representing all the members (s).

The right to bring about a partition cannot be inferred from the power of alienation that the holder of the impartible estate may possess. From the existence of the one power the other cannot be deduced, as it is destructive of the very nature and character of the estate (t).

---

(n) Aparna v. Sree Shiba Prashad (1924) 3 Pat. 367, 83 I.C. 623, ('24) A.P. 451.

(o) Anant Bhikappa Patil v. Shankar Ramchandra Patil (1943) 70 I.A. 232, at p. 243.

(p) Baijnath v. Tej Bali Singh (1921) 48 I.A. 195, 211-213, 43 All. 228, 60 I.C. 534; Konammal v. Annadana (1928) 55 I.A. 114, 51 Mad. 189, ('28) A.P.C. 68.

(q) Sellapa v. Suppan (1937) Mad. 906, 171 I.C. 216, ('37) A.M. 496.

(qq) Shibaprasad Singh v. Prayag Kumari Debi f.n. (m) supra.

(qqq) Thyagsundardoss v. Sevuga Pandia ('65) A.S.C. 1730. Also see Pushpavathi v. P. Viswes-

war ('64) A.S.C. 118.

(*q*1) Krishna v. Sarvagna Krishna ('70) A.S.C. 1795. Reference may also be made to State of U.P. v. Rukmini Raman ('71) A.S.C. 1687 (maintenance and survivorship).

(r) Naraganti v. Venkatachalapati (1882) 4 Mad. 250, 266, approved in Kachi Kalitana v. Kachi Yuva (1905) 32 I.A. 261, 28 Mad. 508; and Baijnath v. Tej Bali Singh (1921) 48 I.A. 195, 43 All. 228, 60 I.C. 534, ('21) A.P.C. 62.

(s) Chinnathayi v. Kulasekarapandia (1946) Mad. 599.

(t) Chinnathayi v. Kulasekara Pandiya Naicker (1952) S.C.R. 241, (1952) S.C. 29.

588. Alienation of impartible property.—The impartibility of an estate, does not as a matter of law make it inalienable. The holder of an impartible estate has power to alienate the estate, though ancestral, by gift or by will, unless the power of alienation is excluded by special family custom or by the nature of the tenure (u). The absence of any instance in which a previous holder has alienated the estate by gift or will is not by itself sufficient evidence to establish such a custom (v).

Where the estate is by custom inalienable, the holder cannot alienate it except for legal necessity (w) [§ 528].

Soon after some of the Privy Council decisions referred to above the Madras Legislature stepped in because they rudely disturbed the view held in Madras on the subject of alienations and passed the Madras Impartible Estates Acts of 1902, 1903 and 1904 and the Arni Jagir Act, 1909. The result of those Acts is that the question of alienability of impartible estates does not depend in Madras on family custom but is governed by those statutes. Reference may be made to decisions under those Acts. Reference may also be made to Madras Impartible Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 26 of 1948. Also see Pushpavathi v. P. Visweswar ('64) A.S.C. 118.

589. Right to maintenance out of impartible property.—(1) No coparcener has any present rights in an impartible estate [§ 587]. Apart, therefore, from custom and relationship to the holder, the junior members of the family have no right to maintenance out of such estate (x). The Judicial Committee has held that the illegitimate sons of a junior member are not, under the Law, entitled to maintenance. In the particular case the claim was also based on a deed of maintenance. Their Lordships held that the words "Purusha santhathi either by way of Aurusa or by way of adoption" do not include an illegitimate son (y).

(2) Where an impartible estate is held as ancestral or joint family property, the sons of the holder thereof are entitled, by custom, to maintenance out of the estate. This custom has so often been judicially recognized that it is not necessary to prove it in each case (z). But where the impartible property is the self-acquired property of the holder, his son is not entitled to maintenance out of it (a).

---

(u) Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari (1888) 15 I.A. 51, 10 All. 272 [gift]; Sri Raja Rao Venkata Surya v. Court of Wards (1899) 26 I.A. 83, 22 Mad. 383; Protap Chandra v. Jagadish Chandra (1927) 54 I.A. 289, 54 Cal. 955, 102 I.C. 599, ('27) A.P.C. 159; Raja Madhusudan v. Kheshtabasi (1929) 8 Pat. 932, 121 I.C. 462, ('30) A.P. 137, where it was held dissenting from Gopal Prosad v. Raghunath (1905) 32 Cal. 158, that the Killajat Mahal of Orissa known as Patia Killah was alienable; Rao Bhimsingh v. Fakirchand (1947) Nag. 649. Also see Thyagsundardoss, supra [Will: On construction held to be absolute estate].

(v) Protap Chandra v. Jagadish Chandra, supra.

(w) Gopal v. Raghunath (1905) 32 Cal. 158.

(x) Raja Rama Rao v. Raja of Pittapur (1918) 45 I.A. 148, 41 Mad. 778, 47 I.C. 354, ('18) A.P.C. 81, affirmg. Sri Rajah Row v. Rajah of Pittapur (1916) 39 Mad. 396, 29 I.C. 356, ('16) A.M. 27, (1927) 54 I.A. 289, 54 Cal. 955, 102 I.C. 599, ('27) A.P.C. 159, supra.

(y) Raja Velugoti Sarvagna Kumara Krishna Yachendra Bahadur Varu v. Raja Rajeswara Rao & Ors. (1942) Mad. 419, 198 I.C. 166, 68 I.A. 181, ('42) A.P.C. 3; Chelladorai v. Chinnathambiar (1960) Mad. 880, ('61) A.M. 42 [custom].

(z) Sri Rama Rao v. Raja of Pittapur (1921) 45 I.A. 148, 41 Mad. 778, 47 I.C. 354, ('18) A.P.C. 81; Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari (1888) 15 I.A. 51, 10 All. 272; Raja Yarlagadda v. Yarlagadda (1900) 27 I.A. 151, 24 Mad. 147; Kachi Kalitana v. Kachi Yuva (1905) 32 I.A. 261, 28 Mad. 508.

(a) Subbayya Thevar v. Marudappa Pandian (1937) Mad. 42, ('36) A.M. 828; Hargovind Singh v. Collector of Etah (1937) All. 292, 169 I.C. 744, ('37) A.A. 377.

As regards maintenance of wife see the undermentioned case (*a*1).

(3) There is no invariable custom by which any member of the family beyond the first generation from the last holder [e.g., the last holder's grandsons] can claim maintenance as of right (b).

Illustration

The holder of an impartible Raj adopts a son to him. He then devises the Raj by will to a son born of one of his wives after the adoption. After the Raja's death a son of the adopted son sues the devisee for maintenance. No evidence is given of any special custom by which grandsons of the last holder can claim maintenance as of right. Is the plaintiff entitled to maintenance? No. He cannot claim maintenance as a coparcener, for no coparcener has any present rights in an impartible property [§ 587]. He is not entitled to maintenance on the ground of personal relationship, for a Hindu is under no personal obligation to maintain a grandson [§ 542]. Nor is he entitled to maintenance by custom, there being no evidence of any special custom: Raja Rama Rao v. Raja of Pittapur (1918) 45 I.A. 148, 41 Mad. 778, 47 I.C. 354, ('18) A.P.C. 81.

Grants made out of the revenues of an impartible estate for the maintenance of the junior members of the family and their direct male line revert, on the death of the last male heir of the grantee, to the estate (c).

The amount of maintenance payable to a junior member of a family holding an impartible estate as such is not assessable to income-tax (d).

The income of the house property (part of an impartible estate) to which the assessee has succeeded by the rule of primogeniture is not chargeable in his hands for the purposes of section 9 of the Income-tax Act as an individual. But interest is so chargeable for purposes of sections 8 and 12 (e).

An illegitimate son of the holder of an impartible estate may by operation of a custom to that effect be entitled to maintenance out of the estate (*e*1).

Succession to impartible estate

590. General principles.—(1) The general principles in regard to succession to an impartible estate are well established. The first principle is that the succession is governed by the rules which govern the succession to partible property, subject to such modifications only as flow from the character of the property as an impartible estate. The second principle is that the only modification which impartibility suggests in regard to the right of succession is the existence of a special rule for the selection of a single heir when there are several heirs of the same class who would be entitled to succeed to the property if it were partible under the general Hindu Law. The third principle is that, in the absence of a special custom, the rule of primogeniture furnishes a ground of preference. In determining the single heir, we have first to ascertain the class of heirs who would be entitled to succeed to the property if it were partible, regard being had to its nature as joint or separate property, and we have next to select the single heir, applying the special rule (f).

(*a*1) Chandrakunverba v. Randhirsinhji ('65) A. Guj. 270.

(b) 45 I.A. 148, 41 Mad. 778, 47 I.C. 354, ('18) A.P.C. 81, supra; Nilmony v. Hingoo Lall (1880) 5 Cal. 256, 259. In Madras the rule is now modified by Madras Act XII of 1934.

(c) See Durgadut v. Rameshwar (1909) 36 I.A. 176, 36 Cal. 943, 4 I.C. 2 [Babuana grant]; Ekradeshwar v. Janeshwari (1914) 41 I.A. 275, 42 Cal. 582, 25 I.C. 417, (1914) A.P.C. 76 [Sohag grant] Someshwari Prasad v. Mahaeshwari Prasad (1936) 63 I.A. 441, 16 Pat. 1, 165 I.C. 347, ('36) A.P.C. 332.

(d) Commissioner of Income-tax v. Zamindar of Chemudu (1934) 57 Mad. 1023, 151 I.C. 926, ('34) A.M. 608; Vijayananda Gajpatiraj v. Commissioner of Income-tax (1934) 56 All. 1009.

(e) Commissioner of Income-tax, Punjab v. Krishna Kishore (1942) Lah. 1, 196 I.C. 707, 68 I.A. 155, ('41) A.P.C. 120.

(*e*1) Chelladorai v. Chinnathambiar ('61) A.M. 42.

(f) Subramanya v. Siva Subramanya (1894) 17 Mad. 316, 325, cited with approval in Parbati Kunwar v. Chandarpal Kunwar (1909) 36 I.A. 125, 31 All 457, 475-476, 4 I.C. 25; Katama Natchiar

These principles were reiterated in a recent decision of the Supreme Court (*f*1).

(2) Sons.—According to the rule of primogeniture, if the last owner dies leaving sons, the eldest son is entitled to succeed. The eldest son is the son who was born first, not the first born son of the senior wife (g), unless there is a family custom that the sons take rank according to the seniority of their mothers (h). Therefore the son of a junior wife succeeds in preference to the later born son of a senior wife, or of the first married wife.

So long as the line of the eldest son continues in possession, the estate will pass in that line. That is to say, on the death of the eldest son, leaving sons, it will pass to his eldest son and not to his brother (i). See ill. to § 591. As to the effect of adoption in families owning impartible estate on other branches see §§ 472 and 506.

If an aurasa son is born after the adoption, the former alone succeeds to the impartible estate (j).

(3) Illegitimate son of a Shudra.—If the holder of an impartible estate, belonging to the Shudra caste, dies leaving a legitimate son and also an illegitimate son, the legitimate son would be preferred to the illegitimate son; this seems to follow from the fact that on a partition the legitimate son is so largely preferred (k). If there has been no partition between the sons, and the legitimate son dies without leaving male issue, but leaving a widow and daughters, the illegitimate son would, as in the case of partible property, succeed by survivorship in preference to the widow and daughters of the legitimate son (l) [§ 312]. It has been held by the Madras High Court that in the case of an impartible estate descendible to a single heir, the widow excludes the illegitimate son from inheritance (m).

(4) Whole and half blood.—Nearness of blood is no ground of preference under the Mitakshara law in case of disputed succession to coparcenary property which is partible, and it is likewise no ground of preference when such property is impartible. Therefore, in a joint family, an elder brother of the half-blood is entitled to succeed to an impartible ancestral estate in preference to a younger brother of the whole blood. But the latter would succeed in preference to the former, if the estate was separate or self-acquired property of the last holder (n), or if the case was governed by the Dayabhaga (o).

---

v. Rajah of Shivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 2 W.R.P.C. 31; Baijnath v. Tej Bali Singh (1921) 48 I.A. 195, 212, 43 All. 228, 244, 60 I.C. 534, ('21) A.P.C. 62; Muttuvaduganadha Tevar v. Periasami (1896) 23 I.A. 128, 137, 19 Mad. 451, 457; Raja Jogendra v. Nitayanund (1891) 17 I.A. 128, 131, 18 Cal. 151, 154.

(*f*1) Dayaram v. Dawlatshah ('71) A.S.C. 681.

(g) Ramalakshmi v. Sivanantha (1872) 14 M.I.A. 570, 17 W.R. 553; Jagdish Bahadur v. Sheo Partab (1901) 28 I.A. 100, 23 All. 369.

(h) Ramasami v. Sundaralingasami (1894) 17 Mad. 422, affmd. in Sundaralingasami v. Ramasami (1899) 26 I.A. 55, 22 Mad. 515.

(i) (1894) 17 Mad. 422, 434, supra.

(j) Sahebgouda v. Shiddangouda (1939) Bom. 314.

(k) Ramasami v. Sundaralingasami (1894) 17 Mad. 422, 434-435.

(l) Raja Jogendra v. Nityanund (1891) 17 I.A. 128, 131, 18 Cal. 151, 154.

(m) Thangavelu v. The Court of Wards, Madras, (1947) Mad. 334.

(n) Subramanya v. Siva Subramanya (1894) 17 Mad. 316, also 17 Mad. 422, supra.

(o) Neelkisto Deb v. Beer Chunder (1869) 12 M.I.A. 523, 12 W.R.P.C. 21 [the Tipperah Raj case].

(5) Fresh stock of descent.—As in the case of succession to partible property, so in the case of impartible property each male owner becomes a fresh stock of descent (p).

591. Where estate ancestral, and last owner undivided.—(1) Where the impartible estate is ancestral, the successor to the estate in a joint family governed by the Mitakshara is designated by survivorship. The estate passes by survivorship from one line to another according to primogeniture, and devolves not on the member nearest in blood, but on the eldest member of the senior branch (q).

(2) In the absence of custom a female cannot inherit an impartible ancestral estate belonging to a joint family governed by the Mitakshara, where there are any male members of the family who are qualified to succeed to the estate (r). But where she is the widow of the last survivor, the law of succession to separate property applies, and she can succeed as in the case of partible property (s) [§ 592].

Illustration

In the accompanying diagram, A stands for the last holder; *S*1 is his son, *S*2 and L are two sons of *S*1, L being the younger of the two; *S*3 is the son of *S*2. A dies leaving *S*3 and L. *S*3, being the surviving member of the senior line, is entitled to succeed in preference to L, though L is one degree nearer to the common ancestor (A) than *S*3: Baijnath v. Tej Bali Singh (1921) 48 I.A. 195, 43 All. 228, 60 I.C. 534, ('21) A.P.C. 62.

592. Where estate ancestral, but last owner divided.—(1) Where the impartible estate is ancestral, but the last holder was separated, the estate in cases governed by the Mitakshara will descend according to the ordinary rules of succession applicable to partible property (t). Thus if the last holder dies without leaving male issue, but leaving a widow, the estate will pass, in the absence of any custom to the contrary, to the widow (u), and, if there be no widow to his daughter (v). If there be none of these, the estate will, if there be no indication to the contrary, descend according to the rule of primogeniture. In that case if there are more persons than one standing in the same degree of relationship to the last holder, the eldest, if all belong to the same line, and the eldest in the senior branch, if there are more branches than one, will be the preferable heir [§ 43].

---

(p) Muttuvaduganadha Tevar v. Periasami (1896) 23 I.A. 128, 19 Mad. 451.

(q) Baijnath v. Tej Bali Singh (1921) 48 I.A. 195, 43 All. 228, 60 I.C. 534, ('21) A.P.C. 62 affmg. 38 All. 590, 38 I.C. 894; Kachi Kalitana v. Kachi Yuva (1905) 32 I.A. 261, 28 Mad. 508; Naraganti v. Nayanivaru (1882) 4 Mad. 250; Sahebgouda v. Basangouda (1931) 33 Bom. L.R. 580, 133 I.C. 847, ('31) A.B. 378; Shibaprasad Singh v. Prayagkumari Debee (1932) 59 Cal. 1399, 59 I.A. 331, 138 I.C. 861, ('32) A.P.C. 216; Rao Bhimsingh v. Fakirchand (1947) Nag. 649.

(r) Hiranath Koer v. Baboo Ram (1872) 9 Beng. L.R. 274; Chowdry Chintamun v. Mussmut Nowlukho (1875) 2 I.A. 263, 1 Cal. 153.

(s) See Sri Rajah Yenumula v. Sri Rajah Yenumula (1870) 6 Mad. H.C. 93, 109.

(t) Chuni Lal Official Receiver v. Jai Gopal (1936) 17 Lah. 378, 163 I.C. 103, ('36) A.L. 55.

(u) Thakurani Tara Kumari v. Chaturbhuj (1915) 42 I.A. 192, 42 Cal. 1179, 30 I.C. 833, ('15) A.P.C. 30. See also Sri Rajya Lakshmi Devi v. Sri Raja Surya (1897) 24 I.A. 118, 20 Mad. 256.

(v) See Mst. Parbati Kunwar v. Chandrapal Kunwar (1909) 36 I.A. 125, 31 All. 457, 4 I.C. 25 [custom applicable both to partible and impartible estates].

(2) The onus of proving a custom excluding females from succession to a separate impartible estate rests upon the person who sets up the custom (w). Such a custom may not be valid after the Constitution of India came into force in 1950 as Arts. 14 and 15 thereof guarantee equality before law and non-discrimination on account of sex.

In some cases another rule of selection and not primogeniture may be the governing rule of the family (x).

593. Proof of separation where estate ancestral.—In order to establish that an impartible estate has ceased to be joint property for the purpose of succession, it is necessary to prove an intention, express or implied, on the part of the junior members of the family, to give up their chance of succeeding to the estate. A mere separation in general status is not sufficient (y). The test to be applied is whether the facts show a clear intention to renounce or surrender any interest in the estate or a relinquishment of the right of succession and an intention to impress upon the estate the character of separate property (z).

594. Where estate self-acquired.—Where an impartible estate is self-acquired property, the estate in cases governed by the Mitakshara follows the course of succession as to separate property [§ 592], though the last holder was undivided at the time of his death (a) [§ 43].

Illustration

The holder of an impartible Zamindari dies leaving a widow and undivided nephews. It is proved that the Zamindari was his self-acquired property. The widow is entitled to succeed in preference to the nephews: The Shivagunga case (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539.

A Hindu governed by Mitakshara law who took a vested interest in an ancestral impartible estate under a deed of settlement executed by his father while his elder brother was alive and before the coming into force of the Madras Impartible Estates Act took the estate as self-acquired property. His widow succeeds to him as heir in preference to his half-brother (b).

594A. Execution of decree against successor.—A decree was passed against the holder of an impartible estate for compensation in lieu of specific performance of a contract to transfer a part of the estate. It was held that as the decree was passed against the defendant in a representative capacity it could be executed against his son and successor (c).

595. Dayabhaga school.—In cases governed by the Dayabhaga, the heir will be the eldest member of the class of persons which is nearer of kin to the last owner than any other class [§ 88].

---

(w) Amarendra v. Banamali (1931) 10 Pat. 1, 123 I.C. 770, ('30) A.P. 417; Chattar Singh v. Roshan Singh (1946) Nag. 159.

(x) Ishri Singh v. Baldeo Singh (1884) 11 I.A. 135, 10 Cal. 792; Achal Ram v. Udai Partab (1884) 11 I.A. 51, 10 Cal. 511; Mohesh Chunder v. Satrughan (1902) 29 I.A. 62, 29 Cal. 343.

(y) Konammal v. Annadana (1928) 55 I.A. 114, 51 Mad. 189, 108 I.C. 354, ('28) A.P.C. 68; Jagadamba Kumari v. Narain Singh (1923) 50 I.A. 1, 2 Pat. 319, 77 I.C. 1041, ('23) A.P.C. 59; Ram Sundar v. Collector of Gorakhpur (1930) 52 All. 793, 126 I.C. 237, ('30) A.A. 797, affirmed by P.C. in Collector of Gorakhpur v. Ram Sundar Mal (1934) 56 All. 468, 61 I.A. 286, 150 I.C. 545, ('34) A.P.C. 157; Lingappa-alias Rayappa v. Kadappa Bapurao (1940) Bom. 721, 191 I.C. 504, ('41) A.B. 345.

(z) Chinnathayi v. Kulasekara Pandiya Naicker (1952) S.C.R. 241, (1952) S.C. 29; Jitendra Pratap v. Bhagwati Prasad ('56) A.P. 457; Gangadhar v. Dindayal (1954) Orissa 57, ('54) A. Orissa 142.

(a) Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga (1863) 9 M.I.A. 539, 2 W.R.P.C. 31; Periasami v. Periasami (1878) 5 I.A. 61, 1 Mad. 312; Rao Bhimsingh v. Fakirchand (1947) Nag. 649.

(b) Ulagalum Perumal Sethurayar v. Rani Subbalakshmi Nachiar (1939) Mad. 443.

(c) Rao Bhimsingh v. Gangaram (1941) Nag. 632, 193 I.C. 598, ('40) A.N. 278. Affirmed by the Privy Council in Rao Bhimsingh v. Shersingh (1947) Nagpur 830 (P.C.).

CHAPTER XXVIII

THE LAW OF DAMDUPAT

596. The rule of damdupat.—The rule of damdupat is a branch of the Hindu law of Debts. According to this rule, the amount of interest recoverable at any one time cannot exceed the principal (d). See § 600 below for the places in which the rule of damdupat applies. In a decision of the High Court of Rajasthan (e) the opinion was expressed that the rule is hit by Article 14 of the Constitution. The operation of the rule does not appear to have been questioned in any other State and effect continues to be given to it in places where it was applied prior to the coming into force of the Constitution. In some States recent legislation affecting transactions of moneylenders prohibits recovery of interest in excess of the principal amount.

Illustration

A lends Rs. 1,000 to B at interest at 15 per cent per annum. A allows the interest to run into arrears until it amounts to Rs. 1,200, that is, until it exceeds the principal (Rs. 1,000). A then sues B to recover Rs. 2,200, that is, Rs. 1,000 for principal and Rs. 1,200 for interest. A is not entitled to more than Rs. 1,000 for interest, as that is the amount of the principal. But if B pays A Rs. 400 for interest before suit, and A then sues B to recover Rs. 1,800, that is, Rs. 1,000 for principal and Rs. 800 for interest A is entitled to Rs. 800 for interest, for it does not exceed the principal Rs. 1,000, though he will thereby be getting Rs. 1,200 in all for interest. The reason is that the payment of Rs. 400 and the payment of Rs. 800 would be payments at different times, and all that the rule of damdupat says is that a creditor is not entitled at any one time to recover interest exceeding the amount of the principal. The rule of damdupat does not say that a creditor shall not in any case be entitled to interest exceeding the principal. The result is that part payments of interest made before suit cannot be added to the amount of interest claimed in the suit so as to attract the application of the rule of damdupat.

Reason of the rule.—The Hindu law did not recognise any rule of limitation for the recovery of debts. Every debt which was lawful was binding and recoverable from the debtor irrespective of the period which may have elapsed since the original liability was incurred. It thus became necessary to impose a restriction on the amount of interest recoverable by the creditor, and such a restriction has been imposed by the rule of damdupat (f).

The Usury Laws Repeal Act, 1855.—The rule of damdupat is not superseded by the Usury Laws Repeal Act, 1855. According to that Act, the Court is bound to award interest at the contract rate, whatever the rate of interest may be. But in cases to which the rule of damdupat applies, the creditor cannot at any one time recover interest exceeding the amount of the principal (g).

The Limitation Act, 36 of 1963. The rule of damdupat is not affected by the Limitation Act. According to that Act, the period of limitation for a suit for money lent is three years from the date of the loan. A creditor, therefore, may sue for the loan and for arrears of interest for three years, whatever the interest may amount to. But in cases to which the rule of damdupat applies, he cannot at any one time recover interest exceeding the amount of the principal (h).

---

(d) Dhondu v. Narayan (1863) 1 Bom. H.C. 47; Hariram v. Madan Gopal (1928) 33 C.W.N. 493, 497, 114 I.C. 565, ('29) A.P.C. 77.

(e) Sheokaransingh v. Daulatram ('55) A. Raj. 201. Also see I.L.R. (1963) Raj. 385.

(f) Gajadhar v. Jagannath (1924) 46 All. 775, 782, 80 I.C. 684, ('24) A.A. 551 [F.B.]; Bapurao v. Kashinath (1946) Nag. 407.

(g) Khushalchand v. Ibrahim (1866) 3 Bom. H.C.A.C. 23; Hakma Manji v. Meman Ayab (1870) 7 Bom. H.C.O.C. 19; Ganpat v. Adarji (1879) 3 Bom. 312, 338; Ramconnoy v. Johur Lall (1880) 5 Cal. 867.

(h) (1879) 3 Bom. 312, 332, supra; Hari v. Balambhat (1885) 9 Bom. 233.

The rule cannot apply to case of a trustee who has utilised funds of a temple in his business (*h*1). A trustee is under a pecuniary liability to make good trust funds of which he may personally have made use (breach of trust) but he is not a debtor and cannot benefit by the rule of damdupat (*h*2).

597. Where part of the principal has been paid.—Where a loan is repayable by instalments, and some of the instalments have been paid, or even where it is not payable by instalments but a part thereof has been paid the principal for the purpose of the rule of damdupat is the balance of principal remaining due when the interest claimed in the suit accrued (i).

Illustration

A lends Rs. 200 to B at interest at the rate of 10 per cent per annum. The loan is payable by four instalments of Rs. 50 each. B pays the first three instalments and all interest due thereon. A then sues B to recover the last instalment of Rs. 50 and interest thereon amounting to Rs. 65. A is not entitled to more than Rs. 50 for interest, that being the amount of principal remaining due when the interest accrued. It does not matter that the original principal was Rs. 200.

598. Capitalization of interest by subsequent agreement.—The rule of damdupat does not forbid the conversion, by subsequent agreement between the debtor and the creditor, of the interest in arrear into capital. Therefore, when a fresh bond is passed by the debtor for the aggregate amount of the principal and interest due under the old bond, the principal for the purpose of the rule of damdupat is the amount of the fresh bond (j).

Illustration

B borrows Rs. 500 from A at interest at the rate of 10 per cent per annum and passes a promissory note to A for that amount. No interest is paid by B for two years. At the end of the second year, the interest due to A is Rs. 100. A demands Rs. 500 plus Rs. 100 from B. B is unable to pay the amount, and he passes a fresh promissory note to A for Rs. 600, that is, Rs. 500 (principal) plus Rs. 100 (interest in arrear), promising to pay interest on the Rs. 600 at the same rate as before. A subsequently files a suit against B to recover Rs. 600, the principal amount secured by the second promissory note, and Rs. 550, the interest in arrear on that amount. What is the principal for the purpose of the rule of damdupat, is it Rs. 500, the amount of the first note, or is it Rs. 600, the amount of the second note? The answer is that it is Rs. 600, the amount of the second note. Therefore A is entitled to Rs. 550 for interest, for though it exceeds the original principal sum of Rs. 500, it does not exceed the principal payable under the second note, namely, Rs. 600. It does not matter that a part of the principal of Rs. 600 consisted originally of interest. It was quite competent to A and B at any time after the date of the first promissory note to agree that the sum of Rs. 100, which represented the interest in arrear, should be treated as capital so as to carry interest on it. But if A and B had agreed, when the original loan of Rs. 500 was made, that all interest in arrear should be capitalized and should carry interest on it as if it was a principal sum, the agreement could not affect the operation of the rule of damdupat, and A would not entitled to more than Rs. 500 for interest.

599. The rule of damdupat does not apply after suit.—Where a suit has been instituted to recover a loan, the rule of damdupat ceases to operate. The result is that though the Court is bound to apply the rule of damdupat up to the date of the suit, it is free to award interest to the creditor at such rate as

---

(*h*1) Phulchand v. Hukumchand ('60) A.B. 438.
(*h*2) Hukum Chand v. Fulchand ('65) A.S.C. 1692.
(i) Dagdusa v. Ramchandra (1896) 20 Bom. 611; Nusserwanji v. Laxman (1906) 30 Bom. 452, 454, 62 Bom. L.R. 308.
(j) Sukalal v. Bapu (1900) 24 Bom. 305; Nawanneetdas v. Gordhandas ('55) A.M.B. 113.

it thinks proper from the date of the suit up to the date of decree or payment upon the total amount that may be found due to him after applying that rule (k).

Illustration

A lends Rs. 1,000 to B at interest at the rate of 25 per cent per annum. A then sues B to recover Rs. 2,500 of which Rs. 1,000 is for principal and Rs. 1,500 is for interest. A is not entitled to a decree for more than Rs. 2,000 but the Court may, under section 34 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, award interest on Rs. 2,000 at such rate as it thinks proper from the date of the suit up to the date of the decree and it may award further interest on the aggregate sum consisting of Rs. 2,000 plus the interest between date of suit and the date of decree at such rate as it thinks proper.

The rule of damdupat does not apply to interest recoverable in execution of a decree. The reason is that the rule ceases to operate after suit (l).

The principle of this section applies not only to a suit brought by a creditor, but to a suit for redemption brought by a mortgagor (debtor).

In a mortgage suit the relation of creditor and debtor subsists between the parties till the date of payment fixed under the preliminary decree. The operation of damdupat consequently is from the date of mortgage to the date fixed for payment in the preliminary decree. If on any intermediate date the limit imposed by the rule of damdupat is reached no further interest can be granted under O. 34, rule 11, because the interest cannot be said to be legally recoverable within the meaning of the rule (m).

600. Places in which the rule of damdupat applies.—The rule of damdupat applies in the Bombay State (n). It applies also in the town of Calcutta (o), but not in any other part of Bengal (p). The rule is not given effect to in the State of Rajasthan (q); or in any part of the Madras State (r); or the Uttar Pradesh (*r*1). The rule is applied by section 6 of the Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation to money debts in the Sonthal Parganas (s). It applies to Berar when the creditor and debtor are Hindus (t).

601. Persons entitled to claim benefit of the rule.—(1) According to the Calcutta High Court, the rule of damdupat applies only where both the original contracting parties are Hindus (u).

(2) According to the Bombay High Court all that is necessary for the application of the rule is that the original debtor should be a Hindu. The result is that the rule does not apply if the original debtor was a Mahomedan, though the debt might be subsequently transferred to a Hindu (v).

The rule does not apply if the original debtor was a Mahomedan, though the creditor might be a Hindu (w). But the rule does apply if the original debtor was a Hindu, though the creditor might be a Mahomedan (x).

---

(k) Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, section 34; Dhondshet v. Ravji (1898) 22 Bom. 86; Majmundar Hiralal v. Narsilal (1913) 37 Bom. 326, 40 I.A. 68, 73, 18 I.C. 909; Achyut v. Ramachandra (1925) 27 Bom. L.R. 492, 87 I.C. 719, ('25) A.B. 362; Hari Lall, in the matter of (1906) 33 Cal. 1269, 1276; Nanda Lal v. Dhirendra Nath (1913) 40 Cal. 710, 21 I.C. 974.

(l) Balkrishna v. Gopal (1875) 1 Bom. 73; Lall Behary v. Thacomoney (1896) 23 Cal. 899.

(m) Bapurao v. Anant (1946) Nag. 407.

(n) Narayan v. Satvaji (1872) 9 Bom. H.C. 83, 85.

(o) Nobin Chunder v. Romesh Chunder (1887) 14 Cal. 781.

(p) Het Narain v. Ram Dein (1883) 9 Cal. 871.

(q) Sheokaransingh v. Daulatram ('55) A. Raj. 201 (F.B.).

(r) Annaji v. Ragubai (1871) 6 Mad. H.C. 400.

(*r*1) Kamta Prasad v. Parbati (1958) 56 All. L. J. 920.

(s) Kunja Behari v. Tarapada (1919) 4 Pat. L.J. 49, 49 I.C. 374, ('19) A.P. 324.

(t) Bapurao v. Anant (Supra).

(u) Wooma v. Sreebarinath (1897) 1 C.W.N. (short notes) 178, Page cixxviii; cf. (1887) 14 Cal. 781, supra.

(v) Harilal v. Nagar (1897) 21 Bom. 38.

(w) Nanchand v. Bapusaheb (1879) 3 Bom. 131. See Dawood v. Vullubhdas (1894) 18 Bom. 227.

(x) Ali Saheb v. Shabji (1897) 21 Bom. 85.

Where there are two debtors, a Hindu and a non-Hindu, the rule applies so far as the Hindu debtor is concerned. But this does not prevent the non-Hindu debtor from claiming contribution from the former on the basis of the actual payment made by him to the creditor (y).

When the original debtor is a Hindu, and the interest is allowed to accumulate so that it exceeds the principal, and the debt is then transferred to a Mahomedan, the rule of damdupat will apply so long as the debtor was a Hindu, but it will cease to operate from the date the debt was assigned to the Mahomedan (z). [ill. (2)].

Illustrations

(1) A Mahomedan, M borrows, Rs. 61 at interest from a Hindu, X, and mortgages his property to X as a security for the loan. M then sells his equity of redemption to a Hindu, H, X sues H to recover Rs. 270, Rs. 61 being principal and Rs. 209 for interest. H contends that he and X being Hindus, the rule of damdupat applies, and that X is not entitled to more than Rs. 61 for interest. The rule of damdupat does not apply, for the original debtor was a Mahomedan, and X is entitled to a decree for Rs. 270; Harilal v. Nagar (1897) 21 Bom. 38.

(2) A Hindu, H, borrows Rs. 150 at interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum from a Mahomedan, X, on a mortgage of his immovable property. H then sells his equity of redemption to a Mahomedan, M. X sues M to recover Rs. 750, Rs. 150 being principal and Rs. 600 for interest from the date of the mortgage up to the date of the suit. X is entitled to Rs. 300 (i.e., double the principal Rs. 150) and the interest thereon at the aforesaid rate from the date of the sale to M. If H had not sold his equity of redemption to M, and the suit had been brought against H, X would not have been entitled to more than Rs. 300: Ali Saheb v. Shabji (1897) 21 Bom. 85.

602. To what transactions the rule applies.—(1) The rule of damdupat applies not only to unsecured loans, but to loans secured by a pledge of movable property and those secured by a mortgage of immovable property (a).

(2) In the case of a mortgage with possession a distinction has to be made between two classes of cases, namely—

(a) where the amount of the annual rents and profits is fixed beforehand by the parties and it is agreed between the parties that the mortgagee is to receive that amount in lieu of interest or a part thereof, irrespective of the actual amount of rents that may be recovered by the mortgagee;

(b) where no such amount is fixed, and there is no such agreement between the parties, so that the mortgagee is under a liability to account to the mortgagor for the rents and profits received by him from the mortgaged property.

In the first case no account is to be taken of the rents and profits, and all that has to be done is to ascertain what amount is due to the mortgagee for principal and interest as in the case of a simple loan. To such a case the rule of damdupat applies as it does in the case of an ordinary loan (b).

In the second case the mortgagee is under a liability to account for the rents and the profits received by him from the mortgaged property, and the

---

(y) Maha Maya Dasee v. Abdur Rahim (1937) 1 Cal. 450, 172 I.C. 731, ('37) A.C. 752.

(z) See Ali Saheb v. Shabji (1897) 21 Bom. 85.

(a) Nathubhai v. Mulchand (1868) 5 Bom. H.C.A.C. 196, 198; Narayan v. Satraji (1872) 9 Bom. H.C. 83.

(b) Sundarabai v. Jayavant (1900) 24 Bom. 114; Nathubhai v. Mulchand (1868) 5 Bom. H.C.A.C. 196; Vithal v. Daud (1869) 6 Bom. H.C.A.C. 90; Narayan v. Satraji (1872) 9 Bom. H.C. 83; Ali Saheb v. Shabji (1897) 21 Bom. 85, 87; Ganpat v. Adarji (1879) 3 Bom. 312.

rule of damdupat does not apply (c). "As the mortgagee is to be charged with rents and profits it would not be just to stop his interest and consequently the rule of [damdupat] cannot be applied" (d).

Illustrations

(1) A borrows Rs. 1,000 from B at interest at the rate of 20 per cent per annum. As a security for the loan A mortgages his house to B and puts B in possession of the house. At the date of the mortgage the house is occupied by A's tenants. It is agreed between A and B that B should receive the rents from the tenants, that the yearly rents should be taken at Rs. 150, and that A should pay to B every year Rs. 50, being the balance of interest on Rs. 1,000 [Rs. 200 interest — Rs. 150 rent = Rs. 50]. B sues A to recover Rs. 2,200 being Rs. 1,000 for principal and Rs. 1,200 for interest. Is B entitled to recover Rs. 1,200 for interest? No, for as no accounts are to be rendered by B, the rule of damdupat applies, and B is therefore entitled to Rs. 1,000 only for interest. The decree will therefore be for Rs. 1,000 + Rs. 1,000 = Rs. 2,000.

(2) The facts are the same as in ill. (1), except that there is no agreement between A and B that B should take the rents in lieu of interest. In such a case, if B sued A on the mortgage, B would be liable to account for the rents received by him and the rule of damdupat would not therefore apply. The result is that if it be found on the taking of accounts that the amount due to B, after giving credit to A for the rents, is Rs. 2,300, B will be entitled to a decree for Rs. 2,300, and not merely for Rs. 2,000 as in ill. (1).

603. Mortgages executed after the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras that the rule of damdupat does not apply to mortgages executed after the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, came into force (e). A different view has been taken by the High Courts of Bombay (f), Calcutta (g) and Nagpur (h). In any case the effect of the rule is exhausted when the matter passes into the domain of judgment. Hence in a suit on mortgage, the Court can allow interest after the date fixed for redemption even though the amount which the plaintiff may ultimately recover in execution may exceed damdupat (l).

It has been stated above in section 5 that the rule of damdupat is not in force in the Madras State. In the case cited above, the High Court of Madras held that even assuming that rule to be in force in the town of Madras, it did not apply to mortgages executed after the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, came into force, the reason given being that under sections 86 and 88 of that Act a mortgagee was entitled to the principal and interest in arrears at the contract rate, even if it exceeded the principal. Section 86 of that Act provided for a decree inter alia for what was due to the mortgagee for "principal and interest on the mortgage." See now the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, O. 34 rr. 2 and 4.

---

(c) Gopal v. Gangaram (1896) 20 Bom. 72, [F.B.]; Dhondshet v. Ravji (1898) 22 Bom. 86.

(d) Per Couch, C.J., in Nathubhai v. Mulchand (1868) 5 Bom. H.C.A.C. 196, 199.

(e) Madhwa v. Venkatramanjulu (1903) 26 Mad. 662.

(f) Jeewanbai v. Manordas (1911) 35 Bom. 199, 8 I.C. 649.

(g) Kunja Lal v. Narsamba (1915) 42 Cal. 826, 31 I.C. 6, ('16) A.C. 542.

(h) Bapurao v. Anant (1946) Nag. 407.

(i) Devidas v. Yeotmal Central Bank ('56) A.N. 239.

CHAPTER XXIX

BENAMI TRANSACTIONS

604. Benami transaction.—Where a person buys property with his own money, but in the name of another person or buys property in his own name, but subsequently transfers it into the name of another person, without any intention in either case to benefit such other person, the transaction is called "benami", and the person in whose name the transaction is effected is called "benamidar".

The benami system in India is not a speciality of Hindu law. Within its legitimate scope it accords with the ideas and habits of the people and the Court recognises and gives effect to benami transactions on the principle that recognition should be given to the real and not the nominal title to property unless to do so would be contrary to any provisions or policy of law. Benami transactions among Mahomedans are more commonly known as furzee. The word benami is a Persian compound word, made up of be which means without and nam which means name. It means literally without a name, and denotes a transaction effected by a person without using his own name, but in the name of another. The practice of putting property into a false name, that is, the name of a person other than the real owner, is not uncommon. This practice has arisen partly from superstition—some persons and some names being considered as lucky, and others as unlucky. Partly also the practice is due to a desire to conceal family affairs from public observations. But many transactions originate in fraud; and many of them which did not so originate are made use of for a fraudulent purpose; more especially for the purpose of keeping out creditors who are told when they come to execute a decree, that the property belongs to the fictitious owner, and cannot be seized (j).

Benami transactions are not confined solely to purchases by one person in the name of another. Thus a person may take a lease of property in the name of another, or he may buy property in his own name and subsequently convey or mortgage it to another for a fictitious consideration.

TRANSACTIONS

605. Effect given to real title.—Where a transaction is once made out to be benami, effect will be given to the real and not to the nominal title, unless the result of doing so would be—

(i) to violate the provisions of a statute [§ 606 below]; or

(ii) to defeat the rights of innocent transferees for value from the benamidar [§ 607 below]; or

(iii) the object of the benami transaction was to defraud the creditors of the real owner, and that object has been accomplished [§ 608 below]; or

(iv) the transaction is against public policy [§ 609 below].

Effect given to real title.—There is no law which prohibits benami transactions: in other words, it is not an offence or a crime for A to buy property in the name of B. Therefore, where A has bought property in the name of B, and B subsequently chooses to say that he is the real owner, it is quite competent to A to bring a suit against B to establish his title and to recover possession of the property from B, and if it is proved that the purchase-money came out of A's funds the Court will pass a decree declaring that A is the real owner, and direct B to deliver possession of the property to A (k). Similarly, if property is bought by A in B's name, and C, a creditor of A, subsequently obtains a

---

(j) Markby's "Hindu and Mahomedan Law," p. 103.

(k) Thukrain v. Government (1871) 14 M.I.A. 112.

decree against A, it is competent to C to show that the property really belongs to A, and if this fact is proved, the property may be attached and sold to satisfy C's decree (l).

Resulting trusts and advancement of wife and children.—It is important to note that the law of benami is in no sense a branch of Hindu law. It is merely an application of the equitable rule that where there is a purchase by A in the name of B, there is a resulting trust of the whole to A. In this respect the general rule of the Indian law, which is laid down in the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, sec. 82 differs but little, if at all, from the general rule of English law on the subject. In both systems of law, the fact to be first determined is from what source the money came with which the purchase-money was paid. But in England there is an exception when a purchase is made by a person in the name of his child or wife, though with his own money. In such a case, the transaction is presumed to have been made by way of advancement or gift to the child or wife, and the burden of proving that there was no advancement or gift lies on the person who so alleges it. But this exception is not recognised in India. In this country, where a purchase is made by a person with his own money—it is prima facie assumed to be for his benefit, whether it is made in the name of a child (m), wife (n), or a stranger, and there is no presumption in favour of an advancement or gift such as there is in the English law. The burden therefore of proving an advancement or gift lies on the person alleging that there was an advancement or gift. In Gopeekrist v. Gungapersaud (o), their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "Benami purchases in the names of children, without any intention of advancement, are frequent in India." But this rule of Indian law does not apply to transactions where both parties are English, not even if they were born in India (p), though the transactions may have taken place in India and the property may be situated in India (q). The general rule in India in the absence of all other relevant circumstances in thus stated by Lord Campbell in Dhurm Das Pandey v. Mussumat Shama Soondri Dibiah (r): "The criterion in these cases in India is to consider from what source the money came with which the purchase-money is paid."

In cases of this kind it is material to enquire who enjoyed the income of the property, whether the real owner or the person in whose name the property was bought. Thus where property was purchased by A with his money in the name of B, and the question arose whether the purchase was benami as alleged by A or intended to be a gift for B in return for his services as alleged by B, their Lordships of the Privy Council held that evidence of B's possession for nine and a half years without being called on by A to account for the rents, and of B's performance of valuable services sufficient to establish a claim on A's generosity, was decisive in favour of a gift (s). It is also material in cases of this kind to inquire into the position of the parties and their relation to one another and the motives which could govern their actions. Thus where property was purchased by a Mahomedan lady in her daughter's name and the transfer was impeached by her son after death as benami, their Lordships held that the resulting inference that it was a benami transaction was rebutted by the evidence of gift, and by the proved intention of mother to exclude the son with whom she was on hostile terms from inheritance (t).

Deposit by husband of his own money in bank in the names of himself and his wife.—The deposit by a Hindu of his own money in a bank in the joint names of himself and wife, and on the terms that it is to be payable to either or the survivor does not in his death constitute a gift by him to his wife. There is a resulting trust in his favour in the absence of proof of a contrary intention, there being in India no presumption of an intended advancement in favour of a wife (u).

---

(l) Musadee Mahomed v. Meerza Ally (1854) 6 M.I.A. 27; Gopi Wasudev v. Markande (1879) 3 Bom. 30; Abdul Hye v. Mir Mahommed (1884) 10 Cal. 616, 11 I.A. 10.

(m) Johnston v. Gopal Singh (1931) 12 Lah. 546, 557, 133 I.C. 628, ('31) A.L. 419; Gopal v. Kesheosa (1936) Nag. 65, 165 I.C. 350, ('36) A.N. 185; Jetharam v. Hazarimal ('52) A. Raj. 28.

(n) Dharani Kant v. Kristo Kumari (1886) 13 Cal. 181; Mst. Thakro v. Ganga Pershad (1888) 15 I.A. 29, 10 All. 197.

(o) (1854) 6 M.I.A. 53, at p. 79; Moulvi Sayyued v. Mussumat Bebee (1869) 13 M.I.A. 232, 247; Bissesur v. Luchmessur (1880) 5 Cal. L.R. 477, 6 I.A. 233, (1886) 13 Cal. 181, 13 I.A. 70, supra [purchase in wife's name]; Chunder Nath v. Kristo Komul (1871) 15 W.R. 357.

(p) Kerwick v. Kerwick (1920) 47 I.A. 275, 48 Cal. 260, 57 I.C. 834, ('21) A.P.C. 56 [purchase by husband of land in Rangoon and transferred into wife's name—advancement disapproved].

(q) Panton v. Administrator-General (1926) 28 Bom. L.R. 11, 93 I.C. 161, ('26) A. Journal 158 [no advancement].

(r) (1843) 3 M.I.A. 229; Ram Narain v. Muhammad (1899) 26 I.A. 38, 39, 26 Cal. 227, 230; De Silva v. De Silva (1903) 5 Bom. L.R. 784; Motivahu v. Purshotum (1904) 6 Bom. L.R. 975.

(s) (1899) 26 I.A. 38, 26 Cal. 227, supra.

(t) Ismail v. Hafiz Boo (1906) 33 I.A. 86, 33 Cal. 773.

(u) Guran Ditta v. Ram Ditta (1928) 55 I.A. 235, 55 Cal. 944, 109 I.C. 723, ('28) A.P.C. 172; Shambhunath Shivpuri v. Pushkaranath, 71 I.A. 197; Shiva Kumari v. Uday Pratap (1947) All. 642; Nagarajamma v. State Bank of India ('62) A.A.P. 260.

Deposit by father in the names of himself and his son.—See the undermentioned case (*u*1).

Burden of proof.—Where A purchases property in the name of B, and subsequently sues B for a declaration that he is the real owner of the property, the burden lies heavily on him to show that he is the real owner. The reason is that what A has really to do in such a case is to show that the apparent state of things is not the real state of things, in other words, that the person who appears as the owner on the face of the deed is not the real owner. The Courts should look with jealousy on benami transactions, and they should require from him a strict proof of his title before holding that B is merely a benamidar. And although there may be with respect to benami transactions, circumstances which might create suspicion and doubt as to the truth of the case of the benamidar, yet the Courts should not decide upon mere suspicion, but upon legal grounds established by evidence (v). When evidence on neither side is wholly convincing, and when the evidence given and withheld is open to adverse criticism, the Courts must rely on the surrounding circumstances, the position of the parties and their relation to one another, the motive which could govern their actions, and their subsequent conduct (w).

Ante-nuptial agreement.—When it is alleged that a purchase of property in India by an Indian out of his own money, but in the name of his wife, was made in pursuance of an ante-nuptial agreement, and that consequently it is not to be regarded as a benami transaction, the alleged ante-nuptial agreement, if oral, must be proved by the clearest and most satisfactory evidence of credible witnesses: it would be unwise to act upon oral evidence, unless there was contemporaneous written evidence to corroborate it (x).

We now proceed to note the cases in which the Courts have refused to give effect to the real title. They form the subject-matter of the next four sections.

606. Exception I: Sale under a decree of Court or for arrears of revenue.—Where a property is sold under a decree of Court or for arrears of revenue, and it is purchased benami and the benamidar is certified to be the purchaser the real purchaser cannot maintain a suit against the benamidar to establish his title to the property or to recover possession thereof from him. It is so provided by several statues.

Illustration

A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 5,000. In execution of the decree B's property is sold, and it is purchased by C in D's name. D then obtains a certificate of sale from the Court. C cannot sue D for a declaration that he was the real purchaser at the sale. The law is the same where property held by B is sold for arrears of revenue payable to Government, and it is bought by C in D's name.

See the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, sec. 66 (y); the Bengal Land Revenue Sale Act, 1859, sec. 36; United Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1901, sec. 178; the Madras Revenue Recovery Act, 1864, sec. 38.

The provisions of the above Acts do not affect the rights of third parties. Therefore in the case put above it is open to a creditor of C to sue C and D for a declaration that the property belongs to C, and that it is liable to satisfy his (C's) creditor's claims (z). Nor does the purchase made by a member of a joint Hindu family in his name, but with funds belonging to the family, come within the meaning of those Acts. Therefore it is open to the other members of the family to maintain a suit against him for a declaration that the purchase was made on behalf of the family (a).

---

(*u*1) Indranarayan v. Roop Narayan ('71) A.S.C. 1962.

(v) Sreemanchunder v. Gopaulchunder (1866) 11 M.I.A. 28; Nawab Azimut v. Hurdwaree Mul (1870) 13 M.I.A. 395; Facz Buksh v. Fukeerooden (1871) 14 M.I.A. 234; Uman Prashad v. Gandharp (1888) 15 Cal. 20, 14 I.A. 127; Prince Suleiman v. Nawab Mehndi (1898) 25 I.A. 15, 25 Cal. 473; Nirmal Chunder v. Mahommed (1899) 26 Cal. 11, 25 I.A. 225. Also see Radha Gobinda Roy v. Durgarani Dassi (1933) 1 Cal. 207.

(w) Dalip Singh v. Chaudhrain (1908) 35 I.A. 104, 30 All. 258; Sitamma v. Sitapathirao (1938) Mad. 220, 176 I.C. 535, ('38) A.M. 8.

(x) Sura Lakshmiah Chetty v. Kothandarama Pillai (1925) 52 I.A. 286, 48 Mad. 605, 88 I.C. 327, ('25) A.PC. 181.

(y) See Ganga Sahai v. Kesri (1915) 42 I.A. 177, 182, 37 All. 545, 30 I.C. 265, ('15) A.PC. 81.

(z) Kanizak v. Monohur (1886) 12 Cal. 204; Sublna Bibi v. Hara Lal (1894) 21 Cal. 519.

(a) Bodh Singh v. Gunesh Chunder (1874) 12 Beng. L.R. 317 [P.C.].

A Hindu son taking assignment of a decree against his father to safeguard his own interest is not a benamidar (*a*1).

607. Exception II: Transfer by benamidar for value.—Where a benamidar sells, mortgages or otherwise transfers for value property held benami by him without the knowledge of the real owner (b), the real owner is not entitled to have the transfer set aside, unless the transferee had notice actual or constructive that the transferor was merely a benamidar (c).

A buys certain property in the name of B. B then sells the property to C, and misappropriates the purchase-money. A sues B and C to have the sale set aside, alleging that he is the real owner of the property. The sale will not be set aside unless A shows that C has notice actual or constructive that B was not the real owner.

Constructive notice.—It is the duty of a purchaser not merely to ascertain in whose name the property stands, but also to ascertain who is in actual possession of the property at the time of the sale to him. If he fails to do so, and it turns out that the real owner, and not the benamidar, was in possession and receipt of the rents of the property, he will be deemed to have constructive notice of the fact that the benamidar was not the real owner. Thus if in the case put above, A was in possession, and C omitted to enquire as to who was in possession, A would be entitled to have the sale set aside (d).

Note in this connection the provisions of sec. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, which runs as follows:—"Where, with the consent, express or implied, of the persons interested in immovable property, a person is the ostensible owner of such property and transfers the same for consideration, the transfer shall not be voidable on the ground that the transferor was not authorized to make it: provided that the transferee, after taking reasonable care to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer, has acted in good faith."

608. Exception III: Fraud upon creditors.—Where property has been placed in a false name for the express purpose of defrauding creditors, and that purpose has actually been effected, the real owner is not entitled to recover back the property from the benamidar (e). But if the contemplated fraud is not effected, the real owner is entitled to get back the property from the benamidar (f).

A, who is indebted to several persons, executes a deed purporting to be a conveyance of his property to B for Rs. 30,000. No purchase-money is paid by B to A, and the object of the transaction is to defraud A's creditors. After some time A compounds with his creditors and pays them a composition of four annas in the rupee. A then sues B to recover back the property from B. Here the object of the fraud is effected, and the maxim applies, "In pari delicto potior est conditio possedentis", that is to say, "in equal fault the condition of the possessor is the more favourable." Both A and B are equally guilty of a confederacy to defraud A's creditors; but the possession being in B, the Court will not disturb him in his possession. In such a case the Court will say "Let the estate lie where it falls." But if A sues B to recover the property before the contemplated fraud is committed, the Court will not punish A merely because he at one time intended to defraud his creditors, and it will direct B to deliver the property to A. Where the purpose of the fraud is not effected, there is nothing to prevent the real owner from repudiating the entire transaction, removing all authority of his confederate to carry out the fraudulent scheme and recovering possession of the property (g).

---

(*a*1) Sangameswara v. Krishna ('60) A. Kerala 108.

(b) Sarju Parshad v. Bir Bhaddar (1893) 20 I.A. 108.

(c) Ramcoomar Koondoo v. Macqueen (1873) 11 Beng. L.R. 46, 18 I.A. Sup. Vol. 40; Mahomed Mozuffer v. Kishori Mohun (1895) 22 Cal. 909, 22 I.A. 129.

(d) Mancharji v. Kongseoo (1869) 6 Bom. H.C. O.C. 59; Vyankapacharya v. Yamanasami (1911) 35 Bom. 269, 10 I.C. 817; Imambandi v. Kamleswari (1887) 14 Cal. 109, 117, 13 I.A. 160, 165.

(e) Nawab Singh v. Daljit Singh (1936) 58 All. 842, 162 I.C. 958, ('36) A.A. 401.

(f) Petherpermal v. Muniandi (1908) 35 I.A. 98; Honapa v. Narsapa (1899) 23 Bom. 406; Raghavalu v. Adinarayana (1909) 32 Mad. 323, 2 I.C. 616; Jadu Nath v. Rup Lal (1906) 33 Cal. 967; Girdharlal v. Manikamma (1914) 38 Bom. 10, 20 I.C. 50, ('14) A.B. 283.

(g) (1908) 35 I.A. 98, 103, supra.

Note in this connection the provisions of sec. 84 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, which runs as follows:—"Where the owner of property transfers it to another for an illegal purpose and such purpose is not carried into execution . . . the transferee must hold the property for the benefit of the transferor." [Note—To transfer property for the purpose of defrauding creditors is to transfer it for an illegal purpose within the meaning of sec. 84 of the Trusts Act.]

Collusive decree.—Where a collusive decree is obtained by a benamidar against the real owner with the object of defrauding the latter's creditors, the decree is binding on the real owner even if no creditor has been defrauded. The reason is that where a person has suffered judgment to pass against him, the matter is then placed beyond his control. A buys a house in B's name with the object of protecting the property against the claims of his creditors, and occupies it as B's tenant. Subsequently B in collusion with A sues A to recover possession of the house from him, and obtains a decree ex-parte against A. A cannot impeach the decree on the ground that the object of the decree was to defraud his creditors. The result is that if B applies for execution of the decree the Court will order A to deliver possession of the property to B (h). But the decree may be challenged by A's creditors (i).

609. Exception IV: Transaction against public policy.—Where a purchase of property, which if made by a person in his own name, would be illegal, as being opposed to public policy, is made by him in the name of another person, the real purchaser is not entitled to recover the property from the benamidar (j).

In the case cited above, the Kanungo of a district, who was prohibited on penalty of dismissal from office from acquiring property in his own district, purchased property in the name of his brother's son. After the Kanungo's death his heirs sued his brother's son for recovery of the property. It was held that they were not entitled to recover the property.

610. Decree against benamidar.—In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it is to be presumed that a suit instituted by the benamidar has been instituted by him with the full authority of the real owner, and any decision come to in the suit is as much binding upon the real owner as if the suit had been brought by the real owner himself (k).

Illustration

A buys a house benami in B's name. C is in possession of the house at the date of purchase. B sues C to recover possession of the house, but the suit is dismissed. A alleging that he is the real owner, and that B was negligent on the conduct of the suit against C, sues C to recover possession. The Court finds that the suit by B against C was instituted with the knowledge of A. A is, therefore, bound by the decree in that suit as if he himself had instituted the suit, and the suit is barred as res judicata: Shangara v. Krishnan (1892) 15 Mad. 267.

611. Right of benamidar to sue.—A benamidar fully represents the true owner, and so far as the outside world is concerned can maintain all suits whether arising out of contract or out of title to immovable property (l).

---

(h) Chenvirappa v. Puttappa (1887) 11 Bom. 708; Venkatramanna v. Viramma (1887) 10 Mad. 17.

(i) Gopi v. Markande (1879) 3 Bom. 30.

(j) Sheo Narain v. Mata Prasad (1905) 27 All. 73.

(k) Gopi Nath v. Bhagwat (1884) 10 Cal. 697, 705; Shangara v. Krishnan (1892) 15 Mad. 267; Baroda Kanta v. Chunder Kanta (1902) 29 Cal. 682; Kaniz v. Wali Ullah (1908) 30 All. 30; Ravji v. Mahadev (1898) 22 Bom. 672.

(l) Gur Narayan v. Sheo Lal Singh (1919) 46 I.A. 1, 46 Cal. 566, 49 I.C. 1, ('18) A.PC. 140 [benami purchase]; Vaitheswara v. Srinivasa (1919) 42 Mad. 348, 50 I.C. 309, ('19) A.M. 524 [benami mortgage], [F.B.]; Ramasamy Chettiar v. Adaikammai ('60) A.M. 341.

Suits arising out of contract.—A benamidar can maintain a suit on a contract entered into in his name. Thus if A lends money to B on a mortgage of B's property and the mortgage is taken in C's name, C may sue B on the mortgage in his own name (m). Similarly if A lends money to B on a promissory note, but the note is taken in C's name, C is the proper person to sue upon it (n). A can sue B only if he ensures that B is protected from further liability to C. This object is attained if C is made a party to the suit, appears in Court and states that he does not claim on the note (o).

As regards suits for recovery of land upon title, there was a conflict of decisions. On the one hand, it was held by the High Courts of Calcutta (p) and Madras (q) that a benamidar, as such, was not entitled to maintain a suit in his name for possession of land of which he was merely a benamidar. On the other hand, it was held by the High Courts of Allahabad (r) and Bombay (s), that he was entitled to maintain such suit. The Judicial Committee held that a benamidar can sue in his own name to recover immovable property vested in him as benamidar. He has the title and right of possession which the real owner has given him, which is apparently enough to support the suit (t).

Illustration

A purchases a house benami in B's name. At the date of the purchase C is in possession of the house. B sues C for possession of the house. The defence is that B is not the real owner. B, though a mere benamidar, is entitled to maintain the suit. It is open to A to apply to be joined in the suit. It is also open to C to apply to have A joined in the suit.

---

(m) Bhola v. Ram Lall (1897) 24 Cal. 34; Sachitananda v. Baloram (1897) 24 Cal. 644 [suit for foreclosure]; Yad Ram v. Umrao Singh (1899) 21 All. 380; Kamta Prasad v. Indomati (1915) 37 All. 414, 417-418, 29 I.C. 593, ('15) A.A. 264.

(n) Ramanuja v. Sadagopa (1905) 28 Mad. 205; Subba Narayana v. Ramaswami (1907) 30 Mad. 88, on app. from 28 Mad. 244.

(o) Sree Krishna Jana v. Seeta Nath Bera (1938) 1 Cal. 450, ('37) A.C. 753.

(p) Hari Gobind v. Akhoy Kumar (1889) 16 Cal. 36[illegible]; Issur Chandra v. Gopal Chandra (1898) 25 Cal 98; Baroda Sundari v. Dino Bandhu (1898) 25 Cal. 874; Mohendra Nath v. Kali Proshad (1903) 30 Cal. 265; Atrabannesa v. Safatullah (1916) 43 Cal. 504, 31 I.C. 189, ('16) A.C. 645 [suit for partition].

(q) Kuthaperumal v. Secretary of State for India (1907) 30 Mad. 245.

(r) Nand Kishore v. Ahmad Ata (1896) 18 All. 69; (1899) 21 All. 380, supra; Bachcha v. Gajadhar Lal (1906) 28 All. 44.

(s) Ravji v. Mahadev (1898) 22 Bom. 672; Dagdu v. Balvant (1898) 22 Bom. 820.

(t) Gur Narain v. Sheo Lal Singh (1919) 46 I.A. 1, 46 Cal. 566, 49 I.C. 1, ('18) A.PC. 140.

CHAPTER XXX

JAINS

1. Jain tenets and Jain law

612. Jains and their tenets.—Jainism flourished several centuries before Christ. The Jain religion refers to a number of Tirthankars the last of whom was Maha Veera, who was a contemporary of Buddha and died in about 527 B.C. Jainism rejects the authority of the Vedas which form the bedrock of Hinduism and denies the efficacy of various ceremonies which Hindus consider essential. The Jains are numerous in the southern parts of India and Canara and especially in Gujarat, Mewar and Marwar.

Amongst them there is no belief that a son, either by birth or adoption, confers spiritual benefit on the father. They also differ from the Brahminical Hindus in their conduct towards the dead, omitting all obsequies after the corpse is burnt or buried (u). There are, however, among them castes which still observe Hindu customs, and perform the monthly, six-monthly and anniversary ceremonies of the dead. In cases such as these, the right to perform the ceremonies is governed by the ordinary Hindu law, that is to say, the son of the deceased has the preferential right to perform the ceremonies, and if there be no son (which term includes grandson and great-grandson), it is duty of the widow to get them performed provided the husband was divided at his death and the widow succeeds to his estate as his heir (v).

The Jains agree with the Hindus in other points such as division into castes. This exists in full force in the south and west of India, and can only be said to be dormant in the north-east. A Jain converted into orthodox faith returns to the caste from which he traced his first descent (w). Jains are mostly of Vaishya origin and they themselves have numerous divisions of their own of which the principal ones are (1) Porwad, (2) Oswal, (3) Agarwal and (4) Khandewal (x).

613. Law applicable to Jains.—It is too late in the day to contend that Jains are not included in the term 'Hindus'. The Jains are governed by all the incidents relating to the Hindu Joint Family, as was very recently held by the Supreme Court (*y*1). The ordinary Hindu law is to be applied to Jains, in the absence of proof of special customs and usages varying that law. Those customs and usages must be proved by evidence, as other special customs and usages varying the general law should be proved (ss. 16-20), and in the absence of proof the ordinary law must prevail (z). There is, however, (u) Bhagvandas v. Rajmal (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 241, 246-249.

---

(v) Sundarji v. Dahibai (1905) 29 Bom. 316.

(w) Ambabai v. Govind (1899) 23 Bom. 257.

(x) Ambabai v. Govind, supra.

(*y*1) Commissioner of Wealth Tax v. Champa Kumari ('72) A.S.C. 2119; (1972) 1 Supreme Court Cases 508.

(z) Munnalal v. Rajkumar ('62) A.S.C. 1493, 1497; Chotay Lall v. Chunnoo Lall (1879) 6 I.A. 15, 22 W.R. 496; Sheo Singh Rai v. Mussmut Dakho (1878) 5 I.A. 87, 1 All. 688; Lala Rup Chand v. Jambu Prasad (1910) 37 I.A. 93, 103-104, 32 All. 247, 6 I.C. 272; Bulagan v. Ratan Lal (1928) 26 All. L.J. 1196, 110 I.C. 546, ('28) A.A. 656, (1927) 50 Mad. 228, 99 I.C. 503, ('27) A.M. 228 supra; Jaiwanti v. Anandi Devi (1938) All. 196, 173 I.C. 356, ('38) A.A. 62; Pemraj v. Chand

nothing to limit the scope of the inquiry to the particular locality in which the persons setting up the custom reside. Judicial decisions recognising the existence of a disputed custom among the Jains of one place are relevant as evidence of the existence of the same custom amongst the Jains of another place, unless it is shown that the customs are different; and oral evidence of the same kind are equally admissible (a). Where, however, a custom is negatived by a judicial decision in one place, e.g., Madras, the fact that among Jains in the other States such a custom has been upheld by Courts does not warrant a general presumption of the prevalence of the custom in the Madras State (b).

614. Jains in Bombay State.—In Bhagwandas v. Rajmal (c), Westroppe, C.J., said: "Hitherto, so far as we can discover, none but ordinary Hindu law has been ever administered either in this Island or in this Presidency to persons of the Jain sect."

2. Succession

615. Law of succession.—(1) Until a special custom to the contrary is established, the ordinary Hindu law governs succession amongst the Jains. The ordinary Hindu law is that of the three superior castes (d).

(2) The Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, applied to the Jains as well as all Hindus (e).

(3) The Hindu Succession Act, 1956, applies to all 'Hindus' which expression includes Jains.

616. Interest taken by Jain widow in her husband's estate.—(1) In the absence of a custom to the contrary, a Jain widow takes a limited interest in her husband's estate similar to the "widow's estate." A custom, however, to the contrary has been proved in several cases, and it has been held in cases from Meerut (f), Saharanpur (g), and Arrah in the district of Shahabad (h), that amongst Agarwala Jains the widow takes an absolute estate in the self-acquired property of her husband, and that she has full power of alienation in respect of such property. But there is no custom which entitles her to an absolute estate in ancestral property left by her husband. In the latter case she takes only a widow's estate (i).

The Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, applied to Jain widows although in some provinces, where Jain widows held absolute interest in husband's property by special custom, it operated to their detriment by recognizing in their favour only a limited interest (j).

---

Kunwar (1947) 74 I.A. 254, (1947) All. 748, ('48) A.PC. 60; Milapchand v. Gulabchand ('57) A.M.B. 19.

(a) Harnabh Pershad v. Mandil Dass (1900) 27 Cal. 379, 391.

(b) Gettappa v. Eramma (1927) 50 Mad. 228, 237-238, 99 I.C. 503, ('27) A.M. 228.

(c) (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 241, 256; Amava v. Mahadgauda (1898) 22 Bom. 416.

(d) Ambabai v. Govind (1899) 23 Bom. 257; Mt. Lado v. Banarsi Das (1933) 14 Lah. 95, 139 I.C. 721, ('32) A.L. 546 [case from Delhi].

(e) Panalal v. Sitabai ('53) A.N. 70, (1954) Nag. 30.

(f) Sheo Singh Rai v. Mussumut Dakho (1878) 5 I.A. 87, 1 All. 688.

(g) Shimbhu Nath v. Gayan Chand (1894) 16 All. 379.

(h) (1900) 27 Cal. 379, supra.

(i) Phool Chand v. Gopal Lal ('67) A.S.C. 1470; Pahar Singh v. Shamsher Jang (1931) 29 All. L.J. 314, 133 I.C. 785, ('31) A.A. 695; Nekram Singh v. Sriniwas (1926) 24 All. L.J. 751, 96 I.C. 639, ('26) AA. 586.

(f) See f.n. (e) above.

In Bombay it has been held that there is no custom among the Dasha Shrimali Shwetambar Jains of Khandesh under which a widow takes an absolute interest in her husband's estate or a mother in her son's estate (k). These females in that community take only a "woman's estate."

616A. Succession to stridhana.—(1) According to the custom and usages of the Agarwala community, the son is entitled to succeed to his mother's stridhana (l).

(2) In matters of succession and inheritance Jains are now governed by the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

3. Adoption

Note.—The law on the subject of adoptions has now been modified and amended by the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. The rules stated in the following paragraphs must be read in the context of the provisions of that enactment.

617. Adoption secular in character.—The Agarwala Jains do not believe that a son whether by birth or adoption, confers any spiritual benefit on the father; the adoption, therefore, is entirely secular in character (m).

618. Adoption by widow.—The custom prevails among all Jains, except in Madras and the Punjab, that a sonless widow can adopt a son to her husband without his authority or the consent of his sapindas and the onus now lies upon those who deny the custom (*m*1). In Munnalal v. Rajkumar (*m*2) the Supreme Court pointed out that this custom has become a part of the law applicable to Jains in India (except in Madras and the Punjab) by a long and uninterrupted course of acceptance and held that it governed Digambar Jains of the Porwal sect residing in Madhya Pradesh.

There is no such custom in the Madras State (*m*3).

In the Punjab the law of adoption is complicated by the local customs of the province (*m*4).

A Jain widow in Bombay can adopt without her husband's authority (*m*5). Amongst the Agarwala Banias of the Sarogi sect a sonless widow may by custom adopt without the permission of her husband or the consent of her husband's sapindas (n). If the family is joint, he becomes a coparcener (§ 472) (o).

---

(k) Bhikabai v. Manilal (1930) 54 Bom. 780, 128 I.C. 628, ('30) A.B. 517.

(l) Hariram v. Madan Gopal (1928) 33 C.W.N. 493, 114 I.C. 565, ('29) A.PC. 77.

(m) Dhanraj v. Soni Bai (1925) 52 I.A. 231, 242, 52 Cal. 482, 87 I.C. 357, ('25) A.P.C. 118 [a case from Amraoti in the C.P.]. Also see Shuganchand v. Prakash Chand ('67) A.S.C. 506; Mst. Gulab v. Devilal ('51) A. Raj. 136.

(*m*1) Pemraj v. Chand Kunwar (1947) 74 I.A. 254, (1947) All. 748, ('48) A.P.C. 60; Mst. Gigi v. Mst. Panna ('56) Assam 100; Laxmibai v. Pushpabai ('53) A.M.B. 193.

(*m*2) ('62) A.S.C. 1493, 1497.

(*m*3) Peria Ammani v. Krishnasami (1893) 16 Mad. 182; Gateppa v. Eramma (1927) 50 Mad. 228, 99 I.C. 503, ('27) A.M. 228.

(*m*4) Pemraj v. Chand Kunwar supra.

(*m*5) Yamashetti Bhaushetti v. Ashok Bhomshetti (1940) Bom. 819, 191 I.C. 488, ('40) A.B. 391; Suganchand Bhikamchand v. Mangibai Gulabchand (1942) Bom. 467, 201 I.C. 759, ('42) A.B. 185.

(n) Sheo Singh Rai v. Mussamut Dakho (1878) 5 I.A. 87, 1 All. 688; Manik Chand v. Jagat Settani (1890) 17 Cal. 518; Lakhmi Chand v. Gatto (1886) 8 All. 319; Harnabh Pershad v. Mandil Dass (1900) 27 Cal. 379; Manohar Lal v. Banarsi Das (1907) 29 All. 495; Asharfi v. Rup Chand (1908) 30 All. 197; Banarsi Das v. Sumat Prasad (1936) 58 All. 1019, 164 I.C. 1047, ('36) A.A. 641.

(o) Sundar Lal v. Baldeo Singh (1933) 14 Lah. 78, 138 I.C. 151, ('32) A.L. 426.

619. Second adoption by widow.—As under the Hindu law, so among Jains, a Jain widow has power after the death of an adopted son to make a second adoption (t).

620. Age of boy to be adopted: adoption of married man.—The Agarwala Jains belong to the twice-born classes, and by the general Hindu law applicable thereto a boy cannot be adopted after his marriage, except in the case of persons governed by special custom duly proved. In a case from Saharanpur it was held by the Courts in India, that according to the custom of which evidence was given in the case there was no restriction of age or marriage, and that a married man could be adopted. This decision was confirmed by the Privy Council on appeal, but their Lordships observed that having regard to the fact that the custom alleged was very wide and the evidence was limited to a comparatively small number of centres of Jain population, the case should not be taken as a satisfactory precedent if in any future instance further evidence regarding the alleged custom should be forthcoming (u). In a later case (v), it was held by the Privy Council that in the Sitambari sect of Jains the adopted son may at the time of his adoption be a grown up and married man. The High Court of Allahabad has also held that among Jains a married man may lawfully be adopted (w). In Dhanraj v. Soni Bai (x) the parties belonged to the caste or sect of Agarwalas, who, as their Lordships of the Privy Council observed, generally adhere to Jainism and repudiate the Brahminical doctrines as to obsequial ceremonies, shraddhas and offerings of oblations for the salvation of the soul of the deceased, and do not believe that a son either by birth or by adoption confers spiritual benefit on the father. Their Lordships further observed that among these people the qualifying age of adoption extends to the thirty-second year.

621. Adoption of orphan.—Under the Hindu law it is essential to the validity of an adoption that the child should be "given" to the adopter by the father, or if he be dead, by the mother. No other person has this right, nor can such right be delegated to any other person. Consequently a boy who has lost both his parents cannot be adopted. This rule applies also to the Agarwala Banias of the Sarogi sect (y).

In a Bombay case where the question arose whether there was a custom of adopting an orphan among Jains in Western India, it was held that the evidence given in the case was sufficient as between the parties to the suit and those claiming through and under them to entitle the Court to say that there was such a custom (z).

622. Adoption of daughter's son.—A daughter's son may be adopted amongst the Agarwala Banias of the Sarogi sect (a).

---

(t) (1886) 8 All. 319, supra.

(u) Lala Rup Chand v. Jambu Prasad (1910) 37 I.A. 93, 32 All. 247, 6 I.C. 272.

(v) Sheokuarbai v. Jeoraj (1920) 25 C.W.N. 273 [P.C.], 61 I.C. 481, ('20) A.P.C. 77.

(w) Manohar Lal v. Banarsi Das (1907) 29 All. 495.

(x) Dhanraj v. Soni Bai (1925) 52 I.A. 231, 242, 52 Cal. 482, 87 I.C. 357, ('25) A.P.C. 118 [a case from Amraoti in the C.P.].

(y) (1925) 52 I.A. 231, 236, 52 Cal. 482, 87 I.C. 357, ('25) A.P.C. 118, supra; Bhagvandas v. Rajmal (1873) 10 Bom. H.C. 241.

(z) Parshottam v. Venichand (1921) 45 Bom. 754, 61 I.C. 492, ('21) A.B. 147.

(a) Sheo Singh Rai v. Mussamut Dakho (1878) 5 I.A. 87, 1 All. 688.

623. Adoption of sister's son.—Under Jain law the adoption of a sister's son is valid (b).

624. Ceremonies incidental to adoption.—Among Agarwala Jains the only ceremony necessary for an adoption is the giving and receiving of the boy in adoption. It is not necessary that the boy should be placed on the lap of the widow (c).

Among Agarwala Banias of the Sarogi sect the practice has been at the time of adoption to tie a turban round the head of the boy who is being adopted in the presence of the principal men of the community (the punchas) and give them a feast (d).

Amongst the Agarwala Banias of Zira (in the Punjab), the general rules of Hindu law as to adoption do not apply, and by the custom applicable to them an unequivocal declaration by the adopted father that a boy has been adopted and the subsequent treatment of that boy as the adopted son is sufficient to constitute a valid adoption (e).

There is no general law relating to the ceremonies necessary for a valid adoption among the Jains. The decided cases show that among certain sects of Jains adoption is a temporal arrangement and there is no religious ceremony (f).

624A. Adoption cannot be cancelled.—An adoption among the Jains like an adoption among other Hindus cannot be cancelled after it has been lawfully made (*f*1).

625. Share of adopted son.—As amongst orthodox Hindus so among Jains an adopted son is entitled in the Bombay State to one-fourth of the estate of the adoptive father if a natural son is born after the adoption (g).

---

(b) Hassan Ali v. Naga Mal (1876) 1 All. 288.

(c) (1920) 25 C.W.N. 273, 61 I.C. 481, ('21) A.P.C. 77, supra; (1925) 52 I.A. 231, 52 Cal. 482, 87 I.C. 357, ('25) A.P.C. 118, supra.

(d) Dhanraj v. Soni Bai (1925) 52 I.A. 231, 52 Cal. 482, 87 I.C. 357, ('25) A.P.C. 118.

(e) Chunan Lal v. Hari Chand (1913) 40 I.A. 156, 40 Cal. 879, 19 I.C. 669.

(f) Mst. Gulab v. Devi Lal ('51) A. Raj. 136.

(*f*1) Asa Bai v. Prabhu Lal ('60) A. Raj. 304; 10 Raj. 194.

(g) Rukhab v. Chunilal (1891) 16 Bom. 847.

CHAPTER XXXI

SHUDRAS

Note.—The rules now laid down in the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, and the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, do not draw any distinction between the regenerate castes and the Shudras. The effect of the changes in the law in so far as they affect the law previously applied in case of Shudras has been pointed out in the Notes under those enactments. The rules stated in this Chapter relate to the law prior to those enactments under decided cases.

626. Who are Shudras.—The Hindus are divided into two main divisions, namely, (1) the regenerate castes, and (2) the Shudras. Legally Shudras merely denotes one of the two main genera among Hindus. In Subrao v. Radha (h), Madgavkar, J., observed as follows: "The Sanskrit texts which lay down certain functions and duties of the four main castes in Hindu society as it might have existed many centuries ago, are not applicable to the present day when function and legal caste do not coincide. . . . The origin of caste is likewise not very relevant. It is generally agreed that castes arose, partly from the division of classes and functions and partly from the contest between the fairer Aryan with the darker Dravidian, as is sufficiently proved by the Sanskrit word varna or colour for caste. But colour, no more than function, is a test of caste, the Shudra of the North being often fairer than the Brahmin of the South. The tendency of occupations to be hereditary in a society which ceased to progress and the crystallization of the idea of caste and its abnormal growth over a large area such as India, are matters of sociological interest but throw little legal light on the question in issue. Even at the present day, the principle that caste springs from birth and cannot be changed is not unchallenged by ethnologists, who point out that miscegenation and the absorption of the aboriginal inhabitants into Hinduism have existed for centuries and have not stopped. This process has also been recognised by the Courts. It suffices to refer to cases such as Sahdeo Narain Deo v. Kusum Kumari (i) where such a process of absorption including the custom of adoption barely a century old was recognised by their Lordships of the Privy Council."

In a Calcutta case (j), the question was whether Kayesthas were of the Shudra caste and the Court applied four tests, (1) wearing the sacred thread; (2) ability to perform the homa; (3) the rule as to the period of impurity; and (4) the rules as to the incompetence of illegitimate sons to inheritance. By the application of these tests the Courts came to the conclusion that the Kayesthas were Hindus of the Shudra caste. In a Patna case (k), on the other hand, it was held that the mere non-observance of the orthodox practices could not take away the rights of a Kayestha in matters of inheritance, marriage and adoption and that the Kayesthas of Bihar belonged to the twice-born classes.

In Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundaram Ayyar (l) the Court accepted the principle that the consciousness of a community is a good test of caste. This accords with the view of Dr. Sarvadhikari (m) who says that "the only safe rule to follow in all cases where the determination of the caste of a person is in question, is to ascertain the customs and

---

(h) (1928) 52 Bom. 497, 501, ('28) A.B. 295.
(i) (1932) 50 I.A. 58, 2 Pat. 230, 71 I.C. 769, ('23) A.P.C. 21.
(j) Raj Coomar Lall v. Bissessur Dyal (1884) 10 Cal. 688, 695.
(k) Ishwari Prashad v. Rai Hari Prashad (1927) 6 Pat. 506, 106 I.C. 620, ('27) A.P. 145.
(l) (1925) 48 Mad. 1, 52, 93 I.C. 705, ('25) A.M. 497.
(m) Tagore Law Lectures (1880), 2nd Ed., p. 830.

usages by which the social conduct of the person given is regulated. The remarriage of widows, and equal rights and privileges of legitimate and illegitimate sons, and similar customs and usages, are marks by which a Shudra can be distinguished." In the Bombay case referred to above, Madgavkar, J., said: "The popular view lays down three tests: (1) the consciousness of the caste, (2) its customs and (3) the acceptance of that consciousness by the other castes." After referring to the above tests the learned judge said as follows: "Speaking for myself, I confess, therefore, that I am unable to discover any authoritative principle or test or text which could be applied to decide the present question. The difficulty is so great as perhaps to justify a doubt if the ordinary Courts of law are fitted to decide such questions, unless the Legislature is prepared to lay down general rules for application in cases such as the present. But failing such a principle or rule, the Courts, it seems to me, have at present necessarily to fall back upon the only possible test remaining, namely, the test of custom—a test not inconsistent either with the spirit of Hindu Jurisprudence, which itself lays down that custom is even more powerful than the Shastras or with the view of the British Courts on important matters such as succession, primogeniture and impartibility" (n).

627. Lingayats.—The Lingayats who are originally Hindus are a body of dissenters and the founder of their religion was one Basava who was born about A.D. 1100. They acknowledge only one God, Shiva, and reject the other two of the Hindu Triad. They revere the Vedas, but disregard the later commentaries on which the Brahmans rely. Their faith purports to be the primitive Hindu faith, cleared of all priestly mysticisms. They deny the supremacy of Brahmans, and pretend to be free from caste distinctions, though at the present day caste is in fact observed amongst them. They declare that there is no need for sacrifices, penances, pilgrimages or fasts. The cardinal principle of the faith is an unquestioning belief in the efficacy of the Lingam, the Image which has always been regarded as symbolical of the God Siva. Mysore, the Southern Mahratta country, and the Bellary District contain most of these Lingayats. Though the sacred thread is not worn by the Lingayats, a ceremony called Deeksha ought to be performed about their eighth year but as in the case of Upanayanam it is often performed much later. The sacred Mantra is whispered in the ear by their Guru and this ceremony corresponds to Upanayanam among the Brahmans. Lingayats whose only God is Shiva and who acknowledge the authority of the Vedas, are bound by Hindu law except in so far as it is modified by custom (o). As to Lingayats in Mysore see the under mentioned case (*o*1).

In the Madras case cited above the Lingayats of Madras were apparently not regarded as Shudras. In Bombay, however, it has been held that the Lingayats of the Bombay State are Shudras, and not Vaishyas (p).

628. Kayesthas.—The Kayesthas of Bengal are Shudras (q). As regards Kayesthas of Bihar it has been held that they belong to the three regenerate classes, and are not Shudras (r). Kayesthas: Karans in Orissa belong to the regenerate classes (*r*1).

---

(n) Subrao v. Radha (1928) 52 Bom. 497, 502, 113 I.C. 497, ('28) A.B. 295.

(o) Somasekhara v. Mahadeva (1930) 53 Mad. 297, 303-305, 130 I.C. 744, ('30) A.M. 496.

(*o*1) Sangannagouda v. Kalkangouda ('60) A. Mys. 147.

(p) Gopal v. Hanmant (1879) 3 Bom. 273; Fakirgauda v. Gangi (1898) 22 Bom. 277.

(q) Asita Mohan v. Nirode Mohan (1916) 20 C.W.N. 901, 904, 35 I.C. 127, ('17) A.C. 292; Biswanath v. Shorashibala (1921) 48 Cal. 926, 934, 66 I.C. 590, ('21) A.C. 48; Bhola Nath v. Emperor (1924) 51 Cal. 488, 492-493, 81 I.C. 709, ('24) A.C. 616.

(r) Ishwari Prashad v. Rai Hari Prashad (1927) 6 Pat. 506, 106 I.C. 620, ('27) A.P. 145; Rajendra v. Gopal (1928) 7 Pat. 245, 108 I.C. 545, ('29) A.P. 51.

(*r*1) Priyanath v. Indumati ('71) A. Orissa 211.

629. Rajas of Tanjore.—The Tanjore branch of the Marathas descended from Shivaji are Shudras, and not Kshatriyas (s).

630. Marathas of Bombay State.—There are three classes among the Marathas in the Bombay State namely, (1) the five families, (2) the ninety-six families, and (3) the rest. Of these first two classes are Kshatriyas; the last class consists of Shudras (t).

631. Converts to Hinduism.—Converts to Hinduism are regarded as Shudras (u).

632. Whether a Shudra can be a Sanyasi.—A Shudra, it has now been held in a decision of the Allahabad High Court (u), can become a Sanyasi (ascetic) and is not incompetent to become the Mahant of a Math. Even though as a result of custom, usage or practice of sacramental precept, Shudras might have been considered to be incapable of entering into the Order of Sanyasam at one time, such disqualification can now no longer be held to exist. In some earlier decisions it had been held that a Shudra cannot enter the Order of Yati or Sanyasi (ascetic). Hence a Shudra though he has renounced the world and purports to lead the life of an ascetic, is entitled to inherit to his relations, and on his death his estate will pass to his natural (as distinguished from religious) heirs (*v*1).

Ceremonies incidental to adoption

633. Ceremonies incidental to adoption.—Adoption amongst Shudras is a purely secular transaction, and no ceremonies are necessary in addition to the giving and taking the boy in adoption. The giving and taking ceremony, however, is absolutely necessary for the validity of an adoption (w).

634. Who may adopt:—

(1) Adoption by leper.—No ceremonies being necessary for an adoption among Shudras, even a leper may adopt (x).

(2) Adoption by woman under pollution and adoption by unchaste woman.—No ceremonies being necessary for an adoption among Shudras, a woman under pollution may adopt (y). So also an unchaste woman (z).

635. Who may be adopted:—

(1) Adoption of daughter's son, sister's son, sister's grandson, and mother's sister's son.—Among Shudras the adoption of a daughter's son,

---

(s) Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundaram (1925) 48 Mad. 1, 93 I.C. 705, ('25) A.M. 497.

(t) Subrao v. Radha (1928) 52 Bom. 497, 113 I.C. 497, ('28) A.B. 295.

(u) Muthusami v. Masilamani (1910) 33 Mad. 342, 5 I.C. 42.

(v) Krishna Singh v. Mathura Ahir ('72) A.A. 273.

(*v*1) Dharmapuram v. Virapandiyam (1899) 22 Mad. 302; Harish Chandra v. Atir Mahomed (1913) 40 Cal. 545, 18 I.C. 474; Somasundaram v. Vaithilinga (1917) 40 Mad. 846, 41 I.C. 546, ('18) A.M. 794.

(w) Indromoni v. Behari Lal (1880) 7 I.A. 24, 5 Cal. 770; Mahashoya v. Srimati Krishna (1880) 7 I.A. 250, 6 Cal. 381; Asita Mohan v. Nirode Mohan (1916) 20 C.W.N. 901, 35 I.C. 127, ('17) A.C. 292; Bhala v. Parbhu Hari (1878) 2 Bom. 67.

(x) Sukumari v. Ananta (1901) 28 Cal. 168.

(y) Thangathanni v. Ramu (1882) 5 Mad. 358.

(z) Basvant v. Mallappa (1921) 45 Bom. 459, 59 I.C. 800, ('21) A.B. 301.

sister's son (a), sister's grandson (b), and mother's sister's son (c), is valid.

(2) Adoption of boy of different Gotra.—There is nothing to prevent a Shudra from adopting a boy from a different gotra (d).

(3) Adoption of married man.—In Western India where the Mayukha is the prevailing authority, a Shudra may be adopted even after his marriage (e).

In other parts of India, however, where the authority of the Dattaka Chandrika is supreme, such an adoption is invalid (f).

636. Second adoption during lifetime of first adopted son.—A second adoption of a son, the first adopted son being alive, and retaining the character of a son, is illegal (g).

637. Son born after adoption.—In the case of Shudra in the Madras State (h) and Bengal (i), an adopted son on partition of the family property shares equally with a son or sons of the adoptive father born after the adoption (ii).

Marriage

638. Marriage as a samskara.—Among Shudras marriage is as much a samskara as among the twice-born classes. Therefore, a debt contracted for the marriage of a member of a joint Shudra family is debt contracted for a family purpose and is binding on the joint family property (j).

The daughter of a Shudra is entitled to be paid her marriage expenses out of the father's estate in the hands of her step-mother in the same way as she is entitled to be paid her maintenance; this rule applies as much to Shudras as to the twice-born classes (k).

639. Identity of caste.—It is a general principle of the Hindu law that a marriage between persons who do not belong to the same caste is invalid, unless it is sanctioned by custom. Therefore a marriage between a Thakur (Shudra) and a Brahmin woman is invalid (l). So also a marriage between a Shudra and a Vaishya woman. The offspring of such marriages are illegitimate (m). Marriages, however, between a Vaishya and a Kayestha (Sudra) woman are recognised by local custom in the District of Tipperah and are therefore valid (n).

---

(a) Raj Coomar v. Bissessur (1884) 10 Cal. 688; Lakshmappa v. Ramava (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 364; Kahandas v. Jivan (1923) 25 Bom. L.R. 510, 73 I.C. 1023, ('23) A.B. 427; Subrao v. Radha (1928) 52 Bom. 497, 113 I.C. 497, ('28) A.B. 295.

(b) Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundaram (1925) 48 Mad. 1, 93 I.C. 705, ('25) A.M. 497.

(c) Chinna v. Pedda (1876) 1 Mad. 62.

(d) Rungama v. Atchama (1846) 4 M.I.A. 1.

(e) Nathaji v. Hari (1871) 8 Bom. H.C. A.C. 67; (1875) 12 Bom. H.C. 364, supra.

(f) Lingayya Chetty v. Chengalammal (1925) 48 Mad. 407, 89 I.C. 923, ('25) A.M. 272, Somasekhara v. Mahadeva (1930) 53 Mad. 297, 133 I.C. 744, ('30) A.M. 496; Damodarji v. Collector of Banda (1910) 7 All. L.J. 927, 7 I.C. 418; Nanjegowda v. Channamma ('52) A. My. 40.

(g) (1846) 4 M.I.A. 1, supra.

(h) Perrazu v. Subbarayadu (1921) 48 I.A. 280, 44 Mad. 656, 61 I.C. 690, ('22) A.P.C. 71.

(i) Asita Mohan v. Nirode Mohan (1916) 20 C.W.N. 901, 35 I.C. 127, ('17) A.C. 292.

(ii) This question was considered in a very recent decision of the Supreme Court: Guramma v. Mallappa (1964) A.S.C. 510.

(j) Sundrabai v. Shivnarayana (1908) 32 Bom. 81; Kameswara v. Veeracharlu (1911) 34 Mad. 422, 8 I.C. 195.

(k) Bapayya v. Rukhamma (1909) 19 Mad. L.J. 666, 4 I.C. 1069.

(l) Sespuri v. Dwarka Prasad (1912) 10 All. L.J. 181, 16 I.C. 222.

(m) Munni Lal v. Shiama (1926) 48 All. 670, 97 I.C. 347, ('26) A.A. 656.

(n) Ram Lal v. Akhoy Charan (1903) 7 C.W.N. 619.

But a marriage between persons belonging to different sub-divisions of the same caste is valid. It has accordingly been held that the following marriages are valid, they being marriages between persons belonging to different sub-divisions of the Shudra caste:—

(a) A marriage between a Zamindar of Malava caste with a woman of the Vellala class of Shudras (o).

(b) A marriage between a Kayestha of Bengal and a Dom woman (p).

(c) A marriage between a Kayestha of Bengal and a Tanti woman (q).

(d) A marriage between a Shudra, and a Christian woman converted to Hinduism (r).

In the last mentioned case (s) it was held that such marriages were valid as they were common among and recognised as valid by the custom of the caste to which the man belonged. At the same time the opinion was expressed that such marriages were valid even under the Hindu law.

Lingayats of Bombay State.—According to the Lingayat religion, as well as according to Hindu law, marriages between members of different classes of Lingayats are not illegal (t).

640. Anuloma marriage.—Under the Hindu law as administered in the Bombay State, a marriage between a Vaishya male and a Shudra female is an anuloma marriage and is valid (u). So also the marriage of a Brahman male with a Shudra female (v).

641. Presumption as to form of marriage.—It has been held in Bombay that even among Shudras the law will presume the marriage to have been according to the approved form if the parties belonged to a respectable family (w).

Inheritance and Partition

642. Inheritance and Partition.—The texts of the Mitakshara bearing on the subject are contained in chap. I, sec. 12, paras. 1 and 2:—

"1. The author next delivers a special rule concerning the partition of a Shudra's goods. Even a son begotten by a Shudra on a female slave, may take a share by the father's choice. But if the father be dead, the brethren should make him partaker of the moiety of a share, and one, who has no brothers, may inherit the whole property, in default of daughter's sons" (x).

"The son, begotten by a Shudra on a female slave, obtains a share by the father's choice, or at his pleasure. But, after (the demise of) the father, if there be son of a wedded wife, let these brothers allow the son of the female slave to participate for half a share: that is, let them give him (as much as is the amount of one brother's) allotment. However,

---

(o) Ramamani Ammal v. Kulanthai (1871) 14 M.I.A. 347; Inderun v. Ramaswamy (1869) 13 M.I.A. 141; Upoma v. Bholaram (1888) 15 Cal. 708.

(p) Bhola Nath v. Emperor (1924) 51 Cal. 488, 81 I.C. 709, ('24) A.C. 616.

(q) Biswanath Das v. Shorashibala (1921) 48 Cal. 926, 66 I.C. 590, ('21) A.C. 48.

(r) Muthusami v. Masilamani (1910) 33 Mad. 342, 5 I.C. 42; Rajammal v. Mariyammal ('54) A. My. 38.

(s) (1910) 33 Mad. 342, 5 I.C. 42, supra.

(t) Fakirgauda v. Gangi (1898) 22 Bom. 277.

(u) Bai Gulab v. Jiwanlal (1922) 46 Bom. 871, 65 I.C. 602, ('22) A.B. 32.

(v) Natha v. Mehta Chotalal (1931) 55 Bom. 1, 130 I.C. 17, ('31) A.B. 89.

(w) Jagannath v. Narayan (1910) 34 Bom. 553, 7 I.C. 459.

(x) Yajnyavalkya, 2; 134-135.

should there be no sons of a wedded wife, the son of the female slave takes the whole estate, provided there be no daughters of a wife nor sons of daughters. But if, there be such, the son of the female slave participates for half a share only."

The whole law on the subject of inheritance is dealt with in § 43, Nos. 1-3, note (4), and of partition in § 312.

Maintenance

643. Maintenance of illegitimate sons.—The whole law on the subject of maintenance of the illegitimate sons of a Shudra by a dasi is dealt with in § 551 above.

THE HINDU MARRIAGE ACT, 1955

No. 25 of 1955

ARRANGEMENT OF SECTIONS

PRELIMINARY

SECTIONS

1. Short title and extent.
2. Application of Act.
3. Definitions.
4. Over-riding effect of Act.

HINDU MARRIAGES

5. Conditions for a Hindu marriage.
6. Guardianship in marriage.
7. Ceremonies for a Hindu marriage.
8. Registration of Hindu marriages.

RESTITUTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS AND JUDICIAL SEPARATION

9. Restitution of conjugal rights.
10. Judicial separation.

NULLITY OF MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

11. Void marriages.
12. Voidable marriages.
13. Divorce.

SECTIONS

14. No petition for divorce to be presented within three years of marriage.
15. Divorced persons when may marry again.
16. Legitimacy of children of void and voidable marriages.
17. Punishment of bigamy.
18. Punishment for contravention of certain other conditions for a Hindu marriage.

JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE

19. Court to which petition should be made.
20. Contents and verification of petitions.
21. Application of Act V of 1908.
22. Proceedings may be in camera and may not be printed or published.
23. Decree in proceedings.
24. Maintenance pendente lite and expenses of proceedings.
25. Permanent alimony and maintenance.
26. Custody of children.
27. Disposal of property.
28. Enforcement of, and appeal from, decrees and orders.

SAVINGS AND REPEALS

29. Savings.
30. Repeals.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

Marriage and sonship constitute some of the unique chapters in the literaleges of ancient Hindu law. As early as the time of Rig-Veda marriage had assumed the sacred character of a sacrament and sanction of religion had heightened the character and importance of the institution of marriage (a). The basal thought was that marriage was a prime necessity for that alone could enable a person to discharge properly his religious and secular obligations. The earliest records show that rules of inheritance depended on the rules of marriage and it was obligatory on the father to give the daughter in marriage as a gift is given. The smritis deal with the subject of marriage with meticulous care and make fascinating study. Apastamba treated of certain aspects of the law of marriage (b). Manu expounded the subject; so also did many other smritikars and commentators. Medhatithi wrote: "A girl should be married after giving her raiments and ornaments and she should also be given a portion (saudayika)".

Marriage, a sacrament.

Marriage is necessarily the basis of social organisation and the foundation of important legal rights and obligations. The importance and imperative character of the institution of the marriage needs no comment. In Hindu law marriage is treated as a samskara or a sacrament. It is the last of ten sacraments, enjoined by the Hindu religion for regeneration of men and obligatory in case of every Hindu who does not desire to adopt the life of a Sanyasi. It must have been noticed from the Chapter on Marriage that in Hindu law there were no less than eight different forms of marriage, different from one another in no slight degree, being in fact typical of different stages of social progress (c). In consequence of the varying rates at which society had advanced in different parts of India, the forms of marriage prevailing among the Hindus and the semi-Hindu races, mostly of non-Aryan origin, were of the most varied description. So that Indian life presented almost every possible form of the conjugal relation, from the grossest polyandry to the purest and the most rational form of monogamy (d). Of the eight forms of marriage recognised by the ancient Hindu law four were approved forms and four unapproved. The only forms recognised under the law in force before the commencement of this Act were the Brahma which was one of the approved forms and the Asura which was one of the unapproved forms. What distinguished the one from the other was that in the Brahma form it was a gift of the girl pure and simple whereas in the other consideration was received by the father or other guardian for giving the girl in marriage. The essential ceremonies for both these forms of marriage were the same. The importance of the distinction lay in this that when a woman died without

---

(a) The Rig-Veda pronounces some impressive texts: After completing the seventh step (saptapadi) the bridegroom said. "With seven steps we have become friends (sakha). May I attain to friendship with thee: May I not be separated from thy friendship." Shatapatha Brahmana speaks of the wife as the half of one's self—Ardho ha va esha atmano.

(b) Apastamba has stated that from time of marriage the husband and wife were united in religious ceremonies and likewise in rewards of acts of spiritual merit—Panigrahanaddhi sahatvan karmasu; tatha punyafaleshucha.

(c) See § 428 ante.

(d) Banerjee, Law of Marriage and Stridhan, (1923) 5th Ed., p. 32.

leaving issue, if her marriage was in Brahma form her stridhan devolved in one way, and if in Asura form, it devolved in another way. It was desirable that there should be only one form of ceremonial marriage and that rules of succession should be uniform. A very great drawback of the existing law was that a Hindu could marry another wife although he had a wife living. This and some other rules relating to the conditions of a valid marriage called for substantial changes in the law of marriage.

Need for codification.

A stage had been reached when codification, at least of the law of marriage and succession, had become virtually indispensable. Far-reaching and fundamental changes had become inevitable for they alone could furnish fair and equable solutions to some of the most controversial questions relating to the law of marriage and succession. It had been generally recognised for a long time that the rules of marriage should be materially altered and turned into a body of law, compact in form and easily accessible. A uniform and comprehensive system governing all Hindus and containing a series of coherent propositions carefully considered and stated by the authority of the supreme legislature was a long-felt desideratum.

The protagonists of Hindu law reform in matters of marriage were on strong ground when they assailed the law as it stood. Alterative conditions had arisen in matters social, economic and political. There was no justification for permitting plurality of wives and the time had certainly come for enforcing monogamy by law. According to early Hindu society monogamy was the approved rule. Polygamy was an exceptional provision and taking of more than one wife required legal justification. The weight of evidence, adduced before the Hindu Law Committee, was preponderantly in favour of monogamy as a rule of law.

Divorce, however, is a thorny question. Hindu law, strictly so called, did not allow divorce except in certain communities, in the lower social strata, where it was permitted by custom; and there was deep-rooted sentiment against any provision for divorce in the new legislation which was being forged. It may be of some interest to note that some of the smritikars although they did not deal with divorce in the sense it is now understood did declare that a woman could take a second husband in certain events. The celebrated text of Narada is: "If the husband be missing, or dead, or retired from the world, or impotent, or degraded, in these five calamities a woman may take another husband" (e). Statements to the same effect are made by Devala and are also ascribed to Katyayana (f). The practice of remarriage appears, however, to have fallen in disuse in case of the three regenerate castes during the Smriti period itself. But different conditions had arisen and fair and equable solutions had to be found in case of matters affecting formation as also dissolution of marriage. While marriage for life is the most natural form of marriage and best adapted to a civilized society there can be little justifica-

Divorce, a thorny question.

---

(e) Nashte mrite pravrajite kleebe cha patite patau; panchatsvapatsu nareenam patrianyo vidheeyate—XII, 37. Vaishtha laid down that a damsel at the death of her husband may marry again if the marriage had not been consummated—XVII, 74.

(f) The texts of Devala and Katyayana are cited in Ratnakara and Parashara Madhaveeya.

tion for legally insisting upon the union as indissoluable, even under circumstances of exceptional hardship or cases of exceptional depravity on the part of one of the spouses. Considerable evidence was adduced before the Hindu Law Committee that there were thousands of cases of desertion of women by their husbands and many hard cases were brought to its notice in which remarriage had been desired and possible but could not be effected by reason of the existing law against divorce. Grounds other than desertion also required serious consideration and the Committee made a strong report in favour of the proposed legislation providing for relief by way of divorce in appropriate cases. The recommendations in the Report of the Rau Committee on the questions of marriage and divorce were substantially accepted by the Parliament. One additional factor in favour of providing uniform rules for divorce by Central legislation was that in some of the States, divorce had already been allowed on certain grounds as the result of legislation.

Wide and extensive application of the Act.

The Hindu Marriage Act came into force on 18th May 1955. It amends and codifies the law relating to marriage among Hindus. Section 2 rules that the Act applies to any person who is a Hindu by religion in any of its forms and developments. Thus, for instance, Lingayats, Brahmos and Aryasamajists and others who have deviated from orthodox standards of Hinduism in matters of ceremonial observances are Hindus within the ambit of the Act. So are Buddhists, Jains and Sikhs as also persons who are converts or re-converts to any of these four religions. A person, therefore, though not strictly a Hindu by religion is included in the class of persons governed by the Act by virtue of this rule which gives wide application to the provisions of the Act. One effect of this is that every person who comes within the broad connotation of the term Hindu can now enter into a valid 'Hindu Marriage' with any other person who is also within that expansive category. It is not a mere laconism to observe that it is easier to say who are not Hindus or that the practical separation of Hindus from non-Hindus is not a matter of much difficulty. Clause (c) of sub-sec. (1) of section 2 adopts the negative form and in effect lays down that it is to be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that any person who is not a Muslim, Christian, Parsi or Jew by religion is governed by this Act. The purpose obviously is to avoid as far as possible detailed and at times complex inquiries into the matter. Section 4 is of vital importance and gives over-riding effect to the provisions of the Act. It abrogates all the rules of the law of marriage hitherto applicable to Hindus, whether by virtue of any text or rule of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law, in respect of all matters dealt with in the Act. The Act also supersedes any other law, contained in any Central or State legislation in force immediately before it came into operation in so far as such legislation is inconsistent with the provisions contained in the Act. Rules relating to matters for which no provision is made are not, however, over-ridden by the Act. So also matters affecting marriage and divorce expressly saved from the operation of the Act continue to be governed by the previous law. Thus for instance sec. 29(4) lays down in terms that: "Nothing contained in this Act shall be deemed to affect the provisions contained in the Special Marriage Act, 1954 (43 of 1954), with respect to marriages between Hindus solemnized under that Act, whether before or after the commencement of this Act". Another instance is furnished by the rule laid down in sub-section (2) of the same section which enacts that nothing contained in the Act is to be deemed to affect any right recognised by custom or conferred by any special enactment to obtain the dissolution of a Hindu marriage, whether solemnized before or after the commencement of this Act.

Overriding effect of the Act.

Special Marriage Act, 1954.

The Special Marriage Act of 1954 was enacted by the Parliament to provide a special form of marriage in certain cases, for the registration of marriages and for divorce, and was made applicable to all citizens of India domiciled in the country. It is, therefore, permissible to a Hindu, by virtue of that Act, to have his marriage with another Hindu or a person belonging to any other community solemnized in accordance with the requirements of that Act and the rights, obligations and status of the parties to such civil marriage in matters relating to restitution of conjugal rights, judicial separation, nullity of marriage and divorce are regulated by the provisions contained in that enactment. It may be noticed that succession to property of two Hindus married under that enactment as also to the property of the issue of such marriage is governed by the relevant provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, and not by the Hindu law of succession.

Ceremonial marriage: 'Hindu marriage.'

Under the Indian law, therefore, it is now open to two Hindus if they desire to contract civil marriage to have it solemnized under the Special Marriage Act of 1954. But if they prefer marriage in a sacramental form or to state it more precisely a ceremonial marriage it must be solemnized in accordance with requirements of the present Act. Succession to the property of persons married under the present Act is governed by the Hindu law of succession and after the coming into force of the Hindu Succession Act of 1956 by that enactment. It seems convenient to refer to the former as a Special or a Civil marriage and to the ceremonial marriage regulated by the present enactment as a Hindu marriage. The Legislature uses the expression 'Hindu marriage' in this Act in the context of such a ceremonial marriage, e.g. when it lays down the conditions for a Hindu marriage in section 5 and speaks of ceremonies for a Hindu marriage in section 7 and registration of Hindu marriages in section 8.

Sections 5 and 7 of the Act treat of the conditions and ceremonial requirements of a Hindu marriage. They are:

Conditions for a valid marriage.

(1) The marriage must be solemnized in accordance with the customary rites and ceremonies of either party and where such rites and ceremonies include saptapadi (taking of seven steps by the parties before the sacred fire) that requirement must be observed [S. 7];

(2) There should not be valid subsisting marriage of either of the parties with any other person [S. 5(i)];

(3) The parties should as regards age and mental capacity be competent to have a marriage solemnized between them [S. 5(iii), (vi) and (ii)];

(4) The parties should not by reason of degrees of prohibited relationship or sapinda relationship be debarred from marrying one another [S. 5(iv) and (v)].

The Hindu marriage contemplated by the Act is a ceremonial marriage and it must be solemnized in accordance with the customary rites and ceremonies of one of the two parties. Non-observance of the essential customary rites and ceremonies of at least one of the parties would amount to failure to solemnize the marriage. A marriage not duly solemnized by performance of the essential ceremonies is, under the Act, no marriage at all. The condition that neither party must have a spouse living at the time of marriage is absolute with the result that monogamy is now the rule. The condition about prohibited degrees of relationship and the bar arising from sapindaship are also basic and cannot be ignored except that where there is a custom or usage governing both the parties which dispenses with the bar arising from prohibited degrees of relationship and sapindaship, such custom or usage will prevail. As to mental capacity the marriage is voidable if at the time of the marriage either party was an idiot or a lunatic. The age prescribed for the bridegroom is eighteen and for the bride fifteen but in case the bride has not completed the age of eighteen there must be the consent of the guardian in marriage of the bride. Child marriages are discouraged now both by law and society but the evil had been there for a long time and the legislature has stopped short of declaring them as null and void or even voidable. The legal deterrent, however, is that a breach of the condition relating to age is punishable as an offence (S. 18). It will be seen that non-fulfilment of every one of the conditions and requirements enacted in section 5 does not ipso facto render the marriage null and void or even voidable.

Ceremonial requirements.

Incapacity affecting validity of marriage.

Marriage under the Act, therefore, is the union of one man with one woman to the exclusion of all others satisfied by the solemnization of the marriage in accordance with requisite ceremonies and, directly it exists, creates a relation between the parties and what is called a status of each (g). "The status of an individual, used as a legal term, means the legal position of the individual, in or with regard to the community: the relation between the parties, and that status of each of them with regard to the community, which are constituted upon marriage, are not imposed or defined by contract or agreement but by law." Hindu marriage, under the Act, is a monogamous marriage which must be solemnized by performance of the essential rites and ceremonies and there must be no incapacity in the parties to marry one another arising from prohibited degrees of relationship or sapinda relationship.

Conception of Hindu Marriage under the Act.

---

(g) Reference may be made to Notes under S. 5 "Conception of a Hindu marriage under the Act."

After laying down the requirements relating to solemnization of a Hindu marriage and stating the conditions appurtenant to the same and stressing that only a monogamous marriage is now permissible in case of Hindus the Act proceeds to make provision for the reliefs that can be granted by the Court in matrimonial causes and the grounds on which any such relief may be obtained.

The reliefs which can be obtained under the Act are:

(1) Decree for nullity of marriage—where the marriage is void ipso jure (S. 11);

Reliefs in matrimonial causes.

(2) Decree for nullity of marriage—where the marriage may be annulled by the Court on grounds which render it voidable (S. 12);

(3) Decree for divorce on grounds specified in S. 13;

(4) Judicial separation on grounds specified in S. 10;

(5) Restitution of conjugal rights—where one of the spouses has, without reasonable excuse, withdrawn from cohabitation from the other, the aggrieved spouse can obtain from the Court a decree pronouncing restitution of conjugal rights (S. 9).

A Hindu marriage solemnized after the commencement of the Act is void ipso jure in case of bigamy or where the parties were within the prohibited degrees of relationship or were sapindas of each other unless in case of any of the two last mentioned conditions the custom and usage governing both the parties to the marriage permits of a marriage between them. Any marriage in contravention of any of these three conditions is null and void from its inception and either party to such marriage can obtain a decree of nullity from the Court (S. 11). Parties to a marriage solemnized before this Act came into force are not, however, affected by this rule. In respect of matters dealt with by this rule they are governed by the previous law. But the prohibition imposed against bigamy is equally applicable to them in the sense that a Hindu husband cannot, after the Act came in force, marry another wife as long as his previous marriage is subsisting.

Marriage void ipso jure.

A decree for nullity of marriage may also be obtained by a party on grounds which render the marriage voidable at his or her instance (S. 12). Briefly stated the grounds are: impotency of the respondent; mental incapacity of the respondent at the time of the marriage; that the consent of the petitioner or of the guardian in marriage of the petitioner had been obtained by force or fraud; that the respondent was at the time of the marriage pregnant by some person other than the petitioner and the petitioner was at the time of the marriage ignorant of that fact. This relief by way of annulment of a voidable marriage is obtainable by a party in case of any Hindu marriage whether solemnized before or after the commencement of the Act.

Voidable marriage.

The scheme of the Act considered from the point of the validity or otherwise of a marriage is to lay down at the outset the conditions relating to the formation of a valid marriage and then to deal with marriages which are void and those which are not void but voidable at the instance of one of the parties to the same and the various reliefs that may be granted. A decree for nullity of marriage can be granted in case of a marriage which is void ab initio and also in case of a marriage which is voidable on grounds to which reference has already been made. A void marriage is one that will be regarded by every court in any case in which the existence of the marriage is in issue as never having taken place and can be treated as void by both parties to it without the necessity of any decree annulling it. Of course, it is open to a party to a void marriage to have recourse to the court for declaration that it is null and void, but that would be for the purpose of precaution or record. A voidable marriage is one that will be regarded by every court as a valid subsisting marriage until a decree annulling it has been pronounced by a court of competent jurisdiction. The expression "divorce" is sometimes broadly used as comprehending both decree for nullity of marriage and dissolution of marriage in the sense of its complete abrogation but this is not in consonance with modern legislative practice. The expression as used in the Act has limited connotation and is predicated on an existing marriage which during its subsistence was valid in the eye of the law and which it operates to dissolve. Decree for nullity of marriage on the other hand is to be granted when the marriage was void ab initio or when it was voidable at the instance of an injured spouse. In case of a marriage void ab initio it did not at any time have any legal existence; in case of a marriage voidable it was valid as long as it was not successfully impeached by the party who had in his or her power to avoid it. In case of a marriage which is void ab initio an ostensible marriage which was void from the inception is stripped of its colour of legality by declaring its nullity for reasons existing at the time of the marriage. In case of divorce the marriage having been duly solemnized and itself not being void or voidable is dissolved by the court usually for any reason arising after the marriage.

Distinction between void and voidable marriage.

Distinction between nullity of marriage and divorce.

A decree of divorce dissolving marriage whether solemnized before or after the commencement of the Act, may be obtained by the husband or the wife on the ground that the other party (i) is living in adultery; or (ii) has ceased to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion; or (iii) has been incurably of unsound mind for a continuous period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition; or (iv) has, for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, been suffering from a virulent and incurable form of leprosy; or (v) has, for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, been suffering from venereal disease in a communicable form; or (vi) has renounced the world by entering any religious order; or (vii) has not been heard of as being alive for a period of seven years or more by those persons who would naturally have heard of it, had that party been alive.

Divorce.

Either party to a marriage whether solemnized before or after the commencement of the Act, may obtain a decree of divorce on the ground that there has been no resumption of cohabitation as between them for a period of two years or upwards after the passing of a decree for judicial separation; or that there has been no restitution of conjugal rights between them for a period of two years or upwards after the passing of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights in a proceeding to which they were parties.

In addition to these grounds a wife can seek dissolution of the marriage on the grounds (i) in the case of any marriage solemnized before the commencement of this Act, that the husband had married again before such commencement or that any other wife of the husband married before such commencement was alive at the time of the solemnization of the marriage of the petitioner provided that in either case the other wife is alive at the time of the presentation of the petition; or (ii) that the husband has since the solemnization of the marriage, been guilty of rape, sodomy or bestiality.

Judicial separation.

Judicial separation can be obtained by either party to a marriage whether solemnized before or after the commencement of the Act, on the ground that the other spouse (1) is guilty of desertion; or (2) is guilty of cruelty; or (3) is suffering from virulent leprosy; or (4) is suffering from venereal disease; or (5) is of unsound mind; or (6) is guilty of an act of adultery.

Every matrimonial offence—it must have been seen from the grounds for divorce stated above—is not treated under the Act as immediately furnishing a ground for an action of divorce. Adultery, to mention only one instance, which under the Special Marriage Act, 1954, is a ground for immediate divorce, may comprise even one act of infidelity. But adultery as a ground for divorce under the present Act can be established only by showing that the other party is living in adultery and one act of infidelity to the marriage tie furnishes only a ground for judicial separation.

Distinction between divorce and judicial separation.

Without going into the historical and other aspects of 'divorce' which prior to the English Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, could be of two distinct types—absolute or a viculo matrimonii and limited or a mensa at thoro—it will suffice to observe that it is the divorce a mensa at thoro which is historically the background of the action for judicial separation. The distinction between a decree for divorce and one for judicial separation may be briefly stated. A decree for divorce has the effect of dissolving the marriage and puts an end to the marriage tie and the separation is absolute and final. A decree for judicial separation is one for legal separation and does not of itself result in dissolution of the marriage though it may furnish a ground for divorce where cohabitation has not been resumed for a space of two years after the passing of the same. It is in affirmance of the marriage and has the effect of suspending as it were the matrimonial and certain mutual rights and obligations of the parties. The separation is not absolute and final and the marriage tie continues to subsist. There is always a locus poenitentiae and the parties may at any time resume cohabitation.

A comparison of the grounds on which divorce may be decreed with those which permit only judicial separation shows that the object and scheme of the Act is not to render divorces easy and even while giving relief in cases of matrimonial offences so to frame the law as would provide opportunities for mutual adjustment between the parties. The scheme adopted in the Special Marriage Act is different in certain respects. Section 28 of that enactment permits a decree of divorce being granted by mutual consent of the parties in the manner there provided. Section 23 of that Act lays down that a decree for judicial separation may be passed on grounds on which a decree for divorce may be granted under the Act. The approach of the Legislature to the problems of judicial separation and divorce is not the same in the two enactments and it would seem that the Legislature did not deem it desirable that in the present enactment the grounds for judicial separation and grounds for divorce should be identical or that they should in all respects be the same as in the Special Marriage Act, 1954.

Scheme of the Special Marriage Act is different.

The grounds on which dissolution of marriage should be permissible must to some extent vary even in case of systems of law which recognize only a monogamous marriage and must remain a debatable subject. In a sense the grounds are bound to be somewhat arbitrary. The nature of the grounds and what should be regarded as matrimonial offences or misconduct on the part of one or both the parties must inevitabily raise some problems not easy of solution. The Legislature, it must have been seen, has sought to follow a middle course by not adopting any of the two extreme views one of which favours dissolution of the tie depending simply on the consent of the parties and the other which insists upon very stringent grounds. Divorce in case of Hindu marriage is not favoured; nor is it encouraged. It is discouraged but without enforcing conditions which may cause great hardship or drive parties to act in collusion with one another.

The Act, it must have been noticed, brings about some fundamental and salutary changes in the law of marriage. Even if the Act seems to break violently with the past it has to be conceded that it is characteristic of the age which is one of great ideals and fast changing social, economic and political theories. The following changes brought about by the Act in the law of marriage are particularly notable.

Changes in law brought about by the Act.

I. A Hindu marriage, by which is meant a marriage solemnized in accordance with the requirements of the Act, can take place between any two persons who come within the broad connotation given by the Act to the expression 'Hindu' (S. 2). Inter-marriage between persons of different castes—Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya and Sudra—or persons professing the Hindu, Buddhist, Jain or Sikh religion is not prohibited. Section 29 of the Act gives retrospective effect to this rule and lays down that a ceremonial marriage solemnized before the commencement of the Act between persons who come within the broad connotation of the expression 'Hindu', if otherwise valid, shall not be deemed to be or to have been invalid by reason only of the fact that the parties belonged to these different religions or different castes. The division of Hindus formerly made by reference to their castes Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya and Sudra has now no bearing on the subject of marriage.

II. Monogamy which is essentially the voluntary union for life of one man with one woman to the exclusion of all others, is now enforced by legislation [S. 5(ii)]. Any marriage between two Hindus solemnized after the commencement of the Act is null and void if at the date of such marriage either party had a husband or wife living (S. 17).

III. Bigamy is rendered punishable as an offence under the Penal Code (S. 17).

IV. The conditions and requirements of a valid Hindu marriage are considerably simplified (Ss. 5 and 7).

V. Reliefs by way of judicial separation, declaration of nullity of marriage and divorce are recognized (Ss. 10 to 13).

VI. Provision is made for legitimacy of children of void and voidable marriages (S. 16).

VII. Provision is made for alimony pendente lite, permanent alimony and maintenance (Ss. 24 and 25).

VIII. Wide discretionary powers are conferred on the court in any proceeding under the Act, to pass orders relating to the custody, maintenance and education of minor children of the parties (S. 26).

An examination of the scheme and various provisions of the Act will show considerable similarity with the arrangement adopted and the language employed in the Special Marriage Act, 1954. Where the provisions are in pari materia, cases on the construction of the analogous provisions of that enactment will render assistance in construing the provisions of the present Act. But as the Joint Committee has itself observed their approach to the problems of judicial separation and divorce was not entirely the same in case of the two enactments and that it was neither necessary nor desirable that the grounds for judicial separation and grounds for divorce should under the present Act be identical as in the Special Marriage Act. Moreover, it was felt that in case of the ceremonial marriage under this Act divorce should not be made easy and the law should be so framed as to provide the maximum opportunities for mutual adjustment and therefore the scheme of the present Act should in some respects be different. It is submitted that while the importance of decisions that may be given under the Special Marriage Act need not be minimised it will be necessary always to bear in mind that the scheme of the two enactments is not identical.

Decisions under Special Marriage Act, 1954.

A comparison of a number of provisions including those relating to grounds for relief in matrimonial cases in the present enactment as also the Decision of Courts in England.

Special Marriage Act, 1954, with analogous provisions in the English Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, will show that they are based mainly on the English Act. The main principles are the same and likewise some important details. The deviations in principles are not on any major points and are introduced in order to adapt the law to Indian conditions. The wording of clearly defined principles in the English Act have been freely adopted in the present Act though the scheme of the present Act is in some respects materially different. On analogous provisions unaffected by the specialities of the English Act and on fundamental concepts and broad general principles decisions of courts in England can be helpful if utilised with due care. In a case under the Bombay Hindu Divorce Act (h) the Supreme Court drew largely on the English law in stating a number of broad general principles relating to desertion as a matrimonial offence. In a branch of law rules of which are inspired by the broad general principles of the English law on the subject, decisions of Courts in England in so far as they enunciate and expound those principles can always be of considerable guidance and assistance. Danger, however, lies in phrases used aptly enough, no doubt, in a particular context and opinions useful in their own sphere being treated as expressing doctrines of universal application or adopting those principles as riders to the actual statutory language. The rule of construction relating to provisions of enactments in pari materia is one of importance and great convenience and aid from outside may legitimately be derived when any doubtful point of interpretation of any provision has to be solved, but resort to it simply on the ground of similarity must be avoided. In a field such as is covered by the present enactment great care is required when examining the decisions of Courts in England on the question of construction of any similar provisions. It will be noticed that despite the similarity there are in some cases changes in the language and the terminology employed. There are also differences in the scheme and framework of the two enactments. Even when examining provisions which may seem to be in pari materia it will be necessary to note that having regard to the scheme of the present Act and the framework in which any particular rule under consideration is enacted, the rule may require broader or restricted interpretation and it need not necessarily be construed in precisely the same way.

Duty of the Court.

Before proceeding to grant any relief under this Act, it is the duty of the Court in the first instance, in every case where it is possible so to do consistently with the nature and circumstances of the case, to make every endeavour to bring about a reconciliation between the parties. In proceedings under the Act, whether defended or not, it is also the duty of the Court to see that the petitioner is not taking advantage of his or her own wrong and to satisfy itself that the evidence does not disclose any statutory bar such as connivance, condonation, collusion, unnecessary delay in instituting proceedings or any other legal ground why relief should not be granted even though the matrimonial offence on the part of the other spouse may have been proved (S. 23). It is with jealous care that the Court interferes with the obligations of the marriage vow. It must not lose sight of the fact that dissolution of marriage is a matter of grave import and the last expedient of the law. The Court must not overlook that unlike the English enactment the Act leaves little discretion with it in the matter of granting or withholding relief. It must, therefore, refrain from analogy drawn from cases decided under other enactments which confer unfettered discretion on the Court by recognising that certain bars to relief are discretionary and not absolute (i). At the same time it is the duty of the Court to act with sound discernment and where a ground for relief is established it must act on it; and while applying any of the statutory bars laid down in sec. 23 it must not act on any preconceived classification of circumstances but on the broad principles on which those statutory bars rest and must see that it does not apply them in a manner as would result in any unreasonable withholding of the relief which it is its duty to grant.

---

(h) Bipin Chander v. Prabhawati (1956) S.C.R. 838, (1957) 59 Bom. L.R. 322, ('57) A.S.C. 176.

---

(i) See Notes under S. 23, infra.

THE HINDU MARRIAGE ACT, 1955

No. 25 OF 1955

[18th May, 1955]

An Act to amend and codify the law relating to marriage among Hindus.

BE it enacted by Parliament in the Sixth Year of the Republic of India as follows:—

Preamble.—A preamble to an enactment of the Legislature was formerly regarded as key to open the mind of the makers of the Act, and mischief which they intended to redress. The practice of inserting elaborate preambles in enactments of the Legislature has disappeared and it is now regarded as well settled law that a preamble cannot either restrict or extend the enacting part when the language and the scope of an Act are not open to doubt. It sometimes happens that a preamble is narrow but the enacting words large. The preamble to the present Act speaks only of the law relating to marriage. Under the legislative practice followed in India it is not unusual to lay down the law relating to the formation of marriage as also its dissolution and other allied matters in the same enactment. The Act lays down rules relating to the solemnization and requirements of a valid Hindu marriage. It also lays down rules relating to restitution of conjugal rights, judicial separation, nullity of marriage, divorce, legitimacy of children and other allied matters.

Codifying Act.—It is clear from the preamble that it is intended by the Act not merely to amend but to amend and codify the law relating to marriage among Hindus. The object of codification of a particular branch of law is that, on any matter specifically dealt with by it, such law should be sought for in the codified enactment itself. Where a statute is expressly said to codify the law, the Court, as a general rule, is not at liberty to go outside the law so created simply because before the existence of that enactment another law prevailed. The following observations of Lord Herschell in Bank of England v. Vagliano (j) in a passage which has now become locus classicus, were cited with approval by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Norendra Nath v. Kamalbasini Dasi (k): "The proper course is in the first instance to examine the language of the Statute and to ask what is its natural meaning uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law and not to start with enquiring how the law previously stood, and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered, to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view. If a Statute, intended to embody in a code a particular branch of the law, is to be treated in this fashion, it appears to me that its utility will be almost entirely destroyed, and the very object with which it was enacted will be frustrated. The purpose of such a statute surely was that on any point specifically dealt with by it, the law should be ascertained by interpreting the language used instead of, as before, roaming over a vast number of authorities in order to discover what the law was, extracting it by a minute critical examination of the prior decisions. . . ."

---

(j) (1891) A.C. 107.

(k) 23 Cal. 563, 571, 572 (P.C.).

A codifying statute does not, however, altogether exclude reference to earlier law on the subjects covered by the statute for the purpose of throwing light on the true interpretation of the words of the statute, where they are open to rival constructions. In respect of matters specifically dealt within the statute earlier law cannot be invoked otherwise than for this limited purpose; it cannot be relied on for the purpose of adding to it something which is not there. The following general observations of the House of Lords in England in Quebec Railway Co. v. Vandry (l) may be found useful. "The first step, the indispensable starting point, is to take the codifying enactment itself and to examine its words, and to ask whether their meaning is plain. Only if the enactment is not plain can light be usefully sought from exterior source. Of course it must not be forgotten what the enactment is, namely a code of systematised principles and rules, not a body of administrative directions or an institutional exposition. Of course also the Code, or at least the cognate sections, should be read as a whole, forming a connected scheme; they are not a series of detached enactments. Of course, again, there is a point at which mere linguistic clearness only masks the obscurity of actual provisions or leads to such irrational or unjust results that, however clear the actual expressions may be, the conclusion is still clearer that no such meaning could have been intended by the Legislature." Question may arise whether this Act is a complete code in the sense of comprehensive legislation dealing with every phase and aspect of the law of marriage. In an Act intituled an Act to amend and codify a particular branch of law, in so far as there is express enactment, that alone must be looked at since the Court is bound by it and can look to nothing else and the express enactment must govern the rights of the parties even though it has radically altered or modified the prior law. The Act both amends and codifies the law of marriage and, as has already been pointed out (m), has made a number of fundamental and important changes in the prior law. Reference in this connection may be made to S. 4 which gives over-riding effect to the provisions of the Act. It follows that with respect to matters for which provision is made in the Act the prior law ceases to have effect to the extent laid down in that section. It also follows that in respect of matters for which no provision is made in the Act the old law must continue to remain applicable though such matters are indeed few.

When law has been codified, it cannot be modified gradually from day to day as the changing circumstances of the community require, by rules made to meet those imperceptibly changing conditions and any modification however small must be made by the Parliament.

Rules of interpretation of statute.—The following are the principal rules relating to the interpretation of statutes. The fundamental principle of interpretation of a statute is that it should be construed according to the intent of the Legislature which passed the Act. If the words of the statute are in themselves precise and unambiguous, then no more can be necessary than to expound those words in their natural and ordinary sense. The words themselves alone do, in such case, best declare the intention of the law-giver. There is another rule, however, which must not be overlooked in this connection. It is to the effect that the Court must not create or imagine an ambiguity where it really does not exist. To do so would in many cases frustrate the enactment and defeat the general intention of the Legislature (n).

---

(l) (1920) A.C. 662.

(m) See pp. 661-662, supra.

Intention of the Legislature.

As a general rule, the intention of the Legislature is to be gathered from the language used and the Court's function is not to say what the Legislature meant but to ascertain what the Legislature has said it meant. As was observed by Lord Watson in Salomon v. Salomon & Co. (o), "Intention of the Legislature is a common but very slippery phrase, which popularly understood, may signify anything from intention embodied in positive enactment to speculative opinion as to what the Legislature probably would have meant, although there has been an omission to enact it. In a Court of Law or Equity, what the Legislature intended to be done or not to be done can only be legitimately ascertained from that which it has chosen to enact, either in express words or by reasonable and necessary implication."

Literal construction.

One of the most important rules of construction is the rule of literal construction, and Courts are bound to construe provisions of the Statute according to their plain and obvious meaning. If there is nothing to modify, nothing to alter, nothing to qualify, the language which the statute contains, it must be construed in the ordinary and natural meaning of the words and sentences (p). It has been repeatedly observed that in construing enacted words the Court is not concerned with the policy involved or with the result, injurious or otherwise, which may follow from giving effect to the language used by the Legislature (q).

The grammatical and ordinary sense of the words is to be adhered to, unless that would lead to some absurdity or some repugnancy or inconsistency with the rest of the statute, in which case the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words may be modified so as to avoid that absurdity and inconsistency, but no further (r).

When the language of a section is not only plain, but admits of but one meaning, the task of interpretation can hardly be said to arise. Absoluta sententia expositore non indiget. Such language best declares without more

---

(n) See per Lord Davey in Powell v. Kepton Park Race Course Co. (1899) A.C. 143, 185; Nepra v. Sayer (1928) 55 Cal. 67, 75; Finch v. Finch (1943) Lah. 765, 776.

(o) (1897) A.C. 22, 38; also see In re Hungerford Investment Trust Ld. (1935) 62 Cal. 133; Bishunlal v. Jagarnath (1943) 22 Pat. 148.

(p) Cox v. Hakes (1890) 15 App. Cas. 506, 542. Also see Muhammad v. Commissioner of Income-tax (1931) 12 Lah. 129 (F.B.); Gurmukh Singh v. Intazamia Committee (1942) Lah. 217 (F.B.).

(q) Attorney-General of Alberta v. Attorney-General of Canada, A.I.R. (1945) P.C. 76; Tukino v. Aotea Dist. M.L. Board, A.I.R. (1941) P.C. 109.

(r) Grey v. Pearson (1857) 6 H.L. Ca. 61, 106; Badsha Mia v. Rajjab Ali, A.I.R. (1946) Cal. 348 (F.B.); Shiv Charan v. Ram Saran (1943) Lah. 497 (F.B.); L.H. Sugar Factories v. Moti (1941) All. 471 (F.B.); In re Krishnamurthi Ayyar (1942) Mad. 9.

the intention of the law-giver and is decisive of it (s). It would be contrary to all rules of construction to read words into a statute unless it is absolutely necessary to do so (t). The Court cannot appropriate to itself the duty of supplying any deficiencies in the statute. It will not add or amend or by construction make up such deficiencies. Whether the omission appears to have flowed from forgetfulness of the draftsman or is intentional is no concern of the Court and it is well settled that a casus omissus cannot be supplied by a Court of Law, for that would be to make laws (u).

If, however, the words of provision are sufficiently flexible, it can be construed in the sense which if less correct grammatically, is more in harmony with the intention of the Legislature; and to arrive at the real meaning, it may be necessary to get an exact conception of the aim, scope and object of the whole Act (v). The true meaning of any passage of the statute is that which best harmonises with the object and with every other passage of the statute, and it is a well settled rule that the same words are to be prima facie construed in the same sense in the different parts of the same statute (w). A Court should not deal separately with the terms of an enactment which is in its nature composite. It should avail itself, as an aid to construction. of the light thrown upon each of its expressions by the presence within it of the others. Further in its construction of words it should pay sufficient regard to the setting in which they are found (x). A well-established rule applicable to all statutes is the rule of construction ex viserribus actus. The Court is bound to see that the interpretation it puts on a particular provision makes a consistent enactment of the whole statute.

In general it is true that in dealing with matters relating to the general public, a statute is presumed to use words in their popular sense—uti loquitur vulgus. But it has to be remembered that the meaning of words is found not so much in a strictly grammatical or etymological propriety of language, nor even in its popular sense, as in the subject or in the occasion on which they are used, and the object to be attained. General words, however wide in the abstract, are more or less elastic, and admit of restriction or expansion to suit the subject-matter (y). It is sometimes said that words in a statute are to be understood in a legal sense. That principle is of cogency when the words in question represent only legal conceptions. The popular use of such words may not represent the primary meaning of the words, but some half understanding of them (z).

The Court cannot look into the proceedings of the Legislature to see what took place there during the passage of the Bill which passed into the law; it cannot seek the assistance of the debates in the Legislative Council, or the

---

(s) Maxwell on Interpretation of Statutes, (1962) 11th Edition, p. 4.

(t) Renulu Bose v. Manmatha Nath (1945) 49 Cal. W.N. 491 (P.C.).

(u) Kamalaranjan Roy v. Secretary of State, A.I.R. (1938) P.C. 281; Gurdial Singh v. The Central Board, Local Committee, Amritsar (1928) 9 Lah. 689, 698, 699.

(v) In re Mayfair Property Co. (1898) 2 Ch. 28 35.

(w) Ganpat v. Vithal (1941) 43 Bom. L.R. 976; Spencer v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1883) 22 Ch.D. 142; Khan Gul v. Lakha Singh, A.I.R. (1928) Lah. 609 (F.B.); Turquand v. Board of Trade (1886) 55 L.J.Q.B. 417.

(x) Vacuum Oil Co. v. Secretary of State (1932) 56 Bom. 313 (P.C.).

(y) Wandsworth Board of Works v. United Telephone Co., 13 Q.B.D. 904, 920; Maxwell, Interpretation of Statutes, (1962) 11th Edition, p. 59.

(z) Lord Advocate v. Stewart (1902) A.C. 344.

report of the Select Committee for the purpose of interpreting a statute. Nor will it, for such a purpose, refer to any statements of objects and reasons annexed to a Bill brought before the Legislature (a).

Reference to previous law.

Another rule of construction which must not be overlooked in dealing with an Act like the present one is that the proper course is in the first instance to examine the language of the statute and to ask what is its natural meaning, uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law, and not to start with inquiring how the law previously stood, and then, assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered, to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view (b).

Headings.

The heading of a chapter can be looked at for the purpose of interpreting a section in the statute (c).

Marginal notes.

It has been observed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, that marginal notes to the sections cannot be referred to for the purpose of construing an Act of the Legislature (d). There is no reason, however, why marginal notes may not be looked at in order to see the general trend of a section (e).

Recent Enactments.—It is a sound principle of interpretation of statutes that whenever it is possible to do so the Court will construe provisions which appear to conflict so that they harmonise. This principle is also applicable to provisions in different statutes which form part of a scheme of legislation as in case of the recent four enactments.

---

(a) Aswini Kumar v. Arabinda Bose, A.I.R. (1952) S.C. 369; Mahalakshmi v. Sham Rangini (1941) 1 Cal. 499; Krishna Ayyangar v. Nalla Perumal (1920) 43 Mad. 550, 565 (P.C.); Raj Mal v. Harnam Singh (1928) 9 Lah. 260; Dina Nath v. Sati Prosad (1922) 27 Cal. W.N. 115; Gopal Pandey v. Parsotam (1883) 5 All. 121 (F.B.): Administrator-General v. Premlal (1895) 22 Cal. 788 (P.C.); Tamijannessa v. Purna Chandra, A.I.R. (1927) Cal. 821. Also see Shantanand v. Basudevanand (1930) 52 All. 619 (F.B.).

(b) Bank of England v. Vagliano (1891) A.C. 107, 144, 145; Despatie v. Tremblay (1921) 1 A.C. 702, 709; Norendra Nath v. Kamalabasini (1896) 23 Cal. 563 (P.C.); Raghumull v. Official Assignee of Calcutta (1924) 28 Cal. W.N. 34, 42, 43.

(c) Eastern Counties, etc. Co. v. Marriage (1860) 9 H.L.C. 32, 41; Dwarkanath v. Tafazar (1917) 44 Cal. 267.

(d) Balraj v. Jagatpal (1904) 26 All. 393, 406 (P.C.). But see Ram Saran v. Bhagwat Prasad (1929) 51 All. 411 (F.B.).

(e) Secretary of State v. Bombay Municipality (1935) 37 Bom. L.R. 499, 508; Abdul Hakim v. Fazu Miya (1935) 62 Cal. 266. Also see Dharwar Urban Bank Ltd. v. Krishnarao (1937) 39 Bom. L.R. 203, 209, 210; Brijmohan v. Tulsiram (1942) Nag. 53.

CHAPTER I

PRELIMINARY

1. (1) This Act may be called the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.

Short title and extent.

(2) It extends to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir, and applies also to Hindus domiciled in the territories to which this Act extends who are outside the said territories.

Commencement and extent.—The Act received the assent of the President on 18th May 1955 and came into operation on that day (f).

The Act applies to Hindus in the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir. It has now by appropriate legislation been applied also in Jammu and Kashmir. The Act also applies to Hindus domiciled in India but who are living outside India. The general principle of private international law is that the lex loci governs matters relating to immovable property and the law of the domicile governs personal relations.

Some of the principles which determine domicile were considered by the Supreme Court in the undermentioned case (*f*1).

2. (1) This Act applies—

Application of Act.

(a) to any person who is a Hindu by religion in any of its forms or developments, including a Virashaiva, a Lingayat or a follower of the Brahmo, Prarthana or Arya Samaj,

(b) to any person who is a Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh by religion, and

(c) to any other person domiciled in the territories to which this Act extends who is not a Muslim, Christian, Parsi or Jew by religion, unless it is proved that any such person would not have been governed by the Hindu law or by any custom or usage as part of that law in respect of any of the matters dealt with herein if this Act had not been passed.

Explanation.—The following persons are Hindus, Buddhists, Jainas or Sikhs by religion, as the case may be: —

(a) any child, legitimate or illegitimate, both of whose parents are Hindus, Buddhists, Jainas or Sikhs by religion;

---

(f) S. 5 (1)(b), General Clauses Act.

(*f*1) Central Bank of India Ltd. v. Ram Narain ('55) A.S.C. 36.

(b) any child, legitimate or illegitimate, one of whose parents is a Hindu, Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh by religion and who is brought up as a member of the tribe, community, group or family to which such parent belongs or belonged; and

(c) any person who is a convert or re-convert to the Hindu, Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh religion.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), nothing contained in this Act shall apply to the members of any Scheduled Tribe within the meaning of clause (25) of article 366 of the Constitution unless the Central Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, otherwise directs.

(3) The expression 'Hindu' in any portion of this Act shall be construed as if it included a person who, though not a Hindu by religion, is, nevertheless, a person to whom this Act applies by virtue of the provisions contained in this section.

Persons governed by the Act.—The word 'Hindu' does not denote any particular religion or community. During the last hundred years and more it has been a nomenclature used to refer comprehensively to various categories of people for purposes of personal law. It has been applied to dissenters and non-conformists and even to those who have entirely repudiated Brahminism. It has been applied to various religious sects and bodies which at various periods and in circumstances developed out of, or split off from, the Hindu system but whose members have nevertheless continued to live under the Hindu law and the Courts have generally put a liberal construction upon enactments relating to the personal laws applicable to Hindus. In the Note to clause 2 of the Hindu Marriage Bill it was observed: "At present, Hindu law applies (i) to Hindus by birth, and to Hindus by religion, that is to say, to converts and re-converts to Hinduism, (ii) to illegitimate children where both parents are Hindus, (iii) to illegitimate children where the mother is a Hindu and the children are brought up as Hindus, (iv) to Brahmos, Arya Samajists, Lingayats and to persons who may have deviated from orthodox standards of Hinduism in matters of diet and ceremonial observances and to every other person who may be regarded as Hindu unless he can show some valid local, tribal or family custom to the contrary and (v) to Jains, Sikhs and Buddhists". This section in effect seeks to codify the existing law on the question.

Sub-sec. (1)(a): Hindu.—The words in this sub-section "any person, who is a Hindu by religion in any of its forms and developments" give legislative approval to the numerous decisions of Courts on the subject noted in § 6 including pronouncements of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. In a judgment of the Calcutta High Court in a matter which was ultimately decided by the Privy Council it was observed: "The Hindu religion is marvellously catholic and elastic. Its theology is marked by eclecticism and tolerance and almost unlimited freedom of private worship. Its social code is much more stringent, but amongst its different castes and sections it exhibits wide diversity of practice" (g).

Sub-sec. (1)(b).—The Act applies not merely to Hindus by religion but also to persons who profess the Buddhist, Jain or Sikh religion. Persons who profess any of these four religions are included in the wide category of persons governed by this Act.

The effect of the four new Acts is to give legislative sanction to the existing previous law that even though Jains may not be Hindus by religion they are to be governed by the same law as the Hindus.

Sub-sec. (1)(c).—It is not a mere laconism to observe that for the purposes of this Act it is easier to say who are not Hindus or that the practical separation of Hindus from non-Hindus is not a matter of much difficulty. This sub-section adopts the negative form and in effect lays down that it is to be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that any person who is not a Muslim, Christian, Parsi or Jew by religion is governed by this Act. The purpose is to avoid as far as possible detailed and at times complex inquiries into the matter.

Explanation (b).—This explanation deals with legitimate children of mixed marriages where one of the parents is a Hindu, Buddhist, Jain or Sikh. It also deals with illegitimate children, one of whose parents is a Hindu, Buddhist, Jain or Sikh. Such legitimate or illegitimate children, if brought up in the religion of any such parent, are governed by the Act. Reference may be made to the undermentioned case (*g*2).

Explanation (c).—This explanation gives legislative sanction to the view that conversion or reconversion of any person to Hindu religion, whatever be the other faith to which that person might have belonged or been converted to, attracts with it the application of the Act. A European does not become a Hindu merely because he professes a theoretical allegiance to the Hindu faith, or is an ardent admirer and advocate of Hinduism and its practices. But if he abdicates his religion by a clear act of renunciation and can be said to have in fact adopted the Hindu religion, he may justly be regarded as a Hindu within the meaning of that expression as understood in this Act. The best evidence of such conversion would be an actual formal conversion (h).

Sub-sec. (2): Scheduled Tribes.—Clause 25 of Article 366 of the Constitution defines the expression 'Scheduled Tribes' and Article 342 enacts the manner in which these tribes may be notified. This was done by the Constitution (Scheduled Tribes) Order, 1950, and by the Constitution (Scheduled Tribes) Order, 1951. The present sub-section has the effect of laying down that persons belonging to such notified tribes will in matters of marriage continue to be governed by the personal law which was hitherto applied to (g) Bhagwan Koer v. Bose (1904) 31 Cal. 11, 15.

---

(*g*1) Commissioner of Wealth Tax v. Champa Kumari (1972) A.S.C. 2119.
(*g*2) Rosa Marie v. Commissioner of Wealth Tax ('70) A.M. 249.
(h) Reference may be made to Ratansi v. Administrator-General of Madras (1929) 52 Mad. 160, and Muthusami v. Masilamani (1910) 33 Mad. 342, where earlier decisions are reviewed.

them and not by any of the provisions of this Act unless the Central Government by notification directs that any such provisions should be applicable to them (*h*1).

Sub-sec. (3).—This sub-section is enacted to make it abundantly clear that the expression 'Hindu' wherever used in the Act is to be understood in the inclusive and comprehensive significance given to it in this section. Also see 'Persons governed by the Act' at p. 671 supra.

3. In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires,—

Definitions.

(a) the expressions "custom" and "usage" signify any rule which, having been continuously and uniformly observed for a long time, has obtained the force of law among Hindus in any local area, tribe, community, group or family:

Provided that the rule is certain and not unreasonable or opposed to public policy; and

Provided furher that in the case of a rule applicable only to a family it has not been discontinued by the family;

(b) "district court" means, in any area for which there is a city civil court, that court, and in any other area the principal civil court of original jurisdiction, and includes any other civil court which may be specified by the State Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, as having jurisdiction in respect of the matters dealt with in this Act;

(c) "full blood" and "half blood"—two persons are said to be related to each other by full blood when they are descended from a common ancestor by the same wife and by half blood when they are descended from a common ancestor but by different wives;

(d) "uterine blood"—two persons are said to be related to each other by uterine blood when they are descended from a common ancestress but by different husbands;

Explanation.—In clauses (c) and (d), "ancestor" includes the father and "ancestress" the mother;

(e) "prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act;

(f) (i) "sapinda relationship" with reference to any person extends as far as the third generation (inclusive) in the line of ascent through the mother, and the fifth (inclusive) in the line of ascent through the father, the

---

(*h*1) Dasarath v. Gura Bewa ('72) A. Orissa 78 [Act is not applicable to members of Bathudi sub-caste].

line being traced upwards in each case from the person concerned, who is to be counted as the first generation;

(ii) two persons are said to be "sapindas" of each other if one is a lineal ascendant of the other within the limits of sapinda relationship, or if they have a common lineal ascendant who is within the limits of sapinda relationship with reference to each of them;

(g) "degrees of prohibited relationship"—two persons are said to be within the "degrees of prohibited relationship"—

(i) if one is a lineal ascendant of the other; or

(ii) if one was the wife or husband of a lineal ascendant or descendant of the other; or

(iii) if one was the wife of the brother or of the father's or mother's brother or of the grandfather's or grandmother's brother of the other; or

(iv) if the two are brother and sister, uncle and niece, aunt and nephew, or children of brother and sister or of two brothers or of two sisters;

Explanation.—For the purposes of clauses (f) and (g), relationship includes—

(i) relationship by half or uterine blood as well as by full blood;

(ii) illegitimate blood relationship as well as legitimate;

(iii) relationship by adoption as well as by blood;

and all terms of relationship in those clauses shall be construed accordingly.

It will be seen that the definitions given in this section are not all intended to economise words or to serve merely as a little dictionary. Most of the definitions lay down legal principles.

"Unless the context otherwise requires."—The definitions and abbreviations given in this section have to be read subject to the qualification that their application must not be inconsistent with the context or subject-matter. Even when an Act contains a section giving definitions the latter may not be applicable in all the contexts. Where there is something repugnant in the context showing that the definition will not fit, the Court will give such meaning to the expression as will be more in harmony with the context and allow it to prevail over the "artificial conceptions" of the definitions clause.

Cl. (a) "Custom": "usage".—It is generally said that custom must be ancient, certain and reasonable. It will be noticed that the definition in clause (a) does not use the expression ancient but speaks of the observance of a custom or usage "for a long time". The English rule that "a custom, in order that it may be legal and binding, must have been used so long that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary" has not been strictly applied to Indian conditions. All that is necessary to prove is that the custom or usage has been acted upon in practice for such a long period and with such invariability and continuity as to show that it has by common consent been submitted to as the established governing rule in any local area, tribe, community, group or family. Certainty and reasonableness are also indispensable elements of the rule. An essential attribute of a valid custom and one emphasized in this clause is that it must not be opposed to public policy. The determination of what is opposed to the so-called public policy or policy of the law has necessarily varied from time to time. While the principle underlying the rule do not vary, the application of the rule must in a large measure depend upon public opinion and current notions of what is good for the public. One test which may help is that the custom or usage must have no general tendency to do wrong or injury. Each case of custom or usage must rest upon its own peculiar nature and facts and no hard and fast rule can be laid down.

Also see §§ 15 to 20 ante and section 4 post.

Cl. (b): "District Court."—The expression "district" as defined in Section 2(4) of the Civil Procedure Code means "the local limits of the jurisdiction of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction (hereinafter called a 'District Court'), and includes the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of a High Court". Following this definition the expression 'District Court' must be understood to include a High Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction (i). But where there is a City Civil Court, the City Civil Court alone and not the High Court would be the 'District Court' for the purposes of this Act. Section 19 of the Act deals with jurisdiction and lays down that: "Every petition under this Act shall be presented to the District Court within the local limits of whose ordinary original civil jurisdiction the marriage was solemnized or the husband and wife reside or last resided together".

Also see Notes under Section 19 post.

Cls. (c) and (d): "Full blood: Half blood: Uterine blood".—Question of relationship subsisting between the parties to a marriage becomes material when dealing with restrictions arising from sapinda relationship and degrees of prohibited relationship because subject to limited exceptions there are certain prohibitions which are absolutely imperative in their nature. Relationship by full blood or half blood or uterine blood or by adoption may bring the parties within those imperative bars and render void marriage between them.

Cl. (e): "prescribed".—The Act lays down in Section 8 that the State Government may make rules relating to registration of marriages. Section 14 empowers the High Court to make certain rules and Section 21 confers rule-making powers on the High Court for the purpose of regulating the procedure to be followed in case of petitions under the Act.

---

(i) Kedarnath v. Gonesh (1907) 12 C.W.N. 446.

Cl. (f): "Sapinda relationship".—Clause (f) of this section defines sapinda relationship by laying down the manner of computing degrees of ascent and relationship for the purpose of marriage. Section 5 [Cl. (v)] lays down as one of the conditions of a valid marriage that the parties must not be sapindas of each other unless there is a custom or usage governing each of them which permits of a marriage between them. Under the old law sapinda relationship was of primary importance in matters of succession to the property of a male Hindu and sapindas belonged to the first class of heirs. The different classes of heirs recognised by the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga have now ceased to exist in case of devolution of property of a male Hindu and the new scheme of succession evolved by the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, does not proceed with sapinda relationship as the indispensable starting point. Sapinda relationship was also a governing consideration in determining prohibited degrees of marriage. The concept of sapinda relationship appears to have been retained in the present Act as more convenient in dealing with the question of degrees of prohibited relationship in marriage. The five and three degrees mentioned in the definition are of vital importance and the rule requires to be carefully applied. The note to clause 3 of the Hindu Marriage and Divorce Bill states that the strict rule prohibiting marriage within the limits of sapinda relationship as defined in the Smritis (seven and five degrees) have been considerably relaxed by custom and the limits have therefore been reduced to five and three degrees, as is generally recognised now. Not only has the sapinda relationship been interpreted in different ways by different authors, but the rule itself has been subject to modification by custom. Some definite limits had therefore to be provided for which accord with judicially recognised customs or well-established customs.

The general rule, therefore, is that no valid marriage can take place between two persons who are sapindas of each other as defined in this clause. This clause read with the Explanation added at the end of the section principally rules that:

1. Sapinda relationship extends as far as the third generation in the line of ascent through the mother in case of both the parties.
2. Sapinda relationship extends as far as the fifth generation in the line of ascent through the father in case of both the parties.
3. Sapinda relationship may subsist in case of both the parties through the father or in case of both through the mother; or it may subsist in case of one of them through the father and in case of the other through the mother.
4. The line is traced upwards in case of both the parties counting each of them as the first generation; the generations in the line of ascent whether three or five are to be counted inclusive of the persons concerned and the common ancestor or ancestress.
5. The line of ascent to be traced is not restricted to male ancestors. Thus for instance a person's father's mother's father as also his father's father are in the line of ascent through the father. Similarly the mother's mother and mother's father are in the line of ascent through the mother. The computation of generations as such cannot present any difficulty but question may arise, from the retention by the Legislature of the expression sapinda relationship, whether the line must pass only through male ascendants of the father or may pass through male or female ascendants of the father without differentiating between such ascendants. There was an irreconciliable conflict of views on the question under the old law in dealing with sapinda relationship as understood in the context of prohibited degrees of marriage and the relevant texts were differently interpreted. Even if reference to the old law on the subject is deemed permissible no useful guidance can be derived by reverting to the controversy under the old law however interesting the subject may be. The use of the word 'through' in the expression 'in the line of ascent through the father' and the word 'generation' which means a single succession in natural descent, indicate that the relationship is not confined to the case of direct male ascendants of the father and it is submitted that the language used must be understood as comprehending both male and female ascendants of the father so that in tracing the line of ascent to the fifth generation through the father there can be the intervention of both male and female ascendants. Moreover there is other intrinsic evidence which supports this construction and that is the use of the expression 'lineal ascendant' in clause (f) (ii) which is also used in clause (g). In latter clause it is obvious that the expression lineal ascendant applies both to the male and female ascendants of a father and mother. Explanation (i) also supports this construction. It may be said on the other hand that while one's own maternal line is shortened to three generations there is no reason why the father's maternal line and even the father's mother's maternal line should feature in the computation and largely increase the number of sapinda relations. The language of the clause, however, supports the construction submitted above.

6. Sapinda relationship includes relationship by half or uterine blood as well as by full blood and also by adoption. It also includes both legitimate and illegitimate blood relationship.

The following diagrams will enable the reader to understand the rules applicable in determining sapinda relationship in respect of marriage through the bridegroom's father:

In the above diagram A is the bridegroom; F is his father; *F*1 to *F*4 are his father's paternal ancestors; FM is his father's mother; and FMF, FMFF and FMFFF are his father's mother's paternal ancestors. S, SS, SSS, *SSS*1 and SSSS are the son, grandson, great grandsons and great great grandson of *F*3. B is another son of FMFF. *D*1 to *D*11 are all females relationship between whom and A is to be considered.

(a) *F*3, the common ancestor of A and *D*2, is the father's father's father's father of A and the mother's father of *D*2. As *F*3 is the fifth generation from A in A's father's line and the third generation from *D*2 in her mother's line, A and *D*2 are sapindas of each other.

(b) *F*3, the common ancestor of A and *D*4 is the father's father's father's father of A and the mother's father's father of *D*4. *F*3 is the fifth generation from A in A's father's line but he is the fourth generation from *D*4 in her mother's line, A and *D*4 are, therefore, not sapindas. *D*3, however, is a sapinda of A.

(c) *F*3 in the above diagram is the fifth generation from A in A's father's line. He is in the fourth generation from *D*5 in her father's line; and the fifth generation from *D*6 in her father's line. A is sapinda of *D*5 and also of *D*6. A is not, however, a sapinda of *D*7 because *F*3 is in the sixth generation from *D*7 in her father's line.

(d) *F*4 is the 6th generation from A in A's father's line. So no sapinda relationship can exist between A and any female descendant of *F*4 (other than in the line of *F*3) although such female descendant may not be removed from *F*4 by more than the specified number of generations.

(e) FMFFF also is the 6th generation from A and the position of A and any female descendant of FMFFF (other than in the line of FMFF) will be same as in the previous illustration.

(f) FMFF, the common ancestor of A and *D*9, is the father's mother's father's father of A and the mother's father of *D*9. As FMFF is the fifth generation from A in A's father's line and the third generation from *D*9 in her mother's line, A and *D*9 are sapindas of each other.

(g) FMFF, the common ancestor of A and *D*11, is the father's mother's father's father of A and the father's mother's father's father of *D*11. As FMFF is the fifth generation from A in A's father's line and the fifth generation from *D*11 in her father's line, A and *D*11 are sapindas of each other.

In the above diagram A is the bridegroom. *F*2 is his father's father's father. S, SS, SSS, SSSI and SSSS are the son, grandson, great grandsons and great great grandson of *F*2, *D*1 to *D*8 are all females relationship between whom and A is to be considered.

(a) *F*2, the common ancestor of A and *D*1 to *D*8, is the fourth generation from A in A's father's line. He is the third generation from *D*2 in her mother's line and the fourth generation from *D*3 in her mother's line. A and *D*2 are sapindas but A and *D*3 are not sapindas of each other.

(b) A and *D*4 are sapindas of each other because *F*2 the common ancestor is the fourth generation from A in A's father's line and the third generation from *D*4 in her father's line. But A and *D*5 are not sapindas of each other because *F*2 the common ancestor is in the fourth generation from *D*5 in her mother's line.

(c) A and *D*6 are sapindas of each other because *F*2 the common ancestor is the fourth generation from A in A's father's line and the fourth generation from *D*6 in her father's line.

(d) A and *D*7 are sapindas of each other because *F*2 the common ancestor is the fourth generation from A in A's father's line and the fifth generation from *D*7 in her father's line.

(e) A and *D*8 are not sapindas of each other because *F*2 the common ancestor though the fourth generation from A in A's father's line is the sixth generation from *D*8 in her father's line.

The following diagram will enable the reader to understand the rules applicable in determining sapinda relationship in respect of marriage through the bridegroom's mother:

In the above diagram A is the bridegroom; M is his mother; MF is his mother's father; MM is his mother's mother; MFF is his mother's father's father; MMF ih his mother's mother's father; MFBro. is his mother's father's brother; MFSis. is his mother's father's sister; MBro. is his mother's brother; MSis. is his mother's sister; MMBro. is his mother's mother's brother; MMSis. is his mother's mother's sister; MBS is his mother's brother's son; MBSS is his mother's brother's son's son; and MSis. S is his mother's sister's son. *D*1 to *D*11 are all females relationship between whom and A is to be considered.

(a) MF is the common ancestor of A and also of *D*1 and *D*2. *D*1 is A's mother's brother's daughter. MF is in the third generation from A in A's mother's line and also in the third generation from *D*1 in her father's line. A and *D*1 are sapindas of each other. [It will be seen from clause (g) that they are also within the degrees of prohibited relationship being children of brother and sister.] The relationship of A and *D*2 is, however, different. Although MF the common ancestor is in the third generation from A in A's mother's line he is in the fourth generation from *D*2 in *D*2's mother's line. A and *D*2 are, therefore, not sapindas of each other. It will also be seen that they are not within the prohibited degrees of relationship under clause (g).

(b) MF is the common ancestor of A and also of *D*3 and *D*4. *D*3 is A's mother's brother's son's son's daughter and *D*4 is A's mother's brother's son's son's daughter. MF is the third generation from A in A's mother's line; in the fourth generation from *D*3 in *D*3's father's line; and in the fifth generation from *D*4 in *D*4's father's line. A and *D*3 are, therefore, sapindas of each other. So also A and *D*4 are sapindas of each other.

(c) MF is the common ancestor of A and *D*5. *D*5 is A's mother's sister's son's daughter. MF is the third generation from A in A's mother's line and the fourth generation from *D*5's father's line. A and *D*5 are, therefore, sapindas of each other.

(d) MF is the common ancestor of A and also of *D*6 and *D*7. *D*6 is A's mother's sister's daughter. MF the common ancestor is the third generation from A in A's mother's line and the third generation from *D*6 in *D*6's mother's line. A and *D*6 are, therefore, sapindas of each other. [It will be seen from the clause (g) that they are also within the degrees of prohibited relationship being children of two sisters.] The relationship of A and *D*7 is, however, different. Although MF the common ancestor is in the third generation from A in A's mother's line he is in the fourth generation from *D*7 in *D*7's mother's line. A and *D*7 are, therefore, not sapindas of each other. It will also be seen that they are not within the degrees of prohibited relationship under clause (g).

(e) MFF is the fourth generation from A in A's mother's line. So no sapinda relationship can exist between A and any female descendant of MFF (other than in the line of MF to which A himself belongs) although the latter may not be removed from MFF by more than the specified number of generations. Thus in the diagram above *D*8 who is A's mother's father's brother's daughter and *D*9 who is A's mother's father's sister's daughter, although they are only in the third generation from MFF the common ancestor, are not the sapindas of A.

(f) Similarly MMF is the fourth generation from A in A's mother's line. So no sapinda relationship can exist between A and any female descendant of MMF (other than in the line of MM to which A himself belongs). Thus in the diagram above *D*10 who is A's mother's mother's brother's daughter and *D*11 who is A's mother's mother's sister's daughter, although they are only in third generation from MMF the common ancestor, are not the sapindas of A.

Explanation.—Sub-clauses (i) to (iii) of the Explanation relate to clauses (f) and (g) and expressly state that relationship between the parties as sapindas of each other or between the parties as being within prohibited degrees is to be understood as including relationship by half or uterine blood as well as by full blood, and also by adoption. The relationship is also to be understood as including both legitimate and illegitimate blood relationship.

Section 12 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, also contains a rule similar to the rule in sub-clause (iii) of the Explanation. It lays down that an adopted child shall be deemed to be the child of his or her adoptive father or mother for all purposes with effect from the date of the adoption. That rule, therefore, applies to relationship for all purposes including the bar of sapinda relationship and degrees of prohibited relationship. It may also be noted that as laid down in proviso (a) to that section an adopted child cannot marry any person whom he or she could not have married if he or she had continued in the family of his or her birth. Reference may also be made to the Notes under Section 12 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

Illustrations

(i) In illustration (a) at p. 678 above A and *D*2 are shown to be sapindas of each other. It will not make any difference whether *F*2 and *D*1 were related by full blood or half blood. It will not make any difference if *D*1 was not the daughter of *F*3 and full sister of *F*2 but was the uterine sister of *F*2. Similarly in illustration (b) at p. 624 above it will not make any difference whether *F*2 and S were full brothers or half-brothers or uterine brothers.

(ii) In illustration (f) at p. 678 above A and *D*9 are shown to be sapindas of each other. It will not make any difference whether FMF and *D*8 the mother of *D*9 were related by full blood or half blood. It will not make any difference if *D*8 was not the daughter of FMFF and full sister of FMF but was the uterine sister of FMF. Similarly in illustration (g) at p. 678 above it will not make any difference whether FMF and B were full brothers or half brothers or uterine brothers.

(iii) In illustration (a) at p. 679 above A and *D*1 are shown to be sapindas of each other. It will not make any difference whether M and her brother, who is the father of *D*1, were related by full blood or half blood. It will not make any difference if the father of *D*1 was not the son of MF and full brother of M but was the uterine brother of M. Similar will be the position of A in case of *D*3 and *D*4 in illustration (b) at p. 679 above and it will not make any difference whether M and her brother, the lineal ascendant of *D*3 and *D*4, were full brother and sister, or half brother and sister or uterine brother and sister. Similar also will be the position of A in case of *D*5 and *D*6 in illustrations (c) and (d) at p. 679 above and it will not make any difference whether M and her sister, the lineal ascendant of *D*5 and *D*6, were full sisters or half sisters or uterine sisters.

(iv) A is the legitimate son of his parents F and M. D is the legitimate daughter of her parents *F*1 and *M*1. M and *M*1 were the illegitimate daughters of their mother MM. MM is the third generation in the line of ascent through the mother in case of both A and D. A and D are sapindas of each other although they are related only by illegitimate blood relationship.

(v) In illustration (a) at p. 679 above A and *D*1 are shown to be the sapindas of each other. It will not make any difference that there was illegitimate blood relationship between them. Thus *D*1 will be a sapinda of A even if M and the father of *D*1 were not related by any legitimate blood relationship but were related by illegitimate blood relationship.

(vi) In illustration (g) at p. 678 above A and *D*11 are shown as sapindas of each other. FMFF is the fifth generation from A in A's father's line and the fifth generation from *D*11 in her father's line. It will make no difference to the sapinda relationship for marriage between them that FMF and B were not brothers by legitimate relationship and were related only by illegitimate blood relationship.

The explanation it will be noticed speaks of relationship by blood or adoption. Relationship by marriage is not by itself an impediment to marriage. Thus a man may marry his deceased or divorced wife's sister or the daughter of such sister.

Cl. (g): "Degrees of prohibited relationship".—Clause (g) of the section defines degrees of prohibited relationship. Section 5 [Cl. (iv)] lays down as one of the conditions of a valid marriage that the parties must not be related to each other within the prohibited degrees, unless such marriage is sanctioned by custom or usage governing both the parties. The rules laid down in this clause relating to sapinda relationship are based on the principle of exogamy. The general rule of Hindu law was that parties to a marriage should not be sapindas of each other. But this relationship was interpreted in different ways and the rule itself had been subjected to modification by custom. A definition of "prohibited degrees" was necessary because there was great diversity among Hindus in different parts of India as to what were the prohibited degrees for marriage. Some limit had to be prescribed to prevent incestuous marriages and it was necessary that the rules should if possible be in conformity with the principles of exogamy and eugenics which were at the basis of the ancient rule which prohibited marriages between persons belonging to the same gotra or the same pravara. Custom had materially modified the rigour of that rule and the rules laid down in this and the preceding clause obviously aim at uniformity and certainty on this important question. It will be noticed that in some cases the prohibition laid down in clauses (f) and (g) will be overlapping.

The degrees of prohibited relationship enumerated in sub-clauses (i) to (iv) of clause (g) are between persons of very close relationship some of them being related only by marriage. Sub-clauses (ii) and (iii) which refer to wives or some very close relations include persons with whom relationship by marriage may have ceased to subsist by reason of divorce or remarriage. Thus for instance a wife of the brother or of the father's brother or of the mother's brother would be within the degrees of prohibited relationship under sub-clause (iii) even if she had been divorced or even if she had been remarried to some other person after divorce or death of that brother or father's brother or mother's brother and the subsequent marriage had ceased to subsist.

Explanation.—See Notes under 'Explanation' at p. 680 supra.

4. Save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act.—

(a) any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or any custom or usage as part of that law in force immediately before the commencement of this Act shall cease to have effect with respect to any matter for which provision is made in this Act;

Overriding effect of Act.

(b) any other law in force immediately before the commencement of this Act shall cease to have effect in so far as it is inconsistent with any of the provisions contained in this Act.

Over-riding effect of the Act.—This section gives over-riding application to the provisions of the Act and in respect of any of the matters dealt with in the Act, it repeals in effect all existing laws, whether in the shape of enactments or otherwise, which are inconsistent with this Act. As already pointed out the Act brings about some fundamental and radical changes in the law relating to marriage and the result is that immediately on the coming into operation of the Act the law relating to marriage whether by virtue of any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law ceases to have effect with respect to all matters dealt with in the Act. The Act practically supersedes the rules of the law relating to marriage contained in any Central or State enactment and any other law in force immediately before it came into operation by enacting that all such laws shall cease to have effect in so far as they are inconsistent with any provisions contained in this Act.

The Act is a codifying enactment (j). It does not merely crystallise or declare the existing law upon the subject but deliberately departs from that law in respect of various matters. It supersedes prior law and lays down the whole of the law relating to marriage in the form of a code and so far as it goes must be read as a complete enactment. Therefore, in matters governed by the enactment appeal to any rule of law previously applicable to Hindus is now permissible only if no provision for the same is made in the Act. Matters expressly saved from the operation of the Act, of course, continue to be governed by the previous law statutory or otherwise (k).

The section it will be noticed has a characteristic marginal note "Over-riding effect of the Act" which clearly shows the general trend of the section. In some States divorce had already been allowed on certain grounds as the result of legislation and the object of the present Act was to lay down a uniform and comprehensive law governing all Hindus. It will be seen from section 30 of the Act and the Notes thereunder that the Act repeals some of those statutes and does not seek to repeal all of them. Therefore, the Legislature having expressly repealed certain Acts by section 30 had to deal with other laws which continued on the statute book and which might have provisions with regard to matters dealt with in this Act. It is with regard to those matters that provision is made under sub-section (b) of this section that those laws to the extent that they deal with matters which are inconsistent with the provisions of this Act shall cease to have validity and effect. Reference may be made to sections 29 and 30 of the Act which deal with savings and repeals.

"Save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act".—The initial words of this section and section 29 may be read together. Matters expressly saved from the operation of the Act continue to be governed by the previous law statutory or otherwise (*k*1).

---

(j) See p. 665, supra.

(k) See S. 29, post.

One outstanding exclusion from the operation of the Act is contained in sec. 29(4) and relates to marriages solemnized under the Special Marriage Act, 1954, whether the marriage was solemnized before or after the commencement of this Act. Such marriages are not affected nor governed by any provision contained in this Act but are regulated by the provisions of that special enactment (l).

Another important saving is contained S. 29(2) of this Act which enacts that nothing contained in this Act shall be deemed to affect any right recognised by custom or conferred by any special enactment to obtain the dissolution of a Hindu marriage, whether solemnized before or after the commencement of this Act.

Reference may also be made to S. 5(iv), S. 5(v) and S. 7.

Act is not retrospective in its operation.—It is a fundamental and firmly established rule of interpretation that a statute which deals with rules of substantive law, shall not be construed to have retrospective operation unless such a construction appears very clearly in the terms of the Act, or arises by necessary implication. The general rule is that where a statute is passed altering the law it is to be presumed as intended to apply to a state of facts coming into existence after the Act. A necessary and logical corollary to the rule that retrospectivity is not to be presumed is that even in case of a statute intended to affect existing rights it is not to be construed to have any greater restrospectivity than is rendered necessary by the language used unless to do so would result in absurdity or an anomalous situation. In these matters the Courts have been more guided by considerations of substantial justice and convenience than rigid attention to strict grammatical form. There is the clear indication in this section—given by the words "shall cease to have effect"—and in some other important sections of the Act that it is not intended that they should have retroactive effect. A contrary rule would obviously have disastrous consequences and result in manifest injustice.

The general rule that an enactment like the present should operate prospectively and not retrospectively—nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet—has been accepted by the Legislature and the exceptions to its application in the Act are indeed few. The word retrospective is used in several different senses. A statute is "not properly called a retrospective statute because a part of the requisites for its action is drawn from time antecedent to its passing" (*l*1). Section 10 states the grounds on which judicial separation may be decreed in case of a marriage whether solemnized before or after the commencement of this Act; section 12 lays down certain grounds on which a marriage whether solemnized before or after the commencement of this Act becomes voidable; and section 13 lays down the grounds on which any marriage solemnized whether before or after the commencement of this

---

(*k*1) Thus, for instance, provisions of Travancore Ezhava Act, which is a special enactment, are operative: Vasappan v. Sarada ('58) A. Ker. 39 (F.B.); (1957) Ker. 998.

(l) See Introductory Note, pp. 655-656, supra.

(*l*1) Maxwell on Interpretation of Statutes, (1962) 11th Edition, p. 211.

Act may be dissolved. In general and substantially they confer new rights and cannot strictly be said to have retrospective operation.

Constitutional guarantees.—There is nothing in the Constitution which renders this section or section 5 or other provisions of the Act ultra vires the same (m).

HINDU MARRIAGES

5. A marriage may be solemnized between any two Hindus, if the following conditions are fulfilled, namely:—

Ceremonies for a Hindu marriage.

(i) neither party has a spouse living at the time of marriage;

(ii) neither party is an idiot or a lunatic at the time of the marriage;

(iii) the bridegroom has completed the age of eighteen years and the bride the age of fifteen years at the time of the marriage;

(iv) the parties are not within the degrees of prohibited relationship, unless the custom or usage governing each of them permits of a marriage between the two;

(v) the parties are not sapindas of each other, unless the custom or usage governing each of them permits of a marriage between the two;

(vi) where the bride has not completed the age of eighteen years, the consent of her guardian in marriage, if any, has been obtained for the marriage.

This section lays down the conditions for a Hindu marriage solemnized after the commencement of the Act. The section must be read with section 7 which deals with marriage ceremonies. Non-fulfilment of the conditions relating to mental capacity and age laid down in this section do not, however, render null and void a marriage otherwise valid (n).

No marriage between Hindus can be valid unless:

(1) in case of a marriage solemnized before the commencement of this Act it was valid under the previous law relating to marriage; but a marriage solemnized between Hindus before the commencement of this Act, if otherwise valid, shall not be deemed to be invalid or ever to have been invalid by reason only of the fact that the parties thereto belonged to the same gotra or pravara or belonged to different castes, viz. Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya or Shudra or to different religions, viz. Hindu, Buddhist, Jain or Sikh [S. 29(1)];

---

(m) Ram Prasad v. State of Uttar Pradesh ('57) A.A. 411.

(n) See Sections 11, 10(1)(1), 13(1)(iii) and 18 and Notes under clauses (ii) and (iii) infra. Also see Mohinder Kaur v. Major Singh ('72) P. & H. 184.

(2) in case of a marriage performed, after the coming into force of this Act, it is solemnized in accordance with the customary rites and ceremonies of either party as laid down in S. 7 and fulfils all the primary conditions affecting the validity of the same; or

(3) it is a civil marriage contracted in accordance with the Special Marriage Act, 1954, or previous legislation relating to civil marriages.

Conception of a Hindu marriage under the Act.—There was some divergence of opinion on the question whether under the Hindu law as applied by Courts in India marriage was a sacrament or both a sacrament and contract. That it was a sacrament was not questioned but in some cases the Courts expressed the view that it was not merely a sacrament but also a civil contract. Controversy arose when the Court had to determine some legal consequences of marriage and resolve certain difficult questions which arose in divorce cases under the law enacted by some States. Introduction of the principle of a civil contract while it helped to support the conclusion reached in the particular case was, however, apt to give rise to a misconception and greater difficulties in other cases. As already pointed out in the Introduction, in Hindu law the admixture of religion and ethics with legal precepts was naturally congruent. It was not possible, indeed, always to draw any hard line of logical demarcation between matters secular and religious because certain questions such for instance as marriage and adoption had the aspects of both. The demarcation between religious and legal precepts particularly on questions of marriage was rather thin and a number of questions were dealt with by the Smritikars as appertaining to Achara (rituals) and not to Vyavahara (law proper). Marriage under Hindu law was primarily and essentially a sacrament. That was its religious aspect. Its secular aspect was of a gift of the bride to the bridegroom and from its very nature the element of consensus which must accompany gift and its acceptance had to be present. Having elements both religious and secular it was the source and foundation of the status of the parties; and of their right to associate in religious observances and also of correlative rights and duties in temporal matters.

What the concept of a Hindu marriage now under the Act is can only be gathered from a consideration of the relevant provisions of the Act in their proper perspective. The Act over-rides all the rules of the law of marriage hitherto applicable to Hindus whether by virtue of any text or rule of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law in respect of all matters dealt with in it (o). A Hindu marriage under the Act must be solemnized in accordance with the customary rites and ceremonies of at least one of the parties thereto (p) and must fulfil the conditions prescribed for the same. In the Hindu Code Bill and the Bill as it emerged from the Select Committee two kinds of marriage were recognised and there was a provision that marriage between Hindus must be either a civil marriage or a sacramental marriage and the requisite of a sacramental marriage apart from other conditions was that it must be solemnized in accordance with such customary rites and ceremonies of either party thereto as are essential for such marriage.

---

(o) Section 4.

(p) Section 7.

The Act, it will be noticed, does not use the expression sacramental marriage but speaks of a "Hindu marriage solemnized in accordance with the customary rites and ceremonies of either party", presumably because of the very wide connotation of the expression "Hindu" and the inappropriateness of emphasizing the sacramental aspects when the customary rights and ceremonies of one of the parties according to which a marriage is solemnized may not require any ceremonies insisted upon for a marriage which was hitherto understood as a sacrament and a gift. It is also not possible to say that the legal concept of marriage under the Act is one of contract. This does not mean that the element of consent is unimportant. There must be the consensus of the parties to the solemnization of the marriage. This element of consent was present even in the concept of a Hindu marriage being entirely a sacrament and a gift because it was an indispensable part of the ceremony that the gift should be accepted. Section 12 (1) (a) rules that a marriage shall be voidable and may be annulled by a decree of nullity on the ground that the consent of the petitioner (or of the guardian in marriage) was obtained by force or fraud. A Hindu marriage under the Act, it is submitted, is not entirely or necessarily a sacrament (sanskara) but a union of one man with one woman to the exclusion of all others satisfied by solemnization of the customary rites and ceremonies of either party essential for a marriage: and directly it exists, creates a relation and a status not imposed or defined by contract but by law. There must be no incapacity in the parties to marry one another by reason of a prior subsisting marriage of either of them with any other person or by reason of prohibited relationship or sapinda relationship. A "Hindu marriage" does not refer to Hinduism as a religion but relates to all persons who are Hindus in the wide connotation of the expression.

Solemnization of Hindu marriage.—This section lays down the conditions for a Hindu marriage which must be fulfilled in case of any marriage between two Hindus which can be solemnized in accordance with the requirements of this Act. The word 'solemnize' means, in this connection, to celebrate the marriage with proper ceremonies and in due form. Unless the marriage is celebrated or performed with proper ceremonies and due form it cannot be said to be 'solemnized' (*p*1). Section 7 rules that a Hindu marriage—that is, one under the present Act—must, after the commencement of the Act, be solemnized in accordance with the customary rites and ceremonies of one of the parties to it and where such rites and ceremonies include the saptapadi (taking of seven steps by the bridegroom and the bride jointly before the sacred fire) that ceremony must be observed. 'Solemnized' refers to the rites and ceremonies of marriage. What is required is substantial compliance with only those rites and ceremonies performance of which is, by the customary law of either party, deemed as absolutely necessary. Non-performance of such rites and ceremonies of prime necessity would be regarded as failure to solemnize the marriage and no valid Hindu marriage can result. This is because a marriage not duly solemnized by performance of the essential ceremonies is, under the Act, no marriage at all (q). Reference may be made to Notes under S. 7 post.

---

(*p*1) Bhaurao v. State of Maharashtra ('65) A.S.C. 1153.
A.S.C. 1564; Priya Bala v. Suresh Chandra ('71)

(q) See Section 7 and Notes under it.

Cl. (i): Monogamy.—Clause (i) of this section introduces monogamy which is essentially the voluntary union for life of one man with one woman to the exclusion of all others. It enacts that neither party must have a spouse living at the time of marriage. The expression 'spouse' here used means a lawfully married husband or wife. Before a valid marriage can be solemnized both parties to such marriage must be either single or divorced or a widow or a widower and then only they are competent to enter into a valid marriage. If at the time of performance of the marriage rites and ceremonies one or other of the parties had a spouse living and the earlier marriage had not already been set aside the later marriage is no marriage at all. Being in contravention of the condition laid down in this clause it is void ab initio.

The general rule of matrimonial law that a party to a marriage of which the other party is incompetent to join in the celebration because of the existence of a previous husband or wife, is entitled without recourse to any court to marry anyone else because that particular marriage is not in law a marriage at all, is applicable equally well to marriages under the Act. A person, an innocent party to a bigamous marriage, may go to a court for a declaration that the bigamous marriage is null and void. That would be for the purpose of precaution or record or evidence. But the bigamous marriage is non-existent and simply because there is no recourse to the court it cannot be said that it exists unless and until a decree is passed declaring it to be null and void (r). Section 17 in terms lays down that such a marriage is null and void and imposes punishment for bigamy as provided in the Penal Code.

This provision which prohibits bigamy does not contravene Art. 25 of the Constitution (*r*1).

A decree for divorce terminates the status of the parties as married persons and either is after such a decree competent to remarry since the prior marriage having been dissolved is no impediment to such remarriage. Section 15 enacts: "When a marriage has been dissolved by a decree of divorce and either there is no right of appeal against the decree or, if there is such a right of appeal, the time for appealing has expired without an appeal having been presented, or an appeal has been presented but has been dismissed, it shall be lawful for either party to the marriage to marry again: Provided that it shall not be lawful for the respective parties to marry again unless at the date of such marriage at least one year has elapsed from the date of the decree in the court of the first instance." Divorce though not allowed by Hindu law is by custom and usage recognised in certain communities and remarriage of either party is also permissible. Section 29 expressly saves from the operation of the Act all rights recognised by custom or any special enactment to obtain dissolution of marriage whether solemnized before or after the commencement of this Act.

Cl. (ii): Mental capacity.—This clause lays down as one of the conditions for a Hindu marriage that neither party must be an idiot or a lunatic and section 12 (1) (b) renders, at the instance of a party, the marriage voidable, if the other party was an idiot or a lunatic at the time of the marriage. The requirement is a very simple one which does not demand any high degree of intelligence on the part of the parties to comprehend that marriage is being solemnized and there is always a very strong presumption that the requisite mental capacity was present.

---

(r) Reference may be made to William Hudson v. Webster, A.I.R. (1937) Mad. 565.

(*r*1) Ram Prasad v. State of Uttar Pradesh ('61) A. All. 334.

Reference may be made to Notes under section 12 (1) (b).

The scheme of the Act in its relation to mental capacity and age of the parties affecting formation of marriage is different from that under the Special Marriage Act, 1954. The Act although it lays down in clause (ii) of this section that neither party to the marriage should be an idiot or lunatic, does not render per se void the marriage of such a person (s) but makes it only voidable (t). Further, the Act although it lays down in cl. (iii) of this section as one of the conditions of a Hindu marriage the rule relating to the age of the parties, does not render void or even voidable a marriage in contravention of the same (u).

Cl. (iii): Age of the parties: Consent.—The Act does not in terms state that consent of the parties is necessary for a valid marriage but lays down the condition that at the time of marriage the bridegroom must have completed the age of eighteen and the bride the age of fifteen years; and where the bride has not completed the age of eighteen, the consent of her guardian in marriage must have been obtained for the marriage. Absence of consent of the parties or of the guardian in marriage of the bride does not, however, render the marriage void or even voidable if otherwise duly solemnized and the prime conditions are fulfilled. But a marriage may be annulled by a decree of nullity under section 12 (1) (c) on the ground that it was voidable, where the consent of the petitioning spouse or the guardian in marriage of the petitioner was obtained by force or fraud. Reference may be made to Notes under S. 12 (1) (c) post.

A marriage solemnized in violation of the requirement as to age laid down in this clause is not void or even voidable but the contravention of the condition is punishable as an offence under section 18 of the Act.

Cl. (iv): Degrees of prohibited relationship.—This clause enacts that no marriage is valid if it is made between persons related to each other within the prohibited degrees, unless such marriage is sanctioned by the custom or usage governing both the parties. The custom which permits of a marriage between persons who are within the degrees of prohibited relationship must fulfil the requirements of a valid custom now given statutory sanction by clause (a) of section 3 which defines the expressions 'custom' and 'usage.' The custom must not be unreasonable or opposed to public policy. No custom would be recognised if it is abhorrent to decency and morality or inconsistent with the practices of good men (v). The rules relating to "degrees of prohibited relationship" are prescribed in the definition clause [S. 3 (g)] and have been discussed under that clause. They are based on the principle of exogamy.

---

(s) See S. 24(1)(i) and S. 4(b) of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, which render such a marriage void.

(t) S. 12(1)(b), post.

(u) See S. 24(1)(i) and S. 4(c) of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, which render such a marriage void.

(v) Balusami v. Balakrishna ('57) A.M. 97.

It will be noticed that the Act deals separately with the questions of prohibited degrees of relationship and sapinda relationship though in some cases both the prohibitions may overlap. The Hindu Marriage Disabilities Removal Act, 1946, provided that notwithstanding any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or any custom or usage, a marriage between Hindus, which was otherwise valid, would not be invalid by reason only of the fact that the parties thereto belonged to the same gotra or pravara. Before that enactment came into force it was held that a man could not marry a girl of the same gotra or pravara the theory being that his father and the girl's father were both descendants of a common ancestor in the male line. Such marriages could only be valid if sanctioned by custom. Section 29 (1) of the present Act re-enacts the above provision of the Hindu Marriage Disabilities Removal Act, 1946, because the latter enactment is now repealed by section 30. The rules now enacted in this and the next clause simplify the position to a considerable extent.

Cl. (v): Sapinda relationship.—This clause enacts that no marriage is valid if it is made between parties who are related to each other as sapindas unless such marriage is sanctioned by usage or custom governing both the parties. The custom which permits of a marriage between persons who are sapindas of each other must fulfil the requirements of a valid custom now given statutory sanction by clause (a) of section 3 which defines the expressions 'custom' and 'usage.' The custom must not be unreasonable or opposed to public policy. No custom would be recognised if it is abhorrent to decency and morality or inconsistent with the practices of good men (w).

The rules relating to "sapinda relationship" are prescribed in the definition clause [S 3(f)] and have been discussed in some detail under that clause. Reference may be made to the diagrams and illustrations given at pp. 677, 678 and 679 supra.

Cl. (vi): Consent of guardian of minor bride.—This clause must be read with clause (iii) above which requires that the bride must have completed the age of fifteen years at the time of marriage. Where, however, the bride has not completed the age of eighteen it is necessary that the guardian in marriage must have given his consent to her marriage. Absence of consent of the guardian in marriage of a bride who is a minor does not render void or even voidable the marriage if otherwise duly solemnized and valid simply on the ground that the bride at the time of marriage had not completed the age of eighteen or even fifteen. But a marriage may be annulled by a decree of nullity of marriage on the ground that it was voidable and avoided under section 12, where the consent of the petitioning spouse or the guardian in marriage was obtained by force or fraud.

Although a marriage solemnized in violation of the rule laid down in this clause is not void or even voidable the contravention of the condition is punishable as an offence under section 18 of the Act.

Section 6 of the Act gives a list of persons entitled to give consent as guardians in marriage.

---

(w) Balusami v. Balakrishna, supra.

Reference may be made to section 6 and particularly sub-section (5) of that section and Notes under that section.

Guardianship in marriage.

6. (1) Wherever the consent of a guardian in marriage is necessary for a bride under this Act, the persons entitled to give such consent shall be the following in the order specified hereunder, namely:—

(a) the father;

(b) the mother;

(c) the paternal grandfather;

(d) the paternal grandmother;

(e) the brother by full blood; as between brothers the elder being preferred;

(f) the brother by half blood; as between brothers by half blood the elder being preferred:

Provided that the bride is living with him and is being brought up by him;

(g) the paternal uncle by full blood; as between paternal uncles the elder being preferred;

(h) the paternal uncle by half blood; as between paternal uncles by half blood the elder being preferred:

Provided that the bride is living with him and is being brought up by him;

(i) the maternal grandfather;

(j) the maternal grandmother;

(k) the maternal uncle by full blood; as between maternal uncles the elder being preferred:

Provided that the bride is living with him and and is being brought up by him.

(2) No person shall be entitled to act as a guardian in marriage under the provisions of this section unless such person has himself completed his or her twenty-first year.

(3) Where any person entitled to be the guardian in marriage under the foregoing provisions refuses, or is for any cause unable or unfit, to act as such, the person next in order shall be entitled to be the guardian.

(4) In the absence of any such person as is referred to in sub-section (1), the consent of a guardian shall not be necessary for a marriage under this Act.

(5) Nothing in this Act shall affect the jurisdiction of a court to prohibit by injunction an intended marriage, if in the interests of the bride for whose marriage consent is required, the court thinks it necessary to do so.

Guardianship in marriage.—Section 5 of the Act lays down as one of the conditions of a Hindu marriage that the bride should have completed the age of fifteen years at the time of marriage [Cl. (iii)]. That section also lays down that where the bride has not completed the age of eighteen years, the consent of her guardian in marriage, if any, should be obtained for the marriage [Cl. (vi)]. As already pointed out the true legal concept of a marriage under the Act is not one of contract (x) and the scheme of the Act, despite these two conditions, is not to render void or even voidable any marriage duly solemnized and otherwise valid simply on the ground that it was in contravention of any of them. The Act does not insist upon free consent of the parties or of the guardian of a minor bride as a condition precedent to the validity of the marriage and it is only where the consent of the petitioner, or of guardian of the bride where such consent is required, has been obtained by force or fraud that the marriage is rendered voidable and annulled on that ground by a decree of nullity of marriage in favour of the aggrieved party [S. 12 (1) (c)].

Violation of the conditions relating to the age of the parties and consent of the guardian in marriage where the bride has not completed the age of eighteen years at the time of marriage, although they do not affect the validity of the ceremonial marriage under the Act, are made punishable under clauses (a) and (c) of section 18 of the Act.

Persons who may act as guardians in marriage.—The Smritikars and the Commentators prescribed rules for guardianship in marriage. The present section substantially codifies the previous law relating to persons who may act as guardians in marriage, but the mother is now given a higher place immediately after the father, and the paternal grandmother and some maternal relations are recognised for the purpose. The list is rather long but has the merit of being exhaustive. In case of brother and paternal uncle by half-blood and maternal uncle by full blood who are among the persons enumerated as guardians in marriage, it will be noticed, a condition has been added that the bride must have been living with and been brought up by such relation if he is to act as a guardian in marriage. In the absence of any such person as is mentioned in sub-section (1) the consent can be dispensed with.

Marriage without consent of guardian.—Sub-section (1) specifies the order in which the persons enumerated are entitled to give the necessary consent. The primary duty, and correlative right of giving such consent, rests with the father. But guardianship for the purpose of marriage is not so much a right as a duty and the consent of the guardian, as already pointed out, is not a condition precedent to the validity of the marriage. A marriage duly solemnized and otherwise valid under the Act is not rendered invalid nor voidable because it was brought about without the consent of the guardian in marriage or by a person not entitled to act as a guardian because there was a preferential guardian.

---

(x) P. 657, supra.

Injunction.—The rule referred to above applies only where a marriage has been actually solemnized. But where there is only a betrothal or an agreement for marriage, it is competent to the guardian entitled to act under this section to sue for an injunction to prevent the marriage of the minor bride with a person of whom the guardian does not approve and the court may grant an injunction on such terms and conditions at it may consider necessary to impose on the guardian for the benefit of the bride.

Sub-section (5) recognises jurisdiction in the court to prohibit by injunction an intended marriage of a bride below the age of eighteen years if in the interest of the minor bride it thinks it necessary to do so. It is perfectly consonant with the precepts of Hindu law relating to the rights and duties of guardians in marriage and the doctrine of a general supreme guardianship of the State in case of minors that the court should exercise a wide discretion in the matter even though it does not strictly relate to the property or person of the minor. The assistance of the court may be sought by any person interested in the minor.

7. (1) A Hindu marriage may be solemnized in accordance with the customary rites and ceremonies of either party thereto.

Ceremonies for a Hindu marriage.

(2) Where such rites and ceremonies include the saptapadi (that is, the taking of seven steps by the bridegroom and the bride jointly before the sacred fire), the marriage becomes complete and binding when the seventh step is taken.

Ceremonies for a Hindu marriage.—A Hindu marriage under the Act must be solemnized in accordance with the customary rites and ceremonies of at least one of the two parties thereto and must fulfil the conditions prescribed for the same by sec. 5 of the Act. The word 'solemnize' means, in this connection, to celebrate the marriage with proper ceremonies and in due form. Unless the marriage is celebrated or performed with proper ceremonies and in due form it cannot be said to be 'solemnized'. Merely going through certain ceremonies with the intention that the parties be taken to be married, will not make them ceremonies prescribed by law or approved by any established custom (y). The Act does not, however, prescribe the ceremonies requisite for solemnization of the marriage but leaves it to the parties to choose a form of ceremonial marriage which is in accordance with any custom or usage applicable to either party; and where the form adopted includes the saptapadi—that is the taking of seven steps by the bridegroom and the bride jointly before the sacred fire (homam)—the marriage becomes complete when the seventh step is taken. This is in accord with existing law. This rule relating to the essential ceremonies of a Hindu marriage proceeds on the principle that marriage being one of the sanskaras for a Hindu male or female,

---

(y) Bhaurao v. State of Maharashtra ('65) A.S.C. 1153. 1564; Priya Bala v. Suresh Chandra ('71) A.S.C.

whether belonging to the twice-born castes or a Shudra, must be performed with the necessary religious rites and at the same time recognises the position that the customary rites and ceremonies vary in different parts of the country and also among different castes and communities. The essential rites which may, however, be said to be the requirement common in all ceremonial marriages are:

(1) invocation before the sacred fire, and

(2) saptapadi.

It will be seen that though the section emphasizes the importance of the saptapadi it does not insist upon the same because even under the previous law the rule was that a marriage may be completed by the performance of ceremonies other than those referred to above where it was allowed by the custom of the caste to which the parties belonged. It is competent now to any two persons who are Hindus (as defined in section 2) to solemnize a ceremonial marriage under the Act and all that is insisted upon for the purpose of solemnization of the marriage is that it must be in accordance with the customary rites and ceremonies of either party to the marriage. Persons belonging to different communities and different castes of Hindus have in some places in India different views respecting ceremonial observances and a different estimate of what are generally regarded as the essential rites and ceremonies which must accompany the performance of marriage. It is both just and reasonable, therefore, that the question of the requisite ceremonies must be adjusted in accordance with the custom and usage followed by them or either of them.

As custom is "transcendent law" and expressly recognised by this section in the matter of performance of the marriage ceremonies, it is open to any party called upon to establish validity of a Hindu marriage to show that the customary rites and ceremonies of one of the spouses had been performed. The custom must, of course, be a valid custom. Whether it is a caste custom or a custom of any sub-caste or custom of a particular locality or of a family it must be ancient, certain and reasonable and not opposed to public policy (z). It cannot be enlarged beyond the usage by parity of reasoning since it is the usage that makes the law and not the reason of the thing.

Presumption as to marriage and legitimacy.—There is an extremely strong presumption in favour of the validity of a marriage and the legitimacy of its offspring if from the time of the alleged marriage the parties are recognised by all persons concerned as man and wife and are so described in important documents and on important occasions. The like presumption applies to the question whether the formal requisites of a valid marriage ceremony were satisfied (a). Similarly the fact that a woman was living under the protection of a man who generally lived with her and acknowledged her children raises a strong presumption that she is the wife of that man. But this presumption may be rebutted by proof of facts showing that no marriage could have taken place (b).

---

(z) See definition of 'custom' and 'usage' in Section 3(a). Reference may be made to Rabindra Nath v. State ('69) A.C. 55

(a) See § 438 ante. Also see Guru Charan v. Adikanda Behara ('72) A. Orissa 38.

(b) See § 438 ante.

Factum valet.—The doctrine of 'factum valet' enables to cure the violation of a directory provision or a mere matter of form but does not cure the violation of the fundamental principles or the essence of the transaction. If there are certain essential ceremonies, which are necessary for a marriage, the non-observance of those ceremonies or religious rites cannot be overlooked by applying the doctrine of 'factum valet'. The doctrine applies only where there is no initial want of authority or where there is no positive interdiction. If certain essential rites are necessary for valid marriage, unless it is shown by custom that those ceremonies have been modified, it is imperative upon the parties concerned to observe the formalities laid down by law. Non-observance of those rites cannot be cured by applying the doctrine of 'factum valet.' There are, however, many ceremonies connected with the marriage, which are more or less non-obligatory or directory. If those ceremonies are not performed at the marriage, the omission may be cured by the doctrine of 'factum valet.'

Madras Act 21 of 1967.—This Act relates to validation of certain marriages knows as Suyamariyathai or Seerthiruththa (*b*1).

Registration of Hindu marriages.

8. (1) For the purpose of facilitating the proof of Hindu marriages, the State Government may make rules providing that the parties to any such marriage may have the particulars relating to their marriage entered in such manner and subject to such conditions as may be prescribed in a Hindu Marriage Register kept for the purpose.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), the State Government may, if it is of opinion that it is necessary or expedient so to do, provide that the entering of the particulars referred to in sub-section (1) shall be compulsory in the State or in any part thereof, whether in all cases or in such cases as may be specified, and where any such direction has been issued, any person contravening any rule made in this behalf shall be punishable with fine which may extend to twenty-five rupees.

(3) All rules made under this section shall be laid before the State Legislature, as soon as may be, after they are made.

(4) The Hindu Marriage Register shall at all reasonable times be open for inspection, and shall be admissible as evidence of the statements therein contained and certified extracts therefrom shall, on application, be given by the Registrar on payment to him of the prescribed fee.

(5) Notwithstanding anything contained in this section, the validity of any Hindu marriage shall in no way be affected by the omission to make the entry.

---

(*b*1) Raghuvir Kumar v. Shanmughavadinu ('70) A.M. 330.

Registration of marriage.—Under the Indian law, it is open to two Hindus if they so desire it to contract civil marriage and have it solemnized under the Special Marriage Act, 1954. The provisions relating to the solemnization and registration of a civil marriage are laid down in that Act. Chapter III of that enactment lays down provisions relating also to registration of marriage celebrated in other forms. It is open to two Hindus married according to the ceremonial form to have their marriage registered under that Chapter provided they fulfil the conditions there laid down. Two Hindus, therefore, whose marriage is solemnized in accordance with the provisions of the present enactment can get their marriage registered under that Chapter. The effect of such registration is stated in section 18 of that enactment.

This section enacts that the State Government may make rules relating to the registration of marriages between two Hindus solemnized in the ceremonial form. The obvious and immeasurable advantage of registration is that it facilitates proof of the factum of marriage in disputed cases. The Act does not lay down any rules relating to registration but merely empowers the State Government to make rules providing for registration of Hindu marriages. It also empowers the State Government in its discretion to provide that such registration shall be compulsory. The rules so framed must not in any manner be contrary to any provision of the Act and if they contravence any such provision they would be ultra vires the State Government and of no binding effect.

The rules can provide that the parties to any Hindu marriage, may, and where registration is made compulsory, shall, have the requisite particulars relating to their marriage entered into in the Register of marriages. Sub-section (1) speaks of the 'parties to the marriages' and sub-section (2) speaks of "any person" contravening any rule made in this behalf and although the language is not too clear it would seem that the duty of giving particulars relating to the marriage may be cast on persons other than the parties such for instance as the parents of the parties or the priest who officiates at the marriage ceremonies.

The Register of marriages is to be open for inspection by any member of the public and entries made in it are admissible as evidence.

Consequences of non-registration and penalty for failure to register.—Registration of Hindu marriages under the Act is only for the purposes of preserving a record of the same and facilitating their proof. Omission to do so does not, even when registration is made compulsory by the State, affect in any manner the validity of the marriage but will invite the penalty of a fine which may extend to twenty-five rupees. Furnishing false information by any person legally bound to give information to any public servant on any subject with knowledge or having reason to believe that it is false is punishable as an offence under section 177 of the Penal Code.

Grant of copies.—Sub-section (4) gives an unrestricted right to any member of the public to obtain a certified copy of an entry in the Register on payment of the prescribed fee.

RESTITUTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS AND JUDICIAL SEPARATION

9. (1) When either the husband or the wife has, without reasonable excuse, withdrawn from the society of the other, the aggrieved party may apply, by petition to the district court, for restitution of conjugal rights and the court, on being satisfied of the truth of the statements made in such petition and that there is no legal ground why the application should not be granted, may decree restitution of conjugal rights accordingly.

Restitution of conjugal rights.

(2) Nothing shall be pleaded in answer to a petition for restitution of conjugal rights which shall not be a ground for judicial separation or for nullity of marriage or for divorce.

Restitution of conjugal rights.—Even apart from legislation relating to matrimonial law, decrees for restitution of conjugal rights have been passed by Courts in India in case of all communities though at one time it was questioned whether they had jurisdiction to entertain cases of this description (c). The concept of the existence of the court's power to give this relief was borrowed from English law. Matrimonial causes in England were formerly heard and determined by Ecclesiastical Courts and the earlier English statutes which gave jurisdiction to the King's Courts directed the courts to determine causes as far as possible on the principles of Ecclesiastical Law. The legislature did not alter the Canon Law except in a few matter and the Judges who administered the law were bound by precedents established in the Ecclesiastical Courts. An examination of the decisions of courts in India in matters of restitution of conjugal rights shows that in some respects the general principles underlying the English decisions were accepted, while in some cases they were not adopted. But it is unnecessary now to refer to any of the earlier Indian decisions on the subject. The law enforced in this respect in England was described as barbarous by Lord Herschell (d) but there have since been considerable changes effected in that law and the provisions of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, have rendered petitions for restitution comparatively rare in England.

Basis of the rule and importance of a decree for restitution.—The foundation of the right to bring a suit for restitution of conjugal rights is the fundamental rule of matrimonial law that one spouse is entitled to the society and comfort—consortium—of the other spouse and where either spouse has abandoned or withdrawn from the society of the other without reasonable excuse or just cause the court should grant a decree for restitution.

The importance of the relief by way of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights recognised in this section lies in this that it enables the aggrieved spouse to apply to the court for maintenance under section 25; and maintenance pendente lite may also be claimed by making out a case for the same as provided in sec. 24. This enables a wife who does not desire disruption of the marriage or even judicial separation from the husband to secure provision for her support by an order of the court under the matrimonial jurisdiction conferred on it instead of filing a suit for maintenance under the law relating to maintenance now embodied in the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

---

(c) Dadaji Bhikaji v. Rukmabai (1886) 10 Bom. 301. Moonshe Buzloor Ruheem v. Shumsoonissa Begum (1867) 11 M I.A. 551; Tekait Mon Mohini v. Basanta Kumar (1901) 28 Cal. 751; Bai Jivi v. Narsingh Lalbhai (1926) 51 Bom. 329. Also see § 444 ante.

(d) (1897) A.C. 395, 455.

The more practical importance, however, of this relief by way of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights is that it affords a ground for divorce to either party under section 13(1A) which lays down that either party to a marriage whether solemnized before or after the commencement of the Act, may obtain a decree of divorce on the ground that there has been no restitution of conjugal rights between them for a period of two years or upwards after the passing of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights in a proceeding to which they were parties.

"Petition to the district court".—The petition for restitution of conjugal rights must be made to the "district court" as defined in section 3(b). Reference may be made to Notes under section 19 post. Where a suit is filed instead of a petition the decision is not a nullity the difference being one merely of nomenclature (*d*1).

Restitution when decreed.—This section must be read with sec. 23 of the Act which imposes on the court the duty to inquire into and pass a decree inter alia for restitution of conjugal rights after satisfying itself about certain matters. The petitioner must show that there is a bona fide desire to resume matrimonial cohabitation and to render the rights and duties of matrimonial life. The petitioner who is sincere in that sense can seek the relief but not otherwise (*d*2). The decree may be passed on a petition by either spouse who may be the aggrieved party. Before passing a decree for restitution the court must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that:

> the respondent has, without reasonable excuse, withdrawn from the society of the petitioner; and there is no legal ground why the decree should not be passed.

The legal ground for refusing to grant relief may consist of:

> any of the grounds on which the respondent could have asked for a decree for judicial separation or for nullity of marriage or for divorce [S. 9(2)] (*d*3);
>
> any conduct on the part of the petitioner or fact tantamount to the petitioner taking advantage of his or her own wrong or any disability for the purpose of such relief [S. 23(1)(a)]; > collusion with the respondent [S. 23(1)(c)]; > unnecessary or improper delay in instituting the proceeding [S. 23(1)(d)].
>
>

---

(*d*1) Sivanandi v. Bhagavathyamma ('64) A.M. 237; Kusum Lata v. Kamta Prasad ('65) A.A. 280.

(*d*2) Syal v. Syal ('68) A.P. & H. 489; Jogindra Kaur v. Shivcharan Singh ('65) A.J. & K. 95.

(*d*3) Khageswar v. Aduti Karnani ('67) A. Orissa 80 [husband impotent and cruelty towards wife].

Again, no relief can be granted to the petitioner if the respondent had reasonable excuse (or what is often spoken of in this context as just cause) for withdrawing from the society of the petitioner [S. 9(1)].

Although sub-section (2) lays down in terms express and explicit that nothing can be pleaded in answer which could not have been a ground for judicial separation or for nullity of marriage or for divorce, it is obvious from the section read as a whole that withdrawal from the society of the other for a reasonable excuse, or what is often described as a just cause, would be a plea which if established would be a good defence. This would be so for the obvious reason that relief which a petitioner can claim under the section can only be granted on proof that the other spouse has withdrawn from the society of the petitioner without reasonable excuse [See "Reasonable excuse" or just cause infra]. And despite sub-section (2) it seems equally clear that it would be open to the respondent in answer to plead that there was no valid and subsisting marriage between the parties for if any dispute is raised in that behalf it would be incumbent on the petitioner to establish that there subsists a valid marriage between the parties.

A wife can resist a petition for restitution of conjugal rights on the ground that the husband had married another wife before the Act came into operation and by bringing her case within the ambit of section 13(2)(i) post (*e*1).

Restitution of conjugal rights cannot be refused to a husband on the ground of a custom forfeiting the right of outcasted husband to society of wife (*e*2).

A husband has the right to require his wife to live with him wherever he may choose to reside and special circumstances apart, the Court will not absolve the wife from discharging her corresponding duty (ee). Even an agreement between the parties prior to the marriage that the spouses will live in the house of the wife's father will not affect the husband's right. Such an agreement per se would be no answer to a husband's petition for restitution of conjugal rights (*e*3).

Burden of proof.—The onus of proving that the respondent has, without reasonable excuse, withdrawn from the society of the petitioner must obviously rest on the petitioner. The mere circumstance that the wife's allegation of cruelty in defence in any such case is not proved would not displace that onus (*e*4). But the onus of proving reasonable excuse must rest on the respondent (*e*5). The initial burden being on the petitioner, the petitioner must, as a general rule, lead evidence to establish the averments on which relief is sought (*e*6).

"Reasonable excuse" or just cause.—The question whether conduct falling short of cruelty or any other matrimonial offence can justify one spouse in

---

(*e*1) Veeriah v. Nagiah ('59) A.A.P. 547 (F.B.) Venkatamma v. Venkataswamy Reddy ('63) A. Mys. 118. Deepo v. Kehar Singh ('62) A. Punj. 183; Mallappa v. Neelawwa ('70) A. Mys. 59.

(*e*2) Mohan Lal v. Shanti Devi ('64) A. All. 21 [Also see S. 4(a) of the Act].

(ee) Tirath Kaur v. Kirpal Singh ('64) A. Punj. 28 (wife not willing to give up her job and join husband).

(*e*3) Pothu Raju v. Rodha ('65) A.A.P. 407.

(*e*4) Rebarani v. Ashit ('55) A.C. 162.

(*e*5) Hardeep Singh v. Dalip Kaur ('70) A.P. & H. 284.

(*e*6) Ratnaprabhabai v. Sheshrao ('72) A.B. 182.

leaving another has been much debated in England and judicial opinion on the question is not wholly uniform (f). But the more recent and acceptable view seems to be that the "just cause" must be "grave and weighty" or as it is sometimes said "grave and convincing" and that it may be distinct from a matrimonial offence. It may be distinct from cruelty to the extent that it falls short of or is less than legal cruelty but none the less the reasons for withdrawal from the society of the petitioner must be grave and weighty. In Timmins v. Timmins (g) it was held by the Court of Appeal that the husband was not guilty of cruelty but his conduct was a grave and weighty matter which gave the wife good cause for leaving him and prevented him from obtaining a decree for restitution of conjugal rights unless and until he satisfied the court that, if she returned to him he would behave with conjugal kindness, and, therefore, was a defence to the husband's petition for restitution.

It would seem that conduct of a spouse which for one reason or another falls short of cruelty or any other matrimonial offence would afford reasonable excuse for leaving or withdrawing from the society of the spouse and be a defence to a suit for restitution under the present section. Whether one party has reasonable excuse for leaving the other or staying apart must depend on whether the conduct complained of is of a grave and weighty character. The plea that there was reasonable excuse for the respondent to withdraw from the society of the petitioner must in substance involve an inquiry into facts. Each case must depend on its own facts and circumstances and it is not possible to give an exhaustive statement of what may or may not constitute "reasonable excuse." In the decisions mentioned below (*g*1) the above principles were accepted and relief under the present section was not granted to the petitioner on the ground that the other spouse had withdrawn from the society of the petitioner for a reasonable excuse. A contrary view has been expressed by the High Courts of Andhra Pradesh and Mysore (*g*2) which have held that the "reasonable excuse contemplated by sub-section (i) must be one which would afford a ground either for judicial separation or for nullity of marriage or for divorce."

Delay.—Unnecessary and improper delay in instituting proceedings for restitution of conjugal rights can be a ground for refusing relief under this section (*g*3). Reference may be made to section 23 (1) (d) post.

Separation by mutual consent.—Prior to the passing of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1884, it was regarded as settled law in England that deeds of separation were utterly inoperative to abrogate the duty of co-habitation involved in the tie of marriage and that notwithstanding any such agreement

---

(f) See Edwards v. Edwards (1949) 2 All E.R. 145, (1950) Probate 8 and Pike (1953) 1 All E.R. 232. Also see Dixon v. Dixon (1953) 1 All E.R. 910.

(g) (1953) 2 All. E.R. 187.

(*g*1) Tulsa v. Pannalal ('63) A.M.P. 5. Gurdev Kaur v. Sarwan Singh ('59) A. Punj. 162. Smt. Mango v. Prem Chand ('62) A.A. 447. Also see Bejoy v. Aloka ('69) A.C. 477; Sadhu Singh v. Jagdish Kaur ('69) A. P. & H. 139; Anna Saheb v. Tarabai ('70) A.M.P. 36; Madan Mohan v. Sarla Kohli ('67) A. Punj. 397 (baseless allegations of unchastity); Kanna v. Krishnaswami ('72) A.M. 247; Shanti Devi v. Balbir Singh ('71) A. Delhi 294; Jagadish Lal v. Shyama ('66) A.A. 150 (husband's inability to consummate marriage); Karnail Singh v. Bhupinder Kaur ('73) A.P. & H. 19; Satya Devi v. Ajaib Singh ('73) A. Raj. 20.

(*g*2) Annapurnamma v. Appa Rao ('63) A.A.P. 312; Revanna v. Suseelamma ('67) A. Mys. 165.

(*g*3) Teja Singh v. Sarjit Kaur ('62) A. Punj. 195; Shanti Devi v. Ramesh Chandra ('69) A.P. 27.

it was competent to either party to sue for a decree of restitution of conjugal rights (h). Though an agreement between husband and wife to live apart is not in itself a bar to a petition for restitution of conjugal rights in England the effect of the above Act, which enacted that a respondent who failed to comply with a decree for restitution should be deemed guiity of desertion without reasonable cause, and that a suit for judicial separation might be instituted on that ground, was that the Court was empowered to refuse a decree for restitution where such an agreement was shown to exist and neither party had taken steps to set it aside. It has also been held there that a valid agreement between the spouses to live apart may exist in the absence of a formal deed of separation and without an express covenant not to sue for restitution of conjugal rights (i). The principle underlying the cases on the subject is that an agreement providing for present separation is valid while on the other hand an agreement for future separation is bad and opposed to public policy.

The defence that there was a pre-nuptial contract between the parties to live separate in certain circumstances was raised in some cases in India where restitution was sought and such contracts were held to be void and illegal as interfering with marital duties and opposed to public policy. Those decisions also turned on the principle that such agreements were contrary to the personal law of the parties. But the fundamental difference between a case where an agreement for living separate entered into during the continuance of marriage and an agreement before or at the time of marriage controlling the rights of the parties was not disregarded and only agreements of the latter character were treated as nugatory and infructuous (j).

The present Act lays down in section 13(1A) that a marriage can be dissolved on the ground that there has been no restitution of conjugal rights between the parties for a period of two years or upwards after the passing of the decree, and the position is the same as that under English law after the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1884. There seems no reason why a valid agreement for immediate and not future separation bona fide entered into during the continuance of marriage with a view to enable the parties to live in peace should not be treated as empowering the court to refuse a decree for restitution. It is submitted that a different rule would have the effect of enabling a party to get a decree for divorce on the ground of non-compliance with the decree for restitution on facts contrary to the truth of the case. Moreover a spouse who is living separate after a bona fide agreement of this nature cannot properly be said to have withdrawn from the society of the other spouse without reasonable excuse (*j*1).

Consent Decree.—Reference may be made to Notes under section 23 post.

Mode of execution of decree.—Order 21, rr. 32 and 33, of the Civil Procedure Code, deal with the question of execution of a decree for restitution of

---

(h) Crabb v. Crabb (1868) L.R. 1 P. & D. 601.
(i) Walter v. Walter (1921) P. 302.
(j) Tekait Mon Mohini v. Basant Kumar (1901) 28 Cal. 751; Krishna Aiyar v. Balammal I.L.R. 34 Mad. 398.
(*j*1) A contrary view has been taken in Thirumal v. Rajammal ('68) A.M. 201.

conjugal rights. There can be no sanction or procedure as compulsion by the court to force a party to a marriage to return to the other spouse against his or her will and the more modern procedure is as now laid down in the provisions mentioned above. Section 24 of this Act lays down rules relating to maintenance pendente lite and expenses of proceedings and section 25 lays down rules relating to orders for maintenance which can be made at the time of passing of the decree or at any time subsequent to such decree. Reference may also be made to section 28 and Notes thereunder.

Pending proceedings are governed by this section.—It is submitted that suits for restitution of conjugal rights between Hindus, whose marriage was solemnized in accordance with Hindu law, pending at the date of the commencement of this Act, will be within the ambit of this section. The defences to any such suit can be those mentioned in sub-section (2). A different view has been expressed by the High Court of Punjab (l) but the only question for the determination of the court in that case related to jurisdiction and not to the applicability of the provisions contained in the present section. A suit for restitution of conjugal rights was pending in the court of the Subordinate Judge when the Act came into operation and it was contended that the District Court alone had jurisdiction to proceed with the suit by operation of section 19 of the Act which deals with jurisdiction. The High Court negatived the contention. Section 19 applies only to petitions presented after the Act came into operation and there is no other provision in the Act which affects the jurisdiction of courts which were competent to try pending suits for restitution of conjugal rights (*l*1).

10. (1) Either party to a marriage, whether solemnized before or after the commencement of this Act, may present a petition to the district court praying for a decree for judicial separation on the ground that the other party—

Judicial Separation.

(a) has deserted the petitioner for a continuous period of not less than two years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition; or

(b) has treated the petitioner with such cruelty as to cause a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the petitioner that it will be harmful or injurious for the petitioner to live with the other party; or

(c) has, for a period of not less than one year immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, been suffering from a virulent form of leprosy; or

(d) has, for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding (m) the presentation of the petition, been suffering from venereal disease in a communicable form, the disease not having been contracted from the petitioner; or

(e) has been continuously of unsound mind for a period of not less than two years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition; or

---

(l) Balwant Singh v. Balwant Kaur ('57) A. Punj. 1. Also see Sivanandy v. Bhagavathyamma ('62) A.M. 400, and see Yankappa v. Shavappa ('60) A. Mys. 265. But see Thenku Veeriah v. Tamisetti Nagiah ('59) A.A.P. 547 (F.B.).

(*l*1) This was quoted with approval in Udainath v. Chhaya ('63) A. Orissa 27. Also see S. 29 (3) and Yankappa v. Shavakka ('60) A. Mys. 265.

(m) Amended by Act 73 of 1956. In cl. (d) of sub-sec. (1) of Sec. 10 for the words "has, immediately before", the words "has, for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding" have been substituted.

(f) has, after the solemnization of the marriage, had sexual intercourse with any person other than his or her spouse.

Explanation.—In this section, the expression "desertion", with its grammatical variations and cognate expressions, means the desertion of the petitioner by the other party to the marriage without reasonable cause and without the consent or against the wish of such party, and includes the wilful neglect of the petitioner by the other party to the marriage.

(2) Where a decree for judicial separation has been passed, it shall no longer be obligatory for the petitioner to cohabit with the respondent, but the court may, on the application by petition of either party and on being satisfied of the truth of the statements made in such petition, rescind the decree if it considers it just and reasonable to do so.

Judicial separation.—A legal or judicial separation permits the parties to a marriage to live apart. Sub-section (2) in terms states that where a decree for judicial separation has been passed, it shall no longer be obligatory for either party to cohabit with the other. The effect of the decree is that certain mutual rights and obligations arising from the marriage are as it were suspended and the rights and duties prescribed by the decree are substituted therefor. The decree does not sever or dissolve the marriage tie which continues to subsist. It affords an opportunity for reconciliation and adjustment. It may fall by a reconciliation of the parties in which case the rights of respective parties which flowed from the marriage and were suspended are restored. Where there is no reconciliation and cohabitation is not resumed, it serves after two years of the passing of it as the basis for the dissolution of the marriage by a decree of divorce [S. 13(1A)]. Although in a sense the decree for judicial separation is provisional and conditional the court cannot while passing the decree impose any terms on the parties as to the nature or duration of its operation.

Attention has already been drawn in the Introductory Note to the scheme underlying the various provisions and the scheme of this section and section 13 which deals with dissolution of marriage by a decree of divorce; and the distinction between a decree of judicial separation and one for divorce has also been pointed out. This section lays down the grounds which give either party to a marriage the right to present a petition for a decree of judicial separation. The grounds it will be noticed include all the three principal matrimonial offences, desertion, cruelty and adultery. It will also be noticed that 'desertion' has been expressly given a wide meaning by including 'wilful neglect' of the petitioner on the part of the respondent.

The material language of the section has always in these matters to be borne in mind, for if a court is prone too much to indulge in exposition and attempted definition, there is a risk that there will be substituted for the language chosen by Parliament some other form of words and in an attempt at wide survey some essential factor would be omitted. This seems peculiarly applicable to the matrimonial offences of desertion and cruelty cases relating to which are by far the most common of the matrimonial causes contested before the courts. The circumstances vary infinitely from case to case and the modes of life involved at times present sharp contrasts. The importance therefore, of satisfying the language of the section cannot be overstressed in a branch of the law which has been predominantly judge-made. The following observations of Evershed M.R. cited with approval by Lord Merriman in Simpson v. Simpson (n) should prove useful:

> "It has so often been said that it is obvious—yet it is worth repeating—that all cases that come before this court must be determined on their own particular facts, and I should imagine that in no class of case is that trite observation truer than in matrimonial cases. The circumstances vary infinitely from case to case. The fact is, I think, another reason for a sense of danger in trying to formulate principles of law out of particular circumstances in particular cases, and then treating those principles of law as being, so to speak, explanations or riders to the actual statutory language."

Cl. (a): Desertion.—The expression desertion in the context of matrimonial law represents a legal conception and is one very difficult to define. The essence of desertion is the forsaking and abandonment of one spouse by the other without reasonable cause and without the consent or against the wish of the other. It has been said more than once that no judge has ever attempted to give a comprehensive definition of desertion, and that probably no judge would ever succeed in doing so, but among the descriptions of desertion one which has always appealed to courts trying matrimonial causes is that "desertion" is "a withdrawal not from a place, but from a state of things" (o). The essential ingredients of this offence in order that it may furnish a ground for relief are:

(a) the factum of separation; and

(b) the intention to bring cohabitation permanently to an end—animus deserendi;

(c) the element of permanence which is a prime condition requires that both these essential ingredients should continue during the entire statutory period.

The clause lays down the rule that desertion to amount to a matrimonial offence must be for a continuous period of not less than two years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition. This clause has to be read with the Explanation. The Explanation purports to give the meaning of the expression desertion with all its grammatical variations and cognate expressions. Permanent forsaking and abandonment (p) are expressions often used in the context of the matrimonial offence of desertion. The Explanation as the Joint Committee observed has widened the definition of desertion so as to include "wilful neglect" of the petitioning spouse by the respondent. It states

---

(n) (1951) 1 All E.R. 955, 958. Also see per Lord Atkin in Donoghue v. Stevenson (1932) A.C. 562, 583.

(o) Pulford v. Pulford (1923) P. 18, 21; Khorshed v. Muncherji (1937) 39 Bom. L.R. 1141, 1142.

(p) Cf. S. 18(2)(a) of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

that to amount to a matrimonial offence desertion must be without reasonable cause and without the consent or against the wish of the petitioner and that wilful neglect of one spouse by the other is desertion within the meaning of the expression. It will be seen that the meaning given is somewhat tautological but the Explanation has the merit of making it abundantly clear that the legislature intended to give to the expression a wide import which includes wilful neglect of the petitioner by the other party to the marriage. It is also clear that the meaning given includes both actual desertion as well as what is generally referred to as constructive desertion in which although there is no ostensible abandonment of one spouse by the other there is expulsive conduct manifesting animus deserendi. One effect of including "wilful neglect" in the meaning of desertion is that wilful neglect of one spouse by the other is sufficient to establish abandonment or expulsive conduct and amounts to proof of the animus deserendi on the part of the latter which is an essential ingredient of the offence. This will have considerable bearing in cases of constructive desertion. It may be pointed out that neither sec. 27 (b) of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, nor sec. 1 (1) (b) of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950. use in this context the expressions "without the consent" or "against the wish" and only say " has deserted the petitioner without cause." This is obviously to avoid any attempt at defining an expression which is extremely difficult if not impossible to define in a manner which would fully bring out its comprehensive connotation. It is enough to satisfy the requirement of the rule that the abandonment was without reasonable cause and without consent. It is not necessary to show that it is against the wish of the person charging it. This latter expression was used in sec. 3 (9) of the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, and construed as meaning contrary to an expressly expressed wish of the person charging abandonment (q).

The statutory requirement as to time during which the "state of things" should continue is fixed at a continuous period of not less than two years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition. Thus the quality of permanence is one of the essential elements which differentiates desertion from wilful or voluntary separation. For the offence of desertion, so far as the deserting spouse is concerned, two essential conditions must be there, namely, (1) the factum of separation, and (2) the intention to bring cohabitation permanently to an end (animus deserendi). Similarly two elements are essential so far as the deserted spouse is concerned: (1) the absence of consent, and (2) absence of conduct giving reasonable cause to the spouse leaving the matrimonial home to form the necessary intention aforesaid. The petitioner for divorce bears the burden of proving those elements in the two spouses respectively and their continuance throughout the statutory period (r).

A large body of case-law has developed round the legal significance of 'desertion' both in England and in India and the broad general rules deducible from the same will be of great assistance and guidance in cases which fall for determination under the present enactment though of course opinions expressed in the context of enactments even slightly differently worded must always be read with the caution most commonly needed in their application to cases arising in different circumstances and varied situations. Moreover, as already pointed out, the language of the present clause and Explanation are intended to give a wide import to the expression though no radical innovation has been made. In Bipin Chander v. Prabhawati (s), the Supreme Court after posing the question—What is desertion? observed that the legal position had been admirably summarised in paragraphs 453 and 454 of Halsbury's Law of England, 3rd Edition, Vol. 12:

---

(q) Fowle v. Fowle (1878) 4 Cal. 260.

(r) Bipin Chander v. Prabhawati (1956) S.C.R. 838, (1957) 59 Bom. L.R. 322. Also see Pratt v. Pratt (1939) A.C. 417; Williams v. Williams (1939) 3 All E.R. 825 (C.A.); Dunn v. Dunn (1949) P. 98, (1948) 2 All. E.R. 822.

"In its essence desertion means the intentional permanent forsaking and abandonment of one spouse by the other without that other's consent, and without reasonable cause. It is a total repudiation of the obligations of marriage. In view of the large variety of circumstances and of modes of life involved, the Court has discouraged attempts at defining desertion, there being no general principle to all cases.

Desertion is not the withdrawal from a place but from a state of things, for what the law seeks to enforce is the recognition and discharge of the common obligations of the married state; the state of things may usually be termed, for short, 'the home.' There can be desertion without previous cohabitation by the parties, or without the marriage having been consummated.

The person who actually withdraws from cohabitation is not necessarily the deserting party. The fact that a husband makes an allowance to a wife whom he has abandoned is no answer to a charge of desertion.

> The offence of desertion is a course of conduct which exists independently of its duration, but as a ground for . . . it must exist for a period of at least . . . years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition or, where the offence appears as a cross-charge, of the answer. Desertion . . . differs from the statutory grounds of adultery and cruelty in that the offence founding the cause of action of desertion is not complete, but is inchoate, until the suit is constituted. Desertion is a continuing offence."

The Supreme Court, in the case mentioned above, made some general observations and summed up some other important principles which will afford considerable guidance in cases arising under the Act. It was pointed out that desertion is a matter of inference to be drawn from the facts and circumstances of each case. The inference may be drawn from certain facts which may not in another case be capable of leading to the same inference; that is to say, the facts have to be viewed as to the purpose which is revealed by those acts or by conduct and expression of intention, both anterior and subsequent to the actual acts of separation. If, in fact, there has been a separation, the essential question always is whether that act could be attributable to an animus deserendi. The offence of desertion commences when the fact of separation and the animus deserendi co-exist. But it is not necessary that they should commence at the same time. The de facto separation may have commenced without the necessary animus or it may be that the separation and the animus deserendi coincide in point of time; for example, when the separating spouse abandons the marital home with the intention, express or implied, of bringing cohabitation permanently to a close. The law has prescribed a period of . . . as a continuous period during which the two elements must subsist. Hence, if a deserting spouse takes advantage of the locus poenitentiae thus provided by law and decides to come back to the deserted spouse by a bona fide offer of resuming the matrimonial home with all the implications of marital life, before the statutory period is out or even after the lapse of that period, unless proceedings for relief have been commenced, desertion comes to an end and if the deserted spouse unreasonably refuses the offer the latter may be in desertion and not the former. Hence it is necessary that during all the period that there has been a desertion, the deserted spouse must affirm the marriage and be ready and willing to resume married life on such conditions as may be reasonable (*s*1).

---

(s) (1956) S.C.R. 838, 59 Bom. L.R. 322.

Some of the principles summed up above were reaffirmed by the Supreme Court in its latest decisions on the subject (*s*2) and the essential element of animus deserendi examined at some length.

Separation.—One of the essential ingredients of desertion is separation of one spouse from another and there can, therefore, be no desertion while the parties are living together. So long as cohabitation continues, that is parties are living together, persistent and even wanton refusal of one or other of the parties to have sexual intercourse is not by itself sufficient to amount to desertion because it is neither abandonment nor living apart (t). But such refusal, if unjustified, may amount to constructive desertion when the spouse refusing sexual intercourse would have known that the effect of the refusal would be that the other spouse would refuse to live with him (*t*1). Unreasonable refusal may be regarded as a grave and weighty matter and can amount to constructive desertion having regard to the circumstances of the case (*t*2).

In an exceptional case there may be desertion, although husband and wife are living in the same dwelling, if there is such a forsaking and abandonment by one spouse of the other that the court can say that the spouses had ceased to be one household and had become two separate households (tt). It seems that cases of this nature which do not often arise would under the present section fall for consideration under the Explanation where it is laid down that desertion includes wilful neglect.

Consensual separation.—As to separation which begins by being a consensual and situation changing by one of the spouses withdrawing the consent and offering to resume cohabitation reference may be made to the undermentioned decision of Court of Appeal in England (*t*3) and the cases there cited.

---

(*s*1) Bipin Chander v. Prabhawati (1956) S.C.R. 838; Jiyubai v. Ningappa ('63) A. Mys. 3.

(*s*2) Lachman v. Meena (1964) A.S.C. 40, 48; Rohini Kumari v. Narendra Singh ('72) A.S.C. 459.

(t) Weatherley v. Weatherley (1947) A.C. 628; (1947) 1 All. E.R. 563.

(*t*1) Hutchinson v. Hutchinson (1963) 1 All E.R. 1. Also see under "Wilful neglect p. 708, infra and under "Reasonable apprehension of danger to health" p. 722, infra.

(*t*2) Slon v. Slon (1969) 1 All E.R. 759.

(tt) Baker v. Baker (1952) 2 All E.R. 248.

(*t*3) Gallagher v. Gallagher (1965) 2 All E.R. 967. Also see Fraser v. Fraser (1969) 3 All E.R. 654; Nuttley v. Nuttley (1970) 1 All E.R. 410 (not desertion).

"Continuous period of not less than two years. . .".—Desertion is a continuing offence and the element of permanence necessarily involved in it requires that both separation and animus deserendi should continue during the entire statutory period of two years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition. It must be noticed that the continuing offence of desertion for the statutory period of at least two years can never become complete until the petition is actually presented. The offence is not complete and remains inchoate till the presentation of the petition however long might have been the period of previous desertion. It necessarily follows that during this period the offending spouse has always the locus poenitentiae to go back to the deserted spouse. It also follows that it is necessary that during all the period that there has been desertion the deserted spouse must affirm the marriage and be ready and willing to resume married life on such conditions as may be reasonable (v). Desertion differs from other matrimonial offences such as adultery, in that it does not consist of an act or a number of acts separate and distinct in themselves, but is rather an activity or course of a conduct which must persist for the statutory period upto the presentation of the petition (w); and it is not permissible, if the period is broken, to add the broken periods together so as to make a sum of two years. The offence founding the cause of action is not complete—is as if it were inchoate—until the petition is filed. If one spouse has committed adultery or has treated the other with cruelty, the latter has an accrued right to adopt proceedings. He or she may at once seek relief and is not bound to reinstate the offending spouse. The deserted spouse has no such right, no such election. If the deserting spouse genuinely desires to return, the other spouse cannot refuse reinstatement (x).

Once a state of desertion has arisen it continues until it is terminated (y). So when the factum and intention to desert on the part of a spouse is established, the intention is presumed to continue unless the offending spouse proves genuine repentance and sincere and reasonable attempt to go back to the deserted spouse or in case of constructive desertion to get back the injured spouse (z). The deserting spouse is only bound to make reasonable attempts. So if on the facts it appears that the petitioner had made it plain to the deserting spouse that the latter would not be received back or has repelled all the advances made by the latter towards a resumption of married life, the petitioner cannot complain that the deserting spouse has persisted in the desertion without cause. There can be cases where it would be unreasonable to expect the deserting spouse to make attempts to end the desertion (a).

The question whether a deserting spouse has a reasonable cause for not trying to bring the desertion to an end and the corresponding question whether desertion without cause has existed for the necessary period must

---

(v) Bipin Chander v. Prabhawati, supra.

(w) W. v. W. (No. 2) (1954) 2 All E.R. 829, 832, 833. Reference may also be made to Sitabai v. Ramchandra (1957) 59 Bom. L.R. 885, 890, 891.

(x) Perry v. Perry (1952) 1 All E.R. 1076, 1079, 1080.

(y) Cohen v. Cohen (1940) A.C. 631, (1940) 2 All E.R. 331 (H.L.).

(z) Lachman v. Meena (1964) A.S.C. 40, 49; Bowran v. Bowran (1925) P. 187, 195; Cohen v. Cohen (1940) A.C. 631, (1940) 2 All E.R. 331 (H.L.); Sifton v. Sifton (1939) 1 All E.R. 109, (1939) P. 221.

(a) Pratt v. Pratt (1939) A.C. 417, 420; Cohen v. Cohen, supra.

always be a question of fact (*a*1). The question for consideration in such cases is, "Is the conduct of the deserted spouse such as to exempt the deserting spouse from making any attempt to put an end to the desertion or from attempting any reconciliation?" (*a*2). In considering the conduct of the deserted spouse in any such case the court will have regard to the facts of the particular case, in order to ascertain what in fact was the impact on the mind of the deserting spouse of anything which was said or done by the deserted spouse (*a*3).

The mere fact that during the period when the spouses were living apart maintenance was paid by the husband to the wife will not prevent desertion running if it appears that there was no agreement between the spouse to live apart. The agreement to pay maintenance is not of itself proof of consent to live apart (c).

"Wilful neglect".—The expression wilful neglect used in the Explanation is not defined in the Act. The word wilful in this phrase is important. An act or omission done by accident or inadvertence is not wilful nor is it on the other hand absolutely necessary in the present context that to be wilful, the act or omission which constitutes neglect should be deliberate and intentional. In the context of matrimonial law wilful neglect would seem to mean that the person is consciously acting in a reprehensible manner in the discharge of his marital obligations or is consciously failing in a reprehensible manner in the discharge of those obligations; and connotes that degree of neglect which is shown by an abstention from an obvious duty, attended by a knowledge of the likely results of the abstention. Breach of every tie of marriage or failure to discharge every tie of marriage or failure to discharge every marital obligation cannot be regarded as wilful neglect. Thus for instance in a case where the marriage has been consummated and cohabitation is continued it can hardly be said that mere refusal of sexual intercourse howsoever persistent by one of the spouses amounts to wilful neglect or purports to conclude the matrimonial relationship (*c*1). But wilful neglect to maintain the wife without reasonable cause would be desertion. The neglect to become desertion must be such as amounts to forsaking or abandonment of one spouse by the other by a conscious disregard of the duties and obligations of the married state considered as a whole.

Constructive desertion.—It is a well established principle that proof of factum of separation, which is one of the essential ingredients of the matrimonial offence of desertion, does not consist merely in ascertainment of which party left the home first. The rule is now well established that a spouse may be guilty of such misconduct as would render the continuance of marital relations so unbearable that the other spouse feels compelled to leave the matrimonial home and in such a case it is the former and not the latter, who is the deserter. There is no substantial difference between the case of a husband who leaves his wife with the intention of terminating cohabitation and the case of a husband who with like intent evidenced by his misconduct

---

(*a*1) Tickler v. Tickler (1943) 1 All E.R. 57, 59.
(*a*2) Brewer v. Brewer (1961) 3 All E.R. 957, 964.
(*a*3) Lachman v. Meena (1964) A.S.C. 40, 53.
(c) Pardy v. Pardy (1939) 3 All E.R. 779, 782, (1939) P. 288.
(*c*1) P. v. P. (1964) 3 All E.R. 919.

brings the cohabitation to an end by virtually compelling the wife to depart from the matrimonial home. In Lang v. Lang (d) the Privy Council summarized in an impeccable form the principles and made some general observations on the question of constructive or indirect desertion which give authentic guidance on the subject and will be found very instructive: "It has been recognised that the party truly guilty of disrupting the home is not necessarily or in all cases the party who first leaves it. The party who stays behind (their Lordships will assume this to be the husband) may be, by reason of conduct on his part, making it unbearable for a wife with reasonable self-respect, or powers of endurance, to stay with him, so that he is the party really responsible for the breakdown of the marriage. He has deserted her by expelling her; by driving her out. In such a case the factum is the course of conduct pursued by the husband—something which may be far more complicated than the mere act of leaving the matrimonial home. It is not every course of conduct by the husband causing the wife to leave which is a sufficient factum. A husband's irritating habits may so get on the wife's nerves that she leaves as a direct consequence of them but she would not be justified in doing so. Such irritating idiosyncrasies are part of the lottery in which every spouse engages on marrying, and taking the partner of the marriage 'for better, for worse'. The course of conduct—the 'factum'—must be grave and convincing." Conduct which falls short of legal cruelty may justify one spouse in leaving another, provided it is of a grave and convincing character (e). It is not possible to deduce any principle of law by reference to which it can be determind in every case on which side of the line the case falls when this test of grave and convincing conduct is to be applied; the issue in the main would be one of fact and no criterion can be propounded which would be very helpful. In these cases it has to be noted that the legislature has not thought fit to make the continuous unhappiness of one spouse caused by the unkindness, the lack of consideration, or the selfishness or every degradation of the other spouse a ground for obtaining relief. It is essential to examine, as Lord Green, Master of the Rolls, observed in the undermentioned case (f), the actual facts to see whether the conduct of the spouse who is to blame can fairly and clearly be said to have crossed the borderline which divides blameworthy conduct causing unhappiness to the other spouse from conduct equivalent to expulsion from the matrimonial home. "It is," as Asquith L. J. observed in the same case, "possible to say of certain courses of conduct that they should not amount to constructive desertion, and of certain other courses that they could not fail to do so. . . . But between the extremes indicated there is obviously a no-man's land where the issue is one of fact" (*f*1). One effect of including 'wilful neglect in the meaning of desertion (Explanation) is that such neglect of one spouse by the other is sufficient to establish expulsive conduct. The neglect to become desertion must be such as amounts to forsaking or abandonment by a conscious dis-

---

(d) (1954) 3 All E.R. 571, 573; Narayan Prasad v. Prabhadevi ('64) A.M.P. 28; Jyotish Chandra v. Meera Guha ('70) A.C. 266.

(e) Edwards v. Edwards (1949) 2 All E.R. 145, (1950) P. 8.

(f) Buchler v. Buchler (1947) P. 25, (1947) 1 All E.R. 319, 322. Also see Marjoram v. Marjoram (1955) 2 All E.R. 1. (Sluttishness alone is not a sufficient ground); Bartholomew v. Bartholomew (1952) 2 All E.R. 1035 (Wife dirty in her person and the home—no ground).

(*f*1) Buchler v. Buchler, supra (1947) 1 All E.R. 319 at p. 326.

regard of the duties and obligations of the married state considered as a whole (g).

In case of constructive desertion also there must be proof of both the essential ingredients of factum and animus deserendi on the part of the offending spouse. The law relating to this latter requirement was reviewed by the Privy Council in the abovementioned case and it was laid down that prima facie in these cases a person is presumed to intend the consequences of his acts, though the inference may be rebutted; and if the whole of a husband's conduct is such that a reasonable man must know that it will probably result in the departure of his wife from the matrimonial home the fact that the husband did not want this consequence to ensure does not rebut the inference that he intended the probable consequnces of his acts and thus intended his wife to leave the home. Conduct which would give rise to this inference must be grave and convincing and where it exists proof of actual intention to bring the matrimonial consortium to an end would not be required. Apart from rebutting evidence, therefore, such conduct would be sufficient proof of an intention to disrupt the home and it would be no answer that his desire was that his wife will stay and the home will not be disrupted (h).

It is sometimes said that a charge of constructive desertion cannot be proved by evidence of conduct, alleged to have caused the petitioner to leave the matrimonial home, of the nature of cruelty, but not amounting to cruelty in law (i). The true rule of the matter would seem to be that it is not possible to build up a case of constructive desertion by what is really a case of unproved cruelty. That again does not cover the whole area of constructive desertion. Grave and weighty matters may be alleged which are quite different in kind and quite as serious, if not more serious, than cruelty (j). In this class of cases the facts are often somewhat complex and overlapping. If the facts and circumstances are such as satisfy the general test already discussed the court may well reach the conclusion that the conduct of the other spouse was equivalent to expulsion and that the complaining spouse was justified in leaving the matrimonial home (k). The acts sufficient to satisfy this test must be of a serious and convincing nature, but conduct short of an actual matrimonial offence may be sufficient. The conduct, however, must from the very nature of the offence of desertion, obviously be of a grave and convincing character. It may include wilful neglect of the petitioner by the other party to the marriage.

Mutual desertion.—It is conceivable, as held in England in a recent case, that the court may grant simultaneous decrees on the ground of desertion (*k*1).

Good cause for separation.—It is a well established principle that a spouse who withdraws from cohabitation for what is described as a good cause or a just cause or an effective cause such as adultery (*k*2) or cruelty, cannot be

---

(g) See 'Wilful neglect' above.

(h) Lang v. Lang, (1954) 3 All E.R. 571, at pp. 579, 580.

(i) Pike v. Pike, supra.

(j) Timmnis v. Timmnis (1953) 2 All E.R. 187.

(k) Foster v. Foster (1953) 2 All E.R. 518; Pike v. Pike (1953) 1 All. E.R. 232, 235. As to whether "drunkenness" amounts or not to expulsive conduct see Hall v. Hall (1962) 3 All E.R. 518.

(*k*1) Price v. Price (1968) 3 All E.R. 543.

(*k*2) Samraj Nadar v. Abraham ('70) A.M. 434 (Petitioner husband living in adultery).

said to be guilty of desertion (l), for in such a case it is the conduct of the offending spouse that is the cause of separation and the spouse who leaves the matrimonial home cannot be said to have acted from any animus deserendi. Apart from other causes to be presently noted adultery and cruelty would afford complete defence to any petition by the other spouse for judicial separation on the ground of desertion unless the court is satisfied that there was condonation of such adultery or cruelty or that there was such connivance in the matter of the adultery complained of as would render it unjust to entertain the objection (m). An honest and reasonable belief or as it is sometimes said a bona fide and reasonable belief, even though erroneous, that the other spouse has committed adultery may be a good cause and justification for withdrawal from cohabitation. It has been held in England that a wife's belief, induced by her husband's conduct, that he has committed adultery may justify her, until that belief is proved to be without foundation, in leaving the matrimonial home and living apart (n). The belief, however, must be reasonable; it must be sensible and not the result of caprice or stubborn and distorted judgment (o). The reasonable belief which affords an answer to a charge of desertion cannot be said to have continued to exist after it has been dispelled. No exhaustive statement of the ways in which such a belief could be dispelled can be expected as the question must resolve itself into one of fact. A husband withdrew from cohabitation with his wife on the ground that he suspected her of having committed adultery and in proceedings by the wife for restitution of conjugal rights it was found by the court that the husband had reasonable grounds for his suspicions. But a petition filed by the husband thereafter for divorce on the ground of adultery was dismissed on the ground that adultery was not proved. In subsequent proceedings by the wife for maintenance it was held that the husband was not entitled to resist the claim on the ground that he had bona fide and reasonable belief that the wife had committed adultery (p).

Remarriage of husband.—Desertion within the meaning of the section implies more than merely separate residence and separate living. Section 18(2)(a) of the Hindu Maintenance and Adoption Act, 1956, entitles a wife to live separately from her husband, without forfeiting her claim to maintenance, if he is guilty of desertion. The effect of that Act is that a wife is entitled to claim separate residence and maintenance from her husband if he should marry again. The High Courts of Andhra Pradesh (*p*1) and Mysore (*p*2) had taken the view that if in any such case the wife was living separately from the husband it could not be said that she had deserted her husband without reasonable excuse. The different view taken by the High Court of Allahabad (*p*3) was that the fact of the remarriage of the husband would not, without anything more, necessarily afford reasonable cause for desertion. According to this latter view the question for the court would still remain as to what was the impact of the fact of the remarriage of the husband, on the mind of the wife. In cases where the consideration of the remarriage of the husband failed to have any impact on the mind of the wife, remarriage of the husband would not afford reasonable cause for desertion. The Supreme Court has accepted the latter view (*p*4).

---

(l) Baker v. Baker (1953) 2 All E.R. 1199; Kuppuswami v. Alagammal ('61) A.M. 391. Also second marriage of the husband as furnishing a good cause for separation see Pullaiah v. Rushingamma ('63) A.A.P. 323.

(m) See Section 23(1)(b).

(n) Allen v. Allen (1951) All E.R. 724, 731.

(o) Allen v. Allen, supra. Also see Cox v. Cox (1958) 1 All E.R. 569.

(p) Allen v. Allen, supra.

(*p*1) Pulliah v. Rushingamma ('63) A.A.P. 323.

(*p*2) Siddegowda v. Parvathamma ('65) A. Mys. 299. Also see Mallappa v. Neelawwa ('70) A. Mys. 59.

(*p*3) Rohini Kumari v. Narendra Singh ('70) A.A. 102.

(*p*4) Rohini Kumari v. Narendra Singh ('72) A.S.C. 459.

Termination of desertion.—Desertion may be terminated at any time by resumption of cohabitation, because a resumption of cohabitation is the exact negation of a state of desertion. There must be the common or mutual intention of the parties to resume cohabitation in circumstances showing that a true reconciliation has been effected. Any other rule would hamper attempts at reconciliation (q). No court has attempted to give a completely exhaustive definition of cohabitation. Desertion being a withdrawal from a "state of things" resumption of cohabitation must at least mean resumption of that "state of things." This may be evidenced by a common intention of the parties to set up once against the matrimonial home. Sexual intercourse would beyond doubt be a most important incident in the marital relationship and very cogent evidence of the intention of the parties to effect reconciliation and resume cohabitation. There is no absolute rule, however, that desertion is terminated or interrupted by casual acts of intercourse between the spouses or casual visits without any return to the routine of common life, or anything resembling the re-establishment of the matrimonial relationship. But in any event even such intercourse would be strong and very weighty evidence to be considered in the light of the whole facts and merits of the case. It would prima facie seem unreasonable that an act which is accorded such a decisive effect as an affirmation by the injured party of the married state should be able to take place consistently with the uninterrupted continuance of a state of desertion which while it continues amounts to a negation of married state. These considerations should be stronger against a deserted husband. The criterion would of course be whether considering all the facts it can be said that there was or must have been the intention to resume married life. It has been held in England that casual acts of intercourse should not be regarded as proof of resumption of marital relationship where a wife, though participating in such acts, in all other respects repudiated the relationship (r).

Desertion may also be terminated by a supervening animus revertendi expressed by a genuine offer to return to the deserted spouse or in case of constructive desertion by a bona fide attempt to get back the aggrieved spouse. If a deserting spouse takes advantage of the locus poenitentiae provided by law and goes back to the deserted spouse by a bona fide offer of resuming the matrimonial home with all the implications of maritial life before the statutory period is out or even thereafter before any proceedings for relief have been commenced desertion comes to an end and if the deserted spouse unreasonably refuses the offer the entire position would become different and the latter instead of the former would become the deserter (s).

Offer of reconciliation.—A deserting spouse may at any time before institution of proceedings by the other spouse bring the desertion to an end by sufficient offer of reconciliation. It must be an offer to return and involve readiness and willingness to resume cohabitation in the ordinary sense of the word. The offer must be a genuine offer made in good faith and not merely to lay a foundation for an intended petition or to forestall or defeat any pro-

---

(q) Bartram v. Bartram (1950) P. 1, (1949) 2 All E.R. 270; Mummery v. Mummery (1942) 1 All E.R. 553, (1942) P. 107.

(r) Perry v. Perry (1952) 1 All E.R. 1076. Also see Whitney v. Whitney (1951) 1 All E.R. 301.

(s) Bipin Chander v. Prabhawati (1956) S.C.R. 838.

ceeding by the injured spouse. The offer must be conciliatory and not hedged in with any unreasonable qualification or condition. In a case of mere desertion the offer to return may be enough. A case of constructive desertion may raise different considerations. There may be cases where the situation created by the conduct of the deserting spouse was such that a mere offer by word of mouth or by letter to resume cohabitation may not suffice unless it is accompanied by expressions of repentance and contrition. Such a situation may exist for instance where the offer of reconciliation is made by a husband who has been guilty of physical violence or other acts of cruelty of a serious nature or of other conduct of a gross nature and the wife had to leave the house in fear or helplessness. In such a case it cannot be said that a bare offer to return or take back the aggrieved spouse will suffice to terminate the desertion.

When a genuine offer of reconciliation is made the other spouse cannot refuse reinstatement. But the other spouse as the injured party will be justified in imposing reasonable conditions in order to ensure a genuine reconciliation and resumption of the matrimonial home with all the implications of martial life. The conditions sought to be imposed must be in good faith. The nature of the previous behaviour and degree of misconduct of the deserting spouse would determine the reasonableness or otherwise of such conditions. The unjustified rejection of a sufficient offer of reconciliation would of itself constitute desertion. Such for instance would be the case where in answer to an offer of reconciliation by the wife a husband imposes conditions which he knows would not be accepted and by his attitude and conduct shows that he is resolved to make a temporary separation an excuse for refusing resumption of matrimonial home. The matter was put very clearly by Lord Merriman when he said that the unjustified refusal by the spouse who has been deserted to resume cohabitation not merely terminates the desertion but also reverses the process; it 'turns the tables' or 'puts the boot on the other leg' . . . and it is immaterial whether the case is one of mere desertion which is terminable by a simple offer on the part of the deserter to return or is a case of constructive desertion terminable, with more difficulty no doubt, but terminable by appropriate repentance and appropriate assurance of amendment of such a kind, according to the individual circumstances, as the aggrieved spouse is not justified in refusing (t). In each case, the question must be determined on its own merits. There may be some conduct so gross that no woman could be expected ever to resume cohabitation with the husband. The husband's merits may be so slight that he cannot reasonably hope ever to be taken back. Thus for instance if the husband has been guilty of adultery which is uncondoned or of cruelty of so atrocious a character that the wife cannot possibly be expected to subject herself to a risk of recurrence. In such cases the actual separation must continue to have the quality of desertion by the husband (u). A different rule would require that the wife should be regarded as a deserter even in such a case because she refused (t) Everitt v. Everitt (1949) 1 All E.R. 908, 916. [Reference may also be made to the following cases which are illustrative of the rule]: Casey v. Casey (1952) 1 All E.R. 453; Slowson v. Slowson (1942) 2 All E.R. 527. Also see Price v. Price (1951) 1 All E.R. 877; Holborn v. Holborn (1947) 1 All E.R. 32.

---

(u) In Everitt v. Everitt, supra, a number of cases on the subject were examined by Lord Merriman.

reinstatement. That would be contrary to the plain reason and good sense underlying the doctrine of desertion. It is submitted that the proper question in these cases would be whether having regard to the whole background and facts and circumstances both prior and subsequent to the desertion the deserting spouse can be said to be ready and willing to resume the marital home.

Desertion and cruelty.—It is sometimes said that desertion of itself cannot be cruelty (v). In Cade v. Cade, it was held in England that the same conduct could constitute expulsive conduct founding a charge of constructive desertion and could also be an element of conduct founding a charge of cruelty (w). It may at times be impossible to draw the line between the two because very often the facts are mixed so that it is impossible to extricate one from the other. This may have bearing on cases of constructive desertion of which it may well be said that the same facts also amount to cruelty. It is commonplace that constructive desertion and cruelty may often in substance be the same thing, proved by the same evidence (x). A charge of cruelty must be distinctly pleaded and proved as such (y). The court, even if it is satisfied on a charge of desertion that the evidence is sufficient to establish cruelty, must insist on the pleading being put in order and should raise the necessary issue before granting relief.

Onus and standard of proof.—It is incumbent on the petitioner to prove that desertion without reasonable cause subsisted throughout the statutory period. Before granting relief on the ground of desertion the court must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt, that the matrimonial offence complained of is established. In Bipin Chander v. Prabhawati (z) the Supreme Court referred to the law in England on the question of desertion and observed: "It is also well settled that . . . the plaintiff must prove the offence of desertion beyond all reasonable doubt." In Lachman v. Meena (*z*1) the Supreme Court held that the onus lies on the petitioner to establish that the desertion was without cause and stressed the importance of avoiding the fallacy which lies in a failure to distinguish between a legal burden of proof which rests on the petitioner and a provisional burden raised by the state of evidence which may shift from one party to another. The legal burden throughout the case is on the petitioner to prove that the wife (for instance where the husband is the petitioner) deserted him without cause. To discharge that burden he may rely on the fact that he asked her to join him and she refused. From that fact the court may infer that she deserted him without cause but it is not bound to do so. Once he proves the fact of refusal she may seek to rebut the inference of desertion by proving that she had just cause for her refusal and usually it would be wise for the respondent (wife) to do so. Even if she does not affirmatively prove just cause the Court has still, at the end of the case to ask itself : Is the legal burden discharged? Has the husband proved that she deserted him without cause?

---

(v) Carpenter v. Carpenter (1955) 2 All E.R. 449, 451.

(w) Cade v. Cade (1957) 1 All E.R. 609.

(x) Cade v. Cade, supra, p. 619.

(y) Pike v. Pike (1953) 1 All E.R. 232.

(z) (1956) S.C.R. 838. Manglabai v. Deorao ('62) A.M.P. 193.

(*z*1) (1964) S.C. 40, 48; Dunn v. Dunn (1948) 2 All E.R. 822, 823.

Reference may also be made to Notes under sec. 23: "Standard of Proof" and "Corroboration."

Desertion and doctrine of condonation.—The doctrine of condonation in its strict sense or on some analogous principle is inappropriate and inapplicable to the offence of desertion as defined in section 10 (1) (a). Section 23 of the Act it will be noticed speaks of condonation only in relation to the matrimonial offences of adultery and cruelty. Condonation involves (i) an election by the injured spouse to affirm the marriage notwithstanding the condoned offence, and (ii) the possibility of revival of the condoned offence by any further matrimonial offence on the part of the guilty spouse. It is the essence of the offence of desertion that the deserted spouse should all the time be affirming the marriage; otherwise desertion ceases and becomes separation by consent. There is thus no question of election on the part of the deserted spouse to affirm or disaffirm it. He or she has no option but to affirm. Further, the offence of desertion for a period of two years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, once condoned, could never be revived, because the continuous period of desertion required by the statute would be irretrievably broken (a).

Cl. (b): Cruelty.—The legal conception of cruelty and the kind or degree of cruelty necessary to amount to a matrimonial offence has not previously been defined by any statute of the Indian Legislature relating to marriage and divorce; nor has the expression been defined in the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, or any earlier enactment in England. The danger of any attempt at giving a comprehensive definition which may cover all cases has been emphasized in a number of decisions. The law on the subject has hitherto been gathered from decided cases and Courts in India have accepted and adapted to conditions in India the principles underlying the judge-made law on the subject in England. The accepted legal meaning in England as also in India of this expression, which is rather difficult to define, has been "conduct of such a character as to have caused danger to life, limb or health (bodily or mental), or as to give rise to a reasonable apprehension of such danger" (b).

The rule laid down in the present clause would seem to give legislative sanction to what has previously been judicially understood and accepted as the legal conception of cruelty. It also prescribes a criterion or test which emphasizes that the treatment which amounts to cruelty must be such as to cause a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the injured spouse that cohabitation with the other spouse will be harmful or injurious. Though the Joint Committee has observed that "cruelty has now a self-contained definition" it is difficult to say that any comprehensive definition of cruelty has been given in this clause. In any case it does not seem that the Legislature intended to give any different meaning to the expression cruelty or aimed at a more elastic or restricted definition. There is nothing in the language of the clause to show that beyond adding a criterion which has always been applied by the courts as flowing from the accepted legal conception of cruelty, any comprehensive definition has been laid down. This is just as well since actions of men are so diverse and infinite that it is almost impossible to expect a definition exclusive or inclusive which will aptly meet every particular act or conduct and not fail in some circumstances. It seems permissible, therefore, to enter a caveat against any judicial attempt in that direction.

---

(a) Perry v. Perry (1952) 1 All E.R. 1076, 1089. Reference may, however, be made to France v. France (1969) 2 All E.R. 870.

(b) Russell v. Russell (1897) A.C. 395; Kallan v. Kallan ('33) A.L. 728; Foster v. Foster ('28) A. Oudh. 114.

Though the clause does not in terms so state it is abundantly clear from the language used that the application of the rule must depend on the circumstances of each case. Without attempting to define cruelty it may be said that this clause in effect lays down that to amount to cruelty there must be such treatment of the petitioner which causes suffering in body or mind whether in realization or apprehension in such a way as to render cohabitation harmful or injurious having regard to the circumstances of each case, keeping always in view the character and condition of the parties.

It is necessary to note that the legal conception of cruelty comprises two distinct elements—firstly, the ill-treatment complained of, and, secondly, the resultant danger or apprehension thereof. It would be inaccurate and liable to lead to confusion if the word cruelty is understood apart from its effect on the victim (c). The apprehension contemplated by the clause is that further cohabitation will be harmful or injurious and not that the same or similar acts of cruelty will be repeated. Where the acts or conduct can be said to amount to cruelty it is immaterial that there is no danger of its repetition. The inquiry must be whether the cruel treatment established by evidence is of such a nature as to cause in the mind of the victim reasonable apprehension that it will be harmful or injurious to live with the other party. "The more serious the original offence, the less grave need be the subsequent matters to constitute cruelty, for the subsequent acts must be looked at in the light of the earlier history from which they derive their significance" (d).

The judicially accepted legal concept of cruelty had for its basis the principles adopted by the Ecclesiastical Courts in England and it found favour in the House of Lords with five law lords in the leading case of Russell v. Russell (e) who were in a majority against four other law lords who were willing to extend the meaning still further but it would be academic to refer to those opinions. An examination of the cases under analogous enactments in England will show that the legal conception has varied and been modified from time to time, though not in theory but in application, with changes in social and economic conditions. There has been such a marked change in the notions of matrimonial duties and obligations of husband and wife in the present generation in India that it will be incumbent on the court to be extremely careful in the matter of seeking assistance and guidance from decisions arrived at under any previous legislation in India or England even when the rules may be similarly worded and blind adherence to any of those decisions must be deprecated and particularly when they relate to persons whose customs, manners and mode of life may be different.

---

(c) Jamieson v. Jamieson (1952) A.C. 525, 545. Jamieson v. Jamieson (1952) A.C. 525, 546.
(d) Cooper v. Cooper (1950) W.N. 200, 201; (e) f.n. (b) at p. 715.

The section in terms lays down that either party to a marriage may petition for judicial separation on the ground of cruel treatment by the other spouse. It is not necessary that the act or acts complained of must take place within what is sometimes described as "the ambit of the marital relationship." It may well be that the acts may occur after the husband and wife have begun living apart (f).

What is cruel treatment must to a large extent be a question of fact or a mixed question of law and fact to be determined within the ambit of the rule and the test given in this clause. No dogmatic answer can be expected to the variety of problems that must continue to arise before the Court in this sort of cases and the law has no footrule by which to measure the nature and degree of cruel treatment which may satisfy the test of apprehended harm or injury. Physique, temperament, standard of living and culture of the spouses and the interaction between them in their daily life and all other relevant circumstances must have bearing on the question whether the acts or conduct complained of amount to the matrimonial offence which entitles a spouse to relief under this clause. The conduct alleged must be judged upto a point by reference to the victim's capacity or incapacity for endurance in so far as that is or ought to be known to the offending spouse (g). It is also necessary to weigh all the incidents and quarrels between the parties keeping in view the impact of the personality and conduct of one spouse upon the mind of the other (h).

The language of the clause is comprehensive enough to include cases of physical as also mental cruelty and cases where both the elements are present. Where physical violence is proved the test laid down in the section cannot present any particular difficulty. Even a single act of violence may be of such a grievous and inexcusable nature as by itself to satisfy the test of cruelty. On the other hand isolated acts of assault committed on the spur of the moment and on some real or fancied provocation may not amount to cruel treatment. The assault or assaults must not be viewed as isolated facts but in the proper setting and as an incident or incidents in a complicated series of marital relations. It would be relevant to have regard to any physical or mental strain under which the accused spouse may have been labouring. Difficulty sometimes may arise where the question is whether a number of minor acts of physical violence alleged are sufficient to amount to legal cruelty. This can only be determined by keeping in view the physical and mental condition of the parties, their age, environments, standard of culture and status in life. Allowance in judging of the language or conduct used by one spouse to another must be made for local and social habits. The principle is

---

(f) Meacher v. Meacher (1946) P. 216, (1946) 2 All E.R. 307. Also see Jamieson v. Jamieson (1952) A.C. 525, 546, 547.

(g) "Much depends in each case upon its circumstances and in particular upon the victim's capacity for endurance" Mackenzie v. Mackenzie (1895) A.C. 384, 405. Also see (1951) S.C. 286, 294. Reference may also be made to Gollins v. Gollins (1962) 3 All E.R. 897.

(h) King v. King (1953) A.C. 124, 130; N. Sreepadachar v. Vasantha Bai ('70) A. Mys. 232. Also see P. L. Sayal v. Sarla Rani ('61) A. Punj. 125 (administering "love-potion" to husband and husband suffering in health); Kaushalya v. Wisakhi Ram ('61) A. Punj. 521 (beating); Iqbal Kaur v. Pritam Singh ('63) A. Punj. 242 (unwarranted allegation of immorality by husband); Umri Bai v. Chittar ('66) A.M.P. 205; Putul Devi v. Gopi Mandal ('63) A.P. 93. But, of course, these accusations must be considered along with all the other circumstances of the case. Reference may be made to cases in f.n. (g) and f.n. (h) under "Reasonable apprehension of danger to health" at p. 722 infra.

well established that cruelty might be inferred from the whole facts and matrimonial relations of the parties and atmosphere disclosed by evidence. The acts alleged must be considered not separately but together. It would be a wrong approach to put the various acts or conduct alleged into a series of separate compartments and say of each of them that by themselves they cannot pass the test of cruelty and, therefore, that the totality cannot pass the test of cruelty. A single act of physical violence though as a general rule not sufficient of itself to meet the test may when considered with other minor acts constitute cruelty; and similarly particular acts of violence can have the cumulative effect of establishing the degree of apprehended harm or injury required by this clause. The picture of the domestic life of the spouses must be surveyed as a whole before any judgment can be formed of their possible future relations and the reasonableness or otherwise of the apprehension in the mind of the petitioner.

Mental cruelty.—The language of the clause is comprehensive enough to apply to cases of mental cruelty. It was formerly thought that actual physical harm or reasonable apprehension of it was the prime ingredient of this matrimonial offence. That doctrine is now repudiated and the modern view has been that mental cruelty can cause even more grievous injury and create in the mind of the injured spouse reasonable apprehension that it will be harmful or unsafe to live with the other party. The principle that cruelty may be inferred from the whole facts and matrimonial relations of the parties and interaction in their daily life disclosed by the evidence is of greater cogency in cases falling under the head of mental cruelty. A large volume of case-law has grown round the significance of what is sometimes termed 'legal cruelty' and as has already been pointed out facts and circumstances vary infinitely and so do various other factors which present relevant considerations of vital importance so much so that acts which may be said to amount to cruelty in one case may not be sufficient to fulfil the requisite test in another case. Comparison of facts, therefore, of cases which may present similarity is one danger always to be borne in mind. Some broad general principles, however, which emerge from the decided cases will be found useful:

(i) Cruelty may be inferred from the whole facts and matrimonial relations of the parties and interaction in their daily life disclosed by the evidence. The question whether the respondent treated the petitioner with cruelty is a single question only to be answered after all the facts have been taken into account. Without quoting the specific opinions in which this principle was stated by at least two of the Lords who decided the case of Jamieson v. Jamieson in the House of Lords (i) this principle may now be said to be well established by that decision. It may be taken as equally well established that it is a wrong approach to put the various acts or conduct alleged into a series of separate compartments and say of each of them that by themselves they cannot pass the test of cruelty and, therefore, that the totality cannot pass that test.

---

(i) Jamieson v. Jamieson (1952) A.C. 525, 550.

(ii) It is undesirable, if not impossible to create categories of acts or conduct as having or lacking the nature or quality which render them capable or incapable in all circumstances amounting to mental cruelty (j). Nor is it necessary to compare acts as being gross and less gross. There may be cases where the acts complained of are in themselves so trivial that the Court would be justified in not attaching any importance to them. On the other hand acts not serious in themselves may be symptomatic of the pass to which the marriage had come and of the state of mind of the parties. Since cruelty is to be inferred from the whole of the relations between the husband and wife it would not be a proper approach "to take up each alleged incident one by one and hold that it is trivial or that it is not hurtful or cruel and then to say that cumulatively they do not amount to anything grave, weighty or serious. The relationship of marriage in the present context is not to be taken as just the sum of a number of incidents."

(iii) In general cruelty is in its character a cumulative charge. It is not necessary that the acts complained of must be of a certain character. The conduct may consist of a number of acts each of which is serious in itself, but it may well be even more effective if it consists of a long-continued series of minor acts no one of which could be regarded as serious if taken in isolation. Every such act must be judged in relation to its attendant circumstances, and the physical or mental condition or susceptibilities of the innocent spouse and the offender's knowledge of the actual or probable effect of his conduct on the other's health (k). The age, environments, standard of culture and status in life of the parties are also matters which may be decisive in determining on which side of the line a particular act or course of conduct lies. The acts and incidents complained of as also the conduct of the parties must be taken together to form a composite picture from which alone it can be ascertained whether the acts of one spouse on another should, judged in relation to all the surrounding circumstances, be found to amount to cruelty.

(iv) The existence of cruelty depends not on the magnitude, but rather on the consequence of the offence, actual or apprehended (l).

(v) Mental ill-treatment may be coupled with physical ill-treatment in order together to found a charge of cruel treatment. Since mental and physical ill-treatment can, though they are not ejusdem generis, be taken together, it must follow that different forms of ill-treatment may be taken together to found a charge of treatment which amounts to cruelty (m).

Intention.—Actual intention on the part of one spouse to injure the other is not an essential factor. In a passage which has become locus classicus

---

(f) Per Lord Normand in Jamieson v. Jamieson at pp. 535, 536.

(k) See per Lord Reid in Jamieson v. Jamieson (1952) A.C. 525 at p. 548 and per Lord Tucker in ibid at p. 550.

(l) Barker v. Barker (1949) 1 All E.R. 247, 250, (1949) P. 219.

(m) This principle is derived from Cooper v. Cooper (1954) 3 All E.R. 415.

it was observed: "It is not necessary in determining this point, to inquire from what motive such treatment proceeds. It may be from turbulent passion, or sometimes from causes which are not inconsistent with affection, and are indeed often consistent with it, as the passion of jealousy. If bitter waters are flowing, it is not necessary to inquire from what source they spring" (n). In Jamieson v. Jamieson, Lord Merriman reviewed the law on the subject and pointed out (p) that actual intention to injure was not an essential factor, and that intentional acts may amount to cruelty even though there was no intention of being cruel. Motive, malignity or malevolent intention, it is well recognised (q), are not essential ingredients but where they exist they would be factors of considerable importance (r) for acts done with malevolence are likely to bear fruit in acts of a serious and grave nature. In a doubtful case actual intention to hurt may even be of decisive importance (s). Where there is proof of a deliberate course of conduct on the part of one intended to hurt and humiliate the other spouse and so persisted in that it seriously affects the mental and bodily health of that party cruelty can easily be inferred. Studied neglect or a course of degradation may well prove more deleterious to the health of a spouse than the receipt of a blow (t). As pointed out by Lord Reid in the case mentioned above (u) there can hardly be a more grave matrimonial offence than to set out on a course of conduct with the deliberate intention of wounding and humiliating the other spouse and making his or her life a burden and then to continue in that course of conduct in the knowledge that it is seriously affecting his or her mental and physical health. Where such course of conduct is shown it is no answer that there was no actual intention to treat the other spouse with cruelty.

In Gollins v. Gollins, the House of Lords (v) overruled some earlier decisions of courts in England and laid down that neither actual or presumed intention to hurt the other spouse was a necessary element in cruelty. There were views expressed in some earlier decisions and chiefly in Keslefsky v. Keslefsky (*v*1) and Eastland v. Eastland (*v*2) to the effect that intention to hurt is a necessary element in cruelty and also to the effect that intention is an element, in the sense, that there must be conduct which is, in some way, aimed by one spouse at the other, or directed at the other. It was also said that there must be in some part an intention to injure the other and to inflict misery on him or her. Those decisions cannot safely be relied on as affording any guidance in cases arising under the present Act. They depended on an erroneous view as to the significance of intention.

The courts in adopting the necessity of "intention" had inevitably to introduce the notion of presumed intention and that introduced difficulties which clouded the law and gave the word "cruelty" a sense not justified by its ordinary significance. It was, accordingly held in the House of Lords case referred to above that if the conduct complained of and its consequences were so bad that the complaining spouse must have a remedy, then it did not matter what was the state of mind of the offending spouse. In other cases the state of the mind of the offending spouse would be material and may be crucial (*v*3). It was observed by Lord Pearce "when reprehensible conduct or departure from

---

(n) Holden v. Holden (1810) 1 Hag. Con. 453, 458.

(p) (1952) A.C. 525, 540, 541; Squire v. Squire (1949) p. 51. Also see ibid. at p. 58.

(q) Squire v. Squire, supra.

(r) See per Lord Reid in King v. King (1953) A.C. 124, 145.

(s) See per Lord Normand in Jamieson v. Jamieson, (1952) A.C. 525 at p. 535.

(t) Stuart v. Stuart (1926) 53 Cal. 436, ('26) A.C. 864.

(u) Jamieson v. Jamieson, supra, at p. 548. "Conduct which is intended to hurt strikes with a sharper edge than conduct which is the consequence of mere obtuseness or indifference", ibid at p. 535.

(v) (1964) A.C. 644, (1963) 2 All E.R. 966.

(*v*1) (1950) 2 All E.R. 398 (C.A.).

(*v*2) (1954) 3 All E.R. 159.

(*v*3) Lord Reid in (1964) A.C. at pp. 666-7: Lord Morris of Borth-y-Gest at pp. 673-4.

the normal standards of conjugal kindness cause injury to health or an apprehension of it, it is, I think, cruelty if a reasonable person after taking due account of the temperament and all other particular circumstances would consider that this spouse should not be called on to endure it" (*v*4). In such cases of inexcusable conduct no intention actual or presumed need be established. The question which the court asks itself is—whether this conduct by this man, to this woman or vice versa is cruelty (*v*5).

While there is no such requirement that intention to hurt must be shown much must depend on the knowledge and intention of the offending spouse, on the nature of his (or her) conduct and on the character and physical or mental condition and weaknesses of the spouses and no general statement can be expected except the requirement that the party seeking relief must show actual or probable injury to life, limb or health. The treatment complained of must, in the ultimate test, be such as to cause a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the complaining spouse that it will be harmful or injurious for him or her to live with the other spouse.

". . . treated . . . with cruelty".—The clause requires that to establish cruelty the offending spouse must have "treated" the petitioner with cruelty and the court has to ascertain whether or not there was anything which can be described as treatment or conduct of the nature discussed above. There are no limits to the kind of treatment or conduct which might constitute cruelty. It may consist of a display of temperament, emotion or perversion whereby the one gives vent to his or her feelings, without intending to injure the other. It need not consist of direct action against the other but may be misconduct indirectly affecting the other spouse even though it is not aimed at that spouse. Such for instance would be persistence in a course of criminal conduct where the necessary ingredients are present of physical injury or apprehension of the same (w). Such also for instance would be cases of sexual offences directly relevant to the husband's conjugal obligations or indecent assault on a child. The question in all such cases of ill-treatment is whether one party to the marriage has treated the other with cruelty, according to the ordinary sense of that word rather than whether the party charged was himself or herself a cruel man or woman. In doing so, as observed by Lord Evershed in Williams v. Williams (x) the court would apply the common sense of the English language and the ordinary standard of human conduct. After the decision of the House of Lords in Gollins v. Gollins (y) in England the test for establishment of cruelty is there regarded to be that the conduct complained of must be sufficiently "grave and weighty" or "grave and substantial" to warrant the description of being cruel. The question which the court would ultimately put to itself after considering the sum total of the reprehensible conduct complained of would be—"whether this conduct by this man to this woman or vice versa is cruelty.

Merely showing that the parties are unhappy because of unruly temper of a spouse or matrimonial wranglings would fall considerably short of the conduct which can amount to cruel treatment. Nor would it be sufficient to show that the other spouse is moody, whimsical, exacting, inconsiderate and

---

(*v*4) Ibid. at p. 695.

(*v*5) Ibid at p. 672; Lauder v. Lauder (1949) 1 All E.R. 76 (C.A.).

(w) Warburton v. Warburton cited in Woollard v. Woollard (1954) 3 All E.R. 351 at 357. The latter case was decided on the ground that the misconduct of the husband which resulted in his convictions for criminal offences had injured the wife's health.

(x) Williams v. Williams (1963) 2 All E.R. 994 (H.L.).

(y) See f.n. (v) supra.

irascible. Incompatibility of temperament, mere neglect and want of affection, disavowal of love, wounding of the feeling or even expressions of hatred and the like would not be regarded as of themselves cogent grounds for relief; nor would meanness, stinginess, shiftlessness or selfishness afford grounds for relief. Defects of temperament, like defects of health, must ordinarily be accepted for better or for worse.

Nor would mere vulgar or obscene abuse, rudeness of language, opprobrious and offensive remarks, petulence of manners, austerity of temper, or an occasional sally of passion or act of ill-treatment per se constitute legal cruelty. The court has to take account of the ordinary weaknesses and failings and shortcomings as well as strength of human nature and the test laid down in this clause cannot be satisfied unless grave and substantial causes are shown.

Although there may be unhappiness in a marriage the court cannot for that cause alone find cruelty. In matrimonial causes courts have repeatedly said that if by this inactivity of the courts injustice may be suffered, and misery produced, the answer is that the courts of justice do not pretend to furnish cures for all the miseries of human life. They redress or punish gross violations of duty, but they go no further; they cannot make men virtuous: and, as the happiness of the world depends upon its virtue, there may be much unhappiness in it which human laws cannot undertake to remove.

There are a number of decisions of courts in England which on examination will be found to turn on their own peculiar facts and situations and it is submitted that they need not readily be pitchforked in the case of persons whose mode of living may be totally different. But the broad general principles reiterated by the courts in England in the most recent decisions to which reference has already been made should prove useful as they afford considerable guidance on the question of cruelty where the border line is at times extremely difficult to trace.

Unwarrantable indifference to the victim's health, callous neglect, extreme boorishness, deliberate refusal to co-operate and calculated harassment in matters touching the household and children of the marriage and any ill-treatment of a grave and serious character, may be elements which would go far to entitle the injured spouse to relief when the cumulative effect of the conduct viewed as a whole brings the case very near the line where there would be reasonable apprehension that cohabitation would be harmful.

Reasonable apprehension of danger to health.—The general principles are mostly well established and not difficult to enunciate but the difficulty in this sort of cases is to determine on which side of the border of cruelty the facts lie. Applying these principles it has been held that though mere refusal of sexual intercourse is not per se cruelty (g) for a man deliberately and without good reason permanently to deny to a wife who has a normally developed maternal instinct a fair opportunity of having a single child can of itself be cruelty if it results in injury to her health or causes reasonable apprehension of such injury and when the husband adopts a course of conduct which preserves to himself a measure of sexual enjoyment. If a wife deliberately and consistently refuses to satisfy her husband's natural and legitimate craving to have children, and the deprivation reduces him to despair and affects his mental health, the wife would be guilty of cruelty (h). The same considerations apply to the case of a husband who behaves in similar manner. It would, however, be impossible to lay down any rule of law or to generalise on whether refusal of intercourse constitutes cruelty; each case must be looked at in the light of its own facts (*h*1). Similar considerations would apply to cases arising under the Act. In this type of cases the court, it is submitted, would attach due weight to the general principles underlying the Hindu law of marriage and sonship and the importance attached by Hindus to the principle of spiritual benefit of having a son who can offer funeral cake and libations of water to the manes of his ancestors and it would be no answer to say that it is now open to the other spouse to adopt a child.

---

(g) Weatherley v. Weatherlay, supra; see p. 832; Knott v. Knott (1955) 2 All E.R. 305, (1955) P. 249 (case of coitus interruptus): Cackett v. Cackett (1950) 1 All E.R. 677, (1950) P. 253. But mere abstention by the husband from intercourse has not been held in any case to amount to cruelty: See Walsham v. Walsham (1949) P. 350, (1949) 1 All E.R. 774; P. v. P. (1964) 3 All E.R. 919. In Bravery v. Bravery (1954) 3 All E.R. 59 the husband got sterilization operation performed on himself after the birth of one child; this was held not to amount to cruelty. Also see under 'separation' at p. 706, supra.

Demands which are known to be regarded by other spouse as inordinate or revolting may, if persisted in, be a grave and weighty consideration and there may come a point of time at which persistent lack of consideration in matters of this sort may lead to a reasonable apprehension of harm or injury (i). Sexual malpractices in circumstances which create reasonable apprehension of harm or injury may amount to cruelty (j). A husband who knows that he is suffering from venereal diseases, insists, against the will of his wife who knows of his condition, in having marital intercourse with her, may be guilty of legal cruelty although in fact the disease is not communicated to her (k). Persistent course of dishonesty and criminal convictions which create reasonable apprehension of harm or injury to the other spouse may well amount to cruelty (*k*1).

Drunkenness, per se, is not cruelty. But persistent drunkenness after warnings that such a course of conduct is inflicting pain on the other spouse and if the offending spouse knows that it is injuring the health of that spouse, may well amount to cruelty. Such drunkenness, if it is combined with other acts of ill treatment, as it usually is, may obviously be a factor of great importance (l)

As a general rule words of menace or threats would not be regarded as by themselves sufficient to cause apprehension of harm or injury when there is no attempt to carry out the threat; but threats of physical violence may be

---

(h) Forbes v. Forbes (1955) 2 All E.R. 311. Reference may be made to Fowler v. Fowler (1952) 2 T.L.R. 143 which was distinguished in this case. Also see Knott v. Knott, supra.

(*h*1) Sheldon v. Sheldon (1966) 2 All E.R. 257; P. (D) v. P. (J) (1965) 2 All E.R. 456 (Refusal due to psychological fear of conception over which wife had no control—held cruelty); Evans v. Evans (1965) 2 All E.R. 789 (adverse effect on husband's health): In B.(L.) v. B.(R.) (1965) 3 All E.R. 263(C.A.) is was held on the facts that there was no cruelty.

(i) Holborn v. Holborn (1947) 1 All E.R. 32. As to sexual malpractices see the cases in the footnote (f) below.

(j) Statham v. Statham (1929) P. 131; Lawson v. Lawson (1955) 1 All E.R. 341 (standard of proof required in case of sodomy); Gardner v. Gardner (1947) 1 All E.R. 630 (unnatural sexual relations by wife with another woman).

(k) Foster v. Foster (1921) P. 438.

(*k*1) Stanwick v. Stanwick (1970) 3 All E.R. 983.

(l) Baker v. Baker (1955) 3 All E.R. 193.

of such a character as would afford reasonable ground to apprehend that they will be carried into effect and render cohabitation unsafe. While the court would be slow in accepting and acting on mere outbursts of threatening language or wild expressions uttered by a person of ungovernable temper it would not wait for any serious threat to be carried into effect if considering the marital relations of the parties and their conduct and character it appears that it is such as to cause in the mind of complaining spouse reasonable apprehension of danger.

Unfounded accusations of infidelity by one spouse against another will not be regarded as by themselves amounting to cruelty (m). These at times proceed from turbulent passions or passions of jealousy. The general rule in a matrimonial cause that the whole of the relations between the parties and all the relevant circumstances must be considered is of special value when cruelty consists, not of violent acts, but of injurious reproaches, complaints, accusations or taunts. Wilful accusations of adultery may be made which are not true and for which there are no probable grounds, and yet they may not amount to cruelty—for example they may have been provoked by the cruel conduct of the other spouse (n). But malicious charges of adultery persistently made in bad faith may warrant relief under this section if in the light of the whole facts of the case the court is satisfied that the health of the complaining spouse was thereby seriously impaired or that there was reasonable apprehension that future cohabitation would be harmful (o). Similar considerations would apply to the case of false and malicious accusations of any serious crime. The criterion to be applied in all such cases is not the effect produced in the minds of others but their consequence actual or apprehended on the complaining spouse.

Justification and excuse.—Provocation or self-defence may be pleaded in justification or by way of excuse for the act or conduct complained of on the ground of cruelty. It is well established that relief on this ground may be denied where the misconduct is provoked or may be justified or is excusable. The provocation must, however, be extreme (p) and cruelty wholly disproportionate to the provocation would not be treated as excusable.

Insanity.—The question whether insanity is a defence to a charge of cruelty and if so to what extent has been debated in a number of cases in England and there was diversity of judicial opinion on what has been felt to be a "difficult question." According to one view it would be "a contradiction in terms to describe as cruel the conduct of a person who did not know what he was doing. The word 'cruel' carries with it implications of guilt which can no more be imputed to such a person than to a sleep walker" (q).

---

(m) Augustin v. Augustin (1882) 4 All 374; Niblett v. Niblett ('35) A. Oudh 133, 136; Siddagangiah v. Lakshamma ('68) A. Mys. 115 (defence to a suit for restitution of conjugal rights). Also see cases in footnotes below.

(n) King v. King (1953) A.C. 124; (1953) 2 All E.R. 595.

(o) Jeapes v. Jeapes (1903) 89 L.T. 74; Kamla Devi v. Amar Nath ('61) A.J. & K. 33; Kohli v. Kohli ('67) A. Punj. 397; Kusum Lata v. Kamta Prasad ('65) A.A. 280; Umri Bai v. Chittar ('66) A.M.P. 205.

(p) Meacher v. Meacher (1946) 2 All E.R. 307, (1946) P. 216. Also see Stick v. Stick (1967) All E.R. 323.

(q) Swan v. Swan (1953) 2 All E.R. 854, 857, (1953) P. 258; Palmer v. Palmer (1954) 3 All E.R. 494; Williams v. Williams (1962) 3 All E.R. 441.

The other view was that in petitions based on cruelty by the husband the duty of the court to interfere was intended, not to punish the husband for the past, but to protect the wife for the future, and to withdraw from consideration intolerable conduct which due to insanity would render the court powerless in cases where help was most needed and therefore the defence of insanity should not be open to the husband in any such case (r). In Williams v. Williams (s) the House of Lords after a review of the decisions on the subject held that the fact that the husband did not know that his acts were wrong did not of itself constitute a defence to the allegations of cruelty. The view succinctly stated there is that insanity of a respondent spouse (in the sense that he or she, owing to disease of the mind, was unaware of the nature and quality of his or her acts, or if aware of that, did not know the act to be wrong) is not necessarily a defence to the ground that the respondent treated the petitioning spouse with cruelty; but insanity is a factor to be taken into account in applying the test (which nevertheless remains an objective test) whether in all the circumstances of the case the respondent's conduct is of such gravity that he has by his acts treated the petitioner with cruelty. Thus for instance if the conduct were such that it would amount to cruelty only if aggravated by intention to hurt, a spouse who could not form such an intention would not be held to have treated the other spouse with cruelty.

As to abnormality (*s*1) and uncontrollable impulse (*s*2) reference may be made to the undermentioned cases.

Schizophrenic: Serious diseases.—It would be unreal to strain the meaning of the word cruelty to comprehend what can only be described as the schizophrenic isolation, passivity and stillness of the wife and the impact of those manifestations on the life and health of the husband. Similar are situations where one of the spouses is struck down by physical diseases such as disseminated sclerosis, cerebral thrombosis or other illnesses that for years encumber all communication or active co-operation in the home. These situations engulf both spouses in personal tragedy. But no court would characterise such sufferings as cruelty (*s*3).

Proof: Sufficiency of evidence: Corroboration—Judicial opinion on the question of standard of proof in case of the matrimonial offence of cruelty cannot be said to have been quite uniform. It has at times been said that accusation of cruelty is a very grave and serious charge and therefore the court should insist on proof with the same degree of strictness as in case of a criminal offence. On the other hand it has been said that the court should not require proof with any more strictness than is required in a civil case. Section 23 of the Act lays down that the court shall decree the relief if it is satisfied that the "other party has treated the petitioner with . . . cruelty." The evidence must preponderate in favour of the petitioner and must be clear and

---

(r) Lissack v. Lissack (1950) 2 All E.R. 236, (1951) P. 1. Also see White v. White (1950) P. 39; (1949) 2 All E.R. 339.

(s) (1963) 2 All E.R. 994 (H.L.); Bhagwat v. Bhagwat ('67) A.B. 80.

(*s*1) Williams v. Williams (1963) 2 All E.R. 994 at p. 1004 per Lord Reid; (1964) A.C. at pp. 722-723.

(*s*2) Crump v. Crump (1965) 2 All E.R. 980.

(*s*3) Priday v. Priday (1970) 3 All. E.R. 554, 561.

satisfactory. The offence charged must be proved beyond reasonable doubt for the court would not be satisfied that it is established if it entertains any real doubt on the matter. What is required is that cruelty must be strictly proved. The word "strict" is sufficiently apt to describe the measure and standard of proof and it is unnecessary to introduced any question of a standard of proof required of a criminal charge. Reference may also be made to Notes under section 23 "Standard of Proof" and "Corroboration."

Cl. (c): Leprosy.—Clause (c) of sub-section (1) lays down as one of the grounds for judicial separation that the respondent has been suffering for a period of not less than one year immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, from a virulent form of leprosy. This provision may be compared with clause (iv) of sub-section (1) of section 13 which lays down as one of the grounds for divorce that the respondent has been suffering, for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, from a virulent and incurable form of leprosy.

Modern medical science has made some progress in the treatment of this disease and with new drugs which are now used the question whether in any particular case leprosy is virulent or not will have to be carefully considered when relief is sought on that ground.

The expression "virulent" was interpreted as malignant or venomous in the undermentioned case (*s*1).

Also see Notes under section 13(1) (iv).

Cl. (d): Venereal disease.—Clause (d) of sub-section (1) as amended lays down as one of the grounds for judicial separation that the respondent has, for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, been suffering from venereal disease in a communicable form not contracted from the petitioner. This provision may be compared with clause (v) of sub-section (1) of section 13 which lays down as one of the grounds for divorce that the respondent has been suffering, for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, from venereal disease in a communicable form. Although the latter section does not say so in terms there can be little doubt that in case of either relief the ground cannot be entertained if the respondent had the misfortune of contracting the disease from the petitioner. But it is no defence to urge that the disease was innocently contracted or that it is curable. The ground is made out if it is shown that the disease is in a communicable form and it is not necessary that it should have been communicated to the petitioner. It will be noticed that this identical ground entitles the petitioner to seek relief either by way of judicial separation or divorce at her or his option. "Venereal disease" as evidence of adultery or cruelty and as a ground for leaving the other spouse has been considered under those heads.

The ground must be specifically pleaded. Question may arise as to the construction of "in a communicable form." Does it mean communicable to the other spouse or to the children that might be born of the marriage? Presumably it means both.

---

(*s*1) Annapurnamma v. Appa Rao ('63) A.A.P. 312.

Cl. (e): ". . . continuously of unsound mind for a period of not less than two years . . ."—The scheme of the Act on the question of mental capacity of the spouses affecting formation of marriage has been pointed out in the Notes under section 5(ii). This clause deals with supervening unsoundness of mind. Insanity of the respondent for a period of not less than two years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition is a ground for judicial separation under this clause. This clause does not require that the respondent's unscundness of mind should be incurable. For relief under the present clause it will suffice to establish that the respondent has been continuously of unsound mind for a period of two years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition. Subsequent to the passing of a decree for judicial separation either party may seek divorce after lapse of two years under section 13(1A) of the Act. The Act also provides for a decree of divorce being directly asked for on the ground that the respondent has been incurably of unsound mind for a continuous period of not less than three years immediately preceding the petition. The onus of proving unsoundness of mind and the requisite duration of it in case of both the reliefs as also of showing that the unsoundness of mind is incurable where dissolution of marriage is sought under section 13(1) (iii), is on the petitioner.

Also see Notes under section 13(1) (iii).

Cl. (f): Adultery.—Adultery in matrimonial law is one of the principal grounds for relief and has been defined as consensual sexual intercourse between a married person and another person of the opposite sex during the subsistence of the marriage. An attempt to commit adultery must be distinguished from adultery and will not of itself be sufficient ground for judicial separation (t). One act of adultery is enough to constitute a matrimonial offence and under many enactments it is a sufficient ground for dissolution of marriage (u). But as already pointed out (v), the Legislature took the view that a single act of infidelity to the marriage bond should not be sufficient ground for divorce but should be ruled as a ground for judicial separation. It will be noticed that the expression 'adultery' has not been used in this clause and instead the words are: "had sexual intercourse with any person other than his or her spouse" and in the grounds for divorce which can be granted under this head the words in section 13(1) (i) are: "is living in adultery."

Direct proof of adultery is not imperative (*v*1). It would be unreasonable to expect direct evidence and such evidence if brought before the court must be suspect and is apt to be disbelieved. The accepted rule, therefore, is that circumstantial evidence is all that can normally be expected in proof of the charge. The circumstances must be such as lead to it by fair inference, as a necessary conclusion; and unless this were so, no protection whatever could be given to marital rights. It is impossible to indicate those circumstances universally, because they may be infinitely diversified by the situation

---

(t) As to what constitutes adultery as a matrimonial offence see Dennis v. Dennis (1955) 2 All E.R. 51, (1955) P. 153. Also see Sapsford v. Sapsford (1954) 2 All E.R. 373, (1954) P. 394.

(u) Cf. S. 1(1)(a), Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950; S. 27(a), Special Marriage Act, 1954.

(v) See p. 660, supra.

(*v*1) Avinash Prasad v. Chandra Mohini ('64) A.A. 486; Devyani v. Kantilal ('63) A.B. 98; Vedavalli v. Ramaswamy ('64) A. Mys. 280; Pattayee Ammal v. Manickam ('67) A.M. 254; Varadarajulu v. Baby Ammal ('65) A.M. 29 (surrounding circumstances).

and character of the parties, by the state of general manners, and by many other incidental circumstances, apparently slight and delicate in themselves, but which may have important bearing upon the particular case. The only general rule upon the subject is, that the circumstances must be such as would lead the guarded judgment of a reasonable and just man to the conclusion. The facts usually are not of a complicated nature but determinable upon common grounds of reason. It is in consequence of this rule that it is not necessary to prove a fact of adultery in time and place (w). Nor is it absolutely incumbent on the petitioner to prove the identity of the person with whom the alleged act of adultery took place.

Proof beyond reasonable doubt means such proof as precludes every reasonable hypothesis, except that which it tends to support. "It need not reach certainty, but must carry a high degree of probability" (x). The court does not as a general rule infer adultery from evidence of opportunity alone but would require some more satisfactory proof. In respect of what were known in England as the hotel bill and register cases where the evidence consisted of an entry in a hotel register and of the respondent being seen in a bedroom with an unknown woman the view was expressed that the court would insist upon evidence of background of an adulterous association (y). Apart from evidence of opportunity there should be some evidence of disposition on the part of the respondent. This latter may be proved by showing that prior or subsequent to the alleged fact there had been improper familiarity between the parties or other circumstantial facts. Evidence of the conjunction of strong inclination or disposition and opportunity would be strong prima facie evidence but there is no rule of law that such evidence raises an irrebutable presumption that adultery has been committed (z). The mere fact that some male relation of the respondent had written most improper letters to her is not of itself sufficient to prove adultery (*z*1).

Long period of gestation: Non-access.—A charge of adultery may be based on non-access and long period of gestation of a child born to the wife. In a case decided by the House of Lords in England the only evidence of adultery was the birth of a normally developed child three hundred and sixty days after last marital intercourse between the parties. A decree was granted in favour of the husband and the court reviewed the question of the value of medical evidence on the subject. Lord Simonds observed (a) that it would be fantastic suggestion to any ordinary man or woman that a normal child born three hundred and sixty days after the last intercourse of a man and a woman was the child of that man, and it was to him repugnant that a court of justice should be so little in accord with the common notions of mankind that it should require evidence to displace fantastic suggestions. Both Lord

---

(w) Lovedon v. Lovedon, 2 Hagg. Con. 1, 3; Hearsey v. Hearsey ('31) A. Oudh 259; Barker v. Barker ('55) A.M. 103.

(x) Miller v. Minister of Pensions (1947) 2 All E.R. 372, 373. For instance, see Subbarama v. Saraswathi ('67) A.M. 85.

(y) Raspin v. Raspin (1953) 2 All E.R. 349, (1953) P. 230.

(z) England v. England (1952) 2 All E.R. 784.

(*z*1) Chandra Mohini v. Avinash Prasad ('67) A.S.C. 581. Also see Jyotish Chandra v. Meera Guha ('70) A.C. 266.

(a) Preston Jones v. Preston Jones (1951) 1 All E.R. 124, 128, (1951) A.C. 39. Vira Reddy v. Kistamma ('69) A.M. 235 [402 days]; Maganlal v. Bai Dahi ('71) A. Guj. 33 [313 days]. Proof of non-access must be very clear and satisfactory. Mohindar Kaur v. Narindar Singh ('60) A. Punj. 169.

Simonds and Lord MacDermot observed that the difficulty lay in drawing the line. The latter added that a time must come when, with the period far in excess of the normal, the court may properly regard its length as proving the wife's adultery beyond reasonable doubt. If a line has to be drawn, he thought, it should be drawn so as to allow an ample and generous margin, for it may be as difficult for the wife to prove a freak of nature as for anyone else, and that before acting on the length of the period due regard must be paid to any other relevant evidence (b).

Access and non-access connote, as pointed out by the Privy Council (*b*1), existence and non-existence of opportunities for marital intercourse. These facts can be established not merely by positive evidence of the parties and witnesses but also by circumstantial evidence which is relevant to the issue. It is competent both to the husband and wife to give evidence on the issue. The presumption of legitimacy is, however, highly favoured by law and it is necessary that proof of non-access must be clear and satisfactory (*b*2). It is said that the Court will examine the evidence with a lynx eye.

Blood test.—In a case based on non-access or period of gestation the Court cannot compel any party to submit to a blood-test. But of course, if a party voluntarily tenders such evidence it would be duly taken into consideration. In England any such issue is at times combined with the issue relating to paternity (*b*3). There also it is a well-established principle that a person of full age and capacity cannot be ordered to undergo a blood-test against his will. Reference may be made to the undermentioned decision of the House of Lords (*b*4) where there are some general observations on blood-test though, of course, Courts in India are not concerned with the provisions of the English enactment (Family Law Reform Act 1969) which was being considered in that case relating to paternity of child. Reference may be made to Notes under section 12 (1) (d) infra.

Confession of adultery.—Confessions or admissions of adultery are admissible in connection with other relevant evidence on a charge of adultery. But confession or admission of adultery is a species of evidence which though admissible is regarded by the court with some distrust and must be examined with jealous scrutiny. There is a canon particularly pointed against it, which says nex partium confessione fides habeatur. As a general rule, therefore, the court refuses to be satisfied that the charge is established by the mere proof of such confession or admission unless it is corroborated by independent evidence. Although it is the general practice in matrimonial cases not to act and grant relief upon an uncorroborated confession or admission of adultery, there is no absolute rule of practice nor any rule of law which prevents the court from acting upon such uncorroborated evidence (c). Section 23 of the Act requires that before granting relief the court must be satisfied that the ground for relief is established. What the court will insist upon is that the charge should be strictly proved, that is, beyond all reasonable doubt (d).

---

(b) Ibid at p. 140.
(*b*1) Karapaya v. Mayandi ('34) A.P.C. 49.
(*b*2) Venkateswarlu v. Venkatanarayana ('54) A.S.C. 176.
(*b*3) F. v. F. (1968) 1 All E.R. 242.
(*b*4) W. v. Official Solicitor (1970) 3 All E.R. 107 (H.L.).
(c) Over v. Over (1925) 27 Bom. L.R. 251 (admission of adultery by wife in her letters).
(d) See Notes below and under Section 23 post.

In England, in the undermentioned case (e) the view was taken by the Court of Appeal that an adulterer who gave evidence of his or her own adultery was in the same position as an accomplice and that the danger of relying on his or her own unsupported evidence was so great that the court should insist upon being satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the matrimonial offence had been committed and that it is the duty of the court to direct itself to be slow to act on such evidence in the absence of corroboration. And even where a confession of adultery made out of court may be taken into consideration against the person making the same it will not be evidence against any other person implicated by it (f); and if such confession is made in court its probative value against the other person would be such that the court would be slow to act on it in the absence of cogent and convincing corroborative evidence of adultery by such person.

The true test, where a confession or admission of adultery made by the other spouse is relied upon, would seem to be that the court should be satisfied from all the surrounding circumstances that it is true and there is no collusion. If so satisfied it is open to the court to grant relief, notwithstanding the absence of independent corroborative testimony (*f*1). In such cases the circumstances themselves may be said to afford that requisite corroboration which is insisted upon not as a matter of legal proof but by dictates of prudence. Obviously what circumstance may afford adequate corroboration cannot be listed and must depend upon factors such as the particular or exceptional nature of the case, the evidence of disposition and opportunity and background of an adulterous association The court would also take into consideration the circumstances and situation in which the confession is made. Reference may also be made to the general observations made by the Supreme Court in the undermentioned case (g).

Onus and standard of proof.—Before granting relief on the ground of adultery the court must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the matrimonial offence complained of is established. There is always the presumption of innocence and it is for the petitioner to prove the allegations relied upon. The respondent, on the other hand, bears the burden of establishing affirmative defences set up in reply.

It is sometimes said that since adultery is a serious charge it must be examined on the same footing as a criminal charge. It is also said at times that it is a quasi-criminal offence and must be proved as such. Section 23 of the Act requires that the court should decree the relief if it is satisfied that the ground for granting relief exists. That section itself lays down a standard and puts adultery on the same footing as cruelty, desertion, or unsoundness of mind. What is required is that the court must be satisfied beyond reason-

---

(e) Galler v. Galler (1954) 1 All E.R. 536, (1954) P. 252 (the same consideration would apply to the uncorroborated testimony of a co-respondent). Also see White v. White and Jerome (1890) 62 L.T. 663. Reference may also be made to Fairman v. Fairman (1949) 1 All E.R. 938, (1949) P. 341.

(f) Rutherford v. Richardson (1923) A.C. 1, 6, 7.

(*f*1) Getty v. Getty (1907) P. 334; Simpson v. Simpson (1931) 146 L.T. 47; Collins v. Collins (1916) 33 T.L.R. 123 (confession made solely to obtain husband's forgiveness and not for the purpose of bringing about a dissolution of the marriage was acted upon by the Court); Weinberg v. Weinberg (1910) 27 T.L.R. 9.

(g) Mahendra Nanavati v. Sushila Nanavati ('65) A.S.C. 364. Also see Notes under S. 23 post.

able doubt that the charge is established. A conclusion at all points logical cannot be expected nor can a degree of certainty be demanded of which the matter under investigation is not reasonably capable. The word "strict" is regarded as sufficiently apt to describe the measure and standard of proof and it is unnecessary to introduce any question of a standard of proof required of a criminal charge.

In White v. White (*g*1) the Supreme Court had to consider the words "satisfied on evidence" used in section 14 of the Divorce Act 1869. After referring to the case Preston Jones (*g*2) decided by the House of Lords in England the Supreme Court expressed the view that the words "satisfied on evidence" mean that the court should be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt as to the commission of the matrimonial offence. The view was also expressed that the evidence must be clear and satisfactory beyond mere balance of probabilities. It was also pointed out that it was not necessary and really possible to prove adultery by any direct evidence.

Reference may also be made to Notes under sec. 23 "Standard of Proof and Corroboration" and the cases there mentioned. Also see "false defence" in Notes under that section.

Condonation of adultery.—Section 23(1)(b) lays down in effect that condonation of adultery is an absolute bar to granting of any relief by way of judicial separation under section 10(1)(f) or by way of a divorce under section 13(1)(i). The subject of condonation has been considered under section 23.

Sub-section (2): Rescission of decree.—This sub-section confers on the Court the power to rescind a decree for judicial separation passed under this section on application by either party if it considers it just and reasonable to do so. No difficulty can arise where the parties themselves are agreeable to rescission of the decree or where the application is not resisted. But where the application is resisted the extraordinary power would be exercised by the Court in exceptional circumstances where there are compelling reasons (*gg*2).

NULLITY OF MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

11. Any marriage solemnized after the commencement of this Act shall be null and void and may, on a petition presented by either party thereto, be so declared by a decree of nullity if it contravenes any one of the conditions specified in clauses (i), (iv) and (v) of section 5.

Void marriages.

Sections 11 and 17 (monogamy) do not offend Article 15(1) of the Constitution (x).

Marriage void ipso jure.—Marriage under the Act is the voluntary union of one man with one woman to the exclusion of all others satisfied by the

---

(*g*1) (1958) S.C.R. 1410.
(*g*2) (1951) A.C. 391, 417.
(*gg*2) Godabai v. Narayan ('73) A.M.P. 4.
(x) Sambireddy v. Jayamma ('72) A.A.P. 156 (F.B.).

solemnization of the marriage. A marriage may be solemnized in the sense that the parties to it have gone through the customary rites and ceremonies of either party thereto as laid down in section 7. But such a marriage to be valid must in any event fulfil three of the conditions enacted in section 5. The three conditions are that:

> neither party has a spouse living at the time of the marriage;
>
> the parties are not within the degrees of prohibited relationship, unless the custom or usage governing each of them permits of a marriage between the two;
>
> the parties are not sapindas of each other, unless the custom or usage governing each of them permits of a marriage between the two.

The present section in terms lays down that non-fulfilment of any one of these conditions renders a marriage solemnized after the commencement of the Act, null and void from its inception and either party to such marriage can obtain decree of nullity from the court. Parties to a marriage solemnized before this Act came into force are not, however, affected by this rule. In respect of matters dealt with by this section they are governed by the previous law. But the prohibition imposed against bigamy is equally applicable to them with the result that a Hindu husband cannot, after the Act came into force, marry another wife as long as his previous marriage is subsisting.

The three conditions non-fulfilment of which renders a marriage solemnized after the commencement of the Act null and void have been considered in some detail under section 3(f), 3(g), and section 5. (See pp. 676 to 681 and 685 to 689.) Attention has been drawn in the Introduction to the scheme of the Act and the distinction between marriage which is void ipso jure and marriage which is voidable under section 12.

In a petition for nullity of marriage on the ground that the respondent had a spouse living at the time of marriage [S. 5(i)], it need not necessarily be established by direct evidence and positive proof that the spouse by an earlier marriage was in existence at the time of the performance of the marriage with the petitioner. It may be implied from other facts and circumstances which should, however, be cogent and reliable (y).

Decree of nullity.—A decree of nullity may be passed by the Court at the instance of either party to the marriage solemnized after the commencement of the Act on the ground that the marriage was in contravention of any of the three conditions mentioned in this section (*g*3). A marriage which does not fulfil these three conditions is in law no marriage at all being void ipso jure and it is open to the parties even without recourse to the court to treat it as a nullity. Neither party is under any obligation to seek a declaration of nullity under this section though, of course, such a declaration may be asked

---

(y) Rajida v. Suka ('72) A.M.P. 57.

(*g*3) A third party cannot apply under this section for a decree of nullity and if such party has any right it would be enforceable by a suit Lakshmi Ammal v. Ramaswami ('60) A.M. 6; '1959) 1 Mad. L.J. 333. Amarlal v. Vijaybai ('59) A.M.P. 400. A first wife cannot present a petition under this section on the ground that the husband has gone through the ceremony of a second marriage which would be void but she may seek relief on the ground of adultery, Kedar Nath v. Suprava ('63) A.P. 311.

for for the purpose of precaution or record. It is competent to the parties whose marriage is null and void on the ground of sapinda relationship between them to enter into marriage with another person at any time even if they had cohabited as husband and wife after the solemnization of such marriage. And where the marriage is null and void on the ground that one of the parties to the marriage had a spouse living at the time of the marriage it is competent to the other spouse to disregard such void marriage and enter into marriage with another person. A marriage which is void ab initio does not alter or affect the status of the parties nor does it create between them any rights and obligations which must normally arise from a valid marriage except such rights as are expressly recognised by the Act. Thus for instance the provisions of sections 24 and 25 relating to maintenance pendente lite and costs and permanent alimony and maintenance apply to such marriage and it is competent to the court to pass any such order in a proceeding for a declaration of nullity of marriage under this section. Under general law the children born of a marriage void ab initio would be illegitimate and would not become entitled to any rights of a legitimate child. Section 16 of the Act operates in favour of children born of such a marriage and in terms lays down that even in case of a marriage void under the present section the children begotten or conceived of the parties to such void marriage are to be deemed to be their legitimate children notwithstanding any decree that may be passed by the court declaring the marriage to be null and void. Reference may be made to the Notes under Section 16.

Remarriage before disposal of appeal against decree of nullity.—See Notes under Section 15 post: "Remarriage before disposal of appeal against decree of nullity under Sections 11 and 12". A decree of nullity of marriage under this section is appealable (See Notes under Section 28 post).

12. (1) Any marriage solemnized, whether before or after the commencement of this Act, shall be voidable and may be annulled by a decree of nullity on any of the following grounds, namely:—

Voidable marriages.

(a) that the respondent was impotent at the time of the marriage and continued to be so until the institution of the proceeding; or

(b) that the marriage is in contravention of the condition specified in clause (ii) of section 5; or

(c) that the consent of the petitioner, or where the consent of the guardian in marriage of the petitioner is required under section 5, the consent of such guardian was obtained by force or fraud; or

(d) that the respondent was at the time of the marriage pregnant by some person other than the petitioner.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), no petition for annulling a marriage—

(a) on the ground specified in clause (c) of sub-section (1) shall be entertained if—

(i) the petition is presented more than one year after the force had ceased to operate or, as the case may be, the fraud had been discovered; or

(ii) the petitioner has, with his or her full consent, lived with the other party to the marriage as husband or wife after the force had ceased to operate or, as the case may be, the fraud had been discovered;

(b) on the ground specified in clause (d) of sub-section (1) shall be entertained unless the court is satisfied—

(i) that the petitioner was at the time of the marriage ignorant of the facts alleged;

(ii) that proceedings have been instituted in the case of a marriage solemnized before the commencement of this Act within one year of such commencement and in the case of marriages solemnized after such commencement within one year from the date of the marriage; and

(iii) that marital intercourse with the consent of the petitioner has not taken place since the discovery by the petitioner of the existence of the grounds for a decree.

Voidable marriage.—The scheme of the Act is to treat of marriages as valid, void and voidable. Attention has been drawn in the Introductory note to the distinction drawn between a marriage void ipso jure and a marriage which is voidable at the instance of one of the parties to the same. A voidable marriage remains valid and binding and continues to subsist for all purposes unless a decree is passed by the court annulling the same on any of the grounds mentioned in this section. The grounds it will be noticed involve the elements of incapacity of either spouse to consummate the marriage, want of mental capacity of the spouses, absence of free consent of the parties or of a guardian in marriage in case of a bride who had not completed the age of eighteen years at the time of the marriage and suppressio veri by a woman, who was pregnant at the time of marriage.

Cl. (a): Impotence.—Impotency has been understood in matrimonial cases as meaning incapacity to consummate the marriage, that is to say, incapacity to have conjugal intercourse, which is one of the objects of marriage (*g*4). As pointed out by the Supreme Court (*g*5) a party is impotent if his or her mental or physical condition makes consummation of the marriage a practical impossibility. Capacity for sexual intercourse must exist at least

---

(*g*4) As to what amounts to "consummation" reference may be made to W. v. W. (1967) 3 All E.R. 178 and cases cited there in a footnote. Also see Chanchal Kumari v. Kewal Krishan ('72) A. P. & H. 474 and cases there cited.

(*g*5) Digvijay Singh v. Pratap Kumari ('70) A.S.C. 137.

in posse, at the time of the marriage. It is for this reason that impotency, by which is meant permanent and incurable impotency, existing at the time of the marriage and continued until the institution of proceedings for nullity is recognised as a ground for annulment of marriage. In a case decided under Hindu law prior to the coming into force of the present Act it was held by the High Court of Calcutta (h) that the marriage of a female with a male who was impotent and who had not been able to consummate the marriage was a nullity. In a case decided in Bombay (i) the defendant wife suffered from permanent and incurable infirmity and the view was taken that it was competent to the court to grant a decree for nullity of marriage.

Clause (a) of sub-section (1) makes it abundantly clear that a marriage solemnized whether before or after the commencement of the Act is voidable at the instance of either party on the ground of impotence of the other party to the marriage and may be annulled by a decree of nullity of marriage. A question as to the impotence of either party cannot be raised by a third person because it is solely a personal matter for the spouses. Nor can it be raised after the death of one of them (j). The petitioner's own infirmity it will be noticed does not afford a ground for relief under the Act. Under English law the Courts have exercised jurisdiction to grant such relief where the petitioner was not aware of his or her own infirmity at the time of the marriage and there was nothing in the circumstances of the case which would have rendered it unjust to grant such relief (k). It is also clear that any such incapacity supervening after the solemnization of the marriage is no ground for relief. The clause in terms requires that the respondent:

(i) was impotent at the time of marriage, and

(ii) continued to be so until the institution of the proceeding.

It is necessary to prove that the disability alleged is incurable or such as to make consummation of the marriage practically impossible. Impotency contemplated in the section does not signify sterility or incapacity of conception but incapacity to have sexual intercourse (*k*1). The true test of impotence is the practical impossibility of consummation. Cases of malformation or structural defects causing disability often arise for consideration under the head of practical impossibility. Either spouse is at liberty to ask for relief under this clause as soon as it is discovered that the other party is incapable of sexual intercourse from any malformation or structural defect or otherwise. Ordinarily and also as a matter of prudence the court will insist on proof of this by medical evidence. It may be questioned whether the court can order physical examination in any case under the present head; but where a husband or wife refuses to submit to such examination the court may, if the facts and circumstances of the case so warrant, properly draw an unfavourable inference (l). The court, however, is not bound to draw such

---

(h) Ratan Moni Debi v. Nagendra Narain ('49) A.C. 404. Also see Venkateswararao v. Nagamani ('62) A.A.P. 151. Also see Chamanlal v. Rupa ('66) A.J. & K. 68 (Burden of proof).

(i) A. v. B. (1952) 54 Bom. L.R. 725.

(j) A. v. B. (1868) L.R. 1 P. & D. 559.

(k) Harthan v. Harthan (1948) 2 All E.R. 639, (1949) P. 115.

(*k*1) Shewanti v. Bhawrao ('71) A.M.P. 168. In Laxmi Devi v. Babu Lal ('73) A. Raj. 89 it was held that there was incapacity to have conjugal intercourse even after an operation.

(l) Birendra Kumar Biswas v. Hemlata Biswas (1921) 48 Cal. 283, 297. Reference may be made to Bipinchandra v. Madhuriben ('63) A. Guj. 250; (1963) 4 Guj. L.R. 890. Also see Jayaraj v. Seeniammal ('67) A.M. 242 (case under Indian Divorce Act, 1869).

inference (n). A spouse must be regarded as incurable either if the condition can be remedied by an operation attended by danger, or if the spouse at fault refuses to submit to an operation (o). The court has to approach and deal with any such matter by looking at the matter from the practical point of view. A very belated offer to undergo an operation to correct a defect may be only an afterthought and not genuine or there may be no reasonable prospect of the incapacity being cured. In such a case the Court would be justified in granting relief to the aggrieved spouse (p).

In deciding whether a state of impotency existed at the date of the marriage, and continued to the date of the institution of the proceeding the court must take into consideration future medical or surgical treatment which might remove the cause of disability. Applying the test whether there was practical impossibility of consummation it was held in a case in England that as at the material date the wife was willing to undergo and subsequently underwent an operation which remedied the impediment the husband had failed to prove that the marriage had not been consummated owing to the wife's incapacity (q). In cases falling under this head the following observations will be found useful: "The invalidity of the marriage, if it cannot be consummated on account of some structural difficulty, is undoubted; but the basis of the interference of the court is not the structural defect, but the impracticability of consummation. If, therefore, a case presents itself involving the impracticability (although it may not arise from a structural defect) the reason for the interference of the court arises. The impossibility must be practical. It cannot be necessary to show that the woman is so formed that connection is physically impossible if it can be shown that it is possible only under conditions to which the husband would not be justified in resorting. The absence of a physical structural defect cannot be sufficient to render a marriage valid if it be shown that connection is practically impossible, or even if it be shown that it is only practicable after a remedy has been applied which the husband cannot enforce, and which the wife, whether wilfully or acting under the influence of hysteria, is determined not to submit to" (r).

Incapacity quoad the particular individual.—It is not absolutely necessary that the incapacity to perform the act of coitus must be general because a person may generally be capable of the act and yet incapable of it with a particular individual. Relief can be granted in cases of impotence quoad hunc or quoad hanc (s).

Wilful refusal of the respondent to consummate marriage.—Section 25(1) of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, and section 8 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, in England give wilful refusal of the respondent to consummate the (n) Ratan Moni Debi v. Nagendra Narain ('49) AC. 404, 407; P. v. P. (1909) 25 T.L.R. 638; Ganeshji v. Hastuben (1967) 8 Guj. L.R. 966 (medical evidence of respondent wife's potency). In Suvarnabahen v. Rashmikant ('70) A. Guj. 43 the Court was satisfied with the testimony of the wife about the husband's impotency. It was held that corroboration was not absolutely essential.

---

(o) S. v. S. (1954) 3 All E.R. 736, 741, (1954) P. 194.

(p) M. v. M. (1956) 3 All E.R. 769.

(q) S. v. S. (1954) 3 All E.R. 736, (1954) P. 194; W.Y. v. A.Y. (1946) S.C. 27.

(r) Per Lord Penzance in G. v. G. (1871) I.R. 2 P. & D. 287, 291. Also see S. v. S. (1954) 3 All E.R. 736.

(s) C. v. C. (1921) P. 399; H. v. P. (1873) L.R. 3 P. & D. 126. Reference may be made to J. v. J. (1908) 24 T.L.R. 622, (1909) P. 217. Also see D-E v. A-G (1845) 1 Rob. Eccl. 279. Also see Jagdish Lal v. Shyama ('66) A.A. 150.

marriage as an additional ground for decree of nullity of marriage by declaring that in such a case the marriage is voidable. The Matrimonial Causes Act, 1937, also contained a similar provision. Prior to that the view taken in England was that such refusal did not of itself empower the court to annul the marriage on the ground of impotence. It was, however, held that when after a reasonable time of the marriage it was shown that the wife had refused intercourse and resisted all attempts by the husband without just cause and the court was satisfied of the bona fides of the suit, it was at liberty to infer that the refusal was wilful and arose from incapacity to consummate the marriage. Wilful refusal in this context connotes a settled and definite decision come to without just excuse. It does not mean a mere temporary unwillingness due to a passing phase or a nervous ignorance which may be got rid of or cured by patient forbearance, care, kindness and tact (t). There is no provision in the present enactment similar to that in the enactments mentioned above but in cases decided under the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, the same view had been taken following the earlier decisions on the subject of Courts in England. Incapacity to consummate the marriage need not necessarily be physical. It may be due as well to mental causes. 'There can be cases of invincible repugnance to the act of intercourse either generally or with the particular individual. This can arise from a variety of causes; from nervousness (u) or excessive sensibility (v), though 'hysterical' or 'unconquerable aversion' may be more usual (w). It is true that the common area covered by suits on the ground of impotence and wilful refusal to consummate the marriage is very small. But it is quite possible that both the grounds may be present at the same time and it is submitted that in a case of wilful refusal to consummate the marriage persisted in till the institution of the proceeding the court would be at liberty to infer incapacity and grant relief under the present clause where it is sought after a reasonable time of marriage and the court is satisfied that the petition is bona fide. This would be after taking into consideration all the facts and history of the case because in cases of this nature the danger of collusion is great and the court has to be watchful that it is not imposed upon.

Delay in instituting proceedings.—Reference may be made to Notes under section 23 (d) post. "Delay and proceeding for nullity on ground of impotence."

Doctrines of "Insincerity": "Approbation."—In England it is not unusual to speak of the plea of insincerity in the context of proceedings for nullity. Any such consideration, in order to be relevant, would have to fall within the ambit of clause (a) of section 23 (1) which disentitles a person to any relief where it is established that he or she is taking advantage of his or her wrong or disability for the purpose of such relief. It would seem unnecessary for courts in India to act upon the undefined concept of doctrine of insincerity. In S. v. R. the Delhi High Court (*w*1) examined these doctrines and expressed the view that these doctrines were inapplicable to cases under the present

---

(t) Horton v. Horton (1947) 2 All E.R. 871, 874; Baxter v. Baxter (1947) 1 All E.R. 387 (case of acquiescence).

(u) F. v. P. (1897) 75 L.T. 192.

(v) G. v. G. (1871) L.R. 2 P. 287.

(w) Kishore Sahu v. Snehaprabha Sahu ('43) A.N. 185, 191. Also see Jagdish Kumar v. Sita Devi ('63) A. Punj. 114. And see Shanta Bai v. Tarachand ('66) A.M.P. 8.

(*w*1) ('68) A. Delhi 79.

section. Of course, the court in applying sec. 23 (1) (a) would decline to give relief in a proceeding for nullity where the facts and circumstances proved plainly imply on the part of the complaining spouse a recognition of the existence and validity of the marriage, as to render it most inequitable that he or she should be permitted to challenge the validity of the marriage with effect. In cases of this kind many sorts of conduct might exist, taking pecuniary benefit for example. But the court must be fully satisfied that the facts and circumstances of the case bring the case clearly within the ambit of the rule laid down in that section (*w*2).

Cl. (b): Marriage with an idiot or a lunatic.—Section 24(1)(i) of the Special Marriage Act lays down that a marriage solemnized under that Act is null and void and may be so declared by a decree of nullity inter alia on the ground that a party to the marriage was an idiot or a lunatic at the time of the marriage. Under English law a person of unsound mind is incapable of consent and the marriage of such a person is automatically void. The rule laid down in the present clause it will be noticed is different. One of the conditions of a Hindu marriage under the Act is that neither party to the same should be an idiot or a lunatic at the time of the marriage [Section 5(ii)]. The Legislature seems to have preferred to take the view that a marriage with any such person should not be null and void but should only be voidable. Presumably this rule was enacted in view of the difficulties felt and the opinions expressed in the undermentioned cases decided on general principles of Hindu law (x). An objection to a marriage on the ground of mental incapacity must depend on a question of degree of the defect in order to rebut the extremely strong presumption in favour of the validity of a marriage which has in fact taken place.

"Idiot".—The expression is not defined in the Act. It must be understood in its ordinary significance (z). It does not contemplate a person merely of weak intellect, in the sense that he is not up to the ordinary standard of human intelligence or endowed with the capacity to manage his affairs properly (a). In the present context it means a person so deficient in mind as to be permanently incapable of rational conduct. Idiocy is congenital. It must be shown to have been complete and absolute before it can be held that a person was incompetent to marry as being incapable of understanding the meaning of marriage. An idiot is one born without any glimmering of reason and is to be distinguished from a lunatic who is one that had understanding but has temporarily or permanently lost use of reason by disease, grief or other cause.

"Lunatic."—The expression lunatic has not been defined in the Act. According to a decision of the Calcutta High Court (*a*1) it must be given the same meaning as in section 3(5) of the Lunacy Act and should be understood to mean a person of unsound mind.

---

(*w*2) A. v. B. ('67) A. Punj. 152. Reference may be made to the observations of Selborne, L. C., in G. v. M. (1885) A.C. 171, 185, 186.

(x) Amirthammal v. Vallimayil Ammal (1942) Mad. 807, 203 I.C. 648, ('42) A.M. 693; Rateshwari Nandan v. Bhagwati Saran (1949) F.C.R. 715, (1950) A.F.C. 142.

(z) Mt. Titli v. Alfred Jones ('34) A.A. 273, 280.

(a) Surti v. Narain Das (1890) 12 All. 530, 533.

(*a*1) Amina Roy v. Mohan Roy ('69) A.C. 304.

The burden of proving lunacy of the other spouse to the marriage is on the petitioner.

Cl. (c): Consent obtained by force or fraud.—The ceremonial marriage under the Act, although it creates a relation and a status not imposed or defined by contract, does require the consensus of the parties to the solemnization of it. Absence of consent does not render the marriage void ipso jure but voidable at the instance of the party whose consent was obtained by force or fraud. Clause (c) of sub-section (1) which has to be read with clause (a) of sub-section (2) lays down the rule relating to annulment of such voidable marriage. The rule is not absolute and will not operate if:

(i) the petition is presented more than one year after the force ceases or the fraud is discovered; or

(ii) the petitioner has with his or her full consent and knowledge acquiesced in the marriage by living with the other party to the marriage as husband or wife.

Force.—Where consent of a party to solemnization of marriage is obtained by force, or as it is sometimes said by coercion or duress, it is obvious that there is absence of a consenting will to marry. Force when it is used excludes any real or intelligent consent altogether. In two English cases Scott v. Sebright (b) and Ford v. Stier (c) marriages were avoided in extremely peculiar circumstances on the ground of combined fraud and coercion having operated on the pretended wife to such an extent that the marriage was not her voluntary act. The test to be applied is whether there was any real consent to the solemnization of the marriage. In a recent decision in England it was observed that in order for the impediment of duress to vitiate an otherwise valid marriage, it must be proved that the will of one of the parties thereto has been overborne by genuine and reasonably held fear caused by threat or immediate danger, for which the party itself is not responsible, to life, limb or liberty, so that the constraint destroys the reality of consent to ordinary wedlock (*c*1).

Fraud.—It is essential to note that the section does not speak of fraud in any general way or of every misrepresentation or concealment which may be fraudulent but fraud whereby the consent of the petitioner was obtained to the solemnization of the marriage. If there was actual consent to the solemnization of the marriage with the respondent the marriage cannot be annulled on the ground of fraud. In matrimonial law when fraud is spoken of as a ground for avoiding a marriage, it does not include such fraud as induces a consent but is limited to such fraud as procures the appearance without the reality of consent. This distinction is clearly brought out by the case where it was held that concealment by a woman from her husband at the time of her marriage of the fact that she was then pregnant by another man was no

---

(b) (1886) 12 P.D. 21.

(c) (1896) P. 1 Reference may also be made to Annjana Desi v. Prahlad (1871) 6 Beng. L.R. 243.

(*c*1) Szechter v. Szechter (1970) 3 All E.R. 905 (case-law discussed). In Purabi v. Basudeb ('69) A.C. 293 allegations of fraud and coercion were disbelieved (case under Special Marriage Act, 1954).

ground for avoiding the marriage on the plea that that consent was obtained by fraud (d). It will be noticed that the Legislature has in view of this expressly provided in clause (d) that in such a case the marriage may be annulled if the petitioner was at the time of the marriage ignorant of that fact. In another case which seems to illustrate the rule it was held that concealment of the fact that the wife had been a naikin by profession and even in the keeping of more than one person prior to the marriage was not fraud if there was consent to the marriage (e). A person who freely consents to a solemnization of the marriage with the other party in accordance with customary ceremonies, that is, with knowledge of the nature of the ceremonies and intention to marry, cannot raise an objection to the validity of the marriage on the ground of any fraudulent representation or concealment. Thus for instance a marriage cannot be avoided by showing that the petitioner was induced to marry the respondent by fraudulent statements relating to family or fortune or caste or religion or age or character of the respondent (*e*1). The test is that there should be real consent to solemnization of marriage and consent to marry the particular person. Where, however, there is no real consent, as for instance where a party is kept under the impression that what is being performed is only a betrothal (f) or there is deception as to the identity of the other party, that would be fraud which affords a ground for annulment of the marriage under the rule laid down in this clause.

Cl. (d): Respondent wife pregnant at the time of marriage.—Any marriage whether solemnized before or after the commencement of the Act is voidable at the instance of the husband on the ground that the respondent wife was at the time of the marriage pregnant by some person other than the petitioner provided the conditions laid down in sub-section (2) (b) are strictly fulfilled. The basis of the rule is suppressio veri by a woman who was pregnant at the time of marriage. The rule applies only in case of pregnancy per allium. The onus of proof which requires the husband to establish his case beyond reasonable doubt does not extend to establishing the scientific impossibility of his being the father of the child. In Mahendra Nanavati v. Sushila Nanavati the Supreme Court held that in a petition founded on this clause read with sub-section (2) (b) (i) the petitioner has to establish such facts and circumstances which would lead the Court either to believe that the respondent was pregnant at the time of marriage by someone else or to hold that a prudent man would, on those facts and circumstances, be completely satisfied that it was so and has also to establish that he was at the time of the marriage ignorant of the fact that the respondent was pregnant by some person other than the petitioner. The child was born 171 days after the first coitus between the petitioner and the respondent wife. The delivery was normal and the child born was also normal. It was held that the child was not a child born after gestation of only 171 days and the petitioner was

---

(d) Moss v. Moss (1897) P. 263.

(e) Appibai v. Khimji (1936) 38 Bom. L.R. 77.

(*e*1) Reference may be made to Raghunath v. Vijaya ('72) A.B. 132 (concealment as to state of health: epilepsy); Harbhajan Singh v. Brij Balab ('64) A. Punj. 359 (character and moral conduct); Surjit Kumar v. Raj Kumari ('67) A. Punj. 172 (past unchastity). The correctness of the decisions in Bimla Bai v. Shankulal ('59) A.M.P. 8 (legitimacy: caste) and in Babui Panmato v. Ram Agya Singh ('68) A.P. 190 (age) must be doubted.

(f) Ford v. Stier (1896) P. 1.

not the father of the child (*f*1). Reference may also be made to Notes under S. 23 post: "Admission of parties".

Blood-test.—There is no provision in Indian law regarding jurisdiction of the court to order blood-tests in matrimonial proceedings. In S. v. S. (*f*2) the House of Lords in England had occasion to examine the question in the context of paternity proceedings. It is a well-established principle that a person of full age and capacity cannot be ordered to undergo a blood-test against his will. In England section 21 (1) of the Family Law Reforms Act deals with the matter. Also see Notes under section 10 (1) (f) supra.

The clause adopts the language of section 8 (1) (d) and the proviso to that section in the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950.

Sub-section (2) (a) (ii).—The application of the condition laid down in this clause does not depend upon the lapse of any time after the discovery of the alleged fraud. If it is shown that the husband or the wife, as the case may be, after the fraud was discovered, lived together for whatever period as wife and husband with full consent, that would be sufficient for rejecting the petition for annulment (*f*3).

Sub-section (2) (b) (ii).—The condition laid down in sub-section (2) (b) (ii) that the petition must be filed within one year as therein prescribed is absolute and a petition will not lie under this clause after that period has lapsed even if fraud had been practised on the petitioner in the matter of the pregnancy by concealment of the truth (g). The condition as to the time within which proceedings under clause (d) of sub-section (1) must be instituted is absolute and mandatory. Hence a petition for nullity of marriage filed under that clause on the day on which the court opened after the long vacation cannot be entertained even though the period of one year expired during the vacation (*g*1).

Remarriage before disposal of appeal against decree of nullity.—See Notes under Section 15 post: "Remarriage before disposal of appeal against decree of nullity under Sections 11 and 12". A decree of nullity of marriage under this section is appealable (see Notes under Section 28 post).

13. (1) Any marriage solemnized, whether before or after the commencement of this Act, may, on a petition presented by either the husband or the wife, be dissolved by a decree of divorce on the ground that the other party—

Divorce.

(i) is living in adultery; or

---

(*f*1) ('65) A.S.C. 364; Preston Jones v. Preston Jones (1951) A.C. 391 [360 days]; Nishit Kumar v. Anjali ('68) A.C. 105 [167 days]; Vira Reddi v. Keslamma ('69) A.M. 235 [402 days]; Maganlal v. Bai Dahi ('71) A. Guj. 33 [313 days]. As to burden of proof in these cases see Mahendra Nanavati v. Sushila Nanavati and Nishit Kumar v. Anjali cited above.

(*f*2) (1970) 3 All E.R. 107 (H.L.). Also see T (H) v. T (E) (1971) 1 All E.R. 590.

(*f*3) Raghunath v. Vijaya ('72) A.B. 132.

(g) Chaplin v. Chaplin (1948) 2 All E.R. 408 (C.A.), (1949) P. 72.

(*g*1) Savlaram v. Yeshodabai ('62) A.B. 190; (1962) Bom. 326; 64 Bom. L.R. 27; Vellinayagi v. Subramaniam ('69) A.M. 479.

(ii) has ceased to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion; or

(iii) has been incurably of unsound mind for a continuous period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition; or

(iv) has, for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, been suffering from a virulent and incurable form of leprosy; or

(v) has, for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, been suffering from venereal disease in a communicable form; or

(vi) has renounced the world by entering any religious order; or

(vii) has not been heard of as being alive for a period of seven years or more by those persons who would naturally have heard of it, had that party been alive.

(1A) Either party to a marriage, whether solemnized before or after the commencement of this Act, may also present a petition for the dissolution of the marriage by a decree of divorce on the ground—

(i) that there has been no resumption of cohabitation as between the parties to the marriage for a period of two years or upwards after the passing of a decree for judicial separation in a proceeding to which they were parties; or

(ii) that there has been no restitution of conjugal rights as between the parties to the marriage for a period of two years or upwards after the passing of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights in a proceeding to which they were parties.

(2) A wife may also present a petition for the dissolution of her marriage by a decree of divorce on the ground,—

(i) in the case of any marriage solemnized before the commencement of this Act, that the husband had married again before such commencement or that any other wife of the husband married before such commencement was alive at the time of the solemnization of the marriage of the petitioner:

Provided that in either case the other wife is alive at the time of the presentation of petition; or

(ii) that the husband has, since the solemnization of the marriage, been guilty of rape, sodomy or bestiality.

Amendments:—

This section was amended by the Hindu Marriage Amendment Act 44 of 1964. Clauses (viii) and (ix) of sub-section (1) were omitted and in their place sub-section (1A) was inserted. Clauses (viii) and (ix) which are now deleted were as under:

(viii) has not resumed cohabitation for a space of two years or upwards after the passing of a decree for judicial separation against the party; or

(ix) has failed to comply with a decree for restitution of conjugal rights for a period of two years or upwards after the passing of the decree.

Uttar Pradesh Act 13 of 1962.—Section 2 of this Act is as under:

Amendment of section 13 of Act 25 of 1955.—In sub-section (1) of section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—

(a) after clause (i) the following new clause shall be inserted and shall be deemed always to have been inserted:—

"(i-a) has persistently or repeatedly treated the petitioner with such cruelty as to cause a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the petitioner that it will be harmful or injurious for the petitioner to live with the other party or" and

(b) for clause (viii) the following clause shall be substituted and shall be deemed always to have been substituted—

"(viii) has not resumed cohabitation after the passing of a decree for judicial separation against that party and—

(a) a period of two years has elapsed since the passing of such decree; or

(b) the case is one of exceptional hardship to the petitioner or of exceptional depravity on the part of the other party; or."

In Chandra Mohini v. Srivastava (g2) the Supreme Court held that sub-clause (b) above is not an independent provision. It still requires a decree of judicial separation being passed and then only a decree for divorce may follow without waiting for two years. The court cannot forthwith pass a decree of divorce under this sub-clause.

Divorce.—Unless allowed by custom divorce was not recognized by the general Hindu law as administered by courts in British India. Subject to the exception relating to the right where it is recognized by custom (h) divorce is entirely statutory. It is conceded in all jurisdictions that public policy, good morals and the interests of society require that the marriage relation should be surrounded with every safeguard and its severance allowed only in the manner and for the cause specified by law. Divorce is not favoured or encouraged, and is permitted only for grave reasons. And even when any ground laid down in the section exists the court will not as a general rule entertain a petition for divorce within three years of the marriage (section 14). That limitation of three years and an examination of the grounds mentioned in the present section and a comparison of the same with the grounds on which judicial separation may be decreed (section 10) will show that the intention of the Legislature was to provide for maximum opportunities for mutual adjustment and to see that the rules are so framed that divorce is not made easy.

A decree of divorce, as a general rule, operates from the moment it is pronounced. The rule laid down in section 15 that neither spouse can marry again until the time for appeal has expired in no way affects the operation of the decree. Subject to the limitation relating to remarriage by either spouse the effect of a decree of divorce is to dissolve the marriage for all intents and purposes from the date of its pronouncement. The Act does not provide for passing of decree nisi and decree absolute as for instance is done under the Indian Divorce Act (see Notes under Section 15 post).

---

(g2) ('67) A.S.C. 581.

(h) Section 29(2). Also see § 441 ante.

Attention has already been drawn in the Introduction to the scheme of the Act and the distinction made between grounds on which a decree of nullity of marriage can be passed and grounds on which dissolution of marriage may be decreed. In case of divorce the marriage having been duly solemnized and itself not being void or voidable is dissolved by the court for reasons mostly arising after the marriage.

Cl. (i): "Living in adultery".—As already pointed out the Legislature took the view that a single act of infidelity to the marriage bond should not be sufficient ground for relief by way of a decree of divorce but should only be a ground for judicial separation as provided in section 10(1)(f). The present clause deals with a more aggravated form of matrimonial offence. In a case covered by this clause the petitioner is not bound to obtain a degree for judicial separation. He has the option to ask for a dissolution of marriage or he may only seek judicial separation.

A single act of adultery cannot amount to "living in adultery" within the meaning of this clause. The natural meaning of the words would seem to be that they point to a course of action more or less continuous and not isolated acts of immorality. The identical expression is to be found in sec. 488(4) of the Criminal Procedure Code and has there been interpreted to refer to a course of conduct and to mean something more than a single lapse from virtue (i). The present tense in the words "is living in adultery" is significant and the court will refuse to pass a decree if it is satisfied that the respondent was not actually living in adultery, at the time of the petition even though it may be shown that he or she had in the past formed an adulterous connection. The onus of showing that the respondent had ceased to live in adultery in any such case would, however, be heavy on the respondent since the ordinary presumption would be that the guilty respondent shown to have done so had continued to live in adultery.

It would not be enough for the petitioner to show that the respondent had been living in adultery some time in the past and no relief would be granted to the petitioner under the present clause if it appeared that the latter had seceded from such life for an appreciable duration extending to the filing of the petition (j). The same view has been taken in the undermentioned cases (*j*1).

In any such case if there is no condonation of the adultery a decree for judicial separation can be granted under section 10(1)(f). In the under-

---

(i) In re Fulchand (1928) 30 Bom. L.R. 79; Kallu v. Kausilia (1904) 26 All. 326; Patala Atchamma v. Patala Mahalakshmi (1907) 30 Mad. 332; Jatindra Mohun v. Gouri Bala (1924) 29 Cal. W.N. 647. Reference may be made to Chanda v. Nandu ('65) A.M.P. 268.

(j) Rajani v. Prabhakar ('58) A.B. 264. Bhagwan Singh v. Amar Kaur ('62) A. Punj. 144.

(*j*1) Maganlal v. Dahi ('71) A. Gui. 33; Pattayee Ammal v. Manickam ('67) A.M. 254. Also see f.n. (*j*2) and (*j*3) below.

mentioned case (*j*2) there was proof of only a single act of adultery and a decree for judicial separation was granted though the petitioner had only claimed dissolution of marriage. Relief by way of judicial separation, in any such case, may be granted even at appellate stage (*j*3).

Reference may be made to the Notes under Section 10(f).

Cl. (ii): "Ceased to be a Hindu by conversion".—As pointed out in § 441 ante, there is no rule of Hindu law which forbids the subsistence of a marriage one of the parties to which has ceased to be a Hindu. The marriage being indissoluble the rule was firmly established that conversion did not operate per se as a dissolution of marriage. The law was modified to some extent by the Native Convert's Marriage Dissolution Act, 1866. The Hindu marriage under the Act is one solemnized between persons who are Hindus in the wide connotation of the term and the Legislature has now laid down that the conversion of one of the spouses to any other religion affords a ground to the other spouse to seek dissolution of the marriage. The Note to the Hindu Marriage and Divorce Bill stated: A change in religion is not inconsistent with the continuance of conjugal love and it should therefore not be permissible for a party to the marriage to get a divorce by changing his or her religion. The right to get a divorce under this law is therefore given to the party who continues to be a Hindu (in the wide sense in which the term is used). A somewhat similar right is given to a person changing his religion for Christianity under the Native Convert's Marriage Dissolution Act, 1866, under which a husband or wife who changes his or her religion for Christianity is entitled to sue the other party for restitution of conjugal rights if the other party deserts or repudiates him or her, and if after the petition the desertion is persisted in, the court may declare the marriage dissolved after following the prescribed procedure.

The term Hindu in this clause must be understood in the wide sense given to it in section 2 which includes all Hindus, Buddhists, Jains and Sikhs. So a person continues to be a Hindu even though he may have been converted from any one to any other of these religions and his case will not be covered by this clause. Conversion in the present context implies that the person has voluntarily relinquished his religion and adopted another religion after formal ceremonial conversion. A Hindu does not cease to be a Hindu merely because he professes a theoretical allegiance to another faith, or is an ardent admirer and advocate of such religion and its practices. But if he abdicates his religion by a clear act of renunciation and adopts the other religion by undergoing formal conversion he would cease to be a Hindu within the meaning of this clause.

Cl. iii: ". . . incurably of unsound mind for a continuous period of not less than three years . . ."—The scheme of the Act on the question of mental capacity of the spouses affecting formation of marriage has been pointed out in the Notes under sec. 5(ii). This clause deals with supervening unsoundness of mind if it is incurable. Insanity of the respondent for a continuous period of not less than two years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition is already pointed out as a ground for judicial separation under section 10(1)(e). For that relief it is not necessary that the unsoundness of mind should be incurable. For relief by way of a decree of divorce dissolving the marriage a stronger ground has to be made out as laid down in this clause. The unsoundness of mind must be incurable and must have been present for a continuous period of three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition.

---

(*j*2) Bhagwan Singh v. Amar Kaur ('62) A. Punj. 144.

(*j*3) Vira Reddi v. Kistamma ('69) A.M. 235.

The meaning of the expression "incurably of unsound mind" and the test applicable in dealing with any case under section 1(1)(d) of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1959 has been examined in a number of cases decided in England. It has been observed that the state of mind envisaged is a degree of unsoundness or incapacity of mind properly called insanity. The practical test of the degree is to be found in the phrase 'incapable of managing himself and his affairs including the problems of society and of married life but without reference to the cause of such incapacity' (*j*4).

The onus of proving unsoundness of mind and the requisite duration of it as also that it is incurable is on the petitioner. It is not necessary that the respondent should have been adjudged a lunatic under the Lunacy Act. Nor does the finding of the Court on the inquisition against the respondent afford proof of his unsoundness of mind. But the finding of such Court that the respondent is a lunatic is prima facie evidence and raises a presumption that he continued to be of unsound mind (k) and throws the burden of proof on those who contend the contrary. The presumption is not then, as it would otherwise be, in favour of sanity or soundness of mind, but the contrary must be proved (l); that is those who allege the sanity of the respondent at any time during the period of three years or at the time of the petition, have the burden cast on them of proving such soundness of mind. Being in all cases a question of fact it must depend upon the facts of each case whether there is satisfactory evidence of the unsoundness of mind of the respondent. There should be a strict inquiry into the matter and the court must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the requirements of this clause are established (m). The court insists on the test of legal insanity being satisfied by cogent and clear evidence to the effect that the respondent is unable to understand the nature and consequences of his acts and is such as cannot be regarded as responsible for his acts in the eye of law (*m*1).

The legal terminology on the subject is neither consistent nor comprehensive and decisions on the subject often turn on the peculiar facts and circumstances of each individual case. The question is to be determined not upon wire-drawn speculations but upon tangible and established facts. The question is a mixed one, partly within the range of common observation and partly within the range of medical experience. The gravity and importance

---

(*j*4) Whysall v. Whysall (1959) 3 All E.R. 389, 395-397; Robinson v. Robinson (1964) 3 All E.R. 232, 239, 240.

(k) Seshamma v. Padmanabha Rao (1917) 40 Mad. 660.

(l) Snook v. Watts (1848) 11 Beav. 105; Hill v. Clifford (1907) 2 Ch. 236, 244, 245.

(m) See Section 23 and Notes thereunder "Standard of proof." In Dastane v. Dastane ('70) A.B. 312 the court considered the question of schizophrenia.

(*m*1) Reference may be made to Ajitrai Mehta v. Vasumati ('69) A. Guj. 48.

of the issue requires that the court ought to form its own independent judgment on the point. Medical testimony can be of considerable assistance and even guidance but the question is one for the court and not for the experts and evidence of experts does not relieve the court from the obligation of satisfying itself on the point beyond reasonable doubt (*m*2).

In England section 1(1) (d) of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, lays down incurable unsoundness of mind as a ground for divorce and requires that the respondent must have been continuously under care and treatment for a period of at least five years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition.

No decree would be granted on this ground if the unsoundness of mind had been conduced by the wilful neglect or misconduct of the petitioner and the court is satisfied that the petitioner is in asking for relief taking advantage of his or her own wrong (n).

Cl. (iv) Incurable and virulent leprosy.—Clause (c) of sub-section (1) of section 10 lays down as one of the grounds for judicial separation that the respondent has been suffering for a period of not less than one year immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, from a virulent form of leprosy. The present clause lays down as one of the grounds for divorce that the respondent has been suffering, for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition, from a virulent and incurable form of leprosy. Medical testimony can be of considerable assistance and even guidance but ultimately the question is one for the court and not for the experts and evidence of experts does not relieve the court from forming its own judgment and from the obligation of satisfying itself beyond reasonable doubt on the question whether leprosy from which the respondent suffers is both of a virulent form and incurable. The onus of proving this is on the petitioner. Reference may be made to the undermentioned case where a number of treatises on the subject were carefully examined by the court (nn).

The expression "virulent" was interpreted as malignant or venomous in the undermentioned case (*n*1).

Also see Notes under section 10(1) (c).

Cl. (v): Venereal disease.—This clause lays down as one of the grounds, on which marriage may be dissolved by a decree of divorce, that the respondent has been suffering from venereal disease in a communicable form for a period of not less than three years immediately preceding the presentation of the petition. This provision may be compared with clause (d) of sub-section (1) of section 10.

Also see Notes under section 10(1) (d).

---

(*m*2) This passage is quoted with approval in Munishwar Datt v. Indra Kumari ('63) A. Punj. 449, (1963) 2 Punj. 263.

(n) See S. 23(1)(a). Also see Proviso (IV) to Section 4, Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950.

(nn) Padma Rao v. Swarajya Lakshmi ('70) A.A.P. 300.

(*n*1) Annapurnamma v. Appa Rao ('63) A.A.P. 312.

Cl. (vi): Adoption of religious order.—Under Hindu law where a person enters into a religious order renouncing all wordly affairs, his action is tantamount to civil death (§ 111). This clause lays down that a husband or wife can seek dissolution of marriage by a decree of divorce on the ground that the respondent has renounced the world by entering any religious order. Both these requirements must be satisfied before a decree for divorce can be granted on the ground laid down in this clause. The religious orders contemplated by the clause include those of Hindus, Buddhists, Jains and Sikhs. The religious orders well known in India require on the part of a person who wants to enter the same the performance of certain ceremonies or certain formalities. The religious order whatever it is must be one which requires renunciation of the world. This postulates relinquishment of all property and worldly concerns.

A person cannot be said to have adopted a religious order by merely declaring himself to belong to such order. He must have performed the requisite ceremonies and formalities of the particular religious order. Thus for instance a person who wants to renounce the world by becoming a sanyasi can be held to have entered that order only if he has performed the necessary rites and ceremonies prescribed by the shastras. The mere fact that he calls himself or is described by others as such is not enough; and the mere adoption of the external symbols of sanyasa as the wearing of coloured clothes or shaving of the head is not sufficient to make him a sanyasi. The renunciation of the world which is a postulant for sanyasa requires relinquishment of all property and wordly affairs. Relinquishment of property need not be in favour of any particular person but may be in a general way. Renunciation of the world by entering into a religious order must be unequivocal and absolute (o).

Cl. (vii): "has not been heard of as being alive for a period of seven years . . ."—It is a rule of presumption that in the absence of evidence to the contrary a person shall be taken to be dead if he has not been heard of for a period of seven years or more by those persons who would naturally have heard of him, had he been alive. This is a presumption of universal acceptance as it aids proof of death in cases where it would be extremely difficult if not impossible to prove that fact. It is a presumption of great convenience and section 108 of the Evidence Act lays it down as a distinct rule. The fact that for a period of seven years or upwards the respondent has been absent from the petitioner and the petitioner or other persons who would hear of him had he been alive, have not heard of him at all should in normal circumstances be sufficient evidence on which death may be presumed and dissolution of marriage granted to the petitioner. That presumption is the foundation of the rule laid down in this clause and although the clause does not in terms require the Court to make in any such case a "decree of presumption of death and of a dissolution of marriage" as laid down in England in section 16 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, it does not seem that the Legislature intended to enact any different rule. The standard of proof is that laid down in section 23 and the court will inquire into all the relevant facts and circumstances and pass a decree only if it is satisfied that reasonable grounds exist for acting on the presumption of the death of the respondent. The Rules framed under the Act by some of the High Courts require the petitioner to state in any such case, the last place of cohabitation of the parties, the circumstances in which the parties ceased to cohabit, the date and the place where the respondent was last seen or heard of, and the steps which were taken to trace the respondent (p).

---

(o) Kondol Row v. Swamulavaru ('18) A.M. 402; Baldeo Prasad v. Arya Priti Nidhi Sabha (1930) 52 All. 789. Also see f.n. (c) under § 111 ante.

The object of the rule is not to establish whether in point of fact the respondent was dead or alive, but whether, on the day on which the decree is passed, the facts so far as then known, were such as to justify the court in taking action on the ground set out in the clause. Therefore, a decree of divorce granted under this clause is valid and effective even if it subsequently transpires that the respondent was in fact alive when the decree was passed.

Sub-section (1A)(i): Where there has been no resumption of cohabitation for two years or more after decree for judicial separation.—The newly added clause (i) of sub-section (1A) makes a distinct departure from the original clause (viii) of sub-section (1). Under the original provision relief by way of divorce on the ground therein mentioned could be obtained only by a petitioner, husband or wife, who had obtained a decree for judicial separation. The present clause permits either party to that petition in which a decree for judicial separation had been passed to apply to the court for a decree for divorce by showing that there has been no resumption of cohabitation between the parties to the marriage for a period of two years or upwards after the passing of the decree. The decree must of course be a subsisting decree and no relief will be granted under this clause if it had been rescinded by the court under section 10(2).

The scheme of the Act, as already pointed out, is to discourage divorce, but without enforcing conditions which may cause great hardship or drive parties to act in collusion with one another. In fixing the period of two years the Legislature seems to have taken the view that there should be scope for the maximum opportunities of mutual adjustment after a decree for judicial separation. At the same time the view seems to have been taken that in case where the parties have not resumed cohabitation for a period of two years or more after any such decree, the marriage must be regarded as having proved a complete failure or having broken down and not only the party, husband or wife, who obtained the decree but either party should have the right to ask for dissolution of marriage. The court will in case of such an application grant dissolution of marriage in the absence of any bar laid down in section 23 disentitling the petitioner from seeking this relief.

The effect of this substituted clause would seem to be that where the period of two years or more has expired after the passing of the decree for judicial separation it would be irrelevant and unnecessary to examine whether one or the other spouse has been responsible for not resuming cohabitation

---

(p) For instance, see Rule 8(vii)(b) of the Rules of the Patna High Court. Reference may be made to Rule 4(1)(f) of the Matrimonial Causes Rules, 1950. Also see Parkinson v. Parkinson (1939) 3 All E.R. 108, (1939) P 346.

after the passing of the decree. The mere fact that the spouse who obtained the decree or the spouse against whom the decree had gone had not expressed desire or willingness to resume cohabitation or even had been opposed to and declined offer of resumption of cohabitation would not be a ground for refusing relief to him or her now under this clause, for granting relief even to such spouse would inter alia seem to be the purpose of this change in the law.

The clause, however, does not confer an absolute unrestricted right on a party to obtain a decree for divorce. As laid down in section 23 the court has to be satisfied that the ground for relief exists and it has also to be satisfied that to the granting of such relief there is no bar of any kind mentioned there. Thus for instance the court will decline to grant a decree for divorce in any such case if it is satisfied that the petitioner is taking advantage of his or her own wrong when seeking such relief. The conduct of the petitioner spouse may be of such grave and weighty character as would disentitle the petitioner spouse to any relief under this clause. As a general rule the conduct which would disentitle the petitioner spouse to such relief would have to be subsequent to the passing of the decree for judicial separation though there may be exceptional cases where even conduct prior to that may become relevant. This question of taking advantage of one's own wrong would ordinarily arise in case of a spouse against whom decree for separation had gone though it is conceivable that the bar may apply in the facts and circumstances of a particular case to the spouse who had obtained the decree for judicial separation. The reason underlying the rule being that relief should be granted to either spouse under this clause where the marriage can be regarded as having completely failed or broken down, the conduct which may disentitle a party from seeking relief must be such as can only be regarded as a grave and weighty matter. See Notes under Sub-section (1A) (ii). Reference may be made to section 23 and Notes under it.

There is nothing irrevocable in a decree for judicial separation and it always leaves time and opportunity to the parties for reconsideration. So if the parties have resumed cohabitation after a decree of judicial separation it would not be open to the party who had obtained that decree to claim relief under the present clause. Cohabitation means living together as husband and wife. It consists in the husband acting as a husband towards the wife and the wife acting as a wife towards the husband, the wife rendering housewifely duties to the husband and the husband supporting his wife as a husband should. Cohabitation does not necessarily depend on whether there is sexual intercourse between husband and wife. If there is sexual intercourse, it is very strong evidence—it may be conclusive evidence—that they are cohabiting, but it does not follow that because they do not have sexual intercourse they are not cohabiting (q). Cohabitation implies something different from mere residence. It must mean that the husband and wife have begun acting as such and have resumed their status and position as husband and wife.

---

(q) Thomas v. Thomas (1948) 2 All E.R. 98, 99, (1948) 2 K.B. 294. Also see Evans v. Evans (1947) 2 All E.R. 656, (1948) 1 K.B. 175.

"Two years or upwards after the . . . decree".—The period of two years mentioned in the clause would commence from the date of the passing of the decree by the court of first instance and the same would be the date of commencement of the period when there is an appeal and the decree is confirmed. Where, however, the court of first instance has dismissed the petition and in appeal a decree for judicial separation has been passed the period of two years would commence from the date of the decree of the Appellate Court. The Appellate Court has in such a case no power to ante-date its decree (r).

Consent Decree.—See Notes under Section 23 post.

In the undermentioned case (rr) in a petition for divorce the parties obtained a consent decree for judicial separation and subsequently an application for divorce was made under the present clause. The application was dismissed by the High Court on the ground that the decree for judicial separation must be regarded as without jurisdiction since it had been passed without proving any of the grounds mentioned in section 10 and was in violation of the mandatory requirements of section 23(1). In any view of the question about jurisdiction the conclusion reached could be supported on the ground of collusion or fraud in obtaining the decree for judicial separation.

Sub-Section (1A)(ii): Where there has been no restitution of conjugal rights.—The newly added Clause (ii) of Sub-section (1A) makes a distinct departure from the original Clause (ix) of Sub-section (1). Under the original provision relief by way of divorce on the ground therein mentioned could be obtained only by a petitioner, husband or wife, who had obtained a decree for restitution of conjugal rights. The present clause permits either party to that petition in which a decree for restitution of conjugal rights had been passed to apply to the court for a decree for divorce by showing that there has been no restitution of conjugal rights as between the parties to the marriage for a period of two years or upwards after the passing of the decree.

The scheme of the Act, as already pointed out, is to discourage divorce, but without enforcing conditions which may cause great hardship or drive parties to act in collusion with one another. In fixing the period of two years the Legislature seems to have taken the view that in a case where even after the decree there has been no restitution of conjugal rights, not only the party, husband or wife, who obtained the decree but either party should have the right to ask for dissolution of marriage. The court will in case of such an application grant dissolution of marriage in the absence of any bar laid down in section 23 disentitling the petitioner from seeking this relief. Thus for instance the court will not grant a decree for divorce in any such case if it is satisfied that the petitioner before it is taking advantage of his or her own wrong when seeking such relief.

The effect of this clause would seem to be that where a period of two years or more has expired after passing of the decree for restitution of conjugal rights and there has been no restitution of conjugal rights it would be unnecessary for the court to examine whether the one or the other spouse has been responsible for non-compliance with the decree for restitution. The mere fact that the husband or wife against whom the decree had been passed was responsible for non-compliance of the decree would not per se be a

---

(r) Kirpalani v. Kirpalani (1960) A. Bom. 447. Reference may be made to Chander Prakash v. Sudesh Kumari ('71) A. Delhi 208 where the court applied the maxim actus curiae neminem gravabit and granted a decree for divorce under this clause.

(rr) Hirakali v. Awasthi ('71) A.A. 201.

ground for refusing relief to him or her under this added clause, for granting relief to such defaulting spouse would inter alia seem to be the very purpose of this change in the law.

The clause, however, does not confer an absolute or unrestricted right on a party to obtain a decree for divorce in any such case. The conduct of the petitioner spouse may be of such grave and weighty character as would disentitle the petitioner spouse to any relief under this clause. As a general rule the conduct which would disentitle the petitioner spouse to such relief would be subsequent to the decree of restitution though there can be exceptional cases where even conduct prior to that may become relevant. This question of taking advantage of one's own wrong would ordinarily arise in case of a spouse against whom the decree for restitution had gone though it is conceivable that the bar may apply in the facts and circumstances of a particular case to the spouse who had obtained the decree for restitution. Whether the conduct of the petitioner spouse in a case falling under this clause would bring the case within the mischief of section 23(1)(a) must depend on the facts and circumstances of each particular case and it is not possible to expect any general or exhaustive statement of what may or may not constitute "wrong" within the ambit of the rule there laid down. But it is submitted that in any case the conduct must be grave and weighty. There is, however, some conflict of judicial opinion on this subject. In Chamanlal v. Mohinder Devi (r1) the view has been taken that a spouse against whom the decree for restitution had gone and who has failed to comply with the decree cannot be permitted to seek relief under this clause, for such spouse should be regarded as taking advantage of his or her own wrong for the purpose of such relief. In Syal v. Syal (r2) the court found that throughout the proceedings against the wife the husband had been taking advantage of his own wrong to get the marriage dissolved and the wife had been driven out of the house by him and there was no impropriety or illegality on her part. The husband was held not entitled to relief under this clause. In Laxmibai v. Laxmichand (r3) it was held that deliberate non-compliance of the decree for restitution by the husband against whom the decree had gone was defiance of that mandate of the court and the husband was not permitted any relief under this clause. In Ram Kali v. Gopal Das (r4) a full bench of the Delhi High Court has expressed the view that non-compliance by the husband of a decree of restitution would not constitute a wrong within the meaning of section 23(1)(a) and that the husband could seek relief under this clause. The court accepted the principle of the breakdown of the marriage and also expressed the view that section 23(1)(a) should be so construed that it operates in harmony with the present clause. The preferable view, it is submitted would be that non-compliance with the decree of restitution whether deliberate or otherwise would not per se be a ground for refusing relief under this clause. The reason of the rule would seem to be that in a case falling under this clause also, as in a case falling under clause (i) of sub-section (1A), the marriage must be regarded as having proved a

---

(r1) ('68) A. Punj. & H. 287.
(r2) ('68) A. Punj. & H. 489; Someswara v. Leelawathi ('68) A. Mys. 274.
(r3) ('68) A.B. 332.
(r4) I.L.R. (1971) 1 Delhi 6 (F.B.). Reference may be made to an Article by Mr. Justice Deshpande in A.I.R. (1971) Journal p. 113.

complete failure or as having broken down. This clause can be read harmoniously with section 23 (1) (a). The 'wrong' contemplated in the latter provision must be something much more than deliberate non-compliance with the decree. The conduct of the petitioner spouse must be of such grave and weighty character, as in the opinion of the court, should disentitle such spouse from getting the relief.

"Two years or upwards after the . . . decree".—See Notes under the same heading above.

Consent Decree.—See Notes under Section 23 post.

Sub-section (2): Husband having more than one wife alive: Marriages solemnized before commencement of the Act.—Sub-section (1) provides for a decree of divorce dissolving a marriage, solemnized whether before or after the commencement of the Act, at the instance of either party, on the various grounds specified in it. In addition to those grounds a wife can seek dissolution of her marriage on the ground that the husband has at the time of the presentation of the petition another wife who is alive. This ground can obviously exist only in case of any marriage solemnized before the Act came into operation. With the coming into operation of the Act monogamy has become the rule and a bigamous marriage, if contracted after the coming into force of the Act, would be null and void as laid down in s. 11 read with s. 5 (i) and no question can arise of dissolution of a marriage which was void ab initio. A somewhat anomalous position was, however, bound to remain in case of more than one marriage contracted by the husband prior to the coming into force of the Act. Such marriages could validly take place under the former system of law which recognised polygamy and therefore the Legislature has enacted in this sub-section that in case of any such marriage the wife should have the right to seek dissolution of her marriage. A petition for dissolution of the marriage by divorce can be maintained by a wife in caso of any marriage solemnized before the commencement of the Act on the ground of the husband having another wife irrespective of the fact that the other marriage had taken place after or before the marriage of the petitioner with him, provided the other wife is alive at the time of the presentation of the petition. As a general rule in any such case the conduct or disability on the part of the petitioner wife cannot be relied on by the husband (*r*1) (supra) unless, of course, he can establish that she is taking advantage of her own wrong or disability for the purpose of such relief (*r*2) (supra). The mere fact that after the filing of the petition the husband has divorced the other wife is no ground for dismissing any such petition (*r*3). The Bombay Hindu Divorce Act (XXII of 1947) which is now repealed contained a provision which, though not in pari materia with the present sub-section, enabled a first wife to sue for divorce on the ground that her husband had married again before the coming into operation of that enactment. In a case decided under that enactment (s) the first wife had continued to live with the husband for ten years after a second marriage and had children born of him after the second marriage. Her petition for divorce on the ground of the second marriage was resisted by the husband on the ground of condonation (*s*1) and it was also contended that on the facts of the case it would be inequitable to grant a decree for divorce to her. Both the pleas were rejected. Under the present sub-section it would be competent to the court and even necessary and incumbent on it to consider (*s*2) whether there was any unnecessary or improper delay in instituting the proceeding as laid down in section 23 (1) (d).

---

(*r*3) Naganna v. Lachmi Bai ('63) A.A.P. 82. Reference may also be made to Thenku Veeriah v. Tamisetti Nagiah ('59) A.A.P. 547 (F.B.)

(s) Chandrabhagabai v. Rajaram (1955) 57 Bom. L.R. 946.

Bigamous marriage.—Where the husband has gone through ceremony of a second marriage after the commencement of this Act the case would not fall under this clause but such a marriage would be a nullity and the first wife can get dissolution of marriage under sub-section (1) (i) of this section (*s*3).

Sub-sec. (2) (ii).—In addition to the grounds mentioned in sub-section (1) and clause (i) of sub-section (2) a wife can seek divorce on the ground that the husband has, since the solemnization of the marriage, been guilty of rape, sodomy or bestiality. It is not necessary that the husband should have been convicted of any of these offences in any criminal proceedings. Attempt to commit any of these offences is not, however, a ground for divorce.

A wife can sue for divorce if the husband has, since the solemnization of the marriage, been guilty of any of the unnatural offences mentioned in this clause. The offences are committed by having carnal intercourse against the order of nature with any man, woman or animal. Cotius per os is a criminal offence punishable under section 377 of the Penal Code, but, as already pointed out above, it is not necessary that the husband should have been convicted of any of the offences mentioned in this clause. The Penal Code makes it an offence on the part of persons of either sex who commit an unnatural offence but under the present clause the matrimonial offences under this head are confined only to the case of the husband (t).

As to standard of proof see Notes under section 23 and the undermentioned case (u).

Remarriage after decree for dissolution of marriage.—See Notes under Section 15 post.

14. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, it shall not be competent for any court to entertain any petition for dissolution of a marriage by a decree of divorce, unless at the date of the presentation of the petition three years have elapsed since the date of the marriage:

No petition for divorce to be presented within three years of marriage.

Provided that the court may, upon application made to it in accordance with such rules as may be made by the High Court in

---

(*s*1) Reference may be made to Deepo v. Kehar Singh ('62) A. Puni. 183.

(*s*2) Also see Nirmoo v. Nikka Ram ('68) A. Delhi 260 [delay of eleven years after the Act came into force explained]. And see Lalithamma v. Kannan ('66) A. Mys. 178 [delay held not culpable or improper].

(*s*3) Gitabai v. Fattoo ('66) A.M.P. 130.

(t) Reference may be made to Gardner v. Gardner cited in f.n. (j) at 723, supra.

(u) Lawson v. Lawson (1955) 1 All E.R. 341. Also see Statham v. Statham (1929) P. 131; Revanna v. Suseelamma ('67) A. Mys. 165.

that behalf, allow a petition to be presented before three years have elapsed since the date of the marriage on the ground that the case is one of exceptional hardship to the petitioner or of exceptional depravity on the part of the respondent, but, if it appears to the court at the hearing of the petition that the petitioner obtained leave to present the petition by any misrepresenation or concealment of the nature of the case, the court may, if it pronounces a decree, do so subject to the condition that the decree shall not have effect until after the expiry of three years from the date of the marriage or may dismiss the petition without prejudice to any petition which may be brought after the expiration of the said three years upon the same or substantially the same facts as those alleged in support of the petition so dismissed.

(2) In disposing of any application under this section for leave to present a petition for divorce before the expiration of three years from the date of the marriage, the court shall have regard to the interests of any children of the marriage and to the question whether there is a reasonable probability of a reconciliation between the parties before the expiration of the said three years.

No petition for divorce within three years of marriage.—The rules laid down in this section are intended to give a fair trial to every marriage. The salutary principle underlying this section found legislative sanction in s. 2 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, and was adopted in section 2 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954. The language of the sections in all these enactments is pari materia. The general rule enacted in sub-section (1) of this section is that no petition for a decree of divorce under any of the grounds mentioned in section 13 can be entertained by the court till the period of three years laid down by this section has elapsed. Both the proviso and sub-section (2) deal with matters of considerable importance. Apart from exceptional cases falling under the proviso the court would have no jurisdiction to entertain any such petition before the statutory period has expired. In the undermentioned case (*u*1) a petition was presented within three years of the date of the marriage without pleading the ground of exceptional hardship. Amendment of the petition was allowed after that period had expired to bring the case within the proviso on the ground of substantial justice.

Proviso to sub-section (1).—The proviso is intended to modify the effect of the three years' limit in very exceptional cases. It enables the court in such cases to entertain a petition for a decree of divorce before the statutory period of three years has expired. The procedure relating to the application for special leave to present such petition is to be regulated by the rules as may be made by the High Court in that behalf. Rules have been framed by various High Courts relating to the application for special leave under the section and service for order granting leave ex-parte and the procedure to be followed thereafter if the respondent desires to contest the petition for divorce on the ground that leave for filing the petition has been erroneously granted or improperly obtained. Reference may be made to Notes under "Contested application for leave" post.

---

(*u*1) Sawita Devi v. Pran Nath ('67) A.J. & K. 89.

The proviso also lays down in effect that if it appears to the court at the hearing of the petition, where leave had been granted and not revoked, that leave had been obtained by misreprsentation or concealment of the true nature of the case and the court is satisfied that the ground for relief exists, the court may although it passes a decree for divorce suspend the operation of the decree by adding a condition that it shall not operate until after the expiry of three years from the date of the marriage (u2). It is not, however, incumbent on the court to pass a decree suspending its operation and the court may in its discretion dismiss altogether the petition for divorce. In the latter case a petition may be brought on the same grounds after the expiration of the period laid down in the section.

"Exceptional hardship" or "Exceptional depravity."—The proviso engrafts a very important qualification on the general rule laid down in the section that no petition for dissolution of marriage by a decree of divorce can be entertained by the court before the statutory period. It enables the court in the exercise of its discretion to grant leave to present such petition before the expiry of the three years' limit in a case of exceptional hardship to the petitioner or exceptional depravity of the respondent. The proviso does not define the terms "exceptional hardship" or "exceptional depravity" presumably because to do so would require modifications, qualifications and exceptions in addition to all the implications of these terms and to bring out all the implications is just what a definition ought not to aim at. The meaning of the expressions 'hardship' and 'depravity' must depend on the effect of the word 'exceptional.' This involves an inquiry into the degree of depravity alleged or the degree of hardship said to be suffered and much would depend on the merits of each particular case. These expressions occurring in identical context in the English statute came up of for consideration in Bowman v. Bowman (v) and the broad general principle there enunciated and stated below will be found of some guidance and assistance. The cases in which mostly the question arises are those of adultery or of cruelty. If there is nothing more than adultery with one person within the first three years of marriage that may be considered ordinary depravity. It may not involve exceptional hardship on the innocent spouse. If, however, the adultery is coupled with other matrimonial offences, e.g., if a husband not only commits adultery, but also deserts his wife in favour of another woman, or if he is cruel to her, thus causing her not only distress by his adultery but also injury by his violence, then, even if his offence cannot be stigmatised a exceptional depravity on his part, nevertheless, it does involve exceptional hardship suffered by the wife. Even when the adultery is not coupled with desertion or cruelty, it may be committed in such aggravating circumstances as to show exceptional depravity, and, even if the adultery is not coupled with another matrimonial offence, nevertheless, its consequences may involve exceptional hardship to the applicant as, for instance, when a wife as a result of her adultery has a child by another man so that the husband, if he took her back, would have to maintain another man's child. The husband who commits adultery within a few weeks of marriage, or who commits adultery promiscuously with more than one woman, or with his wife's sister, or with a servant in the house, may probably be labelled as exceptionally depraved. Cruelty again, by itself, is not exceptional, but, if it is coupled with aggravating circumstances, as, for instance, drunkenness and neglect, or if it is exceptionally brutal or dangerous to health, then, even if it does not evidence exceptional depravity on the part of the respondent, it does, at least, cause exceptional hardship to the applicant. If it is coupled with perverted lust, it shows exceptional depravity on the part of the proposed respondent. One really important consideration in all these cases is to see whether there is any chance of reconciliation. On this point it is most material to inquire what the applicant has already done to try to make the marriage a success or to become reconciled. If the court is not satisfied that all which is reasonable has been done in this respect, it may well dismiss the application.

---

(u2) Reference may be made to Stroud v. Stroud (1963) 3 All E.R. 539.

(v) (1949) 2 All E.R. 127 (C.A.), (1949) P. 353. Also see Meganatha v. Susheela ('57) A.M. 423. There are some general observations of courts in England in the following cases which may be useful if cautiously applied: C v. C (1967) 1 All E.R. 928; W v. W (1966) 2 All E.R. 889; Hillier v. Hillier and Latham (1958) 2 All E.R. 261, 263, 264; Brewer v. Brewer (1964) 1 All E.R. 539, 541, 542. V. v. V. (1966) 3 All E.R. 493 (C.A.) adultery and cruelty of exceptionally grave nature.

In the undermentioned case (*v*1) the view was expressed that relief could be granted under the rule laid down in the proviso in a case where dissolution of marriage was sought under section 13(1)(iv) if the facts and circumstances of the case establish exceptional hardship to the petitioner.

Contested application for leave.—The applications under the proviso are not meant to be preliminary trials but intended to be dealt with without any elaborate inquiry. The leave contemplated should not, however, be granted without giving an opportunity of a reply to the respondent. The rules, passed by the various High Courts provide for opposition to the application for leave and the procedure to be followed when the application for leave is contested. In exercising its discretion to grant leave under the Proviso the court would take into consideration not only the averments in the petition or in the affidavit made by the petitioner in support of the same but also that of the respondent (w). If the affidavit in answer is destructive of the petitioner's case the court can dismiss the application. Even if it is not destructive of the petitioner's case, but only throws doubt on it, the court is entitled to have regard to that doubt in coming to a decision whether or not to grant or revoke the leave.

Discretion of the Court.—Whether leave should be granted or not under this section and when granted ex parte should be revoked or not are matters of discretion with the court. In exercising discretion in respect of all matters covered by the section the court is bound to have fullest regard to:

(i) the interest of any child of the marriage, and

(ii) the reasonable probability of a reconciliation between the parties.

---

(*v*1) Padma Rao v. Swarajya Lakshmi ('70) A.A.P. 300 (virulent and incurable leprosy).

(w) Simpson v. Simpson (1954) 2 All E.R. 546.

In all applications of this kind the possibility of reconciliation is a most important aspect of the case; and where there is any child of the marriage the interest of the child should be a very weighty matter for consideration.

The Appellate Court will not interfere with the discretion exercised by the District Court unless that court has proceeded on a wrong principle of law or failed to have regard to a material consideration or some gross injustice has occurred (x).

Remarriage after decree for dissolution of marriage.—See Notes under the next section.

Divorced persons when may marry again.

15. When a marriage has been dissolved by a decree of divorce and either there is no right of appeal against the decree, or if there is such a right of appeal, the time for appealing has expired without an appeal having been presented, or an appeal has been presented but has been dismissed, it shall be lawful for either party to the marriage to marry again:

Provided that it shall not be lawful for the respective parties to marry again unless at the date of such marriage at least one year has elapsed from the date of the decree in the court of the first instance.

When divorced persons may marry again.—Section 13 of the Act which provides for a decree of divorce on stated grounds in case of any marriage solemnized whether before or after the commencement of Act has to be read with the present section when dealing with the question of the right of the parties to remarry any person after dissolution of the marriage. Both under English law as well as the law laid down in this enactment monogamy is the rule and a party can only contract a valid second marriage by showing that the incapacity arising from the previous marriage has been effectually removed. A decree of divorce does not wholly remove that incapacity until the lapse of a specified time after the decree. The rule laid down in this section is an integral part of the proceedings by which alone both the parties to the decree of divorce can be released from their incapacity to contract a fresh marriage (y). The rule is founded on the principle that it is contrary to public policy and good morals that persons whose marriage is dissolved should be permitted to remarry some other person with indecent haste and aims at ensuring that divorce is sought as an extreme remedy and not for the sheer purpose of marrying some other person.

The rule laid down in the section operates in cases where a decree of divorce is granted under the provisions of the Act. The decree may be one under section 13 or under that section read with section 14 which empowers the court in cases of exceptional hardship or exceptional depravity on the part of the respondent to grant a decree in case of a petition presented within three years of marriage.

---

(x) Meganatha v. Susheela ('57) A.M. 423; Charlesby v. Charlesby (1947) 176 L.T. 532.

(y) See observations in Warter v. Warter (1890) 15 P.D. 152 and per Sunderson C.J. in Turner v. Turner (1921) 48 Cal. 636, 639, 640.

The right to remarry any person after a conclusive decree of divorce can be availed of by either of the spouses whose marriage is dissolved. It is also open to the parties to again intermarry but the remarriage between them must be after the lapse of one year of the date of the decree.

Period of one year.—The proviso lays down that it is only after the lapse of one year of the decree of the court of first instance and not sooner that the respective parties whose marriage is dissolved can marry again. A decree granting divorce or dismissing the petition for divorce is appealable (z). A decree of divorce may be granted by the court of first instance, or it may be granted in appeal where the trial court has refused to grant it, or the decree granted by the trial court may be confirmed in appeal or there may be no appeal at all against the decree of the trial court. In all these cases the period of one year is to be computed from the date of the decree of the court of first instance. A decree of divorce, as a general rule, operates from the moment it is pronounced. Subject to the limitation relating to remarriage by either spouse as laid down in this section, the effect of a decree of divorce is to dissolve the marriage for all intents and purposes from the date of its pronouncement. The provisions of this section do not have the effect of rendering the decree conditional. The Act does not provide for passing of a decree nisi and decree absolute as for instance is done under the Indian Divorce Act.

In case of a decree pronounced under section 14 the court has the discretion to impose the condition that the decree shall not operate until after the expiry of three years from the date of marriage. Obviously the right to remarry can arise in case of such conditional decree only when it becomes effective after three years. If no such condition is imposed by the court the period of one year will, as in other cases, be computed from the date of the decree of the court of first instance.

Remarriage before lapse of the period.—A remarriage solemnized by either party in defiance of the rule laid down in this section prohibiting the same for a period of one year from the date of the decree of the court of first instance is null and void. A marriage performed within one year from such decree would be null and void even if such subsequent marriage is not under this Act but the Special Marriage Act (*z*1). The rule that no marriage can be solemnized by the parties in such a case within one year of the decree is stringent and the court is bound to enforce it although in some cases it may seem very hard and inequitable to do so (a). As to legitimacy of children born of such void marriage see Notes under Section 16 below.

Remarriage before disposal of appeal against decree for dissolution of marriage.—This section must be read with section 28 of the Act which inter alia provides for an appeal against a decree for dissolution of marriage. The

---

(z) See S. 28 post.

(*z*1) Uma Charan v. Kajal ('71) A.C. 307.

(a) Turner v. Turner (1921) 48 Cal. 636 (Decree of nullity of such marriage granted after 18 years); Jackson v. Jackson (1912) 34 All. 203; Battie v. Brown (1915) 38 Mad. 452 (petition for nullity of subsequent marriage after 22 years).

effect of the rule laid down in this section read with the proviso is that the conditions stated in both the section as well as the proviso to the section must be fulfilled before a lawful marriage can take place after a decree for dissolution. It follows that if a decree for dissolution is set aside in appeal and a party remarries before disposal of the appeal such marriage would be a nullity.

The section when it speaks of a case where there is "a right of appeal" does not in terms cover a case of an application for special leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. Even so a party who has succeeded in the High Court and obtained a decree of dissolution cannot by marrying immediately after the High Court's decree take away from the losing party the chance of presenting an application for special leave. If the party does so without making sure of the true position, it takes the risk of the leave being granted and the appeal ultimately succeeding and the decree being set aside (*a*1). The Supreme Court had in this case granted special leave and the appeal ultimately succeeded with the result that the remarriage became a nullity.

Remarriage before disposal of appeal against decree of nullity under Sections 11 and 12.—Sections 11 and 12 of the Act relate to passing of decree of nullity by the Court in case of void and voidable marriages respectively. Section 28 confers the right of appeal to an aggrieved party inter alia against any such decree. The present section relates only to remarriage after a decree for dissolution of marriage and does not cover the case of any decree of nullity of marriage. On principle, however, it would seem that if any such decree of nullity is set aside in appeal and a party remarries before disposal of the appeal such subsequent marriage would be a nullity. This view derives support from observations made by the Supreme Court in the undermentioned case, though in a different context (*a*2). In a rather peculiar case decided by the Madras High Court (*a*3) an exparte decree was passed granting declaration of nullity of marriage. The respondent applied for setting aside the exparte decree and the Court set it aside. In the meantime the petitioner contracted a second marriage relying upon the exparte decree and contended that the order setting aside the exparte decree had become infructuous since she had already married again. That contention was negatived. It is submitted that the view taken was correct on the principle stated above and which underlies the present section. A different view was taken in a decision of the Madhya Pradesh High Court (*a*4) where it was held that in any such case the remarriage would have the effect of rendering the appeal infructuous.. In a recent decision the High Court of Jammu and Kashmir (*a*5) has dissented from the view taken by the Madhya Pradesh High Court.

16. Where a decree of nullity is granted in respect of any marriage under section 11 or section 12, any child begotten or conceived before the decree is made who would have been the legitimate child of the parties to the marriage if it had been dissolved instead of having been declared null and void or annulled by a decree of nullity shall be deemed to be their legitimate child notwithstanding the decree of nullity:

Legitimacy of children of void and voidable marriages.

(*a*1) Chandra Mohini v. Avinash Prasad ('67) A.S.C. 581.
(*a*2) See f.n. (*a*1) above.
(*a*3) Vathsala v. Manoharan ('69) A.M. 405.
(*a*4) Mohanmurari v. Kusumkumari ('65) A.M.P. 194.
(*a*5) Krishen Lal v. Krishna ('71) A.J. & K. 31.

Provided that nothing contained in this section shall be construed as conferring upon any child of a marriage which is declared null and void or annulled by a decree of nullity any rights in or to the property of any person other than the parents in any case where, but for the passing of this Act, such child would have been incapable of possessing or acquiring any such rights by reason of his not being the legitimate child of his parents.

Legitimacy of children of void or voidable marriage.—Under general law a legitimate child is one born in lawful wedlock. It is well settled that except in the cases where special provision to the contrary is made by any enactment, a marriage which is null and void ipso jure or declared to be null and void by the court or annulled by the court on the ground of its voidability, will inevitably have the effect of bastardising any child born of the parties to such marriage. The effect of a decree of nullity in case of a void marriage or annulment of a voidable marriage, as already pointed out (b), is to render the marriage null and void from its inception for all intents and purposes. It has always been extremely unfortunate for a child the putative marriage of whose parents is null and void or annulled by the court on some ground such as is to be found in sections 11 and 12 of the Act. This was to some extent remedied in England by the Matrimonial Act of 1937 and Law Reform (Miscellaneous Measures) Act, 1949. Now section 9 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, in England lays down a provision similar to that in the present section in respect of issue of voidable marriages annulled by the court. The Legitimacy Act, 1926, in England provides for legitimatio per subsequents matrimoniam but the bar sinister has not been removed in case of issue of marriages void ipso jure. The present section deals with legitimacy of children both in case of void and voidable marriages of the parents. The Joint Committee observed that in no case should children—meaning thereby children of persons whose marriage is solemnized but is void or voidable under sections 11 or 12—be regarded as illegitimate and the clause has provided for this and also for the legitimacy of children en ventre sa mere at the time of the proceedings.

The Legislature has adopted in this section the language of section 9 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950. That section deals only with legitimacy of children of voidable marriages and does not refer to children of marriages void ipso jure. So far as the present section refers to legitimacy of children of a voidable marriage in respect of which a decree of annulment may be granted under section 12 the position is clear. If the validity of the marriage is challenged by either party and though challenged the marriage is not annulled it would be a valid marriage and the children of the parties to such a marriage would undoubtedly be legitimate. And even if the marriage is annulled at the instance of either party the children born of such marriage are by operation of this section to be deemed to be their legitimate children for all intents and purposes except that by virtue of the proviso to the section they cannot claim any rights in or over property of any person other than the parents. This is to be the result notwithstanding the decree of annulment of marriage that may be passed by the court. A voidable marriage can only be challenged at the instance of either party to the marriage and cannot be challenged after the death of one of the parties to the same. So if the marriage though voidable was not challenged during the lifetime of a spouse it cannot be challenged thereafter and the issue of such marriage would be legitimate and no question would arise of the applicability of the rule laid down in this section.

---

(b) pp. 732, 733, supra.

The present section also states that as regards children of a marriage which is void under section 11 and declared by the court to be null and void the decree is to be treated as if it were only for dissolution of the marriage by divorce and the children born of such marriage are to be deemed to be the legitimate children of the parents for all intents and purposes subject to the rule laid down in the proviso and this is to be the result notwithstanding the decree of nullity that may be passed by the court. A marriage which though solemnized does not fulfil any of the three conditions mentioned in section 11 is void ipso jure whether any proceeding to declare its nullity is adopted or not. No difficulty can arise where such proceeding is adopted and the marriage is annulled by the court because the children born of such marriage are by operation of this section to be deemed to be the legitimate children of the parents for all intents and purposes except that by virtue of the proviso to the section they cannot claim any rights in or over property of any person other than the parents. This is to be the result notwithstanding the decree of nullity that may be passed by the court. But question may arise whether the rule laid down in the section can apply in case of children of such void marriage when no proceeding had been adopted and there was no decree passed by the court. It would be suggested that the operation of the section is confined only to cases where any proceeding had been taken under the Act and the court had granted a decree of nullity under section 11 and contended that it is open to a third party to challenge the validity of the marriage in other proceedings and the children of such marriage would be illegitimate if the marriage was proved to be void by operation of section 11 on the ground that it was in contravention of any of the conditions laid down in clauses (i), (iv) and (v) of section 5. As already mentioned the language used in English Act in the context of a voidable marriage has been borrowed in this section and the section is made applicable to the case of both a voidable and a void marriage annulled by a decree of the court. The Legislature instead of verbally adopting in the present section the provision of the English enactment which is expressed in language appropriate to the case only of a voidable marriage should have stated the rule differently. The position and status of children of such marriage should obviously be the same in either case and presumably the object of the Legislature was to see that where a marriage was in fact solemnized but was void on any of the three grounds mentioned in section 11, the children of such marriage should not be bastardised whether any such proceeding had or had not been adopted and any decree passed or not. It would, however, seem from the language employed that while children born of such marriage will be deemed to be the legitimate children of the parents if a decree of nullity of marriage had been granted in respect of the marriage under section 11, they will be illegitimate children if no proceeding had been adopted by any of the parents to have the marriage declared void. The same will be the position of children born of a marriage solemnized in defiance of the rule laid down in section 15 which prohibits persons whose marriage is dissolved by a decree of divorce from marrying again until the expiry of a period of one year from the date of the decree. In such a case the marriage would be null and void and the children born of such marriage would be illegitimate children of the parties to the marriage unless proceeding for nullity of the marriage had been adopted by the parents. This is an anomalous and startling position which could hardly have been contemplated. The language of the section borrowed from the English enactment is plain and unambiguous and it would be straining the language beyond permissible limits to say that such cases also are within the ambit of the section. It is submitted that this is a casus omissus which the court cannot reach and no canon of construction permits the court to supply what is clearly a lacuna in the statute and it is for the Legislature to set the matter right by appropriate amendment of the section.

In the undermentioned (*b*1) case the view has been expressed that it is only when a decree of nullity is granted in respect of any marriage under sections 11 or 12 that any child begotten or conceived before the decree is made can be deemed to be legitimate. But where no such decree has been obtained no part of the section can be invoked for the purpose of legitimatising an issue borne of a void marriage.

No opinion was expressed on the question whether in case of such a void marriage an application for nullity could be made by a spouse after the death of the other spouse. But it was observed, it is submitted rightly, that since the decree of nullity amounts to a declaration of status of a person there is no reason why death of the other spouse should put an end to the right of the surviving spouse to seek any such declaration of status.

Void or voidable "under Section 11 or Section 12". The section applies to children of marriages void or voidable under sections 11 and 12. Section 11 applies only in case of a marriage solemnized after the commencement of the Act and, as already pointed out, the question whether a ceremonial marriage between Hindus performed before the Act came into operation is valid or void is governed by the previous law. That section does not apply to children of any such marriage with the result that the question of legitimacy of the children of any such marriage must be determined by the rules of Hindu law governing the parties and not by the express enactment contained in this section. Section 12, however, speaks of any marriage solemnized before or after the commencement of the Act and the present section, therefore, applies to the children of any such marriage if the marriage is annulled by the court on any of the grounds mentioned in section 12.

". . .shall be deemed to be their legitimate child".—It is by a fictio juris that children born of a marriage void or voidable under the Act are to be regarded as the legitimate children of the parents. The effect of this fiction of law is that for all intents and purposes including rights of inheritance and succession the children on the one hand and the parents on the other are to be regarded as if the children had been the legitimate children of the parents.

---

(*b*1) Thulasi Ammal v. Gouri Ammal ('64) A.M. 118.

When a statute enacts that something shall be deemed to exist or some status shall be deemed to have been acquired which would not have been so but for the enactment the court is entitled and bound to ascertain for what purpose and between what parties the statutory fiction is to be resorted to and full effect must be given to the statutory fiction and it should be carried to its logical conclusion. The following statement of the principle by Lord Asquith in a decision of the House of Lords (c) was quoted with approval by the Supreme Court (d): "If you are bidden to treat an imaginary state of affairs as real, you must surely, unless prohibited from doing so, also imagine as real the consequences and incidents which, if the putative state of affairs had in fact existed, must inevitably have flowed from or accompanied. . . . The statute says that you must imagine a certain state of affairs; it does not say that having done so, you must cause or permit your imagination to boggle when it comes to the inevitable corollaries of that state of affairs."

See illustrations below.

Proviso.—The proviso to the section engrafts an exception to the fiction of law whereby the status of legitimate children is conferred upon the issue of a marriage which is null and void and is declared null and void or annulled by a decree of nullity by operation of the provisions of the section. The effect of the rule laid down in the proviso is that such children cannot by relying on the status conferred on them by this section claim any right in or to the property of any person other than their parents. The proviso might have been more explicitly worded. It does not say that conversely persons other than the parents cannot by operation of the fiction created by the section claim any right in or to the property of the children who are to be deemed to be the legitimate children of their parents and leaves it to be understood as a necessary inference. The proviso read as a whole would seem to indicate the converse rule that no persons other than the parents can claim any right in or to the property of such children by operation of the rule laid down in the section.

Illustrations

(1) A was married to B before the Act came into operation. The marriage was performed in accordance with the requisite ceremonies but was invalid as the parties were related to each other within the prohibited degrees. C a son born of the marriage is not the legitimate son of A and B and is not entitled to claim any right or interest in the property left by A or B by operation of the rule laid down in this section. The rights of C quod the property of A or B will be governed by the rules of Hindu law relating to illegitimate children. In case of death of A or B after the coming into operation of the Hindu Succession Act, the rights of C in matters of succession to the property of such parent will be governed by the rules laid down in that enactment.

(2) A was married to B before the Act came into operation. The marriage was performed in accordance with the requisite ceremonies. C a son was born of the marriage. B thereafter obtains a decree of annulment of the marriage (section 12) on the ground that her consent to the marriage was obtained by fraud practised upon her by A. The decree of annulment will operate as from the date of the marriage but C will be deemed to be the legitimate child of A and B. There will be mutual rights of inheritance and succession between C and his father A and C and his mother B.

The same will be the position if the marriage of A and B in the above case had been solemnized after the Act came into operation.

---

Nandurang (1953) S.C.R.

(3) A was married to B after the Act came into operation and the marriage was solemnized in accordance with customary rights and ceremonies. C a son was born of the marriage. The marriage was void as A had another wife living at the time of the marriage and the marriage was declared null and void in a petition presented to the court. Notwithstanding the decree of nullity C will be deemed to be the legitimate child of A and B and entitled to succeed to the property of A as an heir under section 8 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, read with class I of the Schedule to that enactment. C will also be entitled to succeed to the property of B under section 15 of the enactment. Conversely B will be entitled to succeed to the property of C as mother under section 8 of that enactment read with class I of the Schedule to the same and failing any heir of C falling under Class I of that Schedule, A will become entitled to succeed to the property of C as father who is one of the heirs specified in class II of the Schedule to that enactment. The position of children in the above case will be the same for instance if proceeding had been adopted in court for a declaration of nullity of the marriage of the parents and decree granted on the ground that the marriage was void as being in contravention of the rule relating to the bar of sapinda relationship.

(4) In none of the cases illustrated above C can claim to inherit the property of any person other than A or B solely by operation of the status of legitimacy conferred on him by this section; and conversely, it is submitted, no person other than A or B can claim to succeed to the property of C solely relying on the rule relating to legitimacy enacted in this section. In certain cases reliance may be placed on the provisions of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, under which illegitimate children are deemed to be related to one another [Proviso to section 3(1)(j)].

17. Any marriage between two Hindus solemnized after the commencement of this Act is void if at the date of such marriage either party had a husband or wife living; and the provisions of sections 494 and 495 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860) shall apply accordingly.

Punishment of bigamy.

Sections 11 and 17 do not offend Article 15(1) of the Constitution (*d*1).

Clause (1) of section 5 introduces monogamy in the law applicable to Hindus by enacting as an essential condition of marriage that neither party must have a spouse living at the time of marriage. A marriage in contravention of that condition is a nullity. A prior subsisting marriage is a civil disability which renders marriage with any person whose prior marriage is subsisting void ab initio with the result that the parties to such marriage are not husband and wife. Section 11 lays down inter alia the rule that any such marriage solemnized after the commencement of this Act is void. This section also in terms lays down that such marriage is void. This section reproduces that rule and also declares that the provisions of sections 494 and 495 which impose punishment for the offence of bigamy are applicable in case of any such marriage.

"Solemnized": Proof of Solemnization.—It now clearly emerges from decisions of the Supreme Court that prima facie the expression "whoever—marries" in section 494 of the Penal Code must mean "whoever marries validly" and "whose marriage is a valid one". If the marriage is not a valid one according to the law applicable to the parties, no question of its being void by reason of its taking place during the lifetime of the husband or wife of the person marrying arises. If the marriage is not a valid marriage, it is no marriage in the eye of the law. One of the conditions of a valid marriage under the Act requires that it must be "solemnized". The word 'solemnize', in this connection means to celebrate the marriage with proper ceremonies and in due form. Unless the marriage is celebrated or performed with proper ceremonies and in due form it cannot be said to be solemnized. It is therefore essential for the purpose of this section that the marriage, to which section 494 of the Penal Code applies on account of this section, should have been celebrated with proper ceremonies and in due form. Merely going through certain ceremonies with the intention that the parties be taken to be married, will not make them ceremonies prescribed by law or approved by any established custom. It has accordingly been held by the Supreme Court in the undermentiond cases that the alleged bigamous marriages were not proved to have been 'solemnized' and orders of conviction for the offence of bigamy were set aside (*d*2). The view was also taken that admission of marriage by the accused is not evidence of it for the purpose of proving marriage in an adultery or bigamy case (*d*3). The legal position summarised above was reaffirmed by the Supreme Court in a recent decision (*d*4). It has also got to be shown that the first marriage was a valid marriage duly solemnized.

---

(*d*1) Sambireddy v. Jayamma ('72) A.A.P. 156 (F.B.).

Injunction.—There is no provision of the Act under which a wife apprehending a second marriage by her husband can ask for an injunction restraining the husband from committing bigamy. Such marriage would be void. The present section applies only when bigamy is committed (*d*5).

Reference may be made to the Notes under section 11.

Venue of trial.—The jurisdiction to deal with an offence under this section read with section 494 of the Penal Code will be governed by section 177 of the Criminal Procedure Code and not section 19 of this Act (*d*6).

Punishment for contravention of certain other conditions for a Hindu marriage.

18. Every person who procures a marriage of himself or herself to be solemnized under this Act in contravention of the conditions specified in clauses (iii), (iv), (v) and (vi) of section 5 shall be punishable—

(a) in the case of a contravention of the condition specified in clause (iii) of section 5, with simple imprisonment which may extend to fifteen days, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both;

(b) in the case of a contravention of the condition specified in clause (iv) or clause (v) of section 5, with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both; and

---

(*d*2) Bhaurao v. State of Maharashtra ('65) A.S.C. 1564; Kanwal Ram v. Himachal Pradesh Administration ('66) A.S.C. 616.

(*d*3) Kanwal Ram supra.

(*d*4) Priya Bala v. Suresh Chandra ('71) A.S.C. 1153. Also see Rabindra Nath Dutt v. State ('69) A.C. 55; Bolaram v. Suryaja ('69) A. Assam 90; Ram Singh v. Sushila Bai ('70) A. Mys. 201; Rabindra Kumar v. Prativa ('70) A. Tripura 30; Phankari v. State ('65) A.J. & K. 105; Subbarayudu v. Venkatiah ('68) A.A.P. 107. Also see In re Raghava Reddy ('68) A.A.P. 117 (Custom of Reddi Community in Telangana).

(*d*5) Umashankar v. Radha Devi ('65) A.P. 220.

(*d*6) Krishnaswami v. Krishnaswami ('67) A.M. 241.

(c) in the case of a contravention of the condition specified in clause (vi) of section 5, with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

No commentary is called for on this beyond the Note of the Joint Committee: "It is desirable to provide for the punishment of persons contravening the other important conditions for a Hindu marriage specified in clause 5 (S. 5). Clause 17 (S. 17) has already made provision for the punishment of bigamous marriages and this clause seeks to punish persons who contravene the conditions specified in sub-clauses (iii), (iv), (v) and (vi) of clause 5 (S. 5). In framing the punishment the Joint Committee have had in mind the gravity of the offence in each case and the punishments prescribed for certain similar offences in the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929." The words in the initial part of the section are explicit and make it abundantly clear that punishment is prescribed under it only on the parties whose marriage is solemnized in contravention of the specified conditions. The section may be read with the provisions of the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929.

JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE

Court to which petition should be made.

19. Every petition under this Act shall be presented to the district court within the local limits of whose ordinary original civil jurisdiction the marriage was solemnized or the husband and wife reside or last resided together.

"Petition".—Where a "suit" instead of a "petition" as required by this section is filed in a court having jurisdiction under this Act to entertain the same the judgment and decree passed by such court would not be without jurisdiction (d7).

Jurisdiction.—This section lays down certain rules relating to jurisdiction. It is only the 'district court' as defined in section 3(b) that has jurisdiction to entertain and try matters arising under the Act (e). [See "District Court" infra]. The section regulates the venue and lays down that any petition under the Act, for instance for judicial separation or divorce, shall be presented to the district court within the local limits of whose ordinary original civil jurisdiction—

(i) the marriage of the parties was solemnized; or

(ii) the husband and wife reside at the time of the presentation of the petition; or

(iii) the husband and wife last resided together.

Three possible territorial limits are contemplated by the section for the purpose of jurisdiction. One is the territorial jurisdiction of a district court

---

(d7) Krishneshwari v. Ramesh Chandra ('65) A.A. 228. Also see Umashankar v. Radha ('67) A.P. 220.

(e) This section has no application to the trial of any offence created by the Act which must be tried by the courts empowered to try criminal cases: Gowri Thimma Reddy v. The State of Andhra Pradesh. Nor has the section application to a suit for divorce based on customary law saved by operation of S. 29(2).

within which the marriage was solemnized referring thereby to the place where the rites and ceremonies of the marriage were performed. No question of residence of the parties arises when a petition under the Act is presented to such court. The other two relate to the place of residence of the parties within the territorial limits of a "district court." The expression "the husband and wife reside or last resided together" is used in section 3(3) of the Indian Divorce Act, 1869. The word "together," in the expression "the husband and wife reside or last resided together", it was held, under that Act, governs only the words "last resided" and not the word "reside." The district court has, therefore, jurisdiction to hear any petition under the Act where the parties last resided together outside its jurisdiction but at the date of the petition are residing within its jurisdiction but separately from each other (f). The parties might have after their marriage resided together in more places than one in India. In such a case the question where they last resided together would be material for the purpose of jurisdiction because it is their residence in the last of such places that gives jurisdiction to the court and not their residing together in any other place or places prior to that. The place where the husband and wife last resided together contemplated by the section is a place within the jurisdiction of any district court in India and therefcre if the husband and wife after residing together for some time at any place in India go to a foreign country and after residing there begin to live separately the district court within whose jurisdiction they last resided in India would have jurisdiction to entertain a petition under the Act (g). The section gives the petitioning spouse the choice of selecting the forum either as the district in which the marriage was solemnized or the district where the husband and wife last resided together with the further choice that the petition may also be presented to the district court within whose local jurisdiction the parties may be residing at the time of the filing of the petition. This last can of course only be possible if both the parties, though living separately from each other, happen to reside within the jurisdiction of the same district court at the date of the filing of the petition.

". . .reside . . . resided . . ."—The word 'reside' or 'resided' has to be construed according to the supposed intention of the Legislature. The cognate expression "last resided" takes colour from the word "reside" and the same meaning should be given to these words (*g*1). The word reside is capable of being understood in its ordinary sense of having one's home or dwelling permanently, as well as in an extended sense. A mere sojourn which is casual or what is sometimes described as "mere passage residence" or the residence of a traveller passing from one place to another on his travels would not be such residence as is sufficient in law. The residence, however, need not necessarily be permanent. It would be enough if it is bona fide, with an element of continuity about it so that even if temporary it is something more than being merely casual or for a passing purpose. There must be animus manendi. There are decisions under other matrimonial enactments where the identical words "reside" and "last resided" have been used and

---

(f) Borgonha v. Borgonha (1920) 22 Bom. L.R. 361, 44 Bom. 924, Kershaw v. Kershaw ('30) A.L. 916, 918; Leadon v. Leadon ('26) A. Oudh 319; Walsh v. Walsh (1927) 29 Bom. L.R. 308, 311.

(g) Desouza v. Desouza (1935) 37 Bom. L.R. 55.

(*g*1) Jagir Kaur v. Jaswant Singh ('63) A.S.C. 1521, 1524.

there are cases on either side of the line on the question as to when residence which though temporary can be said to amount to residence within the meaning of these words. In the ultimate analysis the decision must largely rest on the facts and circumstances of the particular case. In Jagir Kaur v. Jaswant Singh (*g*2) decided by the Supreme Court, which was a case under section 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the words "resides" and "last resided" came up for consideration. Although the analogy cannot be said to be perfect, the observations made there are sure to be very useful in cases arising under the present section: "a person resides in a place if he through choice makes it his abode permanently or even temporarily; whether a person has chosen a particular place his abode depends upon the facts of each case."

The residence must be bona fide and not casual or as a traveller (i) or taken up merely for the purpose of presenting a petition to any particular court and with a view to enabling that court to entertain the same. A person who merely comes in and uses his presence at a place within the jurisdiction of a court as the means of obtaining the benefit of the rule cannot be said to reside at that place. "Taking the word (residence) in its ordinary acceptation, it conveys the idea, if not of permanence, at any rate of some degree of continuance; . . . To serve as a foundation for this important branch of the court's jurisdiction . . . the residence . . . must be something more than occupation during occasional and casual visits within the local limits of the court, more especially where there is a residence outside those limits marked with a considerable measure of continuance" (j).

Some different considerations, however, must arise in case of persons who do not have any fixed home or settled abode at any particular place. Every person is deemed in law to have some place of residence and so if he has no fixed home question may arise whether he can be said to reside at the place where he is actually staying at the time of the filing of the petition. And where the husband and wife did not have any fixed marital home at any place after their marriage question may arise whether they can be said to have resided together where they last lived together. The word "reside" is by no means free from all ambiguity and is capable of a variety of meanings according to the circumstances to which it is applicable and the context in which it is found. It does seem, therefore, that in cases of the nature indicated above a somewhat extended meaning would be given to the words "reside" and "last resided together." In a number of cases decided under the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, some of which (k) were characterised as extreme ones in a later decision of the Bombay High Court (l), a very wide and extended meaning was given to these words and husband and wife who had last lived together at any place for a few days were held for the purpose of jurisdiction to have "last resided together" at that place. It was pointed out in the above decision that those extreme cases could not be taken as a start-

---

(*g*2) ('63) A.S.C. 1521, 1524. Also see Desouza v. Desouza above; Lalithamma v. Kannan ('66) A. Mys. 178. Reference may also be made to Saroja v. Emanuel ('65) A. Mys. 12 (spouses having no common permanent home).

(i) Wadia v. Wadia (1913) 15 Bom. L.R. 593, 602; Panthaky v. Panthaky (1941) 43 Bom. L.R. 569, 574-576; Carol v. Carol ('33) A.A. 39. Also see Robey v. Robey ('31) A.C. 121; Flowers v. Flowers (1910) 32 All. 203.

(j) Banerjee v. Banerjee (1899) 3 Cal. W.N. 250.

(k) Bright v. Bright (1909) 36 Cal. 964; Murphy v. Murphy (1920) 22 Bom. L.R. 1077.

(l) Walsh v. Walsh (1927) 29 Bom. L.R. 308, 311. Reference may also be made to Saroja v. Emmanuel ('65) A. Mys. 178.

ing point in considering the question of the duration of so-called residence. Moreover, it must be noticed that, although the identical expressions are used in both the enactments, those decisions were under an Act the scheme of which on the point of jurisdiction was in some respects different and an examination of those cases will show that in some of them the courts acted with considerable hesitation (m). It is submitted that the expression should neither be strained to amplify the jurisdiction of the court nor narrowed to minimise it. They permit of being understood in a broad and somewhat elastic sense in case of parties who did not or do not have any place of abode of a permanent character. They do not, however, in the context of the present enactment permit of the very wide import given to them in some of those decisions. Even in the broad sense attributable to them there must be some element of a home or abode because the residence of a person is by implication a home of that person. Mere casual or temporary visit to a place or temporary sojourn in a place would not satisfy the requirement of the section. There must be an element of continuance though the degree of continuance is not capable of precise definition.

Denial of marriage.—The court which entertains any petition under this section would necessarily have jurisdiction to decide the issue of existence of the relationship of husband and wife (mm).

District Court.—It is only the "district court" as defined in section 3(b) that has jurisdiction to entertain and try matters arising under the Act. According to section 3(b) "district court" means, in any area for which there is a city civil court, that court, and in any other area the principal civil court of original jurisdiction, and includes any other civil court which may be specified by the State Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, as having jurisdiction in respect of the matters dealt with in this Act. A court coming within the purview of this definition has exclusive jurisdiction and therefore a Munsif (not invested with jurisdiction under section 3) has no jurisdiction to decide, for instance, a petition for restitution of conjugal rights filed after the coming into operation of the Act (*m*1). So also exclusive jurisdiction has been conferred on the City Civil Court (Calcutta) without any qualification and a suit for declaration of nullity of marriage cannot be brought on the Original Side of the Calcutta High Court (*m*2).

A Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court (*m*3), disagreeing with a decision of the Punjab High Court (*m*4) has taken the view that the effect of the present section read with section 3(b) is that the proceeding is to be started before the District Judge, that is the application on which it would commence, would have to be presented before him and that he alone would have the power to entertain it or its initiation but once it is entertained by him, it is amenable to his powers of assignment or transfer under the relevant

---

(m) For instance see Bright v. Bright, 36 Cal. 964, 966.

(mm) Gurdial Kaur v. Mukand Singh ('67) A. Punj. 235.

(*m*1) Bootan Bai v. Durgaprasad ('59) A.M.P. 410; Bikram Singh v. Sudarsan Singh ('61) A. All 150; Balwant Kunwar v. Addl. Munsiff, Dehra Dun ('59) A. All. 7; Bharawan Bai v. Lila Ram ('63) A. Punj. 118. Also see Pushpadevi v. Radhey Shyam ('72) A. Raj. 260.

(*m*2) Monika Das Gupta v. Promode Kumar ('60) A.C. 577.

(*m*3) Ajit Kumar v. Kanan Bala ('60) A.C. 565; 64 C.W.N. 246. Also see Ram Pal v. Ajit Kaur ('62) A.J. & K. 42. Reference may also be made to Rajamma v. Krishnama ('64) A.A.P. 460.

(*m*4) Janak Dulari v. Narain Dass ('59) A. Punj. 50.

Civil Courts Act and such powers have not been taken away or curtailed by the present Act.

On the question of "District Court" and jurisdiction reference may be made to the undermentioned cases (*m*5).

Reference may be made to the undermentioned case regarding the area or territory over which a judge empowered by Notification can exercise the special jurisdiction (*m*6).

Reference may also be made to Notes under S. 3(b) ante.

20. (1) Every petition presented under this Act shall state as distinctly as the nature of the case permits the facts on which the claim to relief is founded and shall also state that there is no collusion between the petitioner and the other party to the marriage.

Contents and verification of petitions.

(2) The statements contained in every petition under this Act shall be verified by the petitioner or some other competent person in the manner required by law for the verification of plaints, and may, at the hearing, be referred to as evidence.

Sub-section (1) requires that the petition for any relief under the Act must distinctly set out the nature of the case and the facts on which the claim to relief is founded. It is also necessary for the petitioner to state in the petition that there is no collusion between the parties to the marriage. Section 21 rules that subject to the provisions of the Act and Rules that may be made by the High Court under the Act all proceedings shall be regulated by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. The Rules framed by the various High Courts under section 21 of the Act require that, in addition to the particulars required to be given under Order VII, r. 1, of the Civil Procedure Code and sub-section (1) above, every petition for judicial separation, nullity of marriage and divorce shall contain certain particulars. It is incumbent on the petitioner to state in the petition all those particulars to enable the respondent or respondents to meet the allegations made by the petitioner. The Rules made by the High Courts in most cases require that every petition under the Act shall be accompanied by a certified extract from the Hindu Marriage Register maintained under section 8 of the Act. They also provide for impleading the necessary parties to such proceedings; for contents of application for leave under section 14 of the Act; for contents of written statement by respondent in answer to the petition; for contents of intervenor's petition and answer to the same; and contents of application for alimony and maintenance.

Sub-section (2) rules that the statements contained in every petition shall be verified by the petitioner or some other competent person in the manner

---

(*m*5) Narendra Nath v. Sudarshan Sekhar ('69) A. Manipur 93 (additional district judge); Laxman Singh v. Kesharbai ('66) A.M.P. 166 (Madhya Pradesh Civil Courts Act); Girwar Singh v. Premavati ('72) A.A. 474 (Judge Small Causes Court enjoying powers under S. 3(b)); Dal Chand v. Swarn Pratap ('65) A.A. 46; Krishnaswami v. Ramesh Chandra ('65) A.A. 228; Laxmansingh v. Kesarbai ('66) A.M.P. 166.

(*m*6) Tayawwa v. Chinnappa ('62) A. Mys. 130 required by law. Order VI, Rule 15, of the Civil Procedure Code, lays down the mode of verification of pleadings.

"Statements . . . in petition . . . may be referred to as evidence".—Under the general rules of practice and procedure the verification of a plaint is not evidence on which a suit can be decreed even if the defendant does not appear at the hearing (n). In England the Divorce Court has a discretion to allow affidavit evidence but the view that is preferred is that as a general rule such evidence should not be allowed save in exceptional cases (o). Section 47 of the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, contains a provision similar to that in the present section. In a Bombay case it was pointed out that although technically, the court is entitled to refer to the allegations in a properly verified petition the court should invariably follow the practice that the parties must give viva voce evidence in every case unless there are some very good reasons to the contrary (p). It is submitted that the ordinary practice should be departed from in cases under the Act only in exceptional circumstances. The court has a discretion vested in it but the discretion would be exercised sparingly and with caution and only in special and extraordinary situations.

Application of Act V of 1908.

21. Subject to the other provisions contained in this Act and to such rules as the High Court may make in this behalf, all proceedings under this Act shall be regulated, as far as may be, by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (Act V of 1908).

Procedure regulated by Civil Procedure Code and High Court Rules.—Except as is otherwise provided in the Act, all matters of procedure under the Act are to be regulated by the Civil Procedure Code. This section confers on the High Court power to make rules regulating the procedure to be adopted for the purpose of carrying into effect the various provisions of the Act. The rules to be framed by the High Court must be only for the specified purpose and consistent with the provisions of the Act both substantive and adjectival. There are a number of sections in the Act which lay down rules touching matters of procedure and any rule framed by the High Court which is inconsistent with or deprives a person of the benefit of any of those rules would be of no effect and would be ultra vires the powers of the High Court in that behalf. Section 41 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, recognises the rule-making powers of the High Court but the rules framed under that Act must be consistent both with the provisions of the enactment itself as well as the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. It may be noted that it is not necessary that the rules framed by the High Court under this Act should be consistent with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. In matters relating to which there is no provision in the Act and are not regulated by the Rules

---

(n) Ross & Co. v. Scriven (1916) 43 Cal. 1001, 1010-1012, 34 I.C. 235.

(o) Gayer v. Gayer (1917) P. 64 (C.A.); Studdy v. Studdy (1859) 1 Sw. & Tr. 321, 324. Also see Rule 25 of the Matrimonial Causes Rules, 1950. In recent years courts in England show some leniency in the matter of allowing affidavit evidence when there is no danger of injustice being done.

(p) Premchand v. Bai Galal (1927) 29 Bom. L.R. 1336, 1345. Also see Kaushalya v. Lal Chand ('72) A. Raj. 253.

made by the High Court the procedure to be followed under the Act in all proceedings must be regulated, as far as may be, by the Civil Procedure Code. It has accordingly been held that the provisions of Order 7 Rule 1 (pp), Order 9 Rr. 8, 9 and 13 and Orders 11 and 22 of the Code apply to proceedings under this Act (*p*1). So also would the provisions of section 100 of the Civil Procedure Code relating to second appeals be applicable to decrees passed under this Act. The scope of the second appeal would be the same as that under the Civil Procedure Code and the High Court will not interfere with a finding of fact (*p*2).

"Decree": Section 2(2) C.P. Code.—See Notes under section 28 post.

Inherent powers of Court: Stay of Proceedings.—In proceedings under the Act the Court regulates the same by the Code of Civil Procedure and if necessary will have recourse to its inherent powers under the Code (S. 151) on principles which are well-established. Court does not compel a wife who has obtained an order for maintenance pendente lite and costs under section 24 post to take out execution proceedings where the order is not carried out by the other party and in case of proceedings by the husband for any relief under the Act will stay the same till the interim order is carried out (*p*3).

Provisions of the Act touching matters of procedure.—There are some provisions of the Act which relate to procedure and some which only incidentally affect procedural matters. Sections 19 to 28 of the Act are headed "Jurisdiction and Procedure" and must particularly be referred to in all matters arising under the Act:

S. 19 deals with the question of jurisdiction;

S. 20 lays down rules relating to contents and verification of petitions;

S. 21 deals with power of the High Court to make rules regulating the procedure to be adopted in proceedings under the Act. Subject to such rules, all proceedings are to be regulated by the Civil Procedure Code;

S. 22 permits of proceedings under the Act being conducted in camera;

S. 23 deals inter alia with the standard of proof and casts on the court the duty, where it is possible so to do, to endeavour to bring about a reconciliation between the parties;

S. 24 deals with orders for maintenance pendente lite and costs;

S. 25 deals with orders for permanent alimony and maintenance;

S. 26 deals with matters affecting custody of minor children;

---

(pp) Dal Chand v. Swarn Pratap ('65) A.A. 46; Chander Prakash v. Sudesh Kumari ('71) A. Delhi 208 (Or. 7 R. 7).

(*p*1) Tirukappa v. Kamalamma ('66) A. Mys. 1; Gangadevi v. Krushna Prasad ('67) A. Orissa 19; Suhas Pande v. Manohar Pande ('71) A.B. 183 (Order 22). Also see Sunanda v. Venkata Subba Rao ('57) A.A.P. 424; Sunanda v. Gundopant ('61) A. Bom. 225; (1961) Bom. 296; 63 Bom. L.R. 125.

(*p*2) Jicubai v. Ningappa ('63) A. Mys. 3; Kusum Lata v. Kampta Prasad ('65) A.A. 280.

(*p*3) Anita v. Birendra Chandra ('62) A.C. 88; Bhuneshwar Prasad v. Dropta Bai ('63) A.M.P. 259; Malkan Rani v. Krishna Kumar ('61) A. Punj. 42; Dr. Tarlochan Singh v. Mohinder Kaur ('63) A. Punj. 249 (1963) 1 Punj. 74. Also see Halsbury's Laws of England 3rd Ed. Vol. 8 p. 22 § 41; Ramappa v. Bojjappa ('63) A.S.C. 1633; Ramachandra Rao v. Kowsalya ('69) A. Mys. 76.

S. 27 deals with matters affecting certain property which may jointly belong to the husband and wife;

S. 28 relates to enforcement of decrees and orders and appeals against decrees and orders in proceedings under the Act.

Appeal.—The principles on which a Court of Appeal interferes with findings of fact by the court of first instance are well established. Equally well established are the principles which guide the Court of Appeal when it is asked to examine orders passed by the court of first instance in the exercise of its discretion. Reference may be made to Notes under section 28 post.

Co-respondent.—Under the rules made by some of the High Courts it is provided that in every petition for divorce or judicial separation on the ground that the respondent is living in adultery or has committed adultery with any person, the petitioner "shall" make such person a co-respondent (*p*4). In the undermentioned case it has been held that under the rules framed by the High Court of Punjab an adultress joined as a co-respondent is neither a necessary nor a proper party in a petition filed by a wife against her husband on ground of adultery (*p*5).

Intervention: Power of court to allow intervention on terms.—Section 31 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, lays down the following rule:

> "In every case in which any person is charged with adultery with any party to a suit or in which the court may consider, in the interest of any person not already a party to the suit, that that person should be made a party to the suit, the court may, if it thinks fit, allow that person to intervene upon such terms, if any, as the court thinks just."

The Special Marriage Act, 1954, does not contain any similar provision but section 41 of that enactment in recognising the power of the High Court to make rules regulating procedure draws particular attention to the desirability of framing rules on the question of 'intervention' in certain proceedings by any person not already joined as a party.

Rules framed by some of the High Courts under the present Act do not provide for 'intervention.' Where the rules framed by a High Court under the present Act do not contain any provision on the question of intervention, doubt may arise whether it would be competent to the Court under Order 1, R. 10 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code, to permit intervention by any person not joined as a party to the proceeding. Serious doubt was raised about the power of the court in this behalf in some matters arising under the Divorce Act, 1869 (q). It would be clearly in the interest of justice that a party who is named in proceeding under the suit as being a person with whom the respondent is alleged to have committed adultery should be allowed to intervene and defend his or her character against the aspersions which have been made in the petition. The question is one of importance and it is submitted that the power of the court ex proprio motu to direct addition of a proper party in order to enable it effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions in the matter, under sub-rule (2) of Order I, rule 10

---

(*p*4) For instance see Maganlal v. Dahi ('71) A. Guj. 33.

(*p*5) Sarla v. Shakuntala ('66) A. Punj. 337.

(q) Stuart v. Stuart (1935) 57 All. 884. And see Ramsay v. Boyle (1903) 30 Cal. 489.

of the Code, if liberally interpreted, is wide enough to enable it to direct addition of any such party.

Cross-petitions.—Under the Special Marriage Act, 1954, the court can give relief to the respondent on petition for divorce without a separate petition for the purpose. Section 35 of that enactment is as under:

> "If in any proceeding for divorce, the respondent opposes the relief sought on the ground of the petitioner's adultery, cruelty or desertion, the court may give to the respondent the same relief to which he or she would have been entitled if he or she had presented a petition seeking such relief."

The present Act does not contain any similar provision. It seems that the Legislature did not deem it necessary to make any express provision for cross-petitions but left the matter to be dealt with by the High Court under the rule-making power conferred by section 21.

Damages.—Rules framed by some High Courts contain express provision relating to granting of damages against a co-respondent. Question may arise whether in the absence of any such special Rule the court can in proceedings under the Act grant damages against a co-respondent. It is submitted that the court would lean in favour of the exercise of such power though the matter is not entirely free from doubt. In Jaswantrai v. Vimal Vaidya it was held that no such claim can be joined in a proceeding under the Act since the Rules framed by the Bombay High Court (applicable in Gujarat) did not contain any such provision (*q*1).

Res judicata.—As a general rule the doctrine of res judicata applies as much in matrimonial cases as in others. It is sometimes said that in matrimonial jurisdiction since public interest is an important consideration the matter is not concluded by estoppel per rem judicatam and the doctrine cannot operate against a party so as to abrogate the statutory duty of the court to inquire into the truth of a petition which is properly before the court (r). This principle of public interest is sound by itself but apt to create some misapprehension. The question whether the trial of any matrimonial cause or any issue is barred by res judicata or not must be decided by reference to sec. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code bearing in mind that the section is not exhaustive of the circumstances in which an issue may be res judicata. The application of the rule by the court, as is now well settled, should be influenced by no technical considerations of form, but by matter of substance within the limits allowed by law. "Charges which have been unsuccessfully put forward and disposed of in one suit, cannot be repeated in a second between the same parties; for not only does the common law doctrine of estoppel apply, but since in matrimonial causes a wife usually brings her suit at the expense of her husband, a repetition of charges would act as a peculiar hardship. The rule applies not only to the actual point of decision in the previous case, but also to every point which properly belonged to the subject of litigation, and which the parties, exercising reasonable diligence, might have brought forward at the time" (s).

---

(*q*1) ('63) A. Guj. 152: Rajalingam v. Lingayya ('64) A.A.P. 308 (Rule 9 of the High Court Rules).

(r) Hudson v. Hudson (1948) P. 292, 293; (1948) 1 All E.R. 773.

A distinction, however, must be made between res judicata as against a party charged with a matrimonial offence and as against a party putting forward a charge against the opposite party. It is one thing to say that a party who brings charges is not entitled to repeat allegations which have already been the subject of previous proceedings and have already been determined against him or her and another to say that a party should not be prevented from denying charges brought against him. For in the latter case the statutory duty on the court, to inquire into the truth of a petition which is properly before it, intervenes and a party is not prevented from denying charges and the court sees that relief is not improperly obtained by a petitioner merely through some technical rule (t).

A wife filed a petition for relief on the ground of her husband's adultery and cruelty. The charges were denied and her petition was dismissed. She then filed a petition for relief on the ground of the husband's desertion. It was held that: (i) since the allegation of adultery had been dismissed in the previous petition she could not now allege that she had reasonable grounds for belief in such adultery; (ii) the allegations of threats of violence and of actual assault, which repeated the allegations in the previous petition, had been held not to amount to cruelty and could not now be relied on as "grave and weighty matters" to support a charge of constructive desertion; (iii) other allegations relied on as constructive desertion were such as could and should have been raised in the earlier proceeding in support of charge of cruelty and not having been specifically raised they could not now be relied on: (iv) but the remaining allegation of desertion simpliciter had not been investigated in the former petition and could be tried in the second petition (u).

The undermentioned cases afford some illustrations of the applicability and inapplicability of the doctrine of res judicata in matrimonial cases (*u*1).

Costs.—In matrimonial causes costs are in the absolute discretion of the court and in determining whether an unsuccessful husband or wife should be directed to pay the costs of the other party each case must be considered on its own merits and there is some indication in the Act itself that the discretion of the court being unfettered it may have regard to the question whether the unsuccessful spouse has separate means sufficient to pay the costs (v). The practice under analogous enactments has been not to make any order for costs against an unsuccessful wife unless she has separate means sufficient to pay the costs. If her petition was groundless or if she had made wild charges against the husband the court took that into consideration and not only refused to make any order for costs in her favour but mulcted her in costs (w). The scheme of the present enactment is not to sanction any practice as to costs simply for the reason that such practice was followed under other analogous legislation but to leave the matter of costs to the discretion of the court and treat both the husband and wife on the same footing as would appear from

---

(s) This statement of the law given in an unexceptionable way in Rayden on Divorce was quoted with approval in a case: Bright v. Bright (1953) 2 All E.R. 939, 947. Reference may also be made to H. v. H. (1928) 30 Bom. L.R. 523.

(t) Bright v. Bright (1953) 2 All E.R. 939, 946.

(u) Bright v. Bright, supra.

(*u*1) Krishna Pillai v. Subhadra Amma ('71) A. Kerala 44 [Judgment in rem and res judicata]; Siddaiah v. Penchalamma ('63) A.A.P. 158 [Previous decision by Munsif's Court in a suit for maintenance inoperative as res judicata in subsequent suit for judicial separation]; Kusum Lata v. Kampta Prasad ('65) A.A. 280 [Consolidation of proceedings and res judicata].

(v) See Section 24.

(w) Milne v. Milne & Fowler (1871) L.R. 2 P. & D. 202, 204; Millward v. Millward and Andrews (1887) 57 L.T. 569, 570; Barker v. Barker (1950) 1 All E.R. 812. Reference may also be made to Noronha v. Noronha (1948) 50 Bom. L.R. 477.

section 24. In any proceeding under the Act the court, it is submitted, would not subscribe to any set practice but would consider each case on its own merits and in exercising its discretion would have regard to the conduct of the parties; the means of the parties; the blame to be apportioned to one or other of the spouses for the break-up of the matrimonial home; and the attitude taken up by the parties in the conduct of the proceeding itself.

22. (1) A proceeding under this Act shall be conducted in camera if either party so desires or if the court so thinks fit to do, and it shall not be lawful for any person to print or publish any matter in relation to any such proceeding except with the previous permission of the court.

Proceedings may be in camera and may not be printed or published.

(2) If any person prints or publishes any matter in contravention of the provisions contained in sub-section (1), he shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

Hearing in camera.—This section lays down certain limitations on the general rule that all suits—including matrimonial suits—should be heard in open court (x) and that every court of justice should be open to every person. In Scott v. Scott (y) which is the leading English decision on the subject the view was expressed that the general rule as to publicity must yield to the paramount duty of the court to secure that justice is done and that in exceptional cases it is open to a party in a matrimonial suit to show that justice cannot be done otherwise and to apply for a hearing in camera and even for the prohibition of subsequent publication of the proceedings. The rule was not based on the ground of public decency but on the principle that in some cases the administration of justice would be rendered impracticable by the presence of the public, as for example where a party would be reasonably deterred by publicity from seeking relief at the hands of the court (z). Section 53 of the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, confers wide powers on the court and lays down that the whole or any part of proceedings under that Act can be heard if the court thinks fit, with closed doors. Section 33 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, lays down that a proceeding under that Act shall be conducted in camera if either party thereto or the court so thinks fit to do. That section and the present section are in pari materia.

If either party so desires the proceedings under the Act must be conducted in camera. Even where no such desire is expressed by any party the court may in its discretion direct that the proceedings shall not be in open court but bearing in mind the following observations of the Privy Council on the subject which are instructive: "But publicity is the authentic hall-mark of judicial as distinct from administrative procedure. The public at large are directly interested in them (divorce and marriage) affecting as they do, not only the status of the two individuals immediately concerned but, not remotely

---

(x) Cf. Or. 18, R. 4, Civil Procedure Code.

(y) Scott v. Scott (1913) A.C. 417. Reference may also be made to McPherson v. McPherson (1936) 38 Bom. L.R. 468 (P.C.); Cleland v. Cleland (1913) L.T. 744; Re Martindale (1894) 3 Ch. 193.

(z) See per Lord Loreburn in Scott v. Scott supra.

when taken in the mass, the entire social structure and the preservation of wholesome family life throughout the community" (a).

Restriction on publication and newspaper reports.—The section also lays down the strict rule that it shall not be lawful for any person to print or publish any matter relating to any proceedings under the Act (including newspaper reports) except with the previous permission of the court. The operation of this restriction is not confined to proceedings held in camera and the rule applies to all proceedings under the Act whether held in open court or otherwise. The rule is enacted so that reports of judicial proceedings relating to marital disputes may not produce an unhealthy influence on the public and to control those who cater to the prurient minded members of the public who revel in the unsavoury details of such cases. Any violation of the rule relating to printing and publication of any such matter has been made punishable under sub-section (2). In England there is a special enactment, the Judicial Proceedings (Regulation of Reports) Act, 1926, which regulates the publication of any particulars relating to matrimonial suits. Names of the parties, concise statement of the charges, decision of the court and some other matters are however, permitted to be published and the restrictions are substantially confined to indecent details calculated to injure public morals. The present section lays down that nothing in relation to any such proceeding can be printed or published without the previous permission of the court.

Decree in proceedings.

23. (1) In any proceeding under this Act, whether defended or not, if the court is satisfied that—

(a) any of the grounds for granting relief exists and the petitioner is not in any way taking advantage of his or her own wrong or disability for the purpose of such relief, and

(b) where the ground of the petition is the ground specified in clause (f) of sub-section (1) of section 10, or in clause (i) of sub-section (1) of section 13, the petitioner has not in any manner been accessory to or connived at or condoned the act or acts complained of, or where the ground of the petition is cruelty, the petitioner has not in any manner condoned the cruelty, and

(c) the petition is not presented or prosecuted in collusion with the respondent, and

(d) there has not been any unnecessary or improper delay in instituting the proceeding, and

(e) there is no other legal ground why relief should not be granted,

---

(a) McPherson v. McPherson, 38 Bom. L.R. 468, 473, 474.

then, and in such a case, but not otherwise, the court shall decree such relief accordingly.

(2) Before proceeding to grant any relief under this Act, it shall be the duty of the court in the first instance, in every case where it is possible so to do consistently with the nature and circumstances of the case, to make every endeavour to bring about a reconciliation between the parties.

Power and duty of the court.—This section contains some vital clauses of considerable importance and consequence relating to the power and duty of the court in the matter of granting any of the reliefs recognized under the Act. In the main it follows the language of section 34 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, in which the Legislature has partly adopted the phraseology of section 4 of the English Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950. But the provisions are not in pari materia in all respects.

The initial words of the section adopt the well-established principle of matrimonial law that decrees of dissolution of marriage are to be made only upon strict proof. Consent to a decree, direct or indirect, is not permissible. Proceedings under the Act are not of the character of ordinary suits and the standard of proof required is that the court must be satisfied that the ground for relief is established beyond reasonable doubt. It makes no difference whether the proceeding is defended or not. The court must vigilantly see that all the requirements of law are fulfilled and the safeguards provided in the section are duly observed. The language employed in sub-section (1) clearly shows that clauses (b) to (e) and the latter part of clause (a) lay down certain absolute bars to the granting of any relief under the Act. The words at the close of sub-section (1) "then, and in such a case, but not otherwise, the court shall decree such relief accordingly" emphasize that relief in any proceeding under the Act cannot be granted to a petitioner who is in any way taking advantage of his or her own wrong or disability for the purpose of such relief. Such conduct or disability is an absolute bar to the petitioner's right to seek relief from the court. The words also emphasize that connivance, condonation, collusion and unnecessary or improper delay are absolute bars to the granting of relief where they apply to the particular ground on which relief is sought.

Sub-section (1) in effect lays down the following rules:

(1) A decree for restitution of conjugal rights (b), judicial separation (c), declaration of nullity of marriage (d), annulment of voidable marriage (e), or divorce (f) can be granted only when any ground for granting the relief asked for is established to the satisfaction of the court. See "Standard of Proof" infra.

(2) No relief can be granted to the petitioner if any of the absolute bars apply to the facts of the case.

---

(b) S. 9.
(c) S. 10.
(d) S. 11.
(e) S. 12.
(f) S. 13.

The petition must be dismissed if the court is satisfied that the petitioner, though able to establish the ground for granting relief, is in any way taking advantage of his or her own wrong or disability for the purpose of such relief [cl. (a)];

The petition must be dismissed if the court is not satisfied that the petitioner has not in any manner been accessory to or connived at or condoned the act or acts of adultery where the petition is on that ground (g), or has not in any manner condoned the cruelty where the petition is on that ground [cl. (b)];

The petition must be dismissed if the court is not satisfied that there is no collusion between the parties [cl. (c)];

The petition must be dismissed if the court is not satisfied that there has not been any unnecessary or improper delay in instituting the proceeding [cl. (d)];

The petition must be dismissed if there is any legal ground for not granting the relief [cl. (e)].

(3) Where the court is satisfied that any ground for granting the relief asked for exists and is also satisfied that none of the bars laid down in the sub-section apply to the facts of the case, it shall decree such relief.

Standard of Proof: Corroboration.—It is a firmly established rule that the ground for relief in a matrimonial cause should be strictly proved. Reference has already been made to the subject under the heads of desertion (h), cruelty (i) and adultery (j). The standard of proof in case of all proceedings under the Act is that the court must be satisfied beyond all reasonable doubt that the ground for relief is proved and normally the court requires that the evidence of a spouse who charges the other spouse with a matrimonial offence should be corroborated. While the analogies and precedents of criminal law should have no authority in matrimonial causes the court would ordinarily be justified in requiring, not as a matter of law but as a rule of prudence, that where possible corroborative evidence should be led in order to satisfy the court that the allegations made are well founded. As for corroboration in case of adultery it has been observed that corroboration must be independent testimony which connects or tends to connect the offending spouse with the offence. Evidence of mere opportunity is not sufficient to constitute corroboration, since opportunity may or may not be used (*j*1). But there is nothing to prevent the court from passing a decree even on uncorroborated testimony of the petitioner. The background of the case and surrounding circumstances may often furnish some corroborative evidence. In Bipin Chander v. Prabhawati (k) the Supreme Court referred to the law on the

---

(g) See S. 10(1)(f) and S. 13(1)(i).
(h) pp. 714, 715, supra.
(i) p. 725, supra.
(j) pp. 730-731, supra.
(*j*1) See Senat v. Senat (1965) 2 All E.R. 505 and cases there cited.
(k) (1956) S.C.R. 838, 59 Bom. L.R. 322; Vira Reddi v. Kistamma ('69) A.M. 235. Also see William v. William ('34) A. Pat. 475 [cruelty]: Joseph v. Ramamma (1922) 45 Mad. 982 [adultery]. Reference may also be made to Jyotish Chandra v. Meera Guha ('70) A.C. 269 [adultery]; Sachindranath v. Nilima ('70) A.C. 38; Galler v. Galler (1954) 1 All E.R. 536; Fairman v. Fairman (1949) 1 All E.R. 938, (1949) P. 341.

subject in England and observed that though corroboration is not required as an absolute rule of law in proof of a matrimonial offence the court insists upon corroborative evidence unless its absence is accounted for to the satisfaction of the court.

The section requires that before decreeing any relief in any proceeding under the Act the court must be satisfied—

(a) that the ground for relief exists, meaning thereby that it is established, and

(b) that to the granting of such relief there is no bar of any kind mentioned in the section.

The expression "satisfied" used in similar context has come up for consideration in England and the question has been discussed whether "satisfied" meant something less than "satisfied beyond reasonable doubt." It would seem from recent decisions that the courts in England have come down on the side of the view that there is no distinction to be drawn between "satisfied" standing alone and the same expression accompanied by the words "beyond reasonable doubt."

In the Supreme Court case mentioned above (decided under a different enactment) it was observed that it was well settled that in proceedings for divorce the petitioner must prove the alleged offence beyond all reasonable doubt. The present section itself lays down a standard and puts adultery, cruelty and other matrimonial offences on the same footing. What is required is that there should be a strict inquiry into the matter. The word "strict" is sufficiently apt to describe the measure and standard of proof and it is submitted that on a true construction, the expression "satisfied" used in this section does not connote anything less than proof beyond reasonable doubt or as it is sometimes said strict proof. The following observation of Lord Macdermott in a case decided by the House of Lords in England (l) should prove useful: "The jurisdiction in divorce involves the status of the parties and the public interest requires that the marriage bond shall not be set aside lightly or without strict inquiry. The terms of the statute recognise this plainly, and I think it would be quite out of keeping with the anxious nature of its provisions to hold that the court might be satisfied, in respect of a ground for dissolution, with something less than proof beyond reasonable doubt." The evidence must go beyond a mere balance of probabilities and must satisfy what was described as the "guarded discretion of a reasonable and just man".

In White v. White (*l*1) the Supreme Court was in general agreement with the decision of the House of Lords in Preston Jones v. Preston Jones (*l*2) as laying down the correct test that the court must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt about the commission of the matrimonial offence. Proof beyond reasonable doubt does not mean proof beyond the shadow of a doubt. It need not amount to certainty. The Supreme Court has also accepted this

---

(l) Preston Jones v. Preston Jones (1951) A.C. 391, (1951) 1 All E.R. 124, 138; Lord Simmonds expressly adopted this language, ibid, p. 127. Reference may be made also to Blyth v. Blyth (1966) 1 All E. Rep. 524 (H.L.).

(*l*1) (1958) S.C.R. 1410.

(*l*2) See f.n. (l) above.

principle of proof beyond reasonable doubt in Bipin Chander v. Prabhavati (*l*3). In England, however, in a later decision in Blythe v. Blythe (*l*3) some judges in the House of Lords have expressed the view that the word 'satisfied' did not mean satisfied beyond reasonable doubt and a matrimonial offence could be proved by a preponderance of probability and that the degree of probability depended on the gravity of the offence on the principle that "in proportion as the offence is grave so ought the proof to be clear". In Bastable v. Bastable (*l*3) the court of appeal in England observed that this principle should be applied until the matter has been further considered by the House of Lords and further guidance had been received. The Supreme Court, as already pointed out, has accepted the rule of proof beyond reasonable doubt in case of matrimonial offences and that will continue to be the rule to be applied by courts under the Act. Reference may further be made to Notes under "Condonation" infra for standard of proof required to establish condonation.

Admissions.—It is not unusual to find observations in some decided cases to the effect that judgment by admission is unknown to matrimonial cases. The court insists on strict proof that is proof beyond reasonable doubt of the matrimonial offence. Therefore, as a matter of practice it does not act on a mere admission or confession unless there is corroboration. There is, however, no absolute rule of law of evidence which precludes the court from acting on an admission. Of course, considerable caution is required and the court will act on any such admission only after ruling out the possibility of any collusion. In Mahendra v. Sushila (*l*4) the Supreme Court observed:

> "Admissions are to be ignored on grounds of prudence only when the court, in the circumstances of a case, is of the opinion that the admissions of the parties may be collusive. If there be no ground for such a view, it would be proper for the court to act on those admissions without forcing the parties to lead other evidence to establish the facts admitted, unless of course the admissions are contradicted by the facts proved or a doubt is created by the proved facts as regards the correctness of the facts admitted."

No decree merely by consent of parties.—It is a well established rule of matrimonial jurisdictions that no judgment for dissolution of marriage can be obtained by consent of parties and it has repeatedly been said that judgment by default or by consent is unknown in matrimonial causes. Consent to a decree direct or indirect is inadmissible as was observed by the House of Lords in the undermentioned case (*l*5). A decree for restitution of conjugal rights may, however, stand on a somewhat different footing. It has been held by a full bench of the High Court of Punjab and Haryana that a consent decree can be passed in such a case in certain circumstances and it will depend upon the facts of each individual case whether such a decree is a good decree or not and if it is so passed it will not amount to a nullity (*l*6). It can form the basis of divorce proceedings under section 13(1A)(ii). A decree for judicial separation passed merely by consent of parties cannot be regarded as valid and the court may decline to grant a decree for divorce under section 13(1A)(i) in case of any such consent decree (*l*7).

---

(*l*3) (1956) S.C.R. 838, 852; Blyth v. Blyth (1966) 1 All E.R. 524 (H.L.); (1966) A.C. 643. Reference may be made to Bastable v. Bastable (1968) 3 All E.R. 701. Also see Sachindranath v. Nilima ('70) A.C. 38.

(*l*4) ('65) A.S.C. 364, 372.

(*l*5) Russell v. Russell (1924) A.C. 687, 736.

(*l*6) Joginder Singh v. Pushpa ('69) A.P. & H. 397.

(*l*7) Hirakali v. Awasthi ('71) A.A. 201.

False defence.—In matrimonial proceedings the court is so vigilant to see that the burden of proof is properly discharged by the petitioner that though the putting forward of a false defence may destroy the respondent's credibility that in itself is not regarded as sufficient to establish the truth of the petitioner's case. The court does not ignore the possibility that a spouse "conscious of innocence but believing herself the victim of a sport of nature, might, despairing of establishing the true defence, allow herself to palter with the truth, and might induce others closely connected with her to lend themselves to prevarication or worse" (*l*8).

Though not determinative of the case the court can take into consideration the fact that the respondent had put forward a false defence. It may do so in examining the probabilities of the case and in assessing the case of the petitioner (*l*9).

". . . whether defended or not'.—A decree in any matrimonial proceeding under the Act is to be made only upon strict proof of the ground relied upon by the petitioner and it makes no difference whether the proceeding is defended or not. In an ex parte case it is not enough for one of the parties to come forward and say something exactly following the terms of the Act. The proper course for the court, in an undefended proceeding, is to ask sufficient questions to make it reasonably clear what the precise facts are on which the petitioner relies for the relief that is claimed (m). The court must watch vigilantly to see that the evidence on which it acts is such only as it is entitled to receive. The fact that by allowing the proceedings to go undefended both the parties appear to be equally anxious to see that relief is granted is precisely a reason why the court should be strict as to proof. No consideration of saving time and trouble can be a legitimate ground for admitting evidence which is inadmissible (n). The court must also satisfy itself that the safeguards provided in the section are duly observed and insist upon corroborative evidence in proof of a matrimonial offence (*n*1).

Discretion of the court: ". . . then, and in such a case, but not otherwise, the court shall decree such relief accordingly".—A question of considerable importance and some difficulty must arise as to whether the language of the present section recognizes any discretion in the court in the matter of granting or withholding relief in cases where the ground for granting relief exists and none of the absolute bars laid down in the latter part of cl. (a) and clauses (b) to (e) apply to the facts of the case. The words at the end of sub-section (1) "then, and in such a case, but not otherwise, the court shall decree such relief accordingly" suggest that the Legislature has in the present section given a complete enactment and where none of those bars can be shown to apply to the facts of the case the court is bound to give relief and has no discretion to withhold the same. The identical words "then, and in such a case, but not otherwise, the court shall decree such relief accordingly" are used in sub-section (1) of section 34 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, which deals with duty of court in passing decrees in proceedings under that Act. The language of clauses (b), (d), (e) and (f) of that section is practically identical with that employed in clauses (b) to (e) of the present section. But section 34 of that Act does not contain any rule similar to that in the

---

(*l*8) Preston Jones v. Preston Jones supra per Lord Normand at p. 405. Also see Bipinchandra v. Prabhavati ('57) A.S.C. 176, 188; Sachindranath v. Nilima ('70) A.C. 38.

(*l*9) Vira Reddi v. Kistamma supra. Also see Mahendra v. Sushila supra.

(m) Walsh v. Walsh (1927) 29 Bom. 308, 310. Also see Alopbai v. Ramphal ('62) A.M.P. 211.

(n) Russell v. Russell (1924) A.C. 687, 736.

(*n*1) quoted in Anupama v. Bhagaban ('72) A. Orissa 163.

latter part of clause (a) of the present section which prevents a petitioner from taking advantage of his or her own wrong or disability even though the ground for relief may be shown to exist. That section read with section 35 of that Act although it does not in terms so state would seem to leave it to the court to decide whether relief should or should not be granted to a petitioner who for instance is himself or herself shown to have been guilty of adultery, cruelty or desertion. In any such case the court may give to the respondent the same relief to which she or he would have been entitled if she or he had presented a petition seeking such relief. In England section 4 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, contains the provisions that the court is not bound to pronounce a decree of divorce (nor a decree for judicial separation) and may dismiss the petition if it finds that the petitioner has been guilty—

(a) of adultery committed during the marriage, or

(b) of unreasonable delay in presenting or prosecuting the petition; or

(c) of cruelty towards the other party to the marriage, or

(d) where the ground of the petition is adultery or cruelty, of having without reasonable excuse deserted, or having without reasonable excuse wilfully separated himself or herself, from, the other party before the adultery or cruelty complained of; or

(e) where the ground of the petition is adultery or unsoundness of mind or desertion, of such wilful neglect or misconduct as has conduced to the adultery or unsoundness of mind or desertion.

It will be noticed that the court in England has a discretion in all such cases to grant or withhold the relief claimed by the petitioner even though the ground for relief complained of may be established. Decisions in England show that the discretion vested in the court, though said to be regulated discretion, is in a way unfettered. In Blunt v. Blunt (o) the House of Lords adopted the view that the matters to be considered in the exercise of this discretion cannot be reduced to any rules of an exhaustive character and the utmost that can be properly done is to indicate the chief considerations which ought to be weighed in appropriate cases as helping to arrive at a just conclusion. There are on the other hand judicial statements of the nature that a loose and unfettered discretion of this sort upon matters of such grave import is a dangerous weapon and its exercise is likely to be the refuge of vagueness in decision and the harbour of half-formed thoughts; and that under cover of the word 'discretion' a conclusion is apt to be formed upon a general impression of facts too numerous and minute to be perfectly brought together and weighed and sometimes not perfectly provided (p). Perhaps these considerations weighed with the legislature in not adopting the rule of English law on the subject or that in the Indian Special Marriage Act, 1954, to cases to be decided under the present Act. It will also be noticed that the latter part of clause (a) of the present section deals substantially with cases of the nature where discretion is exercised by the court in England on the ground of any wrong or misconduct of the petitioner and enacts that a decree shall not be granted to a petitioner who is in any way taking advantage of his or her own wrong or disability for the purpose of the relief. The scheme and framework of the English enactment, the Indian Special Marriage Act, 1954, and the present Act are not identical and little, if any, assistance is to be derived from the knowledge that under the analogous enactments a measure of unfettered discretion is vested in the court. To ascertain the law under the present enactment it is necessary to consider the present section as it is and it is submitted that no such discretion as hitherto understood can be exercised by the court in cases to be decided under the present Act and even though it may appear that both the parties are in the wrong, relief should not be denied to the petitioner where the court is satisfied that the ground for relief has been established and the petitioner is not in any way taking advantage of his or her own wrong or disability for the purpose of such relief. Reference may be made to Notes under cl. (a) infra.

---

(o) (1943) A.C. 517; (1943) 2 All. E.R. 76. IP. & D. 644.
(p) Morgan v. Morgan and Porter (1869) L.R.

Petition for divorce: Judicial separation may be granted.—In a petition for divorce where the court is not satisfied that the ground on which it is founded is established it would be competent to the court to grant relief by way of judicial separation if the evidence before the court is sufficient to satisfy the court that a ground for such relief exists (q). The desirable course would be to allow an amendment of the petition, raise a proper issue, and then determine the matter.

Cl. (a): ". . . taking advantage of his or her own wrong or disability. . . ."—The latter part of clause (a) read with the words at the end of sub-section (1) "then and in such a case, but not otherwise" makes it abundantly clear that the court cannot pass a decree granting any relief under the Act in favour of a petitioner who is in any way taking advantage of his or her own wrong or disability for the purpose of such relief and it is not enough that the petitioner has established the ground on which relief is sought; and if that is so his or her own wrong or disability is an absolute bar to the relief sought by the petitioner. The rule is based on the principle of justice that a wrongdoer should not be permitted to take advantage of his or her own wrong or disability while seeking relief at the hands of the court in any matrimonial proceeding. Thus for instance relief on the ground of adultery of the respondent, cannot be granted to a petitioner whose own adultery or any other wrong (such for example desertion) has in any serious degree contributed to the misconduct of the respondent: Similarly no relief can be granted to a petitioner—where the ground of the petition is adultery or unsoundness of mind or desertion and the petitioner has been guilty of such wilful neglect or misconduct as has conduced to the adultery or unsoundness of mind or desertion; or where the ground of the petition is cruelty the petitioner was himself or herself guilty of extreme provocation or of cruelty or had without reasonable excuse deserted or had without reasonable excuse separated himself or herself from the respondent and it appears that in seeking relief from the court on any of these grounds the petitioner is taking advantage of his or her own wrong; and similarly where the ground of the petition is failure on the part of the respondent to comply with a decree for restitution of conjugal rights (r) the petitioner has himself or herself prevented compliance of the terms of the decree by the respondent. The 'wrong' (s) of which a petitioner may be said to take advantage and which disentitles him or her to relief under the Act even if the ground on which the petition is founded is established, though a compendious and a broad phrase, must be understood in a restrictive sense. It is submitted that it means some matrimonial offence on the part of the petitioner or some matrimonial wrong-doing which must be regarded as a grave and weighty matter or as something grave and convincing. And the mere fact that the petitioner also is not free from blame is not enough to invite the operation of the rule. It is of the essence of the application of the rule that the 'wrong' or 'disability' must be of such a grave nature that to grant relief to the petitioner notwithstanding the same would be to permit the petitioner to take advantage of his or her own wrong. Each case must depend on its own facts and circumstances and it is not possible to expect a comprehensive statement as to what may constitute 'wrong' within the ambit of the rule. In arriving at its conclusion the court will certainly have regard to the intendment and scheme of the Act which is to discourage divorce but not withhold relief when the marriage has completely failed or broken down. The present rule is not intended to cause great hardship or drive parties to act in collusion with one another.

---

(q) Browne v. Browne ('37) A. Oudh 52; Fowle v. Fowle (1878) 4 Cal. 260.

(r) See p. 751, supra.

Reference may be made to Notes under section 13(1A) (i) and section 13(1A) (ii) ante.

Reference may be made to Notes under "Insincerity: Approbation" at pp. 737-738 supra.

Connivance.—Where the ground for relief is that adultery was committed by the respondent as specified in s. 10 or that the respondent is living in adultery as specified in section 13 it is the duty of the court to inquire, so far as it reasonably can, into the matter and satisfy itself that the petitioner was not accessory to the offence and that there was no connivance on his part of the act or acts complained of. Clause (b) of sub-section (1) lays down this rule.

Connivance is anticipatory willing consent or culpable passive acquiescence in a course of conduct reasonably likely to lead to the commission of adultery. To constitute connivance, active corruption is not necessary but corrupt intention is essential. Passive acquiescence with the intention and in the expectation that guilt will follow may suffice; but there must be the element of consent express or implied. Mere inattention, negligence, folly, dullness of apprehension, or imprudence are not connivance. What is to be considered is the intention of the party and not his wisdom. Where there is active consent the intention is impliedly corrupt and the defence is complete. But where it has to be implied from certain acts or conduct it must be shown to have proceeded from a corrupt motive. The doctrine rests on the principle of the Ecclesiastical Courts that the petitioner cannot take advantage of his own wrong and must "come with clean hands" and has its source and its limitations in the maxim volenti non fit injuria. It is not necessary, however, to show that the spouse against whom connivance is alleged was an accessory before the fact. That is stated in the section as a separate matter for consideration.

---

(s) The mere fact that a wife was living separate from her husband will not disentitle her from seeking divorce on the ground [section 13(2)] that the husband had married a second wife in case of a marriage solemnized before the Act came in operation: Mohanlal v. Mohan Bai ('58) A. Raj. 71.

It is of the essence of connivance that it precedes the event and, generally speaking, the material event is the inception of the adultery and not its repetition, although the facts may be such that connivance at the continuance of an adulterous association shows that the husband must be taken to have connived at it from the first (t).

The expression 'passive acquiescence' used in the present context is apt to be misleading if the element of intention and consent is left out of account. A husband who having reason to suspect that his wife commits adultery seeks proof of it and keeps a watch on her or employs an agent to do so or so conducts himself that the wife gets an opportunity for its continuance is not guilty of connivance if he does nothing to encourage her in the commission of the offence (u). But if the petitioner deliberately fosters and encourages situations to arise and knows that adultery is likely to result he is guilty of connivance and it is no answer that the motive was to obtain conclusive proof (v).

In a case in England a note of warning was given by Lord Merriman (w) which it is submitted must not go unheeded. "Much of the difficulty in dealing with the question of connivance arises from the fact that in the past judges have gone beyond the facts of the particular case in an attempt to lay down general principles of wider application. In our opinion it is of the utmost importance to bear in mind that the issue is whether on the facts of the particular case the husband was or was not guilty of the corrupt intention of promoting or encouraging either the initiation or the continuance of the wife's adultery; and that the court should not allow its judgment to be affected by importing, as principles of universal application, pronouncements made with regard to wholly different circumstances, and so be led to a conclusion contrary to the justice of the case."

When it is said that connivance is an absolute bar it does not mean that adultery with one person which has been connived at excludes all relief for all time in respect of subsequent adultery with another person. Once the court has found connivance it must investigate all the circumstances, including the lapse of time between the adulteries, and then decide whether or not the connivance has spent its force before the subsequent adultery has been committed (x).

Condonation.—Clause (b) of sub-section (1) in terms lays down the effect of the doctrine of condonation. It rules in substance that:

---

(t) Churchman v. Churchman (1945) 2 All E.R. 190, 194, (1945) P. 44; Mudge v. Mudge (1950) 1 All E.R. 607. Reference may be made to Richmond v. Richmond (1952) 1 All E.R. 838.

(u) Douglas v. Douglas (1950) 2 All E.R. 748; Mudge v. Mudge (1950) 1 All E.R. 607, (1950) P. 173. Rumbelow v. Rumbelow and Hadden (1965) All E.R. 767 [husband "wilfully blind" to wife's adultery].

(v) Manning v. Manning (1950) 1 All E.R. 602.

(w) Churchman v. Churchman (1945) 2 All E.R. 190, 195.

(x) Gorst v. Gorst (1951) 2 All E.R. 956, 957.

a petition for judicial separation on the ground of adultery specified in section 10(1) (f), or a petition for divorce on the ground that the other spouse is living in adultery specified in section 13(1) (i), or a petition founded on cruelty [section 10(1) (b)], shall be dismissed, unless the court is satisfied that the petitioner has not in any manner condoned the adultery or cruelty.

Adultery and cruelty are in terms stated in clause (b) of this section as condonable marital offences. Clause (b) is also explicit that condonation is an absolute bar to the granting of any relief in case of the offences under sections 10(1) (f), 13(1) (i) and 10(1) (b). The court has no discretion in the matter and if it is satisfied that the petitioner has in any manner condoned the act or acts of adultery or the cruelty complained, the petition must be dismissed.

The Act does not define 'condonation.' Nor has any compendious definition touching all its aspects been judicially given. The generally accepted meaning is that it is forgiveness and reinstatement with knowledge of all material facts. It is regarded as forgiveness express or implied for a breach of a matrimonial offence with the implied condition that the offence will not be repeated. In respect of its operation condonation is described as "blotting out of the offence" so as to restore the offending spouse to the same position which he or she occupied before the offence was committed. The phrase "blotting out of the offence" is not used in this context in its literal sense because an offence having been committed cannot actually be blotted out, and because it is recognised that condonation is always coupled with an implied condition of the offending spouse being in future of good behaviour. Where there is no breach of this implied condition and no fraud in the matter forgiveness stands as complete, absolute and irrevocable. Therefore, condonation consists of a factum of reinstatement and animus remittendi. It rests on the principle that in a case where status quo ante between the spouses has been restored, that which is forgiven must be regarded in the eye of the law as forgotten and obliterated; and since the result is obliteration of the condoned offence it cannot be used for any purpose whatever (unless subsequently revived) and the condoned spouse becomes rectus et integer. This is the foundation of the doctrine of condonation (z).

Condonation has been the subject of many decisions and dicta in the courts in England. It has been emphasised that there are two elements in condonation, the first being forgiveness, and the second being reinstatement. The implications of condonation were authoritatively stated by Lord Simon L.C. in Henderson v. Henderson (a): Condonation involves forgiveness confirmed or made effective by reinstatement. The essence of the matter is —taking the case where it is the wife who has been guilty of matrimonial offence—that the husband with knowledge of the wife's offence should confirm his forgiveness by reinstating her as his wife. Whether this further reinstatement goes to the length of connubial intercourse depends on circumstances, for there may be cases where it is enough to say that the wife has been received back into the position of wife in the home, though further intercourse has not taken place. It is clearly established that this forgiveness is conditional—conditional on the condoned spouse thereafter fulfilling in all respects the obligations of marriage—so that, if any matrimonial offence is afterwards committed by him or her—whether or not the same as that condoned and whether or not in itself giving ground for divorce or judicial separation—the condonation ceases to have effect. The offence condoned and all its consequences are for all purposes revived. It is this characteristic of revival of the condoned offence which invited the observation that the expression forgiveness is misleading as an interpretation of condonation since it is only conditional and that the real import of condonation is "a conditional waiver of the right of the injured spouse to take matrimonial proceedings" (b). It will be seen that no description of condonation would give its true and full import without stressing its essential characteristic of reinstatement which postulates an intention to forgive and remit the wrong.

---

(z) Chandrabhagabai v. Rajaram (1955) 57 Bom. L.R. 946, 949.

(a) (1944) A.C. 49; (1944) 1 All E.R. 44.

Reinstatement of the offending spouse is a prime requirement of the doctrine and mere forgiveness of the matrimonial offence is not sufficient though of course where there is satisfactory evidence of reinstatement after knowledge of the offence it may not be difficult to conclude that the offence was or must be deemed to have been forgiven. There is a distinction between forgiveness and condonation and the distinction lies in the fact that condonation implies a complete reconciliation in the sense of reinstating the offender to conjugal cohabitation or intercourse (c). Reconciliation is the test of condonation. Condonation need not be express; it may be implied from the conduct of the parties and circumstances of the case. Though not a matter of an agreement in the strict sense there must be an intention to forgive on the part of offended spouse and willingness to be forgiven by the other. It is not a unilateral matter.

"Forgiveness" must be understood not in any psychological or theological sense implying that no resentment at the wrong is any longer felt, but in the legal sense as implying merely that the legal remedy is waived (*c*1). Forgiveness must have the element of being mutual. There would be no condonation if the guilty spouse did not wish to be forgiven (*c*2).

Though there is a presumption against condonation which is an affirmative defence it is a defence favoured by the law.

Knowledge of the matrimonial offence.—Condonation to be effective and binding must rest on reinstatement and animus remittendi. The intention to forgive and subsequent reinstatement must be with knowledge of the material facts of the antecedent guilt. It is sometimes said that condonation can take place only when the offended spouse has full knowledge of all the circumstances of the particular offence forgiven (d). Mere suspicion of the offence

---

(b) Cramp v. Cramp and Freeman (1920) P. 158. Also see Perry v. Perry (1952) 1 All E.R. 1076, 1080, (1952) P. 203.

(c) Emmanual v. Mandakini ('46) A.N. 69, 71; Ste. Croix v. Ste. Croix (1917) 44 Cal. 1091, 1109.

(*c*1) Rayden on Divorce 10th Edition p. 284 note (a).

(*c*2) Ford v. Ford (1970) 3 All E.R. 188.

(d) Ste. Croix v. Ste. Croix (1917) 44 Cal. 1091; Emmanual v. Mandakini ('46) A.N. 69.

would not invite the operation of the doctrine (e). Belief in the fact that the offence had been committed followed by forgiveness and return to cohabitation may suffice even if there was not full knowledge of all the circumstances of the offence. But mere belief of itself does not constitute knowledge (f).

Continuance or resumption of sexual intercourse.—The fact that the husband cohabited with the wife for some months even after knowledge that she had had sexual intercourse with another person would be sufficient to constitute condonation (*f*1). It would be repugnant to decency and good sense to allow a husband to say that he had had sexual intercourse with his wife and yet did not forgive her because he did not intend to remit the wrong done to him; he would be thereby approbating and reprobating the marriage. In England the decision of the House of Lords in Henderson v. Henderson (g) is conclusive on this point and there is no reason why the same principle should not be applicable in cases arising under the present enactment. It was said by Lord Simon L.C. in that case that where sexual intercourse had taken place, "this will, subject to one exception, amount to clear proof that the husband has carried his forgiveness into effect." The sole exception is in the case of fraud. Sexual intercourse, therefore, constitutes reinstatement of the wife even though the husband intended it only as a means of bringing about a reconciliation which was not effected. The principle, however, has not been applied in the reverse case of condonation by the wife and it has been held that an act of sexual intercourse is not conclusive proof that she has condoned her husband's matrimonial offence and that it does not raise an irrebuttable presumption that cohabitation has been resumed (h). It may be asked why there should be this difference at a time when it is usually said that both the spouses should be placed on the same legal footing. The answers suggested are that circumstances may make it difficult for a wife to refuse sexual intercourse and her consent should not be regarded as an unequivocal act and secondly that the husband should not be allowed to say that it is not conclusive evidence because of the extreme prejudice which the wife may suffer if she has a child as a result of it. The principle stated in an old case (i) in the Ecclesiastical Courts in England by Lord Stowell may be found useful in cases arising under the present enactment: "The effect of cohabitation is justly held less stringent on the wife, she is more sub potestate, more inops consilli; she may entertain more hopes of recovery and reform of her husband." In the House of Lords case referred to above it was pointed out that the conclusion of condonation by an innocent wife of her husband's previous misconduct is not in all cases so strictly drawn from the fact of subsequent intercourse, for there may be instances where the innocent wife, owing to the difficulties of her situation, may have no means of immediately breaking off relations (j).

---

(e) For a useful discussion on the question of "knowledge" see Burch v. Burch (1958) 1 All E.R. 848.

(f) Burch v. Burch, supra.

(*f*1) Chandra Mohini v. Avinash ('67) A.S.C. 581.

(g) (1944) A.C. 49, (1944) 1 All E.R. 44; Maslin v. Maslin (1952) 1 All E.R. 477; Viney v. Viney (1951) 2 All E.R. 204, (1951) P. 457; Wells v. Wells (1954) 3 All E.R. 491.

(h) Mummery v. Mummery (1942) 1 All E.R. 553, (1942) P. 107.

(i) Beeby v. Beeby 1 Hag. Ecc. 793.

(j) Henderson v. Henderson, supra, at p. 45.

Forgiveness is conditional but condonation is not a contingent contract.—Language is to be met with in numerous decisions that forgiveness is conditional. The condition rather implied by law as the basis of it than expressed in so many words is said to be that the forgiven spouse will not in future commit any "matrimonial wrongdoing" or any "matrimonial misconduct" or any "matrimonial offence" or "a breach of the marriage vows." In an oft-quoted passage (k) the matter has been put thus: "The plain reason and the good sense of the implied condition is that 'you shall not only abstain from . . . (the offence in question), but shall in future treat me—in every respect treat me—with conjugal kindness'—on this condition I will overlook the past injuries you have done me." It would seem that the more illuminating statement is that of Lord Simon (l): "Conditional on the condoned spouse thereafter fulfilling in all respects the obligations of marriage." This has considerable bearing on the question of revival of the matrimonial offence. See "Revival of the matrimonial offence," post.

Condonation, however, is not a contract or a contingent contract. It is the overlooking of past wrongs accompanied by action on the part of the aggrieved spouse which shows that they are really forgiven, and the circumstance that the guilty party, before or at the time of condonation, makes promises as to future conduct cannot lead to the consequence that previous offences are no longer condoned, if and when the promises are afterwards repudiated. The result might be different if it could be shown that the husband's forgiveness and taking back of his wife was procured by the wife's deliberately misrepresenting her true state of mind (m).

Revival of matrimonial offence.—Reinstatement of the guilty spouse which postulates an intention to forgive and remit the wrong being conditional, the necessary legal implication is that if any matrimonial offence is afterwards committed the condonation ceases to have effect, or, as it is sometimes said, is cancelled and the offence condoned and all its consequences are for all purposes revived. The condition involved in reinstatement is not that the same matrimonial offence will not be committed in future but, as already pointed out, that the condoned spouse will in future fulfil in all respects the obligations of marriage (n). It is not necessary that the subsequent offence should be ejusdem generis as the original offence. The phrase "matrimonial offence" used in this context in relation to the future conduct of the condoned spouse is not to be understood as a statutory expression but merely as one used compendiously to include any violation of the obligations of marriage though mostly the future acts complained of are of the nature of adultery, cruelty or desertion. It is not necessary, therefore, that this subsequent matrimonial offence need be such as would of itself give adequate ground for divorce or judicial separation. Thus for instance where the condoned offence was adultery it will not be incumbent on the forgiving spouse to establish an act or acts of adultery but proof of gross misconduct falling short of adultery will suffice (o). And commission by the condoned spouse of a matrimonial offence less

---

(k) Durant v. Durant (1825) 1 Hag. Ecc. 733, 762.

(l) Henderson v. Henderson, supra.

(m) Henderson v. Henderson, supra.

(n) Henderson v. Henderson, supra; Premchand v. Bai Galal (1927) 29 Bom. L.R. 1336.

(o) Kemp v. Kemp (1953) 2 All E.R. 553; Moreno v. Moreno (1920) 47 Cal. 1068. Reference may also be made to Cundy v. Cundy (1956) 1 All E.R. 245.

than legal cruelty will be sufficient if the conduct complained of is such as, if persisted in, will make married life together impossible (p). And wilful neglect in providing reasonable maintenance for a wife can revive condoned cruelty (*p*1). Language is to be met with that even slight acts of matrimonial wrongdoing by the condoned spouse may be sufficient to revive the condoned offence and that the more serious the original offence the less grave need be the subsequent matters. These statements are, of course, unexceptionable but they must be understood in their proper context and as giving no more than a comparative idea of the matter. A good deal less may be sufficient but the matter must be approached with great care and caution. In case, for instance, of condoned cruelty of a serious nature, when the law speaks of condonation and revival, it means that the offence is condoned on the condition that there shall be in the future a proper compliance with the matrimonial decencies and duties, and a person who goes back to live with his or her spouse goes back on that implied condition alone. It can hardly be said that there should be a repetition of the whole course of ill treatment or that there should be even the same kind or degree of ill treatment. The homely metaphor that the camel needs protection from the last straw which is to break its back or even from the penultimate straw which threatens to do so has not remained judicially unnoticed and may perhaps serve to explain the principle. The test would be: Are the various acts of subsequent breaches of conjugal kindness such as to make life between husband and wife impossible or tend to make it impossible? If the marriage breaks down afresh by reason of the subsequent conduct of the guilty spouse without any fault of the other innocent party, the latter is entitled to rely on the original guilty act as a ground for relief.

The rule that condonation is conditional and that therefore if any matrimonial offence is committed after condonation there is a revival of that which was condoned does not mean that the condonation remains conditional for all time to come. It is true that the guilty party is, so to speak, taken back on probation. The probationary period does not, however, necessarily last for life, and a point may be reached, where, by his or her good behaviour, the guilty party may become worthy of the trust and confidence of the other. The further that past offences recede into the distance, so much the more does it become difficult to revive them, and the time may come when the proper inference is that the forgiveness is no longer conditional but has become absolute (q). Thus for instance if adultery has been condoned say for seven years a wife may not be entitled to say that it is revived because the husband has on one occasion slapped her face (r). Applying the same principle it was held that where certain incidents alleged to have taken place amounted to acts of cruelty but the parties had thereafter lived a normal married life for some years, a subsequent act alleged to amount to cruelty would not have the effect of reviving previous cruelty (s).

Condonation in case of offences other than adultery or cruelty.—It is true that there is no reference in clause (b) of sub-section (1) to condonation as

---

(p) Richardson v. Richardson (1949) 2 All E.R. 330 (C.A.); Thompson v. Thompson (1912) 39 Cal. 395.

(*p*1) Dunn v. Dunn (1962) 3 All E.R. 587.

(q) Beale v. Beale (1950) 2 All E.R. 539, 540.

(r) Richardson v. Richardson (1949) 2 All E.R. 330, 332.

(s) Beale v. Beale, supra.

regards a petition by the wife on the ground that her husband has been guilty of rape, sodomy or bestiality [Section 13(2)(ii)] but in those cases condonation may be made applicable by analogy (t). Even if no such analogy is permissible there would not be much difficulty because if a wife were to petition for divorce on any of these grounds after forgiving the guilty husband the factor of delay would mostly be present and disentitle her from getting relief. The doctrine of condonation, as already pointed out, is inappropriate and inapplicable to the offence of desertion (u).

Standard of proof.—This clause required that the court should be 'satisfied' that the petitioner has not condoned the act or acts complained of before relief can be given in cases covered by it. In England it has been held by the Houses of Lords in Blyth v. Blyth (*u*1) that it is not incumbent that condonation should be established beyond reasonable doubt and that so far as bars to divorce are concerned, like connivance or condonation, the petitioner need only show that on balance of probability he did not connive or condone. It is submitted that under the present section though the standard is the same for all matters there is nothing in the decisions of the Supreme Court relating to standard of proof in case of matrimonial offences which can be said to militate against acceptance of the above view in respect of bars like connivance or condonation.

Collusion.—Clause (c) of sub-section (1) lays down that the court shall pass a decree in any proceedings under the Act only if it is satisfied inter alia that the petition is not presented or prosecuted in collusion with the respondent. If the initiation of any proceeding under the Act be procured, or its conduct (especially if abstention from defence be a term) provided for by agreement between the parties, or their agents, that constitutes collusion (v). Collusion may consist in an understanding express or implied that the court shall be deceived by misrepresentation, exaggeration or suppression of facts. There must be present an element of corruption or perversion of justice.

It is the duty of the court to inquire, so far as it reasonably can, into the matter and satisfy itself that there is no collusion between the parties. If there is reason to suspect collusion between the parties the court will examine the matter with anxious care because collusive bargains affecting matrimonial causes tend to pervert the course of justice and seek to prevent the court from retaining control in such matters which it is its duty to exercise.

There is a presumption of innocence, which, however, may be counterbalanced by circumstances which lead to suspicions. In such a case the party who is seeking relief from the court must discharge the legal burden of negativing collusion and satisfy the court that there has been no collusion between the parties or their agents (w). As to standard of proof in the matter of collusion reference may be made to Notes under "Standard of Proof" in the matter of condonation supra.

---

(t) Perry v. Perry (1952) 1 All E.R. 1076, 1082, (1952) P. 203.

(u) See p. 715, supra.

(*u*1) (1966) 1 All E.R. 524.

(v) Churchward v. Churchward and Holliday (1895) P. 7; Ste. Croix v. Ste. Croix (1917) 44 Cal. 1091.

(w) Lowndes v. Lowndes (1950) 1 All E.R. 999, 1003, 1004, (1950) P. 223.

The parties, often quite reasonably, in anticipation of a divorce make arrangements in respect of such matters as joint property or household, the maintenance of the wife, the custody of the children and sometimes as to costs. Such arrangements are not collusive so long as they do not tend to pervert the course of justice. They often have to be made as a matter of necessity. They only amount to collusion if one party or the other uses them as a bribe—for instance, if a husband promises excessive maintenance as a bribe to pursuade his wife to bring divorce proceedings or, if he promises to let the wife have the custody of the children to induce her to abstain from defending herself. Parties may even compromise a claim for damages in divorce proceedings so long as the agreement does not tend to pervent the course of justice and it is brought to the notice of the court and sanctioned by the court. The reason why these matters have to be brought before the court is that the judge can inquire whether there is collusion or not. Unless sanctioned by the court such arrangements are invalid. It is, therefore, the duty of the parties and their professional advisers to bring such facts to the notice of the court (x).

Delay.—Clause (d) lays down unnecessary or improper delay in instituting proceeding as one of the absolute bars to the granting of any relief under the Act. The scheme and framework of the present Act on the question of discretion of the court in the matter of granting or withholding relief is, as already pointed out (y) different from that of other analogous legislations. Unreasonable delay in presenting or prosecuting a petition for divorce or judicial separation is not an absolute but a discretionary bar under English Law (Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, section 4) and the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, and it will be necessary to bear that in mind in determining cases which fall for consideration under the present clause when reference is made to decisions under such analogous law. An examination of cases decided under the English law and the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, under the head of discretion will show that they were founded on considerations which are not now particularly emphasized in England and it will be noticed that the more modern trend is to exercise a liberal discretion in many instances when formerly a decree would have been refused on the ground of unreasonable delay. An authoritative statement on the subject of discretion was given by Lord Simon L.C. in the leading case of Blunt v. Blunt (z) where the chief considerations which ought to weigh in helping the court to arrive at a just conclusion were indicated. It was also observed in that case that one consideration of a general character which must be regarded as of primary importance in the matter of the operation of discretionary bars was the interest of the community at large, to be judged by maintaining a true balance between respect for the binding sanctity of marriage and the social considerations which make it contrary to public policy to insist on the maintenance of a union which has utterly broken down. It was also observed that in recent years this consideration had operated to induce the court to exercise a favourable discretion in many instances where in an earlier time a decree would certainly have been refused. Applying the principles enunciated in the above case courts in (x) Teale v. Burt (1951) 2 All E.R. 433, 434, (1951) P. 438.

---

(y) P. 783, supra.

(z) (1943) A.C. 517; (1943) 2 All E.R. 76.

England have in the recent decisions condoned what was admittedly culpable delay and granted decrees for divorce (a).

The expression "unnecessary or improper delay" it is submitted connotes culpable delay. In England it has been held that the expression "unreasonable delay" used in the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, in section 4(2), proviso (i), envisages culpable delay (b). Though the court under the present section has no discretion in the matter and is bound to refuse relief where there is unnecessary or improper delay in instituting proceeding and is not empowered to condone the same it would seem that the absolute bar would be permitted to operate only in cases of culpable delay. Consideration of the application of the bar of delay may arise in a variety of cases and it would be impossible to expect rules which may be of assistance in all cases (*b*1). Nor does it seem possible to list cases in which delay would be regarded as falling short of the rule which bars relief where it is unnecessary or improper. Delay resulting from ignorance of law has under analogous law been sometimes accepted as not unreasonable. Delay caused by the petitioner's want of means and the poverty of the petitioner would not be regarded as unnecessary or improper delay (*b*2). Unwillingness to involve members of the petitioner's family in family difficulties; regard for their feelings (c); consideration of the honour and prestige of the family; fear of scandal and desire to avoid a final break-up if possible; reasonable hope of reconciliation are some of the factors which have been taken into consideration by courts when they are relied upon for the purpose of showing that delay was not unnecessary or improper. Patience and forbearance on the part of a spouse and particularly the wife and considerations of welfare and position and interest of children of the marriage may warrant putting off legal action for redress and the court would in any such case be extremely slow in holding that there was unnecessary or improper delay in instituting the proceeding. Absence of a showing of disadvantage to the respondent can also be a factor which may weigh with the court. It must be noted that cases determined on the footing that delay is not an absolute bar to relief in matrimonial causes but a matter of discretion with the court would not be of great assistance in applying the present section which lays down a definite rule and an absolute bar to the granting of any relief under the Act. Therefore, the question would not be whether discretion should or should not be exercised in favour of a petitioner where there is delay but whether there is satisfactory explanation for the delay.

Where the ground of the petition for judicial separation or divorce is adultery and there is an issue as to unnecessary or improper delay or where it appears to the Court that there has been undue delay in instituting the proceeding, there are two questions in such case which first require to be considered, namely, when did the petitioner first know or had reason to believe

---

(a) Purton v. Purton and George (1956) 3 All E.R. 952; Key v. Key (1956) 3 All E.R. 955.

(b) Key v. Key (1956) 3 All E.R. 955, 956.

(*b*1) Reference may be made to S. v. R. ('58) A. Delhi 79 where a delay of six years after the parties began to live separately was held satisfactorily explained. Also see Leela v. R. A. Singh ('63 A. Raj. 178; A. v. B. ('67) A. Punj. 152 (pre-Act marriages); Nirmoo v. Nikka Ram ('68) A. Delhi 260 (eleven years: pre Act marriage); Lalithamma v. Kannan ('66) A. Mys. 178 (pre-Act marriage).

(*b*2) Moreno v. Moreno (1920) 47 Cal. 1068; Key v. Key (1956) 3 All E.R. 955; Becker v. Becker (1966) All E.R. 894.

(c) For instance see S. v. R. ('68) A. Delhi 79; Jyotish Chandra v. Meera Guha ('70) A.C. 266 (avoidance of scandal).

that the respondent had committed adultery? and, when did the petitioner first take action in order to obtain the relief? A further question to be considered is whether there is some reasonable explanation for the delay and if there is some explanation which is satisfactory the delay cannot be said to be unnecessary or improper (*c*1). Inordinate and unexplained delay in applying for restitution of conjugal rights can result in dismissal of the application (*c*2).

The principle and the basis of the rule is that delay is a material factor because if unexplained it may lead to the inference that there was collusion between the parties, or acquiescence in the injury or indifference to the same or some wrong motive for seeking relief after slumbering over the matter in sufficient comfort for an inordinate period after the ground for relief had arisen. Whether the delay in instituting proceeding is unnecessary or improper would depend on the facts and circumstances of each case. There is no magic in any particular period. A petitioner may not readily be charged with improper or unnecessary delay where any element of the nature indicated above is shown to have existed.

At the same time the court will not permit itself to be used as a place to which a party to a marriage can come for redress whenever it suits him or her to do so, having in the meantime held the weapon of redress over the head of the other party to the marriage. Delay in such a case would be highly improper (d).

Delay and proceeding for nullity on ground of impotence. In England it is well-settled law that delay in bringing a suit for nullity on ground of impotence is not, apart from statutory provision to the contrary, in itself a bar, though it throws a special burden of proof upon the petitioner. Under the present section delay, if shown to the satisfaction of the court to be unnecessary or improper, in instituting any proceeding under the Act, which obviously included proceeding for nullity of marriage under section 12 (1) (a) would be a bar to the relief.

Cl. (e): . . . legal ground why relief should not be granted.—The legal grounds contemplated by this clause and which operate as bar to any relief under the Act are grounds stated in the various provisions of the Act itself. A ground for relief cannot be said to exist or to have been established if the requirements of the ground and the conditions relating to the same are not fulfilled and presumably the clause was inserted ex abundanti cautela. Thus for instance where in case of a ground for relief a period of time is prescribed in the Act within which a petition founded on such ground should be presented (e) the court has no power to entertain such petition after the expiry of that period. In such a case the court has no discretion in the matter and the petition must be dismissed. Similarly the court has no power to decree

---

(*c*1) Reference may be made to Thimmappa v. Thimmavva ('72) A. Mys. 234, 235, 236 where the court has expressed agreement with the above.

(*c*2) Shanti Devi v. Ramesh Chandra ('69) A.P. 27.

(d) Llewellyn v. Llewellyn (1955) 2 All E.R. 110. For an instance of "unnecessary or improper delay" see Teja Singh v. Sarjit Kaur ('62) A. Punj. 195.

(e) See section 12(2)(a)(i) and section 12(2)(b)(ii).

relief on any ground under the Act where any mandatory requirement of the Act which affects the ground itself is not satisfied.

Sub-section (2): Reconciliation.—This sub-section casts on the court the duty, in the first instance, in every matrimonial cause, where it may appear that there may be some chance of saving the marriage, to make every endeavour to bring about a reconciliation between the parties. Any attempt of this nature is always laudable and it is incumbent on the court to take such steps in the matter as may seem prudent having regard to the nature and circumstances of the case. Failure on the part of the trial court to make any such attempt would be a serious omission but it cannot affect the jurisdiction of the court or render the decree invalid. In the undermentioned cases the High Court remanded the matter on the ground that this sub-section had been overlooked by the trial court (*e*1).

It would be competent to and indeed desirable on the part of the appellate court as also the court hearing a second appeal, if reasonably possible, to make an endeavour to bring about a reconciliation between the parties (*e*2).

24. Where in any proceeding under this Act it appears to the court that either the wife or the husband, as the case may be, has no independent income sufficient for her or his support and the necessary expenses of the proceeding, it may, on the application of the wife or the husband, order the respondent to pay to the petitioner the expenses of the proceeding, and monthly during the proceeding such sum as, having regard to the petitioner's own income and the income of the respondent, it may seem to the court to be reasonable.

Maintenance pendente lite and expenses of proceedings.

Maintenance pendente lite.—The right of a wife for maintenance is an incident of the status or estate of matrimony. In general, therefore, the husband is bound to defray the wife's costs of any proceeding under the Act and to provide for her maintenance and support pending the disposal of such proceeding. The doctrine of alimony, which expression in its strict sense means allowance due to wife from husband on separation from certain causes, has its basis in social conditions in England under which a married woman was economically dependent and almost in a position of tutelage to the husband and was intended to secure justice to her while prosecuting or defending proceedings under matrimonial law. It is also recognised that when the wife has separate means sufficient for her defence and subsistence she should not be entitled to alimony nor costs during the proceeding; and if the husband has neither property nor earning capacity the court would not award any interim alimony. It is on these principles that the law relating to matrimonial causes provides for rules for payment of maintenance pendente lite and expenses of proceedings by the husband to the wife. This section adopts those principles and goes one radical step further when it lays down that any such order can be made not only in favour of the wife but also in favour of the husband (f). The expressions 'respondent' and 'petitioner' in the section obviously refer to the respondent and petitioner to the interlocutory application for alimony pendente lite and for provision for costs and not to the petitioner and respondent to the substantive petition. There is no scope for doubt that the application under the section can be made by a spouse who may be the petitioner or the respondent to the substantive proceeding for any of the reliefs under the Act. Nevertheless a contrary contention seems to have been raised in some cases and discountenanced (g).

---

(*e*1) Anupama v. Bhagaban ('72) A. Orissa 163; Raj Rani v. Harbans Singh ('72) A.P. 392.

(*e*2) Jivubai v. Ningappa ('63) A. Mys. 3. Also see Raj Rani v. Harbans Singh ('72) A.P. 392. Contra Trilok Singh v. Savitri Devi ('72) A.A. 52.

The amplest discretion is conferred on the court and an order for maintenance pendente lite and costs of the proceeding, as the initial words of the section clearly state, can be made in any proceeding under the Act (h). The section is explicit that the making of the order is a matter of discretion with the court and rules that the court may make the order in favour of the wife or the husband as the case may be, where it is shown that such spouse has no independent income sufficient for her or his support and the necessary expenses of the proceeding. The section also lays down that the amount of interim maintenance that one spouse may be ordered to pay to the other must be such as appears reasonable to the court in the exercise of that discretion and directs the court that in doing so it must have regard to the petitioner's own income and the income of the respondent. The court is empowered under this section to make an order which is to operate during the proceeding—pendente lite—and where the matter is carried in appeal only the appellate court would have power to make any interim order for maintenance pending the disposal of the appeal (i). The order granting alimony pendente lite under this section is appealable (section 28) but the appellate court as in case of any discretionary order would interfere only if the order is arbitrary or capricious or made in disregard of any sound principle.

Any decision under the present section on the subject of alimony must necessarily turn on the circumstances of each case and no fixed rules can be expected on the question. In case of ordinary or small incomes a rough working rule adopted by some courts in India under some analogous legislation is to assess the amount at one-third of the aggregate income of the husband and wife less the wife's income. It is submitted that in cases falling for determination under this section there can be no datum line but this rough working rule may be of some use in fixing the amount of interim maintenance in proceedings under the Act. In case of very large income the court would not have regard to any notional rule in exercising its discretion in the matter and the proportion may be less. It is essential to note that there can be no rigid rule in maintenance as to the proportion to be given and it would be an error to decide first what the proportion should be and then to examine the

---

(f) Reference may be made to the Notes at p. 803, infra.

(g) Kamala Sindhi v. Shama Sindhi (1958) 60 Bom. L.R. 633; Rameshwar Nath v. Kanta Devi ('57) A. Punj. 85; Nanjappa v. Vimal Devi ('57) A. Mys. 44. Gopendra Nath v. Prativa Rani ('62) A.C. 455, Rajkumari v. Trilok Singh ('59) A. All. 628; Baburao v. Sushila ('64) A.M.P. 73.

(h) As to the form and contents of any application under the section see the Rules framed by the various High Courts.

(i) In England it has been held that the Court of Appeal has no power to make an order for interim payment pending appeal but that is on a different ground; Cavendish-Bentinck v. Cavendish-Bentinck (1948) 2 All E.R. 265.

other relevant factors. The court will take all the circumstances of the case into account and arrive at a proper solution having particular regard to the factors which are mentioned in the section. Reference may be made to Notes under section 25 "Assessment of Quantum . . ." .

Denial of marriage.—The mere fact that the respondent denies the factum of marriage is no bar to the power of the court to make an order under this section. Of course, a good prima facie case about the marriage would have to be made out by the petitioner before any such order would be made by the court in case of any such contention being raised by the respondent (ii).

Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act, 1956.—Section 18 of the Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act lays down the rule relating to the personal legal obligation of a husband to maintain his wife. The mere fact that a wife has adopted proceedings under that section is no bar to her claiming any relief under this Act and also claiming interim maintenance under the present section. The very object and purpose of the present section is to provide immediate relief to her in any proceeding adopted by her under this Act (iii).

Matter ordinarily decided on affidavits.—Application for interim maintenance is as a general rule and practice disposed of on affidavits like other interim application in civil proceedings (*ii*2) unless the court finds that the matter cannot be so disposed of properly. Then only the court would proceed to record evidence before deciding the matter.

". . . in any proceeding under this Act."—An order for maintenance pendente lite and costs of the proceedings can, as the initial words of the section clearly state, be made in any proceeding under the Act, viz. for restitution of conjugal rights, judicial separation, divorce or nullity of a void or voidable marriage. When a fact of marriage is acknowledged or proved alimony follows subject of course to the discretion of the court in the matter having regard to the means of the parties and it would be no answer to the claim for maintenance pendente lite that the marriage was void ipso jure or was voidable. The court regards it as prudent to adhere to the principle that a marriage de facto carries the right to alimony pendente lite.

The subsequent dismissal of the substantive petition does not exonerate a party from the liability already incurred under an order made under this section (*i*1).

If the ground for interim maintenance is made out the court cannot impose any conditions on the spouse claiming such maintenance (*i*2).

When the substantive petition itself is dismissed there can be no question for making any order thereafter under this section (*ii*3).

---

(ii) Jain v. Jain ('68) A.C. 405.

(*ii*1) Simhachalam v. Papasmma ('73) A.A.P. 31 [claim made by wife in proceedings for restitution of conjugal rights by the husband].

(*ii*2) Vinay Kumar v. Purnima ('73) A. Raj. 32.

(*i*1) Muniratnam Naidu v. Shantamma ('71) A. Mys. 25.

(*i*2) Latika Ghosh v. Nirmal Kumar ('68) A.C. 68.

(*ii*3) Nirmala Devi v. Ram Dass ('73) A.P. & H. 48.

An order for maintenance pendente lite and costs would enure during the pendency of the suit and an independent application would be necessary to the appellate court if any such maintenance or costs are sought pending any appeal (*i*3).

Pending appeal.—The appellate court has jurisdiction and power to make an interim order in terms of this section (*i*4).

Assessment of quantum: "having regard to the petitioner's own income and the income of the respondent".—The section lays down that in arriving at the quantum of interim maintenance to be paid by one spouse to another the court must have regard to the petitioner's own income and the income of the respondent. The analogous provision in the Special Marriage Act, 1954, is similarly worded though under that enactment it is only the wife who is entitled to claim alimony pendente lite. Section 36 of the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, lays down that the amount to be paid to the wife pendente lite may be such as the court deems just and also provides that such alimony shall in no case exceed one-fifth of the husband's average net income for the three years preceding the date of the order. In England the powers of the court in the matter of making such orders have been from time to time extended by statute and the court is now empowered to make such interim orders for the payment of alimony as it "thinks fit" (j). Where the parties are unable to agree, the normal proportion of the amount of alimony allotted to the wife is one-fifth of the total income of the husband and wife less the wife's income. The more recent trend in England, however, is not to lay stress on any such rigid arithmetical rule but have regard to the disposable income of the husband and the income of the wife and assess the amount after taking into consideration all the facts and circumstances of the case including the conduct of the parties (k).

". . . has no independent income sufficient . . ."—An order for maintenance pendente lite or for costs of the proceedings is conditional on the circumstance that the wife or husband who makes a claim for the same has no independent income sufficient for her or his support or to meet the necessary expenses of the proceeding. It is also implicit in the section that the order would not be made if the respondent to the application is shown to have no property nor earning capacity, or is shown to have a very small income. But the fact that the respondent is not receiving any income from property for the time being would not be sufficient answer to the claim if the court is satisfied that the property owned by the respondent is substantial.

Discretion of the court.—The court exercises a wide discretion in the matter of granting alimony pendente lite but the discretion is judicial and not

---

(*i*3) Mukan Kanwar v. Ajit Chand ('61) A. Raj. 51; (1960) 10 Raj. 1500.

(*i*4) Annapurnamma v. Ramakrishna ('59) A.A.P. 49. Reference may also be made to Subba Rao v. Anasuyamma ('57) A.A.P. 170; Arya Kamar v. Ila ('68) A.C. 276.

(j) Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, Sections 19, 20 and 22.

(k) In Chichester v. Chichester (1936) 1 All E.R. 271, (1936) P. 129, the President Sir Boyd Merryman enunciated certain broad principles which though they relate mainly to the question of securing permanent maintenance are referred to in England as of considerable guidance on the question of alimony pendente lite. Reference may also be made to Griffith v. Griffith (1957) 1 All E.R. 494; Waller v. Waller (1956) 2 All E.R. 234, (1956) P. 309; Rose v. Rose (1950) 2 All E.R. 311; Mukan Kunwar v. Ajeetchand ('58) A. Raj. 322; 9 Raj. 483; Prasana Kumar v. Sureswari ('69) A. Orissa 12; Sushila Devi v. Dhani Ram ('65) A.H. Pra. 12.

arbitrary or capricious. It is to be guided on sound principles of matrimonial law and to be exercised within the ambit of the provisions of the section and having regard to the object of the Act. The fact that there is a plea to the jurisdiction of the court does not affect the power of the court to allot alimony pendente lite (l); nor does the plea affect the court's power to make an order for the necessary expenses of the proceeding under the section (m). As a general rule the court deems it prudent to adhere to the principle that a marriage de facto carries the right to alimony pendente lite and primarily has regard to the means of the parties. The court would not be in a position to judge of the merits of the rival contentions of the parties when deciding an application for interim alimony and would not allow its discretion to be fettered by the nature of the allegations made by them and would not examine the merits of the case. At the same time there is nothing in the section to prevent the court from taking into consideration the conduct of the parties. A comparison of the language of this section with that of section 25 which deals with permanent alimony and maintenance shows that under latter section the conduct of the parties is an important factor for consideration in awarding the same. The words "conduct of the parties" do not appear in the present section but the conduct of the parties would not be ignored by the court in making the order asked for or in assessing the amount of alimony. The matter is one for the court to deal with as it thinks just and reasonable in its unfettered discretion and the court has the power to make an order for alimony pendente lite for instance in favour of a respondent wife notwithstanding the wife's adultery. In considering an application for such an order the court would take into account all relevant circumstances, including the adultery, the conduct of the parties and any plea of conduct conducing or condonation (n). Cases are conceivable in which although the court has power to award alimony pendente lite, no order may be made. Thus, for instance, in case of a wife who has brought cohabitation to an end by admitted misconduct for which the husband is not to be blamed or in case where the conduct of the erring spouse is shown to have caused exceptional hardship to the other or where the erring spouse is shown to have been guilty of exceptional depravity the court may refuse to grant alimony pendente lite. The section confers on the court a general power to make orders for alimony pendente lite and the court would take into consideration the whole of the circumstances of the case although the prime consideration even in such cases would be the means of the parties.

In the exercise of its discretion under this section it is open to the court to grant interim maintenance from the date of demand for same by serving a notice on the other side after institution of the proceeding and not necessarily from the date of the application for the same (*n*1).

The court can in the exercise of its discretion vary an order for interim maintenance if there is such change in the circumstances of the parties justifying variation (*n*2).

---

(l) Ronalds v. Ronalds (1875) L.R. 3 P. & D. 259.
(m) Smith v. Smith (1923) P. 128.
(n) Waller v. Waller (1956) 2 All E.R. 234, (1956) P. 300; Welton v. Welton (1927) P. 162.
(*n*1) Sobhana Sen v. Amar Kanta Sen ('59) A.C. 455.
(*n*2) Devki v. Purshotam ('73) A. Raj. 2.

Costs.—It is sometimes expressed that a wife petitioner or respondent is entitled to have her costs secured. The old principle that the husband alone must foot the bill may now be said to have disappeared. The section in effect rules that the court can in the exercise of its discretion direct any party to the proceeding whether husband or wife and whether petitioner or respondent to the substantive proceeding to pay the applicant wife or husband the expenses of the proceeding pending the hearing of the proceeding if it appears to the court that such applicant has no independent income sufficient for her or his necessary expenses of the proceeding. The court has absolute discretion in the matter and each case would be determined on its own merits. Reference may be made to Notes under 'costs' at p. 776 supra.

Also see Notes under 'Discretion of the court' above.

Appeal: Section 28.—There is difference of opinion among the High Courts on the question whether an appeal lies against an order of the court of first instance on an application for maintenance pendente lite and expenses of proceedings started under the Act. Section 28 makes definite provision for appeal and lays down that "all decrees and orders made by the court in any proceedings under the Act. . . . may be appealed from under any law for the time being in force" and that "there shall be no appeal on the subject of costs only" and the difference of opinion has arisen from different interpretations given by the High Courts to the language of that section. See Notes under section 28 post.

Enforcement of Order: Stay of proceedings if necessary.—See Notes under section 21 ante "Inherent powers of Court: Stay of proceedings."

25. (1) Any court exercising jurisdiction under this Act may, at the time of passing any decree or at any time subsequent thereto, on application made to it for the purpose by either the wife or the husband, as the case may be, order that the respondent shall, while the applicant remains unmarried, pay to the applicant for her or his maintenance and support such gross sum or such monthly or periodical sum for a term not exceeding the life of the applicant as, having regard to the respondent's own income and other property, if any, the income and other property of the applicant and the conduct of the parties, it may seem to the court to be just, and any such payment may be secured, if necessary, by a charge on the immovable property of the respondent.

Permanent alimony and maintenance.

(2) If the court is satisfied that there is a change in the circumstances of either party at any time after it has made an order under sub-section (1), it may, at the instance of either party, vary, modify or rescind any such order in such manner as the court may deem just.

(3) If the court is satisfied that the party in whose favour an order has been made under this section has remarried or, if such party is the wife, that she has not remained chaste, or, if such party is the husband, that he has had sexual intercourse with any woman outside wedlock, it shall rescind the order.

Permanent alimony and maintenance.—The section, although it recognises the right of the wife and the husband to be in equali jura in the matter of maintenance when a decree is passed granting relief in any matrimonial cause, is primarily intended to secure maintenance and support for the wife in whose favour a decree is made granting any of the reliefs under the Act. In the majority of cases that come before the court the decree is for judicial separation or for divorce on the ground of the delinquency of the other spouse who is charged with having committed adultery or cruelty or with desertion. The obligation of the husband to provide for his wife's maintenance and support does not come to an end simply on the passing of a decree for any of the reliefs which the court is empowered to grant under the Act even when the decree is in favour of the husband. The court is empowered to direct that the amount to be paid by one spouse to another shall be in the form of a gross sum or in the form of monthly or other periodical payments. The duration of such payments is limited to the life of the applicant. The court is also empowered to vary, modify or rescind any such order in view of change in the circumstances of any party. The order would be rescinded upon proof of remarriage or unchastity of the party in whose favour it has been made.

The right to maintenance being a statutory right a party cannot contract herself or himself out of the same. Thus a wife cannot bind herself by agreement with her husband to forgo her right of applying to the court for maintenance in matrimonial proceedings between them (o). The principle will not, however, apply to an undertaking given by a party to the court not to ask for variation of an order for maintenance made by the court (p).

The section makes departure in certain respects from the analogous rules relating to payment of permanent alimony and maintenance enacted in the Special Marriage Act, 1954, and the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950. An order for maintenance can be made under the section not only in favour of the wife but may be made in favour of the husband by the court passing any decree for restitution of conjugal rights, judicial separation, divorce or nullity of void or voidable marriage. The rule is unique in the history of matrimonial legislation and did not find place in the draft Code submitted by the Hindu Law Committee. Under the Special Marriage Act and other analogous legislation the wife alone is entitled to ask for alimony pendente lite and permanent alimony or permanent maintenance. In England the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, makes one exception and lays down in sections 19 and 20 that on any petition for divorce or judicial separation the court may make orders for alimony pendente lite and for permanent alimony and maintenance in favour of the husband where a wife has filed a petition for divorce or judicial separation against the husband on the ground of his insanity. The Bill as originally presented did not contain any provision for granting alimony pendente lite or permanent alimony or maintenance to the husband. But as the Joint Committee observed the change was made to "secure that 'alimony' is payable in either case, that is to say, where the husband has no independent income but the wife is possessed of means, she shall be as much answerable for the payment of 'alimony' as the husband normally is." The juristic capacity of women emphasized in the Constitution has been equalized by the present enactment in matters of marriage and divorce and by the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, in matters of inheritance and succession with that of other citizens though the recent legislation has not eliminated some of their privileges. The present rule though it introduces an unusual and somewhat grotesque feature in this branch of the law, has the merit of enabling the court to grant effective relief in deserving cases, for instance that of a destitute husband against whom preceedings under the Act are adopted by the wife and decree is passed on the ground of his insanity or his being afflicted with leprosy or where for instance a wife who is possessed of substantial property has unreasonably deserted the husband who has no independent income.

---

(o) Hyman v. Hyman (1929) A.C. 601 [Deed of separation]. Reference may be made to Barucha v. Bharucha (1945) 47 Bom. L.R. 514 and cases there cited.

(p) Russell v. Russell (1956) 1 All E.R. 466, (1956) P. 283.

The section refers to the payments to be made under it by one spouse to another as maintenance and does not use the expression permanent alimony though that expression is used in the marginal note to the section. Permanent alimony is the expression used under English law in the context of provision ordered to be made by the court for a wife on her petition for judicial separation being granted. Behind the relevant statutory enactments in England is a historic development of law. Before the first Divorce Act in England a wife could only obtain from the Ecclesiastical Court divorce a mensa et thoro (judicial separation) and the allowance allotted to her was named permanent alimony which was as a general rule one-third of the husband's income. The operation of the rule was extended and the same principle was applied in cases decided under the successive Divorce Acts in England when relief by way of dissolution of marriage by divorce was granted to the wife. At one stage the view was taken that the wife who claimed maintenance after a decree of divorce in her favour would have pecuniary interest in seeking such relief and that would not accord with the policy of law. That view was discountenanced and it was ruled that the principles on which the Ecclesiastical Courts awarded permanent alimony in case of judicial separation should be applicable to cases where relief by way of divorce or nullity of marriage was granted although in cases under the latter category she ceased to be the wife or was declared not to have been the wife of the other party and relinquished her character as wife and the name of the husband. It will be noticed that the law enacted in the present section adopts those general principles of English law and makes them applicable to the case of either spouse. The basal thought is that a spouse who is compelled to seek relief by way of restitution of conjugal rights or judicial separation or dissolution of marriage by divorce (q) or secures annulment of it for no fault attributable to such spouse, should in the matter of maintenance and support be entitled to expect to be in the same position in which she or he would have been if the other spouse had properly discharged his or her marital obligations or had not disabled himself or herself from discharging the same (qq).

Discretion.—The section vests the court with wide discretion in the matter of making orders for maintenance and support of one spouse by the other where it passes any decree for restitution of conjugal rights, judicial separation, dissolution of marriage by divorce or annulment of the marriage on the ground that it was void or voidable. In the undermentioned case (*q*1) the view has been expressed that a second wife whose marriage with the respon-

---

(q) The order for maintenance can be made inter alia in a case where divorce is decreed on the ground of presumption of death under section 13(vii) if the respondent is subsequently found to be alive: Deacock v. Deacock (1958) 2 All E.R. 633.

(qq) Reference has been made to this passage in Dharamshi v. Bai Saker ('68) A. Guj. 150, 153.

(*q*1) Narayanaswami v. Padmanabhan ('66) A.M. 394. Contra Dayal Singh v. Bhajan Kaur ('73) A.P. & H. 44.

dent was a nullity on the ground that the husband had a wife living at the time of his marriage with her, is not entitled to alimony or maintenance under this section. It is submitted that the present section applies inter alia to a marriage which may be void under section 11 read with section 5(1) and the correctness of the above view must be doubted. The amount of permanent alimony or permanent maintenance to be granted and in some degree the question whether or not it should be allowed in any such case is a matter within the discretion of the court. That discretion, though of the amplest, has to be exercised judicially according to established principles of law and upon an equitable view of all the circumstances of the case having particular regard to the conduct of the parties and their property and income. Also see Notes under "Order can be made in favour of unsuccessful spouse" infra.

". . . court exercising jurisdiction under this Act".—An order for maintenance under the present section can be made only by the court to which the substantive petition for restitution of conjugal rights, or judicial separation or dissolution of marriage by divorce or annulment of the marriage on the ground that it was void or voidable had been presented under section 19 of the Act and which has heard the same. The application for maintenance may be incorporated in the substantive petition itself or may be in the form of a separate application but must be in conformity with the rules of pleading that may have been prescribed by the Rules made by the High Court in that behalf and contain all the particulars required by such Rules.

". . . at the time of passing any decree or at any time subsequent thereto . . ."—The application for maintenance may be made at the time of passing of the decree for restitution of conjugal rights or judicial separation, or dissolution of marriage by divorce or annulment of the marriage on the ground that it is void or voidable or even at any time subsequent thereto (*q*2) and there is no bar of limitation in the matter of presentation of such application. Nor would delay however great in presenting the application be any bar to the claim for maintenance. Section 23(1)(d) which in effect lays down that no relief will be granted under the Act where there has been unnecessary or improper delay in instituting the proceeding applies only to substantive proceedings for any of the reliefs mentioned above and not to an application for maintenance under this section which provides only for ancillary relief and is incidental to any such proceeding for substantive relief. Section 37 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954, contains provisions which are in pari materia. The position, however, under the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, which followed the English Law is materially different (r) and continues to be somewhat different under the English Matrimonial Act of 1950. Under the relevant provisions of the latter enactment and the Matrimonial Causes Rules, 1950, an application for permanent alimony may be made at any time after a decree for judicial separation or for restitution of conjugal rights, as the case may be, has been pronounced; but no application for maintenance in case of proceedings for divorce or nullity of marriage can be made later than two months after final decree except by leave of the court (s).

---

(*q*2) Dharamshi v. Bai Saker supra; Durga Das v. Tara Rani ('71) A.P. & H. 141; Nathulal v. Mana Devi ('71) A. Raj. 208.

(r) Section 37.

The words "at the time of passing any decree or any time subsequent thereto" indicate that an order for permanent alimony or maintenance in favour of the wife or the husband can only be made when a decree is passed granting any substantive relief under the Act and not where the main petition itself is dismissed (t) or withdrawn (*t*1). The rule postulates that if no request for alimony was made at the time of passing the decree an application for same may be made subsequently. It does not mean that where such application was rejected at the time of passing of the decree it could be renewed subsequently (*tt*1). The position would be different if the subsequent application can be made under sub-section (2). The rule laid down in the section relates only to ancillary relief which is incidental to the substantive relief that may be granted by the court although the incidental relief may be given to either party to the petition (*t*2) The expression "any decree" has been used having regard to the various kinds of decrees which may be passed under the provisions of the Act and includes a decree for restitution for conjugal rights (*t*3). A decree for restitution of conjugal rights against the petitioner is, therefore, no bar to his or her claim for alimony or compensation under this section if the case is otherwise a fit one for such relief (*t*3). In any such case it is not necessary that the party should file a separate suit for maintenance under the Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act, though of course, the court in passing any order under this section would bear in mind the provisions of that Act (*t*4).

". . . on application made to it by either the husband or the wife . . ."— An order for permanent alimony or maintenance under this section can be made not only in favour of the wife but may be made in favour of the husband by the court passing any decree for restitution of conjugal rights, judicial separation, divorce or nullity of void or voidable marriage (u); the application can be made by either party to the substantive petition whether petitioner or respondent to the substantive petition and not merely the petitioner to the same; and as already pointed out in the Notes under the preceding head an order for permanent alimony or maintenance in favour of the wife or the husband can only be made where a decree is passed granting substantive relief in any such proceeding and not where the main petition itself is dismissed because the section relates only to ancillary relief. A respondent to any such petition which is dismissed who wants this ancillary relief will have to adopt substantive proceedings for any relief under the Act and the question of maintenance can arise if such proceeding terminates successfully in his or her favour.

---

(s) See sections 19 to 22 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, and Rules 44 to 46 of the Matrimonial Causes Rules 1950.

(t) Devasakayam v. Devamony (1923) 46 Mad. 133. Minarani v. Dasarath ('63) A.C. 428; Akasam Chinna v. Parbati ('67) A. Orissa 163; Purushotam v. Devki ('73) A. Raj. 3.

(*t*1) Shantaram v. Hirabai ('62) A.B. 27; (1962) Bom. 125; 63 Bom. L.R. 76.

(*tt*1) Susheela v. Jagannadham ('64) A.A.P. 247.

(*t*2) The view expressed in this paragraph has been accepted by the High Court of Gujerat in Dharamshy v. Bai Saker supra and Harilal v. Lilavati ('61) A. Guj. 202, 206. Also see Shantaram v. Malti ('64) A.B. 83. Also see Sisir Kumar v. Sabita Rani ('72) A.C. 4.

(*t*3) Ram Piary v. Piara Lal ('70) A.P. & H. 341; Nathulal v. Mana Devi ('71) A. Raj. 208.

(*t*4) Seeta Ram v. Phooli ('72) A. Raj. 313.

(u) See p. 803, supra.

Order can be made in favour of unsuccessful spouse.—The language of the section is wide enough to empower the court to make an order of allotment of permanent alimony or for permanent maintenance in favour of the respondent against whom the decree has been passed and there is nothing to prevent the court from making any such order if in the exercise of the discretion vested in it the court deems it just to do so having regard to all the relevant facts and circumstances of the case including the conduct of the parties.

Discretion.—In England it has been held that an order for permanent alimony can be made by the Court in favour of a wife even if a decree for judicial separation has been passed against her on the ground of her adultery (v) or cruelty (w). The discretion has also been exercised by courts in England and permanent maintenance awarded to the respondent in cases where decree of nullity has been passed against her on the ground that she had a husband living at the time of marriage (x) and where the marriage has been annulled on the ground of wilful refusal on her part to consummate the marriage (y). It has there been held that in all cases under this head the court has an absolute discretion vested in it to be exercised according to the circumstances of each case. So in a case where the wife was found guilty of adultery and divorce was granted, the court, being satisfied that she was in delicate health and quite unable to support herself and earn her own living and that she was entirely without means and had no friends or relations who would support her, ordered the petitioner to secure to her the sum of £1 per week for life dum sole et casta vixerit although the petitioner's conduct had been unimpeachable and he had opposed the making of the order (z).

So wide is the discretion vested in the court under the present section in this behalf that an order under it may for instance be made in favour of a wife even if a decree for judicial separation has been passed against her on the ground of adultery or cruelty or desertion on her part. The discretion is judicial and would be exercised in favour of a spouse found guilty of matrimonial misconduct only where the court is satisfied that such an order should be made in the interest of justice. The same considerations would apply where the court passes a decree for any other relief under the Act and the respondent though shown to have been guilty of a matrimonial offence or to have been in the wrong can ask for an order for permanent maintenance even when dissolution of marriage by divorce or annulment of the marriage is decreed against the respondent (zz). There is, however, some conflict of decisions on the subject. In a case decided by the High Court of Kerala (*z*1) a finding of unchastity was recorded against the wife and decree for judicial separation was passed against her and it was held that no order for maintenance could be passed in her favour under sub-section (l) of this section because the court had no discretion whatever in the matter. In a

---

(v) Goodden v. Goodden (1891) P. 395; (1892) P. 1 (C.A.).

(w) Prichard v. Prichard (1864) 3 Sw. & Tr. 523; 10 L.T. 789.

(x) Ramsay v. Ramsay (1913) 108 L.T. 382.

(y) Dailey v. Dailey (1947) 1 All E.R. 847; (1927) 2 All. E. R. 269 (C.A.).

(z) Ashcroft v. Ashcroft and Roberts (1902) P. 270. Reference may be made to the observations on the exercise of discretion over maintenance in Clear v. Clear (1958) 2 All E.R. 353, 357, 358.

(zz) Dharamshi v. Bai Saker ('68) A. Guj. 150.

(*z*1) Raja Gopalan v. Rajamma ('67) A. Kerala 181.

case decided by the High Court of Jammu and Kashmir (*z*2) agreement was expressed with the above view. In the latter case the wife who claimed maintenance had been living in adultery and on the merits of the case the court would not in any case have exercised its discretion in her favour. In both these cases reliance was placed on the provision contained in sub-section (3) of this section. The High Court of Calcutta, on the other hand, has expressed the view that the matter is one of discretion with the court and that the court would not in the exercise of its discretion award any maintenance to the guilty wife unless there are very special circumstances (*z*3). In another decision, the same High Court, has expressed the view that in any such case the guilty wife would be entitled to a bare subsistence allowance and that she would lose that right when she was able to earn a living (*z*4). It is submitted that sub-section (3) should not be so read as to leave no discretion whatever in the court in the matter of awarding maintenance to an erring wife simply on the ground that she had been found to have committed adultery and relief had been granted to the husband on that very ground. The matter is one of discretion with the court under sub-section (1) and the discretion would be exercised only after taking into consideration all the aspects of the case including her conduct and maintenance would be awarded to her if so required by ends of justice. Being a matter of discretion there can be no hard and fast rule applicable to all cases. Sometimes the task is not easy but the court if it decides to award maintenance has to fix the amount as best as it can. There can be no set of fixed principles applicable to all cases of the nature that may fall for consideration under this head and the decision must rest on the facts of each case and the sense of propriety and moral justice of the court. The respondent would be in a strong position when the decree has gone against the respondent on the ground of insanity or the respondent's suffering from leprosy or on any ground where though relief is granted to the petitioner it cannot be said that the respondent was guilty of any matrimonial offence or any blameworthy conduct.

". . . while the applicant remains unmarried."—These words refer to the duration of the liability, that is to say, that the permanent alimony cannot be directed to be paid after the applicant remarries (*z*5).

Resumption of cohabitation.—Resumption of cohabitation by the parties in certain cases of orders for maintenance awarded under this section, as for instance, in a case of a decree for judicial separation, may have the effect of nullifying the order for maintenance. Whether there has been any such resumption would not depend so much on the duration of the period of such resumption but would depend on the animus of the parties and their attitude in coming together again (*z*6).

---

(*z*2) Sardari Lal v. Vishano ('70) A.J. & K. 150.

(*z*3) Sachindra Nath v. Banamala ('60) A.C. 575.

(*z*4) Amar Kanta v. Sovana Sen ('60) A.C. 438.

(*z*5) Seshadri v. Jayalakshmi ('63) A.M. 283; (1963) 1 Mad. L.J. 11; (1963) Mad. 384. Also see Minarani v. Dasarath ('63) A.C. 428.

(*z*6) Ansuya v. Rajaiah ('71) A.A.P. 296. Reference may be made to Haddon v. Haddon (1887) 18 Q.B. 778. Cf. Meenakshi Ammal v. P. S. Muthukrishna ('61) A.M. 380.

". . . gross sum or such monthly or periodical sum for a term not exceeding the life of the applicant".—The section empowers the court to award for the maintenance and support of the applicant a gross sum or to direct monthly or other periodical payments to be made by the respondent to the applicant. The matter is of the discretion of the court (a) and ordinarily the court as well as the parties prefer that the payments should be periodical and a gross sum is generally awarded when the parties are agreeable to any such arrangement. The periodical payments are to be for a term not exceeding the life of the applicant.

Assessment of quantum: having regard to the income and property of the respondent and the applicant and the conduct of the parties.—The section lays down that in arriving at the quantum of permanent alimony or permanent maintenance the court must have regard to the respondent's own income and property and the income and property of the applicant and the conduct of the parties and the amount may be such as seems to the court to be just. The section it will be noticed leaves the matter to the discretion of the court while stressing that the means of the parties and their conduct are factors which should always be regarded. It would not be helpful to refer to the immense range of decisions of courts in England on the subject or to the decisions of courts in India under the Indian Divorce Act of 1869 or other analogous legislation. Danger lies in phrases used aptly enough in a particular context and opinions useful in their own sphere being treated as riders to the actual statutory language but the principles on which those decisions rest can be of guidance in determining what factors may or may not be taken into account in assessing the amount of permanent maintenance to be awarded under the section.

In England it is not unusual to refer to and have regard to what is described as the basis of one-third of the total income of the husband and wife less the wife's income. The more recent trend, however, is not to lay stress on any such rigid arithmetical rule but have regard to the disposable income of the husband and the income of the wife and assess the amount after taking into consideration all the facts and circumstances of the case including the conduct of the parties. The 'one-third' rule had its origin in the practice of Ecclesiastical Courts in fixing permanent alimony while granting divorce a mensa at thoro (judicial separation) and in numerous instances the proportion was applied by court in assessing permanent maintenance to be awarded after a decree of divorce. The supposed arithmetical rule has been critically examined in recent decisions and one summation is (b): "Although the considerations which applied in the Ecclesiastical Courts to awards of alimony must have due weight in determining the proper award of maintenance to a wife after a decree of divorce, the assumption of a fixed arithmetical rule and an indispensable process of applying that rule is erroneous, and disregards the duty imposed by the section under which the ability of the husband and the conduct of the parties are to be considered to find out what is the reasonable amount."

---

(a) Reference may be made to Taylor v. Bleach (1915) 17 Bom. L.R. 56.

(b) Stibbe v. Stibbe (1931) P. 105, 110. Also see Gilbey v. Gilbey (1927) P. 197.

In view of the express provisions of this section it is not necessary for the court, while determining the amount of permanent alimony or permanent maintenance to a Hindu wife or husband, to look back to the history of English matrimonial law nor need the court concern itself with any difference or change of opinion expressed in particular cases in England. There is no reason for assumption of a fixed arithmetical rule even in case of allotment of permanent alimony where the decree is only for judicial separation. The mode of assessment of the amount of permanent alimony or permanent maintenance is entirely a matter of discretion of the court. A rough working rule may have some usefulness in application for maintenance pendente lite and it is submitted that even if any such working rule is evolved as of some guidance in case of such interim orders it is not necessary nor desirable that for assessment of permanent alimony or permanent maintenance there should be any notional or prima facie rule which has regard to arithmetical proportions. The question cannot be one of arithmetic and must remain entirely of discretion. It would be an error to decide first or even assume what prima facie the proportion should be and then to examine the other relevant factors. The court would take all the circumstances of the case into account and arrive at a solution having regard to the means of the parties and their conduct giving due weight to considerations of good sense and fairness. There can be no set of fixed principles applicable to all the varying types of cases which must fall for consideration under this section and the decision must rest on the facts of each case and the broader grounds emphasized in the section and ultimately the sense of propriety and justice of the court.

The section does not purport to lay down any rigid rule or indicate any yardstick for the purpose nor does it point to any fixed criterion and leaves the matter of assessment to the discretion of the court while stressing that the means of the parties and their conduct are essential factors to which regard must always be had. It has to consider all the pertinent circumstances involving each of the parties. The elements and factors to be considered include everything having legitimate bearing on present or prospective matters affecting lives of both the parties which can obviously not be susceptible of proper enumeration. In the exercise of its discretion the court has to select or emphasize such of the factors as are appropriate to the facts of the particular case—in addition to the prime factors which touch the means and conduct of the parties—such for instance as the status and station in life of the parties, duration of the marriage, support and education of children, the ability of the spouses to earn and their future prospects as also their age, health and sex and the reasonable wants of the applicant. In a leading case on the subject of maintenance the Privy Council pointed out, though in a somewhat different context, that maintenance depended upon a gathering together of all the facts of the situation, the amount of free estate, the past life of the parties, a survey of the condition and necessities and rights of the members of the family, the scale and mode of living and the age, habits and wants and class of life of the parties. It is out of a great category of circumstances, many of them small in themselves, that a reasonable induction is to be made by the court in arriving at a fixed sum (c).

---

(c) Ekradeshwari v. Homeshwar (1929) 56 I.A. 182, 8 Pat. 840, 116 I.C. 409, ('29) A.P.C. 128.

In estimating the amount of permanent alimony or permanent maintenance the court while dealing with the factor of income would not focus its attention only on the disposable income of a spouse in the year preceding the making of the order, but would normally have regard to the earnings in previous years and probable earnings in the future (d). A mode often adopted is to take into account the average of earnings during the previous three years. The disposable income would be arrived at after deducting the expenses of earning it. There are other deductions also which the court would take into account. They would include liabilities if any for income-tax, super-tax and other allied taxes (e). The support and education of the children of the marriage would be an important item to be taken into account under this head. The court would also have regard to the number of other persons entitled to maintenance from the respondent under the provisions of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. The mode of living of the parties in the matter of expenses while cohabitation or the marriage lasted may be considered but would not be a reliable index because the past mode of life of the parties may have been on a penurious or miserable scale or on the other hand on an extravagant scale. But if the scale was suited to the position and status of the parties that may be a factor to be considered in the estimate where there is no reliable data on the point of income. It would be necessary to consider the overall financial position of the spouses and their necessities having regard not merely to their income but their property, debts, liabilities (f) and obligations and other factors to some of which reference has already been made. A reasonable induction would require consideration of various elements and factors which cannot all be listed.

The section speaks of the income and other property of the respondent to the application for maintenance and the conduct of the parties and unlike sec. 19(2) of the English Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, does not in terms state the "ability of the husband" as a factor to be taken into consideration. But it would seem that the court would under the present section take that element also into consideration as for instance where it appears that the husband has so arranged his affairs as to show that he has no property at all or very little property and the court may in the particular circumstances of a case make a strict and stringent order against him (g). It would also be open to the court, where the circumstances of the particular case so require, to take into account the earning capacity of the husband as well as the wife (h). The court has ample discretion and in a deserving case may ascertain not only what moneys the husband had, but what money he could have had if he liked and take into consideration his capacity and ability to provide maintenance. The court will look at the realities and not permit itself to be misled by appearances.

---

(d) Sherwood v. Sherwood (1929) P. 120.

(e) Dayrell-steyning v. Dayrell-steyning (1922) P. 280, 282; Stibbe v. Stibbe (1931) P. 105, 109, 110; Sherwood v. Sherwoood (1928) P. 215. Reference may also be made to J. v. J. (1955) 2 All E.R. 617, (1955) P. 215.

(f) Ordinary premiums to be paid on life insurance policy taken out by the husband on his own life would not be treated as deductions but in respect of policies for other benefits such for instance as education of children reasonable amounts of premia would be taken into consideration.

(g) Donaldson v. Donaldson (1958) 2 All E.R. 660 affords an instance of this. Reference may also be made to J. v. J. (1955) 2 All E.R. 617, (1955) P. 215.

(h) Reference may be made to the observations in Griffith v. Griffith (1957) 1 All E.R. 494, 495, 496.

The mere circumstance that the wife had been living apart for a number of years and was able to earn a living is not sufficient ground for not making an order of maintenance under this section in her favour (*h*1). The court will not take into account the fact that the wife is sure to get assistance or even substantial assistance from her brother or other relation, for such help would from its very nature depend on the will of such other person (*h*2) and may not by itself be a ground for refusing alimony under this section and the court would take into consideration all the relevant factors including conduct of the parties and their means (*h*3).

"Conduct of the parties".—The means of the parties and their conduct are primary considerations to which the court is directed to address itself in assessing permanent alimony or permanent maintenance to be awarded under the section. Where a matter is contested and evidence led on the issue of maintenance at the hearing of the petition the court is in a better position to determine the same. Difficulty may arise when an application for maintenance is made after a decree has gone ex parte or where at the hearing of the petition the question of maintenance was not determined and in a subsequent application the respondent wants to rely on the conduct of the petitioner for the purpose of opposing the same because in such a case the issue as to the matrimonial offence charged and proved against the respondent would be res judicata. It has been held in England (i) that in such a case the husband is barred from asserting matters inconsistent with the decree. Further, he is, for reasons of public policy, prohibited from asserting matters (of which he knew) which would reasonably have been expected, if proved, to provide an effective answer to the petitioner or to produce a different result at the trial. This prohibition would probably not extend to matters of which he was ignorant at the time of the trial but which he might have known but for his own carelessness.

There are cases where the earlier conduct of the wife has contributed to the final break-up of the marriage although such conduct would provide no effective answer to the petition and would not amount to conduct conducing. It would not be just to put such conduct beyond the scope of inquiry. The rights of a wife who has always been selfish and unloving ought not to be identical with those of a wife who has always been loving and unselfish. Where the husband's income leaves available for an injured wife only enough to supply the bare necessities of life, the difference may be negligible, but where the husband's means enables the amount to be more generous the court would not allow a bad wife the same amount that it would have otherwise awarded. The court would not include in the consideration petty or irrelevant acts but would keep the matters in issue within reasonable limits. It would seem that the court can take into consideration relevant evidence of the conduct of the parties both before and after the marriage (j). Reference may also be made to Notes under "Discretion" supra.

---

(*h*1) Leela Devi v. Manoharlal ('59) A.M.P. 349.

(*h*2) Subramanyam v. Saraswathi ('64) A. Mys. 38.

(*h*3) Seshadri v. Jayalakshmi ('63) A.M. 283; (1963) 1 Mad. L.J. 11, (1963) Mad. 384.

(i) Duchesne v. Duchesne (1950) 2 All E.R. 784; Restall v. Restall (1930) P. 189. Reference may also be made to J. v. J. (1955) 2 All E.R. 617.

(j) Lindsay v. Lindsay (1934) P. 162, 166. Also see Nathulal v. Mana Devi ('71) A. Raj. 208, 211.

". . . may be secured, if necessary, by a charge . . ."—An order for permanent alimony or permanent maintenance made by the court does not of itself create any charge upon the property of the respondent whether joint or separate until it is fixed by a decree of the court or agreement of the parties. The right is liable to be defeated by a transfer of the respondent's property to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the claim for alimony or maintenance. Section 39 of the Transfer of Property Act deals with transfer of property in such cases. Where maintenance has been made a charge upon the immovable property of the respondent and the property is subsequently sold, the purchaser must hold it subject to the charge. The present section empowers the court to direct that the gross sum or periodical payment awarded by it for maintenance and support of the applicant shall be a charge on the immovable property of the respondent.

Agreement not to sue for maintenance.—On general principles no agreement between the parties can deprive the court of its right to grant maintenance or to renew the question of maintenance. The rules laid down in this section cannot be overriden by any such arrangement or agreement and the discretion of the court remains unfettered. The question of any such agreement inter partes was examined by the House of Lords in the undermentioned case (*j*1). It may be noticed that in England there is now some legislation on the subject (*j*2).

Sub-sec. (2): Variation of order.—This sub-section confers ample power on the court to vary, modify or discharge any order for permanent alimony or permanent maintenance that may have been made in any proceeding under the Act under the provisions contained in sub-section (1). In exercising the power the court would have regard to the 'change in the circumstances of the parties.' There must be some material alteration in the circumstances of the parties and the court would not modify an order simply because there has been some slight alteration in their circumstances. The section does not in terms so state but it would seem that 'conduct' which falls within the meaning of sub-section (1) and which has to be considered for the purpose of that sub-section may properly be taken into account when an application is made for variation or a rescission of the order (k).

Sub-sec. (3).—It is important to note that an order made by the court for permanent alimony or permanent maintenance is not to operate after remarriage of the party in whose favour the order is made. In such a case if an application is made to the court it is incumbent on the court to rescind the order on proof of such marriage. The court has a discretion, as already pointed out, to make an order for permanent alimony or permanent maintenance in favour of a spouse who had been guilty of a matrimonial offence, for instance, adultery. But the court is directed by this section to cancel any such order if it is satisfied that after the passing of the order the party in whose favour the order was made has not remained chaste and it is incumbent on the court to rescind the order on proof of the fact that such party has had sexual inter-

---

(*j*1) Hyman v. Hyman (1929) All E.R. 245 (H.L.).

(*j*2) See Wright v. Wright (1970) 3 All E.R. 209.

(k) Section 28(3) of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, is differently worded. Reference may be made to Hayfield v. Hayfield (1957) 1 All E.R. 598.

course with any person. This applies to both the spouses but an exception is made in case of a husband against whom a decree of divorce had been granted under section 13(2) on the ground that before the Act came into force he had another wife who was alive at the time of the presentation of the petition and an order for permanent maintenance had been passed in his favour under the present section. The operation of this sub-section will be invited in his case only if he has had sexual intercourse with any woman outside wedlock, that is with any woman other than that wife.

In case of payment of monthly or periodical sums the court can rescind the order only as regards future payments. As to on order directing payment of a gross sum it cannot be rescinded under this provision (*k*1).

Appeal.—The order awarding or refusing to award alimony and maintenance under this section is appealable (l). But the appeal being against an order made in exercise of the discretion of the court of first instance the matter is not open to review in the sense that the appeal court can be asked to reassess the evidence and substitute its discretion for that of the court which has passed the order. The position in this class of cases was clearly stated by Asquith L.J. in the undermentioned case (m): "We are here concerned with a judicial discretion, and it is of the essence of such a discretion that on the same evidence two different minds might reach widely different decisions. . . . It is only where the decision exceeds the generous ambit within which reasonable disagreement is possible, and is, in fact, plainly wrong, that an appellate body is entitled to interfere." An appeal also lies against any order (n) made under sub-sections (2) and (3).

Second Appeal.—What should be the quantum of permanent alimony is essentially a question of fact and no second appeal can lie unless it is shown that the court had misdirected itself or exercised its discretion on a wrong principle. Such, for instance, would be the case if it had failed to take into account any of the relevant factors set out in the section or taken into account extraneous or irrelevant factors (*n*1).

26. In any proceeding under this Act, the court may, from time to time, pass such interim orders and make such provisions in the decree as it may deem just and proper with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of minor children, consistently with their wishes, wherever possible, and may, after the decree, upon application by petition for the purpose, make from time to time, all such orders and provisions with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of such children as might have been made by such decree or interim orders in case the proceeding for obtaining such decree were still pending, Custody of children.

---

(*k*1) Nanigopal v. Renubala ('65) A. Orissa 154. Also see Blanche Somerset v. Bleach ('15) A.B. 50; Goodhall v. Goodhall ('38) A.A. 121.

(l) Section 28 post. Seshadri v. Jayalakshmi ('63) A.M. 283; (1963) 1 Mad. L.J. 11. (1963) Mad. 384.

(m) Bellenden v. Satterthwaite (1948) 1 All E.R. 343, 345; J. v. J. (1955) 2 All E.R. 617.

(n) Section 28 post.

(*n*1) Dharamshi v. Bai Saker ('68) A. Guj. 150; Umiyaben v. Ambalal ('66) A. Guj. 139.

and the court may also from time to time revoke, suspend or vary any such orders and provisions previously made.

The jurisdiction of the court to make provision for custody, maintenance and education of minor children under this section depends on the following requisites being fulfilled:

(i) The application must be made in any proceedings under the Act, and
(ii) it must relate to "minor children."

The orders contemplated by the section may be made, varied, suspended or revoked from time to time and even after the termination of the proceedings by passing of any decree as if the proceedings were still pending.

The primary and paramount consideration for the court in making any order under this section would be the welfare of the minor. In a petition by a wife in proceeding for judicial separation for custody of a male child below five years of age the court would bear in mind the provisions of section 6 of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956 (*n*2). Reference may be made to Notes under sections 6(a) and 13 of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956 post.

The term children in this section would seem to include not only legitimate children but those deemed to be legitimate by operation of section 16 in case of void and voidable marriages as also children the marriage of whose parents was the subject-matter of any proceedings under this Act. Although the word "children" in a statute prima facie means legitimate children that meaning is displaced in the context in which the word appears in this section and it embraces a wider category than that of legitimate children. In a case decided by the House of Lords (o) under section 26(1) of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1950, where the language used is somewhat similar, though not in pari materia, it was held that an order for custody of an illegitimate child of the parties born two years prior to their marriage could properly be made under that section. There seems no reason why an order with respect to the custody, maintenance and education of illegitimate minor children of the parties though not legitimated per subsequens matrimoniam in spite of subsequent marriage between them should not be made under the present section. The test of jurisdiction under the present section is the parenthood and not the legitimacy of the child. But the child with relation to whose custody, maintenance and education an order is made must be a child of the parties to the proceeding under this Act. The case of a child born during marriage, but not child of the husband, would not be covered by this section and it would seem the court would have no power to make an order for custody of such child under this section (p).

Adoption under Hindu law has the effect of transferring the adopted boy from his natural family into the adoptive family. A son adopted in accordance with that law prior to the commencement of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, would if a minor be a 'child' of the adoptive parents within the ambit of this section. So also would the section extend to the case of

---

(*n*2) Chander Prabha v. Prem Nath ('69) A. 429. Delhi 283.
(o) Galloway v. Galloway (1955) 3 All E.R.
(p) Reference may be made to Webb v. Webb (1952) 1 All E.R. 527.

a minor child, boy or girl, adopted after the commencement of that Act where the child had become the adopted child of both the parties between whom there was any subsequent proceeding under this Act.

In custody proceedings the court will take into consideration all the relevant evidence that may be adduced before it and will not exclude any fresh or additional evidence relevant to the matter under consideration simply on the ground that it did not form part of the material on which the issues in the proceedings were determined, for to do so would result in preventing the court from discharging its paramount duty in matters relating to the care and custody of the minor children, namely, to ascertain what directions would best serve the interest of the children themselves (q).

27. In any proceeding under this Act, the court may make such provisions in the decree as it deems just and proper with respect to any property presented, at or about the time of marriage, which may belong jointly to both the husband and the wife.

Disposal of property.

The rule laid down in this section is intended to prevent multiplicity of litigation in respect of certain property between parties to any proceeding under the Act by laying down in effect that an application with respect to any property presented at or about the time of marriage to both the husband and the wife may be made by either party to such proceeding and that the court may in the exercise of its discretion make provision for disposal of such property as it deems just and proper. The application must be made before the proceeding terminates and the order may be made at the time of passing of the decree or liberty may be reserved to the parties to apply for an order for disposal of such property in the proceeding on any subsequent date. The operation of the rule is confined only to property presented to the parties at or about the time of marriage and which belongs jointly to them (qq). Other disputes relating to any property between the parties must be the subject-matter of ordinary legal proceedings and cannot be entertained by the Matrimonial Court (District Court) constituted under the Act. In the undermentioned case the view, however, has been expressed that in proceedings under the Act the court has inherent power to pass an appropriate decree in regard to property which may belong solely to the husband or to the wife (*qq*1). In the absence of statutory authority the court trying matrimonial causes has no jurisdiction to deal with the property rights of the parties or to dispose of any property jointly owned by them.

28. All decrees and orders made by the court in any proceeding under this Act shall be enforced in like manner as the decrees and orders of the court made in the exercise of the original civil jurisdiction are enforced, and may be appealed from under any law for the time being in force:

Enforcement of, and appeal from, decrees and orders.

---

(q) Reference may be made to the general observations on the subject in Corbett v. Corbett (1953) 2 All E.R. 69, (1953) P. 205.

(qq) Reference may be made to Mahalaxmiamma v. Radhakrishna Rao ('68) A. Mys. 229.

(*qq*1) Kamta Prasad v. Om Wati ('72) A.A. 153 (wife's ornaments).

Provided that there shall be no appeal on the subject of costs only.

Enforcement of decrees and orders and appeals from decrees and orders.— This section refers to the mode or manner of executing decrees and orders passed by the court in any proceeding under this Act. It does not lay down any special rules for the purpose but states that such decrees and orders are to be executed in the like manner as the decrees and orders of a court exercising original civil jurisdiction which would be in accordance with the provisions relating to execution of decrees and orders contained in the Civil Procedure Code. This section also lays down that both decrees and orders made by the court in any proceeding under the Act may be appealed against in the like manner. There cannot, however, be an appeal only against any decree or order for costs in any proceeding or application under the Act. This section may be read with section 21.

Judgment in rem.—A judgment given by a competent court in exercise of matrimonial jurisdiction conferred under this Act and determining the status of the parties falls within the purview of section 41 of the Evidence Act and would be conclusive not only against the parties to the proceeding but against the whole world. It would operate as a judgment in rem (*q*1).

Question sometimes arises as to the effect of the death of a respondent pending an appeal filed in any such case. Reference may be made to the cases noted below (*q*2).

Appeal: "All decrees and orders . . ."—This section makes definite provision for appeals and confers a right of appeal against all decrees and orders passed by the court in any proceeding under the Act. There is nothing in the section to indicate a limitation that the right to appeal should be conferred by and exist under some other law for the time being in force like the Civil Procedure Code. As to decrees there can be little controversy but there has arisen a difference of opinion among various High Courts as to the appealability of orders made in pursuance of provisions contained in the Act, in respect of maintenance pendente lite, expenses of the proceeding started under the Act, permanent alimony, maintenance and custody of children.

One construction of the section which has found favour with the High Courts of Calcutta (r), Madras (*r*1), Gujerat (*r*2), Madhya Pradesh (*r*3), Allahabad (*r*4), Orissa (*r*5), Punjab (*r*6), Rajasthan (*rr*6) and Andhra Pradesh (*r*7) is that an appeal lies against all decrees and orders made by the court

---

(*q*1) Siddaiah v. Penchalamma ('63) A.A.P. 158; Suhas Pande v. Manohar Pande ('71) A.B. 183; Also see Sunanda v. V. Subba Rao ('57) A.A.P. 424.

(*q*2) Suhas Pande v. Manohar Pande ('71) A.B. 183; Sunanda v. V. Subba Rao ('57) A.A.P. 424.

(r) Sobhana Sen v. Amar Kanta Sen ('59) A.C. 455 (order under section 24). Contra Gopendra Nath v. Prativa Rani ('62) A.C. 455.

(*r*1) Seshadri v. Jayalakshmi ('63) A.M. 283 (order under s. 25).

(*r*2) Harilal v. Lilavati ('61) A. Guj. 202 (order under s. 25); Lallubhai v. Nirmalaben ('72) A. Guj. 174.

(*r*3) Rukhmanibai v. Kishanlal ('59) A.M.P. 187.

(*r*4) Sarla Devi v. Balwan Singh ('69) A.A. 601.

(*r*5) Snehalata v. Jagadish ('64) A. Orissa 122 (order under section 24).

(*r*6) Jairath v. Jairath ('67) A. Punj. 148 (order refusing stay); Sunder Singh v. Manna Sunder Singh ('62) A. Punj. 127; Tarlochan Singh v. Mohinder Kaur ('61) A. Punj. 508 [orders under s. 24)].

(*rr*6) Govind Ram v. Lila Devi ('69) A. Raj. 253 [orders under sections 24, 25 and 26].

(*r*7) Kutumba Rao v. Sesharatnammba ('67) A. A.P. 323 (F.B.) [section 24].

in any proceeding under the Act and that the words at the end "under any law for the time being in force" are only intended to provide for the forum where the appeal would be and such other matters as regards procedure for the hearing of appeals. The construction to the contrary accepted by the High Courts of Bombay (*r*8), Jammu and Kashmir (*r*9), Mysore (*r*10) and Himachal Pradesh (*r*11) is that the section does not say anything positive itself as regards appealability of decrees and orders but merely says that if an appeal lies against any decree or order made in any proceeding under this Act under some law that may be in force at the time (e.g. Civil Procedure Code), then only will an appeal lie and not otherwise. The High Court of Patna has left the question open (*r*12). The section is not happily worded. It is submitted that the former view is preferable.

It does not follow from the foregoing that every order that may be made by a court in any proceeding under the Act is appealable. The court may during pendency of a proceeding under the Act and at the hearing make many orders for which provision is made in the Civil Procedure Code. Orders which are not passed "under the Act" but are merely interlocutory or routine orders passed under the Civil Procedure Code do not become appealable under the present section (*r*13). The words "under any law for the time being in force" relate not only to the forum before which the appeal is to be preferred and the procedure in connection with such appeal but also the jurisdiction and power of the court in dealing with the appeal so filed. Thus a right of second appeal conferred by this section is limited to the grounds set out in section 100 of the Civil Procedure Code and the court will have jurisdiction only on questions of law and not on questions of fact (*r*14).

Letters Patent Appeal.—It has been held in the undermentioned cases that an appeal under the letters patent of the High Court is maintainable against an order of a single judge of the High Court passed in appeal against an order made on a petition under the Act. The extent and scope of the inquiry by the Appellate Bench in such letters patent appeal has also been considered in those cases (*r*15).

Forum of Appeal.—Where in a petition under the Act a decree is passed by court of the Civil Judge, Senior Division, which court was notified by the State Government under s. 3(b) as having jurisdiction in respect of matters dealt with in the Act, the appeal, according to the Bombay High Court, lies to the District Court and not to the High Court (*s*9). Similar in effect are decisions of the Madras (*s*10) and Mysore High Courts (*s*11). But where there is no such Notification specifying any other Civil Court as a District Court and the petition is decided by the Additional District Judge who is (*r*8) Prithvirajsinghji v. Shivprabhakumari ('60) A.B. 164 [section 24].

---

(*r*9) Mohan Rani v. Mohan Lal ('65) A. J. & K. 88.

(*r*10) Muniswamappa v. Eramma ('68) A. Mys. 8 [section 24].

(*r*11) Sushila Devi v. Dehani Ram ('65) A.H.P. 12 [section 24].

(*r*12) Bankim Chandra v. Anjali ('72) A.P. 80.

(*r*13) For instance see, Anita v. Birendra ('62) A.C. 88 (order for stay of proceedings) 65 C.W.N. 786. Also see f.n. (*r*9) above.

(*r*14) Umiyabhen v. Ambalal ('66) A. Guj. 139.

(*r*15) Dassi v. Dhani Ram ('69) A.P. & H. 25; Vira Reddi v. Kistamma ('69) A.M. 235.

(*s*9) Gangadhar v. Manjula ('60) A.B. 42; (1959) Bom. 1085.

(*s*10) Valliammal v. Priaswamy ('59) A.M. 510 (1959) 2 Mad. L.J. 152 (to that court to which appeal generally lies). Ammal v. Vanniar (1959) Mad. 969.

(*s*11) Mallappa v. Mallava ('60) A. Mys. 292; Dhulappa v. Krishnabai ('62) A. Mys. 172.

part and parcel of the District Court, the appeal lies to the High Court and not to the District Court (*s*12). In the Punjab, having regard to the provisions of the Punjab Courts Act, it has been held that in case of a petition decided by a Subordinate Judge, first class, empowered by Notification to entertain the same, the appeal lies to the High Court and not to the District Court (*s*13). A Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has held that an appeal from an order under section 24 by a Civil Judge, who is a District Court within the meaning of the Act, in a proceeding commenced on a petition under the Act which petition does not mention any value on the face of it lies to the High Court and not to the District Court (*s*14).

Interference by Appellate Court.—Where a case turns entirely on questions of fact and the credibility of witnesses a Court of Appeal will hesitate long before it disturbs the findings of a trial judge based on verbal testimony of conflicting witnesses whom he has seen and heard and a heavy burden is thrown upon the unsuccessful litigant who seeks to reverse the decision (*r*16). On the other hand where the findings as regards facts have been drawn from argumentative inferences from the testimony, oral and documentary, and depend upon the weight of evidence and the inherent probability of the story and not on credibility induced by witnesses by the demeanour or manner in which they answer questions, the trial court is in no better position than the court of appeal in discovering the truth (s). These general principles are well established. In a case decided under the Indian Divorce Act the Supreme Court observed (t): "if in giving the findings the courts ignore certain important pieces of evidence and other pieces of evidence which are equally important are shown to have been misread and misconstrued and this Court comes to the conclusion that on the evidence taken as a whole no tribunal could properly as a matter of legitimate inference arrive at the conclusion that it has, interference by this court will be called for." In respect of orders passed by the court of first instance in matters where it exercises discretion the Court of Appeal is very slow to interfere and is guided by somewhat different considerations. Reference may be made to Notes at p. 814 supra.

SAVINGS AND REPEALS

29. (1) A marriage solemnized between Hindus before the commencement of this Act, which is otherwise valid, shall not be deemed to be invalid or ever to have been invalid by reason only of the fact that the parties thereto belonged to the same gotra or pravara or belonged to different religions, castes (*t*1) or sub-divisions of the same caste.

Savings.

(2) Nothing contained in this Act shall be deemed to affect any right recognised by custom or conferred by any special enactment

---

(*s*12) Ambi Pundalik v. Pundalik ('60) A.B. 521; 61 Bom. L.R. 1167.

(*s*13) Kalyan Singh v. Tej Kaur ('61) A. Punj. 480; (1961) 1 Punj. 303.

(*s*14) Paras Ram v. Janki Bai ('61) A. All 395 (F.B.). As to appeal from a decision of the Small Causes Court Judge reference may be made to Dal Chand v. Swarn Pratap ('65) A.A. 46. Also see Shesh Narain v. Savitri ('67) A.A. 156.

(*r*16) Sitalakshmi v. Venkata Subrahmanian (1930) 32 Bom. L.R. 887 (P.C.).

(s) Virappa Chettiar v. Periakaruppan (1945) 47 Bom. L.R. 608 (P.C.). Also see Simpson v. Simpson (1951) 1 All E.R. 955 (C.A.) (1951) P. 320. Also see Radha Prasad v. Gajadhar Singh (1960) S.C. 115.

(t) White v. White (1958) S.C.J. 839.

(*t*1) Kastoori Devi v. Chiranji Lal ('60) A.A. 446.

to obtain the dissolution of a Hindu marriage, whether solemnized before or after the commencement of this Act.

(3) Nothing contained in this Act shall affect any proceeding under any law for the time being in force for declaring any marriage to be null and void or for annulling or dissolving any marriage or for judicial separation pending at the commencement of this Act, and any such proceeding may be continued and determined as if this Act had not been passed.

(4) Nothing contained in this Act shall be deemed to affect the provisions contained in the Special Marriage Act, 1954 (43 of 1954) with respect to marriages between Hindus solemnized under that Act, whether before or after the commencement of this Act.

Savings.—A saving clause is generally inserted where there is repeal of any statute and re-enactment of the law on the subject and also inserted at times when it is deemed necessary to except something from the operation of the Act which would otherwise have been included. Sometimes savings are inserted to prevent the effect of certain repeals wholly or in part. Savings are also inserted at times ex majore cautela (u).

Sub-sec. (1).—The validity of a Hindu marriage solemnized after the coming into operation of this Act is to be judged by the relevant provisions of the Act. The validity of a marriage solemnized between Hindus before this Act came into operation has to be judged by the law as it previously existed. The Hindu Marriage Disabilities Removal Act, 1946, laid down: "Notwithstanding any text, rule or interpretation of the Hindu Law or any custom or usage, a marriage between Hindus which is otherwise valid, shall not be invalid by reason only of the fact that the parties thereto (a) belong to the same gotra or pravara, or (b) belong to different sub-divisions of the same caste." The Hindu Marriages Validity Act, 1949, went a step further and laid down: "Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force or in any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or in any custom or usage, no marriage between Hindus shall be deemed to be invalid or ever to have been invalid by reason only of the fact that the parties thereto belonged to different religions, castes, sub-castes or sects." Both these enactments are repealed by section 30 and effect is given to the rules laid down in them by this Saving contained in sub-section (1). Any marriage solemnized between Hindus if otherwise valid is not to be invalid or deemed ever to have been invalid on any of the grounds mentioned in it.

Sub-sec. (2).—Divorce was not known to the general Hindu law but in certain communities divorce was recognised by custom and the courts upheld such custom when it was not opposed to public policy (v). The scheme and object of the present Act is not to override any such custom which recognised divorce and effect is given to the same by the Saving contained in this sub-section. It is not necessary for parties in any such case to go to court to obtain divorce on grounds recognised by custom.

---

(u) Smith v. R. (1898) A.C. 782; McLaughlin v. Westgarth (1906) 75 L.J. P.C. 117.

(v) See § 441 and Notes thereunder ante: P. L. Singh v. M. M. Singh ('56) A. Manipur 18. Reference may also be made to Madho Prasad v. Shakuntala ('72) A.A. 119. Also see Edamma v. Hussainappa ('65) A.A.P. 455.

Although divorce was not known to the general Hindu law, in many States, divorce was allowed on certain grounds as the result of special legislation on the subject. Some of those enactments permitting divorce were repealed by section 30 in view of the comprehensive nature of the present Act. Proceedings pending under any of those enactments at the commencement of this Act are expressly saved by sub-section (3).

There are, however, some special enactments permitting divorce on stated grounds which are not repealed by this Act and the object of the present sub-section is not to override them but to permit them to continue in force. Any right conferred by the provisions of any such unrepealed special enactment is saved by sub-section (2) and can be availed of by persons to whom they apply whether the marriage was solemnized before or after the commencement of this Act. A suit for divorce under any such unrepealed enactment would not come within the purview of the present Act and section 19 of the Act which deals with jurisdiction has no application to the same (w). Thus, for instance, the right to obtain dissolution of marriage on any of the grounds stated in Travancore Nayar Act (which has not been repealed) in the court of the Munsiff having jurisdiction under that Act remains unaffected by the present Act by reason of this sub-section. The sub-section, as pointed out by a Full Bench of the Kerala High Court, saves the right to obtain dissolution under the Nayar Act and everything necessary, substantial, remedial or procedural to obtain dissolution of marriage under that enactment (*w*1). Similar is the position under Madras Aliyasanthana Act 9 of 1949 (*w*2).

The saving of any right recognised by custom or conferred by any special enactment does not mean that the rights conferred by the present Act are unavailable to a party (*w*3).

In a proceeding adopted after the coming into operation of this Act, it would not be open to a party to rely on any ground for relief recognized under a repealed enactment and the matter would be governed by the provisions of this Act (x).

Sub-sec. (3).—Section 30 repealed a number of special enactments under which marriage could be annulled or divorce granted. Proceedings adopted by parties under any of those enactments and pending at the date of the commencement of the present Act are expressly saved by this sub-section. Such proceedings may be continued and determined as if this Act had not been passed. The Saving in this sub-section only applies to proceeding pending at the commencement of this Act and not to any proceeding adopted after this Act came into operation.

---

(w) Kamala Nair v. Narayana Nair ('58) A.B. 12; Vasappan v. Sarada ('58) A. Kerala 39.

(*w*1) Krishna Pillai v. Subhadra Amma ('71) A. Kerala 44 (F.B.).

(*w*2) Prema v. Ananda Shetty ('73) A.Mys. 69.

(*w*3) Chellappan Nair v. Madhavi Amma ('61) A. Kerala 311 (F.B.) (1961) 1 Ker. 33 (F.B.).

(x) Sitabai v. Ramchandra ('58) A.B. 116 (F.B.).

As to proceedings for restitution of conjugal rights pending at the commencement of this Act see Notes under section 9 ante.

Sub-sec. (4).—Section 4 of this Act has overriding effect and any statute in force immediately before the commencement of this Act ceases to have effect in so far as it is inconsistent with any of the provisions contained in this Act. In order to leave no scope for any doubt and out of abundant caution the Legislature has by the Saving contained in this sub-section expressly stated that the Special Marriage Act, 1954, continues to operate with respect to marriages between Hindus solemnized under that Act and nothing contained in this Act is to affect the provisions of that enactment. This sub-section does not, however, mean that the present Act would not apply in case one party to a marriage under this Act subsequently enters into a marriage with another person under the Special Marriage Act. The proviso to section 15 of the present Act would render any such subsequent marriage a nullity if it took place within the prohibited period of time prescribed by the proviso (*x*1).

30. [Repeals]. Repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1960 (58 of 1960), sec. 2 and First Schedule.

The section, prior to its amendment, was as follows:

The Hindu Marriage Disabilities Removal Act, 1946 (XXVIII of 1946), the Hindu Marriages Validity Act, 1949 (XXI of 1949), the Bombay Prevention of Hindu Bigamous Marriages Act, 1946 (Bombay Act XXV of 1946), the Bombay Hindu Divorce Act, 1947 (Bombay Act XXII of 1947), the Madras Hindu (Bigamy Prevention and Divorce) Act, 1949 (Madras Act VI of 1949), the Saurashtra Prevention of Hindu Bigamous Marriages Act, 1950 (Saurashtra Act V of 1950) and the Saurashtra Hindu Divorce Act, 1952 (Saurashtra Act XXX of 1952) are hereby repealed.

Enactments repealed.—This section enumerated certain enactments relating to the law of marriage and divorce which are now repealed. Although divorce was not known to the general Hindu law, in many States divorce was allowed on certain grounds as a result of special legislation and monogamy was enforced. In view of the comprehensive nature of the present Act some of those enactments were repealed as there was no necessity of having those enactments on the statute-book.

Speaking generally the effect of a repeal without saving would be to obliterate the repealed enactment from the statute-book as completely as if it had never been passed. Reference may be made to Notes under section 29 and section 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, which deals with effect of repeal (y). The repeal of section 30 has not made any change in the legal position as it abided under the repealed section.

---

(*x*1) Uma Charan v. Kajal ('71) A.C. 307. Ramchandra ('58) A.B. 116 (F.B.).
(y) Reference may also be made to Sitabai v.

THE HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

No. 30 of 1956

ARRANGEMENT OF SECTIONS

Chapter I—Preliminary

SECTIONS

1. Short title and extent.
2. Application of Act.
3. Definitions and Interpretation.
4. Over-riding effect of Act.

Chapter II—Intestate Succession

5. Act not to apply to certain properties.
6. Devolution of interest in coparcenary property.
7. Devolution of interest in the property of a tarward, tavazhi, kutumba, kavaru, or illom.
8. General rules of succession in the case of males.
9. Order of succession among heirs in the Schedule.
10. Distribution of property among heirs in Class I of the Schedule.
11. Distribution of property among heirs in Class II of the Schedule.
12. Order of succession among agnates and cognates.
13. Computation of degrees.
14. Property of a female Hindu to be her absolute property.
15. General rules of succession in the case of female Hindus.

SECTIONS

16. Order of succession and manner of distribution among heirs of a female Hindu.
17. Special provisions respecting persons governed by marumakkattayam and aliyasantana laws.

General Provisions relating to Succession

18. Full-blood preferred to half-blood.
19. Mode of succession of two or more heirs.
20. Right of child in womb.
21. Presumption in cases of simultaneous deaths.
22. Preferential right to acquire property in certain cases.
23. Special provisions respecting dwelling-houses.
24. Certain widows re-marrying may not inherit as widows.
25. Murderer disqualified.
26. Convert's descendants disqualified.
27. Succession when heirs disqualified.
28. Disease, defect, etc. not to disqualify.

Escheat

29. Failure of heirs.

Chapter III—Testamentary Succession

30. Testamentary succession.

Chapter IV—Repeals

31. Repeals.

THE SCHEDULE

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

The law of inheritance comprises rules which govern devolution of property on the death of a person upon other persons solely on account of their relationship to the former. In Hindu law the joint family system comes first in historical order. The law of inheritance was of later growth and, in general, applied only to property held in absolute severalty as distinguished from property held by the joint family. The joint and undivided Hindu family is the normal condition of Hindu society and the fundamental conception of the Hindu joint family is a common male ancestor with his lineal descendants in the male line, and so long as that family is in its normal condition, that is, its undivided state, if forms a corporate unit, though not a juridical person. The joint family traces its origin to the ancient patriarchal system and the transition from that system to the joint family was a natural and logical development. In the joint family also the paterfamilias was the unquestioned ruler and the authority of the father of the family and some of his exclusive privileges are even now traceable in the rights of the father as the Karta of the joint family, though the principle of patria potestas has long ceased to be recognised. The earlier concept of the joint family was somewhat analogous to that of a corporate body and the tendency was to sink the individual in the family. Social conditions, however, underwent considerable transformation and there grew up a body of rules of inheritance under the title dayavibhaga which as explained by Vijnaneshwara means division of property which becomes the property of another solely by reason of his relation to the owner. Even under early Hindu law rights of sons (as junior members of the family) were recognised and they acquired equal interest with the father in the ancestral property as coparceners. Partition was an inevitable corollary of this system of coparcenary. And even in case of such a corporate unit self-acquisitions though at first viewed askance had to be recognised and rules of inheritance had to be laid down.

The law of heirship had close connection with the doctrine—"He who inherits the property, also offers the pinda" (a). It was based upon the principle of consanguinity and the theory of spiritual benefit was a later development. In most cases spiritual efficacy, propinquity and natural love and affection ran in the same lines. But difficulties arose when these ran in diverse lines and schemes of inheritance with some radical differences came into existence in different parts of the country. The difference in the law of inheritance between the two systems of Mitakshara and Dayabhaga, the existence of a number of schools of Hindu law, the matriarchal system prevailing in some southern parts of the country and dissimilar local and family customs obviously could not embrace a whole genus of cases and it was not possible to expect a system which was a homogeneous and consecutive whole. Besides a number of anomalies and some inequitable rules of succession had come into existence due to historical reasons and in some cases to the conservatism of judicial interpreters. Moreover conflicting pronouncements of courts based at times on variant readings of the ancient texts had resulted in congeries of decisions, in case of some of which it was difficult to extract the ratio decidendi and not possible to harmonise them with the rest.

---

(a) Vishnu XI, 40: Yascharthaharah sa pinda-dayi.

In this connection it may also be mentioned that Stridhan had become by far the most complicated and difficult branch of the law of succession. The difficulty of the subject may be gauged from what Jimuta Vahana stated in the Dayabhaga after finishing his discourse on Stridhan. "Thus has been explained the most difficult subject of succession to a childless woman." It must have been seen from the foregoing chapters relating to Succession and Stridhan that women occupied a very dependent position in the family and her rights to hold and dispose of property were generally speaking limited. The partial recognition only of the status of women in matters of property was no doubt understandable under ancient and medieval conditions. But their status had to be fully recognised in modern times of social emancipation and equality.

The principal reform that was called for and one which became a pressing necessity in view of changed social and economic conditions was that in succession there should be equable distribution between male and female heirs and the Hindu Women's limited estate should be enlarged into full ownership. The Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, XVII of 1937, which introduced important changes in the law of succession by conferring new rights of succession on certain females although it gave better rights to women in respect of property, was found to be incoherent and defective in many respects and gave rise to a number of anomalies. Fragmentary legislation in the form of a number of un-co-ordinated rules did not prove a satisfactory remedy and the mass of floating case-law that grew up was somewhat bewildering and there seemed to be no end to the number of conundrums suggested.

The spacious and complicated structure that was Hindu law in the main remained undigested except by authors. Good exposition of law made by them and good judicial law made by able jurisconsults could not obviously bring the law precisely on a level with the codification of it by the authority of the supreme legislature. It had been generally recognised for a long time that the rules of inheritance should be turned into a body of law, compact in form and easily accessible. A uniform and comprehensive system of inheritance recognising equable distribution between male and female heirs and contained in a series of coherent propositions carefully considered and authoritatively stated was, therefore, a long-felt desideratum.

The Hindu Succession Act came into force on 17th June 1956. It amends and codifies the law relating to intestate succession among Hindus and brings about some fundamental and radical changes in the law of succession. Even if it seems to break violently with the past it has to be conceded that it is characteristic of the age which is one of great ideals and fast changing social, economic and political theories. Hindu law was at no time in its long history static, but was empiric and progressive. It was only after the reduction of India by the British and because of their policy of non-interference in matters of personal law that it ceased to grow with the times. Its principal characteristics of elasticity and assimilation were ignored and the degree of rigidity that was given to it was such that legislation alone could cope with the felt necessities of the times.

Uniform law of succession: Wide application of the Act.

The Act lays down a uniform and comprehensive system of inheritance and applies inter alia to persons governed by the Mitakshara and Dayabhaga School as also to those in certain parts of Southern India who were previously governed by the Marumakkattayam, Aliyasantana and Nambudri systems of Hindu law. The Act applies to any person who is a Hindu by religion in any of its forms and developments including those who have deviated from orthodox standards of Hinduism in matters of ceremonial observances. Buddhists, Jains and Sikhs are also within its ambit. So also are converts or reconverts to any of the four religions—Hinduism, Buddhism, Jainism and Sikhism. A person, therefore, though not strictly a Hindu by religion, is included in the wide connotation given to the expression Hindu (section 2). It is not a mere laconism to observe that it is easier to say who are not Hindus or that the practical separation of Hindus from non-Hindus in the matter of applicability of the Act is not a matter of much difficulty. Clause (c) of sub-section (1) of that section adopts the negative form and in effect lays down that it is to be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that any person who is not a Muslim, Christian, Parsi or Jew by religion is governed by this Act. The purpose of this evidently is to avoid as far as possible detailed and at times complex inquiries into the matter.

Over-riding effect of the Act.

Section 4 of the Act is of vital importance and gives over-riding effect to the provisions of the Act. It abrogates all the rules of the law of succession hitherto applicable to Hindus, whether by virtue of any text or rule of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law, in respect of all matters dealt with in the Act. The Act also supersedes any other law, contained in any Central or State Legislation in force immediately before it came into operation in so far as such legislation is inconsistent with the provisions contained in the Act.

Scheme of the Act.

The scheme of the Act in the matter of succession to the property of a Hindu dying intestate (after the coming into force of the Act) is to lay down a set of general rules for succession to the property of a male Hindu in sections 8 to 13 including rules relating to ascertainment of the shares and portions of the various heirs which may be described as the Statute of Distribution. It is part of this scheme to enact in sections 15 and 16 separate general rules affecting succession to the property of a female intestate. Section 17 provides for certain modifications and changes in the general scheme of succession to the property of male and female Hindus in relation to persons hitherto governed by the Malabar and Aliyasantana law. The existence of a system founded on matriarchy in certain parts of Southern India in contradistinction to that in the rest of the country which is patriarchal having the common ancestor as the founder of the family and in which relationship is primarily by agnation, has been well established and judicially recognised for a long time. Recently there had found place on the statute-book a number of enactments regulating succession to the property of persons governed by the Marumakkattayam, Aliyasantana and Nambudri Laws (d). Reference to the rules enacted in section 17 of this Act will show that the Legislature while aiming at a uniform code has taken care to provide for suitable modifications having regard to the law of those who favoured the matriarchate. Sections 18 to 28 of the Act are headed "General provisions relating to succession" and lay down rules which are supplementary to the provisions in sections 5 to 17. The rules laid down in those sections are not merely explanatory of the general rules for succession. Some of them enact substantive provisions involving legal principles.

Succession to property of a male intestate.

The two systems of inheritance to the separate or self-acquired property of a male intestate which have hitherto prevailed under the Mitakshara and Dayabhaga Schools are abolished and a uniform system comes into operation as propounded in sec. 8. The three classes of heirs recognised by the Mitakshara, viz Gotraja Sapindas, Samanodakas and Bandhus and the three classes of heirs recognised by the Dayabhaga, viz. Sapindas, Sakulyas and Bandhus cease to exist in case of devolution taking place after the coming into force of the Act. The heirs are divided, instead, into four classes or categories. These are (i) heirs in Class I of the Schedule, (ii) heirs in Class II of the Schedule, (iii) agnates and (iv) cognates. The property devolves firstly upon the twelve preferential heirs mentioned in Class I of the Schedule to the Act and failing such heirs upon the second, third and fourth class of heirs in that order as regulated by sections 8 and 9. Before 1937, the "simultaneous heirs" of a male Hindu dying intestate comprised only the son, the son of a predeceased son and the son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son. The Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, added to the list the widows of the first two as well as the intestate's own widow. The outstanding feature of the new scheme of what may for convenience be described as the 'simultaneous heirs' or 'preferential heirs' is that the property devolves in equal shares among the son, daughter, widow and mother of the deceased. Eight other heirs come into this scheme of simultaneous succession by virtue of the doctrine of representation as applied to the case of predeceased son and predeceased daughter. The distribution of property among these preferential heirs is to be in accordance with the four rules laid down is sec. 10. It will be noticed that male and female heirs are treated as equal and without distinction. In Class II of the Schedule are specified heirs who are entitled to succeed in the order of Entries in which certain persons have been grouped together for simultaneous succession like father, brother and sister, and so on. They succeed in case of failure of any of the twelve heirs in Class I. They are also close relations of the male Hindu selected on the principle of natural love and justice. They are the intestate's father; great grandchildren both males and females (except the son's son's son who is an heir in Class I); brother; sister; sons and daughters of brother and sister; father's father and father's mother; step-mother and brother's widow; father's brother and sister; mother's father and mother's mother; and mother's brother and sister. These heirs in Class II do not all succeed simultaneously but in order of the nine Entries in whieh they are grouped. It will be noticed that some close relations of the mother are included among the heirs in this scheme of succession and given preference over the other relations who can succeed only as agnates or cognates. The distribution of property among the heirs specified in Class II of the Schedule, who are entitled to succeed in order of the Entries in which they are placed, is to be in accordance with the rule laid down in section 11. The rules of preference determinative of the order of succession and those relating to the mode or method of reckoning degrees of ascent and descent according to which priority among agnates and cognates is regulated, are stated in sections 12 and 13.

Four categories of heirs.

(d) A number of these are stated in the definitions given in Section 3.

Property of a female Hindu to bo her absolute property.

The Hindu women's limited estate in abolished and any property possessed by a female Hindu howsoever acquired is now held by her as her absolute property and she has full power to deal with it or dispose of it by will as she likes. The restraints and limitations on her power cease to exist even in respect of existing property possessed by a female Hindu at the date of the Act coming into force whether acquired by her before or after the commencement of the Act. It is now held by her as full owner and not as limited owner (s. 14).

Succession to property of a female intestate.

Under the previous law succession to Stridhan—woman's property—varied according as a woman was married or unmarried and according to the form of her marriage. It also varied according to the source of the Stridhan. The rules of descent of the different schools also varied. The Act abolishes all this and propounds in section 15 a definite and uniform scheme of succession to the property of a female Hindu who dies intestate after the commencement of the Act. That section groups heirs of a female intestate into five categories described as entries (a) to (e). Sons, daughters, children of any predeceased son or predeceased daughter and the husband are her heirs specified in entry (a). They take simultaneously and to the exclusion of those specified in the subsequent entries. Failing all heirs of the intestate female specified in entry (a), but not until then, her property devolves upon the heirs of her husband as laid down in entry (b). Heirs in entry (b) are preferred to those listed in entry (c) who are the mother and father of the intestate. On failure of the mother or father the property devolves upon the heirs of the father [entry (d)] and in case of failure of all the heirs in entries (a) to (d) the property devolves upon the heirs of the mother. This is not, however, a complete statement of the law since there are two important exceptions engrafted upon the general order of succession enacted in the five entries. The exceptions relate to property inherited by the female from her mother or father and property inherited by her from her husband or father-in-law. In case of a female intestate dying without issue property inherited by her from her father or mother will revert to the heirs of the father in existence at the time of her death and not upon the husband or the heirs of the husband in accordance with the general order of succession laid down in the entries. Similarly in case of a female intestate dying without issue property inherited by her from her husband or father-in-law (as widow of a predeceased son) will revert to the heirs of the husband in existence at the time of her death and not upon the heirs of the father or mother in accordance with the general order of succession laid down in the entries. No question of the application of either exception can arise where the female intestate dies leaving a son, daughter or a child male or female of any predeceased son or daughter. In such a case, that is when she dies leaving any issue, all her property howsoever acquired devolves upon such issue regardless of the source of acquisition of the property and such issue takes the property simultaneously; and if the husband of the intestate is alive takes simultaneously with him. The rules relating to the mode or manner of computation of shares of the various heirs are stated in section 16.

The Act, although it deals with succession, has a bearing on other branches of Hindu law such as joint family, adoption, etc., and lays down rules of far-reaching consequences. It prescribes that where a coparcener dies intestate the Mitakshara coparcenery does not necessarily become disrupted. According to the true notion of an undivided family governed by the Mitakshara law, no individual member of the coparcenery, whilst the family remains joint and undivided, can predicate, of the joint family property, that he has a definite share in the same. His interest is a fluctuating interest, capable of being enlarged by deaths in the family and liable to be diminished by births in the family. It is only on a partition that he becomes entitled to a definite share. Section 6 of the Act, although it does not interfere with the special rights of those who are members of a Mitakshara coparcenery, recognises, without abolishing joint family property, the right, upon the death of a coparcener, of certain of his preferential heirs to claim an interest in the property that would have been allotted to such coparcener if a partition of the joint family property had in fact taken place immediately before his death. Such preferential heirs, to mention some, are the daughter, the predeceased daughter's son and the predeceased son's daughter. There can be little doubt that radical reform was required in the Mitakshara law of coparcenery and that where one of the coparceners dies there should be equable distribution of his property not only in respect of his separate or self-acquired property but also of his undivided interest in the coparcenery property among his male and female heirs and particularly his son and daughter. Some of the indicia of the ancient joint family system had become extinct in consequence of inroads made upon the coparcenery inter alia by liberal interpretation of texts relating to partition, by rules founded on equitable considerations affecting payment of debts incurred personally by any member of the coparcenery and principally by the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, which conferred new rights on widows of coparceners. The power of free disposition of property is recognized in every system of law and it was time for Hindu law to fall in line. Probably the best solution would have been to abolish the ancient legal formulæ of acquisition of right by birth and devolution by survivorship since the logical way was to assimilate the Mitakshara to the Dayabhaga in this respect. This would also have the merit of equable treatment of the nearest female heirs of a coparcener and of bringing about uniformity in the law in all parts of India. Sentiment in favour of retention of the Mitakshara coparcenery even in an attenuated form seems to have been respected and the rules laid down in section 6 are a compromise having some of the merits and all the demerits which attend such adjustive legislation.

Mitakshara coparcenary retained in an attenuated form.

Prior to the coming into operation of this Act, it was a rule firmly established that a Hindu cannot by will bequeath property which he could not have alienated by gift inter vivos. A coparcener under the Dayabhaga law, however, could by gift dispose of the whole of his property whether ancestral or self-acquired, subject to the claims of those entitled to be maintained by him. A coparcener under the Mitakshara law has no power to dispose of his coparcenery interest by gift. That rule is not affected by the new legislation but the extension of that conception which disentitled such coparcener to make a bequest of his interest in the coparcenery property so as to defeat the rights of the other members to take by survivorship is now abolished (section 30). Any Hindu male or female may now dispose of by will or other testamentary disposition any property (including in case of a male any interest in a Mitakshara coparcenery), in accordance with the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, or any other law relating to such dispositions applicable to Hindus. This power of testamentary disposition is, however, subject to the rights of maintenance of persons who are entitled to claim maintenance as dependants of the testator or testatrix. Sections 18 to 21 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act lay down rules relating to the rights of maintenance of a wife, widowed daughter-in-law, children, aged parents and other dependants. Section 22 of that Act rules that where a dependant has not obtained by testamentary or intestate succession, any share in the estate of a Hindu dying after the commencement of that enactment, the dependant shall be entitled, in accordance with the provisions of the same, to maintenance from those who take the estate.

The general provisions of the Act relating to succession contain rules inter alia to the effect that heirs related to a male or female intestate by full blood are to be preferred to those related by half-blood if the nature of relationship is the same in every other respect (sec. 18). Another important rule is that if two or more heirs succeed together to the property of an intestate, they take the property per capita and not per stirpes unless there is a provision which expressly lays down a contrary rule. Such heirs take the property as tenants-in-common and not as joint tenants (s. 19). Instances of succession per stirpes are to be found in the provisions of section 10 which deals with distribution of property among heirs in Class I of the Schedule and Rule II of section 16 which provides that if any son or daughter of a female intestate had predeceased her leaving his or her own children alive at the time of the intestate's death, the children of such son or daughter shall take per stirpes (not per capita), that is they shall take between them the share which such son or daughter would have taken if living at the time of the intestate's death. A child en ventre sa mere who is subsequently born alive has the same right to inherit property as if he or she had been born before the death of the intestate (s. 20).

Some general rules.

Under the texts of the Dharmashastras as interpreted by the courts certain defects, deformities and diseases excluded an heir from inheritance. This was substantially remedied by the Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, which ruled that "no person, other than a person who is and has been from birth a lunatic or idiot, shall be excluded from inheritance or from any right or share in joint family property by reason only of any disease, deformity or physical or mental defect." Unchastity of certain female heirs, change of religion and loss of caste were among the grounds of exclusion from inheritance recognized by law. Section 28 of the present Act discards almost all the grounds which imposed exclusion from inheritance and rules that no person shall be disqualified from succeeding to any property on the ground of any disease, defect or deformity. It also rules out disqualification on any other ground whatsoever excepting those expressly recognized by any provisions of the Act. The exceptions are very few and confined to the case of remarriage of a widow of a predeceased son, widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son and widow of a brother and none of them is entitled to succeed to the property of the intestate as such widow, if on the date the succession opens. she has remarried. Remarriage by any such widow subsequent to the vesting of her interest in the property upon death of the intestate is, however, no bar (section 24). In case of other female heirs remarriage is not a bar at any time. Another disqualification stated in the Act relates to a murderer who is excluded on principles of justice and public policy (section 25). Change of religion and loss of caste have long ceased to be grounds of forfeiture of property and the only disqualification to inheritance on the ground that a person has ceased to be a Hindu (in the wide connotation of that expression) is confined to the heirs of such convert (section 26). Where a Hindu has ceased or ceases to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion, children born to him or her after such conversion and their descendants are disqualified from inheriting the property of any of their Hindu relatives, unless such children or descendants are Hindus at the time when the succession opens. The disqualification, it will be noticed, does not affect the convert himself or herself. But the children born to such person after conversion to any religion other than Hinduism, Jainism, Buddhism or Sikhism and the descendants of such children are affected by the disqualification.

Disqualified heirs.

Another change brought about by the Act is that impartible estates [other than those expressly saved by s. 5(ii) and (iii) of the Act] cease to be recognized as such. Such property has now under the Act all the ordinary incidents of property held by a Hindu.

Criticism was not lacking that the Act introduced drastic changes in the Family Law relating to ownership of property of Hindus and particularly of those governed by the Mitakshara and fundamentally altered the rules of intestate and testamentary succession prevailing under both the principal schools of Hindu law. Objection was also raised to the substitution of a new line of heirs which on examination will be found to have been based on natural love and affection. There was also objection to the abrogation of custom and customary laws except in some minor matters. Codification is a well worn subject and reference has already been made in the general Introduction to the relevant considerations which lend support to the fundamental and radical changes brought about by this Act and it is not necessary to rehearse the same. Evolution and expansion are discernible in the successive state of legal thought in India and the traditional law itself had changed from time to time down the centuries. The new legislation is characteristic of the age which is one of great ideals and fast changing theories. There is considerable force in the remark belonging to times long past that rules of succession to property being in their nature arbitrary are in all systems of law merely conventional and even deep rooted traditions must yield to the march of time.

THE HINDU SUCCESSION ACT, 1956

ACT No. XXX OF 1956

[17th June 1956]

An Act to amend and codify the law relating to intestate succession among Hindus.

Be it enacted by Parliament in the Seventh Year of the Republic of India as follows:—

Preamble.—A preamble to an enactment of the Legislature was formerly regarded as key to open the mind of the makers of the Act, and the mischief which they intended to redress. The practice of inserting elaborate preambles in enactments of Legislature has disappeared and it is now regarded as well settled that a preamble cannot either restrict or extend the enacting part when the language and the scope of an Act are not open to doubt. It sometimes happens that a preamble is narrow but the enacting words large. Assistance may be obtained from the preamble to a statute in ascertaining the meaning of the relevant enacting part, since words derive their colour and content from their context. But the preamble is not to affect the meaning otherwise ascribable to the enacting part unless there be a compelling reason and it is not a compelling reason that the enacting words go further than the preamble indicated (e). The preamble of the present Act speaks only of the law relating to intestate succession among Hindus. Chapter III of the Act, however, headed testamentary succession, enacts inter alia in express and explicit terms that a male Hindu is entitled to dispose of by will his interest in property of a Mitakshara coparcenary and recognises similar power in case of property of a tarwad and other family corporations governed by Marumakkattayam and Aliyasantana laws in Southern India. Also see 'Title' at p. 835 infra.

Codifying Act.—It is clear from the preamble that it is intended by the Act not merely to amend but to amend and codify the law relating to intestate succession and as pointed out above the Act in Chapter III lays down certain rules relating to the testamentary capacity of Hindus. The object of codification of a particular branch of law is that, on any matter specifically dealt with by it, such law should be sought for in the codified enactment itself. Where a statute is expressly said to codify the law, the court, as a general rule, is not at liberty to go outside the law so created simply because before the existence of that enactment another law prevailed. Reference may be made in this connection to the Notes at pp. 665-666 supra and the decisions there cited.

Question may arise whether this Act is a complete code in the sense of comprehensive legislation dealing with every phase and aspect of the law of succession. In an Act intituled an Act to amend and codify a particular branch of law, in so far as there is express enactment, that alone must be looked at since the court is bound by it and can look to nothing else and the express enactment must govern the rights of the parties even though it has radically altered or modified the prior law. The Act, as has already been pointed out, has brought about some fundamental and radical changes in the law of succession previously applied to Hindus. Reference in this connection may be made to s. 4 which gives over-riding effect to the provision of the Act. It follows that with respect to matters for which provisions is made in the Act the prior law ceases to have effect to the extent laid down in that section. It also follows that in respect of matters for which no provision is made in the Act the old law must continue to remain applicable though such matters are indeed few.

---

(e) Attorney-General v. Prince Ernest Augustus of Hanover (1957) A.C. 436.

Rules of interpretation of a statute.—For some of the rules relating to interpretation see Notes at pp. 666-669 supra.

CHAPTER I

PRELIMINARY

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

(2) It extends to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

Title.—Two propositions are now accepted as quite clear that the title is part of the enactment itself and it is legitimate to use if for the purpose of interpreting the Act as a whole and ascertaining its scope, and that a title cannot be permitted to control or cut down the enacting part of any section by the use of language of less extensive import. The title to the present Act states that the Act relates to the law of succession among Hindus and not merely intestate succession as mentioned in the preamble (*f*1).

Extent and commencement.—The Act applies to Hindus in the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir. It received the assent of the President on 17th June 1956 and came into force on that date.

The general principle of private international law is that the lex loci governs matters relating to immovable property and the law of the domicil governs personal relations. The principle is embodied in sec. 5 of the Indian Succession Act. The Draft Bill contained the words "and applies also to Hindus domiciled in the territories to which this Act extends who are outside the said territories." Those words were removed and it was observed by the Joint Committee, "there are well-defined principles of international law which regulate succession to the immovable property of Hindus domiciled outside India and, consequently, that portion of this clause which provides for extra territorial application of this law has been removed as both unnecessary and inappropriate."

---

(*f*1) See sec. 5(1)(b), General Clauses Act, X of 1897.

2. (1) This Act applies—

Application of Act.

(a) to any person, who is a Hindu by religion in any of its forms or developments, including a Virashaiva, a Lingayat or a follower of the Brahmo, Prarthana or Arya Samaj,

(b) to any person who is a Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh by religion, and

(c) to any other person who is not a Muslim (*ff*1), Christian, Parsi or Jew by religion, unless it is proved that any such person would not have been governed by the Hindu law or by any custom or usage as part of that law in respect of any of the matters dealt with herein if this Act had not been passed.

Explanation.—The following persons are Hindus, Buddhists, Jainas or Sikhs by religion, as the case may be:—

(a) any child, legitimate or illegitimate, both of whose parents are Hindus, Buddhists, Jainas or Sikhs by religion;

(b) any child, legitimate or illegitimate, one of whose parents is a Hindu, Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh by religion and who is brought up as a member of the tribe, community, group or family to which such parent belongs or belonged;

(c) any person who is a convert or reconvert to the Hindu, Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh religion.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), nothing contained in this Act shall apply to the members of any Scheduled Tribe within the meaning of clause (25) of article 366 of the Constitution unless the Central Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, otherwise directs.

(3) The expression "Hindu" in any portion of this Act shall be construed as if it included a person who, though not a Hindu by religion, is, nevertheless, a person to whom this Act applies by virtue of the provisions contained in this section.

Persons governed by the Act.—It must have been seen from § 6(1) that Hindu Law has been applicable to a wide category of persons. The note to clause 2 of the Hindu Marriage Bill stated: "At present, Hindu Law applies (i) to Hindus by birth, and also to Hindus by religion, that is to say, to converts and re-converts to Hinduism, (ii) to illegitimate children where both parents are Hindus, (iii) to illegitimate children where the mother is a Hindu and the children are brought up as Hindus, (iv) to Brahmos, Arya Samajists,

---

(*ff*1) A person who had become converted to Islam cannot be regarded as a Hindu simply because such person had inherited property despite conversion by reason of Caste Disabilities Act, Fakeer Bux v. Saira Begum ('72) A.A. 475.

Lingayats and to persons who may have deviated from orthodox standards of Hinduism in matters of diet and ceremonial observances and to every other person who may be regarded as a Hindu unless he can show some valid local, tribal or family custom to the contrary, and (v) to Jains, Sikhs and Buddhists." The present section substantially codifies the law on the question as it existed at the time of the commencement of this enactment.

Reference may be made to Notes at p. 671 supra.

Reference may also be made to §§ 6 and 7 ante.

Sub-section (1)(a): Hindu.—See p. 671 supra.

Sub-section (1)(b).—See p. 672 supra. Reference may be made to the undermentioned case (f2).

Sub-section (1)(c).—See p. 672 supra.

Explanation (b).—See p. 672 supra. Reference may also be made to the undermentioned case (g).

Explanation (c).—See p. 672 supra.

Sub-section (2): Scheduled Tribes.—See pp. 672-673 supra.

Sub-section (3).—See p. 673 supra.

3. (1) In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires—

Definitions and interpretations.

(a) "agnate"—one person is said to be an "agnate" of another if the two are related by blood or adoption wholly through males;

(b) "aliyasantana law" means the system of law applicable to persons who, if this Act had not been passed, would have been governed by the Madras Aliyasantana Act, 1949 (Madras Act IX of 1949), or by the customary aliyasantana law with respect to the matters for which provision is made in this Act;

(c) "cognate"—one person is said to be a "cognate" of another if the two are related by blood or adoption but not wholly through males;

(d) the expressions "custom" and "usage" signify any rule which, having been continuously and uniformly observed for a long time, has obtained the force of law among Hindus in any local area, tribe, community, group or family:

Provided that the rule is certain and not unreasonable or opposed to public policy: and

---

(f2) Commissioner of Wealth Tax v. Champa Kumari ('72) A.S.C. 2119 [Jains].

(g) Rosa Marie v. Wealth Tax Commissioner ('70) A.M. 249 [child brought up as Hindu: member of Hindu undivided family].

Provided further that in the case of a rule applicable only to a family it has not been discontinued by the family;

(e) "full blood", "half blood" and "uterine blood"—

(i) two persons are said to be related to each other by full blood when they are descended from a common ancestor by the same wife, and by half blood when they are descended from a common ancestor but by different wives;

(ii) two persons are said to be related to each other by uterine blood when they are descended from a common ancestress but by different husbands;

Explanation.—In this clause "ancestor" includes the father and "ancestress" the mother;

(f) "heir" means any person, male or female, who is entitled to succeed to the property of an intestate under this Act;

(g) "intestate"—a person is deemed to die intestate in respect of property of which he or she has not made a testamentary disposition capable of taking effect;

(h) "marumakkattayam law" means the system of law applicable to persons—

(a) who, if this Act had not been passed, would have been governed by the Madras Marumakkattayam Act, 1932 (Madras Act XXII of 1933); the Travancore Nayar Act (II of 1100); the Travancore Ezhava Act (III of 1100); the Travancore Nanjinad Vellala Act (VI of 1101); the Travancore Kshatriya Act (VII of 1108); the Travancore Krishnanvaka Marumakkathayee Act (VII of 1115); the Cochin Marumakkathayam Act (XXXIII of 1113); or the Cochin Nayar Act (XXIX of 1113) with respect to the matters for which provision is made in this Act; or

(b) who belong to any community, the members of which are largely domiciled in the State of Travancore-Cochin or Madras [as it existed immediately before the 1st November, 1956], and who, if this Act had not been passed, would have been governed with respect to the matters for which provision is made in this Act by any system of inheritance in which descent is traced through the female line;

but does not include the aliyasantana law;

(i) "nambudri law" means the system of law applicable to persons who, if this Act had not been passed, would have been governed by the Madras Nambudri Act, 1932 (Madras Act XXI of 1933); the Cochin Nambudri Act (XVII of 1113); or the Travancore Malayala Brahmin Act (III of 1106) with respect to the matters for which provision is made in this Act;

(j) "related" means related by legitimate kinship:

Provided that illegitimate children shall be deemed to be related to their mother and to one another, and their legitimate descendants shall be deemed to be related to them and to one another; and any word expressing relationship or denoting a relative shall be construed accordingly.

(2) In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires, words importing the masculine gender shall not be taken to include females.

It will be seen that the definitions given in this section are not all intended merely to economise words. Thus for instance the proviso to the definition of the expression "related" lays down a legal principle.

"Unless the context otherwise requires".—The definitions and abbreviations given in this section have to be read subject to the qualification that their application must not be inconsistent with the context or subject-matter. Even when an Act contains a section giving definitions and interpretations the latter may not be applicable in all the contexts. Where there is something repugnant in the context showing that the definition will not fit, the court will give such meaning to the expression as will be more in harmony with the context and allow it to prevail over the "artificial conceptions" of the definition clause.

"Agnates": "Cognates". Ordinarily agnates means relations on the male side, in opposition to cognates, relations on the female side. The key words in the definition of agnate are "wholly through males." The expressions must be understood in the technical sense of the definitions and not in the sense in which the expressions gotraja and bandhu are used in the old law.

"Aliyasantana law": "Marumakkattayam law": "Nambudri law".—Section 5 of the Act excludes certain properties from the application of the Act. In the Bill as drafted such exclusions included property succession to which was regulated by various enactments dealing with Aliyasantana, Marumakkatayam and Numbudri laws. That exception was ultimately removed from that section by the Joint Committee. It is consequent upon the removal of that exception in favour of persons governed by those laws that suitable definitions have been inserted in this section in order to facilitate the application of the Hindu Succession Act to such persons. Reference may be made to sections 7 and 17 post.

"Custom": "Usage".—The definition of the expressions custom and usage very succinctly reproduces the result of numerous decisions of courts under the old law. It will be seen from sec. 4 post that any custom or usage hitherto recognised as part of Hindu law in force ceases to have effect after the commencement of the Act with respect to matters for which provision is made in this Act. The importance of custom must obviously diminish as the system of law ramifies and particularly when the lex non scripta, which includes both general custom as well as particular customs, itself becomes the subject-matter of codification.

Reference may be made to sec. 4 post and §§ 17-20 ante.

"Full blood: Half blood: Uterine blood".—The definitions and the Explanation in clause (e) give the meaning of the expressions "full blood," "half blood" and "uterine blood." Section 18 which is one of the general provisions relating to succession lays down the rule about heirs related to an intestate Hindu male or female by full blood being preferred to heirs so related by half blood. Reference has been made to these expressions in the Notes under the relevant sections. The Schedule to the Act contains an Explanation affecting relationship by uterine blood in case of certain heirs.

"Related": Proviso.—The general principle of Hindu law is to limit heirship to legitimate issue. The rules of inheritance relating to sapindas and other relations having been based upon marriage and legitimate descent could only be departed from in favour of an illegitimate offspring on the basis of some well-established principle, e.g. in case of children of a dancing woman or a prostitute who claim to be related by heritable blood. It is well settled that dancing women or naikins have their peculiar customs and their status recognised in Hindu law. Although grounds of decision have not been uniform and there has been some diversity of judicial opinion on the subject the principle of heritable blood between the offspring of a woman of the naikin class has been accepted and applied by courts in numerous decisions.

The definition of the expression "related" given in this section naturally confines its meaning to legitimate kinship but the legislature has engrafted an important proviso to the same in order inter alia to give recognition in matters of succession to the status of illegitimate children and their mother. The proviso in substance has the effect of expanding the definition of 'related' to cover all cases of the nature under consideration. Such children are regarded as related to their mother—though not to their putative father even if his identity may be established—as also to one another and their legitimate descendants are deemed to be related to them and to one another in matters of heirship where any word expressing relationship or denoting a relative is used in the Act. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons it was pointed out that the expression "related" is so defined that the rights of illegitimate children are safeguarded as against their mother and their own legitimate descendants. This definition follows the Rau Committee's draft where it is pointed out that to confine relationship to legitimate kinship might prevent a Naikin's property from passing to her son or daughter and that there is also no reason why Naikin's children should not have mutual rights of inheritance.

Sub-section (2).—The general rule of legislative practice is that unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context words importing the masculine gender used in statutes are to be taken to include females (section 13, General Clauses Act). In matters of succession the general rule would have to be cautiously applied and this sub-section is inserted ex abundanti cautela.

Words importing the masculine gender must not be taken to include females unless the context so requires.

4. (1) Save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act,—

Overriding effect of Act.

(a) any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or any custom or usage as part of that law in force immediately before the commencement of this Act shall cease to have effect with respect to any matter for which provision is made in this Act;

(b) any other law in force immediately before the commencement of this Act shall cease to apply to Hindus in so far as it is inconsistent with any of the provisions contained in this Act.

(2) For the removal of doubts it is hereby declared that nothing contained in this Act shall be deemed to affect the provisions of any law for the time being in force providing for the prevention of fragmentation of agricultural holdings or for the fixation of ceilings or for the devolution of tenancy rights in respect of such holdings.

Overriding effect of the Act.—This section gives overriding application to the provisions of the Act and in effect lays down that in respect of any of the matters dealt with in the Act it seeks to repeal all existing laws, whether in the shape of enactments or otherwise, which are inconsistent with this Act. As already pointed out the Act brings about some fundamental and radical changes in the law of succession and the result is that immediately on the coming into operation of the Act the law of succession hitherto applicable to Hindus whether by virtue of any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law ceases to have effect with respect to all matters expressly dealt with by the Act. This overriding effect of the express provisions of the Act has been emphasised in numerous decisions. The undermentioned decisions of the Supreme Court afford useful instances of such overriding effect (gg). In these decisions it was held that the rights conferred on the female Hindu by section 14(1) make a clear departure from the previous law and such previous law cannot be used for circumventing those rights.

In a case decided by the Supreme Court (*gg*1) a Hindu Jat governed by the customary law of the Punjab alienated some ancestral property without legal necessity. In a suit instituted by one of his sons it was declared that the sale was null and void and not binding on his sons with the result that the sale could not enure beyond his lifetime. He died in 1959 and in litigation which ensued it was held that not only his three sons but also his wife and two daughters were entitled to inherit all his estate including the alienated property even though the wife and daughters were under the customary law incompetent to challenge the alienation.

The Act also supersedes the rules of succession contained in any Central or State enactment and any other law in force immediately before it came into operation by enacting that all other law shall cease to apply to Hindus in so far as it is inconsistent with any provisions contained in the Act.

---

(gg) Punithavalli Ammal v. Ramalingam ('70) A.S.C. 1730; Munnalal v. Rajkumar ('62) A.S.C. 1493. Also see Bhuri Bai v. Champi Bai ('68) A. Raj. 139. Reference may also be made to Gopal Narain v. Goenka ('71) A. Delhi 61.

(*gg*1) Giani Ram v. Ramji Lal ('69) A.S.C. 1144.

Overriding effect of the Act was recognised when it was held that Punjab Agricultural custom, so far as it was applicable to Hindus, is no longer in force as regards matters of succession which are now governed by the provisions of this Act (*g*1). Similarly in respect of a rule of the law of Kolhapur State relating to ex post facto sanction it was held that the rule in so far as it was inconsistent with section 14 of this Act, was superseded by clause (b) of this section (*g*2). Section 9 of the Punjab Debtor's Protection Act which applies only when succession is governed by any rule of custom is no longer applicable to Hindus in the Punjab (*g*3). Reference may be made to the undermentioned decisions which further illustrate the application of the overriding effect of the Act (*g*4).

The Act is a codifying enactment (h). It does not merely crystallise or declare the existing law upon the subject but deliberately departs from that law in respect of various matters. It supersedes prior law and lays down the whole of the law of succession in the form of a code and so far as it goes must be read as a complete enactment. Therefore, in cases governed by the Act, appeal to any rule of law of succession previously applicable to Hindus is now permissible only in respect of matters for which no provision is made in the Act (*h*1). Matters affecting succession expressly saved from the operation of the Act, of course, continue to be governed by the previous law statutory or otherwise.

One outstanding exclusion from the operation of the Act is contained in s. 5(1) and relates to succession to property of persons whose marriage is solemnised under the Special Marriage Act, 1954, and to the property of the issue of such marriage. Succession to the property of such persons is regulated by the provisions of the Indian Succession Act and not this Act. Section 5 also specifies certain other property to which this Act does not apply.

The Act does not touch or affect the law relating to joint family and partition—except the limited extent to which sections 6 and 7 have such effect—and the previous law continues to operate in such matters. Thus for instance the right of a mother or widow to a share on partition between the father and the sons in a Mitakshara family or between the sons after the death of the father is not affected or abrogated by this Act. The undermentioned case affords an illustration of this (*hh*1).

So also the Act does not abrogate any rule of customary law relating to customary law in the Punjab relating to restriction on alienation by a male proprietor. The right of reversioners to challenge or control any such alienation cannot be said to have ceased to exist (*hh*2).

---

(*g*1) Taro v. Darshan Singh ('60) A. Punj. 145; I.L.R. (1959) Punj. 2253; for other instances see Hans Raj v. Dhanwant Singh ('61) A. Punj. 510 I.L.R. (1961) 1 Punj. 369; Banso v. Charan Singh ('61) A. Punj. 45. As to disposal of ancestral property by will by a Hindu male holder governed by Punjab customary law see Kaur Singh v. Jaggar Singh ('61) A. Punj. 489.

(*g*2) Yamunabai v. Harihar Pandit ('60) A.B. 463; 61 Bom. L.R. 1316.

(*g*3) Ishwar Das v. Raj Kumar ('64) A. Punj. 275.

(*g*4) Topha v. Samman ('72) A.P.&H. 406 [gift of occupancy rights by widow: S. 59(3) Punjab Tenancy Act]; Gopi Chand v. Bhagwani Devi ('64) A. Punj. 272 [Delhi Land Reform Act]; Ramlali v. Bhagwanti Bai ('68) A.M.P. 247 [M.P. Land Revenue Code].

(h) See 'Preamble' and 'Codifying Act' at pp. 834, 835.

(*h*1) Thus, for instance, the conception of a reversioner is not wholly abolished by this section. See Notes under S. 14 post. Also see Gangadhar v. Saraswati ('62) A. Orissa 190.

(*hh*1) Gopal Narain v. D. P. Goenka ('71) A. Delhi 61.

(*hh*2) Joginder Singh v. Kehar Singh ('65) A. Punj. 407.

Considerable legislation by various States, aimed at prevention of fragmentation of agricultural holdings and securing their consolidation and for the purpose of fixing ceilings and devolution of holdings, has found place on the statute-book in recent years and this section is not intended to override or disturb such legislation. Land policy in different States, though in the main founded on the concept of a Socialistic Welfare State, cannot be expected to be uniform and sub-section (2), therefore, leaves such legislation relating to agricultural land undisturbed. Agricultural land is the bulk of property in India and it may perhaps be said that this provision detracts from the fundamental objective of uniformity of legislation. But the explanation is that what is aimed at is a uniform law for all Hindus and not necessarily a uniform law for all forms of property. It is only matters mentioned in the sub-section that are saved from the operation of the Act and not the right to succeed to agricultural lands. The Delhi Land Reform Act not being one providing for prevention of fragmentation of agricultural holdings is not saved by this sub-section (*h*2). Bhumidari or Bhumiswamy rights are not tenancy rights within the meaning of section 151 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code 1954 and the provision in that section is not any provision for prevention of fragmentation of agricultural holdings or for the devolution of tenancy rights (*h*3). A Hindu widow who is allowed to remain in possession of khudkast and sir does not become bhumidar by operation of section 14 of this Act (*h*4). Also see Notes under section 5 infra.

Act is not retrospective in its operation.—It is a fundamental and firmly established rule of interpretation that a statute which deals with rules of substantive law, shall not be construed to have retrospective operation unless such a construction appears very clearly in the terms of the Act, or arises by necessary implication. There is the clear indication in this section read with the other important sections of the Act that it is not intended to have retrospective effect. A contrary rule would have the very serious consequences of prejudicially affecting vested rights and of disturbing titles and legality of past transactions.

The general rule that an enactment like the present should operate only in cases and in respect of facts which come into existence after it was passed —nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet, non praeteritis—has been accepted by the Legislature and the exceptions to its application in the Act are indeed few.

It has been held in a number of cases, such exceptions apart, that the provisions of the Act are prospective and not retrospective in their operation (*h*5). Since the Act is not retrospective in its operation it follows that succession would not be governed by the Act where it opened before the commencement of the Act (*h*6).

---

(*h*2) Gopi Chand v. Bhagwani Devi ('64) A. Punj. 272.

(*h*3) Ramlali v. Bhagunti Bai ('68) A.M.P. 247. Also see Indubai v. Vyankati ('66) A.B. 64.

(*h*4) Prema Devi v. Joint Director of Consolidation ('70) A.A. 238.

(*h*5) Gurmit Singh v. Tara Singh ('60) A. Punj. 6, Sampathkumari v. Lakshmi Ammal ('63) A.M. 50 [Section 8]. Also see Notes under various sections.

(*h*6) Hans Raj v. Dhanwant Singh ('61) A. Punj. 510. Also see f.n. (*h*2) above.

One notable exception is to be found in s. 14 of the Act. As has already been pointed out the Hindu woman's limited estate is now abolished and any property held by a female Hindu howsoever acquired is now held by her as absolute property with full powers of disposal. The restraints and limitations on her power cease to exist even in respect of existing property, so that any property possessed by a female Hindu whether acquired by her before or after the commencement of the Act, is now held by her as full owner. This enlargement of the estate of a female Hindu is, therefore, not confined to property acquired by her after the coming into operation of the Act but embraces all property possessed by her even if it was acquired by her at any time prior to the Act if the case falls within the ambit of sec. 14. Another instance where the Act operates retrospectively is to be found in sec. 26 which affects the rights of the descendants of a convert from Hinduism.

CHAPTER II

INTESTATE SUCCESSION

GENERAL

Succession to the property of a Hindu is now governed by the provisions contained in this Chapter. Sections 5 to 17 are grouped under the heading "General" and sections 18 to 28 under the heading "general provisions relating to succession." Succession to the property of a male intestate and a female intestate is not governed by the same rules. The distinction was necessitated by some peculiar conditions in the country. Section 8 lays down certain general rules of succession to the property of a male Hindu dying intestate after the commencement of the Act. Section 15 lays down general rules of succession in the case of a female Hindu. Section 17 lays down certain special rules of succession respecting persons governed by marumakkattayam and aliyasantana laws.

The Act, as already pointed out, is a codifying enactment and overrides the previous law on the subject of inheritance. Application, therefore, of any rules of succession governing Hindus is now permissible only in respect of matters for which no provision is made in the Act and matters expressly saved from the operation of the Act.

Inheritance never in abeyance.—One governing principle of Hindu Law is that inheritance can never be in abeyance. On the death of a Hindu the person who is then his nearest heir or persons who are then his nearest heirs and as such succeed simultaneously to his property, become entitled at once to the property left by him. The right of succession vests in such heir or heirs immediately on the death of the owner of the property.

The same principle underlies the provisions of this Act. Devolution of the property of a male or female intestate upon the heirs declared by the various provisions takes place immediately on the death of the owner and it is in no manner controlled or affected by the fact of postponement or absence of actual physical partition of the property. The share of each heir becomes vested in him and if the heir dies before such partition his or her share will pass to and become vested in such persons as are his or her heirs. Succession cannot under any circumstances remain in abeyance in expectation of the birth of a preferential heir, where such heir was not conceived at the time of the owner's death (i). Where, under this Act, the estate of a Hindu has vested in a person as his heir at the time of his death, it cannot be divested except by the birth of a preferable heir who was conceived at the time of his death (j).

Spes successionis.—The right of a person to succeed as heir on the death of a Hindu is a mere spes successionis, that is, a bare chance of succession. It is not a vested interest; he cannot, therefore, make a valid transfer of it. For the same reason, any agreement entered into by him in respect of the inheritance cannot bind persons who actually inherit when the succession opens.

5. This Act shall not apply to—

Act not to apply to certain properties.

(i) any property succession to which is regulated by the Indian Succession Act, 1925 (39 of 1925), by reason of the provisions contained in section 21 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954 (43 of 1954);

(ii) any estate which descends to a single heir by the terms of any covenant or agreement entered into by the Ruler of any Indian State with the Government of India or by the terms of any enactment passed before the commencement of this Act;

(iii) the Valiamma Thampuran Kovilagam Estate and the Palace Fund administered by the Palace Administration Board by reason of the powers conferred by Proclamation (IX of 1124), dated 29th June 1949, promulgated by the Maharaja of Cochin.

The Act applies to all property of a deceased Hindu which is not expressly excluded from its operation. The Act applies inter alia to agricultural lands (k). Sub-section (2) of section 4 saves from the operation of the Act only certain matters there mentioned and does not affect the question of succession to agricultural lands. The Act is not ultra vires on the ground that it governs succession to agricultural lands (*k*1).

The section specifically excludes certain properties from the application of the Act.

Clause (i) reaffirms that succession to property of Hindus whose marriage is solemnized under the Special Marriage Act, 1954, and to the property of the issue of such marriage is regulated by s. 21 of that enactment and not by any provision of this Act. It has been held by the High Court of Madras that this clause deals only with succession and does not in any way injunct

---

(i) S. 20.
(j) S. 20.
(k) Laxmi Debi v. Surendra Kumar ('57) A. Orissa 1.
(*k*1) Sant Ram Dass v. Gurdev Singh ('60) A. Punj 462. Also see Notes under section 14 post.

a Hindu father from treating a legitimate son of his born in lawful wedlock as per the Special Marriage Act as an undivided member of the Hindu Joint Family. There are some observations in that decision about creation of a joint family by a father at his option, the correctness of which may be doubted (*k*2).

See Chapter I at p. 842.

Clauses (ii) and (iii) relate to impartible property. Impartible estates other than those expressly saved by these two clauses are abolished. All impartible property will now under the Act have the ordinary incidents of property held by a Hindu (*k*3). The exception is limited to the impartible estates of Rulers of Indian States succession to which is regulated by special covenants or agreements and to estate, succession to which is regulated by any previous legislation, and the Estate and Palace Funds mentioned in sub-section (iii). For the law relating to impartible property as it stood prior to the commencement of the present Act, reference may be made to §§ 590-594 supra.

Devolution of interest in coparcenary property.

6. When a male Hindu dies after the commencement of this Act, having at the time of his death an interest in a Mitakshara coparcenary property, his interest in the property shall devolve by survivorship upon the surviving members of the coparcenary and not in accordance with this Act:

Provided that, if the deceased had left him surviving a female relative specified in class I of the Schedule or a male relative, specified in that class who claims, through such female relative, the interest of the deceased in the Mitakshara coparcenary property shall devolve by testamentary or intestate succession, as the case may be, under this Act and not by survivorship.

Explanation 1.—For the purposes of this section, the interest of a Hindu Mitakshara coparcener shall be deemed to be the share in the property that would have been allotted to him if a partition of the property had taken place immediately before his death, irrespective of whether he was entitled to claim partition or not.

Explanation 2.—Nothing contained in the proviso to this section shall be construed as enabling a person who has separated himself from the coparcenary before the death of the deceased or any of his heirs to claim on intestacy a share in the interest referred to therein.

Devolution of interest in Mitakshara coparcenary property.—This provision of the Act deals with the question of a coparcener in a Mitakshara

---

(*k*2) Rosa Marie v. Wealth Tax Commissioner ('70) A.M. 249.

(*k*3) Bhaiya Ramanuj v. Lalu ('68) A.P. 468 [other members of the undivided family become entitled to claim rights in what was impartible property].

coparcenary dying (after the coming into operation of this Act) without making any testamentary disposition of his undivided share in the joint family property. Under the old law a devise by a coparcener in a Mitakshara family of his undivided interest was wholly invalid. But now section 30 of this Act has the effect of laying down that it is competent to a male Hindu in a Mitakshara coparcenary to dispose of by will his interest in the coparcenary property. No question of the application of any of the rules laid down in this section can, therefore, arise where there is testamentary disposition by a male Hindu of his interest in the coparcenary property. Testamentary disposition of all his property by any such person would now under sec. 30 include his interest in the coparcenary property. Nor can the question of applying this section arise in case of a sole surviving coparcener who cannot obviously be said to have died "having at the time of his death an interest in a Mitakshara coparcenary property" (*k*4) nor can the question of applying this section arise in case of a person who is not a coparcener in any coparcenary at the time of his death. Such for instance would be the case where a person dies leaving a daughter and a separated son. His property though vested in him on partition will go by succession under section 8 to the daughter and the separated son. [See illustration 3 under Explanation II infra.]

The section although it deals with succession has bearing on other branches of Hindu law such as joint family, adoption and maintenance and lays down rules of far-reaching consequences. It prescribes that where a coparcener dies the Mitakshara coparcenary will not necessarily become disrupted but the surviving coparceners may continue to remain as members of the joint family without arriving at any partition and subject to the important proviso engrafted on the rule, the undivided interest of any coparcener in the coparcenary property will on his death devolve by survivorship upon the surviving coparceners.

It may be appropriate to draw attention to certain general principles of inheritance governing the old law before stating the object and effect of the rules laid down in this section and the far-reaching changes brought about by it. The Mitakshara recognises two modes of devolution of property, namely, survivorship and succession. The rule of survivorship applies to joint family property; the rules of succession apply to property held in absolute severalty. The Dayabhaga recognises only one mode of devolution, namely, succession. It does not recognise the rule of survivorship even in the case of joint family property. The reason is that while every member of a Mitakshara joint family has only an undivided interest in the joint property, a member of a Dayabhaga joint family holds his share in quasi-severalty, so that it passes on his death to his heirs as if he was absolutely seized thereof, and not to the surviving coparceners as under the Mitakshara law. The essence of a coparcenary under the Mitakshara law is unity of ownership. The ownership of the coparcenary property is in the whole body of coparceners. According to the true notion of an undivided family governed by the Mitakshara law, no individual member of that family, whilst it remains undivided, can predicate, of the joint and undivided property, that he, that particular member, has a definite share, e.g., one-third or one-fourth. His interest is a fluctuating interest, capable of being enlarged by deaths in the family, and liable to be diminished by births in the family. It is only on a partition that he becomes entitled to a definite share. No female can be a coparcener under the Mitakshara law. Even a wife though she is entitled to maintenance out of her husband's property and has to that extent an interest in his property, is not her husband's coparcener. Nor is a mother a coparcener with her sons.

---

(*k*4) Arunachlathammal v. Ramachandran ('63) A.M. 255.

It was generally felt that radical reform was required in the Mitakshara law of coparcenary and that where one of the coparceners died it was necessary that not only in case of his separate property but also in respect of his undivided interest in the coparcenary property there should be equable distribution of that share between his male and female heirs and particularly between his son and daughter. Some of the indicia of the ancient joint family system had become extinct in consequence of inroads made upon the coparcenary inter alia by liberal interpretation of texts relating to partition, by rules founded on equitable considerations affecting payment of debts incurred personally by any member of the coparcenary and by the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, which conferred new rights on widows of coparceners. The highest authorities on Hindu law took the view that the Mitakshara coparcenary had lost a number of its characteristics and should therefore be abolished. The power of free disposition of property is recognised in every system of law and it was time for Hindu law to fall in line. Probably the best solution would have been to abolish the ancient legal formulae of acquisition of right by birth and devolution by survivorship since the logical way was to assimilate the Mitakshara to the Dayabhaga in this respect. This could also have had the merit of equable treatment of the nearest female heirs of a coparcener and of bringing about uniformity in the law in all parts of India. But there was some strong sentiment in favour of the retention of the Mitakshara coparcenary even in an attenuated form and the rules laid down in this section are a compromise having some of the merits and all the demerits which attend such adjustive legislation.

". . . shall devolve by survivorship".—The initial part of the section stresses that the Act does not interfere with the special rights of those who are members of a Mitakshara coparcenary except to the extent that it seeks to ensure the female heirs and daughter's son specified in Class I of the Schedule a share in the interest of a coparcener in the event of his death by introducing the concept of a notional partition immediately before his death and the carving out of his aliquot share in the coparcenary property as of that date. The Act does not abolish the doctrine of acquisition of right by birth and the right of survivorship which are the invariable concomitants of the Mitakshara coparcenary. The section proceeds first by making provision for the retention of the right by survivorship and then engrafts on that rule the important qualification enacted by the proviso. The proviso operates only where the deceased has left him surviving a daughter's son or any female heir specified in Class I of the Schedule.

Illustrations

(a) A governed by the Mitakshara school inherits certain property from his father. A has a son B. The property so inherited being ancestral must be held by A in coparcenary with B. A must hold the property in coparcenary with B even if B is born after he inherits the property, because B acquires an interest in it by birth. If A dies intestate leaving him surviving his son B, his undivided interest in the coparcenary property will devolve upon B by survivorship and not by succession. The property in the hands of B being ancestral each son of B will upon his birth take an interest in it equal to that of his father. (Reference may be made to §§ 213-215).

(b) A and his sons, B and C, are members of a Mitakshara coparcenary. A dies intestate leaving him surviving his two sons who continue to be members of the joint family. A's undivided interest in the coparcenary property will devolve by survivorship upon B and C, and his separate property will devolve by succession upon B and C in equal shares in accordance with the rules laid down in sections 8, 9 and 10. The position will be similar if the coparcenary had consisted of A, his son B and the son or a grandson of a predeceased son C.

(c) In case of illustrations (a) and (b) above it is now competent to A to dispose of by will in any manner he likes his interest in the coparcenary property.

Proviso.—The proviso to the section confers new rights upon the specified female heirs and the predeceased daughter's son of a deceased coparcener and superimposes upon the integrated structure of the law relating to Mitakshara coparcenary a rule intended to be remedial and beneficial. In cases falling under the proviso the interest of the deceased coparcener, if he died without making a testamentary disposition of the same, devolves by intestate succession upon the persons who are among the twelve preferential heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. They inherit that interest simultaneously (sec. 9) and take it as tenants-in-common and not joint tenants [sec. 19(b)]. The son and daughter mentioned in Class I of the Schedule include an adopted son and adopted daughter. The other heirs specified in Class I include the widow of the deceased intestate and persons related to the intestate by blood as also those related to him by adoption (l).

The son and daughter mentioned in Class I of the Schedule include children of a void or voidable marriage who are, by the operation of sec. 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, to be deemed to be the legitimate children of their parents.

It is obvious that the expression "surviving" in the proviso qualifies both the "female relative" and the "male relative" following. It is also obvious that the expression "claims through such female relative" means one who traces relationship through a female relative mentioned in Class I of the Schedule. The only male relative specified in Class I and who claims through a female relative in the context of the proviso is the daughter's son that is son of a predeceased daughter of the male Hindu on whose death the devolution takes place (ll).

Cases can be imagined where the rule laid down in the proviso and the effect of the repeal of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, by sec. 31 of this Act, will raise some problems which may not admit of logically consistent answers and some anomalous situations and varying consequences are bound to result. The rule laid down in the initial part of the section comes attended with qualifications and by other rules no less important and it is in the light of the proviso and the explanations and the other rules of coparcenary law which are not abrogated that the section must be construed. One rule of construction that would probably assist is that that sense is to be adopted which best harmonises with the context and promotes in the fullest measure the object of the Legislature. Another rule of construction applicable to legislation of the type under consideration is that its proper construction and operation can be determined with reference to conditions and contingencies likely to arise after its commencement, because they could presumably have been within the contemplation of the Legislature. Some modification of the coparcenary law as previously applied is obviously intended and it is submitted that in construing the section the court will give full effect to the rule carved out by the proviso by introduction of a statutory fiction.

---

(l) See 'Relative by adoption' at p. 864 infra. A.M. 65.
(ll) Ranganathan v. Annamalai Chettiar ('68)

See Illustrations at pp. 852-854 infra.

It is not necessary for the proviso to come into operation that the deceased coparcener should have himself been competent to claim partition. Thus for instance the proviso will apply to the case of a minor coparcener. (See §§ 308 and 307.)

Analogous considerations arose when the Estate Duty Act, 1953, was on the anvil. Under the Mitakshara there is no inheritance in case of joint family property, because in case of death of a coparcener there is only devolution of property by survivorship. Evidently such property could not be excluded from the operation of the Estate Duty Act and it is there laid down that for the purpose of taxation the interest of a deceased coparcener should be treated as if his interest in the coparcenary property had been separated from the rest of the coparcenary property just prior to his death. That precedent has been followed in enacting the present rule.

Explanation I.—This explanation defines the expression "the interest of the deceased in the Mitakshara coparcenary property" and incorporates into the subject the concept of a notional partition. It is essential to note that this notional partition is for the purpose of enabling succession to and computation of an interest which was otherwise liable to devolve by survivorship and for the ascertainment of the shares in that interest of the relatives mentioned in Class I of the Schedule. Subject to such carving out of the interest of the deceased coparcener the other incidents of the coparcenary are left undisturbed and the joint family can continue without disruption. A statutory fiction which treats an imaginary state of affairs as real requires that the consequences and incidents of the putative state of affairs must flow from or accompany it as if the putative state of affairs had in fact existed (m) and effect must be given to the inevitable corollaries of that state of affairs. But the operation of the notional partition and its inevitable corollaries and incidents is to be only for the purposes of this section namely, devolution of interest of the deceased in coparcenary property.

Question of some importance arises whether this notional partition is to have the effect not merely of bringing about devolution of succession of the interest of a deceased coparcener in a Mitakshara family but goes further and results in a partition among all the members who would be entitled to a share in the coparcenary property when a regular partition takes place that is to say results in determining and vesting in them their aliquot shares and brings about severance of status among the surviving coparceners. Thus, for instance, where a deceased coparcener leaves him surviving a widow and two sons will the notional partition have the effect of vesting in the widow her aliquot share in the interest of the deceased (which would work out at 1/12 of the coparcenary property) but also of vesting in her and the two sons $\frac{1}{4}$ share each in the coparcenary property as would happen if the result is to be a complete partition brought about by the sons (under schools other than Madras the wife or widow mother gets an equal share on partition among father and sons or among sons after death of the father). The purpose for which the legal fiction is introduced is stated in clear language to provide for devolution by succession of the interest of a deceased coparcener. It is submitted that the purpose of the fiction ends there and its operation should not be extended so as to bring about a regular partition among all the members of the family. Of course in such a case if subsequently there is a partition among the sons the widow mother would get an equal share in addition to the fractional share which had become vested in her under the proviso to the section read with Explanation 1. The High Court of Bombay has taken a different view and held, in a case where a deceased coparcener had left him surviving his widow and a son, that the widow was entitled to claim her aliquot share out of the interest of the deceased coparcener and also a share on the footing that there had been an actual partition between her husband and the son (*m*1). The conclusion was founded inter alia on the rule that in construing a legal fiction it would be necessary to assume all those facts on which alone the fiction can operate and also on the celebrated dictum of Lord Asquith to which reference has been made in f. n. (m) above. The Supreme Court has pointed out that a legal fiction cannot be stretched or extended beyond its purpose (*m*2). In a decision of a full bench (*m*3) of the High Court of Kerala it was observed that what is provided in this section "is not a partition at all but devolution of interest of a person in coparcenary property. The notional partition mentioned therein is solely for the purpose of ascertaining the extent of such interest as would be subject of devolution when the deceased Hindu died undivided from his coparcener". In a recent decision of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh (*m*4) the view has been expressed that the devolution of the interest of a deceased coparcener on notional partition envisaged in the section cannot have the effect of a partition of the joint family property and disruption of the joint family status. It is submitted that the views taken in the decision of the Bombay High Court referred to above would bring about wide and far reaching consequences much beyond the scope of the statutory fiction operation of which should be limited to its avowed object.

---

(m) See observations in State of Bombay v. Pandurang (1953) S.C.R. 773, 778, 779. Reference may also be made to the oft-quoted dictum of Lord Asquith in East End Dwelling Co. Ltd. v Finsbury Borough Council (1952) A.C. 109.

---

(*m*1) Rangubai v. Laxman ('66) A.B. 169 Contra Shirambai v. Kalagoda ('64) A.B. 263.

(*m*2) State of Travancore Cochin v. Shanmugha Vilas Cashew Nut Factory (1954) S.C.R. 53, 81, 82. Also see Bengal Immunity Co. Ltd. v. State of Bihar (1955) 2 S.C.R. 603, 646 [created only for definite purpose: should not be extended: to be limited to the avowed purpose].

(*m*3) Venkateswara v. Luis ('64) A. Kerala 125 (F.B.). Also see Controller of Estate Duty v. Anari Devi ('72) A.A. 179 which affords a useful illustration: See Illustration (*n*1) infra.

(*m*4) Neelayya v. Ramaswami ('73) A.A.P. 58.

The quantum of the share to be allotted to the heirs of the deceased coparcener will be on the footing of the coparcenery property existing at the date of his death when the notional partition is to be deemed to have taken place and not of the property as may exist at the date of the actual allotment and delivery of that share to the heirs. The fluctuations in the fortunes of the family between the two dates would be irrelevant to the purpose (*m*5).

Illustrations

(m) A governed by the Mitakshara school inherits certain property from his father. A dies intestate leaving his widow A1 and son B. Since A has died leaving him surviving a female relative specified in Class I of the Schedule, the case will be governed by the proviso. A's undivided interest in the coparcenary property will not devolve by survivorship upon B but will devolve by succession upon *A*1 and B and their shares in it will be equal in accordance with the rules laid down in sections 8, 9 and 10. A's separate property will devolve by succession upon *A*1 and B in equal shares in accordance with the rules laid down in sections 8, 9 and 10.

Also see illus. (2) at p. 853 infra.

(n) A and his sons, B and C, are members of a Mitakshara coparcenary. A dies intestate leaving him surviving his widow *A*1 and his two sons. B and C continue to be members of the joint family. A's undivided interest in the coparcenary property will not devolve by survivorship upon B and C but will devolve by succession upon *A*1, B and C and their shares in it will be equal in accordance with the rules laid down in sections 8, 9 and 10. The position will be similar if in addition to B and C the deceased has left him surviving a daughter or a predeceased daughter's son or any other female relative specified in Class I of the Schedule of heirs. Such other relatives for instance may be mother, daughter of a predeceased daughter and daughter of a predeceased son (n).

Also see illus. (1) at p. 853, infra.

(*n*1) A and his son B are members of a Mitakshara coparcenary. A dies intestate leaving him surviving his son B, his two widows *W*1 and *W*2 and three daughters. A's undivided interest devolved by succession upon the son, the widows and the daughters. *W*1 died sometime thereafter. According to R. 1 of section 10 which has to be read with section 8 *W*1 and *W*2 together had taken one share in the interest of A. The son and the three daughters would have been entitled to a one fifth share each. *W*1's share in the interest of A in the coparcenary property will be one tenth of one fourth since in the notional partition A's share was one-fourth of the entire coparcenary property (*n*1).

(o) A inherits considerable property from his father and he and his son B are members of a Mitakshara coparcenary. A dies intestate leaving him surviving his widow *A*1, son B, two daughters *D*1 and *D*2 and DS the son of a predeceased daughter. A's undivided interest in the coparcenary property will not devolve upon B by survivorship but will devolve by succession upon *A*1, B, *D*1, *D*2 and DS in equal shares in accordance with the rules laid down in sections 8, 9 and 10.

(p) A and his sons, B and C, were members of a Mitakshara coparcenary. C took his share of the joint property and separated himself from the family and A and B continued to be joint. A dies intestate leaving him surviving a daughter D and his two sons. A's undivided interest in the coparcenary property will not devolve upon B by survivorship but will devolve by succession upon B and D. Although B, C and D are the heirs of A according to section 8 read with Class I of the Schedule, C having separated from the coparcenary is not entitled to a share in the interest of A in the coparcenary of which A and B had continued to be members. If, however, A has left any separate or self-acquired property it will devolve by succession upon B, C and D in equal shares notwithstanding C's separation from the joint family (see "divided son" p. 867 infra). Under the old law C would not have been entitled to claim any share even in the separate or self-acquired property of A. See § 43—"Divided and undivided sons" at p. 108 supra and § 341 supra.

---

(*m*5) Karuppa Karuppa Gounder v. Palaniammai ('63) A.M. 245; (1963) 1 Mad. L.J. 86.

(n) In Ananda v. Haribandhu ('67) A. Orissa 194 there was a partition suit in respect of the entire property. The shares were correctly determined but there are observations correctness of which must be doubted.

(*n*1) Controller of Estate Duty v. Anari Devi ('72) A.A. 179.

Computation of the interest of the deceased coparcener.—The undivided share of the deceased coparcener for the purpose of giving effect to the rule laid down in the proviso, as already pointed out, is to be ascertained on the footing of a notional partition as of the date of his death. The determination of that share must depend on the number of persons who would have been entitled to a share in the coparcenary property if a partition had in fact taken place immediately before his death and such persons would have to be ascertained according to the law of joint family and partition. The Act regulates succession and does not contain the law of joint family and partition. The rules of Hindu law on the subject in force on the date of the death of the coparcener must, therefore, govern the question of ascertainment of the persons who would have been entitled to a share on the notional partition.

Illustrations

1. In illustration (n) above, it is stated that A's undivided interest will devolve by succession upon his widow *A*1 and his two sons B and C. That share of A will have to be computed according to the law of partition applicable to the parties on the date of A's death. If a partition had in fact taken place immediately before his death A, in all States except Madras, would have been entitled to ¼ of the property since *A*1 the wife would have become entitled to receive a share equal to that of a son and the property would have been divided in four parts. That ¼ interest of A will therefore devolve by succession upon *A*1, B and C and in all States other than Madras. *A*1 will become entitled to 1/12 of the entire coparcenary property as one of the heirs of A. In Madras the share of A on such notional partition will be computed at 1/3 and *A*1 will become entitled to 1/9 of the property.

If A has not left a widow but a daughter or any other female relative specified in Class I of the Schedule of heirs or a predeceased daughter's son A's interest will be computed as 1/3 and it will in all States devolve by succession upon such relative or relatives and the two sons B and C. The division of this 1/3 interest will be in accordance with the rules laid down in sections 8, 9 and 10.

2. In illustrations (m) above, *A*1 as the wife of A would have, at the time of the notional partition, been entitled in all States other than Madras to receive a share equal to that of a son and therefore A would have received 1/3 of the coparcenary property and not ½ of the same. That 1/3 share of A will devolve by succession upon *A*1 and B in equal parts. The result will be that *A*1 will get only 1/6 of the entire property. In Madras *A*1 will be entitled to ¼ of the property because on the notional partition A's share would have been ½ and not 1/3 of the property.

Under the old law as modified by the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, the case would have been governed by s. 3(2) of that Act and *A*1 as the widow of A would have become entitled to a larger share viz. "the same interest as he himself had," that is one-half. That interest of *A*1 would however have been the limited interest known as a Hindu Woman's estate. The Act of 1937 is repealed by the present Act and the share of *A*1 will be 1/6 or ¼ as stated above but as absolute owner.

2A. See illustration (*n*1) above.

3. A and his sons B and C were members of a Mitakshara coparcenary. C died prior to the coming into operation of this Act (and therefore before the repeal of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937) leaving him surviving his widow *C*1. A dies (after the coming into operation of this Act) leaving him surviving B, *C*1 and his daughter D. A's interest will be computed as 1/3 since by virtue of s. 3(2) and s. 3(3) of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, on the death of C, *C*1 had obtained in the coparcenary the same interest which C himself had and the same right of claiming partition which C had. That interest and right having accrued and acquired by *C*1 under the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, is not affected by the repeal of that enactment [s. 6(c) General Clauses Act]. The 1/3 interest of A will devolve by succession upon B, *C*1 and D in equal shares in accordance with the rules laid down in sections 8, 9 and 10 of the Act.

Subsequent Partition between surviving coparceners.—The effect of the proviso is that any of the female heirs and a daughter's son specified in the proviso read with Class I of the Schedule can claim to succeed not only to the separate or self-acquired property but also to the interest of the deceased in coparcenary property. Their shares would be ascertained in accordance with the relevant rules in sections 8, 9 and 10 and the other general provisions of the Act relating to succession. This would be regardless of the fact that the deceased coparcener had left any son, grandson or great grandson. It is only by a fiction of law that a partition is to be deemed to have taken place as regards the interest of the deceased coparcener in any such case and the existence or constitution of the coparcenary quoad the surviving coparceners is not otherwise affected. Where the surviving coparceners continue as before to be members of the coparcenary after paying out the share of the deceased coparcener and a partition subsequently takes place between them and the joint family property is to be divided, it would become necessary to have regard to the quantum of the share of the deceased coparcener distributed amongst his heirs under the proviso. The division, it is submitted, would be on equitable principles [See Illustration below].

Illustrations

A Mitakshara coparcenary consisted of two brothers A and *B; A*1, *A*2 and *A*3 the sons of A; and *B*1 the son of B. The brothers had inherited ancestral property. A died leaving him surviving his sons *A*1, *A*2 and *A*3, daughter D and a predeceased daughter's son DS. Thereupon D and DS claimed their shares as heirs out of the undivided coparcenary interest of A in the joint family property. A's share would have been 1/8th if there had been a partition between him and other members of the coparcenary immediately before his death. D and DS became entitled to 1/5th each of A's 1/8th share in the joint family property and they were paid off their aliquot shares. *A*1, *A*2 and *A*3 continued to be joint with B and *B*1. Some time thereafter partition takes place between *A*1, *A*2, *A*3, B and *B*1. The division will be per stirpe and not per capita, that is, B and *B*1 as between them will be entitled to half the joint family property in existence at the time of the subsequent partition and *A*1, *A*2 and *A*3 between them will be entitled to half the property. But on equitable principles, the amount paid out to D and DS, it is submitted, will be taken into account as having gone out of the coparcenary property and for which the branch of B was not liable.

Debts of a deceased coparcener.—The question—"Undivided coparcenary interest, when liable for coparcener's debt" has been dealt with in § 289. When a male Hindu dies after the commencement of this Act, having at the time of his death an interest in a Mitakshara coparcenary, his undivided interest will not devolve by survivorship upon the other coparceners in cases falling under the proviso, that is, if he dies leaving him surviving any of the male or female relatives specified there but will devolve by succession. If, however, he dies without leaving any such male or female relatives his undivided interest will devolve by survivorship upon the surviving members of the coparcenary and not in accordance with this Act. The law relating to 'Debts' stated in Chapter XIV of this work has not been amended or codified by the new legislation. The present section, however, has some bearing on the subject. Where the undivided interest of a person governed by the Mitakshara law is attached in his lifetime in execution of a decree against him for his personal debt, it may be sold after his death whether the order for sale was made in his lifetime or after his death. But it cannot be attached after his death (except where the coparcener is the father), for it then ceases to be his interest and passes to the other coparceners by survivorship. It is only an attachment effected during the lifetime of the debtor that will prevent the accrual of his interest to his coparceners by survivorship (*n*2). The effect of the proviso to the present section is that there will be no devolution of the interest of the deceased coparcener by survivorship in cases falling under it with the result that when his interest devolves by succession by operation of the proviso the rights of the creditor will not be affected and will be governed by the rule stated in § 288 which deals with the question of liability of "heirs" for debts. The position will be different where there is devolution of such interest by survivorship and the rules stated in § 289 will apply. The pious obligation of a son, grandson and great grandson remains the same as stated in Chapter XIV of this work. The Dayabhaga law of debts is very simple as pointed out in Chapter XV.

Parties to suit relating to any property affected by the proviso.—Where the death of a coparcener takes place in a family falling under the proviso the female heirs and a predeceased daughter's son (along with other heirs of the deceased coparcener) inherit an interest in the joint family property and that interest becomes vested in them. In such a case all the persons interested in the property will be necessary parties to any suit affecting any property or asset of the family. The eldest male member of the family cannot represent all of them as Karta of the family (*n*3).

Explanation II: Separated member.—When partition takes place between members of a joint family every coparcener is entitled to a share. But a partition between coparceners may be partial as for instance when one coparcener separates from the others and the others do not separate but continue to remain joint or become reunited (§ 328). In such a case on the death of any such coparcener the proviso will come into operation but the separated member or his heirs cannot claim any share in the interest of the deceased in the coparcenary he having already gone out of the coparcenary. Explanation II is intended to make the position clear. The rule stated in the Explanation will apply even where at the time of the separation of a member the coparcenary consisted of only two members, for instance a father and a son and the son became separated from the father and obtained his share of the ancestral property. In such a case if there is a son begotten and born to the father after the partition the share of the ancestral property acquired by the father will immediately become property of a coparcenary consisting of the father and the son or sons begotten and born after such partition (o). And in case the father thereafter dies intestate the separated son or his heirs cannot claim a share out of the interest of the father in such coparcenary by relying on the rule laid down in the proviso. As regards the separate or self-acquired property of the father the position will be different because now under section 8 in a (*n*2) See § 289 ante.

---

(*n*3) P. Govinda Reddy v. Golla Obulamma ('71) A.A.P. 363 (F.B.). [Suit on mortgage in favour of joint family]; Govindram v. Chotumal ('70) A.B. 251 [suit in respect of monies advanced by deceased Karta of joint family]. Narayan Prasad v. Mutuni Kohain ('69) A.C. 69; Venkateswara v. Luis ('64) A. Kerala 125 [Karta cannot represent family where one of the coparceners dies and the Explanation applies]. Also see Kashinath Prasad v. Dharamnath ('73) A.P. 110. And see Neelayya v. Ramaswami ('73) A.A.P. 58.

(o) Reference may be made to §§ 309 and 310, ante.

case of this nature a separated son is entitled to a share in such property left by the father (p).

Illustrations

(1) A and his sons B and C constitute a Mitakshara coparcenary. B separates himself from the family and takes his one-third share of the coparcenary property. A and C continue to be joint as before. A dies intestate thereafter leaving him surviving his daughter D and his two sons. On A's death A's interest in the coparcenary will not devolve upon C by survivorship, but by operation of the proviso it will devolve by succession upon C and D in equal shares (section 8). B will have no claim for any share in the same. He will, however, be entitled to a share in the separate or self-acquired property left by A.

(2) A and his son B constitute a Mitakshara coparcenary. B's mother had died leaving her husband A, son B and daughter D. B separates from his father and takes his one-half share in the coparcenary property. A marries again and a son C is born to him by his wife W with the result that A and C become members in a coparcenary consisting of the two of them. On A dying intestate thereafter his share in the coparcenary will not devolve by survivorship upon C but by operation of the proviso it will devolve by succession upon his son C, widow W and daughter D in equal shares (section 8). B will have no claim for any share in the same. He will, however, be entitled to a share in the separate or self-acquired property of A.

(3) A and his son B (by his first wife) constitute a Mitakshara coparcenary. B separates from his father and takes his one-half share in the coparcenary property. A dies intestate thereafter leaving him surviving his second wife W, two daughters C and D by his first and second wife respectively and his divided son B. There being no coparcenary in existence at the death of A this section will have no application and the property left by A will devolve by succession under section 8 on W, C, D and the divided son B in equal shares (*p*1).

7. (1) When a Hindu to whom the marumakkattayam or nambudri law would have applied if this Act had not been passed dies after the commencement of this Act, having at the time of his or her death an interest in the property of a tarwad, tavazhi or illom, as the case may be, his or her interest in the property shall devolve by testamentary or intestate succession, as the case may be, under this Act and not according to the marumakkattayam or nambudri law.

Devolution of interest in the property of a tarwad tavazhi, kutumba, kavaru or illom.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this sub-section, the interest of a Hindu in the property of a tarwad, tavazhi or illom shall be deemed to be the share in the property of the tarwad, tavazhi or illom, as the case may be, that would have fallen to him or her if a partition of that property per capita had been made immediately before his or her death among all the members of the tarwad, tavazhi or illom, as the case may be, then living, whether he or she was entitled to claim such partition or not under the marumakkattayam or nambudri law applicable to him or her, and such share shall be deemed to have been allotted to him or her absolutely.

(2) When a Hindu to whom the aliyasantana law would have applied if this Act had not been passed dies after the commencement of this Act, having at the time of his or her death an undivided interest in the property of a kutumba or kavaru, as the case may be, his or her interest in the property shall devolve by testamentary or intestate succession, as the case may be, under this Act and not according to the aliyasantana law.

---

(p) See "Divided son" at p. 867, infra. Also see Notes under "divided son" under section 8 post.

(*p*1) Appalanaidu v. Narayana ('72) A.A.P. 258.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this sub-section, the interest of a Hindu in the property of a kutumba or kavaru shall be deemed to be the share in the property of the kutumba or kavaru, as the case may be, that would have fallen to him or her if a partition of that property per capita had been made immediately before his or her death among all the members of the kutumba or kavaru, as the case may be, then living, whether he or she was entitled to claim such partition or not under the aliyasantana law, and such share shall be deemed to have been alloted to him or her absolutely.

(3) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), when a sthanamdar dies after the commencement of this Act, the sthanam property held by him shall devolve upon the members of the family to which the sthanamdar belonged and the heirs of the sthanamdar as if the sthanam property had been divided per capita immediately before the death of the sthanamdar among himself and all the members of his family then living, and the shares falling to the members of his family and the heirs of the sthanamdar shall be held by them as their separate property.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this sub-section, the family of a sthanamdar shall include every branch of that family, whether divided or undivided, the male members of which would have been entitled by any custom or usage to succeed to the position of sthanamdar if this Act had not been passed.

Devolution of interest in the property of a tarwad, tavazhi, kutumba, kavaru, or illom.—The definitions in clauses (b), (h) and (i) of section 3 are, as already mentioned, inserted to facilitate the application of the rules of succession laid down in this Act to persons governed by the Aliyasantana, Marumakkattayam and Nambudri laws. The effect of this section and section 17 is to regulate succession to property of persons hitherto governed by those systems prevalent in certain parts of the South by the simple rules of inheritance laid down in the Act and which keep in view certain features of those systems. As the Joint Committee has observed this clause regulates succession to the interest of an intestate in any property belonging to any of the various kinds of joint families specified therein which are peculiar to the South and West Coast of India. In the case of sthanam properties which are specially assigned to a senior member of a joint family for the purpose of preserving his dignity, sub-clause (2) provides for a notional partition immediately before the death of the sthanamdar so that his interest will pass, not by any special rule of descent to a single heir, but in accordance with this law.

Mr. Justice Sundara Ayyar of the Madras High Court has written an excellent treatise on the customary laws of Malabar and South Kanara. His 'Malabar and Aliyasanthana law' is recognised as an authoritative work and was referred to by the Privy Council in the undermentioned case (q). In view of the fundamental and radical changes brought about in the law by the present enactment it is not deemed necessary to state the previous law on the subject and the reader is referred to the above treatise. The Supreme Court had occasion to refer to some broad aspects of this law in some recent decisions (*q*1).

Marumakkattayam law is a body of customs and usages which have received judicial sanction. It prevails among a considerable section of the people inhabiting the west coast of South India. The essential difference between Marumakkattayam and the other schools of Hindu law is that the former is founded on the matriarchate while the latter is founded upon the agnetic family. In the Mitakshara joint family the members claim there descent from a common ancestor but in a Marumakkattayam family which is known as the tarwad the descent is from a common ancestress. Mayne compares a tarwad to a family corporation. Every member of a tarwad has equal rights in the property by reason of his birth or her birth in the tarwad. It was laid down in a course of judicial decisions in the nineteenth century that one or more members of a tarwad cannot claim partition and separate possession of his or her share of the tarwad property without the consent or concurrence of all the members of the tarwad. The Madras Legisiature enacted certain statutes giving a right of partition to the members of a tarwad to enforce partition of a tarwad property. The shares on partition were to be on per capita basis (*q*2).

Under the customary Marumakkattayam law no partition of the family estate may be made, but items of the family property may by agreement be separately enjoyed by the members. On death the interest of a member devolved by survivorship. Management of the family property remained in the hands of the eldest male member, and in the absence of a male member a female member. A tarwad may consist of two or more branches known as thavazhies, each tawazhi or branch consisting of one of the female members of the tarwad and her children and all her descendents in the female line. Every tarwad consisted of a mother and her children—male and female—living in commensality, with joint rights in property. The customary law was modified in certain respects from time to time by the Madras Legislature. There were several legislative measures also in the States of Travancore and Cochin before they merged with the Indian Union. Those statutes also made significant changes in the customary law governing the family and property relations between the members governed by the Marumakkattayam law (*q*3). In the undermentioned case the Supreme Court (*qq*3) had to examine the question of property acquired in the name of a junior member of a tarwad and the application or otherwise of the rules of presumption in respect of self-acquisition of property by a member.

Sub-section (1):—This sub-section relates only to the Marumakkattayam and Nambudri laws. It gives an enactment parallel to that in section 6 and Explanation I to the same. The expressions tarwad, tawazhi and illom were defined in the relevant enactments mentioned in the definition clauses in section 3 and which enactments are now over-ridden by operation of section 4 of this Act.

This sub-section does not affect the rights of parties before a partition. Section 43 of the Travancore Kshatriya Act, in unambiguous terms, confers a right of partition upon all the members of a Kshatriya Tarwad since the date of that Act coming into force. The right to partition without the concurrence of others is a valuable right in property which must be available for

---

(q) Kochunni v. Kuttanunni ('48) P.C. 47, 53.
(*q*1) See f.n. (*q*2) and f.n. (*q*3) below.
(*q*2) Balakrishna Menon v. Asst. Controller of Estate Duty ('71) A.S.C. 2392.
(*q*3) Venugopala Ravi Varma Raja v. Union of India ('69) A.S.C. 1094.
(*qq*3) Achuthan Nair v. C. Amma ('66) A.S.C. 411.

attachment and sale by the person to whom a debt was due by the deceased member of the Tarwad (*q*4).

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section relates to the Aliyasantana law. It gives an enactment parallel to that in section 6 and Explanation I to the same. The expression kutumba and kavaru were defined in the relevant enactment mentioned in the definition clause in section 3 of this Act and which enactment is now overriden by operation of section 4 of this Act. The undermentioned decision illustrates the application of this sub-section read with the Explanation to the same (*qq*4).

A brief survey of the customary Aliyasantana law regarding succession, partition and devolution of shares will be found in the undermentioned Full Bench decisions of the High Court of Mysore and other decisions there stated (*q*5). The present Act has brought about some important changes in the customary Aliyasantana law as modified by Madras Act 9 of 1949 as pointed out in the undermentioned decision of the High Court of Mysore (*q*6). Also see Madras Aliyasantana (Mysore Amendment) Act 1 of 1962.

Neither under the customary law nor under the Aliyasantana Act, 1949, the interest of a coparcener in an Aliyasantana Kutumba could have been disposed of by a will. In that regard a definite change in the law is made by the Explanation to section 30 of the present Act with the result that now a member of an individual Aliyasantana Kutumba can dispose of his interest in the Kutumba properties by a will. But this does not mean that otherwise the rights of a divided member have been enlarged. In a case decided by a Full Bench of the Mysore High Court Kutumba properties were partitioned and under the preliminary decree, A, a nissanthathi Kavaru, obtained a share in the same. Under section 36(3) of the Madras Aliyasanthana Act, 1949, A got a life interest in the properties allotted to him. By a will executed by A, he purported to bequeath the same. It was held that the contention that the interest obtained by A under the preliminary decree stood enlarged by the operation of section 30(1) of the present Act must fail (*q*7).

Sub-section (3): Devolution of sthanam property.—This sub-section relates to sthanam property and devolution of such property on the death of a sthanamdar. The Act does not define the expression sthanam which means (r) the status and attendant property of senior rajas. In Moore's Malabar Law and Custom it is defined as a station, rank or dignity. The holder of a sthanam is referred to as a sthani or sthanamdar. The ancient rulers of the Malabar coast possessed stanoms and it may be taken that the lands which they held as rulers were regarded as being stanom in character. Rulers granted stanoms to their subsidiary chieftains and public officers. The grant of a stanom to a subsidiary ruler or public officer was usually accompanied by a grant of land for the maintenance of the dignity. In Mr. Sundara Ayyar's

---

(*q*4) Bank of New India v. S. Ponnamma ('61) A Kerala 105 (F.B.). Also see Notes under section 30 post.

(*qq*4) Laxmi v. Parameshwari ('69) A. Mys. 175.

(*q*5) Sundara v. Girija ('62) A. Mys. 72 (F.B.); Bhagirathi v. Darakke (1965) 2 Mys. L.J. 796 (F.B.).

(*q*6) Ratnamala v. State of Mysore ('68) A. Mys. 216. In Gummanna v. Nagaveniamma ('67) A.S.C. 159 the Supreme Court had to examine the Madras Act 9 of 1949 and on construction of a document of 1900 held that it was not a deed of partition but only a family settlement.

(*q*7) Sundara v. Girija ('62) A. Mys. 72 (F.B.).

(r) Malabar and Aliyasanthanam Law.

work a chapter is devoted to this subject and it is there pointed out that in addition to the families of princes and chieftains there were other families possessing stanoms without any particular dignity attaching to them. In ancient days when a family became opulent and influential the members of the tarwad sometimes agreed to set aside for the karnavan certain property in order that he might keep up his social position and influence and this property descended to the next head of the family (s). Reference may also be made to the decision of the Privy Council (t) and to the decision of the Supreme Court in the undermentioned cases (u).

The incidents of the sthanam were that the senior most member of the family became the sthanamdar who was usually the male member; but there were instances where the senior most female member became the sthanamdar. Separate properties belonged to each sthanam and they vested in the holder of the office for the time being and descended to the successors in office. One important feature was that a sthanamdar ceased to have any interest in the property on his death and the members of his tarwad had in their turn only reversionary rights to the sthanam property. The sthanamdar had a limited interest in the sense that he could encumber or alienate the sthanam property only for a legal necessity like any limited owner but otherwise he was absolutely entitled to the income accruing during his tenure of office. His position was analogous to that of a holder of an impartible estate. His successor had no interest in it and the right of the successor was nothing more than a spes successionis (*u*1).

Now all the sthanams will gradually get liquidated by operation of this Act. The present sub-section regulates the devolution of the sthanam property held by a sthanamdar who dies after the commencement of this Act. The effect of it is that sthanams continue till the death of the sthanamdar and thereafter the sthanam property devolves upon the members of the family to which he belonged and his personal heirs. The division is to be per capita on the basis of a notional partition having taken place immediately before his death. This result, as pointed out by the Supreme Court in Balakrishna Menon v. Asst. Controller of Estate Duty (*u*1), is brought about by the legal fiction enacted in this sub-section. The legal fiction, however, has to be confined for the purpose for which it is enacted and not to be extended further so as to include an actual division or partition having been effected in the lifetime of the sthanamdar with the result that there was a division or partition for all purposes.

General rules of succession in the case of males.

8. The property of a male Hindu dying intestate shall devolve according to the provisions of this Chapter:—

(a) firstly, upon the heirs, being the relatives specified in class I of the Schedule;

(b) secondly, if there is no heir of class I, then upon the heirs, being the relatives specified in class II of the Schedule;

(c) thirdly, if there is no heir of any of the two classes, then upon the agnates of the deceased; and

---

(s) Kuttan Unni v. Kochunni ('44) A.M. 378.
(t) Kochunni v. Kuttanunni ('48) A.P.C. 47.
(u) Kochuni v. States of Madras & Kerala ('60) A.S.C. 1080; Balakrishna Menon v. Asst. Controller of Estate Duty ('71) A.S.C. 2392.
(*u*1) Balakrishna Menon v. Asst. Controller of Estate Duty ('71) A.S.C. 2392 confirming Asstt. Controller of Estate Duty v. Balakrishna Menon ('67) A. Kerala 210 (F.B.). Also see Balakrishna Menon v. Inspecting Asst. Commissioner ('69) A. Kerala 1 (F.B.) for nature of estate of a sthanamdar.

(d) lastly, if there is no agnate, then upon the cognates of the deceased.

Succession to property of a male dying intestate.—This section propounds a new and definite scheme of succession and lays down certain rules of succession to the property of a male Hindu who dies intestate after the commencement of the Act. The rules are pivotal and have to be read along with the Schedule. They have also to be read with certain other sections (particularly sections 9 to 13) in the Chapter which contain supplementary provisions which are not merely explanatory but lay down substantive rules involving legal principles. Sections 8 to 13 contain a fasciculus of rules which must be read together. Notes on sections 9 to 13 are given under those sections. The Schedule referred to in section 8 above and sections 9 to 13 are repeated here only to facilitate reference:

THE SCHEDULE

(See section 8)

HEIRS IN CLASS I AND CLASS II

Class I

Son; daughter; widow; mother; son of a predeceased son; daughter of a predeceased son; son of a predeceased daughter; daughter of a predeceased daughter; widow of a predeceased son; son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son; daughter of a predeceased son of a predeceased son; widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son.

Class II

I. Father.

II. (1) Son's daughter's son, (2) son's daughter's daughter, (3) brother, (4) sister.

III. (1) Daughter's son's son, (2) daughter's son's daughter, (3) daughter's daughter's son, (4) daughter's daughter's daughter.

IV. (1) Brother's son, (2) sister's son, (3) brother's daughter, (4) sister's daughter.

V. Father's father; father's mother.

VI. Father's widow; brother's widow.

VII. Father's brother; father's sister.

VIII. Mother's father; mother's mother.

IX. Mother's brother; mother's sister.

Explanation.—In this Schedule, references to a brother or sister do not include references to a brother or sister by uterine blood.

9. Order of succession among heirs in the Schedule.—Among the heirs specified in the Schedule, those in class I shall take simultaneously and to the exclusion of all other heirs; those in the first entry in class II shall be preferred to those in the second entry; those in the second entry shall be preferred to those in the third entry; and so on in succession.

10. Distribution of property among heirs in class I of the Schedule.—The property of an intestate shall be divided among the heirs in class I of the Schedule in accordance with the following rules:—

Rule 1.—The intestate's widow, or if there are more widows than one, all the widows together, shall take one share.

Rule 2.—The surviving sons and daughters and the mother of the intestate shall each take one share.

Rule 3.—The heirs in the branch of each pre-deceased son or each pre-deceased daughter of the intestate shall take between them one share.

Rule 4.—The distribution of the share referred to in Rule 3—

(i) among the heirs in the branch of the pre-deceased son shall be so made that his widow (or widows together) and the surviving sons and daughters get equal portions; and the branch of his pre-deceased sons gets the same portion;

(ii) among the heirs in the branch of the pre-deceased daughter shall be so made that the surviving sons and daughters get equal portions.

11. Distribution of property among heirs in class II of the Schedule.—The property of an intestate shall be divided between the heirs specified in any one entry in class II of the Schedule so that they share equally.

12. Order of succession among agnates and cognates.—The order of succession among agnates or cognates, as the case may be, shall be determined in accordance with the rules of preference laid down hereunder:—

Rule 1.—Of two heirs, the one who has fewer or no degrees of ascent is preferred.

Rule 2.—Where the number of degrees of ascent is the same or none, that heir is preferred who has fewer or no degrees of descent.

Rule 3.—Where neither heir is entitled to be preferred to the other under Rule 1 or Rule 2 they take simultaneously.

13. Computation of degrees.—(1) For the purposes of determining the order of succession among agnates or cognates, relationship shall be reckoned from the intestate to the heir in terms of degrees of ascent or degrees of descent or both, as the case may be.

(2) Degrees of ascent and degrees of descent shall be computed inclusive of the intestate.

(3) Every generation constitutes a degree either ascending or descending.

Four categories of heirs.—This section groups the heirs of a male intestate into four categories and lays down that his heritable property devolves firstly upon the heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. They are the son; daughter; widow; mother; son of a predeceased son; daughter of a predeceased son; son of a predeceased daughter; daughter of a predeceased daughter; widow of a predeceased son; son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son; daughter of a predeceased son of a predeceased son and widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son. Under the old law in force before 1937 the "simultaneous heirs" of a male intestate consisted only of the son, the son of a predeceased son and the son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son. This was enlarged by the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, by adding three more heirs, viz. the widow of the intestate and the widows of the predeceased son and of the predeceased son of a predeceased son. All the six heirs succeeded simultaneously and the doctrine of representation applied to their case.

In Class I of the Schedule the Act enumerates twelve heirs so as to include in the new scheme of heirs the mother and the daughter of the intestate and some more descendants, the latter by reference to the principle of representation. All these heirs inherit simultaneously. On failure of any such heir specified in Class I the property devolves upon the enumerated heirs specified in Class II, a heir in the first entry in Class II being preferred to one in the second entry and so on in succession. If there is no heir belonging to Class I or even Class II the property devolves upon the agnates of the deceased. A person is said to be an 'agnate' of another if the two are related by blood or adoption wholly through males. Lastly if there is no agnate of the deceased in existence at the time of his death the property devolves upon his cognates. A person is said to be a 'cognate' of another if the two are related by blood or adoption but not wholly through males.

Property.—The expression 'property' in this section means all property (*u*2) of the deceased intestate heritable under the Act. It includes not only his separate or self-acquired property but his interest in a Mitakshara coparcenary property in case he has left him surviving any of the female heirs or a daughter's son mentioned in Class I of the Schedule. It also includes agricultural land (*u*3) subject to this that legislation relating to prevention of fragmentation of agricultural holdings or fixation of ceilings or the devolution of tenancy rights in respect of such holdings is not to be affected by anything contained in this Act. But the rules of succession laid down in the Act do not apply to the property expressly excluded from the operation of the Act by section 5.

". . . property of a male Hindu . . . shall devolve".—The language of the section and particularly the words "shall devolve" plainly indicate that the section is prospective in its operation. It applies where on death of a male intestate devolution of his property takes place after the commencement of the Act and does not govern succession to the property of a male Hindu whose death took place before the commencement of the Act (v). In the latter case

---

(*u*2) As to succession to upasara property on death of a Jain Yati see Sumer Chand v. State of Rajasthan ('65) A. Raj. 2.

(*u*3) See f.n. (k) at p. 845 supra.

(v) Eramma v. Veerupana ('66) A.S.C. 1879; Jandebi v. Upendra ('68) A. Orissa 187; Satyanarayana v. Seethamma ('72) A. Mys. 247; Kempiah v. Girigamma ('66) A. Mys. 189; Sampathkumari v. Lakshmi Ammal ('63) A.M. 50; Nathuni Missir v. Ratna Kuer ('63) A.P. 337. Renukha Bala v. Aswini Kumar ('61) A.P. 498. Sheoraj Singh v. Munia ('63) A.M.P. 360. Gopi Chand v. Bedamo Kuer ('66) A.P. 231 [no divesting of property already vested].

all questions of inheritance would be determined according to the previous law.

". . . according to the provisions of this Chapter".—Chapter II contains a number of provisions which are supplementary to the primary and pivotal rules laid down in this section. The following are the important provisions. The order of succession among the heirs enumerated in Class I and Class II of the Schedule is governed by s. 9. The order of succession in case of agnates and cognates, ascertaining the nearest in relationship among them to the deceased, is to be in accordance with the rules of preference and computation of degrees stated in sections 12 and 13. The computation of the shares of the various heirs in the four classes is regulated by the rules laid down in sections 9 to 13. Section 17 contains some special provisions respecting persons governed by Marumakkattayam and Aliyasantana laws. Section 18 lays down that an heir related by full blood is to be preferred to one related by half blood when both stand in the same relationship with the deceased. As a general rule two or more heirs who succeed together take the property as tenants-in-common as laid down in s. 19. Section 20 rules that a child en ventre sa mere has the same rights to inherit as if he or she had been born before the death of the intestate.

Relative by adoption.—The words ". . . upon the heirs, being the relatives specified in Class . . . of the Schedule" which appear in clauses (a) and (b) of the section and Classes I and II of the Schedule mentioned in those clauses do not expressly refer to relationship by adoption; nor does any relevant definition expressly refer to such relationship. The expression "heir" is defined to mean any person, male or female, who is entitled to succeed to the property of an intestate under the Act [s. 3(f)] and the expression "related" is defined to mean "related by legitimate kinship" [s. 3(j)]. It is a rudimentary rule of Hindu law that the adopted son must be deemed to have been begotten by the adoptive father on his own wife and that adoption operates as birth of the adoptee in the family of adoption thus creating legitimate kinship between him and the members of the adoptive family.

The question whether a person who is a relative by adoption is or is not an heir under Class I or Class II of the Schedule must be determined by reference to the rules of Hindu law relating to adoption and where the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, applies the determination must be in accordance with the provisions of that enactment. Under the Hindu law of adoption, which was operative at the time of the passing of the Hindu Succession Act and continued to be in operation till the coming into force of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, adoption had the effect of transferring the adopted boy from his natural family into the adoptive family. It also had the effect of conferring upon the adoptee the same rights and privileges in the family of the adopter as the legitimate son except in a few cases which related inter alia to the share on a partition between an adopted and the atterborn son (see § 494 ante). It followed as a necessary corollary to the rule that children born to the adoptee after his adoption acquired rights and privileges in the adoptive family of their father as if the father had been a natural born son in that family. Adoptions are now regulated by the Hindu

Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, which came into operation on 21st December 1956, that is some months after the Hindu Succession Act. That Act modifies and alters the prior law of adoption to a considerable extent. It confers wide powers of adoption both on the male and the female Hindu. A male Hindu, under the new Act, has the capacity to adopt a son to himself and has also the capacity to take a daughter in adoption (s. 7.) So also a female Hindu, under the new Act, has now the capacity to adopt a son to herself and she has also the right to take a daughter in adoption (s. 8). In all such cases of adoption regulated by the new Act, the effect of adoption is that the adopted child is from the date of adoption to be deemed to be the child of his or her adoptive father or mother for all purposes (s. 12).

Having regard, therefore, to the legal consequences and incidents of adoption both under the old Hindu law and the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, the heirs referred to in clauses (a) and (b) of the present section and specified in Classes I and II of the Schedule, mean not only persons related to the intestate by blood but also those related to him by adoption. The definitions of "agnate" and "cognate" in s. 3 (a) and s. 3 (c) expressly state that the expressions include persons by adoption. Presumably this was done to dispel any doubt on the question because the expressions "agnate" and "cognate" were not used in Hindu law in any strict legal sense.

ORDER OF SUCCESSION

I—Clause (a): Class I of the Schedule

Firstly, the heirs of a male Hindu who dies intestate after the commencement of this Act are:—

| | |
|---|---|
| SonDaughterWidowMotherSon of a predeceased sonDaughter of a predeceased sonSon of a predeceased daughterDaughter of a predeceased daughterWidow of a predeceased sonSon of a predeceased son of a predeceased sonDaughter of a predeceased son of a predeceased sonWidow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son | These are heirs in Class I of the Schedule. They take *simultaneously and to the exclusion of all other heirs (s. 9). |

SON

(i) Adopted son.—The expression 'son' used in Class I of the Schedule has not been defined in the Act. It includes both a natural son and a son adopted in accordance with the law relating to adoption among Hindus in force at the time of the adoption. A son given in adoption loses all the rights of a son in his natural family including the right of claiming any share in the estate of his natural father or any share in the coparcenary property of his natural family.

Where a son is born after adoption to the adoptive father the adopted son is entitled to inherit just as if he were a natural-born son and is now entitled to the same share as a natural-born son.

Also see "Relative by adoption" at p. 864 supra and sections 5, 7 and 12 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, which Act came in force on 21st December 1956.

For computation of the share of a son, see sec. 10 and illustrations in the notes under that section, post.

Old law.—See §§ 494 and 495.

(ii) Posthumous son.—A son of the intestate who was in the womb at the time of the death of the intestate though subsequently born is to be deemed for the purpose of succession as if born before the death of the intestate (s. 20).

---

* But in accordance with the four Rules in Section 10.

Old law.—The position of a posthumous son under the old law was the same.

(iii) Son born after partition.—When there has been a partition of joint family property between a father and his sons and thereafter a son is born to the father, the son will take an interest by birth in the property obtained on partition by the father and the property will be their coparcenary property. In case of death of the father after the commencement of this Act devolution of the father's interest in such coparcenary property will be governed by s. 6 of the Act and succession to the father's separate and self-acquired property will be in accordance with the rules laid down in s. 8.

Reference may be made to Notes under s. 6.

Old law.—The old law on the question of after-born sons was considerably different. See §§ 309, 310, 340 and 341.

(iv) Divided son.—In matters of succession the Act does not differentiate between a divided son and a son who had remained joint with his father or his father and other coparceners except in cases falling under s. 6 which relates inter alia to the undivided interest of a father in a Mitakshara coparcenary. The separate or self-acquired property of the father will, therefore, devolve by succession upon his heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule including a son who had separated from the father as well as one who had continued to remain joint with the father. See Illus. (p) at p. 852 supra. Under the old law the divided son was not entitled to claim any share in separate or self-acquired property of the father where the father after partition had continued to remain joint with his other sons or where he had a son born to him after partition and who was joint with him.

Old law.—See § 43—"divided and undivided sons" at p. 108 supra and § 341.

(v) Illegitimate son.—The illegitimate son of a male Hindu dying intestate is not entitled to any share of the inheritance; not even in case of a Shudra dying intestate after the commencement of the Act. The illegitimate son of a male Hindu of any caste is, however, entitled to claim maintenance from the father and in case of death of the father, from his heirs out of his estate inherited by them so long as the illegitimate son remains a minor and does not cease to be a Hindu [See sections 20(2), 21(viii), 22 and 24 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, which came into force on 21st December 1956].

Reference may also be made to Note (vi) below.

Old law.—See § 43—"illegitimate sons" at pp. 108-111 supra.

(vi) Son born of a void or voidable marriage.—Section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, is as under:

> "Where a decree of nullity is granted in respect of any marriage under section 11 or section 12, any child begotten or conceived before the decree is made who would have been the legitimate child of the parties to the marriage if it had been dissolved instead of having been declared null and void or annulled by a decree of nullity shall be deemed to be their legitimate child notwithstanding the decree of nullity:
>
> Provided that nothing contained in this section shall be construed as conferring upon any child of a marriage which is declared null and void or annulled by a decree of nullity any rights in or to the property of any person other than the parents in any case where, but for the passing of this Act, such child would have been incapable of possessing or acquiring any such rights by reason of his not being the legitimate child of his parents."

One effect of the abovementioned section is that sons and daughters of parents whose marriage was declared null and void by a decree of nullity under section 11 of that Act or annulled on the ground that it was voidable under section 12 of that Act are to be deemed to be the legitimate children of their parents and notwithstanding any such decree entitled to succeed to the property of such parents as if they were born in lawful wedlock. Reference may be made to Notes under section 16 at pp. 760-765.

Illustration

A and B are the father and mother of S. After S was born B obtains from the court a decree of nullity of marriage on one of the grounds mentioned in clause (i), (iv) or (v) of section 5 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. Notwithstanding the decree of nullity of the marriage of his parents, S is entitled to succeed as an heir to the property of his father A and his mother B as if he was a child born in lawful wedlock. The same will be the status and right in the above case of a daughter to succeed as an heir to the property of A and B as if she were a child born in lawful wedlock:

Step son.—A step-son, that is a son of a previous marriage of the wife of the intestate, is not entitled to succeed to the property of the step-father. In his case there is no relationship with the step-father by full blood, half-blood or uterine blood.

Where a widow or an unmarried woman adopts a child any husband whom she marries subsequently is deemed to be the step-father of the adopted child (w). Such child is entitled to succeed to the property of the mother but not that of the step-father.

(vii) Son having physical or mental defects.—Under the old Hindu Law certain defects, deformities and diseases excluded an heir, as for instance a son, from inheritance. The Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, declared that no person shall be excluded from inheritance on any of those grounds unless he was from birth a lunatic or an idiot. That restricted disqualification also is now removed by s. 28 of this Act with the result that no person is now disqualified from succeeding to any property on any ground whatever save as provided in this Act.

Old law.—§ 98 ante.

SON OF A PREDECEASED SON.—He inherits simultaneously with a son and the other heirs specified in Class I of Schedule. The rules relating to the right of a son to succeed (pp. 866-868 supra) apply mutatis mutandis to the son of a predeceased son.

SON OF A PREDECEASED SON OF A PREDECEASED SON.—He inherits simultaneously with a son and the other heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. The rules relating to the right of a son to succeed (pp. 866-868 supra) apply mutatis mutandis to the predeceased son of a predeceased son.

---

(w) S. 14(4), Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

WIDOW.—The widow of a male Hindu inherits simultaneously with a son, daughter and the other heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule (s. 9). She takes her share absolutely and not as widow's estate (s. 14). If there are more widows than one, all the widows together, take one share (s. 10, r. 1.)

Old law.—See § 43 at pp. 111-113 and § 88 at p. 157 supra.

Unchastity of a widow is not now under the Act a ground for disqualifying her from succeeding to the estate of her husband (s. 28).

Old law.—See § 96 at p. 161 supra and § 43—"Unchastity" at p. 111 supra.

Remarriage of a widow, is not now under the Act a ground for divesting the estate inherited by her from her husband. The Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856, though it legalized the remarriage of a Hindu widow, had the effect of divesting the estate inherited by her as a widow. By her second marriage she forfeited the interest taken by her in her husband's estate, and it passed to the next heirs of her husband as if she were dead (s. 2 of that Act). The rule laid down in that enactment cannot apply to a case covered by the present Act and a widow becomes full owner of the share or interest in her husband's property that may devolve on her by succession under the present section. Her remarriage, which would evidently be after the vesting in her of her share or interest on the death of the husband, would not operate to divest such share or interest. The Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856, is not repealed but section 4 of the present Act in effect abrogates the operation of that Act in the case of a widow who succeeds to the property of her husband under the present section and section 14 has the effect of vesting in her that interest or share in her husband's property as full owner of the same (*w*1). Reference may be made to Notes under section 14 infra.

Old law.—See § 43—"Re-marriage" at pp. 111-112 supra which deal with both Mitakshara and Dayabhaga.

Conversion of a Hindu widow to another religion is not a ground for divesting her of property inherited by her from her husband. Section 26 of the Act which in terms deals with certain disqualifications ensuing upon change of religion does not affect the right of a widow who has succeeded to her husband. The effect of conversion of a wife to another religion during the lifetime of the husband is not per se to dissolve the marriage but is under section 13 (1) (ii) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, only a ground for seeking from the court dissolution of the marriage. The mere fact, therefore, that the widow had ceased to be a Hindu by change of religion before the death of her husband does not exclude her from inheriting her husband's property.

Old law.—Change of religion and loss of caste which at one time were grounds of forfeiture of property and exclusion from inheritance had ceased to be so since the passing of the Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850.

WIDOW OF A PREDECEASED SON.—She inherits simultaneously with a son, widow and the other heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. The rules relating to the right of a widow to succeed (see supra) apply mutatis

---

(*w*1) See Bhuri Bai v. Champi Bai ('68) A. Raj. 139, 144.

mutandis to the widow of a predeceased son. She is, however, not entitled to succeed if, on the date the succession opens, she has remarried (s. 24).

Old law.—See § 35 at p. 92 and § 43 at p. 113 supra.

WIDOW OF A PREDECEASED SON OF A PREDECEASED SON.—She inherits simultaneously with a son, widow and the other heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. The rules relating to the right of a widow to succeed (p. 869 supra) apply mutatis mutandis to the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son. She is, however, not entitled to succeed if, on the date the succession opens, she has remarried (s. 24).

Old law.—See § 35 at p. 92 and § 43 at p. 113 supra.

DAUGHTER.—(i) The daughter, whether married or unmarried, inherits simultaneously with a son, widow and the other heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. Each daughter takes one share (x) that is equal to that of a son. She takes her share absolutely and not as woman's estate (y). There is no priority among married and unmarried daughters. Unchastity of a daughter is no ground for exclusion (z).

Old law.—See § 43 at pp. 113-115 supra.

(ii) Intestate having interest in coparcenary.—See section 6 and Notes thereunder.

(iii) Adopted daughter.—'Daughter' would include an adopted daughter. A male Hindu has now the capacity, under s. 7 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, to take a daughter in adoption. An adopted daughter is, therefore, one of the heirs under Class I of the Schedule. Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

Old law.—See § 43 at pp. 113-115 supra and § 88 at p. 157 supra.

Adopted son and adopted daughter.—Under the provisions of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, it is competent to a male Hindu to have both an adopted son and an adopted daughter. Therefore under Class I of the Schedule an adopted son and an adopted daughter can both be his heirs and take simultaneously.

(iv) Posthumous daughter.—See 'Posthumous son' at p. 866 supra. Also see s. 20 post.

(v) Illegitimate daughter.—The illegitimate daughter of a male Hindu dying intestate is not entitled to any share of the inheritance; not even in case of a Shudra. But she is entitled to inherit to her mother (See Notes under s. 15 post). The illegitimate daughter of a male Hindu is, however, entitled to claim maintenance from the father and in case of death of the father, from his heirs out of his estate inherited by them so long as she remains a minor and does not cease to be a Hindu (See sections 20-22 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, which came into force on 21st December 1956).

---

(x) Section 10, Rule 2.
(y) Section 14.
(z) See S. 28 and Notes thereunder.

Reference may also be made to Note (vi) below and section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, and Notes thereunder.

Old law.—See § 43—"Illegitimate daughter" at p. 114 supra.

(vi) Daughter born of a void or voidable marriage.—See 'Son born of a void or voidable marriage' at pp. 867-868 supra.

(vii) Daughter having physical or mental defects.—See Notes under 'Sons having physical or mental defects' at p. 868 supra. Also see s. 28 post.

MOTHER.—The mother inherits simultaneously with a son, widow, daughter and other heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. She takes her share absolutely (s. 14). Unchastity of a mother is no bar to her succeeding as heir to her son (*z*1); nor does divorce or remarriage constitute any such bar. The Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856, is not repealed but section 4 of the present Act in effect abrogates the operation of that Act in respect of matters dealt with by it and even if that Act could apply to the case of a mother (a) before this Act came into operation there can be no doubt that the present section and sections 4 and 14 of this Act have the effect of laying down that her remarriage is no bar to her succeeding as heir to her son and that there can be no divesting of the interest that she acquires in his property by reason of a remarriage (*a*1).

Mother includes adoptive mother because under the old Hindu Law (b) and now under the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, an adopted son is deemed to be the child of the adoptive parent or parents for all purposes with effect from the date of the adoption (c). On the death of a son adopted in dwyamushyayana form, the adoptive mother and natural mother inherited equally as co-heiresses (d). But that form of adoption is not recognised in case of adoptions made after the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, came into force (e).

Adoption has the effect of severing all the ties of the son with the natural parents and their family and therefore the natural mother is not entitled to succeed to the property of her son given in adoption (f).

A mother is entitled to succeed to the property of her illegitimate son as an heir in Class I of the Schedule [See Proviso to s. 3 (1) (j) and supra].

A mother of a son born of a void or voidable marriage is entitled to succeed as his heir in cases falling within the purview of section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. See pp. 867-868 supra and Notes under the section at pp. 760-765 supra. In cases covered by that section the son is to be deemed to be the legitimate son of the parents and the proviso to that section does not create any bar to the right of the mother to succeed to such son.

---

(*z*1) Jayalakshmi v. Ganesh Iyer ('72) A.M. 357.

(a) See Notes at p. 869, ante.

(*a*1) Reference may be made to Mantorabai v. Parotanbai ('72) A.M.P. 145 where agreement has been expressed with this view.

(b) See § 43 under "adoptive mother" at p. 116.

(c) See Ss. 7, 8, 12 and 14 of that Act.

(d) See p. 553, supra.

(e) See S. 5 of that Act.

(f) See § 494 ante. Also see S. 12 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

A step-mother is not entitled as mother to inherit to her step-son as one of the heirs in Class I but she can be an heir as father's widow under Entry VI of Class II of the Schedule.

Old law.—See § 43 at p. 116 supra.

SON OF A PREDECEASED DAUGHTER.—The son of a predeceased daughter inherits simultaneously with a son, widow and the other heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. Daughter's son would include the adopted son of a predeceased daughter; that is if the latter was in the position of the adoptive mother (g). A female Hindu, who is not married or if married whose marriage has been dissolved or is a widow or whose husband has renounced the world or ceased to be a Hindu or has been declared by a court to be of unsound mind, has now the capacity, under s. 8 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, to take a son or daughter in adoption to herself. Therefore, a son adopted by her would, in case of her death during the life-time of her father who subsequently dies intestate, be in the position of a daughter's son and entitled to succeed as such under the present section.

Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra. For computation of the share of a daughter's son see s. 10 and illustrations in notes under that section infra.

Old law.—See § 43 at p. 115 supra.

DAUGHTER OF A PREDECEASED SON.—The daughter of a predeceased son inherits simultaneously with a son, daughter, widow, son of a predeceased son and the other heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. Son's daughter would include the adopted daughter of a predeceased son. Reference may be made to Notes under 'Daughter' at pp. 870-871 supra. For computation of her share see s. 10 at p. 884 infra.

Old law.—See § 43 at p. 117 supra.

DAUGHTER OF A PREDECEASED DAUGHTER.—The daughter of a predeceased daughter inherits simultaneously with a son, daughter, widow, son of a predeceased daughter and the other heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra. Reference may be made to Notes under 'Daughter' at pp. 870-871 supra. For computation of her share see s. 10 at p. 884 infra.

Old law.—See § 43 at p. 117 supra..

---

(g) See S. 14 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

DAUGHTER OF A PREDECEASED SON OF A PREDECEASED SON.—The daughter of a predeceased son of a predeceased son inherits simultaneously with a son, daughter, widow and the other heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra. Reference may be made to the Notes under 'Daughter' at pp. 870-871 supra. For computation of her share see s. 10 at p. 884 infra.

ORDER OF SUCCESSION (contd.)

II.—Clause (b): Class II of the Schedule

Secondly, that is failing all heirs of the intestate male specified in Class I of the Schedule, but not until then, his property devolves upon the heirs specified in the nine entries in Class II of the Schedule. The heir in the first entry in this class is preferred to those in the second entry; the heirs in the second entry are preferred to those in the third entry and so on in case of succeeding entries.

Entry I (Class II of the Schedule)

FATHER.—He is the only heir specified in Entry I of Class II and failing any heir in Class I he takes the whole property of the intestate. Under the old law mother ranked as an heir before the father except in cases governed by Mayukha Law.

If the intestate had been an adopted son, the adoptive father and his relations would stand in the same relationship to the deceased as if he were a son born in the adoptive family. The adoptive father, therefore, would be the heir of the intestate under Entry I of Class II (h). Adoption has the effect of transferring the adopted boy from his natural family into the adoptive family. While the adopted son acquires the rights of a son in the adoptive family, he loses all the rights of a son in his natural family including the right of claiming any share in the estate of his natural father or natural relations or any share in the coparcenary property of his natural family. And conversely the natural father is not entitled to succeed to the property of his natural son given in adoption. Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

A mother is entitled to succeed to the property of her illegitimate son (i) but a father is not entitled to any interest by succession in the property of an illegitimate son. The proviso to s. 3(1)(j) does not apply to his case.

A father of a son born of a void or voidable marriage is entitled to succeed as his heir in cases falling within the purview of section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. See sec. 16 supra and Notes under that section at pp. 760-765 ante. In cases covered by that section the son is to be deemed

---

(h) Also see, S. 12, Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

(i) p. 867, supra.

to be the legitimate son of the parents and the proviso to that section does not create any bar to the right of the father to succeed to such son.

A step-father is not entitled to succeed to the property of his step-son.

Entry II (Class II of the Schedule)

| | |
|---|---|
| Son's daughter's sonSon's daughter's daughterBrotherSister. | These heirs specified in Entry II of Class II of the Schedule share the property simultaneously and equally (s. 11) and to the exclusion of those specified in the subsequent entries. |

SON'S DAUGHTER'S SON.—The son of a predeceased daughter of a predeceased son mentioned in this Entry would include the adopted son of the son's daughter. The rules relating to the right of the adopted son and adopted daughter of a predeceased daughter to succeed apply mutatis mutandis to such adopted son. Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

For computation of the share of a son's daughter's son see s. 11 at pp. 886-887 infra.

SON'S DAUGHTER'S DAUGHTER.—The daughter of a predeceased daughter of a predeceased son mentioned in this Entry would include the adopted daughter of a son's daughter. The rules relating to the right of the adopted daughter of a predeceased son to succeed apply mutatis mutandis to the adopted daughter of a predeceased daughter of a predeceased son. Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

For computation of the share of a son's daughter's daughter see s. 11 of pp. 886-887 infra.

BROTHER.—Brother specified in this Entry as an heir inherits simultaneously with the sister and other heirs mentioned in the Entry (j). He may be a brother of the full blood or of the half-blood. But where there is a full brother and a half-brother of the intestate the full brother is preferred to the half-brother (s. 18). The half-brothers referred to here are sons of the same father by a different mother. Uterine brothers, that is sons of the same mother by different fathers are not entitled to succeed to one another as 'brothers' under this Entry although related by legitimate kinship. This necessarily follows from the Explanation to the Schedule (k). But where the intestate and his brother are the illegitimate sons of their mother they are deemed to be related to one another as 'brothers' under this Entry. Although the expressions 'relatives' and 'related' mean persons related by legitimate kinship, the proviso to the definition of 'related' in s. 3(1) (j) states an express rule having the effect inter alia of giving recognition to the rights of such illegitimate offspring to succeed to one another (See p. 840 ante).

---

(j) As to full brother and half-sister and full sister and half-brother of the intestate see Notes under S. 18, post.

Where a son is born to a male Hindu after he has taken a son in adoption, the adopted son stands in the same relationship to the natural-born son as if he were himself a natural-born son. Such adopted son and natural-born son are 'brothers' within the meaning of this Entry and entitled as such to succeed to one another. Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra and sections 5, 7, 11 and 12 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

For computation of the share of a brother see s. 11 at pp. 886-887 infra.

Old law.—See § 43 at p. 116 supra.

SISTER.—Sister specified in this Entry as an heir inherits simultaneously with the brother and other heirs mentioned in the Entry (l). She takes her share absolutely and not a limited estate (s. 14). She may be a sister of the full blood or of the half-blood. But where there is a full sister and a half-sister of the intestate the full sister is preferred to the half-sister. The intestate and the half-sister referred to here are children of the same father by a different mother. As between a full-brother and a half-sister or a full-sister and a half-brother the former would be preferred on the ground that full blood is preferred to half blood (section 18). Where the intestate male and the sister are son and daughter of the same mother by different fathers, the uterine sister is not entitled to succeed as a 'sister' under this Entry although related to the intestate by legitimate kinship. This necessarily follows from the Explanation to the Schedule (m). But where the intestate and his sister are the illegitimate children of their mother they are deemed to be related to one another as 'brother' and 'sister' within the meaning of this Entry. Although the expressions 'relatives' and 'related' mean persons related by legitimate kinship the proviso to the definition of 'related' in s. 3(1) (j) states an express rule having the effect inter alia of giving recognition to the rights of such illegitimate offspring to succeed to one another (See p. 840 ante).

Where a son is born to a male Hindu after he has taken a daughter in adoption in accordance with the law in force at the time of adoption or where a male Hindu having a son adopts a daughter in accordance with the law in force at the time of adoption, the adopted daughter stands in the same relationship to the son as if she were a natural-born daughter. Such adopted daughter is a 'sister' within the meaning of this Entry and entitled to suc-

---

(k) A uterine brother can, however, succeed as a cognate under clause (d) of Section 8 when there are no heirs of the deceased under clauses (a) to (c) of the section.

(l) As to full-sister and half-brother and full-brother and half-sister of the intestate see Notes under S. 18, post.

(m) A uterine sister can, however, succeed as a cognate under clause (d) of Section 8 when there are no heirs of the deceased under clauses (a) to (c) of the section.

ceed to the son as such. Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra and sections 5, 7, 11 and 12 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

For computation of share of a sister see s. 11 at pp. 886-887 infra.

Old law.—See § 43 at p. 118 supra.

Entry III (Class II of the Schedule)

| | |
|---|---|
| Daughter's son's sonDaughter's son's daughterDaughter's daughter's sonDaughter's daughter's daughter | These heirs specified in Entry III of Class II of the Schedule share the property simultaneously and equally (s. 11) and to the exclusion of those specified in the subsequent entries. |

See 'Son of a predeceased daughter' and 'daughter of a predeceased daughter' at p. 872 supra.

Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

Entry IV (Class II of the Schedule)

| | |
|---|---|
| Brother's sonSister's sonBrother's daughterSister's daughter | These heirs specified in Entry IV of Class II of the Schedule share the property simultaneously and equally (s. 11) and to the exclusion of those specified in the subsequent entries. |

The heirs specified in this Entry are the son and daughter of a predeceased brother and of a predeceased sister. It has already been pointed out that the full brother is preferred to the half-brother and the full sister is preferred to the half-sister (Entry II). Similarly under the present Entry, where there is a son of a full brother and also a son of a half-brother the former is preferred to the latter. The position is similar in case of the other heirs specified in this Entry. Also see s. 18 and Notes thereunder.

The intestate and the half-brother or the intestate and the half-sister referred to above must be children of the same father by a different mother. Where the intestate male and the brother or sister were children of the same mother by different fathers, the relationship will be by uterine blood and the son or daughter of such uterine brother or uterine sister are not entitled to succeed under this Entry although related to the intestate by legitimate kinship. This necessarily follows from the Explanation to the Schedule (n). But where the intestate and his brother or sister were illegitimate children of their mother they will be deemed to be related to one another as brothers or as brother and sister within the ambit of this section. Although the expressions 'relatives' and 'related' mean persons related by legitimate kinship the n) A uterine brother's son or daughter and a uterine sister's son or daughter can, however, succeed as cognates under clause (d) of Section 8 when there are no heirs of the deceased under clauses (a) to (c) of the section.

---

proviso to the definition of 'related' in s. 3 (1) (j) states an express rule having the effect inter alia of giving recognition to the rights of the legitimate descendants of such illegitimate offspring and the words 'brother' and 'sister' in this Entry must be construed accordingly.

Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

Old law.—See § 43 at pp. 117-119 supra.

Entry V (Class II of the Schedule)

| | |
|---|---|
| Father's fatherFather's mother | These heirs specified in Entry V of Class II of the Schedule share the property simultaneously and equally (s. 11) and to the exclusion of those specified in the subsequent entries. |

See 'Father' at pp. 873-874 supra and 'Mother' at pp. 871-872 supra. Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

Father's step-mother is not entitled as father's mother to inherit to her step-son's son as one of the heirs in this Entry. Nor is she entitled to inherit under clause (c) or (d) of the section there being no relationship by blood (o).

Old law.—See § 43 at p. 117 supra.

Entry VI (Class II of the Schedule)

| | |
|---|---|
| Father's widowBrother's widow | These heirs specified in Entry VI of Class II of the Schedule share the property simultaneously and equally (s. 11) and to the exclusion of those specified in the subsequent entries. |

Father's widow that is a step-mother is now recognised as one of the heirs of the male intestate but not as a very near relation (p). The step-mother of the intestate is entitled to succeed under this entry.

Reference may be made to Notes under 'Father' supra.

Remarriage of the father's widow does not constitute any bar to her right to succeed under this Entry. She is not one of the persons disqualified under s. 24 of the Act. Unchastity of the father's widow (step-mother) does not disqualify her from succeeding under this entry (*p*1).

Brother's widow is not entitled to succeed as an heir under this entry if on the date the succession opens she had remarried (s. 24).

Reference may be made to Notes under 'Brother' at pp. 874-875 supra.

Reference may be made to Notes under s. 18 for relationship by full blood and half-blood.

---

(o) See pp. 879-882 infra.

(p) See 'Step-mother' and 'Mother' at pp. 871-872.

(*p*1) Jayalakshmi v. Ganesa Iyer ('72) A.M. 357.

Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

Entry VII (Class II of the Schedule)

| | |
|---|---|
| Father's brotherFather's sister | These heirs specified in Entry VII of Class II of the Schedule share the property simultaneously and equally and to the exclusion of those specified in the subsequent entries. |

The father's brother may be a brother of the full blood or of the half-blood. But a father's brother of the full blood will be preferred to a father's brother of the half-blood (s. 18). The father's uterine brother is not entitled to succeed as father's brother (q). Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

The father's sister may be a sister of the full-blood or of the half-blood. But a father's sister of the full blood will be preferred to a father's sister of the half-blood (s. 18). The father's uterine sister is not entitled to succeed as father's sister (r). Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

Reference may also be made to Notes under s. 18 for relationship by full blood and half-blood.

For computation of shares of the father's brother and father's sister see s. 11 at pp. 886-887 supra.

Old law.—See § 43 at p. 119 supra.

Entry VIII (Class II of the Schedule)

| | |
|---|---|
| Mother's fatherMother's mother | These heirs specified in Entry VIII of Class II of the Schedule share the property simultaneously and equally and to the exclusion of those specified in the subsequent entry. |

See Notes under 'Father' at pp. 873-874 supra and 'Father's mother' at p. 877 supra.

Also see 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

Entry IX (Class II of the Schedule)

| | |
|---|---|
| Mother's brotherMother's sister | These heirs specified in Entry IX of Class I of the Schedule share the property simultaneously and equally and to the exclusion only of the agnates and cognates of the intestate. |

(q) See Explanation to the Schedule. But he can succeed as a cognate: See f.n. (k) at p. 875 supra.

(r) See Explanation to the Schedule. But she can succeed as a cognate: See f.n. (m) at p. 875 supra.

See Notes under 'Father's brother' and 'Father's sister' above.

Also see Notes under 'Brother' at pp. 874-875 supra and 'Sister' at pp. 875-876 supra. Reference may also be made to Notes under s. 18 for relationship by full blood and half-blood.

ORDER OF SUCCESSION (contd.)

III.—Clause (c): Agnates

Failing all heirs of the intestate male specified in Classes I and II of the Schedule, but not until then, his property devolves upon his agnates.

A person is said to be an "agnate" of another if the two are related by blood or adoption wholly through males [s. 3 (1) (a)]. The expression 'related' has been defined in s. 3 (1) (j) to mean related by legitimate kinship. It follows from clause (c) of section 8 read with the relevant definitions that:

(1) Both male and female relatives by blood or adoption having legitimate kinship with the intestate are included among his agnates provided the relationship is wholly through males. Thus a father's brother's daughter is an agnate. But a father's sister's son is not an agnate because he is not related to the intestate wholly through males. Not being related to the intestate wholly through males he is only a cognate of the intestate.

Agnates do not include the widows of the lineal descendants of the intestate or widows of those who may be related to him as lineal male descendants of his lineal ascendants because the definition of agnates does not extend to relatives by marriage but is confined to relatives by blood or adoption. Some of the female heirs specified in Classes I and II of the Schedule are widows of agnatic relations of the intestate but they succeed as heirs expressly recognised by clauses (a) and (b) of section 8. Widow of a predeceased son and widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son are not relatives by blood but by marriage. But they succeed as heirs expressly recognised in Class I. Father's widow (step-mother) and brother's widow also are not relatives by blood but by marriage. But they succeed as heirs expressly recognised in Class II. Mother and Father's mother are relatives by blood and not marriage. They are not agnates but relatives specified as heirs respectively in Class I and Class II of the Schedule and succeed as such. Father's father's mother is not a relative by marriage but by blood. She is not specified as an heir in the Schedule and is entitled to succeed only as an agnate.

(2) There are no degrees of relationship beyond which kinship is not recognised so that an agnate howsoever remotely related to the intestate is entitled to succeed as an heir.

(3) Excluding heirs already specified in the two classes of the Schedule, all lineal male descendants of the intestate however remote are his agnates. So also all his female descendants however remote are his agnates if they are related to him wholly through males. Similarly all his lineal male ascendants as also the lineal descendants male or female of his lineal ascendants however remote are among his agnates provided the female descendants are related to him wholly through males. Thus a father's father's father's son's son's daughter is an agnate but a father's sister's son is not an agnate as he is not related to the intestate wholly through males.

Clause (c) applies to agnates other than those heirs who are already specified in Classes I and II of the Schedule and are related to the intestate wholly through males. The definition of agnates in s. 3(1) (a) applies 'unless the context otherwise requires' and the context requires that the heirs specified in clauses (a) and (b) of the present section are not to be included in the category of agnates recognised as heirs under sub-section (c).

(4) Relationship by blood includes relationship by full-blood, half-blood and uterine blood. Relationship by uterine blood cannot, however, create agnatic kinship because relatives by uterine blood cannot be related to the intestate male wholly through males. But agnates include persons related to one another by full blood as well as half-blood. Heirs of full blood are, however, preferred to heirs of the half-blood (s. 18)). Reference may be made to Notes under s. 18 for competing heirs related by full blood and half-blood.

Agnates also include relatives by adoption. See 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

Order of succession among agnates.—Clause (c) of section 8 does not give a list of agnates or state the order in which they are entitled to succeed under it. But section 12 lays down certain rules of preference which are determinative of the order of succession among agnates and section 13 lays down certain rules for the purpose of determining that order by computation of degrees both of ascent and descent. Another rule of preference contained in s. 18 is the general provision that heirs related to an intestate by full blood shall be preferred to heirs related by half-blood, if the nature of the relationship is the same in every other respect.

ORDER OF SUCCESSION (contd.)

IV.—Clause (d): Cognates

Failing all heirs of the intestate specified in Classes I and II of the Schedule and also all agnates, but not until then, his property devolves upon his cognates.

A person is said to be a cognate of another if the two are related by blood or adoption but not wholly through males [s. 3(1) (c)]. They may be related through one or more females. Thus a mother's brother's son and a brother's daughter's daughter are cognates. The expression 'related' has been defined in s. 3(1) (j) to mean related by legitimate kinship. It follows from clause (d) of section 8 read with the relevant definitions that:

(1) Excluding heirs specified in the two Classes of the schedule, all male and female relatives by blood or adoption having legitimate kinship with the intestate are his cognates where the relationship is through one or more females.

Cognates do not include the widows of any persons related to the intestate by blood or adoption. The definition of cognates does not extend to relatives by marriage but is confined to relatives by blood or adoption.

Clause (d) applies to those heirs who are related to the intestate through one or more females. The definition of cognates in s. 3(1) (c) applies 'unless the context otherwise requires' and the context requires that the heirs specified in clauses (a) and (b) of the present section are not to be included in the category of cognates recognised as heirs under clause (d).

(2) There are no degrees of relationship beyond which kinship is not recognised so that a cognate howsoever remote to the intestate is entitled to succeed as an heir.

(3) Relationship by blood includes relationship by full blood, half-blood and uterine blood. Heirs of full blood are, however, preferred to heirs related by half-blood. Reference may be made to Notes under s. 18 for competing heirs related to the intestate by full blood and half-blood. Two persons are said to be related to each other by uterine blood when they are descended from a common ancestress but by different husbands [s. 3(1)(e) (ii)]. Relations by uterine blood have legitimate kinship and can therefore claim relationship by blood with the intestate. The relationship would necessarily be through one or more females and those who satisfy the above requirements would be included among the cognates of the intestate. Thus the uterine brother or uterine sister of the intestate is entitled to succeed as a cognate under clause (d); and similarly others related to the intestate by uterine blood are included in the category of cognates. It is only in case of heirs expressly specified in Classes I and II of the Schedule that reference to a brother or sister does not include a brother or sister by uterine blood. That rule laid down in the Explanation to the Schedule has no application to the category of cognates recognised as heirs under clause (d).

Cognates also include relatives by adoption. See 'Relative by adoption' at pp. 864-865 supra.

Order of succession among cognates.—Clause (d) of section 8 does not give a list of cognates or state the order in which they are entitled to succeed under it. But section 12 lays down certain rules of preference which are determinative of the order of succession among cognates and section 13 lays down certain rules for the purpose of determining that order by computation of degress both of ascent and descent. Another rule of preference contained in s. 18 is the general provision that heirs related to an intestate by full blood shall be preferred to heirs related by half-blood if the nature of the relationship is the same in every other respect.

See Illustrations at pp. 935-936.

Death of a male Hindu who was member of a Mitakshara coparcenary.—Section 6 of the Act contains a vital provision and deals with the question of devolution of interest in coparcenary property in case of a male Hindu governed by the Mitakshara where he has left him surviving a female relative specified in class I of the Schedule to this Act. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section.

9. Among the heirs specified in the Schedule, those in class I shall take simultaneously and to the exclusion of all other heirs; those in the first entry in class II shall be preferred to those in the second entry; those in the second entry shall be preferred to those in the third entry; and so on in succession.

Order of succession among heirs in the Schedule.

This section states some important rules which are supplementary to the primary and pivotal rules laid down in s. 8 and the explicit declaration of the law in this section governs the order of succession among the heirs enumerated in Class I and II of the Schedule.

The heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule may for convenience be described as the preferential heirs of the intestate. They succeed simultaneously and there is, therefore, no question of any precedence or priority among them. As heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule they constitute a distinct and exclusive category and succeed in preference to all other heirs.

Failing all heirs of the intestate in the category of the preferential heirs enumerated in Class I of the Schedule, but not until then, his property devolves upon the heirs specified in the second category of heirs enumerated in the nine entries in Class II of the Schedule. It is important to note that the nine entries constitute distinct and separate groups of heirs one in a prior entry being preferred to one in the next entry and so on in order of the entries. But there is no precedence or priority among the different heirs mentioned in any particular entry. They stand in aequali jura with this qualification that full blood is to be preferred to half-blood.

Having regard to this section and section 11 there is little scope for the contention that the different heirs mentioned in what may be described as sub-divisions of any particular Entry in Class II of the Schedule do not inherit simultaneously. Such a contention was raised in the undermentioned case and was negatived (*r*1). See Illustration 7 below and also see Notes under section 11 post.

Illustrations

1. A dies leaving him surviving among others his widow, two sons, son of a predeceased son, widow of another predeceased son, two daughters and a son of a predeceased daughter. All these are among the preferential heirs specified in Class I. They take A's property simultaneously and to the exclusion of all other heirs such as father, brother and son's daughter's son who are heirs specified in Class II.

2. A dies leaving him surviving SSW, the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son, son's daughter's son and his brother. SSW being the only heir specified in Class I will take the whole of A's property to the exclusion of all the other heirs. But if SSW had remarried during the lifetime of A she will not be entitled to succeed to A's property (S. 24) which will devolve equally upon A's son's daughter's son and brother who are both heirs specified in Entry II of Class II.

---

(*r*1) Arunachalathammal v. Ramachandran ('63) A.S.C. 1714. A.M. 255. Also see Satya Charan v. Urmila ('70)

3. A dies leaving him surviving his father and son's daughter's son. The father being an heir specified in Entry I of Class II will take A's property in preference to and to the exclusion of the son's daughter's son who is an heir specified in Entry II of Class II.

4. A dies leaving him surviving two brothers, a son's daughter's son and a daughter's son's son. The brothers and the son's daughter's son being heirs specified in Entry II of Class II will take A's property to the exclusion of the daughter's son's son who is an heir specified in Entry III of Class II.

5. A dies leaving him surviving a brother, a step-brother and the son of a pre-deceased brother. Full blood is preferred to half-blood (s. 18), and therefore the brother who is an heir specified in Entry II of Class II will have preference over the step-brother and will take the whole of A's property to the exclusion of the step-brother and of the brother's son who is an heir in Entry IV of Class II. If A dies leaving only his step-brother and the son of a predeceased full-brother the step-brother will take the property to the exclusion of the brother's son (s).

6. A dies leaving him surviving a step-sister, a uterine brother, and a uterine sister. The step-sister will take the whole of A's property as she is within the meaning of 'sister' specified as an heir in Entry II of Class II of the Schedule. Reference to 'brother' or 'sister' in the Schedule does not include reference to uterine brother or uterine sister (t).

7. A dies leaving him surviving a brother's son and sons and daughters of his sister. They are all heirs in Entry IV of Class II and will take A's property simultaneously and in equal shares (*t*1). See Notes under section 11 post.

8. A dies leaving him surviving his sister C and his brother's son BS. The sister C being an heir in Entry II of Class II is a preferential heir to BS who is an heir in Entry IV of Class II (*t*2).

10. The property of an intestate shall be divided among the heirs in class I of the Schedule in accordance with the following rules:—

Distribution of property among heirs in class I of the Schedule.

Rule 1.—The intestate's widow, or if there are more widows than one, all the widows together, shall take one share.

Rule 2.—The surviving sons and daughters and the mother of the intestate shall each take one share.

Rule 3.—The heirs in the branch of each pre-deceased son or each pre-deceased daughter of the intestate shall take between them one share.

Rule 4.—The distribution of the share referred to in Rule 3—

(i) among the heirs in the branch of the pre-deceased son shall be so made that his widow (or widows together) and the surviving sons and daughters get equal portions; and the branch of his pre-deceased sons gets the same portion;

(ii) among the heirs in the branch of the pre-deceased daughter shall be so made that the surviving sons and daughters get equal portions.

Distribution among heirs in Class I of the Schedule.—Sections 8 and 9, so far as they relate to heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule, contain the (s) See "Brother" at pp. 874-875 supra.

---

(t) See Explanation to the Schedule.
(*t*1) See case cited in f.n. (*r*1) above.
(*t*2) Aparti Beua v. Suna Stree ('63) A. Orissa 166. Also see this case under Section 15 post.

explicit declaration of the law that the preferential heirs there enumerated take simultaneously and to the exclusion of all other heirs. There is no precedence or priority among them but it does not follow that every individual who succeeds as an heir listed in Class I of the Schedule is entitled to an equal share of the property along with every other individual heir in that class. The computation of the shares or portions of the heirs so listed is to be in accordance with the rules laid down in this section which may be said to constitute the Statute of Distribution applicable to heirs in Class I. It must have been noticed from the preceding sections and the Schedule that the Legislature does not lay down any rule of discrimination between a male heir and a female heir. The general scheme of the Act is to put sons and daughters as far as possible on the same footing and allot shares to them pari passu. Section 19 states the broad general rule that if two or more heirs succeed together to the property of an intestate, they shall take the property,—

(a) save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act, per capita and not per stirpes; and

(b) as tenants-in-common and not as joint tenants. This is subject to any express provision to the contrary.

Rule 2 of the present section gives effect to the general rule wherein each claimant has a share in his or her own right as in equal degree of kinship to the deceased and not as representing another person, that is, distribution per stirpes. The general rule is based on the broad principle of equalization.

Rule 3 expressly provides for the exception that heirs of the deceased in the branches of predeceased sons and predeceased daughters take not per capita but per stirpes.

Rule 4 is of the nature of a corollary to Rule 3. Distribution per capita wherein each claimant has a share in his own right as in equal degree of kindred to the intestate is not recognised in case of heirs (widow, sons or daughters) in the branches of predeceased sons and predeceased daughters enumerated in Class I. In their case distribution is per stirpes wherein division is according to stocks, i.e. taking into consideration the share which the predeceased sons or daughters would themselves have taken if they had survived the propositus. It will be noticed that Rule 4 describes the distributive shares of such widow (or widows), sons and daughters in the branch of a predeceased son or a predeceased daughter as portion or portions which they get when distribution in their case is per stirpes.

Rule 1 lays down that the widow of the intestate is entitled to take one share, that is the same share that a son, daughter or mother takes under Rule 2. But if there are more widows than one, each widow does not take one share, but the widows together take one share.

The section deals with distribution of property among heirs of the intestate enumerated in Class I. The expressions "heirs in the branch of the predeceased son" and "heirs in the branch of the predeceased daughter" in the Rules mean heirs of the intestate enumerated in Class I constituting the branch of the predeceased son or predeceased daughter and not heirs of such predeceased son or predeceased daughter. The heirs of the intestate in the branch of a predeceased son are son of a predeceased son; son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son; daughter of a predeceased son; daughter of a predeceased son of a predeceased son; widow of a predeceased son; and widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son. The heirs of the intestate in the branch of a predeceased daughter are son of a predeceased daughter and daughter of a predeceased daughter.

Illustrations

1. A dies leaving him surviving his widows W and *W*1, his mother M and two sons S and *S*1 and two daughters D and *D*1. S, *S*1, D, *D*1 and M will each take one share, that is one-sixth share; and W and *W*1 will together take one-sixth share. Therefore, each widow will take one-twelfth of the property left by A.

2. A dies leaving him surviving his widow W; a daughter D; a son *S*1; and *SS*1, *SS*2 and SD, the two sons and daughter respectively of a predeceased son S. W, D and *S*1 will each take one share that is one-fourth; and *SS*1, *SS*2 and SD will together take one-fourth. The portion of each of them will be one-twelfth of the property left by A.

3. A dies leaving him surviving his widow W; a son B; CW widow of a predeceased son C; XW, XS, *XS*1 and XD the widow, two sons and daughter respectively of a predeceased son X; a daughter *D*1 and DS, DD and *DD*1 the son and two daughters of a predeceased daughter D as appears from the following diagram:

These are among heirs enumerated in Class I of the Schedule and therefore entitled to take the property of A simultaneously as his preferential heirs. W takes one share in accordance with Rule 1. B and *D*1 as surviving son and surviving daughter take one share each in accordance with Rule 2. The branches of C, X and D get one share each in accordance with Rule 3. CW takes one share as the only heir of A in the branch of the predeceased son C in accordance with Rule 3. XW, XS, *XS*1 and XD between them take only one share as heirs of A in the branch of X the predeceased son. XW, XS, *XS*1 and XD will each take an equal portion of that one share in accordance with Rule 4(i).

DS, DD and *DD*1 between them take only one share as heirs of A in the branch of the predeceased daughter D. DS, DD and *DD*1 will each take an equal portion of that one share in accordance with Rule 4(ii). In distribution W will take one-sixth; B and *D*1 will each take one-sixth, CW will take one-sixth as constituting the branch of C; XW, XS, *XS*1 and XD will take a one-sixth share between them as constituting the branch of X, that is the portion of each of them will be one-twenty-fourth of A's property; and DS, DD and *DD*1 will take a one-sixth share between them as constituting the branch of D, that is the portion of each of them will be one-eighteenth of A's property.

4. In illustration 3 above if XS one of the sons of X had died during the life-time of A leaving him surviving his widow, sons and daughters or any of them such persons would (as heirs of A enumerated in Class I) have got between them in accordance with Rule 4(i) the same portion that XS would have got if he had been alive when A died (one-twenty-fourth). So if XS had left him surviving a widow, a son and a daughter the portion of each of them would have been one-seventy-second of the property left by A. This is in accordance with the last part of Rule 4(i). The effect of Rules 3 and 4(i) read together is that the principle of distribution per stirpes also applies to the heirs of the deceased in the sub-branch of a predeceased son of a predeceased son.

5. In illustration 3 above if DS the son of D had died during the lifetime of A leaving him surviving his widow, sons and daughters, none of such persons would have got any portion because a daughter's son's widow or a daughter's son's son or a daughter's son's daughter is not an heir (of A) enumerated in Class I. The position would have been similar if XD the daughter of A's predeceased son X had died during the lifetime of A because a son's daughter's son or a son's daughter's daughter is not an heir enumerated in Class I.

Distribution of property among heirs in class II of the Schedule.

11. The property of an intestate shall be divided between the heirs specified in any one entry in class II of the Schedule so that they share equally.

Distribution among heirs in Class II of the Schedule.—Sections 8 and 9, so far as they relate to heirs specified in Class II of the Schedule, contain the explicit declaration of the law that failing all heirs of the intestate specified in Class I of the Schedule, but not until then, his property devolves upon the heirs specified in the nine entries in Class II of the Schedule. The heir in the first entry in this class is preferred to those in the second entry; the heirs in the second entry are preferred to those in the third entry and so on in order of the entries. No question of computation of the shares of the heirs so listed can arise when there is only one heir who is entitled to take the property as belonging to prior entry in competition with any heir or heirs specified in any subsequent entry. But where there are more heirs than one of the intestate entitled to take the property on the ground that they are all listed in the same prior entry in Class II and are therefore entitled to be preferred in competition with other heirs of the intestate in any subsequent entry in Class II under the rule laid down in section 8 and latter part of section 9, the computation of their shares is to be in accordance with the simple rule of equal distribution of the property among them enacted in this section which may be said to constitute the Statute of Distribution applicable to heirs in Class II. The Legislature does not lay down any rule of discrimination between a male heir and a female heir. Thus, for instance a brother and sister mentioned in Entry II in class II succeed simultaneously (*t*3). The heirs in any particular entry in class II succeed together. Section 19 states the broad general rule (subject to any express provision to the contrary) that if two or more heirs succeed together to the property of an intestate, they shall take the property,—

(a) save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act, per capita and not per stirpes; and

(b) as tenants-in-common and not as joint tenants.

The present section enacts that the heirs specified in any one entry in Class II of the Schedule share simultaneously and equally. There is no precedence or priority among the different heirs specified in any one entry. They all stand in aequali jura and take per capita with this qualification that full-blood is to be preferred to half-blood. There is little scope for the contention that the different heirs mentioned in what may be described as sub-divisions of any particular Entry in Class II of the Schedule do not inherit simultaneously. Such a contention was raised in the undermentioned case (*t*4) and was negatived. See Illustration 2 below. Also see Notes under section 9. The section does

---

(*t*3) Satya Charan v. Urmila ('70) A.S.C. 1714. A.M. 255.
(*t*4) Arunachalathammal v. Ramachandran ('63) not state under what may be described as heirs in a sub-division of any one entry take one share and heirs in another sub-division of that entry take one share. The equality, therefore, is between every individual heir of the intestate and not between the sub-divisions (really there are no sub-divisions) in any particular entry. Thus for instance if the intestate dies leaving him surviving as his heirs only one brother and four sisters who are among the heirs enumerated in Entry II the distribution will be that all the five heirs will share equally (*t*5).

Illustrations

1. In illustration (4) under s. 9 the two brothers and the son's daughter's son who are heirs specified in Entry II will share equally, that is each of them will take one-third of the property of the intestate.

2. A dies leaving him surviving a brother's son and sons and daughters of his sister. They are all heirs in Entry IV of Class II and will take A's property simultaneously and in equal shares (*t*6).

3. A dies leaving him surviving three daughter's daughter's daughters and a daughter's son's son, the former being the grandchildren of his predeceased daughter D and the latter being the grandson of another predeceased daughter *D*1. The distribution will not be according to the branches of the daughters D and *D*1 but all the four heirs will share equally, that is, each of them will take one-fourth of the property of the intestate.

4. A dies leaving him surviving his father's full brother, his father's step-brother and three full sisters of his father. Full blood is to be preferred to half-blood in this case as the nature of relationship is the same in every other respect. The distribution between the full brother and the full sisters of the father, though they belong to what may be described as sub-divisions, will be that they share equally. The brother and the three sisters of the father will each of them take one-fourth of the property of the intestate.

Order of succession among agnates and cognates.

12. The order of succession among agnates or cognates, as the case may be, shall be determined in accordance with the rules of preference laid down hereunder: —

Rule 1.—Of two heirs, the one who has fewer or no degrees of ascent is prefered.

Rule 2.—Where the number of degrees of ascent is the same or none, that heir is preferred who has fewer or no degrees of descent.

Rule 3.—Where neither heir is entitled to be preferred to the other under Rule 1 or Rule 2 they take simultaneously.

Computation of degrees.

13. (1) For the purposes of determining the order of succession among agnates or cognates, relationship shall be reckoned from the intestate to the heir in terms of degrees of ascent or degrees of descent or both, as the case may be.

(2) Degrees of ascent and degrees of descent shall be computed inclusive of the intestate.

---

(*t*5) Cited with approval in Kumara Pillai v. Kunjulakshmi Amma ('72) A. Kerala 66.

(*t*6) See f.n. (*t*2) above.

(3) Every generation constitutes a degree either ascending or descending.

Succession among agnates and cognates.—The rules of preference determinative of the order of succession and those relating to the mode or method of reckoning degrees of ascent or descent or both are, under the Act common to both the categories of agnates and cognates and are stated in these two sections which may conveniently be read together.

Section 8(c) contains the explicit declaration of the law that failing all heirs of the intestate specified in Classes I and II of the Schedule, but not until then, his property devolves upon his agnates; and section 8(d) declares that failing all heirs of the intestate specified in Classes I and II of the Schedule, and also all agnates, but not until then, his property devolves upon his cognates. Sections 8(c) and 8(d) do not give any authoritative lists of agnates and cognates of the intestate or state the order of succession among them. The order of succession is left to be worked out in accordance with the rules laid down in sections 12 and 13.

Section 12 lays down three rules of preference which govern the order of succession among agnates and cognates. Section 13 states the rules in accordance with which degrees of relationship between the intestate and his agnates or his cognates are to be computed. The degree of relationship may be of ascent or descent; or of both ascent and descent as for instance in case of a father's brother's son who is related to the intestate as father's father's son's son.

In accordance with the rules laid down in section 12 agnates and cognates may conveniently be divided into the following sub-categories or grades:

(A)

(i) Agnates who are descendants: they are related to the intestate by no degree of ascent. Such for instance are son's son's son's son and son's son's son's daughter.

(ii) Agnates who are ascendants: they are related to the intestate only by degrees of ascent and no degree of descent. Such, for instance, are father's father's father and father's father's mother.

(iii) Agnates who are collaterals: they are related to the intestate by degrees both of ascent and descent. Such for instance are father's brother's son and father's brother's daughter.

(B)

(i) Cognates who are descendants: they are related to the intestate by no degrees of ascent. Such for instance are son's daughter's son's son and daughter's son's son's son.

(ii) Cognates who are ascendants: they are related to the intestate only by degrees of ascent and no degree of descent. Such for instance are father's mother's father and mother's father's father.

(iii) Cognates who are collaterals: they are related to the intestate by degrees both of ascent and descent. Such for instance are father's sister's son and mother's brother's son.

It will be noticed that none of the heirs in any of the instances given above are enumerated in Classes I and II of the Schedule.

The effect of the rules laid down in section 12 in the first instance is that agnates in the first grade above are to be preferred to those in the second grade and agnates in the second grade are to be preferred to those in the third grade; and similarly in case of cognates. It is obvious that most of the heirs in the categories of agnates and cognates would be collaterals related to the intestate in degrees both of ascent and descent. Collaterals are persons of common descent but by different line.

Computation of degrees (section 13).—Application of the rules of preference governing order of succession laid down in s. 12 (pp. 891-895 infra) involves computation of the degrees of relationship between the intestate and his agnates or cognates. That relationship is to be reckoned from the intestate to the heir in terms of degrees with the (intestate) propositus as the starting point. There is no rule of discrimination or preference between male and female heirs and both male and female relatives by blood or adoption having legitimate kinship with the intestate wholly through males are included among his agnates and all relatives male and female are his cognates where the relationship is not wholly through males but through one or more females. It follows that in case of agnates every intervening person featuring in the reckoning must be a male relative and in the case of cognates at least one female relative must feature and intervene in the reckoning. The computations of degrees of ascent and of descent is to be so made that it is inclusive of the intestate. The relationship must be reckoned from the propositus to the heir in terms of degrees with the propositus as the terminus a quo, that is the first degree [s. 13 (2)]. The other rule is that every generation constitutes a degree either ascending or descending [s. 13 (3)]. But it should be noted that the order of succession among agnates or cognates is not determined merely by the total of the number of degrees of ascent and descent. It is regulated by the rules of preference laid down in section 12.

The Hindu mode of computation of degrees is retained by the Legislature in section 13. It is the same as the adopted by the Canonists and differs from that adopted in Civil law and followed in sections 25 to 28 of the Indian Succession Act. In the latter system of computation the propositus is excluded and the first degree begins with an ascendant or a descendant.

The rules of computation are simple but error in reckoning the degrees of relationship between the propositus and his collaterals may arise if they are not properly applied. The degrees of relationship with a father's father's father are four in ascent inclusive of the intestate and on similar reckoning the degrees of relationship with a daughter's daughter's daughter are four in descent. In case of a collateral there are degrees both of ascent and descent. In the following diagram the propositus is the grandson of FF and xd is his paternal uncle's son's daughter. She is a collateral and an agnate.

xd is related to the propositus by three degrees of ascent (since the intestate must be included) and three degrees of descent. Similarly yd who is the maternal uncle's son's daughter (collateral and a cognate) is related to the propositus by three degrees of ascent and three degrees of descent.

The following are further illustrations of the rules of computation of degrees (u):

(i) The heir to be considered is the father's mother's father of the intestate. He has no degrees of descent but has four degrees of ascent represented in order by (1) the intestate, (2) the intestate's father, (3) that father's mother, and (4) her father (the heir).

(ii) The heir to be considered is the son's daughter's son's daughter of the intestate. She has no degrees of ascent, but has five degrees of descent represented in order by (1) the intestate, (2) the intestate's son, (3) that son's daughter, (4) her son, and (5) his daughter (the heir).

(iii) The heir to be considered is the mother's father's sister's son (that is mother's father's father's daughter's son) of the intestate. He has four degrees of ascent represented in order by (1) the intestate, (2) the intestate's mother, (3) her father, and (4) that father's father and two degrees of descent represented in order by (1) the daughter of the common ancestor (viz. the mother's father's father) and (2) her son (the heir).

It will be seen that in every case in computing the degrees of ascent or descent the intestate is included as constituting one degree of ascent or descent. It will also be seen that when degrees both of ascent and descent are to be computed in case of a collateral the degrees of ascent computed from the intestate are inclusive of him but in counting the degrees of descent from the ancestor (or ancestress) only generations of descent are computed, that is, the ancestor (or ancestress) does not constitute a degree of descent. In such a case it is only every generation of descent from the ancestor (or ancestress) that is taken in the computation.

Rules of Preference determinative of Order of Succession among agnates and cognates (section 12).—Order of succession among agnates and cognates is governed by the three Rules of Preference laid down in section 12 which are common to both the categories of heirs. In order to determine which of two or more claimants in the category of agnates or of cognates, as the case may be, must be preferred recourse must be had to Rules I and II laid down in section 12 and initially to Rule I. Where one competing heir is not entitled to be preferred to the other competing heir under Rule I or Rule II they take simultaneously (Rule III).

---

(u) These three illustrations are adopted from the illustrations to clause 105 of the Hindu Code Bill as amended by the Select Committee.

RULE I.—This Rule is pivotal and enacts that of two heirs, the one who has fewer or no degrees of ascent is preferred. It applies to all agnates and cognates and means that of two competing heirs in the category of agnates or of cognates—

(i) The one who has no degrees of ascent, that is, one who is only related to the propositus by degrees of descent, is to be preferred to one who has any degrees of ascent;

(ii) where both are related to the propositus by degrees of ascent, the one who has fewer degrees of ascent is to be preferred to the other.

In case of descendants of the propositus there can be no degree of ascent and therefore all such descendants form a grade by themselves from whom and excluding all others the nearest agnate or the nearest cognate, as the case may be, has to be ascertained. As among the descendants the order of succession will be in accordance with Rule II and that heir is preferred who has fewer degrees of descent. Thus for instance among descendants who are cognates the daughter's daughter's daughter's son is to be preferred to a son's son's son's daughter's son because the former has fewer degrees of descent than the latter. The application of the Rule in case of ascendants of the propositus either agnates or cognates is equally simple. They may be said to belong to the second grade or sub-category as already stated (v) and become entitled to succeed only when there are no descendants of the propositus but having no degree of descent they exclude all collaterals. As regards the ascendants the order of succession will be in accordance with the initial part of Rule I that of two heirs the one who has fewer degrees of ascent is preferred. Thus for instance among agnates the father's father's mother will be preferred to the father's father's father's father the degrees being only of ascent and four and five respectively. The position of ascendants who are cognates is similar.

The Rule is of considerable importance in determining the order of succession among collaterals either agnates or cognates. Among collaterals who may be competing agnates or competing cognates preference is to be given to one who has fewer degrees of ascent than the other and this rule of preference is to be applied regardless of the degrees of descent. It is an obvious corollary of Rule I that the order of succession among collateral agnates or collateral cognates is not determined merely by the total of the degrees of ascent and of descent, because of two such heirs preference is given to one who has the fewer degrees of ascent. So among two competing collateral agnates one who is descended from the nearer ancestor of the intestate is to be preferred to one who claims descent from a remoter ancestor; and among two competing collateral cognates one who is descended from the nearer ancestor or ancestress of the intestate is to be preferred to one who claims from a remoter ancestor or ancestress. Rule I which is primary lays absolute stress on the degrees of ascent; the fewer the degrees of ascent the nearer is the heir and one with no degree of ascent at all, that is a descendant is preferred to another having degrees of ascent however few.

---

(v) See p. 889 supra.

Illustrations

1. The competing heirs are two collateral agnates (1) brother's son's daughter (father's son's son's daughter) and (2) paternal uncle's son (father's father's son's son). The former who has only two degrees of ascent is to be preferred to the latter who has three degrees of ascent. It will be noticed that the order of succession among collateral agnates or congnates is not determined by the total of degrees of ascent and of descent because of two such heirs preference is primarily given to one who has fewer degrees of ascent. In this illustration if the degrees both of ascent and descent had to be totalled up both the heirs would have been related to the propositus by the same aggregate number of degrees, viz. five. But that is not the Rule.

2. The competing heirs are two cognates (1) son's daughter's son's son and (2) sister's daughter's son (father's daughter's daughter's son). The former who has no degree of ascent is preferred to a collateral.

3. The competing heirs are two collateral cognates (1) brother's daughter's daughter (father's son's daughter's daughter) and (2) mother's sister's son (mother's father's daughter's son). The former who has only two degrees of ascent is preferred to the latter who has three degrees of ascent. Here both the heirs are collaterals and the one with fewer degrees of ascent is preferred although she is a female.

4. The competing heirs are two collateral cognates (1) sister's daughter's son's daughter (father's daughter's daughter's son's daughter) and (2) maternal uncle's son (mother's father's son's son). The former who has only two degrees of ascent is preferred to the latter who has three such degrees.

5. The competing heirs are two collateral cognates (1) mother's sister's son's son (mother's father's daughter's son's son) and (2) father's father's sister's son (father's father's father's daughter's son). The former who has three degrees of ascent is preferred to the latter who has four degrees of ascent. Here both the heirs are collaterals and the one with fewer degrees of ascent is preferred. It will be noticed that it makes no difference that one heir (the heir preferred) is a cognate ex parte materna and the other heir is a cognate ex parte paterna.

6. The competing heirs are uterine brother and father's sister's son (father's father's daughter's son). The uterine brother has two degrees of ascent (of the intestate and of his mother) and the father's sister's son has three degrees of ascent. The uterine brother is, therefore, preferred. The position would have been the same if instead of the uterine brother the competing heir had been an uterine sister.

RULE II.—This Rule enacts that where the number of degrees of ascent is the same or none, that heir is preferred who has fewer or no degrees of descent. It applies to all agnates and cognates and means that:

(i) of two heirs who have no degrees of ascent, that is, are descendants, being related to the propositus only by degrees of descent, the one who has fewer degrees of descent is to be preferred to the other;

(ii) of two heirs who have the same degrees of ascent, the one who has fewer degrees of descent is to be preferred to the other.

This rule though not subordinate to Rule I in practice comes into operation only after Rule I has been applied. In case of competing descendants the order of succession will be regulated by this Rule and the one who has fewer degrees of descent will be preferred. The case of competing ascendants not of the same degrees is governed by Rule I. The case of competing ascendants of the same degree such for instance as a father's father's father and a father's father's mother will not fall under this Rule but Rule III because both heirs are agnates who are in the same degrees of ascent and there is no question of degrees of descent in their case. The more practical importance of Rule II is that read with Rule I it settles the order of precedence and priority among collateral agnates as also among collateral cognates.

Illustrations

1. The competing heirs are two collateral agnates (1) brother's son's daughter (father's son's son's daughter) and (2) brother's son's son's daughter (father's son's son's son's daughter). Both the claimants have two degrees of ascent but the former has three degrees of descent and the latter has four degrees of descent with the result that the former is to be preferred to the latter. The result would have been the same if the claimants had been the brother's son's daughter and brother's son's son's son. A male heir it will be noticed is not preferred to a female heir. It will not make any difference whether the grandchildren and great-grandchildren under consideration are of the same brother of the propositus or of different brothers. Succession here is not governed by any doctrine of representation.

In the undermentioned case (*v*1) the heirs were competing collateral agnates. The degrees of ascent were the same and collateral with five degrees of descent were preferred to those with six or more degrees of descent.

2. The competing heirs are two collateral cognates (1) sister's daughter's daughter (father's daughter's daughter's daughter) and (2) brother's son's daughter's son (father's son's son's daughter's son). Both the claimants have two degrees of ascent but the former has three degrees of descent and the latter has four degrees of descent with the result that the former is to be preferred to the latter. If however the competing heirs had been the sister's daughter's daughter and the brother's daughter's son, the case would have been governed not by Rule II but by Rule III.

3. *The competing heirs are (1) mother's father's mother and (2) father's father's sister's son (father's father's father's daughter's son). The number of degrees of ascent in both cases is the same, viz. three, but the former has no degrees of descent while the latter has two such degrees. The former is, therefore, preferred. Here an ascendant cognate (on the mother's side) is preferred to a collateral cognate (on the father's side).

4. *The competing heirs are two collateral cognates (1) sister's son's son (father's daughter's son's son) and (2) brother's son's daughter's son (father's son's son's daughter's son). The number of degrees of ascent in both cases is the same viz. two, but the former has only three degrees of descent while the latter has four degrees of descent. The former is, therefore, preferred.

5. The competing heirs are uterine brother and full brother's daughter's son. Both the claimants have two degrees of ascent (counting the intestate and of the intestate's mother in one case and the intestate and the intestate's father in the other), but the uterine brother has only one degree of descent and the other heir has three degrees of descent. The uterine brother is, therefore, preferred. The position would have been the same if instead of uterine brother the competing heir had been the intestate's uterine sister. If, however, the competing heirs had been on the one hand the uterine brother or uterine sister and on the other a full-brother's (or a step-brother's) son or daughter or a full-sister's (or a step-sister's) son or daughter the position would have been totally different because the uterine brother or uterine sister is only a cognate whereas the others are heirs enumerated in Class II of the Schedule and therefore entitled to priority.

RULE III.—This rule enacts that where neither heir is entitled to be preferred to the other under Rule I or Rule II they take simultaneously. In case of descendants of the propositus either agnates or cognates the order of succession will be governed by this rule when the competing descendants are so related to the prospositus that none of them is entitled to claim greater proximity to the propositus in terms of degrees of descent. In case of ascendants of the propositus either agnates or cognates the application of this Rule is equally simple. Thus for instance among agnates a father's father's father and a father's father's mother both stand in the same degree of ascent, viz. four and no degree of descent. There being no rule of discrimination between male and female heirs, neither is entitled to be preferred to the other under Rule I or Rule II and must therefore take simultaneously. The same is the (*v*1) Kuldip Singh v. Karnail Singh ('61) A. Punj. 573.

---

* Illustrations 3 and 4 have been adopted from illustration to clause 104 of the Hindu Code Bill as amended by the Select Committee.

position among cognates, for instance, of a father's mother's father and a mother's mother's mother.

The rule is of considerable importance in fixing the order of succession among competing heirs who are collateral agnates or collateral cognates. Among two competing collateral agnates where both are in the same degrees of descent from the same male ascendant of the intestate they will take simultaneously; and among two competing collateral cognates where both are in the same degrees of descent from the same ascendant male or female of the intestate or of different ascendants of the intestate in same degrees of ascent to the intestate, they will take simultaneously as none of them can claim greater proximity to the intestate in terms of degrees of ascent or descent under Rule I or Rule II.

Illustrations

1. The competing heirs are two agnates (1) son's son's son's son and (2) son's son's son's daughter. There are no degrees of ascent and the number of degrees of descent is the same in case of both. Therefore, neither heir is entitled to be preferred under Rule I or Rule II and the result is that they take simultaneously. Here both heirs are descendants and stand in the same degrees of descent.

2. The competing heirs are two cognates (1) daughter's son's son's son and (2) son's son's daughter's son. The position is similar to that in illustration I above and they take simultaneously.

3. The competing heirs are two cognates (1) father's mother's father and (2) mother's mother's mother. There are the same degrees of ascent, viz. four, and no degree of descent in case of both. Therefore, neither heir is entitled to be preferred under Rule I or Rule II and the result is that they take simultaneously. Here both heirs are ascendants and stand in the same degrees of ascent.

4. The competing heirs are all collateral agnates as appears from the following diagram. A the propositus had four brothers B, C, D and X. E, F, G and XS were sons respectively of B, C, D and X. All of them died during the lifetime of the propositus; E leaving a son ES; F leaving a son FS and a daughter FD; G leaving a son GS and three daughters *GD, GD*1 and *GD*2; and XS leaving XSSS a son of a predeceased son XSS. A dies intestate leaving him surviving *ES, FS, FD, GS, GD, GD*1, *GD*2 and XSSS.

*ES, FS, FD GS, GD GD*1 and *GD*2 are all grand-children of A's brothers and have the same degrees of ascent, viz. two, and also the same degrees of descent, viz. three. Among themselves none is, therefore, entitled to any preference under Rule I or Rule II and they must all take simultaneously. They will take per capita and each of them will get one-seventh share in the property of A (w). XSSS has the same degrees of ascent, viz. two, but four degrees of descent with the result that *ES, FS, FD, GS, GD, GD*1 and *GD*2 having fewer degrees of descent are all entitled to be preferred to him under Rule II. XSSS, therefore, is not entitled to succeed to A although his father XSS if he had been alive at the time of A's death would have ranked with the others.

5. Similar position will arise if in the above diagram *ES, FS, FD, GS, GD, GD*1, *GD*2, and XSSS are all collateral cognates. Such will be the case if B or E or both had been females; and C or F or both had been females; and D or G or both had been females; and X, XS and XSS had all or any one or more of them been females. None of the seven heirs ES, FS, FD, GS, GD, *GD*1 and *GD*2 is among themselves entitled to any preference under Rule I or Rule II and will therefore take simultaneously, each getting one-seventh share in the property of A. XSSS is not entitled to succeed to A as he has one more degree of descent than the others.

---

(w) See Section 19.

6. The competing heirs are all collateral agnates as appears from the following diagram. A the propositus had four uncles B, C, D and X (brothers of his father). B, C, D, X and XS (son of X) all died during the lifetime of A. A dies leaving him surviving BS, son of B; CS, *CS*1 and CD, two sons and a daughter respectively of C; DD, daughter of D; and XSS the son of XS.

BS, CS, *CS*1, CD and DD are all children of A's father's brothers and have the same degrees of ascent, viz. three, and also the same degrees of descent, viz. two. Among themselves none is, therefore, entitled to any preference under Rule I or Rule II and they must take simultaneously. They will take per capita and each of them will get one-fifth share in the property of A. XSS has the same degrees of ascent viz three but three degrees of descent with the result that BS, CS, *CS*1, CD and DD having fewer degrees of descent are all entitled to be preferred to him under Rule II. XSS, therefore, is not entitled to succeed to A although if XS had been alive at the time of A's death he would have ranked with the others.

7. The competing heirs are collateral cognates (1) mother's brother's son (2) mother's sister's daughter and (3) father's sister's son. All three are in the same degree of ascent, viz. three, and the number of degrees of descent is the same in case of all of them, viz. two. Therefore, none of them is entitled to be preferred under Rule I or Rule II and the result is that they take simultaneously.

8. The competing heirs are all collateral cognates and some of them are related to the intestate by uterine blood as appears from the following diagram:

FS was full brother of A and FD was full sister of A. A's mother had remarried after the death of A's father and MS was the uterine brother of A and MD was the uterine sister of A. FSD was the daughter of FS; FDS was the son of FD; MSS was the son of the uterine brother MS; and MDD was the daughter of MD the uterine sister. All of them died during the lifetime of A. A dies leaving: FSDS the daughter's son of the full brother; FDSS, the son's son of the full sister; MSSS and MSSD the son's son and son's daughter respectively of MS the uterine brother; and MDDD, the daughter's daughter of MD the uterine sister. Here MSSS, MSSD and MDDD are related to A by uterine blood and FSDS and FDSS are related to A by full blood and they are all collateral cognates. Here both the father and mother of A constitute an ascending degree. FSDS, FDSS, MSSS, MSSD and MDDD are all related to the propositus by the same degrees of ascent, viz. two, and are related to him by the same degrees of descent, viz. three. Relationship by uterine blood does not create any exclusion in case of cognates (See p. 881). None of the five heirs is entitled to preference under Rule I or Rule II with the result that they will all take simultaneously. They take per capita and each of them will get one-fifth share in the property of A.

Property of a female Hindu to be her absolute property.

14. (1) Any property possessed by a female Hindu, whether acquired before or after the commencement of this Act, shall be held by her as full owner thereof and not as a limited owner.

Explanation.—In this sub-section, "property" includes both movable and immovable property acquired by a female Hindu by inheritance or devise, or at a partition, or in lieu of maintenance or arrears of maintenance, or by gift from any person, whether a relative or not, before, at or after her marriage, or by her own skill or exertion, or by purchase or by prescription, or in any other manner whatsoever, and also any such property held by her as stridhana immediately before the commencement of this Act.

(2) Nothing contained in sub-section (1) shall apply to any property acquired by way of gift or under a will or any other instrument or under a decree or order of a civil court or under an award where the terms of the gift, will or other instrument or the decree, order or award prescribe a restricted estate in such property.

Under the Hindu law in operation prior to the coming into force of this Act a woman's ownership of property was hedged in by certain delimitations on her right of disposal by acts inter vivos and also on her testamentary power in respect of that property and there was great diversity of doctrine on the subject.

The ancient texts purported to enumerate heads of stridhan but without comprehensive signification. Some of the expressions used in those texts were merely suppletory and there was no logical classification. Divergent authorities only added to the difficulties surrounding the meaning of a term to which it was sought to give a technical significance and the result was that a term not difficult of comprehension in its etymological sense came to be understood in a narrower and arbitrarily limited connotation. Absolute power of alienation was not regarded, in case of a female owner, as a necessary concomitant of the right to hold and enjoy property and it was only in case of property acquired by her from particular sources that she had full dominion over it. Even so the ancient law laid down in the texts and interpreted by the nibandhakars was considerably more liberal in its recognition of her powers of alienation than the rules of Roman law affecting a woman's peculiam and other systems of law under which till recent times the legal existence of the wife during coverture was regarded as incorporated and merged into that of the husband. The restrictions imposed by Hindu law on the proprietory rights of a woman depended on her status as a maiden, as a married woman and as a widow. They also depended on the source and nature of the property. The order of succession to stridhan was different from that in case of property of a male owner and it varied under the different schools. All this gave rise to a branch of law the most complicated of its kind and one which till the passing of the present Act continued to be regarded as a complex and very difficult subject. As already pointed out in the Introductory Note to the Act, there was some fragmentary legislation (x) which only added to the number of anomalies already existing and gave rise to no end of conundrums.

The present Act over-rides inter alia the old law on the subject of Stridhan in respect of all property possessed by a female, whether acquired by her before or after the commencement of the Act and this section declares that all such property shall be held by her as full owner. The Act confers full heritable capacity on the female heir and this section dispenses with the traditional limitations on the powers of a female Hindu to hold and transmit property. The effect of the rule laid down in this section is to abrogate the stringent provisions against the proprietory rights of a female which were often regarded as evidence of her perpetual tutelage and to recognise her status as independent and absolute owner of property. A qualification to the rule is laid down in sub-section (2) but it does not relate to the incidents of women's property.

---

(x) Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937.

In Punithavalli v. Ramalingam (*x*1) the Supreme Court pointed out that the estate taken by a female Hindu under sub-section (1) is an absolute one and is not defeasible and its ambit cannot be cut down by any text or rule of Hindu law or by any presumption or any fiction under that law.

In Eramma v. Veerupana (*x*2) the Supreme Court examined the ambit and object of this section and observed: "The property possessed by a female Hindu, as contemplated in the section, is clearly property to which she has acquired some kind of title whether before or after the commencement of the Act. It may be noticed that the Explanation to s. 14(1) sets out the various modes of acquisition of the property by a female Hindu and indicates that the section applies only to property to which the female Hindu has acquired some kind of title, however restricted the nature of her interest may be. The words "as full owner thereof and not as a limited owner" as given in the last portion of sub-section (1) of the section clearly suggest that the legislature intended that the limited ownership of a Hindu female should be changed into full ownership. In other words Section 14(1) of the Act contemplates that a Hindu female who, in the absence of this provision, would have been limited owner of the property, will now become full owner of the same by virtue of this section. The object of the section is to extinguish the estate called 'limited estate' or 'widow's estate' in Hindu law and to make a Hindu woman, who under the old law would have been only a limited owner, a full owner of the property with all powers of disposition and to make the estate heritable by her own heirs and not revertible to the heirs of the last male holder. . . . It does not in any way confer a title on the female Hindu where she did not in fact possess any vestige of title".

The rule that the section is applicable where the female Hindu has acquired some kind of title, however restricted the nature of her interest may be, was applied in a Full Bench decision of the High Court of Delhi. A Hindu widow made a gift of property which she held as a limited owner, to her daughter prior to the Act. At the date of the Act coming into force the daughter was in possession of the property and it was held that she became full owner of the property (*x*3).

The section does not infringe Article 14 of the Constitution (*x*4). It applies to all 'property' including agricultural lands and is valid legislation.

---

(*x*1) ('70) A.S.C. 1730.
(*x*2) ('66) A.S.C. 1879.
(*x*3) Chinti v. Daultu ('68) A. Delhi 264 (F.B.).
(*x*4) Amar Singh v. Baldev Singh ('60) A. Punj. 666 (F.B.).

This section should be read with section 4 which gives overriding effect to the provisions of this Act with respect to all matters dealt with in the Act and also enumerates matters which are not affected by this Act. Reference may also be made to section 5.

A Full Bench of the Punjab High Court (*x*5) has held that this section provides enlarged rights over 'land' to Hindu females on the ground that it enacts law on a matter of special property of females.

A Division Bench of the Allahabad High Court (*x*6), overruling its earlier decisions has now held that the provisions in the present section are inapplicable to land tenures under the U.P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act.

Reference may be made to decisions noted under section 4 supra.

The section applies to all "property" including agricultural lands and is valid legislation (*x*4).

Property of female to be her absolute property.—This section gives the explicit declaration of the law that a female holds all property in her possession whether acquired by her before or after the commencement of the Act as absolute owner and not as a limited owner. The rule applies to all property movable and immovable howsoever and whenever acquired by her but subject to the qualification mentioned in sub-section (2).

Illustrations

1. A governed by the Mitakshara school died after the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, came into force but before the commencement of the present Act, leaving him surviving W his widow, B and C his two sons and SSW the widow of SS a predeceased son of his predeceased son S. At the time of his death A was joint with his sons B and C and the family owned property. Both S and SS had been members of the joint family at the time of their death and S had predeceased SS leaving him surviving as his only son. A also left separate property. Both W and SSW had acquired the same interest in the joint family property which A and SS respectively had [S. 3(2) of the Act of 1937]: but the interest which devolved on them was the limited interest known as Hindu woman's estate [s. 3(3) of the Act of 1937]. In the separate property which A left W and SSW had acquired equal shares with the two sons B and C by right of inheritance [s. 3(1) of the Act of 1937] but the interest which devolved on them by inheritance was the limited interest known as Hindu woman's estate. There was partition of the joint family property and division of A's separate property between B, C, W and SSW soon after A's death and before the commencement of the present Act. It was stated in the deed of partition that W and SSW took only limited interest in all the property allotted to them. The effect of the present section is to enlarge that limited interest of W and SSW into full ownership.

The result will be similar if A had been governed by the Dayabhaga school although the case would have been affected only by s. 3(1) and s. 3(3) of the Act of 1937.

2. A Hindu governed by the Benares school died leaving a widow, a daughter and a paternal uncle's son. Prior to the commencement of this Act the widow surrendered her interest in the property inherited by her and handed over possession of it to her daughter. The surrender was valid but according to the Benares school the daughter though in possession took a limited estate, in other words, she did not take the property absolutely. Under the old law on the death of the daughter the property would have passed to the uncle's son. The effect of the present section is that from the date of the commencement of the Act the daughter holds the property as full owner and if she does not dispose of it during her lifetime it will devolve on her heirs.

---

(*x*5) Joginder Singh v. Kehar Singh ('65) A. Punj. 407 (F.B.).

(*x*6) Prema Devi v. Joint Director Consolidation ('70) A.A. 238.

"Acquired"—meaning of.—The word "acquired" in sub-section (1) has to be given the widest possible meaning. This is amply borne out by the very comprehensive language used in the Explanation to the sub-section (xx).

". . . possessed by a female Hindu, whether acquired before or after the commencement of this Act".—The expression "possessed" in the initial part of the section appears to have been deliberately used by the Legislature. The radical change intended to be made in the limited connotation of woman's property and the distinct departure from the old law has speaking generally the effect of converting limited ownership where it existed into absolute ownership. The necessary consequence of the altered law was immediately to affect the incidents of woman's property not merely in respect of property that might be acquired and held by a female after the coming into force of the Act but also in respect of property already acquired by her in the past and possessed by her. In that sense the operation of the new law has been carried back and the section can be said to have been given retrospective effect (*x*7). In Harish Chandra v. Triloki Singh (y) the Supreme Court pointed out that by reason of the expression "whether acquired before or after the commencement of this Act" the section is retrospective in effect.

The interpretation of the expression "possessed" in the present context has considerable bearing on the question of alienations of property made by a female before the commencement of the Act when such alienations were liable to be set aside at the instance of persons other than the alienor. In case of any alienation of property or surrender of her interest made by a female having only the limited estate of a Hindu woman the alienation or surrender could be challenged on certain grounds and by certain persons (reversioners). Question arose whether after the coming into operation of the Act it was open to the reversioners to challenge the validity of any alienation made by a widow when the alienation was liable to be set aside under the old law. The answer to this would seem to be in the affirmative because the present section, so far as it deals with property acquired before the commencement of the Act, declares the law only in respect of property possessed by a female Hindu and does not refer to property of which a female holder was the limited owner and which property had ceased to be her property or possessed by her.

There was, however, considerable diversity of judicial opinion on the meaning and effect of the expression 'possessed' in the phrase "possessed by a female Hindu, whether acquired before or after the commencement of this Act. . . ." No difficulty could be likely to arise in respect of property acquired by a female after the commencement of the Act as it is clear that any such property would be held and possessed by her as full owner except where a restricted estate is prescribed as provided for in sub-section (2). But controversy arose in respect of property acquired by her before the commencement of the Act when such property was not in her possession and had already been

---

(xx) Badri Pershad v. Kanso Devi ('70) A.S.C. 1963; Munnalal v. Rajkumar ('62) A.S.C. 1493.

(*x*7) This passage was quoted with approval in Mohari v. Chukli ('60) A. Raj. 82, 85; 10 Raj. 238.

(y) (57) S.C. 444.

alienated by her or her interest in it had otherwise ceased to exist at the date when the Act came into force.

In some earlier decisions of the Patna High Court (z)—subsequently reversed by a Full Bench of the same High Court (*z*1)—and a decision of the Allahabad High Court (a) the view was taken that this section has been made expressly retrospective and declares that any property acquired by a Hindu female at any time whether before or after the commencement of the Act is to be her absolute property with the result that a reversioner recognised as such under the Hindu Law is no more a reversioner as to any property possessed by her at any time and that after the coming into force of the Act a reversioner has no right of reversioner or spes successionis. In a case decided by that Court a Hindu female had executed a sale deed in favour of certain persons and those persons had subsequently mortgaged the property in favour of another person and the plaintiff as reversioner brought a suit for declaration that the sale deed executed by her was without consideration and without any legal necessity and not binding upon him. The lower courts decreed the plaintiff's claim and the present Act came into force during the pendency of the appeal before the High Court. It was held that the plaintiff had lost his right as a reversioner and his suit was dismissed. The view was expressed that the reversioner has in any such case no locus standi to bring or continue, a suit challenging the alienation on any ground. According to the Allahabad High Court even where a reversioner in any such case obtained a declaratory decree before the Act came into force the decree could not be maintained after the commencement of the Act on the ground that any such declaration was rendered futile by the Act and that the effect of the Act was that there were no reversioners at all and there could be no question of the alienation, howsoever illegal it may be, not being binding on the reversioners. The widow would continue to be estopped from challenging the validity of the alienation and the reversioners would have completely disappeared by virtue of the provisions of the Act. The customary law of succession had been completely abrogated by the Act and the next reversioner, it was observed, was a creation of the customary law and was no longer in the picture. The opinion was also expressed that the heirs of the widow who replaced the reversioners cannot challenge the alienation (b).

The contrary view taken by the High Courts of Andhra Pradesh (c), Madras (d), Calcutta (e), Bombay (f), Madhya Pradesh (g), Punjab (h), Orissa (i), Kerala (j), Gujarat (*j*1) and Mysore (*j*2) is to the effect that the section does not purport to enlarge an estate determined before the commencement of the Act or to enlarge an estate conveyed to alienees by the limited owner before the date of the coming into operation of the Act in 1956 and that the court would not be justified in holding that even in such cases the 'reversioner' has no locus standi or that the rights of the 'reversioner' were wholly abrogated.

In Kotturuswami v. Veeravva (k) the Supreme Court expressed its approval of and agreement with the view taken by the High Court of Calcutta (e), that "the opening words of the section 14, i.e. 'property possessed by a female Hindu,' obviously mean that to come within the purview of the section the property must be in possession of the female concerned at the date of the commencement of the Act. They clearly contemplate the female's possession when the Act came into force. The possession might have been either actual or constructive or in any form recognized by law, but unless the female

---

(z) R. A. Missir v. Raghunath ('57) A.P. 480; Janki Kuer v. Chharthu Prasad ('57) A.P. 674; 37 Pat. 1; Julam Missir v. Pradip Missir ('58) A.P. 115; Baijnath v. Ramautar ('58) A.P. 227. Ramsaroop v. Hiralall ('58) A.P. 319; 37 Pat. 496.

(*z*1) Harak Singh v. Kailash Singh (58) A.P. 581 (F.B.). Sheopujan v. Ramsewak ('63) A.P. 330.

(a) Hanuman Prasad v. Indrawati ('58) A.A. 304; dissented from in Rameshwar v. Hardas ('64) A.A. 308.

(b) See f.n. (a) above.

(c) Venkayamma v. Veerayya ('57) A.A.P. 280.

(d) Marudakkal v. Arumugha ('58) A.M. 255; I.L.R. (1958) Mad. 354; (1958) 1 Mad. L.J. 101.

(e) Gostha Behari v. Haridas, ('57) A.C. 557; Krishna Dassi v. Akhil Chandra ('58) A.C. 671.

(f) Ramchandra v. Sakharam ('58) A.B. 244.

(g) Lukai v. Niranjan ('58) A.M.P. 160 (F.B.) Janku v. Kisan ('59) A.M.P. 1.

(h) Amar Singh v. Sewa Ram ('60) A. Punj. 530 (F.B.). I.L.R. (1960) 2 Punj. 343; Mukhtiar Kaur v. Kartar Kaur ('66) A. Punj. 31.

(i) Sansir Patelin v. Satyabati Naikani ('58) A. Orissa 75; I.L.R. (1957) Cutt. 700.

(j) Chandrasekhara v. Sivaramakrishna ('58) A. Kerala 142.

(*j*1) Kamla v. Ochhavlal ('65) A. Guj. 84.

(*j*2) Damodar Rao v. Bhima Rao ('65) Mys. 290.

(k) (1959) Suppl. (1) S.C.R. 968, (1959) S.C. 577 (1959) S.C.J. 437. Also see Radha Rani v. Hanuman Prasad ('66) A.S.C. 216.

Hindu, whose limited estate in the disputed property is claimed to have been transformed into absolute estate under this particular section, was at least in such possession, taking the word 'possession' in its widest connotation, when the Act came into force, the section would not apply." The Supreme Court also observed that in its later Full Bench decision (*z*1) the Patna High Court had "rightly pointed out that the object of the Act was to improve the legal status of Hindu women, enlarging their limited interest in property inherited or held by them to an absolute interest, provided they were in possession of the property when the Act came into force and, therefore, in a position to take advantage of its beneficial provisions; but the Act was not intended to benefit alienees who with their eyes open purchased the property from the owners without justifying necessity before the Act came into force and at a time when the vendors had only a limited interest of Hindu women."

"Possessed"—Meaning of.—The word "possessed is used in this section in a broad sense and in its widest connotation and as pointed out by the Supreme Court in Kotturuswami v. Veeravva (k) means "the state of owning or having in one's hand or power." It need not be actual physical possession or personal occupation of the property by the female but may be possession in law. It may either be actual or constructive or in any form recognised by law. Thus for instance the possession of a licensee, lessee or a mortgagee from the female owner would be her possession for the purpose of this section. Such also would be the case where a person is in possession as agent of the female owner and is accountable to her. It will be seen from the undermentioned cases (*k*1) that the Courts have given the widest connotation to the expression 'possessed'. In Mangal Singh v. Rattno (*k*2) the Supreme Court pointed out that the section covers all cases of property owned by a female Hindu although she may not be in actual, physical or constructive possession of that property, provided of course that she has not parted with her rights and is capable of obtaining possession of the property. In that case a Hindu widow came into possession of land on the death of her husband in 1917 and continued in possession until 1954 when she was wrongfully dispossessed and filed a suit on 12th March 1956 and died in 1958. It was held that on coming into force of the Act in 1956 after institution of the suit she must be regarded as a female Hindu who possessed the property for the purpose of this section and as one who became full owner of it. In any such case the female owner would be regarded as being 'possessed' of the property if the trespasser has not perfected his title by adverse possession before the Act came into force (*k*3).

The right which was conferred on the widow by Section 3 of the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, 1937, as has already been pointed out, was

---

(*k*1) Sampathakumari v. Lakshmi Ammal ('63) A.M. 50. Arumuga v. Nachemuthu ('58) A.M. 459 [widow was mortgagor: became absolute owner]. Jai Ram v. Tota Ram ('61) A Punj. 395. [Constructive possession through mortgagee]. Thakur Ram Janki v. Jago Singh ('62) A.P. 131. Krishna Dassi v. Akhil Chandra ('58) A.C. 671. [Receiver in mortgage suit]; Annapurna v. Kalpana Debi ('72) A. Gauhati 107; Baswant Gouda v. Channabasawwa ('71) A. Mys. 151 [invalid adoption before Act: widow held to be in possession]; Ladhi Bai v. Thakur Shiriji ('68) A. Raj. 41 [will by widow before Act came into force]; Rangaswami v. Chinnammal ('64) A.M. 387.

(*k*2) ('67) A.S.C. 1786.

(*k*3) Gopalakrishnan v. Ramulu Reddi (1965) 1 Mad. L.J. 579; Sivaiah v. Tekchand ('66) A.A.P. 305 [title in widow by inheritance but possession of trespasser]; Anandibai v. Sundarabai ('65) A.M.P. 85 [co-widows: possession of trespassers]; Gulabchand v. Sheokaran Lal ('64) A.P. 45 [widow in adverse possession]. Also see Harmal Kaur v. Kartar Kaur ('68) A.P.&H. 295; Rajendra Nath v. Shiv Nath ('71) A.A. 448.

not a right which was inchoate or imperfect till a claim for partition was made. The undivided interest of the husband in the joint family property devolved upon the widow immediately on the death of the husband and in the eye of law she would be in possession of her interest in that property. The effect of the present section is to transform that statutory interest of the widow of which she was a limited owner into that of a full owner. The fact that she had not sought any partition before the present Act came into force in 1956 makes no difference (*k*4). Similarly where at the time of her death the widow was in possession of her share of the property to which she became entitled under the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, 1937, that share or that property would devolve upon her heirs and the latter would be entitled to prosecute a suit for partition filed by the widow (*k*5). On the same principle it was held by the Supreme Court that the share of a widow declared by a preliminary decree in a partition suit before the commencement of the present Act, is a share "possessed" by her and if she dies before actual division of the estate, the interest declared in her favour will devolve upon her heir as property of which she was possessed at the time of her death and within the contemplation of the present section (*kk*5). The same principle has been applied to analogous cases where she had acquired interest in any property by virtue of the operation of the Act of 1937 and this irrespective of any actual partition having been effected or not. The mere superimposition of a partition deed or consent decree or an award in any such case would not take the matter out of the purview of sub-section (1) simply because her interest was there described as limited interest (*k*6). In any such case she becomes full owner in respect of that interest and as such she acquires by virtue of this section, a right unlimited in point of user and duration and uninhibited in point of disposition (*k*7). In Sukhram v. Gauri Shankar decided by the Supreme Court H and S, two brothers and C the son of S constituted a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara law of the Benaras School. H died in 1952 leaving him surviving his widow K. In December 1956, after this Act came into force, K sold a half share in a house and a shop belonging to the joint family. In a suit by S and C challenging the sale it was held that K having become full owner of her husband's interest was competent to effect the sale (*k*7). Compensation awarded in respect of property in the possession of a widow, who had not at the date of the acquisition, absolute interest therein, and kept under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act with the Land Acquisition Court on the date when the (*k*4) Sankara Rao v. Rayyalakshamma ('61) A.A.P. 241. Sukh Ram v. Gori Shankar ('62) A.A. 8, Billabasini v. Dulal ('58) A.C. 472. Also see Bhawar Singh v. Pilabai ('72) A.M.P. 204 [wife's right to share on a partition although not impleaded in partition suit].

---

(*k*5) Subbalakshmi v. Ramalakshmi ('64) A.M. 76; (1963) 2 Mad. L.J. 467; Banarsi v. Marcchia ('67) A.P. 340; Ranganayakamma v. Rajeshwaramma ('64) A.P. 380 [widow in possession under a compromise with husband who died after the 1937 Act]. In Shib Dai v. Ghauri Lal ('65) A.J. & K. 11 it was held that if in law the property had not vested in any other person the widow could be deemed to be in possession.

(*kk*5) Munnalal v. Rajkumar ('62) A.S.C. 1493.

(*k*6) Badri Pershad v. Kanso Devi ('70) A.S.C. 1963. [Partition by award: widow given shares as widow's estate: husband died in 1947]; Munnalal v. Rajkumar (1962) S.C. 1493. Dulei Bewa v. Bimali Bewa ('64) A. Orissa 33. Reference may also be made to Lalchand v. Sushila ('62) A.C. 623; Satyanarayana v. Seethamma ('72) A. Mys. 247; Saraswathi v. Anantha ('66) A. Kerala 66; Saraswathi Ammal v. Krishna Iyer ('65) A. Kerala 226 [property given to brother's widow under a partition]; Kaliammal v. Andiammal ('65) A.M. 451; Indubai v. Vyankati ('66) A.B. 64; Udhav Shankar v. Tarabai ('68) A.B. 308 [consent decree in partition suit]; Jagannathpuri Guru v. Godabai ('68) A.B. 25; Raghunath v. Bhimsen ('65) A. Orissa 59; Purna Chandra v. Nimai Charan ('68) A. Orissa 196 [partition deed].

(*k*7) Sukh Ram v. Gauri Shankar ('68) A.S.C. 365.

present Act came into operation in 1956, is property "possessed" by her within the meaning of this section (*k*8).

The section, however, is not intended to validate illegal possession of a female Hindu and does not confer any right on a trespasser (l) or on a female who had no right to hold or possess the property (*l*1). The female owner must be in possession of the property in her right as a limited owner. If she had already divested her interest as a limited owner (*l*2) or had been divested of her interest as a widow on account of remarriage before the Act came into force she would not become full owner of the property simply because she had not been deprived of the possession of the property when the Act came into force (*l*3). She would not, however, forfeit her right to the property if she remarried after this Act came into operation and the property vested in her as full owner (*l*4).

The section can have no application where a female Hindu never acquired any property at all or where having acquired it she happens to have lost her title thereto by alienation, surrender or otherwise and of which she was not or could not be in juridical possession at the commencement of the Act (*l*5). As explained by the Supreme Court, in order that the female Hindu can he said to be 'possessed' of the property two things are necessary: (a) she must have had a right to the possession of the property and (b) she must have been in possession of that property either actually or constructively. It necessarily follows that if her possession was that of a trespasser when the Act came into force and even thereafter till her death she cannot be said to have acquired any right under this section. In that case G died in 1920 and on his death his widow L took possession of his property as his heir. In 1936 she gifted the property to N and on the death of N the plaintiffs came into possession of the same. In 1951 L took wrongful possession of the property. In a suit by the plaintiffs it was held that L could not be said to be 'possessed' of the property when the Act came into force because she had no right to be in possession of the property and she did not acquire any right under this section (*l*6). The position, however, would be different in case of property acquired by a female Hindu by prescription (*l*7).

Reversioners.—It is true that a reversion gets abolished as a consequence of the woman's estate being enlarged to full ownership where the limited owner "possessed" the property at the commencement of the Act. In respect, however, of property other than property to which this section applies by reason of its being "possessed" by her the position is different. As already pointed out the section has no application where a Hindu female having

---

(*k*8) Saila Bala Dasi v. Saila Bala ('61) A.C. 26.

(l) Bakhtawari v. Sadhu Singh ('59) A. Punj. 558. Gurdas v. Prito ('61) A. Punj. 203.

(*l*1) Giano v. Moti Ram ('61) A. Punj. 274; Andal Ammal v. Sivaprakasa ('63) A.M. 452.

(*l*2) Chandradip Rai v. Mahip Rai ('60) A.P. 112.

(*l*3) Bisarti v. Sukarti ('60) A.M.P. 156.

(*l*4) Pandurang v. Sindhu ('71) A.B. 413; Chimappvu v. Meenakshi ('71) A.M. 453; Annapurna v. Kalpana Debi ('72) A. Gauhati 107; Bhuri Bai v. Champa Bai ('68) A. Raj. 139.

(*l*5) Eramma v. Veeruppana ('66) A.S.C. 1879; Mohari v. Chukli ('60) A. Raj. 82; 10 Raj. 238. Pathumma Beebi v. Krishnan Asari ('61) A. Kerala 247. Vishwapathi v. Venkata Krishna ('63) A.A.P. 9. Ram Ghulam Singh v. Palakdhari Singh ('61) A.P. 60. Gangadhar Charan v. Saraswati ('62) A. Orissa 190. Bapurao v. Netaji ('61) A.B. 300; Damodhar Rao v. Bhima Rao ('65) A. Mys. 290; Mukhtiar Kaur v. Kartar Kaur ('60) A. Punj. 31; Nathuni Prasad v. Kachnar ('65) A.P. 160 [wrongful alienation by widow].

(*l*6) Dindayal v. Rajaram ('70) A.S.C. 1019.

(*l*7) Harmal Kaur v. Kartar Kaur ('68) A.P.&H. 295.

acquired property as a limited owner happens to have lost her title thereto by alienation, surrender or otherwise and of which she was not or could not be in juridical possession at the commencement of the Act. The right of a reversioner to repudiate the alienation made without legal necessity or other transaction in any such case effected before the Act came into operation and his claim to possession thereof from the transferee on the death of the female Hindu, or on the extinction of the limited estate otherwise has not been adversely affected or taken away by this section (*l*8). Reference may also be made to the Notes at pp. 900-901 supra where mention has been made of the decision of the Supreme Court in Kotturuswami v. Veeravva and other decisions on the subject. The question of maintainability of such a suit was again examined by the Supreme Court and the same view was taken (*l*9). The maintainability of a suit by a reversioner in any such case is not affected by this section or section 15 (*l*10).

There is a difference of opinion among some of the High Courts as to who would be the reversioners entitled to challenge any alienation of the nature mentioned above and made before the Act came into operation. In a case decided by the High Court of Mysore (*l*11) the last male holder died in 1918 and the widow who inherited his property died in 1958 after the Act came into force. The widow having parted with possession of the property in favour of a donee before she could have become owner of the property by operation of this section, question arose as to who would be the reversioners entitled to challenge the alienation by the widow beyond her life time. It was held that the reversioners were to be ascertained according to the Hindu law operative at the time of the death of the last male holder and not as of the date when the widow died in 1958. A similar view has been taken by the High Courts of Orissa (*l*12) and Patna (*l*13). A contrary view has been taken in the undermentioned decisions of the High Court of Punjab (*l*14) according to which in any such case the succession would open on the death of the widow and the reversioners would be those who would have been the heirs of the last male holder if he had died in 1958, that is by reference to section 8 of this Act. In the latest decision of the High Court of Mysore, however, the view has been expressed that the question falls to be settled as of the date when succession opens, that is on the death of the female life estate holder (*l*15). The High Courts of Andhra Pradesh (*l*16) and Calcutta ( *l*17) have taken the same view.

Surrender of estate by widow or other limited heir.—Where a valid surrender of her estate was made by a widow or other limited heir in favour of a female reversioner it did not, under the previous law, confer on the female reversioner any larger estate but merely accelerated the estate of such reversioner. The estate vested in her as a limited owner and on her death it passed to the next reversioner and did not revert to the widow or other limited heir who had by surrender completely effaced herself (§ 197). Any such case of the female reversioner in whose favour the surrender was made would invite the operation of the rule laid down in this section and her

---

(*l*8) Harak Singh v. Kailash Singh ('58) A.P. 581; (F.B.). Amar Singh v. Sewa Ram ('60) A. Punj. 530 (F.B.). [gift by widow]. Nathuni Missir v. Ratna Kuer ('63) A.P. 337 (surrender); Tulsi Ahir v. Sonia ('62) A.P. 296. Marudakkal v. Arugugha ('58) A.M. 255; I.L.R. (1958) Mad. 354; (1958) 1 Mad. L.J. 101. Kanthimathinatha v. Vayyapuri ('63) A.M. 37; Somiah v. Rattamma ('59) A.A.P. 244.

(*l*9) Radha Rani v. Hanuman Prasad ('66) A.S.C. 216.

(*l*10) Janku v. Kisan ('59) A.M.P. 1; Bakurao v. Neroji ('61) A.B. 300; Mangla Balmukund v. Nathiya ('71) A.P.&H. 365. Also see f.n. (*l*8) and (*l*9) above.

(*l*11) Kempiah v. Girigamma ('66) A. Mys. 189.

(*l*12) Jandebi v. Upendra ('68) A. Orissa 187.

(*l*13) Chaturbhuj v. Sarbeshwar ('67) A.P. 138.

(*l*14) Kuldip Singh v. Karnail Singh ('61) A. Punj. 573; Banso v. Charan Singh ('61) A. Punj. 45; Gurmit Singh v. Tara Singh ('60) A. Punj. 6; Harbhaj Taro v. Darshan Singh ('60) A. Punj. 145; Harbhaj v. Mohar Singh ('67) A. Punj. 184.

(*l*15) Satyanarayana v. Seethamma ('72) A. Mys. 247.

(*l*16) Ramulu v. Narayana ('65) A.A.P. 466.

(*l*17) Bepin Behary v. Lakshasona ('59) A.C. 27; Hira Lal v. Kunud Behari ('57) A.C. 571.

interest in property possessed by her at the commencement of the Act would be treated as enlarged into full ownership.

Reconveyance to the limited owner by the alienee of property alienated by her before the Act came into force.—A rather unusual situation arises where an alienee from a limited owner, for instance a widow, reconveys the property to the widow in consequence of a challenge by the reversioners or after the reversioners obtain a decree declaring that the alienation would not bind the reversioners after the death of the widow. The view has been taken in the undermentioned cases (*l*18) that the widow would become an absolute owner of the property by operation of this section even though the reconveyance might have taken place after this Act came into operation. A similar view has been taken in a recent decision in a somewhat similar situation (*l*19).

". . . as full owner . .".—The expression 'full owner' has been used in the sense of absolute ownership and in contradistinction to the term 'limited owner' which had received special signification under the old law. The impossibility of exactly defining or circumscribing the right of absolute ownership, it is well understood, arises from various difficulties. The expression full ownership is used in this section in the context of property and denotes a right indefinite in point of user, unrestricted in point of disposition, unlimited in point of duration and heritable as such right by the heirs of the owner. In any such case covered by this section the disposition of such property by the female Hindu by a will executed by her after or even before she became full owner will be valid and operative since in either case the will can speak from the date of her death that is after she became full owner of the property (*l*20). The ambit of this right cannot be cut down by any text rule or interpretation of Hindu law. Therefore, the right of disposition of any such property by the female Hindu will not be affected or controlled by any adoption by her after the Act came into operation (m).

Explanation.—The explanation is too plain to need any comment. It deals elaborately with the various sources and the sundry modes or manners of acquisition of property by a female Hindu and ends up with the words 'in any other manner whatsoever' and also refers to property held as stridhan. It may suffer from excessive caution but the object of the Legislature obviously is to define the term 'property' as comprehensively as possible.

In Munnalal v. Rajkumar (*m*1) the Supreme Court pointed out that this Explanation gives the expression "property" the widest connotation.

Sub-section (2): Restricted estate.—The object of this sub-section is to confine the language of sub-section (1) to its own subject and to stress its co-existence with sets of provisions in other enactments such for instance as the Transfer of Property Act and the Indian Succession Act which may be applic-

---

(*l*18) Jagat Singh v. Teja Singh ('70) A.P.&H. 309 (F.B.); Chinnakolandi v. Thanji ('65) A.M. 497. Contra Ganesh Mahanta v. Sukriya Bewa ('63) A. Orissa 167.

(*l*19) Jagannatham v. Kunjithapatham ('72) A.M. 390.

(*l*20) Ladhi Bai v. Thakur Singh ('68) A. Punj. 41.

(m) Punithavelli Ammal v. Ramalingam ('70) A.S.C. 1730.

(*m*1) (1962) S.C. 1493. Also see f.n. (*k*1) supra, and pp. 901-902 where this case is noted.

able to Hindus. The object of this sub-section is also to make it abundantly clear that a restricted estate can even after the commencement of the Act come into existence in case of interest in property given to a female Hindu, by operation of transactions inter vivos, by testamentary disposition, by decree or order of a civil court or under an award (*m*2). It is also intended to make it clear that any such restricted estate created prior to the commencement of the Act will not be enlarged into full ownership by operation of sub-section (1) if the gift, will, other instrument, decree, order or award had prescribed a restricted estate. Also see Notes on 'restricted estate' infra.

In Badri Pershad v. Kanso Devi the Supreme Court pointed out that it would depend on the facts of each case whether the same is covered by the first or the second sub-section. It was observed that sub-section (2) is more in the nature of a proviso or an exception to sub-section (1). It can come into operation only if acquisition in any of the methods indicated in it is made for the first time without there being any pre-existing right in the female Hindu who is in possession of the property. The court also expressed agreement with the view that the object of the section was to remove the disability on women imposed by law and not to interfere with contracts, grants or decrees etc., by virtue of which a woman's right was restricted (*m*3).

". . . acquired by way of . . ." —The expression acquired means that the female Hindu did not have any interest in the property prior to its acquisition by her (*m*4). The operation of the sub-section is confined to property acquired by a female Hindu in any manner stated in it and does not cover the case of a decree or any other instrument which merely declares her right in property in question when the title itself in the property was not really in dispute. Thus for instance if the female Hindu had prior to the date of the decree title to the property and what the decree really does is to declare that title she cannot be said to have acquired the property under that decree (*m*5). In order to invoke the application of this sub-section it is necessary to satisfy the essential condition that the instrument which limits or restricts the estate should itself be the source or foundation of the female's title to the property. If she had an existing interest in the property, the interposition of any instrument will not affect the operation of sub-section (1). The instrument, for instance, may be a decree or order or deed of partition but if the pre-existing right was there, sub-section (2) cannot have the effect of taking the property out of the coverage of sub-section (1). In any such case the mere fact that the instrument provides that the female Hindu is to have a limited estate or there is a restriction on her power of alienation or that the property will on her death revert to the next reversioner will not take the case out of the purview of sub-section (1). Such terms are merely reiteration of the incidents of Hindu law applicable to limited estate (*m*6). In the Supreme Court case referred to above one G died in 1947 leaving him

---

(*m*2) quoted with approval in Jagannatham v. Kunjithakatham ('72) A.M. 390.

(*m*3) ('70) A.S.C. 1963.

(*m*4) Sampathkumari v. Lakshmi Ammal ('63) A.M. 50. Subbarreddi v. Cenchalamma ('62) A.A.P. 368.

(*m*5) Sasadhar v. Tara Sundari ('62) A.C. 438. Janak Dulari v. Dist. Judge Kanpur, ('61) A.A. 294.

(*m*6) Gurunath Chetty v. Navaneethamma ('67) A.M. 429; Pattabiraman v. Parijatham Ammal ('70) A.M. 257; Kaliammal v. Andiammal ('65) A.M. 451; Bapusaheb v. Gangabai ('72) A.B. 16.

surviving four sons by his predeceased wife and one son by his second wife K who also survived him. G left considerable self acquired property. Some differences arose between these heirs in respect of partitioning of the property among them and the arbitrator who was appointed made his award which was made an order of the court. The award stated that K would have a widow's estate in the share allotted to her. It was held that she had acquired an interest in the property left by G by virtue of the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, 1937 and became absolute owner of the property allotted to her as the case was covered by sub-section (1) and the Explanation to it and sub-section (2) was not attracted simply because there was a partition and an award (*m*3). On the same principle, for instance in case of two female Hindus who inherited property from their husband and then divided the same between them by an instrument of partition, it cannot be said that they acquired their property under such instrument. The partition merely caused adjustment of the proprietory right which had already arisen. In the context of the present section they must be said to have acquired their interest in the property as heirs of the husband and not under the instrument (*m*7).

The question in these cases will be mostly one of construction of the instrument and ascertainment of the intention therein expressed. As pointed out by the Supreme Court (*m*3) it will depend on the facts of each case whether the same is covered by the first sub-section or sub-section (2). The facts have to be examined in the light of the principles stated above. Where there is a dispute about property between rival claimants and it is settled by a compromise the title of the female Hindu flows from the compromise since each party gives up its respective claim and accepts the compromise as the basis of its title (*m*8). Where there were bona fide disputes as to title itself and in a compromise decree passed in 1924 between an adopted son and his widow mothers, the son got half share in the property in dispute and the widows got the remaining half share with certain other stipulations, it was held that only a restricted right was given to the widows and the case fell under the present sub-section (*mm*8).

A restricted estate may be created by a will (*m*9). Where A executed a will under which he bequeathed his property to B but gave her only a limited estate and prohibited her from making any alienations and the property was after B's death to go to certain male heirs of the testator the case was held to be governed by the rule enacted in the present sub-section (*m*10).

A deed of partition between members of a joint Hindu family would not ordinarily fall under the description of "any other instrument" prescribing a "restricted estate" within the meaning of this sub-section because no fresh title is created by a partition deed among the members of a joint Hindu family (*m*11). As a general rule a partition deed of this nature declares the

---

(*m*7) Sampathikumari v. Lakshmi Ammal supra.

(*m*8) Kirpo v. Bakhtawar Singh ('64) A. Punj. 474.

(*mm*8) Mali Bewa v. Dodhi Das ('60) A. Orissa 81; Seetharamayya v. Peraiah ('64) A.A.P. 545.

(*m*9) Karni v. Amru ('71) A.S.C. 745.

(*m*10) Ajab Singh v. Ram Singh ('39) A.J.&K. 92 (F.B.); Raj Kumar v. Prem Prakash Kaur ('72) A.P.&H. 459.

(*m*11) Jagannathpuri v. Godebai ('68) A.B. 25: Also see Udhav Shankar v. Tarabai ('68) A.B. 308; Purna Chandra v. Nimei Charan ('68) A. Orissa 196.

existing rights of the parties and even when it declares and allots a share in favour of a female Hindu member of the family and defines the property allotted to her it does not of itself become the source or foundation of the female's title to such property. The instrument only crystalises, declares or recognizes her pre-existing rights and the case does not come under the coverage of this sub-section. On the other hand, a partition deed may go beyond this and in fact record a bona fide compromise of disputed claims between the female member and the other members. It may also embody a bona fide family settlement or family arrangement and if on a proper interpretation of the instrument the court comes to the conclusion that the intention of the parties was to create a 'restricted estate' of the nature visualised by this sub-section the case would fall within its purview regard being had to the principles discussed above (*m*12).

Property given in lieu of maintenance.—There is no difficulty as to the effect of any instrument giving specified property for maintenance to a Hindu widow where the instrument is executed after the death of her husband after the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act 1937 came into operation. The pre-existing right of the widow being there the instrument though it speaks of limited interest or restriction on alienation would not fall under this sub-section and the case would be covered by sub-section (1) with the result that she would become absolute owner of such property. In such cases where the husband died after the 1937 Act came into operation the widow acquired her right under that Act and the subsequent instrument would be regarded as merely declaring the pre-existing title in the widow. The instrument would not be the source or foundation of her title. There is, however diversity of judicial opinion as to the application of this sub-section where a coparcener had died before the coming into operation of that Act and the widow did not acquire any interest in the joint family property but was only entitled to maintenance out of the same. In cases falling under this category there were instances where the widow was assured of this right of maintenance by allotting property to her for life under instruments, for instance, of agreements, compromises, awards or decrees of court. There are decisions which proceed on the footing that her right to be maintained from the family property though crystalised, declared or recognized in any such instrument was a right in existence prior to such instrument and hence not covered by sub-section (2) and the widow has been held to have become absolute owner of the property by regarding the case as within the purview of sub-section (1) read with the Explanation to it which is inter alia to the effect that 'property' in sub-section (1) includes property acquired "in lieu of maintenance or arrears of maintenance" (n). The decisions to the contrary

---

(*m*12) For instance see Jaria Devi v. Shyam Sunder ('59) A.C. 338. Also see Kirpo v. Bakhtawar Singh ('64) A. Punj. 474: But every family arrangement or settlement need not fall under sub-section (2), Lachhia v. Ram Shankar ('66) A.P. 191. Nor need every compromise, Ude Chand v. Rajo ('66) A. Punj. 329; Mahadeo v. Bensraji ('71) A.P. 515; Raghunath v. Bhimsen ('65) A. Orissa 59.

(n) Bapusaheb v. Gangabai ('72) A.B. 16; Gadam v. Venkatarajalu ('65) A.A.P. 66; Someshwar v. Swami Nath ('70) A.P. 348. [In such a case though the female Hindu cannot be said to be limited owner of the property still the inclusive definition of the word property in the Explanation, according to this decision, makes her a limited owner for the purpose of sub-section 1]; Sharbati Devi v. Hiralal ('64) A. Punj. 114; Suhagwanti v. Sodhan ('68) A. Punj. 24; Ram Jag v. Director of Consolidation ('68) A.A. 419; Bindbashini v. Sheorati ('71) A.P. 104; Sheoji v. Prema Kuer ('64) A.P. 187; Hanamangouda v. Hanamangouda ('72) A. Mys. 286. Also see Kunji Thomman v. Meenakshi ('70) A. Kerala 284. And see Saraswathi Ammal v. Anantha ('66) A. Kerala 66; Chanamma v. Lingamma ('72) A. Mys. 333.

rest on the basis that her right to be maintained out of the family property in any such case was not a "right to property" and she acquired right to property for the first time under the instrument, award or decree and therefore according to these decisions the case would fall under the purview of sub-section (2) and the widow has been held to be entitled only to the "restricted estate" prescribed under the instrument, award or decree (*n*1). Most of the decisions which take the former view lay stress on the language of the Explanation whereby the expression "property" includes property acquired by the female Hindu in lieu of maintenance.

While the relevance of the Explanation cannot be overlooked, it has to be emphasised that an essential condition of the application of sub-section (1) read with the Explanation is that the property must have been "acquired" by the female Hindu. It would not be sufficient in order to invite the operation of sub-section (1) that she had been put in possession of the property in lieu of maintenance. It would not be correct to say that the mere fact that she was put in possession of the property in lieu of maintenance created in her any title in the property. The right of maintenance even of a Hindu widow is an indefinite right which falls short of a charge; and even when it is made a charge, as is well-established, it does not create any interest in the property like a mortgage. In examining the ambit and operation of this section the Supreme Court has observed that possession alone is not sufficient to attract the operation of the section and that the property contemplated in the section is clearly property to which the female Hindu has acquired some kind of title however restricted the nature of her interest may be (*n*2). It is submitted that it is not possible to expect any general rule applicable to all cases of property given for maintenance. It cannot be said that because of the Explanation all such cases must fall under the coverage of sub-section (1). The decision in each case must depend on the construction of the instrument, award or decree and the facts of the particular case which would be examined in the light of the principles which emerge from the decisions of the Supreme Court to which reference has already been made and without undue emphasis on the Explanation to sub-section (1).

Decree.—This sub-section contemplates only those cases where the decree in question had become final and was not under appeal when the Act came into force (*n*3). The decree must be the source of title (*n*4).

Restricted estate.—The sub-section does not require that the restricted estate must be prescribed in express terms. Normally any acquisition of property covered by this sub-section would be by an instrument in writing or by a decree or award (*n*5). Whether any restricted estate has been created

---

(n1) Pattabhiraman v. Parijatam Ammal ('70) A.M. 257; Gurunadhan v. Navaneethamma ('67) A.M. 429; Thayammal v. Salammal ('72) A.M. 83; Santhanam v. Subramania ('72) A.M. 279; Kempanna v. Shantarajiah ('73) A. Mys. 66; Chanamma v. Lingamma ('72) A. Mys. 333; Narayan v. Tara ('70) A. Orissa 131; Lakshmi Chand v. Sukhdevi ('70) A. Raj. 285. In V. S. Reddi v. Tulasamma ('69) A.A.P. 300 there was a decree for maintenance and subsequently a compromise. Reference may also be made to Bindroo v. Munshi ('71) A.J.&K. 142.

(n2) Eramma v. Veerupana ('66) A.S.C. 1879.

(n3) Annapurnamma v. Bhima Sankerrao ('60) A.A.P. 359; Pathumma Beebi v. Krishnan Asari ('61) A. Kerala 247; Rampali Devi v. Chando Bibi ('66) A.A. 584 [Decree must also be one affording foundation of title and not merely declaratory]; Saraswathi Ammal v. Anantha ('68) A. Kerala 66; Venkamma v. Venkatareddi ('59) A.A.P. 158.

(n4) Chajju Ram v. Bhuri ('69) A. Delhi 273.

(n5) According to the Punjab High Court there can be an oral gift within the ambit of this subsection, Blanda v. Dunni Chand ('63) A. Punj. 34.

or not in any such case must obviously be a question of construction to be determined in accordance with the canons of construction applied with regard to such instrument, decree, order or award.

Restrictions by way of conditions or limitations envisaged by this sub-section must be such as are recognised as valid. They must not be repugnant to or prohibited by any statutory enactment affecting the parties and where there is no statutory rule affecting the matter they must be such as do not result in any estate unknown to Hindu law.

Civil Court.—The expression "Civil Court" in this sub-section has been interpreted by the High Court of Orissa as including a Deputy Commissioner acting as revenue court (*n*6).

15. (1) The property of a female Hindu dying intestate shall devolve according to the rules set out in section 16,—

General rules of succession in the case of female Hindus.

(a) firstly, upon the sons and daughters (including the children of any pre-deceased son or daughter) and the husband;

(b) secondly, upon the heirs of the husband;

(c) thirdly, upon the mother and father;

(d) fourthly, upon the heirs of the father; and

(e) lastly, upon the heirs of the mother.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1),—

(a) any property inherited by a female Hindu from her father or mother shall devolve, in the absence of any son or daughter of the deceased (including the children of any pre-deceased son or daughter) not upon the other heirs referred to in sub-section (1) in the order specified therein, but upon the heirs of the father; and

(b) any property inherited by a female Hindu from her husband or from her father-in-law shall devolve, in the absence of any son or daughter of the deceased (including the children of any pre-deceased son or daughter) not upon the other heirs referred to in sub-section (1) in the order specified therein, but upon the heirs of the husband.

Succession to property of a female dying intestate.—This section propounds a definite and uniform scheme of succession to the property of a female Hindu who dies intestate after the commencement of the Act. The rules laid down in this section are pivotal and have to be read along with the rules set out in S. 16. They have also to be read along with certain other sections in the Chapter which contain supplementary provisions which are not merely explanatory but lay down substantive rules involving legal principles.

---

(*n*6) Arakhita v. Hari ('63) A. Orissa 162; I.L.R. (1963) Cutt. 628.

The section groups the heirs of a female intestate into five categories described as entries (a) to (e) and specified in sub-section (1). Sub-section (1), however, is not a complete statement of the law. Two exceptions both of the same nature, are engrafted by sub-section (2) on the otherwise uniform order of succession prescribed by sub-section (1). Broadly stated the two exceptions are that if the female dies without leaving any issue, then (1) in respect of property inherited by her from her father or mother, that property will devolve not according to the order laid down in the five entries but upon the heirs of the father; and (2) in respect of property inherited by her from her husband or father-in-law it will devolve not according to the order laid down in the five entries but upon the heirs of the husband.

The two exceptions mentioned above are confined to property "inherited" from the father, mother, husband and father-in-law of the female Hindu and do not affect property acquired by her by device under a will of any of them. Property acquired by her under any device or bequest under a will from any such person would devolve on her death in the manner prescribed in sub-section (1). Reference may be made to Notes under sub-section (2) infra.

Under the previous law—succession to Stridhan—Woman's property—varied according as a woman was married or unmarried and according as she was married in an approved form or in an unapproved form. It also varied according to the source from which the Stridhan came and the mode and manner of her acquisition of the property. The rules of descent of the different schools also varied. S. 14, it must have been noticed, abolishes the various kinds of Stridhan and property of every kind possessed by a female Hindu howsoever acquired and whenever acquired becomes now her absolute property. The present section which has to be read in conjunction with sec. 16 evolves a new and uniform order of succession to her property and regulates the manner of its distribution. The provisions in sub-section (1) and sub-section 2(a) of section 15 do not apply to persons governed by Marumakkattayam and Aliyasantana laws as will be seen from sec. 17.

The heritable property of a female intestate devolves upon her heirs enumerated in the five entries. Among heirs so specified those in entry (a) are preferred to those in entry (b); the heirs in entry (b) are preferred to those in entry (c) and so on in case of succeeding entries (*n*7). Therefore, it is only in case of failure of the heirs specified in entry (a), but not until then, that the property will devolve upon the heirs listed in the next entry and similarly in order of succession.

When property devolves by operation of Entries (b), (d) or (e) of sub-section (1) upon the heirs therein mentioned it is the property of the deceased female of which devolution takes place and not of the property of the husband or father or mother (*n*8).

Property.—The expression 'property' in this section means property of the deceased heritable under the Act. It includes both moveable and immove-

---

(*n*7) S. 16, Rule 1.

(*n*8) Reference may be made to Arunachalathammal v. Ramachandran ('63) A.M. 255.

able property owned by a female Hindu and acquired by her by inheritance; or by devise; or at a partition; or by gift from any person whether her relative or not (before, at or after her marriage); or by her own skill or exertion; or by purchase; or by prescription; or in any other manner whatsoever (o). It also includes all property which was held and possessed by her at the date of the commencement of the Act and of which she is declared to be the full owner by section 14 of the Act. It also includes agricultural land subject to this that legislation relating to prevention of fragmentation of agricultural holdings or fixation of ceilings or the devolution of tenancy rights in respect of such holdings is not to be affected by anything contained in the Act. But the rules of succession laid down in this section do not apply to property expressly excluded from the operation of the Act by sec. 5.

The rules of succession laid down in this section cannot apply to property acquired by a female under an Instrument or a decree or order of a civil court or under an award which itself prescribed a restricted estate in such property. In any such case succession to such property would be controlled by the nature and extent of the restricted estate thereby created (p).

Nor can the rules of succession laid down in this section apply to the case of the death of a female, who had acquired property as a limited owner and alienated the same before the commencement of the Act. In her case section 14 would not become applicable as the property cannot be regarded as property of the deceased intestate (*p*1).

Property of a female Hindu . . . shall devolve.—The language of the section and particularly the words "shall devolve" plainly indicate that the section is prospective in its operation. It applies where death of a female intestate and consequent devolution of her property takes place after the commencement of the Act and does not govern succession to the property of a female Hindu whose death took place before the Act came into force. In the latter case all questions of inheritance would be determined according to the previous law.

Order of succession.—The effect of the rules laid down in this section is that the property of a female intestate will devolve as summarised in the following propositions (*p*2):

(1) The general order of succession laid down in entries (a) to (e) in sub-section (1) applies to all property of a female intestate howsoever acquired except in case of property inherited by her from her father, mother, husband or father-in-law.

(2) In case of a female intestate leaving a son or a daughter or a child of a predeceased son or of a predeceased daughter, that is leaving any issue, all her property, howsoever acquired, devolves on such issue regardless of the source of acquisition of the property and such issue take the property

---

(o) Cf. Explanation to Section 14(1).

(p) See Section 14(2).

(*p*1) Renuka Bala v. Aswini Kumar ('61) A.P. 498. Reference may also be made to the Notes under section 14 supra.

(*p*2) In these propositions and subsequent Notes on the subject the word "issue" means son, daughter, son of a predeceased son, daughter of a predeceased son, son of a predeceased daughter and daughter of a predeceased daughter.

simultaneously; and if the husband of the intestate is alive they take simultaneously with him in accordance with entry (a). In such a case sub-section (2) does not at all come into operation.

(3) In case of a female intestate dying without issue but leaving her husband, the husband will take all her property, except property inherited by her from her father or mother which will revert to the heirs of the father in existence at the time of her death.

(4) In case of a female intestate dying without issue property inherited by her from her husband or father-in-law, (the husband being dead), will go to the heirs of the husband and not in accordance with the general order of succession laid down in sub-section (1).

(5) In case of a female intestate dying without issue property inherited by her from her father or mother will revert to the heirs of the father in existence at the time of her death and not in accordance with the general order of succession laid down in sub-section (1).

Propositions (3), (4) and (5) above state the special order of succession which is confined only to property acquired by the female intestate from the specified sources. Proposition (2) is the obvious corollary to the statement of law in the whole section.

GENERAL ORDER OF SUCCESSION

Entry (a)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| These are specified in the Entry as children of predeceased son or daughter. | SonDaughterSon of a predeceased sonDaughter of a predeceased sonSon of a predeceased daughterDaughter of a predeceased daughterHusband | These are heirs specified in Entry (a). They take *simultaneously and to the exclusion of those specified in the subsequent entries. |

SON.—The expression 'son' used in Entry (a) has not been defined in the Act. It includes both a natural son and a son adopted in accordance with the law relating to adoption among Hindus in force at the time of the adoption. In case of a female intestate who had remarried after the death of her husband or after divorce her sons by different husbands would all be her natural sons and entitled to inherit the property left by the female Hindu regardless of the source of the property: [See Illustrations to Entry (a) at p. 917 infra.]

The proviso to sec. 3 (1) (j) in terms lays down inter alia that illegitimate children shall be deemed to be related to their mother and any word in the Act expressing relationship or denoting a relative shall be construed accordingly. Therefore, the expression 'son' used in this entry also includes an illegitimate son. For 'Son born of a void or voidable marriage' reference may be made to Notes under that heading at pp. 867-868 supra and Illustrations given there.

An adopted son would be included in the expression 'son' used in this entry; that is if the female intestate was in the position of the adoptive mother. Under the old law in force prior to the coming into operation of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, a son could be adopted by a male and in certain cases a wife could adopt a son to her husband and a widow could adopt a son to her deceased husband. In all such cases of adoption, made before that Act came into operation, the adopted son will be an heir of the adoptive mother under this Entry.

Under the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 (sec. 14), a son adopted by a Hindu who has a wife living, is deemed also to be her adopted son and she is in the position of his adoptive mother; and when the adoption is made by a person who has more than one wife, the seniormost in marriage among them is deemed to be the adoptive mother and the others to be his step-mothers. In any such case the adopted son will be a 'son' of the adoptive mother within the meaning of this Entry.

---

* But in accordance with Rules in section 16.

Under sec. 8 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, a female Hindu, who is not married or if married whose marriage has been dissolved or is a widow or whose husband has renounced the world or ceased to be a Hindu or has been declared by a court to be of unsound mind, has now the capacity to take a son or daughter in adoption to herself. Such a son is, therefore, an heir under this Entry. Reference may be made to Notes under s. 8 of that Act.

Also see "Relative by adoption" at pp. 864-865 supra and sections 5, 7, 8, 12 and 14 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

A step-son is not entitled as 'son' to inherit to his step-mother as one of the heirs under this Entry but he can succeed to her property as an heir of her husband under Entry (b) of the sub-section (*p*3).

A posthumous son of her husband by her is as much a natural son of the female as a son born during the lifetime of her husband (q).

DAUGHTER.—The rules relating to a 'son' stated above apply mutatis mutandis to the case of a daughter. Illustrations under Entry (a) may also be seen: p. 917 infra.

Adopted son and adopted daughter.—Under the provisions of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, it is competent to a female Hindu to have both an adopted son and an adopted daughter. Therefore, under this Entry both an adopted son and an adopted daughter can be her heirs and take simultaneously.

SON OF A PREDECEASED SON.—The son of a predeceased son is entitled to succeed as a child of a predeceased son under Entry (a) and includes both a natural son of a predeceased son and a son of a predeceased son adopted by the latter in accordance with the law relating to adoptions among Hindu in force at the time of adoption. The proviso to sec. 3 (1) (j) lays down inter alia that illegitimate children shall be deemed to be related to their mother and their legitimate descendants shall be deemed to be related to them and to their mother, and any words expressing relationship or denoting a relative shall be construed accordingly. Therefore, a legitimate son of a predeceased illegitimate son of a female is an heir under this Entry. A posthumous son of the predeceased son is also included in this Entry.

Also see "Relative by adoption" at pp. 864-865 supra and sections 5, 7, 8, 12 and 14 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

Also see "Son" supra. Illustrations under Entry (a) may also be seen: p. 917 infra.

---

(*p*3) Mallappa v. Shivappa ('62) A. Mys. 140. (q) See S. 20, Infra.

DAUGHTER OF A PREDECEASED SON.—The rules relating to 'son of a predeceased son' stated above apply mutatis mutandis to the case of a daughter of a predeceased son.

Also see "Son" and "Daughter" supra. Illustrations under Entry (a) may also be seen p. 917 infra.

SON OF A PREDECEASED DAUGHTER.—The son of a predeceased daughter is entitled to succeed as a child of a predeceased daughter under Entry (a) and includes both a natural son of a predeceased daughter and a son of a predeceased daughter adopted by the latter in accordance with the law relating to adoptions among Hindus in force at the time of adoption. If the daughter had remarried after the death of her husband or after divorce her sons by different husbands would all be her natural sons. Proviso to section 3(1)(j) lays down that illegitimate children shall be deemed to be related to their mother and their legitimate descendants shall be deemed to be related to them and to their mother, and any words expressing relationship or denoting a relative shall be construed accordingly. Therefore, a legitimate son of a predeceased illegitimate daughter of a female is an heir under this Entry. A legitimate son of the predeceased daughter who was in her womb at the time of the death of the intestate is also included in this Entry.

Also see "Relative by adoption" at pp. 864-865 supra and sections 5, 7, 8, 12 and 14 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

Also see "Son" and "Daughter" supra. Illustrations under Entry (a) may also be seen: p. 917 infra.

DAUGHTER OF A PREDECEASED DAUGHTER.—The rules relating to son of a predeceased daughter stated above apply mutatis mutandis to the case of a daughter of a predeceased daughter.

Also see "Son" and "Daughter" supra. Illustration under Entry (a) may also be seen: p. 917 infra.

HUSBAND.—The husband entitled to succeed under this entry must be a person who was lawfully married to the female intestate and whose marriage had not been annulled or dissolved by a decree of a court or dissolved by any valid custom governing the parties (r). In general, the effect of annulment or dissolution of marriage is total severance of all relationship between the divorcee and the other spouse as also his relations. But a decree for judicial separation or non-compliance with a decree for restitution of conjugal rights does not have the effect of dissolving the marriage. Illustrations below may also be seen.

---

(r) Section 29(2), Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.

Illustrations: Entry (a)

1. A dies leaving her surviving a son S; two daughters D and *D*1; *DD*2 the daughter of a predeceased daughter *D*2; *SS*1 the adopted son of a predeceased son *S*1; and *SSS*2 the son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son *S*2. All the property of A, howsoever acquired, will devolve simultaneously upon S, D, *D*1, *SS*1 and *DD*2 as heirs specified in Entry (a). *SSS*2 although a great-grandson of A will not succeed as her heir with the others (s). He is not an heir under Entry (a) and will be excluded by the others who are heirs specified in that Entry.

2. A dies leaving her surviving a son S; an adopted daughter D; and her husband H. All the property of A, howsoever acquired, will devolve simultaneously upon S, D and H as heirs specified in Entry (a).

3. A dies leaving her surviving a son S by her first husband and property which she had inherited from her second husband B. The property will devolve upon S under Entry (a) and not upon the heirs of B. (*s*1).

4. A dies leaving her surviving a son S by her first husband and a daughter D by her second husband. All the property of A howsoever acquired and including property inherited by her from either or both her predeceased husbands will devolve upon S and D in equal shares (*ss*1).

5. See Illustration under Sub-section (2): Clause (b) infra.

GENERAL ORDER OF SUCCESSION (contd.)

Entry (b)

HEIRS OF THE HUSBAND.—Failing all heirs of the intestate female specified in Entry (a), but not until then, all her property will devolve upon the heirs of the husband as heirs specified in this entry. But property that she might have inherited from her father or mother will not devolve upon them and will devolve upon the heirs of the father.

The devolution upon the heirs of the husband of the female intestate shall be in the same order and according to the same rules as would have applied if the property had belonged to the husband and he had died intestate in respect thereof immediately after her death (sec. 16, rule 3). The devolution of the property of a male intestate is governed by the general rules of succession declared in sec. 8; the order of succession laid down in s. 9; and the rules of distribution of property stated in sec. 10; and must be in accordance with other relevant provisions of Chapter II. Therefore, in case of a female intestate who dies without leaving any issue or her husband, the terminus a quo will be the husband of the intestate as if he were the propositus and the ascertainment of the heirs will once again commence from Class I of the Schedule.

Where a female intestate had remarried after the death of her first husband the "heirs of the husband" would be the heirs of the second husband who if alive at the time of the death of the intestate would himself have

---

(s) But failing heirs in Entry (a) he may succeed to her property as an heir of the husband under Entry (b). See Illus. 1 at p. 918, infra. Reference may also be made to the pedegree in facts of Munnalal v. Rajkumar ('62) S.C. 1493.

(*s*1) Rama Ananda v. Bhima ('69) A.B. 205; Keshri Lodhi v. Harprasad ('71) A.M.P. 129.

(*ss*1) Reference may be made to Ram Kali v. Sohan Lal ('72) P.&H. 419. Also see Gurbachan Singh v. Khichar Singh ('71) A.P.&H. 240 [son of second husband].

been entitled to succeed as her husband under entry (a). Therefore, so far as the expression "heirs of the husband" relates to the general order of succession laid down in sub-section (1), the heirs contemplated in entry (b) must be the heirs of the last husband, that is of the person whose widow the intestate was at the time of her death.

The position, however, is quite different in respect of a case governed by clause (b) of sub-section (2) which has the effect of laying down a special order of succession under which in case of a female intestate who dies without issue, the property inherited by her from her husband or father-in-law does not devolve upon the other heir or heirs referred to in sub-section (1) in the order specified therein, but upon the heirs of the husband. It follows from the context that the heirs of the husband mentioned in sub-section (2) (b) are not the heirs of the husband she had married after the death of her first husband but heirs of "the husband" whose property she had inherited as his widow; and in case of property inherited from her father-in-law which could only be as the widow of a predeceased son, the heirs there contemplated are heirs of "the husband" from whose father she inherited the property. Therefore in respect of property that the intestate might have inherited from her first husband or the father of the first husband as the widow of a predeceased son such property will, in the event of her dying without issue, devolve upon the heirs of that husband. In such a case the heirs of the second husband cannot succeed to the property of the intestate so inherited by her. Reference may be made to 'Clause (b)' at pp. 924-925 infra.

Illustrations: Entry (b)

1. A dies leaving her surviving SSS the son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son and SDS the son of a predeceased daughter of a predeceased son and HB the brother of her husband H. A's property will devolve on SSS alone as the heir of her husband under this entry. SSS is the heir of H specified in Class I of the Schedule and SDS and HB are heirs specified in Class II of the Schedule. SSS will, therefore, exclude SDS and HB.

2. A dies leaving her surviving S and D the son and daughter of her deceased husband by another wife; and her brother B. A's property will devolve on S and D under this entry as heirs of the husband. Property that A might have inherited from her father or mother will not devolve on S or D and will devolve on B as an heir of A's father.

3. A dies leaving her surviving SHB and DHB the son and daughter of her husband's brother and HS her husband's sister. A's property will devolve on the heirs of her husband H. HS the husband's sister will take the property to the exclusion of SHB and DHB as she is an heir specified in entry II of Class II of the Schedule while SHB and DHB are heirs specified in entry IV of that class.

4. A dies leaving her surviving SW the widow of S her predeceased son and B her brother. The property of A will devolve upon SW as the heir of her husband under this entry.

Note: These illustrations must be read subject to the Rules relating to special order of succession under sub-section (2).

GENERAL ORDER OF SUCCESSION (contd.)

Entry (c)

| | |
|---|---|
| MotherFather | These heirs specified in Entry (c) succeed simultaneously and share the property equally and to the exclusion of those specified in the subsequent entries. |

MOTHER AND FATHER.—Failing all heirs of the intestate female specified in entries (a) and (b), but not until then, all her property, howsoever acquired, will devolve upon her mother and father.

The property that will devolve under this entry will include property inherited by her from the mother when the intestate is survived by the father and property inherited by her from the father when the intestate is survived by the mother.

MOTHER.—The expression 'mother' includes both a natural mother and an adoptive mother of the intestate. Under the general law in force prior to the coming into operation of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, adoption of a daughter was unknown. But under the Act of 1956, which is the first statutory recognition of the status of an adopted daughter, it is now competent to a male as well as a female Hindu to take a daughter in adoption to himself or herself. A daughter adopted by a Hindu who has a wife living, is deemed to be wife's adopted daughter and the wife is in the position of the adoptive mother; and when the adoption is made by a person who has more than one wife, the seniormost in marriage among them is deemed to be the adoptive mother and the others to be step-mothers (*s*2). Again under sec. 8 of the Act of 1956, a female Hindu who is not married or if married whose marriage has been dissolved or is a widow or whose husband has renounced the world or ceased to be a Hindu or been declared by a court to be of unsound mind, has now the capacity to take a daughter in adoption to herself. In any such case the adoptive mother will be a 'mother' of the adopted daughter within the meaning of this Entry. Adoption has the effect of severing all the ties of the daughter with her natural parents and their family and therefore her natural mother is not entitled to succeed to her property as an heir under this Entry.

Unchastity of a mother is no bar to her succeeding as heir to her daughter; nor does remarriage constitute any such bar.

A mother is entitled to succeed to the property of her illegitimate daughter as an heir under this Entry read with sec. 3 (1) (j).

A step-mother is not entitled as 'mother' to inherit to her step-daughter as one of the heirs under this Entry but she can succeed to her property as an heir of her father under Entry (d).

Also see Notes under "Mother" at pp. 871-872 supra.

---

(*s*2) S. 14, Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

FATHER.—The expression 'father' includes both a natural father and an adoptive father of the intestate. The rules relating to 'father' by adoption of a male intestate stated at pp. 873-874 supra apply mutatis mutandis to the case of an adoptive father of a female intestate.

Also see Notes under "Father" pp. 873-874 supra.

Illustration: Entry (c)

A dies unmarried leaving her surviving her father, her step-mother, a step-brother and her mother's brother. A had inherited considerable property from her mother's mother. All the property of A will devolve on her father as her heir under this Entry.

GENERAL ORDER OF SUCCESSION (contd.)

Entry (d)

HEIRS OF THE FATHER.—Failing all heirs of the female intestate specified in Entries (a) to (c), but not until then, all her property howsoever acquired will devolve upon the heirs of her father. The devolution upon the heirs of the father shall be in the same order and according to the same rules as would have applied if the property had belonged to the father and he had died intestate in respect thereof immediately after her death (sec. 16, rule 3). The devolution of the property of a male intestate is governed by the general rules of succession declared in sec. 8; the order of succession laid down in sec. 9; and the rules of distribution of property stated in sec. 10. Succession in a case falling under this entry will be in accordance with those sections and other relevant provisions of Chapter II. Therefore in case of a female intestate where there is no heir specified in any of the first three entries [(a) to (c)] the terminus a quo will be the father of the intestate as if he were the propositus and the ascertainment of the heirs will once again commence from Class I of the Schedule.

Illustrations: Entry (d)

1. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving her step-mother FW and her brother B. A's property will devolve on FW and B as heirs of her father under this entry. Property that she might have inherited from her own mother will also be included because it will not on A's death devolve upon the heirs of the mother but upon the heirs of the father under sub-section (2)(a).

2. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving her brother B and *WB*1 the widow of a predeceased brother. A's property will devolve under this entry on the heirs of her father. B and *WB*1 will take simultaneously as heirs of the father in Class I of the Schedule.

GENERAL ORDER OF SUCCESSION (contd.)

Entry (e)

HEIRS OF THE MOTHER.—Failing all heirs of the female intestate specified in entries (a) to (d), but not until then, all her property, howsoever acquired, devolves upon the heirs of her mother. The devolution upon the heirs of the mother shall be in the same order and according to the same rules as would have applied if the property had belonged to the mother and she had died intestate in respect thereof immediately after her death (s. 16, r. 3). The devolution of the property of a female intestate is governed by the general rules of succession declared in this section and must be in accordance with the other relevant provisions of the Act. Therefore, in case of a female intestate when there is no heir specified in any of the first four entries [(a) to (d)] the terminus a quo will be the mother of the intestate as if she were the propositus and the ascertainment of the heirs will once again commence from entry (a) and so on in order of the entries.

Uterine brother and uterine sister of the intestate can succeed as heirs of the mother.—Relationship by blood includes relationship by full-blood, half-blood and uterine blood. Two persons are said to be related to each other by uterine blood when they are descended from a common ancestress but by different husbands [sec. 3(1) (e) (ii)]. Relations by uterine blood have legitimate kinship and can claim relationship by blood with the intestate with the result that a uterine brother or a uterine sister of the intestate will be entitled to succeed to her as son or daughter of her mother specified in entry (a) of sub-section (1). In a case falling under entry (e) the mother of the intestate becomes the starting point. All her sons and daughters by different husbands are her sons and daughters within the scope of entry (a) and are, therefore, entitled to succeed as such.

Illegitimate brother and illegitimate sister.—An illegitimate brother or an illegitimate sister of the female intestate who was herself a legitimate offspring can succeed to her property as an heir of her mother. If the intestate herself was an illegitimate child of her mother the position would be the same. Although the expression 'related' means related by legitimate kinship, the proviso to the definition of 'related' in sec. 3(1) (j) states an express rule having the effect of giving recognition to the rights of such illegitimate offspring to be deemed as related to their mother and to one another and of their legitimate descendants to be deemed as related to them and to one another. In such a case her illegitimate brother or illegitimate sister as also the legitimate children of such brother or sister can succeed to the property of the female intestate under this entry.

Illustrations: Entry (e)

1. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving MB her mother's brother and MSD her mother's sister's daughter. If A's mother had died immediately after A she would have been survived only by MB and MSD her brother and sister's daughter respectively. There being no heir of A under entries (a) to (d) all the property of A will devolve upon the heirs of the mother. Then with mother as the starting point, MB and MSD will take simultaneously by reference to entry (d) read with Class I of the Schedule (as the only heirs of the mother's father).

2. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving UB a uterine brother, US a uterine sister and SF her step-father, her mother having remarried after the death of A's father. There being no heir of A under entries (a) to (d) all the property of A will devolve upon the heirs of the mother. With the mother as the starting point, UB, US and SF will take simultaneously by reference to entry (a).

3. A and C were the illegitimate daughters of M their mother. C had married and died during A's lifetime leaving her surviving her son CS and CSS the son of a predeceased son. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving CS and CSS. All the property of A must devolve upon the heirs of M with M as the starting point. CS being the daughter's son of M will take the property to the exclusion of CSS who does not come under entry (a): [See s. 3(1)(j)].

4. A and C were the illegitimate daughters and B was the illegitimate son of M their mother. B had married and died during the lifetime of A leaving him surviving BS his son. C died during the lifetime of A leaving her surviving CD an illegitimate daughter. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving BS and CD. All the property of A must devolve upon the heirs of M. BS being the legitimate descendant of the illegitimate son of M will take the property to the exclusion of CD who is the illegitimate daughter of C the illegitimate daughter of M. In this case if C had survived A she would have succeeded to A's property simultaneously with BS [See s. 3(1)(j)].

Sub-section (2): Special order of succession in case of childless female intestate in respect of property inherited by her from her father, mother, husband or father-in-law.—Sub-section (1) lays down the general order of succession to the property of a female intestate who dies after the commencement of the Act and propounds a definite scheme of succession to her property which is different from the order of succession to the property of a male intestate. Sub-section (2) carves out two exceptions to that general scheme and order of succession. Clause (a) of sub-section (2) relates to property inherited by the intestate from her mother or father and clause (b) relates to property inherited by her from husband or father-in-law. The two exceptions, both of the same nature, seem to have been made on the ground that they prevent such property passing into the hands of persons to whom justice would require it should not pass and on the ground that they are in the interest of the intestate herself.

Clause (a): Property inherited from father or mother.—This clause engrafts an important exception on the provisions relating to the general order of succession to the property of a female intestate laid down in sub-section (1). This exception provides for a special order of succession in case of property inherited by her from her father or mother but its operation is confined to the case of her dying without leaving a son or a daughter or children of any predeceased son or daughter. The clause enacts that in any such case the property so inherited is to devolve "not upon the other heir but upon the heirs of the father" meaning thereby that the property is not to devolve upon the heirs other than sons and daughters and children of predeceased son or daughter who would have inherited if the order specified in sub-section (1) were to be followed but such property is to devolve upon the heirs of the father. The other heirs—but for the exception provided in this clause—would have included the husband or the heirs of the husband by application of the latter part of entry (a) and entry (b) of sub-section (1) and the purpose of the clause is that such property should not pass into their hands but should go instead to the heirs of the father.

The effect of this clause read with Rule 3 of section 16 is that in case of a female intestate dying without issue the property inherited by her from her father or mother will not devolve upon the husband under entry (a) of sub-section (1), or on the heirs of the husband under entry (b) of sub-section (1), but will devolve upon the heirs of the father as if the father had died intestate in respect thereof immediately after her death. Of course, if she dies leaving any issue enumerated in this clause, no question can arise of the application of this clause and the property will devolve as prescribed in sub-section (1) (a): [See Illus. 1 below].

The exception laid down in this clause is confined to property "inherited" from the father or mother of the female Hindu as heir of the father or mother, that is by succession, and does not affect property acquired by her by device under a will of the father or mother. Property acquired by her under any device or bequest under a will would devolve on her death in the manner prescribed in sub-section (1) (t) [see illustrations 6 and 7 below]. Nor would property given to her by way of gift by her father or mother fall under this exception (tt) [see illustration 8 below].

Illustrations: Clause (a)

1. A dies leaving her surviving DD her daughter's daughter, H her husband and M her mother. A had inherited property from her father. All property of A including that inherited by her from her father will devolve simultaneously on DD and H. The case does not fall under clause (a) of sub-section (2) because A had left issue. It is governed by entry (a) of sub-section (1).

2. A dies leaving her surviving H her husband, M her mother and B her brother. A had inherited property from her father. A's (other) property will devolve on H; but the property inherited by A from her father will not devolve on H and will devolve on M and B who will take it simultaneously as heir of her father.

3. A dies leaving her surviving her brother and her step-mother (her father having married again after the death of A's mother). A had inherited property from her mother. The property will devolve upon the brother and the step-mother in equal shares as heirs of her father (*t*1).

3A. A dies leaving her surviving her father's sister and her father's brother's son. A had inherited property left by her father. The property will devolve on the father's sister in preference to the father's brother's son as a sister under class II of the Schedule is a nearer heir than a brother's son (*t*2).

3B. A dies leaving her surviving sons and daughters of her father's sister and sons and daughters of her father's brother. A had property which she had inherited from her mother who in her turn had inherited the same from her husband that is A's father. A became a full owner of the property when the Act came into force in 1956. The property will devolve on all the children of the father's sister and the father's brother simultaneously and in equal shares (*t*3).

4. A dies leaving her surviving FBD her father's brother's daughter, MB her mother's brother, and MS her mother's sister. A left property which she had inherited from her mother. The property will devolve on FBD as heir of her father.

5. A dies leaving her surviving H her husband, B her full brother and US her uterine sister her mother having remarried after the death of her father. A left property which she had inherited from her mother. The property will not devolve upon H but will devolve only upon B as heir of A's father. US is not an heir of A's father and cannot claim any share. Also see illustration 2 under Entry (b) of sub-section (1) supra.

6. K died childless leaving her surviving her husband as her nearest heir. K had acquired property under a will of her mother M whereby M had devised her property in favour of K as a legatee. The property will devolve upon the husband of K under cl. (a) of sub-section (1) and not under sub-section (2) (a) upon any heir of K's father [Jayantilal v. Chhanalal ('68) A. Guj. 212].

7. K had acquired property under the will of her mother. K died after her husband. The property will devolve upon her husband's brother's son under cl. (b)

---

(t) Jayantilal v. Chhanalal ('68) A. Guj. 212; Kameswararao v. Vasudevrao ('72) A.A.P. 189.

(tt) Ayi Ammal v. Subramania Asari ('66) A.M. 369.

(*t*1) This illustration has been remodelled after an error in it was pointed out in the decision in Rangamma v. Annapurnamma ('63) A. Mys. 168.

(*t*2) Aparti Bewa v. Suna Stree ('63) A. Orissa 166.

(*t*3) Arunachalathammal v. Ramachandran ('63' A.M. 255.

of sub-section (1) and not upon any heir of her father under sub-section (2) (a) [Kameshwararao v. Vasudevarao ('72) A.A.P. 189].

8. K who was a widow died without leaving any issue. K left property which she had received by way of gift from her father during the father's lifetime. The property will devolve upon the heirs of K's husband under clause (b) of sub-section (1) and not upon K's brother under sub-section (2) (a). This is because sub-section (2) (a) applies only to property which was "inherited" by the female Hindu [Ayi Ammal v. Subramania Asari ('66) A.M. 369].

Question may arise as to the devolution of property of the female intestate dying without leaving any issue when the property left by her had been inherited by her from her father or mother and there is no heir of the father at the time of her death but there are alive other heirs mentioned in sub-section (1) such as the husband or the husband's heirs or the mother's heirs. It was evidently not the intention of the authors of the enactment that in such a case the property should not go to any of such persons although they are referred to in sub-section (1). The clause seems only intended to affect and modify the general order of succession prescribed in sub-section (1) by varying "the order specified therein" and giving preference to the heirs of the father. There is nothing in the language of the section to prevent such property devolving on the husband or the heirs of the husband in any case and clause (a) must be read as applying to the situation envisaged by it, viz. when there are heirs of the father alive when the succession opens. In case of failure of the heirs of the father in any such case this clause (a) would have no application and succession would be governed by the rules laid down in sub-section (1). In such a case of failure of the father's heirs the property that might have been inherited by the female intestate from her mother will devolve upon the husband or the husband's heirs (where there are any such heirs) and not upon the heirs of the mother and if it was the intention of the Legislature that in case of the female intestate dying without issue property inherited by her from her father or mother should go in that direction and not devolve upon her husband or husband's heirs such intention has not become fully effective.

Clause (b): Property inherited from husband or father-in-law.—This clause engrafts another exception on the provisions relating to the general order of succession to the property of a female intestate laid down in sub-section (1). This exception provides for a special order of succession in case of property inherited by her from her husband or her father-in-law but its operation is confined to the case of her dying without leaving a son or a daughter or children of any predeceased son or daughter, in which case it says the devolution will not be upon the other heirs referred to in sub-section (1). A female may have inherited property from her husband as his heir. She may also have inherited property from her father-in-law as the widow of a predeceased son. In any such case the property so inherited is to go not to the other heirs referred to in sub-section (1) but to the heirs of the husband. It follows from the context that the heirs of the husband mentioned in this clause are not the heirs of the husband she might have remarried after the death of her first husband but heirs of "the husband" whose property she had inherited as his widow; and in case of property inherited from her father-in-law which could only be as widow of a predeceased son, the heirs contemplated are heirs of "the husband" from whose father she inherited the property. The other heirs referred to in sub-section (1) are the father and mother of the intestate and the heirs of the father and the heirs of the mother. It would perhaps seem that clause (b) is redundant in this section because the order of priority in entries (a) and (b) of sub-section (1) would bring about the same result even in the absence of the clause. Entry (b) read with entry (a) in effect declares that in case the intestate dies without leaving any issue and the husband the property will devolve upon the heirs of the husband. Nonetheless the clause has a place in this section because it is conceivable that the intestate may have remarried after the death of her husband from whom she may have inherited property or after the death of the father-in-law from whom she may have inherited property and may die without issue but leaving her second husband. In such a case, in the absence of the present clause the property so inherited would pass to the second husband. Such a case would not be governed by entries (a) and (b) but would be governed by the present clause which enacts that such property will not devolve upon the other heirs referred to in sub-section (1), which would include the second husband who survives her, but will devolve upon the heirs of the first husband. The clause is not elegantly drafted but it must follow from the language used that the expression heirs of "the husband" in the clause refers to the husband whose property had been inherited by the intestate and the reference to the property inherited from the father-in-law as the widow of a predeceased son also indicates that the heirs must be of "the husband" from whose father she inherited the property. This seems to be the speciality of the situation and it is submitted that the heirs of the husband contemplated by the clause are heirs of the husband who was the source of the inheritance or whose father was the source of the inheritance.

Clause (b) has also a bearing on section 17 which lays down special provisions respecting persons governed by Marumakkattayam and Aliyasantana laws.

Illustrations: Clause (b)

1. A dies childless leaving her surviving H2 her second husband whom she remarried after the death of H her first husband. H had died leaving him surviving his widow A and his two brothers B and C. On the death of H, A had inherited his entire property. The property so inherited by A will on A's death devolve under this clause upon B and C as the heirs of H and not upon H2. The same will be the position if A had inherited property from the father of H as the widow of a predeceased son and thereafter remarried H2.

2. A had remarried H2 after the death of H her first husband. H had died leaving him surviving his widow A and his two brothers B and C. On the death of H, A had inherited his entire property. H2 died during the lifetime of A leaving him surviving his widow A and SH2 a son by a predeceased wife. On A's death A's (other) property will devolve upon her step-son SH2 but the property inherited by her from H will revert to the heirs of H as if the property had been of H and H had died immediately after A. B and C will take the property as "the heirs of the husband" under this clause. SH2 the step-son of A although an heir of H2 the second husband will not be entitled to claim such property as an heir of A's husband under entry (b) of sub-section (1) although the other property left by A will devolve upon him.

3. See illustrations 3 and 4 under Entry (a) sub-section (1) at p. 917 supra.

4. A dies leaving her surviving a son S and a daughter D by her first husband, and H2 whom she had remarried after the death of H her first husband. Along with S and D, A had inherited an equal share in the property left by H and A left that property (her share) when she died. The property left by her will devolve in equal shares upon S, D and H2 under sub-section (1)(a) and clause (b) of sub-section (2) will not be applicable. S and D cannot exclusively claim the property on the ground that the property had been inherited by A from H.

5. In illustration 1 above if instead of inheriting the property A had acquired it by device under the will of H or the will of the father of H the property will devolve not upon B and C but upon H2. This is because clause (b) only applies to property acquired by inheritance (*t*4).

6. The same rule and the same reason as applied in illustration 5 above will apply in case of illustration 2 above if the property left by A had been acquired by her by device or bequest under the will of her first husband H. The property on A's death will devolve upon SH2 and not upon B and C.

Order of succession and manner of distribution among heirs of a female Hindu.

16. The order of succession among the heirs referred to in section 15 shall be, and the distribution of the intestate's property among those heirs shall take place according to the following rules, namely:—

Rule 1.—Among the heirs specified in sub-section (1) of section 15, those in one entry shall be preferred to those in any succeeding entry, and those included in the same entry shall take simultaneously.

Rule 2.—If any son or daughter of the intestate had predeceased the intestate leaving his or her own children alive at the time of the intestate's death, the children of such son or daughter shall take between them the share which such son or daughter would have taken if living at the intestate's death.

Rule 3.—The devolution of the property of the intestate on the heirs referred to in clauses (b), (d) and (e) of sub-section (1) and in sub-section (2) of section 15 shall be in the same order and according to the same rules as would have applied if the property had been the father's or the mother's or the husband's, as the case may be, and such person had died intestate in respect thereof immediately after the intestate's death.

This section read with section 15 may be said to constitute the Statute of Distribution applicable to heirs of a female intestate. The section lays down rules relating to the order of succession and the mode or manner of computation of shares of the various heirs of a female intestate.

Rules 1 and 2.—Rule 1 contains the explicit declaration of the law that among the heirs enumerated in entries (a) to (e) of sub-section (1) of section 15, those heirs referred to in a prior entry are to be preferred to those in any subsequent entry and those included in the same entry are to succeed simultaneously. Entry (a) includes sons; daughters; children of predeceased son and of predeceased daughter; and husband. These heirs, therefore, take the property simultaneously. The case of children of a predeceased son or daughter is, however, further governed by Rule 2 so that the children of a predeceased son or a predeceased daughter will not take per capita with the son or daughter or husband of the intestate but will take between them the share which their father or mother, as the case may be, would have taken if alive at the time of the death of the intestate, that is to say they will take per stirpes. Entry (c) includes mother and father who, in case of absence of heirs of the intestate in entries (a) and (b), will take simultaneously.

---

(*t*4) Reference may be made to cases cited in f.n. (t) and (tt) above where the identical expression "inherited" used in cl. (a) of this sub-section came up for interpretation in a similar context.

Illustrations

1. A dies leaving her surviving H her husband; *S*1 and *S*2 her two sons; SS the son of S a predeceased son; *WS*3 the widow of *S*3 another predeceased son; *D*1 and *D*2 two daughters; DD the daughter of D a predeceased daughter and B her brother. All these except *WS*3 and B will succeed to A's property howsoever acquired as heirs included in entry (a) of sub-section (1) of section 15. They will take simultaneously and to the exclusion of *WS*3 and B. *WS*3 could have been an heir only under entry (b) and B could have been an heir only under entry (d) and are not entitled to succeed as there are heirs included in entry (a).

In the above illustration *S*1, *S*2, SS, *D*1, *D*2, DD and H who succeed simultaneously will each take one-seventh share. If S the predeceased son had instead of SS left more children they would also have taken only one share between themselves and could not have claimed an equal share with *S*1, *S*2 and the others. In their case the distribution would have been per stirpes and not per capita.

2. A dies leaving her surviving S a son by her first husband H; and *S*1 and D son and daughter respectively by her second husband *H*2. A had inherited property from H. All her property including the property inherited from H will devolve upon S, *S*1, D and *H*2 simultaneously and they will each take a one-fourth share. The case will not be governed by clause (b) of section 15(2) because A dies leaving issue.*

Also see illustrations under section 15.

3. A dies leaving her surviving SW the widow of S her predeceased son; *SSS*1 and *DSS*1 the son and daughter respectively of *SS*1 the predeceased son of her predeceased son *S*1. None of these are heirs included in entry (a) of section 15(1) but are heirs of her husband under entry (b). The property of A will be so divided between them that SW will take one-half and *SS*1 and *DSS*1 will each take one-fourth share. But property that A might have inherited from her mother or father will not devolve upon any of these persons as the heirs of A's husband in accordance with entry (b) but will devolve upon the heirs of her father under section 15(2)(a).

Also see illustrations under section 15.

4. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving B her brother; *SB*1 and *DB*1 the son and daughter respectively of her predeceased brother *B*1; *CS*1, *CS*2 and *CS*3 the sons of C her predeceased sister; and FW her step-mother. In the absence of any heirs enumerated in entries (a) to (c) A's property will devolve upon B, *SB*1, *DB*1, *CS*1, *CS*2, *CS*3 and FW as the heirs of her father. *SB*1 and *DB*1 will take only one share between them and *CS*1, *CS*2 and *CS*3 will take only one share between them. The shares of B and FW will be one-fourth each. The shares of *SB*1 and *DB*1 will be one-eighth each; and the shares of *CS*1, *CS*2 and *CS*3 will be one-twelfth each. This distribution is in accordance with Rule 3 of section 10. The property to be distributed will include any property that A might have inherited from her mother or father.

5. A's mother M had remarried *MH*2 after the death of A's father F and left her surviving *A; MH*2; and UB and US her son and daughter respectively by *MH*2 her second husband. Upon the death of her mother A had inherited her share of the property left by M. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving UB and US (her uterine brother and uterine sister); *MH*2 her step-father; and FB and FSis. her own father's brother and sister respectively. A's property including property inherited by A from M will devolve upon FB and FSis. in equal shares as the heirs of her father F in preference to the heirs of her mother [s. 15(2)(a)].

---

* Referred to in Ram Kali v. Sohan Lal ('72) A. P.&H. 419.

Rule 3.—The application of this rule in case of devolution of the property of the intestate under sub-section (1) of section 15 on the heirs of her husband, heirs of her father and heirs of her mother referred to respectively in entries (b), (d) and (e) of the same has already been pointed out. The rule also applies as has also been pointed out to the devolution of the property of the intestate on the heirs referred to in the two clauses of sub-section (2) of section 15, viz. the heirs of the father where she dies without leaving any issue and has left property inherited by her from her father or mother; and the heirs of the husband where she dies without leaving any issue and has left property inherited by her from her husband or father-in-law.

In all the above cases the terminus a quo is the husband or father or mother as if the husband or father or mother were the propositus and the ascertainment of the heirs will once again commence from the husband or father or mother as the case may be.

Special provisions respecting persons governed by marumakkattayam and aliyasantana laws.

17. The provisions of sections 8, 10, 15 and 23 shall have effect in relation to persons who would have been governed by the marumakkattayam law or aliyasantana law if this Act had not been passed as if—

(i) for sub-clauses (c) and (d) of section 8, the following had been substituted, namely:—

"(c) thirdly, if there is no heir of any of the two classes, then upon his relatives, whether agnates or cognates";

(ii) for clauses (a) to (e) of sub-section (1) of section 15, the following had been substituted, namely:—

"(a) firstly, upon the sons and daughters (including the children of any pre-deceased son or daughter) and the mother;

(b) secondly, upon the father and the husband;

(c) thirdly, upon the heirs of the mother;

(d) fourthly, upon the heirs of the father; and

(e) lastly, upon the heirs of the husband";

(iii) clause (a) of sub-section (2) of section 15 had been omitted;

(iv) section 23 had been omitted.

Succession to the property of a male or female Hindu governed by Marumakkattayam law or Aliyasantana law dying intestate.—The Act as expressly stated in section 2 applies to all Hindus. It, therefore, applies to all persons including those who were governed by the Mitakshara school, the Dayabhaga school as well as those governed by the Marumakkattayam, Aliyasantana and Nambudri systems of law. Devolution of interest in the property of a tarwad, tavazhi or illom in case of persons governed by the Marumakkattayam or Nambudri law is regulated by section 7(1) of the Act. Devolution of interest in the property of a kutumba or kavaru in case of persons governed by the Aliyasantana law is regulated by section 7(2) of the Act. And devolution to property known as sthanam held by a sthani or sthanamdar is regulated by section 7(3) of the Act. As regards the separate or self-acquired property of a person male or female governed by the Nambudri law the rules of succession to be now applied are those laid down in the various provisions of this Act. Succession to the separate or self-acquired property of a person male or female governed by the Marumakkattayam or Aliyasantana law is also governed by the provisions of this Act but with certain modifications, changes and omissions expressly stated in this section under the head "special provisions respecting persons governed by Marumakkattayam and Aliyasantana law."

SUCCESSION IN CASE OF MALE INTESTATE

Clause (i) of this section relates to succession to the property of a male Hindu hitherto governed by any of the two systems of law. The initial words of the section so far as they relate to succession to male intestate refer to sections 8, 10 and 23. The effect of clause (i) read with the initial part of the section is by substitution to modify, change and omit certain provisions of the Act and to rule that all the provisions of the Act apply in case of such succession subject to such modification, change or omission. The effect of clause (iv) is that section 23 which contains special provisions respecting dwelling houses is not to apply in case of succession to the property of a person governed by any of the two systems of law. The general rules of succession laid down in section 8 in their application to the case of succession to the property of a male intestate governed by any of the two systems may be read as if the Act laid down:

The property of a male Hindu, hitherto governed by the Marumakkattayam law or the Aliyasantana law, dying intestate (after the coming into operation of this Act), shall devolve according to the provisions of this Chapter:—

(a) firstly, upon the heirs, being the relatives specified in Class I of the Schedule;

(b) secondly, if there is no heir of Class I, then upon the heirs, being the relatives specified in Class II of the Schedule; and

(c) thirdly, if there is no heir of any of the two classes, then upon his relatives, whether agnates or cognates.

Where a male Hindu governed by any of the two systems dies intestate his property devolves upon the heirs mentioned in the first or the second class (or category) as in any other case according to the general rules laid down in section 8. On failure of heirs in the two classes (or categories) the property devolves upon relatives constituted by the third category which includes relatives both agnates and cognates. The other provisions of the Act apply to any such case but subject to the variations already mentioned. Reference may be made to the Notes under section 8 and particularly to the Notes relating to the first two classes under section 8 at pp. 866-879 supra. Reference may also be made to the Notes under Agnates and Cognates under section 8 bearing in mind the Rule laid down in the present section that there is to be no distinction or preference between agnates and cognates in case of persons governed by the two systems. Reference may also be made to the Notes under the other sections bearing in mind the variations already mentioned.

The modification, as regards succession to the property of a male intestate who was governed by any of the two systems, which affects agnates and cognates, will be seen from the illustrations below which only relate to cases where there is failure of heirs in Classes I and II of the Schedule.

Illustrations

1. Illustrations 1 to 8 under s. 9 at pp. 882-883 supra are equally applicable to the case of a male intestate governed by any of the two systems.

2. Illustrations 1 to 5 under s. 10 at pp. 885-886 supra are equally applicable to the case of a male intestate governed by any of the two systems.

3. Illustrations 1 to 3 under s. 11 at p. 887 supra are equally applicable to the case of a male intestate governed by any of the two systems.

4. Illustrations under s. 8 which relate only to the question of computation of degrees are equally applicable to the case of a male intestate governed by any of the two systems.

5. The heirs to be considered are SSSS, son's son's son's son; SSSD, son's son's son's daughter; DSSS, daughter's son's son's son; and DDDD, daughter's daughter's daughter's daughter. Here SSSS and SSSD are agnates and DSSS and DDDD are cognates. But they all belong to the same category by operation of clause (c). They have no degrees of ascent and they all have five degrees of descent. They are, therefore, entitled to succeed simultaneously. In practice there is no likelihood of such descendants becoming competing heirs but reference is made to them as they rank high up in the order of succession.

6. The heirs to be considered are FFM, father's father's mother; FFF, father's father's father; FMM, father's mother's mother; FMF, father's mother's father; MMM, mother's mother's mother; MMF, mother's mother's father; MFM, mother's father's mother; MFF mother's father's father. Here FFM and FFF are ascendants who are agnates and the rest are ascendants who are cognates. But they all belong to the same category by operation of clause (c). They all have four degrees of ascent and no degrees of descent. They are, therefore, entitled to succeed simultaneously. The remark at the end of illustration 5 above applies also to this illustration.

7. The competing heirs are BSS, brother's son's son, BSD, brother's son's daughter; BDD, brother's daughter's daughter; BDS, brother's daughter's son; P step-brother's son's son; Q, step-brother's daughter's daughter; MBS, mother's brother's son; MBD, mother's brother's daughter; MSis.S, mother's sister's son; and MSis.D, mother's sister's daughter. Here BSS, BSD, BDD, BDS, P and Q have all two degrees of ascent and three degrees of descent. MBS, MBD, MSis.S and MSis.D have three degrees of ascent and two degrees of descent. Therefore, in computation of degrees, the others are entitled to be preferred to MBS, MBD, MSis.S and MSis.D. But BSS, BSD, BDD and BDS are related to the intestate by full blood whereas P and Q are related to him by half-blood. Therefore, BSS, BSD, BDD and BDS are entitled to be preferred to all others. Each of them will take one-fourth share in the property of the intestate.

8. The competing heirs are BSS, brother's son's son; BDS, brother's daughter's son; UB, uterine brother; and USis. the uterine sister of the male intestate. Here BSS is an agnate and the others are cognates but they all belong to the same category by operation of clause (c). Relationship in case of heirs other than those in Classes I and II of the Schedule includes relationship by uterine blood. BSS and BDS have two degrees of ascent and three degrees of descent. UB and USis. have two degrees of ascent but only one degree of descent and are, therefore, entitled to be preferred. In the above illustration if the competing heirs had (instead of BSS and BDS) been BS and

BD the brother's son and brother's daughter respectively and UB and USis. the uterine brother and uterine sister of the male intestate, the position would have been different. BS and BD would have been entitled to succeed to the property as heirs specified in Class II of the Schedule and excluded UB and USis. who, being cognates, are heirs only in the third category of clause (c).

SUCCESSION IN CASE OF FEMALE INTESTATE

Clause (ii) of this section propounds a definite scheme of succession to the property of a female Hindu who dies intestate after the commencement of the Act in case of persons who would have been governed by the Marumakkattayam law or Aliyasantana law if this Act had not been passed. The initial words of the section refer to sections 8, 10, 15 and 23 in so far as they relate to succession to a female intestate. Section 15 of the Act lays down general rules of succession in the case of female Hindus and the effect of clauses (ii) to (iv) of the present section is to substitute clause (ii) for sub-section (1) of section 15 and omit clause (a) of sub-section (2) of that section and also to rule that section 23 which contains special provisions respecting dwelling houses is not to apply in case of succession to the property of a person governed by any of the two systems of law. The general rules of succession laid down in section 15 in their application to the case of succession to the property of a female intestate governed by any of the two systems may be read as if the Act laid down:

(1) The property of a female Hindu hitherto governed by the Marumakkattayam law or Aliyasantana law, dying intestate (after the coming into operation of this Act), shall devolve according to the rules set out in section 16—

(a) firstly, upon the sons and daughters (including the children of any predeceased son or daughter) and the mother;

(b) secondly, upon the father and the husband;

(c) thirdly, upon the heirs of the mother;—

(d) fourthly, upon the heirs of the father; and

(e) lastly, upon the heirs of the husband.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1)—

any property inherited by a female Hindu from her husband or from her father-in-law shall devolve, in the absence of any son or daughter of the deceased (including the children of any predeceased son or daughter), not upon the other heirs referred to in sub-section (1) in the order specified therein, but upon the heirs of the husband.

It will be noticed that the scheme of succession laid down here is in many important respects materially different from that under section 15 of the Act. Reference may be made to the Notes under section 15 bearing in mind the different scheme of succession propounded in this section.

The substituting clause (ii) groups the heirs of the female intestate into five categories described as entries (a) to (e). The order of succession laid down in these entries is not, however, a complete statement of the law. An exception is engrafted on the same to the effect that in case the female intestate dies without leaving any issue (son, daughter, or children of any predeceased son or daughter), any property inherited by her from her husband or from her father-in-law, is to devolve not upon the other heirs mentioned in the entries, in the order specified therein, but upon the heirs of the husband. Subject to this exception the heritable property of a female intestate devolves upon her heirs enumerated in the five entries. Among the heirs so specified those in entry (a) are preferred to those in entry (b); the heirs in entry (b) are preferred to the heirs in entry (c) and so on in case of succeeding entries (w). Therefore, it is only in case of failure of the heirs specified in entry (a), but not until then, that the property will devolve upon the heirs listed in the next entry and similarly in order of succession.

The effect of the rules laid down in this section in relation to the property of a female intestate may be summarised as follows:

(1) The general order of succession laid down in the substituted entries (a) to (e) applies in case of all property of a female intestate howsoever acquired except in case of property inherited by her from her husband or father-in-law.

(2) In case of a female intestate leaving a son or a daughter or a child of a predeceased son or of a predeceased daughter, that is leaving any issue, all her property, howsoever acquired, devolves on such issue regardless of the source of acquisition of the property and such issue must take the property simultaneously, and if the mother of the intestate is alive they take simultaneously with her in accordance with the substituted entry (a). In such a case the exception does not at all come into operation.

(3) In case of a female intestate dying without issue but leaving her mother the mother will take all her property except:

(a) property inherited by her from her husband or father-in-law which will revert to the heirs of the husband in existence at the time of her death; and

(b) in case the female intestate had remarried after the death of her first husband the property inherited by her from him or his father (as the widow of a predeceased son) will revert to the heirs of the first husband in existence at the time of her death.

(4) In case of a female intestate dying without issue property inherited by her from her husband or father-in-law will go to the heirs of the husband and in such a case the terminus a quo will be the husband as if the husband were the propositus and the ascertainment of the heirs will once again commence from the husband and the order of succession will be in accordance with the substituted clauses (a) to (c) relating to the estate of a male intestate.

Order of succession and manner of distribution among heirs of a female Hindu under section 17 read with sections 15 and 16.—Clauses (ii) and (iii)

---

(w) S. 16, Rule I.

of the present section have to be read with section 15 as already indicated. The substituted entries (a) to (e) and the exception to the operation of the order specified in those entries have to be read with section 16 which may be said to constitute the Statute of Distribution. The following Illustrations relate to succession to the property of a female intestate governed by any of the two matriarchal systems and the distributive shares or portions of the persons entitled to her property. Reference to the entries in the Illustrations is to the substituted entries.

Illustrations

1. A dies leaving her surviving S, her son; *SS*1 and *DS*1, son and daughter respectively of *S*1 her predeceased son; D and *D*1, her two daughters; M her mother; and H her husband. All the property of A, howsoever acquired, will devolve simultaneously upon S, *SS*1, *DS*1, D, *D*1 and M as heirs specified in entry (a). H could have been an heir only under entry (b) and is not entitled to succeed as there are heirs under entry (a). The shares of S, D, *D*1 and M will be one-fifth each. *SS*1 and *DS*1 will between them take only one share (per stirpes) that is they will get one-tenth each of the property by operation of rule 2 of section 16.

2. A dies leaving her surviving her adopted daughter D and her husband H. All the property of A, howsoever acquired, will devolve only upon D.

3. A dies leaving her surviving SH and DH her son and daughter by H her first husband and *DH*1 a daughter by her second husband. A had inherited half of *H*1's property on his death. All the property of A will devolve in equal shares upon SH, DH and *DH*1 under entry (a). Since A dies leaving issue the exception does not come into operation in this case.

4. A dies leaving her surviving her father, her husband and her mother's brother. A had inherited considerable property from her mother. All the property of A will devolve upon her father and husband in equal shares under entry (b). The mother's brother features only in entry (c) and is therefore not entitled to any share.

5. A dies leaving her surviving SSS the son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son and SDS the son of a predeceased daughter of a predeceased son and B her brother. SSS and SDS are not heirs specified in entry (a) or (b) or (c). A's property will, therefore, devolve on B alone as the heir of A's mother under entry (c). If, however, A has left any property inherited by her from her husband or father-in-law such property will not devolve on B but will devolve on the heirs of the husband. SSS and SDS will become entitled to the same in equal shares as the husband's heirs under Class I of the Schedule.

6. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving FB, her father's brother and MB, her mother's brother. The property left by A had been inherited by her from her father. It will devolve upon MB as the heir of her mother under entry (c)—which will operate twice over—in preference to FB who is only an heir mentioned in entry (d).

7. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving B, her full brother; C her full sister; and UB and US her uterine brother and uterine sister respectively (A's mother having married again after the death of A's father). All the property left by A will devolve upon B, C, UB and US as the heirs of her mother under entry (c).

8. A dies unmarried leaving her surviving FBS, her father's brother's son and three daughters of her father's sister. The property left by A will devolve upon FBS and the three daughters of her father's sister in equal shares as the heirs of her father under Entry (d). FBS and the three daughters of the father's sister are the father's heirs under clause (b) relating to succession to the property of a male intestate (heirs enumerated in Entry IV of Class II of the Schedule).

9. A dies leaving her surviving M her mother; F her father; P her husband's father's brother's son and Q, her husband's mother's sister's daughter. A had inherited the property from her husband and a part of it from her father-in-law. A's property will not devolve upon M or F but upon the heirs of her husband. P is her husband's agnate having three degrees of ascent and two degrees of descent and Q is her husband's cognate having three degrees of ascent and two degrees of descent. A's property will be divided between P and Q in equal shares. This will be by operation of the exception and under the substituted clause (c) relating to agnates and cognates.

In the above illustration if P's father was not the full brother but step-brother of A's husband's father, P would not have become entitled to a share in the property. The nature of relationship of P and Q with A is the same in every respect (by computation of degrees) but full blood is to be preferred to half-blood (s. 18).

GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO SUCCESSION

Full-blood preferred to half-blood.

18. Heirs related to an intestate by full blood shall be preferred to heirs related by half blood, if the nature of the relationship is the same in every other respect.

Succession to the property of a Hindu is now governed by the provisions contained in Chapter II of this Act. Sections 5 to 17 are grouped under the heading "General" and sections 18 to 28 under the heading "General provisions relating to succession." The rules laid down in sections 18 to 28 are supplementary to the provisions in sections 5 to 17. These rules are not merely explanatory but some of them lay down substantive rules involving legal principles.

This section is a substantial reproduction of the rule of Hindu law whereby relations of the whole blood are preferred to those of the half-blood. The section lays down a rule of general applicability to heirs male and female alike. It must be noted that the applicability of this rule of preference is conditioned by the words "if the nature of the relationship is the same in every other respect." The words if the nature of relationship is the same in every other respect may require judicial interpretation. It is plain that a full brother is preferred to a half brother and a full sister is preferred to a half sister. But doubt may perhaps be raised as to whether the nature of the relationship with the intestate of his brother and sister enumerated in Entry II of Class II of the Schedule can be said to be the same in every respect, and a full brother would be preferred to a half sister or a full sister would be preferred to a half brother and the same doubt may be raised in other cases where the competing heirs are similarly related to the intestate. The rules of preference applicable to agnates and cognates of a male intestate emphasize that the nearness of relationship recognised under the Act depends in their case on the number of degrees of ascent or descent or both of ascent and descent and the same doubt may perhaps be raised in case of some of those relatives. The section speaks of the nature of relationship being the same and not the relationship being the same and it would seem that in all such cases heirs related to an intestate by full blood would be preferred to heirs related by half-blood having regard inter alia to the nature of relationship indicated in the scheme of the Act itself. The meaning of the words "nature of relationship" must be found in the sense in which they best harmonise with the scheme and object of the Act and not so much in a strictly etymological propriety of language. The general scheme of succession under the Act is to treat the son and the daughter in aequali jura and to regulate the order of succession having regard to the degree of kindred to him. It is therefore, submitted that since a brother and a sister of the intestate stand in the same degree of relation to him the nature of their relationship with the intestate is the same in every other respect (*w*1). The same considerations apply to cases under Entries IV, VI, VII and IX in Class II of the Schedule and where the competing heirs are agnates or cognates and relationship is by full blood and half-blood (see Illustrations below).

The rule laid down in the section applies only when the nature of relationship is the same according to every relevant mode or manner affecting its nature and the rules of preference laid down in the Act for determination of the order of succession. It cannot therefore be evoked when a particular heir is preferred to another by operation of any such rule regulating the order of succession. Thus for instance it has no application where the competing heirs are a full brother's son and a half-brother or a half-sister of a male intestate. The full brother's son is not related to the intestate equally with them in every respect. He is an heir under Entry III of Class II of the Schedule while the half-brother and half-sister are heirs specified in Entry II and therefore entitled to be preferred irrespective of their being related to the intestate by half-blood.

Illustrations

1. P a male intestate dies leaving him surviving A, a full sister's daughter and B, a half-brother's son. Brother's son and sister's daughter are both heirs specified in Entry IV of Class II of the Schedule. The nature of their relationship with the intestate is the same and the full sister's daughter will be preferred to the half-brother's son.

2. P a male intestate dies leaving him surviving A, his father's half-brother; B his father's sister; C, his father's full brother's son; and D, his mother's full brother. A and B are heirs specified in Entry VII of Class II of the Schedule, D is an heir under Entry IX and C is only an agnate. C and D are excluded as remoter heirs. The relationship of A and B with the intestate is the same in every respect except that B is related to him by full blood and A by half-blood. B will be preferred to A and inherit the whole of P's property.

3. P a male intestate dies leaving him surviving A, his mother's half-brother; B, his mother's half-sister; and C, his mother's full-brother's son. C is excluded as a remoter heir. The relationship of A and B with the intestate is the same in every respect and both are specified as heirs under Entry IX of Class II of the Schedule. They are both related to the intestate by half-blood and not entitled to any preference inter se and will take P's property in equal shares.

4. The competing heirs of P a male intestate are A, the son of his father's half brother; and B, the daughter of his father's full brother. They are both agnates of P and the nature of their relationship with him is the same. B is related to P by full blood and will be preferred to A.

5. The competing heirs of P a male intestate are A, the son's son of his father's full brother; and B, the daughter of his father's half brother. A and B are both collateral agnates. Both the claimants have three degrees of ascent but A has three degrees of descent and B has only two degrees of descent with the result that she is preferred to A although she is related to P by half-blood and A is related to P by full blood. The nature of relationship of A and B with P is not the same in every respect.

6. The competing heirs of P a male intestate are A, his mother's full brother's son; and B his mother's half sister's son. A and B are both collateral cognates. Both the claimants have three degrees of ascent and two degrees of descent. The nature of their relationship with P is the same. A is related to P by full blood and will be preferred to B.

7. P a female intestate dies leaving her surviving A, her husband's half-brother; B, her husband's full sister; and M, her mother. All the property of P except any property that she might have inherited from her father will devolve upon the heirs of P's husband under Entry (b) of section 15(1) as if such property had been the husband's and the husband had died intestate in respect thereof immediately after P's death. B as the full sister of P's husband will inherit such property in preference to A.

---

(*w*1) The same view has been taken in Sarwan Singh v. Dhan Kaur ('71) A.P.&H. 323 [full sisters preferred to step brothers].

8. P a female intestate dies leaving her surviving H, her husband; B, her full-brother; and C, D and E, her step-sisters her father F having remarried after the death of M her mother. On the death of M her property had devolved on B, P and F. All the property left by P had been inherited by her from her mother. Under section 15(2)(a) her property will not devolve upon her husband but will devolve upon the heirs of her father. The heirs of the father being B, C, D and E, it may possibly be contended that they should in any such case inherit P's property in equal shares. The rule about full-blood being preferred to half-blood is, however, of general application and the purpose of ascertaining the heirs of the father is really to determine the heirs of the intestate. Ultimately, therefore, the question of relationship by full blood being preferred to half-blood must operate and B, her full brother, will be preferred to the step-sisters (*w*2).

19. If two or more heirs succeed together to the property of an intestate, they shall take the property,—

Mode of succession of two or more heirs.

(a) save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act. per capita and not per stirpes; and

(b) as tenants-in-common and not as joint tenants.

This section also is a substantial reproduction of the rule of Hindu law whereby subject to limited exceptions persons of the same relationship to the intestate take per capita, that is, the estate is divided into as many shares as the number of heirs, each heir taking one share. The section lays down the general rule of distribution that two or more heirs of a male or female intestate who succeed together under the Act take property per capita and as tenants-in-common and not per stirpes unless there is an express provision to the contrary.

In case where distribution of an intestate's estate takes place per capita each claimant has a share in his or her own right as in equal relationship declared to exist by any specific provision or equal degree of kinship established by reckoning degrees of ascent or descent or both. Thus for instance distribution among the four heirs of a male intestate mentioned in Entry II of Class II of the Schedule, viz. son's daughter's son, son's daughter's daughter, brother and sister is per capita. They all succeed together and each has an equal share in his or her right as an heir claiming relationship in equali jura declared to exist by one specific entry. There is no express provision to the contrary in the Act applicable to heirs enumerated in any particular entry in Class II and section 11 enacts that heirs specified in any one entry in that class share equally. In distribution per stirpes the claimant gets a share as representing another person. Thus for instance in case of distribution of property of a male intestate among his heirs in Class I of the Schedule while the surviving sons and daughters and the mother of the intestate are each entitled to take one share, that is per capita the heirs in the branch of a predeceased son or a predeceased daughter takes between them one share as expressly laid down in section 10, rule 3. Here in case of the latter, distribution is per stirpes and on the principle of representation.

---

(*w*2) This illustration came up for consideration in Rangamma v. Annapurnamma ('63) A. Mys. 168. Reference may be made to illus. 3 under Notes on Sub-section (2) Clause (a) of Section 15 ante which had now been modified.

Instances of exceptions to the general rule about distribution per capita are expressly provided in rules 1, 3 and 4 of section 10: rule 2 of section 16; by operation of sub-section (2) of section 15 whereunder the property of a female intestate devolves in certain cases on the heirs of the father or husband of the intestate; and under the proviso to section 6 which brings about the operation of rules 1, 3 and 4 of section 10 in the case of a male Hindu who dies leaving any heirs mentioned in the proviso to section 6 and having at the time of his death an interest in a Mitakshara coparceneray.

20. A child who was in the womb at the time of the death of an intestate and who is subsequently born alive shall have the same right to inherit to the intestate as if he or she had been born before the death of the intestate, and the inheritance shall be deemed to vest in such a case with effect from the date of the death of the intestate.

Right of child in womb.

It is by fiction or indulgence of the law that the rights of a child born in justo matrimonio are regarded by reference to the moment of conception and not of birth and the unborn child in the womb if born alive is treated as actually born for the purpose of conferring on him benefits of inheritance. The child in embryo is treated as in esse for various purposes when it is for his benefit to be so treated. This view is not peculiar to the ancient Hindu law but one which is adopted by all mature systems of jurisprudence. This section recognises that rule of beneficent indulgence and the child in utero although subsequently born is to be deemed to be born before the death of the intestate and inheritance is to be deemed to vest in the child with effect from the date of the death of the intestate.

The section is in words of sufficient amplitude and applies not only to cases where under the Act the heir male or female in order to become entitled to succeed to the intestate must be born of justum matrimonium but also to those cases where an illegitimate child is entitled to claim relationship and inheritance by virtue of the proviso to section 3(1)(j). The rule will also apply to the case of children of a void or voidable marriage who are within the purview of section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 (y). That section in terms speaks of children in the womb of their mother. The operation of that section is, however, limited as pointed out in the Notes under that section.

It is required that the child in the womb must be born alive.

In any such case, although the general law is that succession is never in abeyance, the legal fiction comes into operation and the child takes the inheritance or his or her share of the inheritance and since the inheritance is deemed to vest from the date of the death of the intestate the necessary consequence is to divest wholly or partially the property which might have vested in any other person or persons as heirs of the intestate. The alienee of any property from any such heir is also affected by the rule. Such divesting of property will occur in case of all the different modes of succession laid down in sections 6, 8, 15 and 17. A natural corollary of the rule relating to vesting recognised in this section is that in case of the death of the child at any time after birth the inheritance devolving on the child will go by succession to the heirs of the child.

---

(y) See Notes at pp. 760-765 supra.

Presumption in cases of simultaneous deaths.

21. Where two persons have died in circumstances rendering it uncertain whether either of them, and if so which, survived the other, then, for all purposes affecting succession to property, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that the younger survived the elder.

Presumption in cases of simultaneous deaths.—The question whether any artificial presumption should be invoked or not has not been free from difficulty when disputes have arisen about continuance of life and time of death in case of persons, often members of the same family, perishing in a common calamity in circumstances rendering it uncertain which of them survived the other or others and rights of third parties are affected. Allowing the question to be determined by ordinary rules of burden of proof in any such case can hardly be said to have given satisfactory results and if anything has been an inducement to excessive subtleties reprobated in law. Death may or may not have been simultaneous in case of catastrophe such as shipwreck, earthquake, explosion, conflagration, railway or flying accident, bombing and the like. The section is intended to apply to such cases and lays down a rule of artificial presumption when question arises as to the priority in point of time of the death of any such person or persons termed commorientes in the Roman Law.

The section follows the rule now enacted in England in Law of Property Act, 1925, sec. 184: "In all cases where . . . two or more persons have died in circumstances rendering it uncertain which of them survived the other or others, such death shall, subject to any order of the court, for all purposes affecting the title to property, be presumed to have occurred in order of seniority, and accordingly the younger shall be deemed to have survived the elder." That section has been considered by Courts in England and it has been held that the words "subject to any order of the court" mean that the presumption is to prevail unless there is evidence leading to a defined and warranted conclusion that one died before the other (z). The same is the effect of the words "until the contrary is proved" which find place in the present section. The statutory presumption may be rebutted by evidence beyond doubt that each died at precisely the same moment of time or that the elder had in fact survived the younger. The court will not, however, exclude the presumption in favour of the survival of the younger unless there is evidence leading to a defined and warranted conclusion to the contrary.

The section applies both in case of testamentary and intestate succession and in case of commorientes governed by the present Act it would operate as an important proviso to s. 105(2) of the Indian Succession Act and illustration (vi) to that section would have no bearing (zz). It has been observed that this section has retrospective effect as the law of evidence is a law of procedure (*zz*1).

---

(z) Hickman v. Peacy (1945) A.C. 304; Chillingworth v. Bate (1947) 2 All E.R. 418; Lee-Barber v. Reynolds (1942) 2 All E.R. 46.

M and her daughter K died in a fire and on consideration of evidence the conclusion was reached that they had perished in circumstances rendering it uncertain whether either of them had survived. Applying the rule of presumption laid down in this section it was held that K the daughter had survived her mother. Prior to her death M had executed a will and left her property to K as a legatee and the property devolved on the heirs of K (zz).

A defendant in a partition suit was murdered at night along with her foster daughter in whose favour the defendant had bequeathed her property by a will. It was uncertain as to who died first. The heirs of the foster daughter were directed to be brought on the record of the partition suit in preference to the sons of the defendant who claimed to be the heirs of the latter on basis of intestacy (*zz*2).

22. (1) Where, after the commencement of this Act, an interest in any immovable property of an intestate, or in any business carried on by him or her, whether solely or in conjunction with others, devolves upon two or more heirs specified in class I of the Schedule, and any one of such heirs proposes to transfer his or her interest in the property or business, the other heirs shall have a preferential right to acquire the interest proposed to be transferred.

Preferential right to acquire property in certain cases.

(2) The consideration for which any interest in the property of the deceased may be transferred under this section shall, in the absence of any agreement between the parties, be determined by the court on application being made to it in this behalf, and if any person proposing to acquire the interest is not willing to acquire it for the consideration so determined, such person shall be liable to pay all costs of or incident to the application.

(3) If there are two or more heirs specified in class I of the Schedule proposing to acquire any interest under this section, that heir who offers the highest consideration for the transfer shall be preferred.

Explanation.—In this section, "court" means the court within the limits of whose jurisdiction the immovable property is situate or the business is carried on, and includes any other court which the State Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify in this behalf.

Pre-emption.—This section appears to have been thought necessary as an antidote to the inconvenient effects sometimes resulting from transfer to an outsider by a co-heir of his or her interest in property simultaneously inherit-

---

(*zz*1) In re Mahabir Singh ('63) A. Punj. 66 [husband and wife: wife legatee]. Also see In re Mahabir Singh ('63) A. Punj. 66.

(zz) Jayanilal v. Chhanalal ('68) A. Guj. 212.

(*zz*2) Setty v. Gyanachandrappa ('70) A. Mys. 87.

ed along with other co-heirs. The right declared by the section is analogous to the right of pre-emption which tends to raise clogs and fetters on the full sale and purchase of property and is in general regarded as opposed to equity and good conscience. Even when recognised it requires to be encompassed by rigid rules and limits lest the right should be exercised vexatiously. The note of the Joint Committee says that it would be just and proper to provide that in case any heir desires to transfer his or her interest in the property inherited under the provisions of this Act, the right of pre-emption should be given to others. The preferential right to acquire property under the section is confined only to cases of devolution of property upon two or more heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule.

The section requires more explicit and stringent language. It does not say how and when the right of preference is to be exercised. It is loosely worded and the expression 'transfer' itself is likely to create some difficulty. It could not have been intended to apply, for instance, to transfer of interest by way of mortgage. Probably the operation of the rule was meant to apply to an out and out sale of the interest or a gift of the same to an outsider. Sub-section (2) would seem to indicate such intention. Moreover there is the danger of subtle devices being resorted to for defeating the object underlying the section.

The effect of the section may be thus summarised:

(1) In case any heir specified in Class I of the Schedule desires to dispose of his interest in the property (immovable property or interest in a business) inherited by him simultaneously with any other heir or heirs of an intestate under the provisions of the Act the latter have a preferential right to acquire that interest by purchase.

(2) If the parties are unable to agree as to the quantum of consideration payable by the heir or heirs who intend to exercise the right conferred by sub-section (1) the price will be determined by the court in an application made for the purpose. The intending purchaser is not, however, bound to pay the price fixed by the court. If he does not choose to pay the same he will only be liable to pay costs of the application.

(3) In case of two or more heirs seeking to exercise the right conferred by sub-section (1) that heir who offers the highest consideration must by preferred and allowed to acquire the interest.

Sub-section (1) does not apply to all categories of heirs who succeed simultaneously to the property of an intestate but its operation is confined to cases where the property referred to in the section devolves upon two or more heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule. The intestate may be a male or a female. The sub-section applies to any immovable property of an intestate as also the interest of the intestate in any business carried on by him or her alone or in conjunction with others. The business includes business carried on by the intestate in partnership with others. It may be noted that rights of the other partners or the incidents of partnership are not intended to be affected by the rule.

Sub-section (2) deals with the question of quantum of consideration to be paid by the other heir or heirs who claim the preferential right to acquire the interest proposed to be transferred by a co-heir. If the parties are unable to agree as to the price, an application can be made to the court and the court will assess the price that should be paid by the intending purchaser or purchasers. If the intending purchaser is not willing to pay the amount at which the interest is valued by the court he cannot be compelled to do so unless he has actually agreed to pay the price that may be determined by the court. But in such a case he will have to pay the costs of the application. The court will fix the fair value of the interest after taking into consideration all relevant facts and evidence as to price that may be produced before it. It will also take into account the highest amount that any one of the parties may be willing to pay. This would enable the court to assess the fair value which may be more but would normally not be assessed at anything less than what any intending purchaser (outsider) is willing to pay.

Sub-section (3) lays down in effect that where there are two or more heirs willing to acquire any interest under this section for the consideration determined by the court the one who offers the highest amount will be preferred.

23. Where a Hindu intestate has left surviving him or her both male and female heirs specified in class I of the Schedule and his or her property includes a dwelling-house wholly occupied by members of his or her family, then, notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, the right of any such female heir to claim partition of the dwelling-house shall not arise until the male heirs choose to divide their respective shares therein; but the female heir shall be entitled to a right of residence therein:

Special provisions respecting dwelling-houses.

Provided that where such female heir is a daughter, she shall be entitled to a right of residence in the dwelling-house only if she is unmarried or has been deserted by or has separated from her husband or is a widow.

Special provision respecting dwelling-houses.—The object and importance of the rule here enacted is easily discernible. One objection raised against the right of a female to be recognised as an unqualified heir and to equable distribution of the property of a Hindu who dies intestate was that in many cases the property may consist substantially of the family dwelling-house and the allotment of a share to a daughter and particularly a married daughter in such a case would be fraught with serious consequences to the sons of the intestate. The note of the Joint Committee says that this section restricts the right of a female heir to claim partition of the family dwelling-house so long as the male heirs do not choose to effect partition of the same, but it expressly recognises her right to reside in such house. The proviso to the section was added at a later stage of legislation.

The section cannot have retrospective operation and does not apply to the case of an intestate who died before the commencement of the Act (*z*1).

It is rather unfortunate that the rule enacted in this section, which must necessarily apply even to small and modest family dwelling-houses in towns and villages, should not have been more clearly stated. The rule is a statutory novelty and obviously required careful particularity of language. The section is not very lucid as it stands. The expression "members of his or her family" used in describing the occupants of the family dwelling-house is likely to raise some doubtful points. Some other difficulties of interpretation likely to arise are mentioned in the notes which follow.

Partition is a necessary incident of the tenancy-in-common declared by the Act generally to exist in case of all heirs male and female who succeed at the same time. The section is intended to ensure easement of disruptive influences which would operate if the right of a female heir to claim partition of the family dwelling-house were left unrestricted. The restriction imposed by the section is applicable where the intestate or female is survived by male and female heirs enumerated in Class I of the Schedule and not where the intestate is survived only by heirs in Class II of the Schedule or by agnates or cognates. The restriction is confined to the right of any of the female heirs where there are other male heirs enumerated in Class I and does not apply to a case where the heirs in that class are only males or only females. The restriction it will be observed does not affect in any manner the devolution of the family dwelling-house upon all the heirs including female heirs of the intestate; nor does it affect the right of any such female heir to transfer her interest in it subject to the provisions of section 22. The restriction also does not affect the right of a son of a predeceased daughter (who is one of the heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule) to claim partition of the dwelling house. The restriction is strictly confined to the right of such female heir to ask for partition of the family dwelling-house and operates only:

(1) if the whole family dwelling-house is occupied by the members of the family of the male or female intestate, and

(2) until the male heirs choose to divide their shares in it.

As the daughter is an heir to the property of the intestate including the dwelling-house she would be a necessary party to a suit or appeal relating to the dwelling-house and non-impleading of her would result in abatement (*z*2).

"Surviving . . . her . . . heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule".—The words heirs specified in Class I of the Schedule are used in a descriptive sense and the reference to the heirs in Class I of the Schedule is to economise words. In case of a female intestate, her male heirs, therefore, who may prevent partition of the family dwelling-house can only be her son, son's son, son's son's son and daughter's son and not her husband. It must follow that if a female intestate dies leaving her surviving her husband, a married daughter and other daughters who are unmarried, the married daughter can enforce partition of the family dwelling-house although it is wholly occupied by members of the family. But if in such a case the intestate had also left sons of a predeceased daughter the married daughter will not be entitled to insist on partition until the latter choose to divide their respective shares in the dwelling house and even though the daughter's sons were not living with the family. The husband of the intestate may in such a case enforce his own independent right to partition as an heir of the intestate under section 15 but he may not be willing to do so. Some anomalous situations, as already mentioned, are likely to arise from the language of the section.

---

(*z*1) Reference may be made to Upendra Nath Das v. Chintamani Devi A.I.R. (1963), Cal. 22.
(*z*2) Raghunandan v. Rambalak ('64) A.P. 206.

"Dwelling-house wholly occupied by members of his or her family".— The expression dwelling-house is not defined in the Act. It is a thing rather difficult to define. But the context shows that the reference is to the dwelling-house which in the colloquial sense the intestate normally occupied with the members of his or her family and regarded as his or her abode of permanent residence and which upon his or her death the members of the family can be said to have continued to occupy. Occupation by the members of the family does not necessarily mean actual residence or continuous residence in the house; nor does it mean that all the members must be residing in the house. In practice much difficulty need not arise because the linguistic equivalent of the expression family house used in ordinary parlance in various part of the country will be a pointer to the dwelling-house respecting which special provision is made in this section and if any problem arises it will have to be solved in a commonsense way. Whether a particular house can be regarded as the dwelling-house contemplated by the section or not will also depend on the facts and circumstances of the particular case. The house must be wholly occupied by the members of the family and the restriction on the right to claim partition will not operate for instance where it is only partly occupied and partly or substantially let out to tenants. The occupation contemplated by the section is of members of the family of the intestate and it may not be easy to say who are to be regarded as members of the family of the male or female intestate and particularly of the latter. It seems doubtful whether any hard and fast rule will be laid down. Here also any difficulty that may arise will have to be resolved in a commonsense way and having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case.

"Until the male heirs choose to divide their respective shares therein".— The right of a female heir specified in Class I of the Schedule to demand actual partition of the family dwelling-house is deferred and kept in abeyance until the male heirs specified in Class I decide to partition it, that is to divide it by metes and bounds or realise its sale proceeds. Question may perhaps arise whether the special restriction enacted in this section on the right of a female heir to demand actual partition of the family dwelling-house applies when there is only one male heir of the intestate under Class I of the Schedule. The words 'until the male heirs choose to divide their respective shares therein' may suggest that there must be at least two such male heirs if the restriction is to operate. The object of the special provision is to prevent female heirs and particularly a daughter of the intestate from creating a situation in which partition of the family house may entail a forced sale of it or otherwise cause hardship to the son or sons of the intestate where it may not be possible for the son or sons to buy off the share of the female heir who insists on actual partition of it. It is submitted that there is nothing repugnant in the subject or context to prevent the operation of the rule laid down in section 13(2) of the General Clauses Act to the effect that the plural shall include the singular and the restriction will apply even where there is only one male heir who does not choose to divide his respective share in the dwelling-house. It would seem that the right of a female heir to demand partition may be deferred and remain in abeyance under this section till the lifetime of the male heirs enumerated in Class I of the Schedule or the last survivor of them unless a partition of the dwelling-house is sought by any one of them before such time. The restriction will cease to operate on the death of the last of such male heirs of the intestate.

Certain widows re-marrying may not inherit as widows.

24. Any heir who is related to an intestate as the widow of a pre-deceased son, the widow of a pre-deceased son of a pre-deceased son or the widow of a brother shall not be entitled to succeed to the property of the intestate as such widow, if on the date the succession opens, she has remarried.

Disqualified heirs.—Sections 24 to 28 deal with the question of dis-qualification of heirs. Section 28 lays down that no person shall be disqualified from succeeding to any property on any ground whatsoever except on those expressly mentioned in the Act, viz. remarriage in cases falling under section 24; murder in cases falling under section 25; and conversion in cases falling under section 26. Section 27 lays down a general rule. Succession in any case where there is a disqualified heir takes place as if such person had died before the intestate.

This section deals with one of the grounds for disqualification, namely remarriage, but the disqualification is confined only to certain heirs. It will be noticed that remarriage is not a disqualification in case of every female relative of the intestate. It is confined to the case of the three female heirs mentioned in this section and who are entitled to succeed under the Act as widows of relatives of the intestate. The step-mother does succeed as the widow of the father but the disqualification does not reach her. The mother of the intestate does not succeed as a widow of the father but in her own right (*z*3) and in case of the widow of the intestate there can be no question of any remarriage before the succession opens.

Widow: See p. 869 supra.

Mother: See pp. 871, 919 supra.

Step-mother: See pp. 872, 919 supra.

"Related to the intestate as the widow of a predeceased son . . .".—The section applies to certain heirs of a male as well as female intestate. In case of a female intestate the heirs of her husband and the heirs of her father can succeed to her property under sub-clauses (b) and (d) of section 15(1) and

---

(*z*3) For instance see Mantorabai v. Paretanbai ('72) A.M.P. 145.

the question of the application of this section can arise. The section in its application to heirs of a female intestate reads: "related to an intestate as the widow of a predeceased son . . ."; it does not say that the person disqualified must be related to an intestate as the widow of her predeceased son, etc. Thus for instance the widow of a predeceased son of her husband by another wife who may otherwise become entitled to succeed to the property of the female intestate may have remarried before the succession opens. The disqualification enacted in this section, it would seem, covers the case of any widow who claims to succeed as—the widow of a predeceased son; or the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son; or the widow of a brother of the husband or father of the female intestate under sub-clauses (b) and (d) of section 15(1); or by operation of the provisions of section 15(2) or under section 17.

". . . as such widow".—The disqualification laid down in the section applies only when the heir who is a widow claims to succeed on the ground that she is the widow of a predeceased son, or widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son or widow of a brother and not where the same heir claims to succeed on the ground of any other relationship with the intestate.

". . . if on the date the succession opens, she has remarried".—The words 'if on the date the succession opens' make it clear that the disqualification does not apply where the widow remarries after the succession has opened. In such a case there can be no divesting of the property which becomes vested in her immediately the succession opens. It is not necessary, however, for the application of the section that the subsequent marriage should be subsisting or that the husband by the subsequent marriage should be alive at the time the succession opens. Even if the subsequent husband has died or she has been divorced before that time, her case will be covered by the section. The reason is that a widow succeeds as the surviving half of her husband, and she ceases to be so by remarriage.

25. A person who commits murder or abets the commission of murder shall be disqualified from inheriting the property of the person murdered, or any other property in furtherance of the succession to which he or she committeed or abetted the commission of the murder.

Murderer disqualified.

Murderer disqualified.—The doctrinaire theory that provisions of a Statute of Distribution are paramount and forbid the consideration of any disqualification not contained in the statute itself was discountenanced by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Kenchava v. Girimallappa (a) where it was observed that statutes regulating heirship or descent, or giving force to wills should be read as not intended to affect paramount questions of public policy or dapart from well-settled principles of jurisprudence. It was held in that case (a) that a murderer is disqualified from inheriting any interest in the property of the person murdered and (b) that the murderer in such a case should be treated as non-existent and not as one who forms the stock for a fresh line of descent. In this section which has to be read with section 27 the Legislature gives statutory effect to the rule laid down in the Privy Council case by adopting the principle of public policy underlying that decision. The disqualification it will be noticed is not general but confined to certain property. The murderer does not ipso facto forfeit his right to property in general or his right to inherit property of any other person succession to whose estate is not in any manner altered or accelerated by the murder.

(a) (1924) 51 I.A. 368; ('21) A.B. 270.

The section has the effect of laying down that a person who commits murder or abets the commission of murder is disqualified from inheriting—

(a) the property of the person murdered, or

(b) any other property he may become entitled to succeed by reason of furtherance of succession resulting from the murder.

It is not necessary for the application of this section that the person disqualified should have been convicted of murder or abetment of murder. The disqualification will apply if it is established in any subsequent proceeding that the person to be disqualified had committed or abetted the murder (*a*1).

". . . in furtherance of succession . . .".—The reason of the rule laid down in the section is that it is contrary to public policy to permit a person to take advantage of his own wrong. Advantage may be sought by a person by murdering not the person whose property he seeks to acquire by inheritance but some other person through whom or after whose death he may in future acquire property by inheritance. Such a case would result in furtherance of succession to the owner of the property or to state it differently would result in acceleration of succession. Thus for instance if A has a brother B and his nephew C (the son of a predeceased brother) and C commits the murder of B (B being the nearer heir would have been entitled on A's death to succeed to A's property to the exclusion of C), C becomes disqualified from inheriting the property of A. Or the person murdered may have restricted interest in the property and the murder may have been committed with a view to accelerating succession by removal of the person holding such restricted interest.

Disqualification confined to murderer and those claiming title through the murderer.—The effect of this section read with section 27 is that the murderer is absolutely disqualified from inheriting the property of his victim or transmitting any title in respect of it. In the context of rules of succession under the old law the murderer had to be treated as non-existent and could not form the stock for a fresh descent. That basic principle has been adopted in this Act but the scheme of succession under the Act is different. The disqualification it will be noticed is confined to the murderer and not to others. A son or daughter of the murderer, for instance, is not affected by the disqualification except in cases where the son or daughter can claim his title to succeed only through the murderer. Where such person is entitled to succeed in his or her own right as an heir of the deceased under the Act the rule laid down in the section has no application. In such a case though related to the murderer the heir does not trace any title or right to succeed through the murderer. What section 27 requires is that the property shall devolve as if the murderer had died before the intestate and the effect of it is not that no relationship can be traced through the murderer but that no title or right to succeed can be traced through him. Thus for instance where A the propositus died leaving him surviving as is heirs only his brother B and D the daughter of B and B had committed A's murder B will be disqualified from inheriting the property of A. D will, however, be entitled to succeed to the property of a A as an heir specified in Entry IV of Class II of the Schedule. (Brother's daughter).

---

(*a*1) But see Seetharamaiah v. Ramakrishnaiah ('70) A.A.P. 407.

26. Where, before or after the commencement of this Act, a Hindu has ceased or ceases to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion, children born to him or her after such conversion and their descendants shall be disqualified from inheriting the property of any of their Hindu relatives, unless such children or descendants are Hindus at the time when the succession opens.

Convert's descendants disqualified.

Conversion.—Change of religion and loss of caste which at one time were grounds of forfeiture of property and of exclusion from inheritance ceased to be so after the passing of the Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850.

Succession to the property of the apostate is governed by the personal law applicable to followers of the religion to which he had been converted or by the provisions of the Indian Succession Act. Consequently, the property of a Mahommedan converted from Hinduism passes according to Mahomedan law to his descendants and the Hindu collaterals cannot claim to succeed under Hindu law or by virtue of any provision of the Caste Disabilities Removal Act (c). This section lays down the converse rule that the children born to the convert after his conversion and the descendants of such children cannot inherit the property of any of their Hindu relatives unless they are themselves Hindus at the time when the succession opens. It makes no difference to the application of the rule whether the convert ceased to be a Hindu before or after the commencement of this Act. The expression Hindu in this section is to be understood in the wide sense stated and explained in section 2. It will be noticed that the children of the apostate born before his conversion are not affected by the rule. Nor are children or descendants of his children born after his conversion affected by the rule if they are Hindus at the time when the succession opens.

27. If any person is disqualified from inheriting any property under this Act, it shall devolve as if such person had died before the intestate.

Succession when heir disqualified.

---

(c) See § 97 ante at pp. 161-162.

This section lays down the general rule relating to the effect of disability or disqualification resulting from any of the causes mentioned in the group of sections 24 to 28 and is in accordance with the rule of Hindu law that where an heir is disqualified, the next heir of the deceased succeeds as if the disqualified person had died before the intestate (d). A disqualified person transmits no interest to his or her own heir. It may be noted that as a general rule disqualification from inheritance is purely personal and does not extend to the issue of the disqualified heir unless there is any provision of law to the contrary, e.g. the provision relating to the descendants of a convert from Hinduism.

The effect of the rule laid down in this section is that no title or right to succeed can be traced by any person through one who is disqualified from inheriting any property under the provisions of sections 24 to 26. The section does not affect the rights of those who cannot be said to claim through the disqualified person.

28. No person shall be disqualified from succeeding to any property on the ground of any disease, defect or deformity, or save as provided in this Act, on any other ground whatsoever.

Disease, defect, etc. not to disqualify.

Under the texts of the Dharmashastras as interpreted by the courts, certain defects, deformities and diseases (§§ 98, 162-163 ante) excluded an heir from inheritance. This was substantially remedied by the Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, which ruled that "no person, other than a person who is and has been from birth a lunatic or idiot, shall be excluded from inheritance or from any right or share in joint family property by reason only of any disease, deformity or physical or mental defect." The present section discards almost all the grounds which imposed exclusion from inheritance. It rules out disqualification on any ground whatsoever excepting those expressly recognized by any provisions of the Act. Unchastity of a widow is not a disqualification under the Act (dd).

This section is not retrospective in its operation (*d*1).

ESCHEAT

29. If an intestate has left no heir qualified to succeed to his or her property in accordance with the provisions of this Act, such property shall devolve on the Government; and the Government shall take the property subject to all the obligations and liabilities to which an heir would have been subject.

Failure of heirs.

Failure of all heirs: Escheat.—Escheat in Indian law is the term commonly employed to denote lapsing of property to the Crown or Government in default of heirs on the death of the owner intestate. In recent times escheat is

---

(d) See § 101 at p. 164 ante.
(dd) Jayalakshmi v. Ganesa Iyer ('72) A.M. 357.
(*d*1) Appa Saheb v. Gurubasamma ('60) A. Mys. 79. Also see Vedavyas Rao v. Narayan Rao ('62) A. Mys. 18.

rare, for persons owning property but having no known heirs make wills and even when they do not, some person having remote kinship is usually found. Under the previous law on failure of all heirs of an intestate the Crown took by escheat. Where the Crown or Government claims by escheat, the onus lies on it to show that the owner of the estate died without heirs (e). An estate taken by escheat is subject to the trusts, charges and legal obligations (if any) previously affecting the estate, e.g. maintenance of dependants, mortgages and other incumbrances. This section rules that in case of failure of all the heirs recognized under the Act, on the death of the owner intestate, his or her property devolves on the Government. The Government takes the property subject to all legal obligations and liabilities to which an heir would have been subject if the property had devolved upon the heir by succession (*e*1).

Reference may be made to §§ 59 and 92 ante.

CHAPTER III

TESTAMENTARY SUCCESSION

Testamentary succession.

30. * Any Hindu may dispose of by will or other testamentary disposition any property, which is capable of being so disposed of by him, in accordance with the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 (39 of 1925), or any other law for the time being in force and applicable to Hindus.

Explanation.—The interest of a male Hindu in a Mitakshara coparcenary property or the interest of a member of a tarwad, tavazhi, illom, kutumba or kavaru in the property of the tarwad, tavazhi, illom, kutumba or kavaru shall, notwithstanding anything contained in this Act or in any other law for the time being in force, be deemed to be property capable of being disposed of by him or by her within the meaning of this sub-section.

Right to dispose of property by will.—This section is merely an assertion of the general rule that a Hindu may dispose of by will any property which it is within his power to bequeath by any testamentary disposition. It is the Explanation which is really the vital and most important part of the section. It might have been enacted in a more direct manner that the interest of a male Hindu in a Mitakshara coparcenery property or the interest of a member in the property of a tarward, etc. is property now capable of being disposed of by will notwithstanding any other rule of law to the contrary.

Neither under the customary law nor under the Aliyasantana Act, 1949, the interest of a coparcener in an Aliyasantana Kutumba could have been

---

(e) See § 59 at pp. 140-141 ante.

(*e*1) Reference may be made to Kothawale v. State of Maharashtra ('70) A.B. 205 [case under S. 72 Bombay Land Revenue Code 1879].

* Part of this section was repealed by s. 29 of the Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act, 1956, and by the Repealing and Amending Act, 58 of 1960.

disposed of by a will. In that regard a definite change is made by the Explanation with the result that now a member of an Aliyasantana Kutumba or Kavaru can dispose of his interest in the Kutumba properties by a will (f). So also can the interest of a Hindu governed by the Marumakkattayam or Nambudri law in the property of a tarwad, tavazhi or illom, can now be disposed of by will.

According to the Dayabhaga law, a father may dispose of by will all his property, whether ancestral or self-acquired. Similarly a coparcener under that law may dispose of by will the whole of his interest in the joint family property. These rules are well-established and sub-section (1) in effect reiterates the same.

According to the Mitakshara law, no coparcener, not even a father, can dispose of by will his undivided coparcenary interest even if the other coparceners consent to the disposition, the reason being that at the moment of death the right of survivorship (of the other coparceners) is in conflict with the right by device. Then the title by survivorship, being the prior title, takes precedence to the exclusion of that by device. That rule of Mitakshara law is now abrogated by the Explanation which lays down in explicit terms that such interest is to be deemed to be property capable of being disposed of by will notwithstanding anything contained in any provision of the Act or any other law for the time being in force.

Will by female Hindu.—Prior to the coming into force of this Act, neither under the Mitakshara nor under the Dayabhaga law a widow or other limited female heir could in any case dispose of by will any property inherited by her or any portion thereof, whether the property was moveable or immoveable. The effect of section 14 of this Act inter alia is to abrogate that traditional limitation. She is now full owner of all property howsoever acquired and held by her and can dispose of it by will. The only qualification to this rule is that she cannot do so where she holds any property as 'restricted estate' as visualized under section 14(2). This is so because in any such case she is not and has not become full owner of the property. Similar is the position in respect of a female owner governed by any of the matriarchal systems of law.

Sub-section (2).—Sub-section (2) of this Act, which is now repealed by section 29 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, was as under:

> "For the removal of doubts it is hereby declared that nothing contained in sub-section (1) shall affect the right to maintenance of any heir specified in the Schedule by reason only of the fact that under a will or other testamentary disposition made by the deceased the heir has been deprived of a share in the property to which he or she would have been entitled under this Act if the deceased had died intestate."

Reference may be made to section 22 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. The provisions of that section have now rendered sub-section (2) of the present section unnecessary.

---

(f) Sundara v. Girija ('62) A. Mys. 72 (F.B.). As to the effect of section 43 of the Travancore Kshatriya Act and this Explanation reference may be made to Bank of New India Ltd. v. Ponnamma ('61) A. Kerala 105 (F.B.).

CHAPTER IV

REPEALS

31. [Repealed]

THE SCHEDULE

(See section 8)

HEIRS IN CLASS I AND CLASS II

Class I

Son; daughter; widow; mother; son of a predeceased son; daughter of a predeceased son; son of a predeceased daughter; daughter of a predeceased daughter; widow of a predeceased son; son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son; daughter of a predeceased son of a predeceased son; widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son.

Class II

I. Father.

II. (1) Son's daughter's son, (2) son's daughter's daughter, (3) brother, (4) sister.

III. (1) Daughter's son's son, (2) daughter's son's daughter, (3) daughter's daughter's son, (4) daughter's daughter's daughter.

IV. (1) Brother's son, (2) sister's son, (3) brother's daughter, (4) sister's daughter.

V. Father's father; father's mother.

VI. Father's widow; brother's widow.

VII. Father's brother; father's sister.

VIII. Mother's father; mother's mother.

IX. Mother's brother; mother's sister.

Explanation.—In this Schedule, references to a brother or sister do not include reference to a brother or sister by uterine blood.

THE HINDU MINORITY AND GUARDIANSHIP ACT, 1956

No. 32 OF 1956

ARRANGEMENT OF SECTIONS

SECTIONS

1. Short title and extent.
2. Act to be supplemental to Act 8 of 1890.
3. Application of Act.
4. Definitions.
5. Over-riding effect of Act.
6. Natural guardians of a Hindu minor.
7. Natural guardianship of adopted son.
8. Powers of natural guardian.
9. Testamentary guardians and their powers.
10. Incapacity of minor to act as guardian of property.
11. De facto guardian not to deal with minor's property.
12. Guardian not to be appointed for minor's undivided interest in joint family property.
13. Welfare of minor to be paramount consideration.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

"The king shall protect the inherited (and other) property of a minor, until he has returned (from his teacher's house) or until he has passed his minority."

—Manu VIII, 27.

"Till the eighth year a child is comparable (for legal purposes) to one in its mother's womb. Till he attains the age of sixteen he is called a minor (poganda). Then he becomes sui juris (vyavacharagna)."

—Narada III, 35, 36.

In Hindu law, apart from statute, the generally accepted view has been that non-age terminates at the completion of the sixteenth year and minority is a term applied to the period of life of a male or female which precedes the completion of that age. There was some difference of opinion as to the age when a person, under the laws of the Smritis, could be said to have attained full age or majority. That difference lost much of its importance after the passing of the Indian Majority Act, 1875, which applies to all persons domiciled in India and to all matters except marriage, dower, divorce and adoption. According to that Act, every minor of whose person or property a guardian has been appointed by any Court and every minor of whose property the superintendence has been assumed by a Court of Wards is deemed to have attained his majority at the completion of the twenty-first year; and in all other cases, at the completion of the eighteenth year. The Indian Majority Act is a very short enactment and aims at uniformity and certainty in the matter of non-age and its object is to fix the age of majority.

Indian Majority Act, 1875.

According to the law relating to guardians as hitherto applied in case of Hindus, guardians could be divided into three classes, namely (1) natural guardians; (2) guardians appointed by a father's will (testamentary guardians); and (3) guardians appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890. The guardians under the Guardians and Wards Act can be appointed by a District Court or by a Chartered High Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction. A Chartered High Court can also appoint a guardian in the exercise of its inherent powers.

Three classes of guardians.

The principal enactment on the subject is the Guardians and Wards Act of 1890 which is a consolidating enactment and is intended to be a complete code defining the rights and remedies of guardians and wards. Section 8 of that Act, however, inter alia saves the rights of appointment of guardians of minor children under the Hindu law and leaves unaffected the preferential claims of guardians under that law according to which the father is the natural guardian of the person and the separate property of his minor children and next to him the mother. No relation other than the parents under that law is entitled as of right to the guardianship of a minor except that the husband is the lawful guardian of his minor wife. The Act vests wide powers in the Court to appoint or declare a guardian of the person or property or both of a minor and empowers it to do so where it is satisfied that it is for the welfare of a minor to make such order. But the Act was not intended to affect the rights of the parents and the husband to act as the natural guardians of the person of the minor and the Court has under that enactment no authority to appoint a guardian of the person of a minor whose father is living and is not in the opinion of the Court, unfit to be guardian of the person of the minor; nor in case of a married female, if a minor, whose husband is not in the opinion of the Court unfit to be guardian of her person.

Guardian and Wards Act, 1890.

Natural guardians under Hindu Law.

The Guardians and Wards Act did not alter or affect the rights of the natural guardians under the Hindu Law and it was only if a guardian was appointed by the Court that the rights of the natural guardian became extinguished. The rights of the natural guardian under that law as interpreted by the Courts were comparatively very wide. The natural guardian could mortgage, sell or otherwise dispose of the immovable property of the minor, even without the sanction of the Court, provided the alienation was for the benefit of the minor's estate. The law on the subject was well settled by a long course of decisions since Hunooman Persaud Pandey's case (6 M.I.A. 393). The principle enunciated by the Privy Council in that case in a passage which is now locus classicus is: "The power of the manager for an infant heir to charge an estate not his own, is, under the Hindu law, a limited and qualified power. It can only be exercised rightly in a case of need or for the benefit of the estate. . . . The actual pressure on the estate, the danger to be averted, or the benefit to be conferred upon it, in the particular instance, is the thing to be regarded. . . . The lender is bound to enquire into the necessities for the loan, and to satisfy himself as well as he can, with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing, that the manager is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estate. But . . . if he does so inquire, and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged, sufficient and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge." But doubts and difficulties at times beset the question of contracts by natural guardians and their right to bind the minor by personal covenants and the precise extent of the powers of the natural guardian of a minor to deal with the properties of the infant on grounds of necessity or benefit of the minor. The delimitations on the power were well defined but difficulty sometimes arose in applying the principle to facts which were at times complex and gave rise to difficult situations.

Rights of natural guardian under Hindu Law.

Under Hindu Law as hitherto administered by the Courts a Hindu father could by word of mouth or by writing, nominate a guardian both of the person and property of his children, so as to exclude even the mother from the guardianship. The mother, even if the father was dead, did not have the testamentary power to appoint a guardian by will. The power of a testamentary guardian to deal with property belonging to his ward was under that law subject only to the restrictions imposed by the will. The Guardians and Wards Act did not affect the power of the father to appoint a testamentary guardian. Section 6 of the Guardians and Wards Act, contains a saving inter alia to the effect that nothing in that enactment is to take away or derogate from any power to appoint a guardian (including testamentary guardian) of the person and property of a minor where under the personal law of the minor such appointment is competent. The power of a testamentary guardian to mortgage, sell or otherwise dispose of the immovable property of the minor is under that Act only subject to the restrictions which may be imposed by the will unless he is also declared to be a guardian by an order of the Court. In the latter case his powers are controlled by the relevant provisions of the Guardians and Wards Act (section 28).

Testamentary guardians under Hindu Law.

Powers of testamentary guardian.

Section 27 of the Guardians and Wards Act which applies to all classes of guardians lays down general rules affecting the duties and powers of guardians. A guardian is bound to deal with the property of the minor ward as carefully as a man of ordinary prudence would deal with it if it were his own, and subject to limitations on his powers laid down in the Act, he has the power to do all acts which are reasonable and proper for the realisation, protection or benefit of the property of the minor. Section 29 of that Act lays down certain limitations on the powers of a guardian appointed or declared by the Court in respect of his dealing with and management of the immovable property of the minor ward. He cannot, without the permission of the Court, mortgage or charge, or transfer by sale, gift, exchange or otherwise any such property: Nor can he without the permission of the Court lease any part of that property for a term exceeding five years or for a term extending more than one year beyond the date of attainment of majority by the ward. The powers of the natural guardian or a testamentary guardian of a Hindu minor were not affected by these limitations. The rights of any such guardian to deal with and manage the minor's property continued to be governed by the rules to which reference has already been made unless and until the Court in the exercise of its wide powers removed him or appointed or declared him to be a guardian of the minor in which latter case his powers to deal with and manage the minor's property became limited as provided in section 29 of the Act.

Powers of natural and testamentary guardians not affected by Guardians and Wards Act.

The keystone of the Guardians and Wards Act is the satisfaction of the Court as to what is for the welfare of the minor and the Act provides the machinery which enables the Court to protect the interest and welfare of the minor who by reason of his immature age is incapable of looking after the same. Section 17 of the Act is pivotal and inter alia enacts that in appointing or declaring the guardian of a minor, the Court shall be guided by what, consistently with the law to which the minor is subject, appears in the circumstances to be for the welfare of the minor. In considering what will be for the welfare of the minor, the Court shall have regard to the age, sex and religion of the minor, the character and capacity of the proposed guardian and his nearness of kin to the minor, the wishes, if any, of a deceased parent, and any existing or previous relations of the proposed guardian with the minor or his property. If the minor is old enough to form an intelligent preference, the Court may consider that preference. In numerous decisions under the Act it has been emphasized that the welfare of the minor is the paramount consideration and the recognised rights of guardians under the personal law must, if necessary, be subordinated to that main consideration and the Court is not bound to appoint as guardian the person who has a preferential claim for guardianship according to the personal law if the appointment of such person will not conduce to the minor's welfare.

Supplemental enactment.

The present Act does not codify the entire law of guardianship applicable to Hindus but amends and codifies only certain parts of the law relating to minority and guardianship among Hindus. Section 2 of the Act expressly lays down that the provisions of this Act are in addition to and not in derogation of the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890. The provisions of the Act are, therefore, to be read as supplemental to that Act. In respect, however, of matters expressly dealt with by the Act the provisions of this Act are to have over-riding effect. Such provisions abrogate all the rules of the law of guardianship hitherto applicable to Hindus by virtue of any text or rule of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law, in respect of all matters dealt with in those provisions. They also supersede any other law, contained in any State or Central legislation (including the Guardians and Wards Act) in force immediately before it came into operation in so far as such legislation is inconsistent with those provisions. Rules relating to matters for which no provision is made are not over-ridden by the Act.

Over-riding effect of provisions of the Act.

Principal changes brought about by the Act.

Reference to the provisions of this short enactment will show that it is principally intended to crystallize in statutory form as to who are the persons entitled to act as the natural and testamentary guardians of a Hindu minor and particularly to impose certain limitations on the powers of such guardians in the matter of disposal of and management of the immovable property of the minor. Section 6 declares the status of the father and mother as natural guardians of the minor children in respect of their person as well as property; and of the husband as the natural guardian of the person and property of his minor wife. There is no substantial change in the law on this matter. But material change is effected in the matter of the powers of the natural guardian which are now substantially the same as and subject to the same limitations as are imposed upon the powers of a guardian declared or appointed by the Court under the Guardians and Wards Act. The result is that the natural guardian does not now have in the matter of disposal of the immovable property of the minor, any powers larger than those conferred on a guardian appointed or declared by that Act. The language of section 8 of the present Act in relation to limitations on the powers of management of immovable property of the minor is in pari materia with that of the provisions contained in section 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act which have already been stated above (a). Section 9 of the present Act rules that a Hindu father has the power to appoint a testamentary guardian of his minor legitimate children both in respect of the person and property of such children. A similar power is now recognised in case of the mother where the father has predeceased the mother. A mother is also entitled to appoint a testamentary guardian of her minor illegitimate children. The powers, however, of any testamentary guardian of a minor Hindu in the matter of dealing with and management of the immovable property of the minor are not to be governed by the personal law of the parties but are now subject to the same limitations as are imposed upon the powers of a natural guardian. The result of these principal changes in the law relating to Hindu minors is that neither a natural guardian nor a testamentary guardian can now, without the sanction of the Court, mortgage, charge, sell or otherwise alienate any immovable property of the minor or lease any part of such property for a term exceeding five years or for a term extending more than one year beyond the date of attainment of majority by the ward. Any disposal of immovable property by a natural guardian or a testamentary guardian in contravention of the above limitations is voidable at the instance of the minor. The power vested in the Court to sanction any such disposal of the minor's immovable property can only be exercised if there is necessity for such disposal or if the Court is satisfied that the disposal of the property is to the evident advantage of the minor (b).

Restrictions imposed on powers of natural and testamentary guardians.

(a) P. 955, supra.

Powers of de facto guardian abrogated.

Another change brought about by the present enactment relates to de facto guardians. The powers of a de facto guardian or a de facto manager of a Hindu minor to bind the minor's estate by alienations of immoveable property of the minor in case on necessity or for the benefit of the minor's estate have been recognized by the Courts in numerous decisions (c). Section 11 of the Act now abrogates those powers and lays down in express terms that after the coming into operation of the Act, no person shall be entitled to dispose of, or deal with, the property of a Hindu minor on the ground of his or her being the de jacto guardian of the minor.

The Crown or the State as pater patriae has jurisdiction to do all acts and things necessary for the protection of minors for they cannot take care of themselves and one common principle of law is that it is a prime duty of the Court where satisfied that it is for the welfare of the minor that an order should be made appointing or declaring a guardian of his person or porperty it should make such order. Sections 7 and 17 of the Guardians and Wards Act give statutory form to this general rule of guardianship law. The present enactment, although it is not exhaustive of the law on the subject and gives only certain supplemental rules principally affecting natural and testamentary guardians and the restrictions on the powers of such guardians, reiterates the salutary rule that in appointing or declaring guardians of the person or property of a Hindu minor, the paramount consideration of the Court should be the welfare of the minor (s. 13). The expression 'welfare' in this context, it is settled law, is to be understood in its widest sense and embraces not merely the material and physical well-being of the minor and happiness but every circumstance and every factor bearing upon the moral and religious welfare and the education and upbringing of the minor. In the matter of any such appointment or declaration of a guardian the first and the inevitable starting point and the dominant consideration for the Court is the welfare of the minor.

Welfare of the minor must be paramount consideration of the Court.

---

(b) See Section 8 and Section 9(5).

(c) See § 528, ante.

THE HINDU MINORITY AND GUARDIANSHIP ACT, 1956

No. 32 OF 1956

[25th August, 1956]

An Act to amend and codify certain parts of the law relating to minority and guardianship among Hindus.

BE it enacted by Parliament in the Seventh Year of the Republic of India as follows: —

Preamble.—A codifying enactment is passed to codify the existing law and its purpose is to declare the whole of the law upon some particular subject or certain particular matters dealt with in it. The preamble to the present enactment in terms states that it is intended to amend and codify certain parts of the law relating to minority and guardianship among Hindus and it is only in respect of the points and matters specifically dealt with in it that the law relating to minority and guardianship among Hindus is codified in this enactment which does not purport to give the whole law on the subject of guardianship. Section 2 of the Act states in explicit terms that the provisions of the Act are supplemental to and to be read as additional to and not in derogation of those contained in the Guardians and Wards Act of 1890 which is the principal enactment on the subject. Where, however, any express provision on any point or matter is contained in this Act it is to prevail and effect must be given to it irrespective of what may have been laid down in the other enactment.

Rules of interpretation of a statute.—For some of the rules relating to interpretation, see Notes at pp. 666-669 supra.

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956.

(2) It extends to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir and applies also to Hindus domiciled in the territories to which this Act extends who are outside the said territories.

Commencement and extent.—The Act received the assent of the President on 25th August 1956 and came into operation of that day (d).

The Act applies to Hindus in the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir. The Act also applies to Hindus domiciled in India but who are living outside India. The general principle of private international law is that the lex loci governs matters relating to immovable property and the law of the domicile governs personal relations.

---

(d) S. 5(1)(b), General Clauses Act.

Act to be supplemental to Act 8 of 1890.

2. The provisions of this Act shall be in addition to, and not, save as hereinafter expressly provided, in derogation of, the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890 (8 of 1890).

Act is supplemental to the Guardians and Wards Act.—The Act, although it is an amending and codifying enactment, is not exhaustive of the law on the subject of minority and guardianship among Hindus. The effect of this section read with section 5 of the Act, which gives over-riding operation to the provisions of this Act, is to abrogate all the rules of the law of guardianship hitherto applicable to Hindus by virtue of any text or rule of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law in respect of all matters dealt with in the Act. The Act also supersedes any other law, contained in any Central or State legislation, in force before it came into operation in so far as such legislation is inconsistent with those provisions. Rules relating to matters for which no provision is made are not over-ridden by the Act. The Guardians and Wards Act, as already pointed out (e), is the principal enactment on the subject and is a complete code defining the rights and remedies of guardians and wards. That Act, however, saves from its operation the personal law of the minors in certain matters and does not purport to lay down the law in respect of the powers of the natural and testamentary guardians under such personal law. The present Act is principally intended to declare in statutory form as to who are the persons entitled to act as the natural guardians of a Hindu minor in respect of the person and property of the minor and to impose certain restrictions on the powers of such guardians. It is also intended to state the law relating to testamentary guardians and the delimitations on the powers of such guardians. It is, therefore, both a codifying and a supplemental enactment and its provisions must be read in the context of the law laid down in the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890.

The provisions of this Act and the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890 are complementary. In case of repugnancy the provisions of this Act would prevail (*e*1).

Application of Act.

3. (1) This Act applies—

(a) to any person who is a Hindu by religion in any of its forms or developments, including a Virashaiva, a Lingayat or a follower of the Brahmo, Prarthana or Arya Samaj,

(b) to any person who is a Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh by religion, and

(c) to any other person domiciled in the territories to which this Act extends who is not a Muslim, Christian, Parsi or Jew by religion, unless it is proved that any such person would not have been governed by the Hindu law or by any custom or usage as part of that law in respect of any of the matters dealt with herein if this Act had not been passed.

---

(e) p. 953, supra.

(*e*1) Kusa Paride v. Baishnab ('66) A. Orissa 60.

Explanation.—The following persons are Hindus, Buddhists, Jainas or Sikhs by religion, as the case may be: —

(i) any child, legitimate or illegitimate, both of whose parents are Hindus, Buddhists, Jainas or Sikhs by religion;

(ii) any child, legitimate or illegitimate, one of whose parents is a Hindu, Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh by religion and who is brought up as a member of a tribe, community, group or family to which such parent belongs or belonged; and

(iii) any person who is a convert or re-convert to the Hindu, Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh religion.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), nothing contained in this Act shall apply to the members of any Scheduled Tribe within the meaning of clause (25) of article 366 of the Constitution unless the Central Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, otherwise directs.

(3) The expression 'Hindu' in any portion of this Act shall be construed as if it included a person who, though not a Hindu by religion, is, nevertheless, a person to whom this Act applies by virtue of the provisions contained in this section.

Persons governed by the Act.—It must have been seen from § 6(1) that Hindu law has been applicable to a wide category of persons. The present section substantially codifies the law on the question as it existed at the time of the passing of this enactment and is in pari materia with the law on the question enacted in section 2(1)(c) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.

Reference may be made to Notes at pp. 671-673 supra.

Reference may also be made to §§ 6 and 7 ante.

Sub-section (1) (a): Hindu.—See pp. 671-672 supra.

Sub-section (1) (b).—See p. 672 supra.

Sub-section (1) (c).—See p. 672 supra.

Explanation (ii).—See p. 672 supra.

Explanation (iii).—See p. 672 supra.

Sub-section (2): Scheduled Tribes.—See pp. 672-673 supra.

Sub-section (3).—See p. 673 supra.

4. In this Act,—

Definitions.

(a) "minor" means a person who has not completed the age of eighteen years;

(b) "guardian" means a person having the care of the person of a minor or of his property or of both his person and property, and includes—

(i) a natural guardian,

(ii) a guardian appointed by the will of the minor's father or mother,

(iii) a guardian appointed or declared by a court, and

(iv) a person empowered to act as such by or under any enactment relating to any court of wards;

(c) "natural guardian" means any of the guardians mentioned in section 6.

It will be noticed that the practice of inserting the words "unless the context otherwise requires" usually followed by the Legislature in the matter of sections giving statutory definitions has not been adhered to in this section. Nevertheless definitions and abbreviations have to be read subject to the qualification that their application must not be inconsistent with the context or subject-matter. This follows as a corollary to the general principle of construction that if there is repugnance in the context, words and expressions in a statute must be understood in a manner as will be in harmony with the context and to effectuate the intention of the Legislature. The definitions in this section seem mainly intended to stress that for the purpose of the Act a person is to be regarded as a minor till completion of the age of eighteen and to make it clear that the expression "guardian" has a wide connotation.

After the Act came into force no person can claim to be the legal guardian of a minor unless he or she comes within one of the four classes of persons enumerated in clause (b) of the section (*e*2). A stranger who makes a gift of property to a minor is not entitled to appoint a guardian for the minor simply by reason of the factum of the gift. He may, however, provide for management of such property by resorting to a trust (*e*3).

Reference to the provisions of the Act will show that a person though not a natural guardian, or a testamentary guardian, or one appointed or declared by the Court or empowered by any statute relating to the Court of Wards may be guardian within the ambit of this Act if he has taken upon himself or herself the care of the person or property or both of a minor, e.g. a de facto guardian though, of course, after the commencement of this Act, he is not entitled to dispose of, or deal with, the property of the minor (f).

5. Save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act,—

Over-riding effect of Act.

(a) any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or any custom or usage as part of that law in force immediately before the commencement of this Act shall cease to have effect with respect to any matter for which provision is made in this Act:

---

(*e*2) Ramachandra v. Annapurni Ammal ('64) A. Kerala 269. Also see s. 11 infra. 113.

(*e*3) Rajalakshmi v. Ramachandran ('67) A.M.

(f) Sec. 11.

(b) any other law in force immediately before the commencement of this Act shall cease to have effect in so far as it is inconsistent with any of the provisions contained in this Act.

Over-riding effect of the Act.—This section gives over-riding application to the provisions of the Act and in effect lays down that in respect of matters dealt with in the Act it seeks to repeal all existing law on the matters dealt with in it, whether in the shape of enactments or otherwise, which may be inconsistent with it. The result is that immediately on the coming into operation of the Act the law of guardianship hitherto applicable to Hindus whether by virtue of any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law ceases to have effect with respect to all the matters dealt with in the Act. The Act also supersedes the rules of the law of guardianship contained in any Central or State enactment (*f*1) and any other law in force immediately before it came into operation by enacting that all other law shall cease to have effect with respect to such matters in so far as it is inconsistent with any provisions contained in the Act. This section may be read with section 2 which refers to the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, and draws attention to the supplemental nature of the provisions of this Act.

The effect of sections 4(a) and 5(b) is not to override the first part of section 3 of the Guardian and Wards Act. The age of majority, therefore, of a minor for whose person a guardian has been appointed by the Court will be 21 years and not 18 years (*f*2).

Natural guardians of a Hindu minor.

6. The natural guardians of a Hindu minor, in respect of the minor's person as well as in respect of the minor's property (excluding his or her undivided interest in joint family property), are—

(a) in the case of a boy or an unmarried girl—the father, and after him, the mother: provided that the custody of a minor who has not completed the age of five years shall ordinarily be with the mother;

(b) in the case of an illegitimate boy or an illegitimate unmarried girl—the mother, and after her, the father;

(c) in the case of a married girl—the husband:

Provided that no person shall be entitled to act as the natural guardian of a minor under the provisions of this section—

(a) if he has ceased to be a Hindu, or

(b) if he has completely and finally renounced the world by becoming a hermit (vanaprastha) or an ascetic (yati or sanyasi).

---

(*f*1) For instance see Travancore Nayar Act S. 10(2). Also see Kamalakshmi Amma v. Bhaskara Menon ('61) A. Kerala 154. And see Ramachandra v. Annapurni Ammal supra; Kusa Paride v. Baishnab supra. Reference may also be made to S. 15 of the Madras Marumakkathayam Act, 1932 and Raghavan Nair v. Lakshmikutty Amma ('61) A. Kerala 193.

(*f*2) Swaminathan v. Angayarkanni Ammal ('64) A.M. 11.

Explanation.—In this section, the expressions 'father' and 'mother' do not include a step-father and a step-mother.

Natural guardians.—The subject of persons who can be natural guardian of a Hindu minor, under the law hitherto applied, has been dealt with in §§ 518-527 ante. This section does not make any substantial alteration in the law on the subject and is mainly declaratory of the same.

The position in the Hindu law hitherto applied and under this section is the same. Normally when the father is alive he is the natural guardian and it is only after him that the mother becomes the natural guardian. There can, however, be exceptional cases where the minor can be legally represented by the mother as the natural guardian, even though the father may be alive. Thus, for instance, where the father of the minor was alive but the father and mother had fallen out and the mother with whom the minor was living had been managing the affairs of the minor daughter for over twenty years, it was held that a lease executed by the mother on behalf of the minor was valid and binding on the minor, the mother being regarded as the natural guardian of the minor in the particular circumstances of the case (*f*3).

Where the father refuses to act as the natural guardian or has neglected to discharge his obligations as such guardian in respect of the minor and his property another person and more so the mother of the minor can take recourse to legal proceedings for being appointed as a guardian of the person and property of the minor (*f*4).

The mere fact that the mother has remarried is no disqualification under the Act and she can act as the natural guardian of the minor (*ff*4).

". . . excluding his or her undivided interest in joint family property."—The subject matter with which the Act deals is limited to guardians in respect of minor's person or in respect of minor's property other than his undivided interest in joint family property whether they be natural guardians or testamentary guardians or guardians appointed or declared by Court and the concept of a guardian in respect of the undivided interest of a minor in joint family property is specifically excluded from the purview of the Act (*f*5).

Clause (a): Father—Mother: Custody.—This clause affirms the rule of Hindu law that the father is the natural guardian of the person as well as the property of a minor son and a minor unmarried daughter; and next to him the mother is the natural guardian of the person and property of such minor. The clause gives legislative sanction to the principle now well established that even though the father is the natural guardian of his minor children and entitled as such to their custody and though it is the duty of the Court to make orders for appointment of a guardian and custody of the minor, consistently with the personal law of the minor, the prime and the paramount consideration is the welfare of the minor and the custody of a child of tender years should, therefore, remain with the mother unless there are grave and weighty considerations which require that the mother should not be permitted

---

(*f*3) Jijabai v. Pathankhan ('71) A.S.C. 315.
(*f*4) Narain Singh v. Sapurna Kuer ('68) A.P. 318.
(*ff*4) Bakshi Ram v. Shila Devi ('60) A. Punj. 304. Also see § 523 ante.
(*f*5) In re Krishnakant ('61) A. Guj. 68.

to have the minor with her. This clause rules that though the father is the natural guardian of the minor's person and property, the custody of a minor who has not completed the age of five years shall ordinarily be with the mother. Unless there are some special facts and circumstances clearly indicating that it is not in the interest and well-being of the minor of such tender age to be with the mother, the custody of the minor should be with the mother. The rule is not to be understood to suggest that on completion of the age of five years the custody of the child should be directed to be handed over to the father in view of his preferential rights. The Court takes into consideration all the circumstances of the matter bearing in mind that the pivotal factor is the benefit and well-being of the minor. The facts and circumstances that the Court takes into consideration may vary in each particular case and obviously cannot be listed. Sub-sections (2) and (3) of section 17 of the Guardians and Wards Act state rules which are of some guidance on the question. In considering what will be for the welfare of the minor, the Court shall have regard among other factors to the age, sex and religion of the minor, the character and capacity of the guardian and if the minor is old enough to form an intelligent preference, the Court may consider that preference.

The proposition is now firmly established that even the preferential right of the father as a natural guardian should be subordinated to and even overriden by the sole consideration that the welfare of the minor is to be the determinative factor in all these matters of guardianship. For some recent decisions illustrative of the rule see f.n. (*f*6) below.

The father is the natural guardian of his children during their minorities, but this guardianship is in the nature of a sacred trust, and he cannot, therefore, during his lifetime, substitute another person to be the guardian in his place. He may, in the exercise of his discretion as guardian, entrust the custody and education (subject to the mother's right to custody of a child of tender years) of his children to another. The authority he may thus confer would be a revocable authority and if the welfare of his children requires it he can take such custody and education once more into his own hands notwithstanding any agreement or arrangement to the contrary made by him. But if the authority has been acted upon in such a way as in the opinion of the Court, exercising its jurisdiction over infants, to create associations or to give rise to expectations on the part of the children which it would be undesirable in their interest to disturb or disappoint, the Court will interfere to prevent its revocation (g).

Clause (b).—This clause affirms the rule of Hindu law that the mother is the lawful guardian of her illegitimate children (h); it, however, lays down that the father of such children has no preferential right and is the natural guardian only after the mother.

Clause (c).—This clause affirms the rule of Hindu law that the husband is the lawful guardian of his minor wife (i).

---

(*f*6) V. V. Narasaiah v. C. P. Raju ('71) A.A.P. 134; Radhabai v. S. K. Mudaliar ('71) A. Mys. 69; Sunil Kumar v. Satirani ('69) A.C. 573; Chander Prabha v. Prem Nath ('69) A. Delhi 283. Also see Kamalamma v. Laxminarayan ('71) A. Mys. 211 [Mother was not appointed]; Gheesi v. Shri Rama ('72) A. Raj. 256.

(g) Besant v. Narayaniah (1914) 41 I.A. 314, 38 Mad. 807, 24 I.C. 290, ('14) A.P.C. 41. The Court may, of course, permit revocation of the entrustment if it is in the interest of the minor, Sheokumar v. Shiv Rani ('66) A.M.P. 189.

(h) See § 522 ante.

(i) See § 443 ante.

Disqualifications.—The proviso to the section enacts that no person (father, mother or husband) is entitled to act as the natural guardian of a minor under the provisions of this section (i) if he has ceased to be a Hindu by conversion to any other religion (j); or (ii) if he has completely and finally renounced the world by becoming a hermit or an ascetic.

Step-father; Step-mother.—A step-father or a step-mother is not the natural guardian of the minor child. The position of an adoptive father or adoptive mother is, however, different as will be seen from the next section.

Natural guardianship of adopted son.

7. The natural guardianship of an adopted son who is a minor passes, on adoption, to the adoptive father and after him to the adoptive mother.

Guardianship of adopted son.—This section adopts the rule of Hindu law that guardianship of an adopted son who is a minor passes on his adoption from his natural father and mother to his adoptive father and mother (k).

Guardianship of adopted daughter.—This section speaks only of the natural guardianship of an adopted son and does not refer to an adopted daughter. The Act came into force before the passing of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, and the general Hindu law as administered by the Courts did not recognise any adoption of a daughter. The Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act now recognises adoption of a daughter and confers that right both upon a male Hindu as well as a female Hindu (l). Section 12 of that enactment rules that an adopted child shall be deemed to be the child of his or her adoptive father or mother for all purposes with effect from the date of the adoption and from such date all the ties of the child in the family of his or her birth shall be deemed to be severed and replaced by those created by the adoption in the adoptive family. There are exceptions to the application of this legal fiction but they do not touch the question of guardianship. The effect of that section would seem to be that the adoptive father and the adoptive mother would be regarded as the natural guardians of the adopted child in consonance with the rules relating to the law of adoption laid down in that Act.

Powers of natural guardian.

8. (1) The natural guardian of a Hindu minor has power, subject to the provisions of this section, to do all acts which are necessary or reasonable and proper for the benefit of the minor or for the realization, protection or benefit of the minor's estate; but the guardian can in no case bind the minor by a personal covenant.

(2) The natural guardian shall not, without the previous permission of the court,—

---

(j) Other than Hinduism, Jainism, Sikhism or Buddhism.

(k) See § 521 ante.

(l) Sec. 7.

(a) mortgage or charge, or transfer by sale, gift, exchange or otherwise, any part of the immovable property of the minor, or

(b) lease any part of such property for a term exceeding five years or for a term extending more than one year beyond the date on which the minor will attain majority.

(3) Any disposal of immovable property by a natural guardian, in contravention of sub-section (1) or sub-section (2), is voidable at the instance of the minor or any person claiming under him.

(4) No court shall grant permission to the natural guardian to do any of the acts mentioned in sub-section (2) except in case of necessity or for an evident advantage to the minor.

(5) The Guardians and Wards Act, 1890 (8 of 1890), shall apply to and in respect of an application for obtaining the permission of the court under sub-section (2) in all respects as if it were an application for obtaining the permission of the court under section 29 of that Act, and in particular—

(a) proceedings in connection with the application shall be deemed to be proceedings under that Act within the meaning of section 4A thereof;

(b) the court shall observe the procedure and have the powers specified in sub-sections (2), (3) and (4) of section 31 of that Act; and

(c) an appeal shall lie from an order of the court refusing permission to the natural guardian to do any of the acts mentioned in sub-section (2) of this section to the court to which appeals ordinarily lie from the decisions of that court.

(6) In this section, "court" means the city civil court or a district court or a court empowered under section 4A of the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890 (8 of 1890), within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the immovable property in respect of which the application is made is situate, and where the immovable property is situate within the jurisdiction of more than one such court, means the court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate.

Powers of natural guardian.—The powers of a natural guardian under Hindu law as hitherto applied have been dealt with in §§ 528-531 ante. The rights of a natural guardian under that law as interpreted by the Courts were comparatively very wide. The natural guardian, as must have been seen from § 528, could mortgage, charge, sell or otherwise dispose of the immovable property of the minor, even without the sanction of the Court, provided the alienation or any other dealing with such property by the guardian was for the benefit of the minor's estate. Reference has been made to the subject in the Introductory Note to the commentary on this Act and as already pointed out the powers of the natural guardian in the matter of dealing with the immovable property of the minor were not affected by the limitations enacted in section 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act which relate to a guardian appointed or declared by the Court. Sub-section (1) of the present section lays down the rule relating to the general powers of a natural guardian in language which is in pari materia with that in section 27 of the Guardians and Wards Act. Reference may be made to cases decided under section 27 of the Guardians and Wards Act.

The section deals with the 'minor's estate' or the 'immovable property of the minor'. It does not apply to the undivided interest of the minor in any joint family property as a coparcener. It can apply to definite property of which the minor is the owner. It does not affect the right of the manager or Karta of the joint family who can alienate joint family property so as to bind the interest of the minor coparcener provided the alienation is for legal necessity or for the benefit of the estate (*l*1). Reference may be made to section 12 infra and Notes thereunder.

Personal covenant.—In numerous cases which were considered under the Guardians and Wards Act and particularly section 27 of that enactment, it was held that although it was within the competence of a guardian to bind the minor's estate by contracts entered into for the purpose of realisation, protection or benefit of the estate, the guardian had no power to bind the minor by personal covenants. The position under Hindu law has already been pointed out (m). Sub-section (1) of the present section expressly rules that the natural guardian can in no case bind the minor by any personal covenant. Reference may be made to cases on the subject decided under section 27 of the Guardians and Wards Act.

Sub-section (2): Limitation of powers of natural guardian.—The effect of this sub-section read with section 5 of the Act is to supersede the law relating to the powers of a natural guardian in the matter of disposal of the immovable property of the minor hitherto applied in case of Hindu minors. It is now laid down in express and explicit terms that the natural guardian cannot, without the previous sanction of the Court, mortgage or charge, or transfer by sale, gift, exchange or otherwise any part of the immovable property of the minor: nor can he, without such previous sanction, lease any part of such property for any term exceeding five years or for a term extending more than one year beyond the date on which the minor attains majority. Application for the sanction of the Court cannot be made by an intending purchaser or other transferee; only the natural guardian would have to apply for sanction (*m*1).

For purchase of property for a minor, no permission of the court is necessary. The court can enforce specific performance of any such agreement by the natural guardian (mother) where it is satisfied that the purchase

---

(*l*1) Subramaniam v. Krishnaswami ('72) A.M. 377.

(m) § 529 ante.

(*m*1) Shivamurthi v. Vijayasing ('72) A.B. 152.

is for the benefit of the minor having regard to all the facts and circumstances of the case (*mm*1).

Sub-section (3).—This sub-section is a corollary to the limitations enacted in sub-section (2). Any dealing by a natural guardian with the immovable property of the minor, in contravention of the rule laid down in sub-section (2) is not binding on the minor. Any transfer prohibited by this sub-section can be avoided by the minor and it is not incumbent on the minor to file a suit simply for the purpose of avoiding the same (*m*2).

The rule is enacted for the benefit and protection of the minor. Any such transaction in contravention of the provisions of this sub-section is, however, not void for in such a case the minor may lose the benefit of the same even if it was to his advantage, but is only rendered voidable at his instance and the minor may, therefore, repudiate it or adopt it if he so chooses.

In the undermentioned case it has been held that an alienation by a de facto guardian being void under section 11 and not merely voidable, it cannot be ratified by the minor on attaining majority (*m*3).

Sub-sections (4) and (5): Sanction of Court: Practice.—Sub-section (4) lays down the rule that the power vested in the Court, to sanction any mortgage, charge or transfer of any immovable property of the minor or any lease of such property for a term longer than that mentioned in clause (b) of sub-section (2), is to be exercised only if it is satisfied that creation of such mortgage, charge, transfer or lease is a matter of necessity or to do so is to the evident advantage of the minor. The language of this sub-section is in pari materia with that in sub-section (1) of section 31 of the Guardians and Wards Act. Sub-sections (4) and (5) have to be read together. Sub-section (5) rules that any application for such sanction by the Court under the present section shall be disposed of as if it were in all respects an application under sub-section (2) of section 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act. Sub-sections (2) to (4) of section 31 of the Guardians and Wards Act contain rules which lay down the practice to be followed by the Court before granting such sanction and the conditions which the Court may in its discretion impose in case of any such proposed disposal of the minor's immovable property. Sub-sections (2) to (4) of that section are as under:

> "(2) The order granting the permission shall recite the necessity or advantage, as the case may be, describe the property with respect to which the act permitted is to be done, and specify such conditions, if any, as the Court may see fit to attach to the permission; and it shall be recorded, dated and signed by the Judge of the Court with his own hand, or, when from any cause he is prevented from recording the order with his own hand, shall be taken down in writing from his dictation, and be dated and signed by him.
>
> (3) The Court may, in its discretion, attach to the permission the following among other conditions, namely:—

---

(*mm*1) Radheyshyam v. Kiran Bala ('71) A.C 341.

(*m*2) Santha v. Cherukutty ('72) A. Kerala 71.

(*m*3) Talari Erappa v. Muthyalappa ('72) A. Mys. 31.

(a) that a sale shall not be completed without the sanction of the Court;

(b) that a sale shall be made to the highest bidder by public auction, before the Court or some person specially appointed by the Court for that purpose, at a time and place to be specified by the Court after such proclamation of the intended sale as the Court, subject to any rules made under this Act by the High Court, directs;

(c) that a lease shall not be made in consideration of a premium or shall be made for such terms of years, and subject to such rents and covenants, as the Court directs;

(d) that the whole or any part of the proceeds of the act permitted shall be paid into the Court by the guardian, to be disbursed therefrom, or to be invested by the Court on prescribed securities or to be otherwise disposed as the Court directs.

(4) Before granting permission to a guardian to do an act mentioned in section 29, the Court may cause notice of the application for the permission to be given to any relative or friend of the ward who should, in its opinion, receive notice thereof, and shall hear and record the statement of any person who appears in opposition to the application."

Clause (b) of sub-section (5) of the present section in terms states that in the matter of granting such sanction the Court must observe the procedure and can exercise the powers specified in the provisions of section 31 of the Guardians and Wards Act (set out above). Clause (a) of sub-section (5) of the present section in effect incorporates the provisions of section 4A of the Guardians and Wards Act which inter alia empower the High Court to confer jurisdiction on subordinate judicial officers to dispose of any proceedings under the Guardians and Wards Act. Clause (c) of sub-section (5) of the present section relates to appeals from orders refusing sanction to a natural guardian in any application to the Court as required by the present section when he wants to mortgage, charge or otherwise transfer any immovable property of the minor or grant a lease of the same for a term longer than that mentioned in clause (b) of sub-section (2) on the ground that it is necessary to do so or that it is evidently to the advantage of the minor to do so.

Sub-section (6)—"Court".—This sub-section relates to the question of forum for an application for the requisite sanction of the Court. The application may be made to a city civil court, or a district court, or a court empowered by the High Court or a court to which the matter is transferred under the provisions of section 4A of the Guardians and Wards Act. The application may be made to any of these courts within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the immovable property in respect of which the application is made is situate; and if the property is situate within the local limits of more than one such court the application may be made to any of such courts.

9. (1) A Hindu father entitled to act as the natural guardian of his minor legitimate children may, by will, appoint a guardian for any of them in respect of the minor's person or in respect of the minor's property [other than the undivided interest referred to in section 12 (*m*1)] or in respect of both.

Testamentary guardians and their powers.

(2) An appointment made under sub-section (1) shall have no effect if the father predeceases the mother, but shall revive, if the mother dies without appointing, by will, any person as guardian.

(3) A Hindu widow entitled to act as the natural guardian of her minor legitimate children, and a Hindu mother entitled to act as the natural guardian of her minor legitimate children by reason of the fact that the father has become disentitled to act as such, may, by will, appoint a guardian for any of them in respect of the minor's person or in respect of the minor's property (other than the undivided interest referred to in section 12) or in respect of both.

(4) A Hindu mother entitled to act as the natural guardian of her minor illegitimate children may, by will, appoint a guardian for any of them in respect of the minor's person or in respect of the minor's property or in respect of both.

(5) The guardian so appointed by will has the right to act as the minor's guardian after the death of the minor's father or mother, as the case may be, and to exercise all the rights of a natural guardian under this Act to such extent and subject to such restrictions, if any, as are specified in this Act and in the will.

(6) The right of the guardian so appointed by will shall, where the minor is a girl, cease on her marriage.

Testamentary guardians and their powers.—The right of a Hindu father to appoint a testamentary guardian of his minor children and the powers of such guardian under Hindu law as hitherto applied have been dealt with in § 532 ante. The rights of such testamentary guardian under that law as interpreted by the Courts were comparatively very wide. The testamentary guardian, as must have been seen from § 532, could deal with the minor's property subject only to such restrictions as were imposed by the will. In the absence of any such restrictions he exercised powers similar to those of a natural guardian. The testamentary guardian could, therefore, in the absence of any restrictions in the will, mortgage, sell or otherwise dispose of the immovable property of the minor, even without the sanction of the Court, provided the alienation or any other dealing with such property by the guardian was for the benefit of the minor's estate. Reference has been made to the subject in the Introductory Note to the commentary on this Act. The powers of a testamentary guardian under the Guardians and Wards Act are only subject to the restrictions imposed by the will unless he is also declared to be a guardian by an order of the Court. In the latter case his powers are controlled by the relevant provisions of that Act. Section 28 of that Act is as follows:

---

(*m*1) Also see f.n. (*f*5) at p. 963.

> "Where a guardian has been appointed by will or other instrument, his power to mortgage or charge, or transfer by sale, gift, exchange or otherwise immovable property belonging to his ward, is subject to any restriction which may be imposed by the instrument, unless he has, under this Act, been declared guardian, and the Court which made the declaration, permits him, by an order in writing, notwithstanding the restriction, to dispose of any immovable property specified in the order in a manner permitted by the order."

The present section brings about some important changes in the law relating to testamentary guardians of a Hindu minor. The right of a Hindu father to appoint, by will, a guardian of the person as well as the property of his minor children is reiterated in sub-section (1). The position affecting the undivided interest of the minor in joint family property is different and no testamentary guardian can be appointed by the father of any such interest of his minor children (section 12). Sub-sections (2), (3) and (4) of the present section relate to the rights of the mother to appoint a testamentary guardian of a minor child. Sub-section (5) which is the vital clause in this section imposes the same restrictions on the powers of a testamentary guardian of a Hindu minor as are now by section 8 imposed on the powers of a natural guardian in the matter of dealing with and disposal of a minor's immovable property. The powers of a testamentary guardian are moreover subject to the restrictions that may be imposed by the will. Sub-section (6) rules that the rights of a testamentary guardian of a minor girl cease on her marriage. After marriage her husband becomes her natural guardian.

Sub-sections (1) and (2).—Sub-section (1) reaffirms the right of a Hindu father to appoint, by will, a guardian of his legitimate minor children in respect of the person as well as the property of such minors. Being the natural guardian of such children he is entitled to exercise this power unless he has become disentitled to act as the natural guardian of the minors by operation of the proviso to section 6 or any other provision of law which may disentitle him to act as such natural guardian, as for instance where he is removed from guardianship by an order of the Court. A father cannot, however, after the coming into operation of this Act, appoint a testamentary guardian for his minor children so as to exclude the mother from her right to act as the natural guardian of the children after the father [section 6(a)]. It will be seen from sub-section (3) that the present Act confers also on the mother in certain circumstances the right to appoint a testamentary guardian of the minor children. Moreover that sub-section gives full effect to the rights of the mother to act as the natural guardian of the minor children after the father and rules that after the death of the father she as a Hindu widow has the right to appoint, by will, a guardian in respect of the person as well as the property of the minor children. Sub-section (2) in terms lays down the rule that an appointment of a testamentary guardian by the father shall not have effect if the father predeceases the mother. In case the mother dies without appointing by her will, a guardian for the minor children, the appointment made by the father, in his will, is revived and such testamentary guardian will be entitled to act as the guardian of the minor children after the mother's death.

As to guardianship in respect of the undivided interest of a minor in joint family property the position is different. The position under Hindu law as interpreted by the courts was not quite clear though the preferable view was that the father had no power to appoint a guardian by his will of joint property [§ 532 (3) J. Sub-section (1) of the present section now expressly excludes the undivided interest of minor children in joint family property from its operation so that the father has no right to appoint, by his will, a guardian of the undivided interest of a minor in joint family property. Reference may also be made to Notes under section 12 which rules that the Court has no power to appoint a guardian for the minor in respect of such undivided interest where the property is under the management of an adult member of the family. This restriction on the powers of the Court does not affect the jurisdiction of a High Court to appoint a guardian in respect of such interest.

Sub-section (3).—The effect of this sub-section is to enlarge the rights of the mother who next to the father is the natural guardian of the minor children. It is laid down in sub-section (2) that any appointment of a testamentary guardian by the father shall have no effect if he predeceased the mother with the result that it is not now competent to the father by his will to appoint a testamentary guardian of the person and property of the minor children so as to exclude the right of the mother to act as their natural guardian. The first part of the present sub-section in express terms recognizes the right of the mother after the death of the father to appoint a guardian by will, in respect of the person as well as the property of the minor children [notwithstanding any appointment of a testamentary guardian that may have been made by the father (sub-section 2)]. A mother has also the right to act as the natural guardian of the minor children where the father has become disentitled (for instance by ceasing to be a Hindu or renouncing the world) to act as the natural guardian of the children and the latter part of the present sub-section in terms confers on her in such case the right to appoint a guardian, by will, in respect of the person as well as the property of the minor children. Under the law as previously applied the mother had no right to nominate a guardian by will [§ 532(1)].

Sub-section (4).—Both under the Hindu law as previously applied and under the present Act the mother is the natural guardian of her illegitimate children [section 6(b)] and it is only in case of the death of the mother or her becoming disentitled to act as such guardian that the father can act as the natural guardian of his illegitimate children. The present sub-section rules that a mother entitled to act as the natural guardian of her minor illegitimate children may, by will, appoint a guardian in respect of the person as well as the property of such children. The father has no right in any case to appoint a testamentary guardian of his illegitimate children. Reference may also be made to section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act and the Notes thereunder as to legitimacy of children of void and voidable marriages.

Sub-section (5).—This is the vital clause in the section and materially affects the rights of a testamentary guardian of a Hindu minor as previously recognized under Hindu law and section 28 of the Guardians and Wards Act. Under the law as previously applied in case of testamentary guardians the view was taken that the testamentary guardian derived his powers of management not only from the will of the father but also from the principle of Hindu law enuniciaed by the Privy Council in the case of Hunooman Persaud Pandey (n) and in several other later cases (o). Hindu law conferred on the guardian not in his own interest but in the interest of the minor ward comparatively large powers over even the immovable property of the minor under his management. Though a limited and qualified power to be exercised solely for the benefit of the minor's estate or in case of necessity, yet it was wide enough to include an authority to charge, mortgage or even sell a sufficient portion of it, if circumstances warranted the exercise of such power. It was held in cases under this head that where the will did not impose any further restrictions or limitations on the exercise of this power in the matter of the disposal of the immovable property belonging to the minor the testamentary guardian could alienate such property in case of need or for the benefit of the minor's estate.

Incapacity of minor to act as guardian of property.

10. A minor shall be incompetent to act as guardian of the property of any minor.

Incapacity of minor to act as guardian of property.—This section lays down in express terms that a minor, that is a person who has not completed the age of eighteen years [s. 4(a),] is incompetent to act as guardian of the property of any minor. It supersedes to a large extent the rule laid down in section 21 of the Guardians and Wards Act. That section by implication recognizes the right of a minor to act as the guardian of the property of his minor wife or child. That section also assumes by implication that a minor is competent to be the "managing member of an undivided Hindu family" and that he is, as such manager, competent to be the guardian of the minor wife or child of another minor member of that family. It was observed in a decision of the Madras High Court: "It does seem anomalous that a minor could be the guardian of the person of his wife and children, that is entitled to the custody of their persons and the management of their properties while his own person is subject to the custody of the legal guardian of his person and his properties are under the management of the legal guardian of his properties." It was suggested in that case that the right of a minor to act as a guardian should be confined over his wife and child to the control of their persons and he should have no power to interfere with the management of their properties (p). This section would seem substantially to adopt that suggestion. A Hindu minor, therefore, now has no capacity to act as the guardian of the property of any person. He can only act as the natural guardian of the person of his minor wife and children. This section, however, only postulates the incompetency of the minor to be the guardian of the

---

(n) 6 M.I.A. 393.
(o) Ramanathan v. Palaniappa ('39) A.M. 531.
(p) Ibrahim v. Ibrahim (1916) 39 Mad. 608, 614.

property of any other minor. He can, therefore be the karta and manager of a Joint Hindu family. Section 21 of the Guardians and Wards Act is based upon that positive assumption (q).

De facto guardian not to deal with minor's property.

11. After the commencement of this Act, no person shall be entitled to dispose of, or deal with, the property of a Hindu minor merely on the ground of his or her being the de facto guardian of the minor.

De facto guardian.—This section brings about material change in the law relating to de facto guardians or de facto managers of a Hindu minor's estate by enacting in express terms that after the commencement of this Act, no person has the right or authority to do any act as a de facto guardian of such minor. Any act done by a de facto guardian or a de facto manager of a minor Hindu, before this Act came into operation, is not affected by the section and will be binding on the minor if it was for necessity or for the benefit of the minor's estate (r). A person who is not an ad hoc guardian but manages the affairs of an infant in the same way as a de jure guardian does can be described as a de facto guardian although he is not a natural guardian or a testamentary guardian or a guardian appointed by the Court. Strictly speaking there is in law nothing like a de facto guardian. Although the expression has been used in a number of decisions of courts any such person who takes upon himself the general management of a minor may more appropriately be described as de facto manager. The expression aptly describes the relations and friends who are interested in a minor who has no legal guardian and who out of love and affection for him assume superintendence and management of his estate. A de facto manager must be distinguished from a person who is in no way attached to the minor by any ties of affinity and is a mere intermeddler with his estate (s). In Hunooman Persaud Pandey's case (t) the Privy Council ruled that a de facto guardian had the same power of alienating the property of his ward as a natural guardian. The reasons for recognising the rule relating to the authority of a de facto manager of a minor's estate as also the demerits of the rule were discussed in a number of cases and by the Federal Court in Kondamudi v. Myneni (u). The present section now does away with the authority of any person to deal with or dispose of any property of a Hindu minor on the ground of his being the de facto guardian of such minor. It has accordingly been held that an alienee from a de facto guardian would now be governed by this section and any alienation so made after the commencement of this Act would be void ab initio and the alienee would acquire no title to the property (*u*1).

Reference may be made to §§ 538 and 538A ante.

---

(q) Budhi Jena v. Dhobai Naik ('58) A. Orissa 7.

(r) See § 538 ante.

(s) Kondamudi v. Myneni (1949) 11 F.C.R. 65, ('49) A.F.C. 218. Also see Rajalakshmi v. Ramachandran ('67) A.M. 113; Kusa Paride v. Baishnab ('66) A. Orissa 60.

(t) 6 M.I.A. 393.

(u) See f.n. (s) above.

(*u*1) Daneyi Gurumurty v. Raghu Podhan ('67) A. Orissa 68.

Guardian not to be appointed for minor's undivided interest in joint family property.

12. Where a minor has an undivided interest in joint family property and the property is under the management of an adult member of the family, no guardian shall be appointed for the minor in respect of such undivided interest (u2):

Provided that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the jurisdiction of a High Court to appoint a guardian in respect of such interest.

Guardian of minor's undivided coparcenary interest.—This section substantially reaffirms the law on the subject as previously interpreted by Courts. If the minor is a member of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, the father as karta and manager of the joint family is entitled to the management of the whole coparcenary property including the minor's interest. After the father's death the management of the coparcenery property, including the minor's interest therein, passes to the eldest son as karta. The mother is not entitled to the custody of the undivided interest of her minor son in the joint property, because such property is not separate property, though she is as a natural guardian entitled to the custody of his person and of his separate property, if any. If all the coparceners are minors the Court may appoint a guardian of the whole of the joint property until one of them attains majority. On any one of the coparceners attaining majority, the guardianship of the property constituted by the Court ceases, and the Court is bound to hand over the joint family property to the adult coparcener, notwithstanding the fact that there are other minor coparceners. The reason why a guardian cannot be appointed by the Court of the undivided interest of a minor in coparcenary property in cases governed by the Mitakshara law is that the interest of a member of a joint Mitakshara family is not separate or individual property. Such cases are governed by the general principles of the law relating to joint family property. The subject has been dealt with in §§ 519 and 536 ante. Reference may also be made to §537 ante which deals with the inherent powers of a Chartered High Court in the matter of appointing guardian of a minor's undivided coparcenary interest in certain circumstances. The present section lays down in effect that the Court cannot appoint a guardian of the undivided interest of a minor coparcener in the joint family property where the property is under the management of an adult member of the family.

The High Court of Mysore did not have and does not have any jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for a Hindu minor in respect of his undivided interest in a joint family property which is in the management of an adult member of the family (v).

---

(u2) See f.n. (f5) at p. 963, supra.

(u) Govindappa v. Doddathayappa ('68) A. Mys. 178.

Welfare of minor to be paramount consideration.

13. (1) In the appointment or declaration of any person as guardian of a Hindu minor by a court, the welfare of the minor shall be the paramount consideration.

(2) No person shall be entitled to the guardianship by virtue of the provisions of this Act or of any law relating to guardianship in marriage among Hindus, if the court is of opinion that his or her guardianship will not be for the welfare of the minor.

Welfare of the minor to be paramount consideration.—The Act, as already pointed out, contains provisions which are supplementary to the law relating to guardians laid down in the Guardians and Wards Act. It does not specifically deal with the question of the powers of the Court to appoint or declare guardians or other questions relating to the general law on the subject of guardianship. Section 7 of the Guardians and Wards Act deals with the powers of the Court to appoint guardians and section 17 states matters to be considered by the Court in appointing guardians. Both the sections emphasize that the powers of the Court are to be exercised for the welfare of the minor which should be the paramount consideration in the appointment and declaration of any person as guardian of a minor. The present section does not lay down any new rule or principle but reiterates the salutary rule and is evidently intended to emphasize the importance of that general rule which is the key-stone of the whole law on the subject. In all matters relating to the custody and upbringing of the minor as well as the administration and management of the minor's property the primary and paramount consideration for the Court must be the welfare of the minor. Reference may be made to Notes under section 6(a) ante.

This section makes it quite clear that in all cases, irrespective of the status of the person claiming guardianship (e.g. father), the welfare of the minor would be the paramount consideration and if necessary section 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act will have to be read subject to this section (w).

---

(w) Sunil Kumar v. Satirani ('69) A.C. 573. Also see Lalta Prasad v. Ganga Sahai ('73) A. Raj. 93.

THE HINDU ADOPTIONS AND MAINTENANCE ACT, 1956

No. 78 OF 1956

ARRANGEMENT OF SECTIONS

CHAPTER I

Preliminary

SECTIONS

1. Short title and extent.
2. Application of Act.
3. Definitions.
4. Over-riding effect of Act.

CHAPTER II

Adoption

5. Adoptions to be regulated by this Chapter.
6. Requisites of a valid adoption.
7. Capacity of a male Hindu to take in adoption.
8. Capacity of a female Hindu to take in adoption.
9. Persons capable of giving in adoption.
10. Persons who may be adopted.
11. Other conditions for a valid adoption.

SECTIONS

12. Effects of adoption.
13. Right of adoptive parents to dispose of their properties.
14. Determination of adoptive mother in certain cases.
15. Valid adoption not to be cancelled.
16. Presumption as to registered documents relating to adoption.
17. Prohibition of certain payments.

CHAPTER III

Maintenance

18. Maintenance of wife.
19. Maintenance of widowed daughter-in-law.
20. Maintenance of children and aged parents.
21. Dependants defined.
22. Maintenance of dependants.
23. Amount of maintenance.
24. Claimant to maintenance should be a Hindu.
25. Amount of maintenance may be altered on change of circumstances.
26. Debts to have priority.
27. Maintenance when to be a charge.
28. Effect of transfer of property on right to maintenance.

CHAPTER IV

Repeals and Savings

29. Repeals.
30. Savings.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

"He whom his father and mother give to another as his son, provided that the donee have no issue, if the boy be of the same class, and affectionately disposed is considered as a son given, the gift being confirmed by pouring water."

—Manu.

"But let no man give or accept an only son, since he must remain to raise up a progeny for the obsequies of ancestors. Nor let a woman give or accept a son, unless with the assent of her lord. He who means to adopt a son must assemble his kinsmen, give humble notice to the king, and then having made an oblation to fire with words from the Veda, in the midst of his dwelling house, he may receive as his son by adoption, a boy nearly allied to him or (on failure of such) even one remotely allied."

—Vasistha.

"The aged parents, a virtuous wife, and an infant child must be maintained even by doing a hundred misdeeds."

—Manu cited in the Mitakshara

Adoption is the admission of a stranger by birth to the privileges of a child by a legally recognized form of affiliation. Amongst the ancient Greeks and Romans and also some modern nations adoption is placed under legal regulation. Under Roman law the effect of adoption was to create the legal relation of father and son, just as if a person adopted was born of the blood of the adopter in lawful marriage. The adopted son took the name of his adopter and was bound to perform his adoptive father's religious duties. Arrogatio under early Roman law had to be in accordance with prescribed formulæ and took place in public with the sanction of the people in comitia curiata.

Adoption in Hindu law.

Marriage and sonship constitute some of the unique chapters in the litera legis of ancient Hindu law which recognised twelve kinds of sons of which there were five kinds of adopted sons. Modern Hindu law recognized the aurasa or legitimate son begotten by the man himself on the lawfully wedded wife. Of the adopted sons it recognized only two kinds, the dattaka and the kritrima. The dattaka form prevailed all over India; the kritrima form prevailed in Mithila and adjoining districts. It may be of some interest to notice that in ancient times a daughter also could be adopted. Nanda Pandit in his Dattaka Mimansa has favoured adoption of a daughter and regards it as conducive to spiritual benefit to the adopter and his ancestors. This is on the principle that a daughter given in marriage, which is called kanyadana, and a son given in adoption, which is called putradana, stand on the same footing being gifts for religious and secular purposes and the same consideration should apply to the gift of a daughter in adoption in order to secure spiritual benefit to the donee through the adopted daughter's son. An outstanding feature of the present Act is that it recognizes adoption both of a son and a daughter.

Maintenance of dependants.

The doctrine of maintenance has always been favoured by Hindu jurisprudentes. They speak of and insist upon the maintenance and support of various members of the family and lay down a number of beneficient injunctions. They draw a distinction between the dependants and lay down in mandatory tone the rule that it is the duty of a man to support his wife, aged parents and infant children. In case of other dependants the injunctions are only preceptive. Modern Hindu law recognized the rule that a Hindu is under a legal obligation to maintain his wife, his minor sons, his unmarried daughters and his aged parents whether he possesses any property or not. The obligation to maintain these dependants is personal in character, and arises from the very existence of the relationship between the parties. The present Act lays down mandatory rules for maintenance of the wife (a) on the same lines and imposes the duty of maintaining legitimate as well as illegitimate minor children, on both the parents (b). It also imposes the duty of maintaining aged or infirm parents on both a son and a daughter (c). The Hindu Succession Act, 1956, now puts a son and a daughter on par in matters of succession and does not draw any distinction between male and female heirs. A logical corollary to the rights of women to be in equali jura is that the obligation of maintenance of certain close relations should rest on male as well as female Hindus and the estate of a deceased male as well as a female Hindu should be liable for maintenance of the dependants of such deceased person. 'Maintenance' is defined in a comprehensive manner and includes provision for food, clothing, residence, education and medical attendance and treatment; in the case of an unmarried daughter it includes reasonable expenses of and incident to her marriage (d).

The Act applies not only to Hindus by religion but to a wide category of persons including Jains, Sikhs and Buddhists (e). It amends and codifies the law relating to adoptions and maintenance and gives overriding application to the provisions on the two subjects contained in it. In the law of adoption it brings about some fundamental and important changes and the result is that immediately on the coming into operation of the Act the law on the subjects of adoptions and maintenance hitherto applicable to Hindus whether by virtue of any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or any custom or usage having force of law ceases to have effect with respect to all matters dealt with in it. The Act also supersedes the rules on the subjects of adoption and maintenance contained in any Central or State enactment and any other law in force immediately before it came into operation by enacting that all other law shall cease to apply to Hindus in so far as it is inconsistent with any provisions contained in the Act (f).

Wide and extensive application of the Act.

The present enactment is part of the scheme of codification of certain parts of Hindu law (g). The Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, codifies the law on the subject of marriage and divorce: The Hindu Succession Act, 1956, codifies the law relating to intestate succession: The Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, codifies certain parts of the law relating to minority and guardianship among Hindus: and the present enactment deals with adoptions and maintenance, two subjects which are not related to one another but are presumably clustered solely to keep down the number of the new statutes Scheme of the recent legislation.

---

(a) Section 18.
(b) Section 20(2).
(c) Section 20(3).
(d) Section 3(b).
(e) Section 2.
(f) Section 4.
(g) See pp. 68-70, ante and p. 989 infra.

forming part of the scheme of codification of Hindu law. It will be noticed that these four enactments leave an undetermined residue.

Requirements of valid adoption under previous law.

The requirements of a valid adoption under the law applicable before the commencement of this Act as to capacity of the parties were that the persons taking and giving a son in adoption must have the legal capacity and right to do so and the person adopted should be lawfully capable of being taken in adoption. Only a male Hindu had the right to adopt a son provided he had no son, grandson or great-grandson natural or adopted living at the time of adoption. A wife could adopt a son to her husband but she could not do so during her husband's lifetime without his express consent. After his death, she could adopt a son to him, in certain parts of India, only if he had expressly authorized her to do so. In other parts of India, she could adopt without such authority. But in no case could a wife or a widow adopt a son to herself; the adoption had to be made to her husband. An adoption by a woman married or unmarried of a son to herself was invalid and conferred no legal rights upon the person adopted. A daughter could not be adopted by a male or a female Hindu. The physical act of giving was a prime necessity of the ceremonial requirements relating to adoption. As to datta homam, that is, oblations of clarified butter to fire, the law was not finally settled and there was divergence of judicial opinion. On the question of capacity to adopt also there was some difference of opinion on certain aspects of the matter. The law as to adoption by a widow and her authority to adopt was different in different States. On this and a number of other questions relating to the requirements of a valid adoption the law was not uniform and it was eminently desirable that the law on the subject should be uniform and comprehensive and contained in a series of coherent propositions carefully considered and authoritatively stated by the supreme legislature.

Woman treated as in equali jura.

With the passing of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, which treats sons and daughters equally in the matter of succession, it was only logical that the fundamental guarantee of equality of status and equality before the law should be recognized also in the matter of adoptions and concrete shape should be given to the rights of women to be in equali jura in this branch of the law. The Act now provides for adoption of boys as well as girls. The law on the subject of adoption by a widow as interpreted by Courts had the effect of divesting certain estates already vested in others and had been the cause of much ruinous litigation. A widow can now adopt a son or daughter to herself, in her own right, but there is no question of divesting any property vested in any person or even herself by reason simply of the fact that subsequent to such vesting an adoption has been made. The present Act has considerably simplified the law on the subject. It has also the merit of giving a uniform code on the subject for the whole of India.

Chapter II of the Act codifies the law of adoption and contains a fasciculus of rules relating to the capacity and right of a male and female Hindu to take in adoption a son or daughter who must be a 'Hindu', an expression to be understood in the wide comprehensive meaning given to it in the Act. It also deals with the subjects of persons who may give in adoption and persons who may be taken in adoption. One principal provision of the Chapter relates to the formal and ceremonial requirements of the act of adoption. Another vital provision lays down the result and effects of a valid adoption. It is made abundantly clear that all adoptions made after the Act came into operation are to be regulated and governed by the provisions contained in the Chapter and that any adoption thereafter made in contravention of any of those provisions would be null and void (h). An adoption which is void does not affect the status or rights of any of the parties (i). It creates no rights in favour of the adoptee boy or girl in the adoptive family. Nor does the adoptee lose any rights in the family of his or her birth. Adoptions made prior to the coming into force of the Act on 21st December 1956 are not affected by the rules relating to the validity and effect of adoptions contained in this Act. Their validity and effect must be determined by the law as it stood before the Act came into operation (j).

Scheme of the Chapter on adoptions.

The requirements of a valid adoption under the Act are—

Requirements of a valid adoption under the Act.

(1) The person adopting must have the right to take and be lawfully capable of taking a son or daughter in adoption (Ss. 7, 8):

(2) The person giving in adoption must be lawfully capable of doing so (s. 9):

(3) The person adopted must be lawfully capable of being taken in adoption (s. 10):

(4) The conditions relating to adoption including actual giving and taking of the child with the intention of transferring the child from the family of its birth must be complied with (s. 11).

Every male Hindu who is of sound mind and has attained majority by completing his age of eighteen years may lawfully take a son in adoption, provided he has no Hindu son, grandson or great-grandson natural or adopted living at the time of adoption; and if he has a wife living he can adopt only with her consent unless she is on account of mental incapacity unable to give consent or has disabled herself from giving requisite consent by renouncing the world or ceasing to be a Hindu. So also every male Hindu who is of sound mind and has attained majority may lawfully take a daughter in adoption provided he has no Hindu daughter or son's daughter (natural born or adopted) living at the time of adoption and subject to the same requirement about the wife's consent (k).

Capacity of male Hindu to adopt son as well as daughter.

It is competent now under the Act to a female Hindu who is of sound mind and has completed the age of eighteen years to take a son or daughter in adoption to herself and in her own right. If she is married she cannot adopt a son or a daughter during the lifetime of her husband unless the husband is of unsound mind or has renounced the world. A female Hindu who is unmarried or a widow or a divorcee has the capacity to Capacity of female Hindu to adopt son as well as daughter.

---

(h) S. 5(1).
(i) S. 5(2).
(i) S. 30.
(k) S. 7; S. 11(1); S. 11(2).

adopt a son to herself, in her own right, provided she has not a Hindu son, grandson or great grandson living at the time of adoption. So also she has the capacity to adopt a daughter to herself, in her own right, provided she has no Hindu daughter or son's daughter living at the time of adoption (l).

Who can give in adoption.

The capacity to give a son or daughter in adoption is principally confined to the father and the mother of the child and even an only child may be given in adoption. One change brought about by the Act in the matter of this requirement is that where both the parents are dead or disabled from exercising the right by reason of mental incapacity or renunciation of the world, the testamentary guardian or a guardian appointed or declared by the court can now give the ward in adoption with the previous sanction of the court. No such sanction would be granted unless the court is satisfied that the adoption will be for the welfare of the minor (m).

Persons who may be adopted.

The person to be adopted may be a male or a female. He or she must be a Hindu and one who has not already been adopted, and must be unmarried and must not have completed the age of fifteen years. The last two requirements are not absolute in the sense that if there is a custom or usage applicable to the parties which permits of a married person or a person who has completed the age of fifteen years being adopted, the adoption of any such person will be valid (n). The same child cannot be adopted simultaneously by two or more persons (o). Some other conditions relating to the age of the child to be adopted are that in case of adoption by a male the adoptee daughter must be at least twenty-one years younger than him (p): and in case of adoption by a female the adoptee son must be at least twenty-one years younger than her (q).

Requisite formality: Giving and taking.

The physical act of giving and receiving of the boy or the girl is absolutely necessary to the validity of an adoption. Mere expression of consent, or the execution of a deed of adoption though registered, but not accompanied by actual delivery of the boy or the girl does not operate as a valid adoption. To constitute an adoption there should be some overt act which signifies the actual delivery of the child with intent to transfer the child from the family of its birth to the family of its adoption. Religious ceremonies are usually performed by making oblations of clarified butter to the fire (datta homam) but the Act does not insist upon the performance of this or any other ceremony or form as essential to the validity of an adoption (r). The actual giving and taking of the child, however, is a requirement and a condition that is absolute. It is of the essence of adoption and the law does not accept any substitute for it.

The objects of adoption of a son were discussed by the smritikars and commentators. They have also been discussed in decisions of courts and are twofold. The first is religious, to secure spiritual benefit to the adopter and

---

(l) S. 8; S. 11(1); S. 11(2).
(m) S. 9.
(n) S. 10.
(o) S. 11(v).
(p) S. 11(iii).
(q) S. 11(iv).
(r) S. 11(vi).

his ancestors by having a son for the purpose of offering funeral cakes and libations of water to the manes of the adopter and his ancestors. The second is secular, to secure an heir and perpetuate the adopter's name. The temporal purpose evidently is the celebrity of the name of the adoptive father who takes him as his son for all purposes.

The result and effects of adoption are notable. After stating the rules relating to capacity of the parties and the requirements of a valid adoption the Act proceeds to lay down the effects and consequence of adoption. An adopted child is to be deemed to be the child of his or her adoptive father or mother for all purposes with effect from the date of adoption. From such date all the ties of the child in the family of his or her birth become severed and similar ties are replaced by those created by the adoption in the adoptive family (s). This fiction of law whereby a status is to be deemed to have been acquired and something is to be deemed to exist which would not otherwise have been so is to be given effect to with all its logical corollaries and all the incidents of the status. Full effect is to be given to the newly acquired status, for instance in matters of succession ex parte paterna as well as ex parte materna in the family of adoption. One important result of the severance of the ties in the family of birth is that the adoptee can no longer claim any right to succeed to the property of his natural father or mother or any of the relations in the family of birth. There are, however, three vital qualifications to the logical effect and corollaries to the general rule that the adoptee is to be deemed for all purposes to be the son or daughter of the adoptive parent: (a) the adopted child is not divested of any property already vested in him or her before the adoption: (b) the adoptee cannot marry any person whom the adoptee could not have married if he or she had continued in the family of birth so that even though the ties in the natural family are severed the bars relating to marriage within prohibited degrees of relationship and sapinda relationship in the family of birth continue to be applicable after the adoption: (c) the adopted child does not divest any person of any property which vested in him or her before the adoption (t). For all purposes the adoption takes effect from the date of the adoption and the vital nature and effect of this last rule cannot be minimised. The principle of divesting of vested estates in consequence of adoption had been the source of much ruinous litigation.

Result and effects of adoption.

The Act also lays down certain other rules to some of which reference may be made here. No adoption which has been validly made can be cancelled by the adoptive father or mother or any other person, nor can the adopted child renounce its status and return to the family of birth (u). Another rule of some importance relates to proof. When there is a registered document placing on record the factum of adoption a presumption is to be raised that the adoption was made in compliance with all the requirements of law. The onus of proving invalidity of the adoption in any such case is on those who challenge the adoption (v).

Some other rules.

---

(s) S. 12.
(t) Provisos to S. 12.
(u) S. 15.
(v) S. 16.

Chapter III of the Act codifies the law of maintenance applicable to Hindus. A Hindu is under the legal obligation to maintain his wife, his minor sons, his unmarried daughters and his aged parents. The obligation is personal. It arises from the very nature of the relationship and exists whether he possesses any property or not. The Act gives statutory form to that obligation and goes further than that and rules that a female Hindu as well as a male Hindu is now under a legal obligation to maintain legitimate or illegitimate children and aged or infirm parents. In the matter of persons who are entitled to claim maintenance under the Act the scheme is to deal in the first place with the right of maintenance of wife from her husband (w); the right of maintenance of minor children (legitimate and illegitimate) from the father and mother (x); and the right of maintenance of aged and infirm parents from their sons and daughters (y). In these cases as also in case of a widowed daughter-in-law the right is against an existing person, husband, father, mother, son, daughter or father-in-law as the case may be. After stating the right of the wife, the minor children and others the Act proceeds to define dependants of a deceased Hindu and lays down rules relating to the right of maintenance of dependants from heirs of a deceased Hindu or other beneficiaries who might have inherited the estate of such deceased person.

Scheme of Chapter on maintenance.

The right of a wife for maintenance is an incident of the status or estate of matrimony and a Hindu is under a legal obligation to maintain his wife. According to the law as applied before the Hindu Married Women's Right to Separate Residence and Maintenance Act, 1946, the duty of the wife to live with her husband was emphasized with greater strictness and she had no right to separate residence or maintenance unless she satisfied the court that the husband had refused or neglected to maintain her in his own place of residence or was guilty of such misconduct as justified her in living separate and apart from him. The Act of 1946 liberalised the law in certain respects in favour of the wife and recognized wider grounds which could justify her claim for separate residence and maintenance. The present enactment lays down rules on the subject which are substantially the same.

Maintenance of wife.

A wife is entitled to live separately from her husband and claim maintenance from him: (a) if he is guilty of desertion, that is to say, of abandoning her without reasonable cause and without her consent or against her wish, or of wilfully neglecting her; (b) if he has treated her with such cruelty as to cause a reasonable apprehension in her mind that it will be harmful or injurious to live with her husband; (c) if he is suffering from a virulent form of leprosy; (d) if he has any other wife living; (e) if he keeps a concubine in the same house in which his wife is living or habitually resides with a concubine elsewhere; (f) if he has ceased to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion; (g) if there is any other cause justifying her living separately (z). The grounds

Wife when entitled to separate residence and maintenance.

---

(w) S. 18.
(x) S. 20.
(y) S. 20.
(z) S. 18(2).

stated here, it will be noticed, are similar to grounds on which the wife can obtain from the court, under the provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, one or other of the reliefs provided for by that enactment. But she is not bound to adopt proceedings for and seek relief by way of judicial separation, or divorce or a decree for annulment of the marriage or even a decree for restitution of conjugal rights and claim maintenance in those proceedings although she may be entitled to do so. She may, if she so chooses, only claim separate residence and maintenance for her and is entitled to the same under the general law relating to maintenance now embodied in this Act.

Maintenance of children and aged parents.

A Hindu male or female is bound, during his or her lifetime to maintain his or her legitimate or illegitimate children and his or her aged or infirm parents. The obligation of a person to maintain aged or infirm parents or an unmarried daughter, extends in so far as the parent or daughter is unable to maintain himself or herself out of his or her own property or earnings (a). Section 19 of the Act states the circumstances in which a daughter-in-law is entitled to claim maintenance from her father-in-law.

Maintenance of dependants of deceased Hindu.

The right of dependants of a male Hindu such as for instance a wife, minor children and aged parents to maintenance by him did not come to an end on his death and it was well-settled law that an heir was legally bound to provide, out of the estate which descended to him, maintenance for those persons whom the late proprietor was legally or morally bound to maintain. The right of a widow, when she did not succeed to her husband's property, was one of considerable importance and consequence. The position and rights of a widow both under the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga has been stated in the relevant chapters of this work. The rights of the widow—one of the three women mentioned in the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937—to claim maintenance was not abolished by that Act in express terms but the effect was that there was little occasion for her to claim maintenance since she was entitled to claim a share on partition. Under the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, a widow is entitled to succeed as one of the preferential heirs along with the son, daughter, mother and other specified heirs and the question of maintenance of a widow and other dependants of the deceased proprietor such as for instance an unmarried daughter, mother or widowed daughter-in-law must now be considered in the context of the provisions of that Act. If her husband was at the time of his death a member of a Mitakshara coparcenary the widow becomes entitled by operation of section 6 of that Act to a share out of the interest of the deceased husband in the coparcenary property on the footing of a notional partition deemed to have taken place immediately before his death. The law on the subject of the rights of the dependants was fairly well-settled but it was necessary that the law should be declared by the Legislature in statutory form in view of the changes brought about by the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, and the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

---

(a) S. 20.

The principal general rule laid down in the Act on this aspect of maintenance is that a dependant of a male or female deceased Hindu, who has not obtained any share in the estate of the deceased, dying after the commencement of this Act, is entitled to claim maintenance from those who take the estate. Such, for instance, would be the case where a Hindu has disposed of his property by will and his dependants such as wife, children or others have not been properly provided for. The dependants of a deceased Hindu entitled to claim maintenance as stated above are: (i) his or her father, (ii) his or her mother; (iii) his widow (so long as she does not remarry); (iv) his or her minor son; (v) the minor son of his predeceased son; (vi) the minor son of a predeceased son of his predeceased son; (vii) his or her unmarried daughter; (viii) the unmarried daughter of his predeceased son; (ix) the unmarried daughter of a predeceased son of his predeceased son; (x) his widowed daughter; (xi) the widow of his predeceased son (so long as she does not remarry); (xii) the widow of a son of his predeceased son (so long as she does not remarry); (xiii) his or her illegitimate minor son; (xiv) his or her illegitimate daughter, so long as she remains unmarried. As a general rule it may be stated that this right of a dependant is enforceable when the dependant is unable to obtain maintenance from the estate of any other person when he or she has a prior right to claim maintenance as a dependant of such other person.

Persons entitled to maintenance as dependants.

There is no yardstick and no rigid rule for assessment of the quantum of maintenance to be paid to any person entitled to the same and the courts have always exercised a wide discretion in the matter. That discretion is, of course, exercised judicially in the light of established principles and upon an equitable view of all the circumstances attending each particular case. The Act lays down that it shall be in the discretion of the court to determine whether any, and if so what, maintenance shall be awarded under the provisions of the Act (b) and deals with the matter under two heads. In determining the amount of maintenance to be awarded to a wife, child or parent, regard must be had to—(a) the position of the parties; (b) the reasonable wants of the claimant; (c) if the claimant is living separately, whether the claimant is justified in doing so; (d) the value of the claimant's property and any income derived from such property, or from the claimant's own earnings or from any other source; (e) the number of persons entitled to maintenance from the husband or father or mother or son or daughter as the case may be (c). In determining the amount of maintenance to be awarded to a dependant regard must be had to—(a) the net value of the estate of the deceased after providing for the payment of his debts; (b) the provision, if any, made under a will of the deceased in respect of the dependant; (c) the degree of relationship between the two; (d) the reasonable wants of the dependant; (e) the past relations between the dependants and the deceased; (f) the value of the property of the dependant and any income derived from such property, or from his or her earnings or from any other source; and (g) the number of dependants entitled to claim maintenance under the Act (d).

Discretion of the Court.

---

(b) S. 23(1).
(c) S. 23(2).
(d) S. 23(2).

The Act also lays down certain other rules to some of which reference may be made here. A dependant's claim for maintenance is not a charge on the estate of the deceased or any portion of the same unless one has been created by the will of the deceased, by a decree of the court or by agreement between the dependant and the owner of the estate or any portion of it (e). Debts contracted or payable by the deceased take precedence over the right of maintenance of any dependant unless there is a valid charge created in respect of the same (f). The amount of maintenance, whether fixed by a decree of the court or by agreement at any time, may be altered if there is a material change in the circumstances justifying such alteration (g).

Some other rules.

(e) S. 27.
(f) S. 26.
(g) S. 25.

THE HINDU ADOPTIONS AND MAINTENANCE ACT, 1956

No. 78 OF 1956

[21*st December*, 1956]

An Act to amend and codify the law relating to adoptions and maintenance among Hindus.

BE it enacted by Parliament in the Seventh Year of the Republic of India as follows:—

Preamble.—A preamble to an enactment of the Legislature was formerly regarded as a key to open the mind of the makers of the Act, and the mischief which they intended to redress. The practice of inserting elaborate preambles in enactments of the Legislature has disappeared and it is now regarded as well settled law that a preamble cannot either restrict or extend the enacting part when the language and scope of an Act are not open to doubt.

Scheme of codification of Hindu law.—The present enactment deals with two subjects, adoptions and maintenance. The enactment is part of the scheme of codification of certain parts of Hindu law (h). The Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, codifies the law on the subject of marriage and divorce: The Hindu Succession Act, 1956, codifies the law relating to intestate succession: The Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, codifies certain parts of the law relating to minority and guardianship among Hindus: and the present enactment deals with adoptions and maintenance two subjects which have no real or practical connection and are not related to one another but are clustered solely to keep down the number of the new statutes forming part of the scheme of codification of Hindu law. It will be noted that these four enactments leave an undetermined residue.

Codifying Act.—It is clear from the preamble that it is intended by the Act not merely to amend but to amend and codify the law relating to adoptions and maintenance. The object of codification of a particular branch of law is that, on any matter specifically dealt with by it, such law should be sought for in the codified enactment itself. Where a statute is expressly said to codify the law, the court as a general rule is not at liberty to go outside the law so created simply because before the existence of the enactment another law prevailed. Reference may be made in this connection to the Notes at pp. 665-666 supra and the decisions there cited.

Question may arise whether this Act is a complete code in the sense of comprehensive legislation dealing with every phase and aspect of the law of adoptions and maintenance. In an Act intituled an Act to amend and codify a particular branch or branches of law, in so far as there is express enactment, that alone must be looked at since the court is bound by it and can look to nothing else and the express enactment must govern the rights of the parties even though it has radically changed or altered or modified the prior law. The Act as has already been pointed out, brought about some important changes in the law on the subjects of adoptions and maintenance previously applied to Hindus. Reference in this connection may be made to section 4 which gives over-riding effect to the provisions of the Act. It follows that with respect to matters for which provision is made in the Act the prior law ceases to have effect to the extent laid down in that section. It also follows that in respect of matters for which no provision is made in the Act the old law must continue to remain applicable though such matters are indeed few.

---

(h) See pp. 68-70 ante.

Rules of interpretation of a statute.—For some of the rules relating to interpretation see Notes at pp. 666-669 supra.

CHAPTER I

PRELIMINARY

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956.

(2) It extends to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

Commencement and extent.—The Act received the assent of the President on 21st December 1956 and came into operation on that day (i).

The Act applies to Hindus in the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir. It will be noticed that the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, states that it applies "also to Hindus domiciled in the territories to which this Act extends who are outside the said territories." The Legislature has not provided in this section for extra territorial application presumably on the ground that it was unnecessary and inappropriate to do so and left the question to be dealt with by principles of international law. The general principle of private international law is that the law of domicil governs personal relations and the lex loci governs matters relating to immovable property.

Application of Act.

2. (1) This Act applies—

(a) to any person, who is a Hindu by religion in any of its forms or developments, including a Virashaiva, a Lingayat or a follower of the Brahmo, Prarthana or Arya Samaj,

(b) to any person who is a Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh by religion, and

(c) to any other person who is not a Muslim, Christian, Parsi or Jew by religion, unless it is proved that any such person would not have been governed by the Hindu law or by any custom or usage as part of that law in respect of any of the matters dealt with herein if this Act had not been passed.

---

(i) S. 5(1)(b). General Clauses Act.

Explanation.—The following persons are Hindus, Buddhists, Jainas or Sikhs by religion, as the case may be:—

(a) any child, legitimate or illegitimate, both of whose parents are Hindus, Buddhists, Jainas or Sikhs by religion;

(b) any child, legitimate or illegitimate, one of whose parents is a Hindu, Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh by religion and who is brought up as a member of the tribe, community, group or family to which such parent belongs or belonged;

(bb) any child, legitimate or illegitimate, who has been abandoned both by his father and mother or whose parentage is not known and who in either case is brought up as a Hindu, Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh (*i*1); and

(c) any person who is a convert or re-convert to the Hindu, Buddhist, Jaina or Sikh religion.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), nothing contained in this Act shall apply to the members of any Scheduled Tribe within the meaning of clause (25) of article 366 of the Constitution unless the Central Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, otherwise directs.

(3) The expression "Hindu" in any portion of this Act shall be construed as if it included a person who, though not a Hindu by religion, is, nevertheless, a person to whom this Act applies by virtue of the provisions contained in this section.

Persons governed by the Act.—It must have been seen from § 6(1) that Hindu law has been applicable to a wide category of persons. The present section substantially codifies the law on the question as it existed at the time of the commencement of this enactment and is in pari materia with the law on the question enacted in section 2(1) (c) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, and the analogous section of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

Reference may be made to Notes under 'Persons governed by the Act' at p. 671 supra.

Reference may also be made to §§ 6 and 7 ante.

Sub-section (1) (a): Hindu.—See pp. 671-672 supra.

Sub-section (1) (b).—See p. 672 supra.

Sub-section (1) (c).—See p. 672 supra.

Explanation (b).—See p. 672 supra.

---

(*i*1) The clause (bb) was inserted by Act 45 of 1962, s. 62.

Explanation (c).—See p. 672 supra.

Sub-section (2): Scheduled Tribes.—See pp. 672-673 supra.

Sub-section (3).—See p. 673 supra.

Definitions.

3. In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires,—

(a) the expressions "custom" and "usage" signify any rule which, having been continuously and uniformly observed for a long time, has obtained the force of law among Hindus in any local area, tribe, community, group or family:

Provided that the rule is certain and not unreasonable or opposed to public policy: and

Provided further that, in the case of a rule applicable only to a family, it has not been discontinued by the family;

(b) "maintenance" includes—

(i) in all cases, provision for food, clothing, residence, education and medical attendance and treatment;

(ii) in the case of an unmarried daughter, also the reasonable expenses of and incident to her marriage;

(c) "minor" means a person who has not completed his or her age of eighteen years.

It will be noticed that the definitions given in this section are not intended merely to economise words. Some of them lay down legal principles.

Unless the context otherwise requires.—The definitions given in this section have to be read subject to the qualification that their application must not be inconsistent with the context or subject-matter. Even when an Act contains a section giving definitions and interpretations the latter may not be applicable in all the contexts. Where there is something repugnant in the context showing that the definition will not fit, the court will give such meaning to the expression as will be more in harmony with the context and allow it to prevail over the "artificial conceptions" of the definition clause.

Clause (a): "Custom": "Usage".—See Notes at pp. 674-675 supra. Also see §§ 16 to 20 ante.

Clause (b): Maintenance.—The definition of 'maintenance' is so worded that it can be rendered applicable to the case of all persons entitled to claim maintenance under the various provisions of the Act. In case of an unmarried daughter it includes both maintenance and reasonable expenses of and incidental to the marriage.

Clause (c): Minor.—The expression "minor", in the context of the provisions of the Act relating both to adoption and maintenance, is to be understood as referable to a person who has not completed his or her age of eighteen years.

Overriding effect of Act.

4. Save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act,—

(a) any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or any custom or usage as part of that law in force immediately before the commencement of this Act shall cease to have effect with respect to any matter for which provision is made in this Act;

(b) any other law in force immediately before the commencement of this Act shall cease to apply to Hindus in so far as it is inconsistent with any of the provisions contained in this Act.

Over-riding effect of the Act.—This section gives over-riding application to the provisions of the Act and in effect lays down that in respect of any of the matters dealt with in the Act it seeks to repeal all existing laws, whether in the shape of enactments or otherwise, which are inconsistent with this Act. As already pointed out the Act brings about some important changes particularly in the law of adoption and the result is that immediately on the coming into operation of the Act the law of adoption and maintenance hitherto applicable to Hindus whether by virtue of any text, rule or interpretation of Hindu law or any custom or usage having the force of law ceases to have effect with respect to all matters dealt with in the Act. The Act also supersedes the rules of adoption and maintenance contained in any Central or State enactment and any other law in force immediately before it came into operation by enacting that all other law shall cease to apply to Hindus in so far as it is inconsistent with any provisions contained in the Act. Adoptions made after the commencement of the Act are to be regulated by the provisions of the Act. Section 5 in terms states that no adoption shall be made after the commencement of the Act by or to a Hindu except in accorddance with the provisions contained in Chapter II (Ss. 5-17) and that any adoption made in contravention of those provisions shall be void. The Act, it will be noticed, does not recognise Kritrima adoption (§ 515): Nor Dwyamushyana adoption (§ 486): Nor what is often referred to as Illatom adoption in certain communities in the South (§ 515A). No such adoption can be made after the Act came into force.

The Act is a codifying enactment (j). It does not merely crystallise or declare the existing law upon the two subjects of adoption and maintenance but deliberately departs from the same in respect of certain matters. It supersedes prior law and lays down the whole law of adoption and maintenance in the form of a code and so far as it goes must be read as a complete enactment. Therefore, in cases governed by the Act, appeal to any rule of the law of adoption or maintenance previously applicable to Hindus is now permissible only in respect of matters for which no provision is made in the Act (jj). A family or caste custom prohibiting adoption would be overridden by this Act (*j*1).

---

(i) See pp. 989-990 supra.

(ii) For instance see Dhanraj v. Suraj Bai ('73) A. Raj. 7.

(*j*1) See § 443 ante for such custom.

It does not follow from what has been stated above that any provision relating to maintenance in this Act affects the Court's power to grant permanent alimony and maintenance under section 25 of the Hindu Marriage Act (*j*2).

This Act does not repeal or affect in any manner the provisions of section 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code relating to maintenance. The scope of the two laws is different and both can stand together (*jj*2).

Act is not retrospective in its operation.—It is a fundamental and firmly established rule of interpretation that a statute which deals with rules of substantive law, shall not be construed to have retrospective operation unless such a construction appears very clearly in the terms of the Act, or arises by necessary implication. There is clear indication in this section read with the other important sections of the Act that it is not intended to have retrospective effect (*j*3). As to adoptions section 5 expressly rules that adoptions made after the commencement of the Act are to be regulated by the provisions of the Act. Section 30 which is evidently appended ex abundanti cautela states that nothing contained in the Act is to affect any adoption made before the commencement of the Act and the validity and effect of any such adoption must be determined by the law as it stood before the Act came into operation. A contrary rule would obviously result in manifiest injustice.

The general rule that an enactment like the present should operate in cases and in respect of facts which come into existence after it was passed—nova constitutio forman imponere debet, non proeteritis—has been accepted by the Legislature and the exceptions to its application in the Act are few. In the undermentioned case it was observed that where the Act is intended to be retrospective it expressly says so and reference was made to certain provisions of the Act relating to maintenance (*jj*3). The word retrospective is used in several different senses. A statute is "not properly called a retrospective statute because a part of the requisites for its action is drawn from time antecedent to its passing." Thus for instance in case of some of the grounds on which maintenance may be claimed in cases falling under Chapter III a part of the requisite facts constituting the grounds may well be antecedent to the date of the commencement of the Act. In such a case it cannot be said that by applying provisions relating to maintenance the court is giving retroactive operation to the Act. It may be said in case of any such new law, in general, that it confers new rights and it would not be strictly correct to say that there is retroactive operation.

A necessary and logical corrollary to the rule that retrospectivity is not to be presumed is that even in case of a provision intended to affect existing rights it is not to be construed to have any greater retrospectivity than is rendered necessary by the language used unless to do so would result in absurdity or an anomalous situation. In these matters the Courts have been more guided by considerations of substantial justice and convenience than rigid attention to strict grammatical form.

---

(*j*2) Seshadri v. Jayalakshmi ('63) A.M. 283; I.L.R. (1963) Mad. 384.

(*jj*2) See Nanak Chand v. Chandra Kishori ('70) A.S.C. 446 and cases there examined.

(*j*3) Ramamoorty v Sitharamamma ('61) A.A.P. 131. Also see Ramabai v. Ambadas ('67) A.M.P. 86.

(*jj*3) Gopala Rao v. Sitharamamma ('65) A.S.C. 1970, 1973.

CHAPTER II

ADOPTION

In the Introductory Note to this commentary reference has been made to the scheme of this Chapter on adoption and an outline has been given of the principal provisions relating to requisites and conditions of a valid adoption; capacity to take in adoption; persons capable of giving in adoption; and persons who may be adopted. Attention has also been drawn in that Note to the result and effects of adoption.

5. (1) No adoption shall be made after the commencement of this Act by or to a Hindu except in accordance with the provisions contained in this Chapter, and any adoption made in contravention of the said provisions shall be void.

Adoptions to be regulated by this Chapter.

(2) An adoption which is void shall neither create any rights in the adoptive family in favour of any person which he or she could not have acquired except by reason of the adoption, nor destroy the rights of any person in the family of his or her birth.

Adoptions made after the commencement of the Act.—Sub-section (1) of this section makes it abundantly clear that all adoptions made after the Act came into operation are to be regulated and governed by the provisions contained in this Chapter (Ss. 5-17) and that any such adoption made in contravention of those provisions would be null and void. Reference may be made to Notes under section 4.

Adoptions made before the commencement of the Act.—It follows from the rule laid down in sub-section (1) that the Act is not intended to deal with or affect adoptions made before the Act came into operation. Section 30 gives the express saving evidently appended ex abundanti cautela that nothing contained in the Act is to affect the validity and effect of any such adoption which must be determined by the law as it stood before the Act came into operation. A contrary rule would obviously result in manifest injustice. A void adoption which took place before the Act cannot be declared valid under this Act (*j*4). The subject of adoption under the previous law is discussed in Chapter XXIII at pp. 523-573 supra.

Sub-sec. (2): Consequences of void adoption.—This sub-section deals with the question of effect and consequences of an adoption made after the coming into force of the Act where such adoption though performed and made is void by operation of the requirements of the Act relating to the prescribed conditions for a valid adoption; capacity to take in adoption; capacity to give in adoption; or persons who may be adopted. The prime effect of a valid adoption is that an adopted child is to be deemed to be the child of his or her adoptive father or mother for all purposes from the date of the adoption and all the ties of the child in the family of his or her birth become severed and replaced by those created by the adoption in the adoptive family as laid down in section 12. The present sub-section reaffirms the general rule of Hindu law that where there has been adoption in form, but such adoption is invalid, the adopted person does not acquire any rights in the adoptive family, nor does he forfeit his rights in his natural family. Reference may be made to § 510 at p. 568 ante.

---

(*j*4) Nathuni Prasad v. Kacher ('65) A.P. 160.

Gifts to person whose adoption is invalid.—See § 511 at p. 568 ante.

6. No adoption shall be valid unless—

Requisites of a valid adoption.

(i) the person adopting has the capacity, and also the right, to take in adoption;

(ii) the person giving in adoption has the capacity to do so;

(iii) the person adopted is capable of being taken in adoption; and

(iv) the adoption is made in compliance with the other conditions mentioned in this Chapter.

Requirements of a valid adoption.—This section enumerates the requirements of a valid adoption—

(1) The person adopting must have the right to take and be lawfully capable of taking a son or daughter in adoption (Ss. 7, 8):

(2) The person giving in adoption must be lawfully capable of doing so (s. 9):

(3) The person adopted must be lawfully capable of being taken in adoption (s. 10):

(4) The conditions relative to adoption including actual giving and taking of the child with the intention of transferring the child from the family of its birth to the family of its adoption must be complied with (s. 11).

Failure of compliance with any of these requirements will render the adoption null and void. The section is of a mandatory character. The requirements are cumulative and must be complied with. The requirement about giving in adoption by a competent person is applicable both in case of a minor and an adult person who is adopted (*j*5).

Requirements of a valid adoption under the previous law are stated in §§ 449-493 ante.

Capacity of a male Hindu to take in adoption.

7. Any male Hindu who is of sound mind and is not a minor has the capacity to take a son or a daughter in adoption:

Provided that, if he has a wife living, he shall not adopt except with the consent of his wife unless the wife has completely and finally renounced the world or has ceased to be a Hindu or has been declared by a court of competent jurisdiction to be of unsound mind.

(*j*5) Dhanraj v. Suraj Bai ('73) A. Raj. 7.

Explanation.—If a person has more than one wife living at the time of adoption, the consent of all the wives is necessary, unless the consent of any one of them is unnecessary for any of the reasons specified in the preceding proviso.

Sections 7 and 8 deal with the subject of persons who may lawfully take a son or daughter in adoption and the effect of these sections is to bring about important changes in the law on the subject of adoption. It is competent now to a male Hindu to take a son or a daughter in adoption in the circumstances mentioned in and subject to the conditions stated in section 11. It is also competent now to a female Hindu to take a son or a daughter in adoption to herself, in her own right, in the circumstances mentioned in clause (c) of section 8 and in section 11 and subject to the conditions stated in section 11. Under the previous law only a male could adopt a son. A wife could adopt a son to her husband but she could not adopt during her husband's lifetime except with his express consent. The law as to consent in case of adoption by her after his death differed in different States as summarised in § 452 ante. But in no case could a wife or a widow adopt a son to herself; the adoption had to be made to her husband. An adoption by a woman of a son to herself was invalid and conferred no legal rights upon the person adopted. A daughter could not be adopted by a male or a female Hindu [§ 480 (1)]. The changes now made in the law on the subject require to be carefully noticed.

Capacity of a male Hindu to take in adoption.—Any male Hindu who is of sound mind and is not a minor, that is has completed the age of eighteen years, has the capacity to take a son or daughter in adoption. Adoption by a male Hindu who is himself a minor is void ab initio and cannot become valid by mere ratification. He may, however, after attaining majority, if possible, readopt the child in accordance with the conditions laid down in the Act. Adoption by a person of unsound mind is no adoption at all. A person who wants to challenge any adoption on the ground that the adoptive father was of unsound mind will have to discharge the heavy onus of proving that at the date of the adoption the adoptive father was of unsound mind. This requirement relating to mental capacity is a very simple one which does not demand any high degree of intelligence on the part of the adoptive father to comprehend that he is adopting a son and there is always a very strong presumption in favour of sanity. This burden of proof may, however, shift where it is shown, for instance, that the adoptive father had on inquisition been found to have been a lunatic (*jj*5).

Consent of wife.—The capacity of a male Hindu to adopt a son or daughter recognized by this section is circumscribed by the rule enacted in the proviso that in case he has a wife living, he has no right to adopt except with the consent of the wife. The consent need not necessarily be express. It can be inferred from the facts and circumstances of the case. Usually where adoption ceremoniers are performed the wife has to take a prominent part in the same and no difficulty of proving consent should arise in practice. The consent may be dispensed with if the wife has finally renounced the world or has ceased to be a Hindu (by conversion to any religion other than Hinduism, Jainism, Buddhism or Sikhism) or if the wife is declared to be of unsound mind by a court having jurisdiction to pass a declaratory decree to that effect. In case the male Hindu, who wants to adopt a son or daughter, has more than one wife, the requisite consent must be obtained from all the wives except that no consent would be necessary from a wife who is unable to give consent or has disabled herself from doing so in circumstances already stated above.

---

(*jj*5) Gopi v. Madanlal ('70) A. Raj. 190.

It will be noticed that section 6(1) requires that the person who wants to adopt a son or a daughter must have the capacity, and also the right, to take in adoption. The present section speaks of what is described as 'capacity'. Section 11 which lays down conditions for a valid adoption requires that in case of adoption of a son the adoptive father must not have a Hindu son, son's son or great-grandson (by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption) living at the time of adoption. Section 11 also requires that in case of adoption of a daughter the adoptive father must not have a Hindu daughter or son's daughter (by legitimate blood or by adoption) living at the time of adoption.

It follows from the language of this section read with clauses (i) and (ii) of section 11 that a male Hindu has the capacity and the right to have both an adopted son and an adopted daughter provided there is compliance with the requirements and conditions of such adoptions laid down in the Act including that relating to consent of the wife.

Any adoption made by a male Hindu who does not have the requisite capacity to take in adoption or the right to take in adoption is null and void.

Old law.—See §§ 449 and 450 at pp. 524-525 ante.

8. Any female Hindu—

Capacity of a female Hindu to take in adoption.

(a) who is of sound mind,
(b) who is not a minor, and
(c) who is not married, or if married, whose marriage has been dissolved or whose husband is dead or has completely and finally renounced the world or has ceased to be a Hindu or has been declared by a court of competent jurisdiction to be of unsound mind, has the capacity to take a son or daughter in adoption.

Capacity of a female Hindu to take in adoption.—This section brings about a very important and far-reaching change in the law of adoption as hitherto applied in case of Hindus. It is competent now to a female Hindu who is of sound mind and has completed the age of eighteen years to take a son or a daughter in adoption to herself, in her own right provided—she is not married; or is a widow; or is a divorcee; or if married, her husband has finally renounced the world, or ceased to be a Hindu or has been declared to be of unsound mind by a court having jurisdiction to pass a declaratory decree to that effect.

It will be noticed that section 6(1) requires that the person who wants to adopt a son or a daughter must have the capacity, and also the right, to take in adoption. The present section speaks of what is described as 'capacity'. Section 11 which lays down the conditions for a valid adoption requires that in case of adoption of a son the mother, by whom the adoption is made, must not have a Hindu son, son's son or great-grandson (by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption) living at the time of adoption. Section 11 also requires that in case of adoption of a daughter the mother, by whom the adoption is made, must not have a Hindu daughter or son's daughter (by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption) living at the time of adoption.

It follows from the language of this section read with clauses (i) and (ii) of section 11 that a female Hindu has the capacity and the right to have both an adopted son and an adopted daughter provided there is compliance with the requirements and conditions of such adoptions laid down in the Act.

Any adoption made by a female Hindu who does not have the requisite capacity to take in adoption or the right to take in adoption is null and void.

Adoption by widow.—Under the law as previously applied no female including a wife or a widow could adopt a son to herself. After the death of the husband a widow could adopt a son in certain parts of India if he had expressly authorized her to adopt, and in other parts of India, even without such authority. The adoption, however, whether by a wife with consent of the husband or by a widow after his death was not of a son to herself but to her husband. The status in law of a female Hindu is now considerably changed. The Hindu woman's limited estate is now abolished by the Hindu Succession Act and a widow holds property acquired by her whether before or after the commencement of that Act including property inherited from the husband as her absolute property and the scheme of that Act is to treat male and female heirs equally in matters of succession. A logical corrollary of that was to permit both male and female Hindus to adopt a son or a daughter and to do so in his or her own right. The present section recognizes the right among other female Hindus of a widow to adopt a son or daughter to herself. There must, of course, be compliance with the requirements and conditions of such adoptions laid down in the Act. The effect of adoption by a widow of a son or daughter will be to clothe the adopted son or daughter with all the rights of a natural born son or daughter in the adoptive family and to create all the ties of the child in the family (S. 12). The result of this is that for all purposes (subject to the rules laid down in the provisos to section 12) the adoptee in effect becomes the son or daughter not only of the widow but of her deceased husband as well. The adoptee acquires the same status as that of a natural-born child with all the consequences and incidents of that status. Thus, for instance, the child will be in the same position as a natural born child of the adoptive mother and her deceased husband in matter of succession to all their relations.

Old law.—See §§ 451-473 at pp. 526-547 ante.

Persons capable of giving in adoption.

9. (1) No person except the father or mother or the guardian of a child shall have the capacity to give the child in adoption.

(2) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (3) [and sub-section (4) (*j*4),] the father, if alive, shall alone have right to give in adoption, but such right shall not be exercised save with the consent of the mother unless the mother has completely and finally renounced the world or has ceased to be a Hindu or has been declared by a court of competent jurisdiction to be of unsound mind.

(3) The mother may give the child in adoption if the father is dead or has completely and finally renounced the world or has ceased to be a Hindu or has been declared by a court of competent jurisdiction to be of unsound mind.

(4) Where both the father and mother are dead or have completely and finally renounced the world or have abandoned the child (*j*5) or have been declared by a court of competent jurisdiction to be of unsound mind or where the parentage of the child is not known (*j*6), the guardian of the child may give the child in adoption with the previous permission of the court to any person including the guardian himself.

(5) Before granting permission to a guardian under sub-section (4), the court shall be satisfied that the adoption will be for the welfare of the child, due consideration being for this purpose given to the wishes of the child having regard to the age and understanding of the child and that the applicant for permission has not received or agreed to receive and that no person has made or given or agreed to make or give to the applicant any payment or reward in consideration of the adoption except such as the court may sanction.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section—

(i) the expressions "father" and "mother" do not include an adoptive father and an adoptive mother;

(ia) "guardian" means a person having the care of the person of a child or of both his person and property and includes—

(a) a guardian appointed by the will of the child's father or mother, and

(b) a guardian appointed or declared by a court (*j*7); and

(ii) "court" means the city civil court or a district court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the child to be adopted ordinarily resides.

---

(*j*4) Inserted by Act 45 of 1962, s. 3. (*j*5) Ibid, s. 3. (*j*6) Ibid, s. 4.
(*j*7) Ibid, s. 3.

Who may give a son or daughter in adoption.—This section deals with the subject of persons who may lawfully give a son or daughter in adoption. The section does not make any substantial changes in the law on this branch of the subject previously applicable to Hindus except that under that law the only persons who could lawfully give a son in adoption were his father and mother. The present section principally confines the capacity to give a son or a daughter in adoption to the father and the mother of the child but it also rules that where both the father and mother are dead or disabled from exercising the right by reason of mental incapacity or renunciation of the world, etc. the guardian of the child can give the child in adoption with the previous permission of the court. The rules laid down in the section are simple and not likely to give any difficulty in interpretation.

Father.—The primary right to give a son or daughter in adoption is that of the father alone. The right of the father to give in adoption is, however, not absolute, but is circumscribed by the condition enacted in sub-section (2) that in case the mother is living and capable of giving consent, he cannot exercise the right except with her consent. The consent need not necessarily be express. It can be inferred from the facts and circumstances of the case. Usually where adoption ceremonies are performed the wife also has to take part in the same and no difficulty of proving consent should arise in practice. The expression 'mother' in the present context must mean the natural mother of the child and not a step-mother and consent of a step-mother is not necessary. Under the previous law it had been held that an only son could be given and taken in adoption. There is nothing in the present Act which bars the giving in adoption of an only son or an only daughter by the father provided the mother gives her consent to the same. The Explanation to the section makes it abundantly clear that an adoptive father has no right to give the adopted son or adopted daughter in adoption. There cannot be a second adoption of the same child.

Mother.—The mother cannot give the son or daughter in adoption while the father is alive and capable of consenting, without permission of the father. The mother can, however, exercise the right if the father is dead or is disabled from giving consent. The expressions 'mother' and 'father' in the present context must mean natural mother and natural father and not a step-mother or a step-father. A step-mother has no right to give a step-son or a step-daughter in adoption even though the father may be dead or is disabled from giving consent (j8). She may, however, apply to the court if she was appointed the testamentary guardian of the child or on her application the court may appoint or declare her to be the guardian of the child and the court may grant her permission to give the child in adoption if it is satisfied that the adoption will be for the welfare of the minor. The Explanation to the section makes it abundantly clear that an adoptive mother has no right to give away in adoption her adopted son or adopted daughter. There cannot be a second adoption of the same child.

Sanction of the Court.—Sub-section (4) lays down the rule that in case of a child both of whose parents are dead or are disabled from exercising the right to give in adoption, etc., or where the parentage of the child is not known, the guardian of the child may give the child in adoption with the previous sanction of the court. The guardian may be a person who has the care of the person of a child or both his person and property or a testamentary guardian or one appointed or declared by the court. Sub-section (5) requires the court before granting such permission to satisfy itself that the adoption will be in the interest of the minor. In such a case as in all matters affecting minors the paramount consideration for the court should be the welfare of the minor. If the minor is sufficiently grown up to express its wish in the matter and capable of understanding the matter the court must ascertain and give due consideration to such wishes before deciding what will be for the welfare of the minor.

---

(j8) Dhanraj v. Suraj Bai ('73) A. Raj. 7.

An adoption is not invalid merely because the person giving in adoption receives a consideration for the adoption from the person taking in adoption, though the promise to pay cannot be enforced in law as being contrary to public policy. Being contrary to public policy, the court would not, as a general rule, sanction giving of the child in adoption when the guardian who seeks permission of the court is to receive or has received any payment or reward in consideration of giving the child in adoption. Even so, the welfare of the child being the primary and paramount consideration, sub-section (5) empowers the court to sanction the adoption in any such case if it is satisfied that the adoption of the child will be for his well-being and happiness. This part of the rule laid down in sub-section (5) must be read with section 17 of the Act which lays down not only an absolute prohibition against any person receiving or agreeing to receive any payment or other reward in consideration of the adoption of any person but also renders the contravention of the rule a penal offence. It is difficult to imagine that the court would sanction any payment or reward when the receipt of the same and even the mere agreement to receive the same is prohibited and rendered illegal by making it an offence. The language of the latter part of the section may not remain a dead letter if the payment is to be received or has been received by the applicant in his capacity as the guardian, that is for the benefit of the adoptee and not for the benefit of the guardian. In such a case the court may well sanction the payment or reward as also the giving of the child as being for the welfare of the child to be given in adoption by the guardian.

The application under sub-section (4) must be made to the city civil court or the district court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the child to be adopted ordinarily resides [Explanation (ii)].

Old law.—See §§ 474-479A at pp. 547-548 ante.

Persons who may be adopted.

10. No person shall be capable of being taken in adoption unless the following conditions are fulfilled, namely:—

(i) he or she is a Hindu;

(ii) he or she has not already been adopted;

(iii) he or she has not been married, unless there is a custom or usage applicable to the parties which permits persons who are married being taken in adoption;

(iv) he or she has not completed the age of fifteen years, unless there is a custom or usage applicable to the parties which permits persons who have completed the age of fifteen years being taken in adoption.

Persons who may be adopted.—This section deals with the subject of persons who may be lawfully taken in adoption. It must have been seen from §§ 480-487 at pp. 549-553 ante that the law on this branch of the subject was not uniform and there was divergence of judicial opinion on certain aspects of the matter. The present section lays down some simple rules of uniform applicability to all Hindus, the expression 'Hindus' being understood in the wide connotation given to it by section 2.

The section brings about some important changes in the law on this branch of the subject. Under the law as hitherto applied the person to be adopted had to be a male since adoption of a daughter was not recognized. Under the Act adoption can be both of a son as well as of a daughter.

Under the previous law it was necessary that the person to be adopted had to belong to the same caste as his adoptive father; thus a Brahmin could not adopt a Kshatriya, a Vaishya or a Sudra. No such restrictions are imposed by the Act and the limitations pertaining to the caste of the child to be adopted are abolished. All that is now required is that the boy or girl to be adopted must be a 'Hindu', which expression is to be understood in the very wide connotation given to it by section 2. It is, therefore, permissible now to a 'Hindu' whether a Hindu by religion and belonging to any caste, or a Jain, or a Buddhist or a Sikh to take in adoption a boy or a girl who is a 'Hindu' in that expansive sense and regardless of the caste of the boy or girl. Thus, for instance, a Sudra can validly adopt a boy or a girl of any caste so long as the boy or girl is a Hindu by religion, or a Jain, or a Buddhist or a Sikh. A stranger may be adopted even though there are near relations. All that is required by clause (i) of the present section is that the person adopted must be a 'Hindu' in the wide general sense in which the expression is to be understood. The other conditions relating to the matter laid down in clauses (ii) to (iv) must, of course, be fulfilled.

Clause (ii) of the section lays down that the boy or the girl to be adopted must not already have been previously adopted. This clause reiterates the rule of Hindu law that a person can be given in adoption only once and that there cannot be a second adoption of the same person.

There was difference of opinion between the various schools of Hindu law as to the age of the son to be adopted and as to whether a married person could or could not be adopted. Clauses (iii) and (iv) of the present section now deal with this aspect of the matter. The son or daughter to be adopted must not be a person who has already been married and must not have completed the age of fifteen years. The respective conditions are subject to the important qualifications that they are not to apply if there is a custom or usage applicable to the parties which permits of a married boy or girl being adopted or a boy or girl who has completed the age of fifteen years being adopted (*jj*8).

Another condition, imposed in the matter of the person who could be taken in adoption by the law as was hitherto applied, was that the person to be adopted must not be a boy whose mother the adopting father could not have legally married; but this rule was not strictly followed and in course of time was restricted only to the case of a daughter's son, sister's son and mother's sister's son. The restriction was not applied to sudras and even as to the three other castes it was held that an adoption, though prohibited under that rule, could be valid if sanctioned by custom. The present section does not lay down any such limitation or restriction and any person may now be validly adopted provided the person is capable of being taken in adoption as laid down in the section and the other conditions relating to adoption are fulfilled. Disease, defect or deformity is now no disqualification in matter of succession. It will be noticed that the section does not lay down any bar to adoption on any such ground. Therefore a person who is deaf and dumb or suffering from any other defect, disease or deformity may validly be given and taken in adoption.

Old law.—See §§ 480-487 at pp. 549-553 ante. The effect of the rule laid down in the present section read with section 12 will be that the adoption called 'dvyamushyayana' (§ 486) cannot be resorted to after the commencement of the Act.

Other conditions for a valid adoption.

11. In every adoption, the following conditions must be complied with:—

(i) if the adoption is of a son, the adoptive father or mother by whom the adoption is made must not have a Hindu son, son's son or son's son's son (whether by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption) living at the time of adoption;

(ii) if the adoption is of a daughter, the adoptive father or mother by whom the adoption is made must not have a Hindu daughter or son's daughter (whether by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption) living at the time of adoption;

(iii) if the adoption is by a male and the person to be adopted is a female, the adoptive father is at least twenty-one years older than the person to be adopted;

(iv) if the adoption is by a female and the person to be adopted is a male, the adoptive mother is at least twenty-one years older than the person to be adopted;

---

(*jj*8) For instance see Housabai v. Jijabai ('72) A.B. 98 [custom in former State of Bombay permitting adoption of a male over the age of fifteen years].

(v) the same child may not be adopted simultaneously by two or more persons;

(vi) the child to be adopted must be actually given and taken in adoption by the parents or guardian concerned or under their authority with intent to transfer the child from the family of its birth or in case of an abandoned child or a child whose parentage is not known, from the place or family where it has been brought up (*j*8) to the family of its adoption:

Provided that the performance of datta homam shall not be essential to the validity of an adoption.

This section lays down some vital rules relating to the law of adoption. The rules and conditions stated in the section are absolute and non-compliance with any of them will render an adoption invalid.

Cl. (i): Adoption of a son can be only by a person who has no son.— The objects of adoption of a son by a Hindu are twofold. The first is religious, to secure spiritual benefit to the adopter and his ancestors by having a son for the purpose of offering funeral cakes and libations of water to the manes of the adopter and his ancestors. The second is secular, to secure an heir and perpetuate the adopter's name. Hindu law at one time recognized twelve kinds of sons of which there were five kinds of adopted sons. Modern law recognized the aurasa or legitimate son begotten by a man himself on the lawfully wedded wife and of the adopted sons it recognized only two kinds the dattaka and the kritrima. The dattaka form prevailed all over India; the kritrima form prevailed in Mithila and adjoining districts. The very basis of adoption being substitution of a secondary son in place of an aurasa or real son for the objects mentioned above the rule was fundamental that only a person who had no son, grandson or great grandson could validly take a son in adoption. Clause (i) of the section reiterates that rule—which in view of the right to adopt being now conferred on a female Hindu must evidently apply to both the adoptive father and the adoptive mother—and lays down that the adoptive father or mother by whom the adoption is made must not have a Hindu son, son's son or great-grandson (whether by legitimate blood relationship or by adoption) living at the time of adoption. A person who has an adopted son living cannot adopt another son. So also a person who has a son's son or great-grandson by adoption living cannot adopt a son. Existence of an illegitimate son is not a bar to a male or female Hindu taking a son by adoption. But the existence of a son who is to be deemed to be a legitimate child of the parents by operation of section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, would be a bar to the father's or mother's right to take a son in adoption.

The clause speaks of the existence of a Hindu son as a bar to adoption. If a son has renounced Hinduism and been formally converted to any other religion and there is no other son, or a grandson or a great-grandson the father or the mother has the right to take a son in adoption. The same considerations would apply in case an adopted son becomes a convert to any other religion.

---

(*j*8) Inserted by Act 45 of 1962, s. 4.

The existence of daughter or a son's daughter or an adopted daughter or grand-daughter is no bar to the right of a Hindu male or female taking a son in adoption. After the coming into operation of the Act a Hindu male or female may have both an adopted son and an adopted daughter if the conditions laid down in the section are fulfilled.

Old law.—See § 450 at p. 525 ante.

Cl. (ii): Adoption of a daughter can be only by a person who has no daughter.—The object of recognizing the right to take a daughter in adoption now conferred by the Act is to permit a person male or female to have a substituted or secondary daughter in the absence of a natural born daughter and it, therefore, stands, to reason that the right should not be allowed to be exercised when there is a daughter or a son's daughter in existence. A person who has an adopted daughter or the adopted daughter of a son living cannot adopt a daughter. Existence of an illegitimate daughter is not, however, a bar to a male or even a female Hindu taking a daughter in adoption although the illegitimate daughter is entitled under the Hindu Succession Act to succeed to the property of the mother. But the existence of a daughter who is to be deemed to be a legitimate daughter of the parents by operation of section 16 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, would be a bar to the father's or mother's right to take a daughter in adoption.

The clause speaks of the existence of a Hindu daughter as a bar to adoption. If a daughter has renounced Hinduism and been formally converted to any other religion and there is no other daughter or no son's daughter the father or mother has the right to take a daughter in adoption. The same considerations would apply in case an adopted daughter becomes a convert to any other religion.

The existence of a son or a grandson or a great-grandson (by legitimate bloodrelationship or by adoption) is no bar to the right of a Hindu male or female taking a daughter in adoption. After the coming into operation of the Act a Hindu male or female may have both an adopted son and an adopted daughter if the conditions laid down in the section are fulfilled.

Cl. (iii): Age of adoptive father.—This clause requires that in case of adoption of a daughter by a male Hindu the daughter must be at least twenty-one years younger than the adoptive father. This is obviously a precautionary measure. There was no similar rule under the previous law.

Cl. (iv): Age of adoptive mother.—This clause requires that in case of adoption of a son by a female Hindu the son must be at least twenty-one years younger than the adoptive mother. This is obviously a precautionary measure. There was no such restriction of age under the previous law.

Cl. (v): Simultaneous adoption.—This clause reiterates the rule that the simultaneous adoption of the same child by two or more persons is invalid as to the child as well as all the adoptive parties. The Act proceeds on the principle that there can be adoption of one person by one adoptive person alone either a male or a female Hindu. Simultaneous adoption of two sons or two daughters also would be invalid under the Act (k).

Cl. (vi): Act of adoption and ceremonies incidental to it.—Under the previous law the ceremonies relating to adoption which included the physical act of giving and receiving with intent to transfer the boy from one family to another were essential to the validity of an adoption. As to datta homam, that is oblations of clarified butter to fire, it was not settled whether its performance was essential to the validity of an adoption in all cases and there was conflict of opinion on the subject (§§ 488, 490 ante). The present clause states in unmistakable terms that the performance of datta homam is not essential to the validity of an adoption. It also states in express terms that there must be the actual (physical) giving and taking of the child with intent to transfer the child from the family of its birth to the family of its adoption. The physical act of giving and receiving is absolutely necessary to the validity of the adoption. It is of the essence of the adoption and law does not accept any substitute for it. Mere expression of consent, or the execution of a deed of adoption, though registered, but not accompanied by an actual delivery of the boy or girl, will not operate as a valid adoption (l). This requirement of actual giving and receiving is absolutely necessary even in case of an adult who is adopted. The expression 'child' would include a minor as well as a major (*l*1).

The power to give a son or daughter in adoption vests only in the father or the mother. A guardian, as already pointed out, may now under the Act give a child in adoption with the previous sanction of the Court (m). The power (or right) to give a child in adoption cannot be delegated to any person; but the father or the mother or the guardian, as the case may be, may authorize another person to perform the physical act of giving a son or a daughter in adoption. Likewise the adoptive father or the adoptive mother can authorize any person to accept the child in adoption on his or her behalf (n).

Reference may be made to §§ 489 and 490 at pp. 554-555 ante and the cases there cited.

Free consent.—Every valid adoption implies the free consent to the adoption of the person giving and the person receiving in adoption, and also, it would seem, of the person adopted, if he is a major at the date of adoption (where the custom or usage applicable to the parties permits of adoption of a child who is not a minor). Reference may be made to § 491 at pp. 555-556 ante.

---

(k) Reference may be made to § 485 at p. 552 ante.

(*l*1) Dhanraj v. Suraj Bai ('73) A. Raj. 7.

(m) Section 9(4).

(n) See § 489(2) at p. 554 ante.

12. An adopted child shall be deemed to be the child of his or her adoptive father or mother for all purposes with effect from the date of the adoption and from such date all the ties of the child in the family of his or her birth shall be deemed to be severed and replaced by those created by the adoption in the adoptive family:

Effects of adoption.

Provided that—

(a) the child cannot marry any person whom he or she could not have married if he or she had continued in the family of his or her birth;

(b) any property which vested in the adopted child before the adoption shall continue to vest in such person subject to the obligations, if any, attaching to the ownership of such property, including the obligation to maintain relatives in the family of his or her birth;

(c) the adopted child shall not divest any person of any estate which vested in him or her before the adoption

Result and effects of adoption.—This section lays down some vital rules relating to the result of adoption. The primary and the principal result of adoption is that of transferring the adopted boy or girl from his or her natural family into the adoptive family. It confers upon the adoptee the same rights and privileges in the family of the adopter as the legitimate natural born son or daughter for all purposes with effect from the date of adoption. The adoptee is to be deemed to be the child of his or her adoptive father or mother for all purposes and from the date of adoption all the ties of the child in the family of his or her birth are to be deemed to have been severed and replaced by those created by the adoption in the adoptive family. Where a statute enacts that something shall be deemed to exist or to have happened or some status shall be deemed to have been lost or acquired on the happening of something, which would not otherwise have been so, effect must be given to the statutory fiction and it must also be carried to its logical conclusion. In such a case full effect must be given to the putative state of affairs and the status deemed to have been acquired or lost as also to all the inevitable corollaries of the state of affairs and altered status, unless there is something in the statute which prohibits the legal fiction being applied with all its inevitable corollaries and with the consequences and incidents of the state of affairs and status deemed to have come into existence (o). Subject to this qualification, that which is deemed to have taken place is to operate for all purposes. The section is founded on this principle and in terms states that the adoptee is to be deemed to have severed all ties in the family of his or her birth and similar ties are to be deemed to have been replaced in the adoptive family. There are, however, three qualifications to the logical effect and corollaries to the general rule and they are stated in the provisos to the section. But subject to the same the principal rule applies with all its consequences and incidents. Thus, subject to the rules laid down in provisos (b) and (c), full effect is to be given to the principal rule in all matters of succession ex parte paterna and ex parte materna as also where the adoptive father or adoptive mother is or was at the time of adoption a member of a joint Hindu family. The section does not recognize any exception in favour of the form of adoption called "dvyamushyayana" (§ 486) and there cannot be any valid adoption in that form after the coming into force of this Act.

---

(o) East End Dwelling Co. Ltd. v. Finsbury Burrow Council (1952) A.C. 109; State of Bombay v. Pandurang (1953) S.C.R. 773, 778, 779.

Reference may be made to "Relative by adoption" in Notes under section 8 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, at pp. 864-865 ante. Reference may also be made to notes under 'Adopted son' at p. 866 ante; 'Adopted daughter' at p. 870 ante; 'Mother' at pp. 871-872 ante; 'Father' at pp. 873-874 ante and other heads under the relevant sections of the Hindu Succession Act.

Illustrations

(a) In illustrations 1 to 5 at pp. 882-883 ante the result will be the same in case of any of the heirs mentioned there who is related to the propositus by adoption made after this Act came into force.

(b) In illustrations 1 to 5 at pp. 885-886 ante the result will be the same in case of any of the heirs mentioned there who is related to the propositus by adoption made after this Act came into force.

(c) In illustrations 1 to 6 at p. 892 ante the result will be the same in case of any of the heirs mentioned there who is related to the propositus by adoption made after this Act came into force.

(d) In the illustrations at pp. 893 and 894-895 ante the result will be the same in case of any of the heirs mentioned there who is related to the propositus by adoption made after this Act came into force.

(e) In the illustrations under sections 6 and 15-17 ante the result will be the same in case of any of the heirs mentioned there who is related to the propositus by adoption made after the Act came into force.

". . . for all purposes with effect from the date of adoption . . .".—It will be noticed that the adoptee is to be deemed to be the child of his or her adoptive father or mother for all purposes with effect from the date of the adoption and not to be deemed to have been in the womb of the adoptive mother at the time of the death of her deceased husband in case of adoption by a widow as under the old law. In case of any such adoption the adopted child cannot divest any person of any estate which vested in him or her before the adoption. Reference may be made to the Notes under Proviso (c) post.

Under the old law the rule that an adopted son was entitled to succeed as if he were a natural-born son, was subject to certain exceptions mentioned in § 497 at p. 559 ante. The effect of the rule laid down in the present section is to abrogate those exceptions and the adopted son or adopted daughter is for all purposes of succession and partition to be deemed to be the natural-born child of the adoptive parents. In matters of succession the adopted son or daughter is now entitled to the same share as an after-born natural son or natural daughter of the adoptive parents.

Adoption by widow.—There was difference of opinion on the question whether after coming into force of this Act, in case of adoption by a widow the adopted son becomes the son also of the deceased adoptive father. The High Courts of Bombay (*o*1) and Allahabad (*o*2) took the view that the adoptee should be regarded as the son of the widow as well as her deceased husband. A contrary view was taken in a decision of the High Court of Madras (*o*3). In Sitabai v. Ramchandra (*o*4) decided by the Supreme Court a joint family originally consisted of two brothers D and B and the wife of B. Many years after the death of B his widow adopted a son S in 1958. Some time thereafter D died. Question was raised whether the adoptee could be regarded as the son of the widow as well as her husband B and whether he became a coparcener with D in the joint family. It was held by the Supreme Court (agreeing with the view taken by the Bombay High Court) that on his adoption S became a coparcener with D and after the death of D became entitled to possession of all the joint family property as a sole surviving coparcener. S would for all purposes be regarded as the son of B and the adoptive mother.

Proviso (a).—Though adoption has the effect of removing the adopted child from the natural family into the adoptive family, it does not sever the tie of blood in the family of birth in the matter of marriage. This proviso lays down the express and explicit exception to the general rule which applies for all purposes and enacts that the adoptee, despite the severance of all the ties in the natural family, cannot marry any person whom he or she could not have married in the family of his or her birth. Clause (iv) of section 5 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, lays down as one of the conditions of valid Hindu marriage that "the parties are not within the degrees of prohibited relationship unless the custom or usage governing each of them permits of a marriage between the two". And clause (vi) of that section lays down as one of the conditions of a valid Hindu marriage that "the parties are not sapindas of each other, unless the custom or usage governing each of them permits of a marriage between the two". Both these conditions are equally applicable to an adoptee and the adoptee cannot marry any person whom he or she could not have married on the ground of prohibited relationship or sapinda relationship, as if he or she had continued in the family of his or her birth. The Explanation to section 3 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, inter alia states that relationship for the purpose of sapinda relationship and prohibited degrees of relationship includes relationship by adoption as well as by blood.

Reference may be made to the Notes under clauses (iv) and (v) of section 5 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, at pp. 688-689 ante.

Reference may also be made to Notes under clauses (f) and (g) of section 3 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, at pp. 671-681 ante. Reference may particularly be made to the diagrams and illustrations given at pp. 677-680 ante. Those illustrations are equally applicable to the case of a bride or a bridegroom who has by adoption gone out of the family of her or his birth.

---

(*o*1) Ankush v. Janabai ('66) A.B. 174.
(*o*2) Subhash Misir v. Thagi Misir ('67) A.A. 148.
(*o*3) Arumugha v. Valliammal ('69) A.M. 72.
(*o*4) ('70) A.S.C. 343. Also see Sawan Ram v. Kalawanti ('67) A.S.C. 1761.

Proviso (b).—Adoption did not have the effect under the Bengal school of Hindu law (Dayabhaga law) of divesting any property which had vested in the adopted son by inheritance, gift, or under any power of self-acquisition prior to his adoption. As regards cases governed by the Mitakshara law there was some divergence of judicial opinion on certain aspects of the matter (§ 494). The present section lays down the clear rule that any property that might have vested in the adoptee before the adoption, continues to vest in the adoptee, subject, of course, to any obligations attaching to the ownership of such property including the obligation of the adoptee to maintain relatives in the family of his or her birth. The adopted person is not, by fact of the adoption, divested of any property already vested in him. It follows as a corollary to that rule that the fact of adoption should not operate to the prejudice of persons related to the adoptee in the natural family who had the right to claim maintenance from such adoptee.

Illustrations

(a) A has two sons B and C. A gives C in adoption to X. C is not entitled to inherit to A as his son. On the death of *A*1 the mother of B and C which had taken place prior to the adoption C had become entitled to a share (along with A and B) in the property left by her. That share which had already vested in C will continue to vest in him.

(b) A and B, two brothers; A's sons, C and D; and B's son E, are all of them members of a Mitakshara coparcenary. A gives his son C in adoption to X. C loses all his rights as a coparcener in his natural family. The coparcenary which consisted of five members before the adoption will be reduced after C's adoption to a coparcenary of four members only.

(c) A and his sons B and C were members of a Mitakshara coparcenary. A died after the commencement of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, leaving him surviving his two sons B and C; his daughter D; and his widow *A*1, the natural mother of B, C and D. Soon thereafter *A*1 gave C in adoption to X. By operation of section 6 of the Hindu Succession Act A's interest in the coparcenary property devolved by succession in equal shares among *A*1, B, C and D. The effect of the adoption will not be to divest C of his aliquot share in the father's interest in the joint family property which became vested in him on A's death. C will not, however, be entitled to claim his undivided interest in the joint family property. Nor will C be entitled to claim a share along with B and D in the property that may be left by *A*1 upon her death.

Proviso (c): No divesting of estate vested in any person before the adoption.—The questions of "vesting and divesting of estate" on adoption by a widow and particularly by a widow in a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law; "alienations made prior to adoption" and "surrender prior to adoption" under the old law have been dealt with in §§ 501 to 509A at pp. 563-567 ante. The law on some aspects of the question of divesting, it must have been seen, had created many difficulties and anomalous situations. The proviso (c) to the present section (which must be read with the relevant provisions of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956) lays down the express and explicit rule that the adoption of a son or a daughter by a male or female Hindu is not to result in the divesting of any estate vested in any person prior to the adoption. The rule laid down in the proviso does not, however, abrogate the incidents of joint family property as will be seen from the illustrations below. Nor does it have the effect of preventing the adopted son from challenging an alienation made by the adoptive mother prior to 1956 where the alienation was not for legal necessity (*o*5).

(*o*5) Housabai v. Jijabai ('72) A.B. 98.

Illustrations

(a) A a male Hindu who owns self-acquired property as well as ancestral property adopts a son B. The adoption does not affect A's self-acquired property and he can deal with it as he likes. The rights of B arise on his adoption and B will take an interest in the ancestral property to the same extent as a natural-born son with the result that the ancestral property will be held by A and B as coparcenary property. B will be bound by alienations of the ancestral property made by the adoptive father prior to the adoption to the same extent as a natural-born son will be.

(b) A and his brother B and B's son C are members of a joint Hindu family. A adopts a son X. The effect of adoption will be that the coparcenary which consisted of three members will now consist of four members and their rights will be governed by the law relating to joint family and joint family property.

(c) A died leaving him surviving his widow *A*1 and property both self-acquired and ancestral. On A's death *A*1 had inherited the property as a Hindu widow. On the coming into force of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, she held the property as absolute owner by operation of section 14 of that Act. *A*1 adopts a son B after the present Act came into force. The effect of the adoption is not to divest any of the property vested in *A*1. The position is the same if *A*1 had adopted a daughter instead of a son.

(d) A died after the commencement of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, leaving him surviving his widow *A*1 and two daughters D and *D*1. On A's death *A*1, D and *D*1 inherited his property in equal shares according to the provisions of sections 8 and 10 of that Act. After A's death *A*1 adopts a son B. The adoption of B will have effect from the date of his adoption and B will not divest *A*1, D or *D*1 of the estate which vested in them before his adoption.

(e) A died before the commencement of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, but after the commencement of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, leaving him surviving his widow *A*1 and his two brothers B and C. At the time of his death A was a member of a Mitakshara coparcenary consisting of himself and his two brothers. The effect of section 2 of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, was that *A*1 took the same interest in the coparcenary property as A himself had but her interest was limited interest (Hindu Women's estate). There was no partition and the family continued as before. The effect of section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, was that the limited interest of A in the joint family property came to be held by her as a full owner and not as a limited owner. After the commencement of the present Act *A*1 adopts a son S. The adoption of S will have effect only from the date of his adoption and S will not divest *A*1, B or C of any rights or interest in any property. Nor will the adoption have the effect of introducing S in the coparcenary as one of its members. S will, however, after the date of his adoption be entitled to right of succession to the property of *A*1 as her son in case of intestacy and also to the property of the relatives of A and *A*1 in case succession opens and he is one of the heirs of the deceased relative under the provisions of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

(f) A died after the commencement of this Act, leaving him surviving his widow *A*1, his separated brother B and *B*1 and *B*2 two minor sons of B. A left considerable property and by his will directed *A*1 to take *B*1 in adoption. He expressly stated in his will that *A*1 was not to be the absolute owner of the property left by him but to take a restricted estate in the same and was only to enjoy the income of the same and to hand it over to the adopted son on his attaining majority. *A*1 duly took *B*1 in adoption. Since only a restricted estate has been prescribed for *A*1 in the will of her husband she does not take the property as full owner (Explanation to section 14, Hindu Succession Act, 1956) and *B*1 on attaining majority will be entitled to take the property. Here the adoption cannot be said to result in divesting *A*1 of any property vested in her. On adoption the ties of *B*1 in the family of B shall be deemed to be severed and replaced by those created in the adoptive family. On death of B his property will devolve by succession upon *B*2 and any other heir of his mentioned in Class I of the Schedule to the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

Right of adoptive parents to dispose of their properties.

13. Subject to any agreement to the contrary, an adoption does not deprive the adoptive father or mother of the power to dispose of his or her property by transfer inter vivos or by will.

Right of adoptive parents to dispose of their properties.—Under the law as previously applied a Hindu adopting a son did not thereby deprive himself of the power he had to dispose of his separate property by gift or will. There was no implied contract on the part of the adoptive father, in consideration of the gift of his son by the natural father or mother, that he would not dispose of his property by gift or will [§ 498(1)]. When, however, an adoption was made by a member of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, the adopted son became a member of the coparcenary from the moment of his adoption, and the adoptive father had no power either by deed or will to interfere with the rights of survivorship of the adopted son in the coparcenary property. The same principle applied where an adoption was made by a sole surviving coparcener (§ 499). It must have been noticed from section 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, that the interest of a coparcener in a Mitakshara coparcenary property can now be disposed of by him by will notwithstanding the law relating to joint family and joint family property although it is not competent to a coparcener even now to dispose of by gift his interest in the coparcenary property so as to defeat the right of survivorship.

The present section is in accordance with the law as it previously stood and as altered by section 30 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956. The rule is simple and lays down that an adoption of a son or a daughter does not deprive the adoptive father or mother of the power to dispose of his or her (disposable) property by transfer inter vivos or by will. The rule does not deal with the nature of the rights of disposal of his or her property by an adoptive father or adoptive mother which must be regulated by other provisions and rules of law. It only lays down that the adoption of a son or daughter is not per se to have the effect of depriving the adoptive father or adoptive mother of the rights to dispose of his or her property. An agreement to the contrary made by the adoptive father or adoptive mother, that is, not to dispose of his or her property, in consideration of the gift of his son or daughter by the person giving in adoption is valid and binding on the adoptive father or adoptive mother as the case may be, though of course it would not affect the right of a transferee of the property for consideration and without notice of the right created by the agreement (p).

Determination of adoptive mother in certain cases.

14. (1) Where a Hindu who has a wife living adopts a child, she shall be deemed to be the adoptive mother.

(2) Where an adoption has been made with the consent of more than one wife, the senior-most in marriage among them shall be deemed to be the adoptive mother and the others to be step-mothers.

(3) Where a widower or a bachelor adopts a child, any wife whom he subsequently marries shall be deemed to be the step-mother of the adopted child.

---

(p) Reference may be made to section 40 of the Transfer of Property Act.

(4) Where a widow or an unmarried woman adopts a child, any husband whom she marries subsequently shall be deemed to be the step-father of the adopted child.

Determination of adoptive mother in certain cases.—It was well established under the law of adoption as applied prior to the commencement of this Act, that adoption had the effect of transferring the adopted boy from his natural family into the adoptive family. It conferred upon the adoptee the same rights and privileges in the family of the adopter as the legitimate son, except in a few cases [§ 494(1)]. It was a necessary corollary to that rule that where a person having a wife living adopted a son, the son also became a son of the adoptive mother. Where a person, having two or more wives, made an adoption in conjunction with one of them specially selected for the purpose, the wife so selected ranked as the adoptive mother, and the other wives as mere step-mothers. The adopted son acquired the right to succeed to the property of the adoptive mother as if he were a natural born son subject to certain qualifications which are not now material. There was, however, some uncertainty about the law on certain aspects of the matter.

Sub-section (1) lays down the express rule that where a Hindu who has a wife living adopts a son or a daughter (which must be with the consent of the wife), she shall be deemed to be the adoptive mother of the son or daughter or both as the case may be. When a statute enacts that something shall be deemed to exist or some status shall be deemed to have been acquired, which would not otherwise have been so, the court is bound to have regard to the statutory fiction and it has to be resorted to and full effect must be given to it and it should be carried to its logical conclusion. The following statement of the principle by Lord Asquith in a decision of the House of Lords (q) was recently quoted with approval by the Supreme Court (r): "If you are bidden to treat an imaginary state of affairs as real, you must surely, unless prohibited from doing so, also imagine as real the consequences and incidents which, if the putative state of affairs had in fact existed, must inevitably have flowed from or accompanied it. . . . The statute says you must imagine a certain state of affairs; it does not say that having done so, you must cause or permit your imagination to boggle when it comes to the inevitable corollaries of that state of affairs.

Sub-section (2) lays down the effect of adoption ex parte materna quod the adoptee where the adoptive father had more than one wife living at the time of adoption and the adoption had taken place with the consent of all of them as required by the Explanation to section 7 of the Act. In such a case only the seniormost in marriage among the wives is to be deemed to have become the adoptive mother of the adopted child and the others are to be deemed to be his step-mothers.

Sub-section (3) lays down the effect of adoption ex parte materna quod the adoptee where the adoptive father was at the time of adoption a widower

---

(q) East End Dwelling Co. Ltd. v. Finsbury Borrow Council (1952) A.C. 109.

(r) State of Bombay v. Pandurang (1953) S.C.R. 773, 778, 779.

or a bachelor and subsequently gets married. The wife subsequently married by the adoptive father will not be in the position of the adoptive mother of the adoptee but is to be deemed to be only the step-mother of the adoptee.

Illustration

A a widower adopts a son B and subsequently marries *A*1. *A*1 dies thereafter leaving her surviving her husband A and B the adoptee. She leaves property acquired by herself. The property left by her will be inherited by A alone and B is not entitled to claim a share in it under section 15(1)(a) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

Sub-section (4) lays down the effect of adoption where a widow or an unmarried woman adopts a child and subsequently gets married. The husband subsequently married by the adoptive mother will not be in the position of the adoptive father but is to be deemed to be only the step-father of the adoptee.

Illustration

A an unmarried woman adopts a daughter D. Subsequently she marries H and has a son S by him. On the death of H his property will devolve upon A and S to the exclusion of D. But the property that A might leave on her death thereafter will devolve upon D and S in equal shares.

15. No adoption which has been validly made can be cancelled by the adoptive father or mother or any other person, nor can the adopted child renounce his or her status as such and return to the family of his or her birth.

Valid adoption not to be cancelled.

Valid adoption cannot be cancelled.—This section lays down the rule that a valid adoption once made cannot be cancelled by the person taking in adoption or any other party to the same. Nor can the adopted boy or girl renounce his or her status as such and return to the family of his or her birth. The rule that prevailed under the previous law was similar (§ 493). There is nothing, however, to prevent an adoptee from renouncing his or her right of inheritance in the adoptive family in which case the inheritance would go to the next heir (s).

It has been held in a recent decision of the High Court of Gujarat that a goda datta adoption which prevails by custom in certain families is unilaterally revocable and the right of revocation is not affected by this section (ss).

16. Whenever any document registered under any law for the time being in force is produced before any court purporting to record an adoption made and is signed by the person giving and the person taking the child in adoption, the court shall presume that the adoption has been made in compliance with the provisions of this Act unless and until it is disproved.

Presumption as to registered documents relating to adoption.

---

(s) See cases cited in f.n. (w) at p. 556 ante.

('ss) Daniraiji v. Vahuji Maharaj Chandraprabha ('71) A. Guj. 188.

Presumption arising from registered document relating to adoption.—The factum of adoption must be proved in the same way as any other fact and there are no special rules of evidence to establish an adoption. Evidence in support of an adoption must be sufficient to satisfy the heavy burden that rests upon any person who seeks to displace the natural succession by alleging an adoption (§ 512). In practice it is not unusual to have a registered document duly executed by the person taking in adoption and the person giving in adoption. The present section lays down a rule of presumption which requires that where there is a duly registered document of this nature executed by the parties "the court shall presume" that the adoption was in compliance with the provisions of the Act "unless and until it is disproved" (*ss*1). The onus of proof may shift from one party to another as it does in case of proof of any fact under the law of evidence.

17. (1) No person shall receive or agree to receive any payment or other reward in consideration of the adoption of any person, and no person shall make or give or agree to make or give to any other person any payment or reward the receipt of which is prohibited by this section.

Prohibition of certain payments.

(2) If any person contravenes the provisions of sub-section (1), he shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

(3) No prosecution under this section shall be instituted without the previous sanction of the State Government or an officer authorised by the State Government in this behalf.

Prohibition of payment of consideration or reward for adoption.—Any agreement to give consideration for giving a son or daughter in adoption is contrary to public policy as amounting to trafficking in children. The Legislature properly takes a strict view of the matter and prohibits in this section the giving and receiving of any payment or reward by any person in consideration of adoption of any person. The section renders any such transaction illegal and also renders it a penal offence to do so. Both the person who gives and the person who receives any such payment or reward are liable to punishment. Sub-section (3), however, requires that a prosecution for an offence punishable under this section can be instituted only after obtaining the requisite sanction.

CHAPTER III

MAINTENANCE

18. (1) Subject to the provisions of this section, a Hindu wife, whether married before or after the commencement of this Act, shall be entitled to be maintained by her husband during her lifetime.

Maintenance of wife.

---

(*ss*1) For instance see K. Laxminarayan v. K. Padmanau ('73) A. Orissa 3.

(2) A Hindu wife shall be entitled to live separately from her husband without forfeiting her claim to maintenance,—

(a) if he is guilty of desertion, that is to say, of abandoning her without reasonable cause and without her consent or against her wish, or of wilfully neglecting her;

(b) if he has treated her with such cruelty as to cause a reasonable apprehension in her mind that it will be harmful or injurious to live with her husband;

(c) if he is suffering from a virulent form of leprosy;

(d) if he has any other wife living;

(e) if he keeps a concubine in the same house in which his wife is living or habitually resides with a concubine elsewhere;

(f) if he has ceased to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion;

(g) if there is any other cause justifying her living separately.

(3) A Hindu wife shall not be entitled to separate residence and maintenance from her husband if she is unchaste or ceases to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion.

Maintenance of wife.—The right of a wife for maintenance is an incident of the status or estate of matrimony and a Hindu is under a legal obligation to maintain his wife. The obligation to maintain the wife is personal in character and arises from the very existence of the relation between the parties. Sub-section (1) substantially reiterates that right and lays down the general rule that a Hindu wife, whether married before or after the commencement of this Act, is entitled to be maintained by her husband during her life-time. The rule laid down in the section cannot, however, be said to be absolute although the right exists independently of the possession of any property by the husband ancestral or self-acquired. The rule laid down in this section is subject to the exceptions stated in sub-section (3) which lays down that she cannot claim separate residence and maintenance if she is unchaste or ceases to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion. The section must be read with section 23 which lays down that it shall be in the discretion of the court whether any, and if so what, maintenance shall be awarded under the provisions of this Act. The section must also be read with section 22 which relates to maintenance of dependants. A widow of a deceased Hindu is one of the dependants enumerated in section 21 and as such entitled to claim maintenance as a dependant in the circumstances set out in section 22(2). Reference may also be made to Notes under section 25 of the Hindu Marriage Act ante.

Interim maintenance.—If a prima facie case is made out the Court can in a case falling under this section grant interim relief. The jurisdiction of the Court does not depend upon the acceptance or denial of the relationship or the right by the husband (*ss*2).

Sub-section (2): Right to separate residence and maintenance.—Prior to the passing of the Hindu Married Women's Right to Separate Residence and Maintenance Act, 1946, it was held in numerous decisions of courts that a wife, though normally bound to remain under the roof and protection of the husband, could claim separate residence and maintenance, if she established that, by reason of his misconduct or by his refusal to maintain her in his own place of residence or other justifying cause, she was compelled to live apart from him (§ 555). The Act of 1946 gave a statutory recognition to this right and at the same time liberalised the law in certain respects in her favour. The text of section 2 of that enactment has been set out in §555A and it will be noticed that the grounds set out in sub-section (2) of the present section are substantially the same as under the enactment of 1946 which, in view of the present Act, is now repealed.

Cl. (a): Desertion.—A Hindu wife is entitled to live separately from her husband and claim maintenance, if he is guilty of desertion. The expression desertion represents a legal conception and is one very difficult to define. It has been said more than once that no judge has ever attempted to give a comprehensive definition of desertion, and that probably no judge would ever succeed in doing so, but among the descriptions of desertion one which has always appealed to courts trying matrimonial causes is that "desertion" is a "a withdrawal not from a place, but from a state of things." The clause aims at giving the meaning of desertion as abandonment of the wife by the husband without reasonable cause and without her consent or against her will or wilful neglect of the wife by the husband. It accords with the meaning given to the expression as used in section 10 (1) (a) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, read with the Explanation to the same. A large body of case law has developed round the legal significance of the expression both in England and in India and the broad general rules deducible from the same will be of assistance and guidance in cases which fall for determination under the present section though of course opinions in the context of enactments even slightly differently worded must always be read with the caution most commonly needed in their application to cases arising in different circumstances and varied situations. It will be noticed that the language of the present clause is intended to give a wide and comprehensive import to the expression. Reference may be made to the Notes under section 10 (1) (a) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, at pp. 703-715 ante.

Cl. (b): Cruelty.—A Hindu wife is also entitled to live separately from her husband and claim maintenance on the ground that he has treated her with such cruelty as to cause a reasonable apprehension in her mind that it will be harmful or injurious to live with the husband. The legal conception of cruelty and the degree of cruelty necessary to afford a ground to the wife to claim separate maintenance and residence under the present clause, it will be noticed, has been left to be gathered from general principles and the (*ss*2) Tarini Gupta v. Gouri Gupta ('68) A.C. 567. Also see cases cited in this decision.

---

Legislature has only purported to lay stress on the criterion to be applied, viz. reasonable apprehension in the mind of the wife that it will be harmful or injurious to her to live with her husband. There is nothing in the language of the clause to show that beyond adding that criterion which has always been applied by the courts as flowing from the accepted legal conception of cruelty, any comprehensive definition has been laid down. This is just as well since actions of men are so diverse and infinite that it is almost impossible to expect a definition exclusive or inclusive which will aptly meet every particular act or conduct and not fail in some circumstances. Though the clause does not in terms so state it is abundantly clear from the language used that the application of the rule must depend on the circumstances of each case. It would also seem to follow from the word "treated" that what is contemplated is a mode of dealing with or behaviour towards the wife which must be wilful. Without attempting to define cruelty it may be said that to amount to cruelty there must be such wilful treatment of the wife by the husband which causes suffering in body or mind whether in realization or apprehension in such a way as to render cohabitation harmful or injurious having regard to the circumstances of each case, keeping always in view the character and condition of the parties. It is necessary to bear in mind that the legal conception of treatment which is cruel comprises two distinct elements—firstly the ill-treatment complained of, and second the resultant danger or apprehension thereof. It would be inaccurate and liable to lead to confusion if the word 'cruelty' used in the clause is understood apart from its effect on the wife. The meaning given to "cruelty" in the present clause accords with the meaning given to the expression as used in section 10 (1) (b) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. Reference may be made to the Notes under that section at pp. 715-726 ante.

Cl. (c): Leprosy.—A Hindu wife is also entitled to live separately from her husband and claim maintenance from him on the ground that he is suffering from a virulent form of leprosy. It will be noticed that the clause is worded in the present tense. It is enough that the ground exists at the date when the claim for separate maintenance and residence is made by the wife, no matter whether the disease started before or after the coming into force of the Act. Reference may be made to the Notes under section (10) (1) (c) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 where the expression "suffering from a virulent form of leprosy" has been used.

Cl. (d): Husband having another wife.—The Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, laid down monogamy as a rule of law and a Hindu husband cannot marry another wife after the commencement of that Act. The ground laid down in this section can obviously exist only in case of any marriage solemnized before that Act came into operation (*ss*3). A bigamous marriage contracted after the coming into force of that Act would be null and void and no question of having another wife can arise. A somewhat anomalous position was, however, bound to remain in case of more than one marriage contracted by the husband prior to the coming into force of that Act. Such marriages could validly take place under the former system of law which recognized polygamy and therefore the Legislature enacted in section 13(2) of that Act that in case of any such marriage a wife should have the right to seek dissolution of marriage if any other wife was living. In any such case a wife who may not want to seek divorce and only desires to live separately from the husband is entitled to live separately from the husband and claim maintenance from him under the present clause. The claim is maintainable irrespective of the fact that the other marriage had taken place after or before the marriage of the applicant wife, provided the other wife is living. The rule laid down in this clause is absolute and it will make no difference that the applicant had acquiesced in or even consented to the other marriage. It is no answer to a claim for maintenance under this provision that the claimant wife is living separately without the consent of the husband or that there was wilful neglect of the husband by her (*ss*4).

---

(*ss*3) Annamalai v. Perumayee Ammal ('65) A.M. 139, 141.

The words "any other wife living" in this clause are of sufficiently wide connotation to include any wife other than the wife claiming maintenance under the section. The meaning is not confined to a wife junior to the wife who is the claimant (*s*1) nor is it necessary that the husband and the other wife should be living together. The word "living" here means alive and not living with the husband (*s*2).

A second wife who had abandoned her husband for no justifiable reason but not for immoral purposes would be entitled to live separately from the husband by virtue of the present clause and can claim maintenance under the present provision (*s*3). The court may, however, in any such cases, in the exercise of its discretion, fix the amount of maintenance bearing in mind the conduct of the wife who claims maintenance (*s*4).

Cl. (e): Keeping a concubine.—A Hindu wife is also entitled to live separately from her husband and claim maintenance from him on the ground that he keeps a concubine in the same house in which she is living or habitually resides with a concubine elsewhere.

Cl. (f): "Ceased to be a Hindu by conversion".—The term 'Hindu' in this clause must be understood in the wide sense given to it in section 2 as will be seen from sub-section (3) of that section. So a husband continues to be a 'Hindu' even though he may have been converted from any one to any other of the four religions Hinduism, Jainism, Buddhism and Sikhism and no relief can be granted under this clause to the wife simply on that ground. Conversion in the present context implies that the husband has voluntarily relinquished his religion and adopted another religion after formal ceremonial conversion. A Hindu does not cease to be a Hindu merely because he professes a theoretical allegiance to another faith or is an ardent admirer and advocate of such religion and its practices. But if he abdicates his religion by a clear act of renunciation and adopts the other religion he would cease to be a Hindu within the meaning of this clause. Reference may be made

---

(*ss*4) Siddegowda v. Parvathamma ('65) A. Mys. 299; Kiran Bala v. Bankim ('67) A.C. 603.

(*s*1) Jaggamma v. Satriyanarayanamurthi ('58) A.A. 582.

(*s*2) Kalamati v. Ratan Chand ('60) A.A. 601.

(*s*3) Ram Parkash v. Savitri Devi ('58) A. Punj. 87.

(*s*4) Ram Parkash v. Savitri Devi supra. Also see Satyanarayanamurthi v. Jaggamma ('62) A. A. 439.

to the Notes under section 13(1)(ii) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, at p. 745 ante.

Cl. (g):—In addition to the specific grounds mentioned in clauses (a) to (f) of sub-section (2) of the present section a Hindu wife is also entitled to live separately from her husband and claim maintenance from him if there is any cause justifying her living separately. Thus, for instance, conduct falling short of cruelty may justify the wife in leaving the husband and claiming maintenance from the husband if the court is satisfied that she was justified in the facts and circumstances of the case in living separately from the husband. If the conduct of the husband is such that in the opinion of the Court the wife has "grave and weighty" reason or a "grave and convincing reason" for withdrawal from the society of the husband the court would grant relief to the wife by making an order for maintenance under this clause. It would seem that any ground which would support an application for restitution of conjugal rights by her would afford a justifying cause to the wife for her living separately from her husband and entitle her to claim maintenance from the husband. She is not bound to ask for a decree for restitution of conjugal rights or for any other relief under that Act and may prefer for any reason of her own to claim the right of separate maintenance and residence on any of the grounds mentioned in this section.

Sub-section (3): Unchaste wife: Wife converted to another religion.—This sub-section lays down that a wife who is herself unchaste or who has herself renounced Hinduism by embracing any other faith cannot claim the right of separate residence and maintenance enacted in sub-section (2). It will be noted that this sub-section does not say that an unchaste wife is not entitled to any maintenance at all from the husband. What the sub-section rules is that she cannot claim separate residence and maintenance. Of course, in awarding maintenance to the wife in any such case the court would take into consideration among other factors the conduct of the wife. Under Hindu law as previously applied a wife who had been unchaste did not wholly forfeit her right to claim maintenance. If she went back to the husband and offered to live with him, his refusal to take her back entitled her to demand partition. Reference may be made to § 555 ante. Reference may also be made to section 24 post.

Maintenance of widowed daughter-in-law.

19. (1) A Hindu wife, whether married before or after the commencement of this Act, shall be entitled to be maintained after the death of her husband by her father-in-law:

Provided and to the extent that she is unable to maintain herself out of her own earnings or other property or, where she has no property of her own, is unable to obtain maintenance—

(a) from the estate of her husband or her father or mother, or

(b) from her son or daughter, if any, or his or her estate.

(2) Any obligation under sub-section (1) shall not be enforceable if the father-in-law has not the means to do so from any coparcenary property in his possession out of which the daughter-in-law has not obtained any share, and any such obligation shall cease on the remarriage of the daughter-in-law.

Maintenance of widowed daughter-in-law.—The right of a widowed daughter-in-law, when she did not succeed to her husband's property, was of considerable importance and consequence. The position and rights of a widow both under the Mitakshara and Dayabhaga law has been stated in the relevant Chapters. The rights of the three widows—one of whom was the widow of a predeceased son—mentioned in the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, to claim maintenance were not abolished by that Act in express terms but the effect was that there was little occasion for them to claim maintenance since they were entitled to a share on partition. There was nothing, however, in that Act to compel the widow to sue for partition where the deceased husband was a member of a joint family and she could, if she so desired, claim only maintenance without having recourse to the remedy of partition. The position and rights of a widow and particularly of a widow of a predeceased son in matters of inheritance have been materially changed by the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, and the question of the right to maintenance of the widow of a predeceased son must now be considered in the context of the provisions of that Act. She is one of the preferential heirs of the father-in-law mentioned in Class I of the Schedule to that Act and inherits simultaneously among others with the widow, son, daughter and mother of the deceased (s. 8). If her husband was a member of a Dayabhaga coparcenary her position and rights as an heir of her husband are fully recognized (s. 8). If her husband was at the time of his death a member of a Mitakshara coparcenary she becomes entitled by operation of section 6 of the Act to get a share out of the interest of the deceased husband in the coparcenary property on the footing of a notional partition deemed to have taken place immediately before his death. The same is the position in case of death of the father-in-law who at the time of his death was a member of a Mitakshara coparcenary. The rights of the widowed daughter-in-law to claim maintenance under the law as it stood prior to the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, under the decided cases, are considered in § 564 (2) and 564 (3) ante. Reference may also be made to § 35 and the Notes under the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, ante.

The present section deals with the right of maintenance of a widowed daughter-in-law whether married before or after the commencement of this Act. She can now claim maintenance from the father-in-law only if she is unable to obtain maintenance—

(a) out of the estate of her husband or her father or her mother (*s*5); or

(b) from her son or daughter or his or her estate.

---

(*s*5) There must be a legal right to obtain maintenance from the person of mother, see f.n. (*s*6) below.

The right to claim maintenance from the father-in-law—in the circumstances stated above—is further conditional upon the father-in-law having in his possession coparcenary property (*s*6) out of which the widowed daughter-in-law had not obtained any share. Her right to claim maintenance ceases on her remarriage. It is implicit in the rule laid down in the section that a daughter-in-law whose husband is alive has no right, moral or legal, to claim maintenance from the father-in-law.

This section is prospective and not retrospective. No illegitimate child can therefore found a claim to past maintenance under this section (*s*7).

This section must be read with section 23 which lays down that it shall be in the discretion of the court whether any, and if so what, maintenance shall be awarded under the provisions of this Act. This section must also be read with section 22 post which relates to the right of dependants of a deceased person to claim maintenance from heirs who have inherited his estate (e.g. by a will). Section 21 (vii) mentions a widowed daughter-in-law as one of the dependants of a deceased Hindu.

Maintenance of children and aged parents.

20. (1) Subject to the provisions of this section a Hindu is bound, during his or her lifetime, to maintain his or her legitimate or illegitimate children and his or her aged or infirm parents.

(2) A legitimate or illegitimate child may claim maintenance from his or her father or mother so long as the child is a minor.

(3) The obligation of a person to maintain his or her aged or infirm parent or a daughter who is unmarried extends in so far as the parent or the unmarried daughter, as the case may be, is unable to maintain himself or herself out of his or her own earnings or property (*s*8).

Explanation.—In this section "parent" includes a childless step-mother.

Maintenance of children and aged parents.—A Hindu is under a legal obligation to maintain his wife, his minor sons, his unmarried daughters and his aged parents whether he possesses any property or not. The obligation to maintain these relations is personal and legal in character and arises from the very existence of the relationship between the parties. Section 18 of the present Act reiterates the right of a wife to claim maintenance and support from her husband. The present section gives statutory form to the legal obligation of a Hindu also to maintain his minor children and his aged or infirm parents. But the law laid down in the section goes further than that and rules that not merely a male Hindu—as was the law previously applicable—but a female Hindu as well is now under a legal obligation to maintain legitimate or illegitimate children and aged or infirm parents.

---

(*s*6) As to where the father-in-law has both self-acquired and coparcenary property see Jal Kaur v. Pala Singh ('61) A. Punj. 391. Also see Gurdip Kaur v. Ghamed Singh ('65) A. Punj. 238 (F.B.).

(*s*7) Mukta Bai v. Kamalaksha ('60) A. Mys. 182.

(*s*8) Samu Bai v. Magan Lal ('61) A. Raj. 207.

The Hindu law as previously applicable did recognize the right of an illegitimate son of a Hindu by a Hindu woman to claim maintenance. The law on the subject was, however, not quite uniform. There was no provision in Hindu law for the maintenance of illegitimate daughters; but they could claim maintenance from the putative father under section 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The right created by this section and section 22 are only prospective and not retrospective. These provisions do not create any right in favour of an illegitimate daughter to claim maintenance against the estate of the father who died prior to the commencement of the Act (*s*9).

A claim for maintenance under this section can be made by an illegitimate child born of adulterous intercourse (*ss*9).

The present section lays down some very simple rules and casts the obligation of maintaining minor children legitimate or illegitimate both on the father as well as the mother and it also rules that a Hindu male and female are both under the legal obligation to maintain their aged or infirm parents. Maintenance includes provision for food, clothing, residence, education of the children and medical attendance and treatment [s. 3(b) (i)]; and in case of an unmarried daughter, also the reasonable expenses of and incident to her marriage [s. 3(b) (ii)]. The obligation to maintain parents and an unmarried daughter extends in so far as any one of the latter is unable to maintain himself or herself out of his own earnings or other property. The expression parents and children in the present context would include the adoptive father and adoptive mother as also adopted children respectively. A step-father is not entitled to claim maintenance from a step-child but a childless step-mother can claim maintenance from the step-son or step-daughter. This section must be read with section 23 which lays down that it shall be in the discretion of the court whether any, and if so what, maintenance shall be awarded under the provisions of this Act. This section must also be read with section 22 post.

The provision for maintenance of a mother under this section does not, of course, affect the mother's right to claim a share on partition under ordinary Hindu law (*s*10) or her rights under the Hindu Succession Act.

Sub-section (3) lays down no limitation as to the age of the unmarried daughter. It gives statutory recognition to the rule under the prior law that a Hindu male or female is under an obligation to maintain his or her unmarried daughter regardless of age so long as she is not able to maintain herself (*ss*10).

Dependants defined.

21. For the purposes of this Chapter "dependants" mean the following relatives of the deceased:—

(i) his or her father;

(ii) his or her mother;

---

(*s*9) Jaiwanti Mafatlal v. Arvind N. Mafatlal ('68) A.B. 314.

(*ss*9) Kalla Maistry v. Kanniammal ('63) A. M. 210.

(*s*10) Samu Bai v. Magan Lal ('61) A. Raj. 207.

(*ss*10) Wali Ram v. Mukhtiar Kaur ('69) A.P.&H. 285.

(iii) his widow, so long as she does not re-marry;

(iv) his or her son or the son of his predeceased son or the son of a predeceased son of his predeceased son, so long as he is a minor: provided and to the extent that he is unable to obtain maintenance in the case of a grandson from his father's or mother's estate, and in the case of a great-grandson, from the estate of his father or mother or father's father or father's mother;

(v) his or her unmarried daughter, or the unmarried daughter of his pre-deceased son or the unmarried daughter of a pre-deceased son of his pre-deceased son, so long as she remains unmarried: provided and to the extent that she is unable to obtained maintenance, in the case of a grand-daughter from her father's or mother's estate and in the case of a great-grand-daughter from the estate of her father or mother or father's father or father's mother;

(vi) his widowed daughter: provided and to the extent that she is unable to obtain maintenance—

(a) from the estate of her husband; or

(b) from her son or daughter if any, or his or her estate; or

(c) from her father-in-law or his father or the estate of either of them;

(vii) any widow of his son or of a son of his predeceased son, so long as she does not re-marry: provided and to the extent that she is unable to obtain maintenance from her husband's estate, or from her son or daughter, if any, or his or her estate, or in the case of a grandson's widow, also from her father-in-law's estate;

(viii) his or her minor illegitimate son, so long as he remains a minor;

(xi) his or her illegitimate daughter, so long as she remains unmarried.

Maintenance of dependants.

22. (1) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (2), the heirs of a deceased Hindu are bound to maintain the dependants of the deceased out of the estate inherited by them from the deceased.

(2) Where a dependant has not obtained, by testamentary or intestate succession, any share in the estate of a Hindu dying after the commencement of this Act, the dependant shall be entitled, subject to the provisions of this Act, to maintenance from those who take the estate.

(3) The liability of each of the persons who takes the estate shall be in proportion to the value of the share or part of the estate taken by him or her.

(4) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (2) or sub-section (3), no person who is himself or herself a dependant shall be liable to contribute to the maintenance of others, if he or she has obtained a share or part the value of which is, or would, if the liability to contribute were enforced, become less than what would be awarded to him or her by way of maintenance under this Act.

Sections 20, 21 and 22 may be read together.

This section is not retrospective in its operation (*s*11).

Dependants: Maintenance of dependants.—In the matter of persons who are entitled to claim maintenance under the present enactment the scheme is to deal in the first place with the right of maintenance of wife from her husband (s. 18); the right of maintenance of widowed daughter-in-law from her father-in-law (s. 19); the right of maintenance of minor children (legitimate or illegitimate) from the father and mother (s. 20); and the right of maintenance of aged and infirm parents from their sons and daughters (s. 20). In all these cases the right is against an existing person, husband, father-in-law, father, mother, son or daughter as the case may be. After stating the right of all these persons the Act proceeds in section 21 to define persons who are dependants of a deceased Hindu and in section 22 lays down rules relating to the right of maintenance of dependants from the heirs of a deceased Hindu or others who have inherited the estate of such deceased person. Sections 21 and 22 may also be read with section 23 which lays down that it shall be in the discretion of the court whether any, and if so what, maintenance shall be awarded under the provisions of this Act. The principal general rule laid down in the present section is that a dependant of a male or female deceased Hindu, who has not obtained any share in the estate of the deceased (dying after the commencement of this Act), is entitled to claim maintenance from those who take the estate.

The expression "heirs" in this section includes all persons on whom the estate has devolved upon intestacy as well as under a testamentary instrument (*s*12).

The dependants of a deceased Hindu entitled to claim maintenance as stated above are—

(i) his or her father;

(ii) his or her mother;

(iii) his widow (so long as she does not remarry);

---

(*s*11) Mukta Bai v. Kamalaksha ('60) A. Mys. 182. Also see Jaiwanti Mafatlal v. Arvind N. Mafatlal ('68) A.B. 314; Gulabchand v. Sheokaran ('64) A.P. 45.

(*s*12) Gulzara Singh v. Tej Kaur ('61) A. Punj. 288.

(iv) his or her minor son;
(v) the (minor) son of his predeceased son;
(vi) the (minor) son of a predeceased son of his predeceased son;
(vii) his or her unmarried daughter;
(viii) the unmarried daughter of his predeceased son;
(ix) the unmarried daughter of a predeceased son of his predeceased son;
(x) his widowed daughter;
(xi) the widow of his predeceased son (so long as she does not remarry);
(xii) the widow of a son of his predeceased son (so long as she does not remarry);
(xiii) his or her illegitimate minor son;
(xiv) his or her illegitimate daughter, so long as she remains unmarried.

It will be noticed that a larger number of persons are included among the dependants of a male Hindu.

In case of the grandson the right to claim maintenance as a dependant and the extent of such right is conditional upon his being unable to obtain maintenance from his father's or mother's estate. In case of the great-grandson the right to claim maintenance as a dependant and the extent of such right is conditional upon his being unable to obtain maintenance from the estate of his father or mother or father's father or father's mother. In case of a granddaughter the right to claim maintenance and the extent of such right is conditional upon her being unable to obtain maintenance as a dependant from the estate of her father or mother. In case of a great-grand-daughter the right to claim maintenance as a dependant and the extent of such right is conditional upon her being unable to obtain maintenance from the estate of her father or mother or father's father or father's mother. In case of the widowed daughter the right to claim maintenance as a dependant and the extent of such right is conditional upon her being unable to obtain maintenance from the estate of her husband; her son or daughter; or the estate of her son or daughter; or from her father-in-law or his father or the estate of either of them. In case of the widow of his son the right to claim maintenance as a dependant and the extent of such right is conditional upon her being unable to obtain maintenance from the estate of her husband; or from her son or daughter; or the estate of her son or daughter. In case of the widow of the son of his predeceased son the right to claim maintenance as a dependant and the extent of such right is conditional upon her being unable to obtain maintenance from the estate of her husband; or from her son or daughter; or the estate of her son or daughter, or the estate of her father-in-law.

Widow of a deceased coparcener.—Sections 21 and 22 are not intended to affect the general rule of Hindu law that the widow of a deceased coparcener is entitled to maintenance out of the coparcenary property held by the surviving coparceners (*s*13).

---

(*s*13) Govardhan v. Gangabai ('64) A.M.P. 168.

Sister.—A sister is not included in the list of dependants in section 21 but that does not in any way abridge her preexisting right to claim maintenance from her brother who inherited the father's property. Her right has not been obliterated (*s*14).

Illegitimate son of a sudra.—Under the Mitakshara law, prior to this Act, the illegitimate son of a sudra had the right to claim maintenance as stated in § 551 ante. Any such right which vested in him, prior to this Act, is not stopped by these two sections. He is entitled to maintenance for life and not only during his minority, as would now be the case under section 21 (viii) and section 22 (*s*15).

Avaruddha stri.—These two sections are prospective and not retrospective in their operation and they do not destroy the right of an avaruddha stri to claim maintenance which had vested in her before the commencement of this Act, although she is not included in the list of dependants (*s*15).

Sub-section (3).—The liability of the persons who have taken the estate of the deceased male or female Hindu to provide maintenance for any of the dependants of the deceased is not joint and several but is proportionate to the value of the share or part of the estate received by each of such persons.

Sub-section (4).—A person who is himself or herself a dependant of the deceased male or female and has taken a share or part of the estate of the deceased is liable to contribute towards the maintenance of any other dependant who has not obtained any share or part in the estate of the deceased by testamentary or intestate succession. His or her proportionate contribution in any such case under sub-section (3) is, however, to be computed in such a manner that what remains with him or her of the share or part of the estate after his or her liability to make contribution is enforced, is not, in terms of money, less than what would have been awarded to him or her by way of maintenance as a dependant. The maintenance that might have been awarded to him or her if he or she had not taken a share or part of the estate would have to be assessed in terms of a gross payment for the purpose of balancing it against the value of the share or part of the estate taken by him or her. It is evident that the ascertainment of the amount of proportionate contribution by a dependant who has taken his or her share or part of the estate will not depend simply on any arithmetical calculations because the court will have to compute in terms of money the value of the amount of the notional maintenance that might have become awardable to him or her and it seems that this may present considerable difficulty in some cases.

Amount of maintenance.

23. (1) It shall be in the discretion of the court to determine whether any, and if so what, maintenance shall be awarded under the provisions of this Act, and in doing so the court shall have due regard to the considerations set out in sub-section (2) or sub-section (3), as the case may be, so far as they are applicable.

---

(*s*14) Ramabai v. Narayan Rao ('67) A.M.P. 86. 1970.
(*s*15) Gopala Rao v. Sitharamamma ('65) A.S.C.

(2) In determining the amount of maintenance, if any, to be awarded to a wife, children or aged or infirm parents under this Act, regard shall be had to—

(a) the position and status of the parties;

(b) the reasonable wants of the claimant;

(c) if the claimant is living separately, whether the claimant is justified in doing so;

(d) the value of the claimant's property and any income derived from such property, or from the claimant's own earnings or from any other source;

(e) the number of persons entitled to maintenance under this Act.

(3) In determining the amount of maintenance, if any, to be awarded to a dependant under this Act, regard shall be had to—

(a) the net value of the estate of the deceased after providing for the payment of his debts;

(b) the provision, if any, made under a will of the deceased in respect of the dependant;

(c) the degree of relationship between the two;

(d) the reasonable wants of the dependant;

(e) the past relations between the dependant and the deceased;

(f) the value of the property of the dependant and any income derived from such property; or from his or her earnings or from any other source;

(g) the number of dependants entitled to maintenance under this Act.

Assessment of quantum of maintenance payable under the provisions of the Act.—This section lays down three sets of rules relating to payment of maintenance under the various provisions of the Act—

(1) It is left to the discretion of the court to decide whether any maintenance should or should not be awarded—

(a) to a wife, widowed daughter-in-law, minor son, unmarried daughter or aged or infirm parents under sections 18 to 20 of the Act; or

(b) to any dependant of a deceased male or female Hindu under the provisions contained in sections 21 and 22 of the Act.

It is also left to the discretion of the court to determine the amount of maintenance (if any) to be awarded to any such persons.

(2) In exercising its discretion in the matter of assessment of the quantum of maintenance to be awarded to a wife, children or aged parents under the provisions of sections 18 to 20 of the Act the court must have regard to the factors and circumstances set out in sub-section (2) of this section.

(3) In exercising its discretion in the matter of assessment of the quantum of maintenance to be awarded to a dependant under the provisions of sections 21 and 22 of the Act the court must have regard to the factors and circumstances set out in sub-section (3) of this section.

Sub-section (1): Discretion of the court.—The Act vests the court with a wide discretion in the matter of granting maintenance but the discretion is judicial and not arbitrary or capricious. It is to be guided on sound principles of law and to be exercised within the ambit of the provisions of the relevant sections and having regard to the object of the Act. In determining whether maintenance should be awarded or not the court would have regard to all the facts and circumstances of the case—including the respondent's own income and other property, if any; the income and other property of the applicant; the conduct of the parties in the matter of their family relations with one another; and all the factors set out in sub-sections (2) and (3) as are applicable to the case.

Sub-section (2).—The sub-section read with sub-section (1), it will be noticed, leaves the matter of fixation of the amount of maintenance to the discretion of the court while stressing that the position and status of the parties, reasonable want of the claimant, the income and property of the claimant, and the number of persons whom the respondent is bound to maintain, are among the factors and circumstances which must be taken into consideration by the court. It does not seem helpful to refer to the immense range of decisions of courts in India under the previous law on the subject of maintenance and fixation of the amount of maintenance in case of different claimants though most of the cases relate to maintenance to be awarded to wife and widow. Danger lies in phrases used aptly enough in a particular context and opinions useful in their own sphere being treated as riders to the actual statutory language now employed by the Legislature. This sub-section which must be read with sub-section (1) does not purport to lay down any rigid rule or indicate any yardstick for all cases covered by it nor does it point to any fixed criterion and leaves the matter of assessment to the discretion of the court and only emphasizes that the considerations mentioned in it are essential factors to which regard must always be had. The elements and factors to be considered must include everything having legitimate bearing on present or prospective matters affecting the family relations and lives of the claimant and the respondent which are obviously not susceptible of proper enumeration. In the exercise of its discretion the court has to select or emphasize such of the factors as are appropriate to the facts of the particular case. In a leading case on the subject of fixation of maintenance the Privy Council pointed out that maintenance depended "upon a gathering together of all the facts of the situation, the amount of free estate, the past life of the married parties and the families, a survey of the condition and necessities and rights of the members, on a reasonable view of change of circumstances possibly required in the future, regard being of course had to the scale and mode of living and the age, habits and wants and class of life of the parties." (t). What is stated above is, in general, applicable to the case of any of the claimants mentioned in this sub-section. In case of a wife in addition to these factors the mode of living of the parties in the matter of expenses while cohabitation lasted may be taken into consideration though it would not always be a reliable index because the past mode of life may have been on a penurious or miserable scale or on the other hand on an extravagant scale. But if the scale was suited to the position and status of the parties that may be a factor to be considered in the estimate where there is no reliable data on the point of income or property. It would be necessary and of primary importance to consider the overall financial position of the respondent in all cases under the sub-section, though curiously enough the sub-section omits to stress the same while it mentions the financial position and income of the claimant. Anyway, the words "position and status of the parties" in clause (a) of the sub-section are wide enough to include the financial position of both the parties as a vital consideration in the matter.

In Kulbhushan v. Raj Kumari (*t*1) the Supreme Court expressed its entire agreement with the observations of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council quoted above and stated that this sub-section made no departure from the principles enunciated there except perhaps to a limited extent envisaged in sub-clauses (d) and (e) of the section.

One factor of primary importance in making the reasonable induction required of the Court, would obviously be the overall financial position of the respondent which would have to be determined having regard to the "free estate" and "free income" of the respondent. In the Supreme Court case referred to above the Court regarded income-tax and contributions to provident fund as legitimate deductions in arriving at the "free income" of the respondent. Of course, the financial position of both the parties must enter in the final assessment of the quantum of maintenance to be allowed by the court.

Claimant living separately.—A dependant, for instance a daughter, who has good reasons for living separately (from the father) is entitled to claim maintenance under this section (*t*2).

Claimant's own earnings.—Clause (d) does not speak of the claimant's capacity to earn but of actual earnings and existence of sources of income (*t*2).

Sub-section (3).—The sub-section read with sub-section (1), it will be noticed, leaves the matter of fixation of the amount of maintenance to be awarded to any dependant of a deceased male or female Hindu to the discretion of the court while stressing that the amount of free estate, the benefit if any that the dependant might have already taken under a will of the deceased, the closeness of relationship between the two, the past relations between the claimant and the deceased, the reasonable wants of

---

(t) Ekradeshwari v. Homeshwar (1929) 56 I.A. 182, 8 Pat. 840, 116 I.C. 409, ('29) P.C. 128.

(*t*1) ('71) A.S.C. 234.

(*t*2) Laxmi v. Krishna ('68) A. Mys. 288.

the claimant, the financial position and income of the claimant and the number of other dependants entitled to claim maintenance from the estate are among the factors and circumstances which must be taken into consideration by the court. This sub-section which must be read with sub-section (1) does not purport to lay down any rigid rule or indicate any yardstick for all cases covered by it nor does it point to any fixed criterion and leaves the matter of assessment to the discretion of the court and only emphasizes that the considerations mentioned in it are essential factors to which regard must always be had. The elements and factors to be considered must include the conduct of the claimant and everything having legitimate bearing on present or prospective matters affecting the claimant as well as the estate which are obviously not susceptible of proper enumeration. In the exercise of its discretion the court must have regard among others to the prime factors mentioned above and select or emphasize such of the factors and circumstances as are appropriate to the facts of the particular case. It is out of numerous circumstances which cannot all be listed, many of them small in themselves, that assessment of what is just and reasonable maintenance for the particular dependant has to be arrived at by the court.

Arrears of maintenance.—The principle on which the court exercises its discretion in the matter of fixation of quantum of arrears of maintenance, particularly when the claim is for an unduly long period is well settled. In such cases the Court in the exercise of its discretion generally awards arrears of maintenance at a small rate than that fixed as the normal rate and often at a rate which is half of that normal rate (t2) (supra).

Claimant to maintenance should be a Hindu.

24. No person shall be entitled to claim maintenance under this Chapter if he or she has ceased to be a Hindu by conversion to another religion.

Claimant to maintenance should be a Hindu.—The Legislature has inserted in this section a general provision to the effect that the person claiming maintenance under any section of the Act (Chapter III) must be a Hindu. This also follows from section 2 of the Act which states that the Act applies to Hindus in the whole connotation given to that expression. It is a necessary corollary to the rule laid down in this section that a person who is awarded maintenance under any provision of the Act, by a decree of the court or by agreement of the parties, forfeits the right to claim future maintenance from the date of his or her ceasing to be a Hindu by conversion to any religion other than Hinduism, Jainism, Buddhism or Sikhism, and the decree or agreement becomes unenforceable. If necessary, the court will in any such case rescind any previous order for maintenance that may have been made by it.

Where a Hindu daughter is converted to another religion pending adjudication of her claim against her father for past and future maintenance she would be entitled to recover maintenance till date of conversion, though not to future maintenance (tx).

---

(tx) Sundaranbal v. Suppiah ('63) A.M. 260.

25. The amount of maintenance, whether fixed by a decree of court or by agreement, either before or after the commencement of this Act, may be altered subsequently if there is a material change in the circumstances justifying such alteration.

Amount of maintenance may be altered on change of circumstances.

Variation of order or agreement fixing maintenance.—This section, it is submitted, confers ample powers on the court to vary, modify or even discharge any order fixing the amount of maintenance made by a decree of the court even though it only states that the amount of maintenance may be "altered" subsequently if there is a material change in the circumstances justifying such action. There must be some material change in the circumstances justifying the alteration. It would seem that the circumstances justifying alteration would principally be changes in the pecuniary circumstances of the parties. The section does not speak of the conduct of the parties but it would seem that the subsequent conduct of the parties may in a given case become relevant consideration for the court in determining whether there has been a material change in the circumstances justifying such alteration.

It may now be taken as settled law that a decree or agreement fixing maintenance in favour of a wife or widow or other claimant is no bar to a claim for increased maintenance under this section if the circumstances justify such alteration and it is immaterial whether the decree or agreement was before or after this Act. The claimant would be entitled to increased maintenance if there is a material change in the circumstances notwithstanding the fact that the claimant had agreed not to claim higher maintenance even in changed circumstances (*tt*1). The right conferred under this section supersedes any contract to the contrary. The fact that the rate of maintenance was fixed by a compromise decree makes no difference. The same is the position with regard to a family settlement (*tt*2).

Alteration in the amount of maintenance fixed by a decree cannot be obtained merely by making an application to the court unless there is provision in the decree granting liberty to apply to have such variation made by way of an application. Otherwise, the only way in which the variation can be sought would be by way of a suit (*tt*3). A party obtaining any such decree should take care to reserve liberty to apply.

---

(*tt*1) Gopala Rao v. Sitharamamma ('65) A.S.C. 1970, 1973, 1974: See Ambayamma v. Ganapathi ('69) A.A.P. 213 and cases there cited. Also see Binda Prasad Singh v. Mundrika Devi ('68) A.P. 196. In Veeranna v. Seethamma ('69) A.A.P. 15 there was surrender of estate by widow in favour of reversioners who agreed to give her maintenance and the widow agreed not to claim enhanced maintenance in future. It was held that the agreement was binding on her.

(*tt*2) Seshi Ammal v. Thaiyu Ammal ('64) A.M. 217; Rangamma v. Venkatarajalu ('66) A.M. 428 (family settlement).

(*tt*3) Menokabala v. Panchanan ('66) A.C. 228; Binda Prasad v. Mundrika Devi, supra.

26. Subject to the provisions contained in section 27 debts of every description contracted or payable by the deceased shall have priority over the claims of his dependants for maintenance under this Act.

Debts to have priority.

Debts payable by estate of deceased to have priority over claim for maintenance unless there is a charge created in respect of same.—Debts contracted or payable by a deceased Hindu take precedence over the right of maintenance of any of his dependants mentioned in section 21 of the Act unless there is a valid charge created in respect of the same (s. 27). The section, it will be noticed, deals with the question of priority as between the claims of dependants of a deceased Hindu for maintenance and those of the creditors of the deceased. The position is the same even as regards the claim for maintenance of the wife, daughter-in-law, minor children or aged parents of a Hindu in cases falling under sections 18 to 20 unless the claim has been secured by a valid charge. Reference may be made to §§ 569-572 ante.

27. A dependant's claim for maintenance under this Act shall not be a charge on the estate of the deceased or any portion thereof, unless one has been created by the will of the deceased by a decree of court, by agreement between the dependant and the owner of the estate or portion, or otherwise.

Maintenance when to be a charge.

Maintenance when to be a charge.—This section reiterates the rule established by a long series of decisions under the law as previously applied —that the claim even of a widow for maintenance is not a charge upon the estate of her deceased husband whether joint or separate until it is fixed and charged upon the estate. This may be done by a decree of the court (*tt*4), or by the will of the deceased or by agreement between the widow and the holder of the estate or any portion of the estate or otherwise. Therefore, the right of maintenance of any claimant is liable to be defeated by a transfer of the property to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of any such claim for maintenance. In fact, any such right for maintenance, for instance of a widow or a minor son is one of an indefinite character which, unless made a charge upon the property, is enforceable only like any other liability in respect of which no charge exists.

It is only equitable that when a Court creates a charge for maintenance in favour of a claimant it should not do so over properties far out of proportion to the quantum of maintenance decreed in favour of the claimant (u).

This section may be read with section 28 which deals with the effect of transfer of property on right to maintenance.

---

(*tt*4) Bhago v. Bachni ('72) A.P.&H. 169 [A charge may be made by decree of court: But court cannot direct possession of property to be given in lieu of maintenance].

(u) Ramaswamy v. Baghyammal ('67) A.M. 457.

28. Where a dependant has a right to receive maintenance out of an estate, and such estate or any part thereof is transferred, the right to receive maintenance may be enforced against the transferee if the transferee has notice of the right, or if the transfer is gratuitous; but not against the transferee for consideration and without notice of the right.

Effect of transfer of property on right to maintenance.

Effect of transfer of property on right to maintenance.—This section may be read with section 27 above. It reiterates the rule established by a long series of decisions under the law as previously applied—that the right of maintenance of any dependant, for instance a widow, not being a charge, it is but equitable that it should not be enforced against a transferee for value without notice of the right. A transferee for value may be a purchaser or he may be a mortgagee. The provisions of section 39 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, are to the same effect:

> "Where a third person has a right to receive maintenance, or a provision for advancement or marriage from the profits of immovable property, and such property is transferred . . . the right may be enforced against the transferee, if he has notice thereof or if the transfer is gratuitous; but not against a transferee for consideration and without notice of the right, nor against such property in his hands."

Reference may be made to §§ 569-572 ante.

There is no reason why the words "right to receive maintenance" in the section should not include a right to claim enhanced maintenance (*u*1).

The provisions of the Act may not apply to the case of enforcement of a claim against a joint family. But the Act apart, a widow can claim enhanced maintenance and enforce her rights under a decree for maintenance, in altered circumstances, against an alienee for consideration with notice of the charge created by the decree (*u*1).

The section in terms speaks of the right of a 'dependant' and does not purport to deal with the rights of a wife or unmarried daughter who are not dependants within the meaning of section 21 and this section does not apply to their case. But it is competent to the court in exercise of its discretion to create a charge in their favour in respect of maintenance (*uu*1). The section is not exhaustive and a Hindu wife is still entitled to rely on section 39 of the Transfer of Property Act which is not abrogated by the present section (*u*2); and it is open to the court to create a charge in her favour over the property of the husband as against an alienee of the same who has purchased the same with notice of the right (*u*2).

The right to maintenance cannot, of course, be defeated by a gratuitous transfer (*u*3).

---

(*u*1) Kaveri Amma v. Parameswari Amma ('71) A. Kerala 216.

(*uu*1) Laxmi v. Krishna ('68) A. Mys. 288.

(*u*2) Ramaswamy v. Baghyammal ('67) A.M. 457.

(*u*3) Ramappa v. Gouruwa ('68) A. Mys. 270. Also see Kapur Kaur v. Kishan Singh ('70) A.P. & H. 270.

The expression "such estate" must mean only such estate out of which the claimant had a right to receive maintenance and cannot include any other property out of which the claimant had no right to claim maintenance (*u*4).

CHAPTER IV

REPEALS AND SAVINGS

29. Repeals. [Repealed]

30. Nothing contained in this Act shall affect any adoption made before the commencement of this Act, and the validity and effect of any such adoption shall be determined as if this Act had not been passed.

Savings.

Savings.—The Act as expressly ruled in section 4 inter alia supersedes the law relating to adoptions as previously applicable to Hindus. But it is not intended to have retroactive operation by affecting the validity and effect of any adoption made in accordance with that law before the Act came into operation. It is a firmly established principle of interpretation that except as to matters of procedure a statute is not to be given retrospective effect so as to impair or disturb any existing rights or obligations unless it says so in express terms or unless such intendment has to be gathered from necessary implication of the language used. Moreover section 5 of the Act expressly lays down that (only) adoptions made after commencement of the Act are to be regulated by the provisions of this Act. Savings are sometimes inserted by the Legislature ex majore cautela as for instance by the present section which in terms states that nothing contained in the Act is to affect any adoption made before its commencement and that the validity and effect of any such adoption is to be determined in accordance with the previous law.

In the undermentioned case it has been held that the expression "effect of any such adoption" in this section contemplates and saves all the legal consequences which flow from a valid adoption made before the commencement of the Act (v).

---

(*u*4) Parul Bala v. Bangshidhar ('71) A.C. 270. ('71) A. Guj. 188. Reference may be made to (v) Daniraiji v. Vahuji Maharaj Chandraprabha Notes under section 15 ante.

APPENDIX I

THE HINDU DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY ACT, 1916.

BEING

ACT No. XV OF 1916.

[Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 28th September 1916.]

An Act to remove certain existing disabilities in respect of the power of disposition of property by Hindus for the benefit of persons not in existence at the date of such disposition.

WHEREAS it is expedient to remove certain existing disabilities in respect of the power of disposition of property by Hindus for the benefit of persons not in existence at the date of such disposition; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916.

a It extends to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

Dispositions for the benefit of persons not in existence.

2. Subject to the limitations and provisions specified in this Act, no disposition of property by a Hindu, whether by transfer inter vivos or by will, shall be invalid by reason only that any person for whose benefit it may have been made was not in existence at the date of such disposition.

Limitations and conditions.

3. The limitations and provisions referred to in section 2 shall be the following, namely:—

(a) in respect of dispositions by transfer inter vivos those contained in Chapter II[b] of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and

(b) in respect of dispositions by will, those contained in sections 113, 114, 115 and 116 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925.[c]

4. [Omitted by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 21 of 1929, sec. 12.][d]

---

(a) This Act was extended to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir by the Miscellaneous Personal Laws (Extension) Act XLVIII of 1959.

(b) "Chapter II" was substituted for "sections 13, 14 and 20", by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 21 of 1929, sec. 12, which came into force on the 1st April 1930.

(c) The words and figures "sections 113, 114, 115 and 116 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925," were substituted for the words and figures "sections 100 and 101 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865," by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 21 of 1929, sec. 12.

(d) The original sec. 4 was as follows:—4. Failure of Prior disposition. Where a disposition of property fails by reason of any of the limitations referred to in section 3, any disposition intended to take effect after or upon failure of such prior disposition also fails.

5. Where the State Government is of opinion that the Khoja community in the State or any part thereof desire that the provisions of this Act should be extended to such community, it may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare that the provisions of this Act, with the substitution of the word "Khojas" or "Khoja," as the case may be, for the word "Hindus" or "Hindu" wherever those words occur, shall apply to that community in such area as may be specified in the notification and this shall thereupon have effect accordingly.

Application of this Act to the Khoja community.

Note.—The Act in the unamended form still applies to transactions before April 1930. (Vide s. 15 of Act XXI of 1929).

---

APPENDIX II

HINDU INHERITANCE (REMOVAL OF DISABILITIES) ACT, 1928.

ACT No. XII OF 1928.

(Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 20th September 1928).

An Act to amend the Hindu law relating to exclusion from inheritance of certain classes of heirs, and to remove certain doubts.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Hindu law relating to exclusion from inheritance of certain class of heirs, and to remove certain doubts; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. (1) This Act may be called the Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928.

Short title, extent and commencement.

(2) It extends to the whole of India, except the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

(3) It shall not apply to any person governed by the Dayabhaga School of Hindu Law.

2. Notwithstanding any rule of Hindu law or custom to the contrary, no person governed by the Hindu law, other than a person who is and has been from birth a lunatic or idiot, shall be excluded[e] . . . . . from any right or share in joint-family property by reason only of any disease, deformity or physical or mental defect.

Persons not to be excluded from inheritance or rights in joint-family property.

3. Nothing contained in this Act shall affect any right which has accrued or any liability which has been incurred before the commencement thereof, or shall be deemed to confer upon any person any right in respect of any religious office or service or of the management of any religious or

Saving and exception.

---

(e) The words "from inheritance or" omitted, ibid.

charitable trust which he would not have had if this Act had not been passed.

Section not retrospective.—If any person suffering from any physical defect has before passing of the Act (20th September 1928) been already excluded from inheritance or from a share on partition, the Act does not entitle him to claim the inheritance or the share on partition.

---

APPENDIX III

ACT NO. XIX OF 1929

(Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 1st October 1929).

An Act to Restrain the Solemnisation of Child Marriages

WHEREAS it is expedient to restrain the solemnisation of child marriages; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1928.

(2) It extends to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir and it applies also to all citizens of India without and beyond India.

(3) It shall come into force on the 1*st day of April*, 1930.

Definition.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "child" means a person who if a male, is under eighteen years of age, and if a female, is under fifteen years of age;

(b) "child marriage" means a marriage to which either of the contracting parties is a child;

(c) "contracting party" to a marriage means either of the parties whose marriage is or is about to be thereby solemnised; and

(d) "minor" means a person of either sex who is under eighteen years of age.

Punishment for male adult below twenty-one years of age marrying a child.

3. Whoever, being a male above eighteen years of age and below twenty-one, contracts a child marriage shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to fifteen days or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or with both.

Punishment for male adult above twenty-one years of age marrying a child.

4. Whoever, being a male above twenty-one years of age, contracts a child marriage shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to three months, and shall also be liable to fine.

5. Whoever performs, conducts or directs any child marriage shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to three months, and shall also be liable to fine, unless he proves that he had reason to believe that the marriage was not a child marriage.

Punishment for solemnising a child marriage.

6. (1) Where a minor contracts a child marriage, any person having charge of the minor, whether as parent or guardian or in any other capacity, lawful or unlawful, who does any act to promote the marriage or permits it to be solemnised, or negligently fails to prevent it from being solemnised, shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to three months, and shall also be liable to fine:

Punishment for parent or guardian concerned in a child marriage.

Provided that no woman shall be punishable with imprisonment.

See Ram Jash Agarwala v. Chand Mandal (1937) 2 Cal. 764; Public Prosecutor v. Rattayya (1937) Mad. 854, 168 I.C. 723, ('37) A. M. 990; Emperor v. Munshi Ram (1936) 58 All. 402, 159 I.C. 1007, ('36) A.A. 11.

(2) For the purposes of this section, it shall be presumed, unless and until the contrary is proved, that where a minor has contracted a child marriage, the person having charge of such minor has negligently failed to prevent the marriage from being solemnised.

7. [Omitted by Act XLI of 1949]

8. .....

9. .....

10. .....

11. [Omitted by Act XLI of 1949]

12. (1) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in this Act, the Court may, if satisfied from information laid before it through a complaint or otherwise that a child marriage in contravention of this Act has been arranged or is about to be solemnised, issue an injunction against any of the persons mentioned in sections 3, 4, 5 and 6 of this Act prohibiting such marriage.

Power to issue injunction prohibiting marriage in contravention of this Act.

(2) No injunction under sub-section (1) shall be issued against any person unless the Court has previously given notice to such person, and has afforded him an opportunity to show cause against the issue of the injunction.

(3) The Court may either on its motion or on the application of any person aggrieved, rescind or alter any order made under sub-section (1).

(4) Where such an application is received, the Court shall afford the applicant an early opportunity of appearing before it either in person or by pleader; and if the Court rejects the application wholly or in part, it shall record in writing its reasons for so doing.

(5) Whoever knowing that an injunction has been issued against him under sub-section (1) of this section disobeys such injunction shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or both:

Provided that no woman shall be punishable with imprisonment.

---

APPENDIX IV

ACT NO. XXX OF 1930.

HINDU GAINS OF LEARNING ACT, 1930.

(Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 26th July 1930).

An Act to remove doubt as to the rights of a member of a Hindu undivided family in property acquired by him by means of his learning.

WHEREAS it is expedient to remove doubt, and to provide an uniform rule, as to the rights of a member of a Hindu undivided family in property acquired by him by means of his learning; It is hereby enacted as follows—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Hindu Gains of Learning Act, 1930.

(2) It extends to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "acquirer" means a member of a Hindu undivided family, who acquires gains of learning;

(b) "gains of learning" means all acquisitions of property made substantially by means of learning, whether such acquisitions be made before or after the commencement of this Act and whether such acquisitions be the ordinary or the extraordinary result of such learning; and

(c) "learning" means education, whether elementary, technical, scientific, special or general, and training of every kind which is usually intended to enable a person to pursue any trade, industry, profession or avocation in life.

Gains of learning not to be held not to be the separate property of acquirer merely for certain reasons.

3. Notwithstanding any custom, rule or interpretation of the Hindu Law, no gains of learning shall be held not to be the exclusive and separate property of the acquirer merely by reason of—

(a) his learning having been, in whole or in part imparted to him by any member living or deceased, of his family, or with the aid of the joint funds of his family or with the aid of the funds of any member thereof, or

(b) himself or his family having, while he was acquiring his learning, been maintained or supported, wholly or in part, by the joint funds of his family, or by the funds of any member thereof.

Savings.

4. This Act shall not be deemed in any way to affect—

(a) the terms or incidents of any transfer of property made or affected before the commencement of this Act,

(b) the validity, invalidity, effect or consequences of anything already suffered or done before the commencement of this Act,

(c) any right or liability created under a partition, or an agreement for a partition, of joint family property made before the commencement of this Act, or

(d) any remedy or proceeding in respect of such right or liability; or to render invalid or in any way affect anything done before the commencement of this Act in any proceeding pending in a Court at such commencement; and any such remedy and any such proceeding as is herein referred to may be enforced, instituted or continued, as the case may be, as if this Act had not been passed.

---

APPENDIX V

Act No. XVIII of 1937

*THE HINDU WOMEN'S RIGHTS TO PROPERTY ACT, 1937.

(Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 14th April 1937)

NOTE: The provisions of the Act are set out under § 35: See pp. 92-103 ante.

---

* This Act has now been repealed by sec. 31 of the Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956.

INDEX

(For Law under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, the Hindu Succession Act, 1955, the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, and the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, see under the respective headings.)

Account—

coparcener's right to demand, 297 [§ 239].
manager's liability to, 297-298 [§§ 238-239], 396 [305].
mode of taking, on partition, 396 [§ 305].

Accumulations—

accumulations of income, right of a widow or other limited heir to, 210-215 [§ 177].
direction to accumulate in a will or deed of gift, validity of, 468 [§ 397].

Acknowledgment of debt—

coparcener, by, 312 [§ 249].
guardian, by, 584 [§ 531].
manager, by, 312, [§ 249].
widow, by, 243 [§ 196].

Acts—

Acts modifying and abrogating rules of Hindu Law, 72 [§ 4].
Arya Samajists Act, 1937, 514 [§ 435].
Bihar Hindu Religious Trusts Act, 1951, 478 [§ 404A].
Bombay Public Trusts Act, 1950, 478 [§ 404A].
Caste Disabilities Removal Act 21 of 1850, 72 [§ 4], 161 [§ 97], 577 [§ 524].
Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, 73 [§ 4], 508 [§ 427], 1039 [App. III].
Christian Marriage Act, 1872, 514 [§ 435].
Cutchi Memons Act, 1923, 620 [§ 583].
Divorce Act 4 of 1869, 520 [§ 441].
"Freedom of Religion Act." (See Caste Disabilities Removal Act).
Guardians and Wards Act 8 of 1890, 73 [§ 4], 577 [§ 519], 580 [§ 528], 584-587 [§§ 532-537].
Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, 977-1036.
Hindu Disposition of Property Act 15 of 1916, 441 [§ 360], 449 [§ 373], 460 [§ 383], 462-463 [§§ 385-386], 465 [§ 389], 466 [§390] 470 [§ 398], 1037 [App. I].
Hindu Gains of Learning Act 30 of 1930, 73 [§ 4], 282 [§ 231A], 1041 [App. IV].
Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act 12 of 1928, 73 [§ 4], 163 [§ 98], 166 [§ 107], 1038 [App. II].
Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act 2 of 1929, 73 [§ 4], 117-119 [§ 43, 13A-13D], 121 [§ 46], 139 [§ 56], 142-144 [§§ 61A to 66], 148 [§ 72(14)].
Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, 653-822.
Hindu Marriage Disabilities Removal Act, 1946, 513 [§ 435].
Hindu Marriage Validity Act, 1949, 513 [§ 435].
Hindu Married Women's Right to Separate Residence and Maintenance Act. 1946, 73 [§ 4].
Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, 952-976.
Hindu Succession Act, 1956, 823-951.
Hindu Transfers and Bequests Act 1 of 1914 and Act 8 of 1921, 441 [§ 360], 449 [§ 373], 460 [§ 383], 462-463 [§§ 385, 386], 464-466 [§§ 389, 390], 470 [§ 398].
Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act 15 of 1856, 73 [§ 4], 510 [§ 432], 577 [§ 523].
Hindu Wills Act 21 of 1870, 447 [§ 369A].
Hindu Law Women's Rights (Mysore) Act, 103 [§ 35A].
Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act 18 of 1937, 73 [§ 4], 92-103 [§ 35], 600 [§ 558A], 1042 [App. V].
Hindu Women's Right to Separate Maintenance and Residence Act (19 of 1946), 598 [§ 555A].
Limitation Act 9 of 1908 (See Limitation.)
Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act (19 of 1951), 478 [§ 404A].
Majority Act 9 of 1875, 73 [§ 4], 511 [§ 433], 574 [§ 516].
Native Converts Marriage Dissolution Act, 1866, 73 [§ 4], 519 [§ 441].
Orissa Hindu Religious Endowments Act, 1939, 478 [§ 404A].

Acts—contd.
Partition Act 4 of 1893, 428 [§ 335].
Rajasthan Nathdwara Temple Act, 1959, 478 [§ 404A].
Religious Endowments Act 20 of 1863, 503 [§ 424].
Shariat Act XXVI of 1937, 620 [§ 583].
Special Marriage Act, 73 [§ 4], 76 [§ 7], 427 [§ 334A], 518 [§ 439], 656, 661, 662, 683.
Succession Act 30 of 1925, 73 [§ 4], 445-447 [§§ 368-370], 449 [§§ 372, 373], 450-451 [§§ 375, 376], 460-464 [§§ 383-387], 465 [§ 389], 467 [§ 394], 468 [§ 397].
Transfer of Property Act 4 of 1882, 73 [§ 4], 440 [§ 358(2)], 441 [§ 360], 460-464 [§§ 383-387], 468 [§ 397].
Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 21 of 1929, 442 [§ 360], 468 [§ 397].
Trusts Act 2 of 1882, 443 [§ 366], 638 [§ 608].
Usury Laws Repeal Act 28 of 1885, 629 [§ 596].

Adhivedanika—
a species of stridhana, 169 [§ 113], 177 [§ 126].

Adhyagni—
a species of stridhana, 168 [§ 113], 177 [§ 126].

Adhyavahanika—
a species of stridhana, 159 [§ 113], 177 [§ 126].

Administrator—See Executors.

Adoption—
adopted son, rights of, 556-563 [§§ 494-500], 566 [§ 507], (for details, see sub-head "Dattaka adoption, results of").
agreement curtailing rights of adopted son, 561 [§ 500].
not to adopt, against public policy, 531 [§ 459A].
alienations prior to adoption, by adoptive father, 560 [§ 498], 561 [§ 500], 566 [§ 508].
adopting widow, 566 [§ 507], 566 [§ 509].
cancellation of, 556 [§ 493].
ceremonies incidental to adoption—datta-homam, whether necessary, 554 [§ 490].
deformity of persons and right to adopt, 526 [§ 450].
giving and receiving, necessity of the act of, 554 [§ 489].
whether may be delegated, 548 [§ 477].
minor ceremonies, whether essential, 553 [§ 488].
consideration for, effect of receipt of, 556 [§ 492].
custom prohibiting, 523 [§ 445], datta homam, 553-555 [§§ 488-490].
customary in Punjab, 573 [§ 515B].
dattaka adoption, results of—agreement curtailing rights of adopted son, 561 [§ 500].
gift by adoptive father of his property after adoption, 560 [§ 498].
guardianship of adopted son, 577 [§ 521]. rights date from adoption, 566 [§ 507].
Dattaka Chandrika, a special work on, 58 [Introduction].
Dattaka Mimamsa, a special work on, 58 [Introduction].
joint family property, right of adopted son in, 561 [§ 499].
marriage in natural family, whether prohibited, 557 [§ 494(3)].
partition, rights on, 401 [§ 311].
renunciation of status of adopted son, 556 [§ 493].
right of inheritance, 556 [§ 493].
share of inheritance, how reduced on birth of son to adoptive father, 559 [§ 497].
succession, rights of, ex parte materna, 558 [§ 496].
ex parte paterna, 558 [§ 495].
will, whether revoked by adoption, 448 [§ 370], 560 [§ 498].
divesting of estate on adoption by widow—consent of person in whom estate is vested, by, 565 [§ 503].
divesting of estate of inheritance, 564 [§ 502].
maintenance of widow on, 565 [§ 505].
stridhana whether divested, 565 [§ 504].
where husband joint at time of death, 565 [§ 506].
separate at time of death, 564-565 [§§ 502, 503].

Adoption—contd.
estoppel in respece of, 569-571 [§ 513].
evidence in respect of, 568 [§ 512].
factum valet, 512 [§ 434], 551-552 [§§ 480-483], 571 [§ 513A].
forms of, 523 [§ 446].
free consent, 555 [§ 491].
gift by adoptive father of his property after adoption, 560-561 [§ 498].
how proved, 568 [§ 512].
illatom adoption, 526 [§ 450], 572 [§ 515A].
informal, 573 [§ 515B].
invalid adoption—
effect of, 568 [§ 510].
gift or bequest to person whose adoption is invalid, 568 [§ 511].
rights in natural family, whether lost by reason of, 568 [§ 510].
Jains and, 527 [§ 452]. See Jains.
kritima adoption, 571 [§ 515].
limitation period for declaring adoption valid or invalid, 571 [§ 514].
suit for possession by adopted son, 567 [§ 509].
object of, 524 [§ 447].
proof of, 568 [§ 512].
results of. See sub-head "Dattaka adoption".
revocation of power to adopt, 531 [§ 460].
second adopted son and alienations, 567 [§ 509].
surrender of property prior to, 567 [§ 509A].
vesting of property on adoption, 563 [§ 501A].
who may adopt, 524-547 [§§ 449-473].
bachelor, 525 [§ 450(2)].
dancing girls, 553 [§ 487].
minor, 525 [§ 450(1)].
naikins, 553 [§ 487].
one who has no male issue, 525 [§ 450(1)].
pregnancy of wife, whether a bar to adoption, 525 [§ 450(2)]. revocation of wife's power to adopt, 531 [§ 460].
unchaste widow not competent, 538 [§ 466].
widower, 625 [§ 450(2)].
widow, 526 [§ 452].
authority to adopt, 527-531 [§§ 453-459].
can be given to widow alone, 527 [§ 454].
conditional authority, 530 [§ 457].
exercise of, whether obligatory, 531 [§ 459]. extent of authority, 538 [§ 464].
form of authority, 529-530 [§ 456].
how to be exercised, 530 [§ 458].
revocation of, 531 [§ 460].
senior widow, right of, to adopt, 529 [§ 455].
termination of power to adopt, 539-547 [§§ 471-473].
to one of several widows, 528 [§ 455].
to widow conjointly with another, 528 [§ 454(2)].
to widows jointly, 528 [§ 455].
to widows separately, 528 [§ 455].
whether can be made dependent on consent of another, 528 [§ 454(3)]. consent of coparceners, 532-538 [§§ 462, 463].
junior widow, 535 [§ 462(8)], 537 [§ 463(4)]. sapindas (in Madras), 532-534 [§ 462(2)], 535 [462(4)]. senior widow, 535 [§ 462(8)], 537 [§ 463(4)]. should be free, 535 [§ 462(5)].
co-widows, adoption by, 539 [§ 470].
minor widow, adoption by, 538 [§ 465].
motive of adoption, 539 [§ 469].
successive adoptions, by, 539 [§ 468].
termination of power to adopt, 539-547 [§§ 471-473].
where husband was joint, 565 [§ 506].
separate, 539-543 [§ 471].
unchaste widow, by, 538 [§ 466].
widow who has remarried, by, 538 [§ 467].
who has succeeded as gotraja sapinda, by, 547 [§ 473].
without authority, by, 532-538 [§§ 461-463].

Adoption—contd.
who may be adopted and who not, 549-553 [§§ 480-487].
age of son to be adopted, 549 [§ 480(4)].
caste, identity of, 549 [§ 480(2)].
daughter's son, 549 [§ 480(3)].
dvyamushyayana or son of two fathers, 552 [§ 486].
married man, adoption of, in Bombay, 550 [§ 480(4)(iii)].
mother's sister's son, 549 [§ 480(3)]. naikin, adoption of daughters by, 553 [§ 487].
only son, 551 [§ 481].
orphan, 551 [§ 482].
same boy, adoption of, by two persons, 552 [§ 484].
simultaneous adoption of two or more sons, 552 [§ 485].
sister's son, 549 [§ 480(3)].
stranger, 552 [§ 483].
successive adoptions, 539 [§ 468].
who may give in adoption and who may not, 547-548 [§§ 474-479].
brother, 548 [§ 474].
capacity of giver, 548 [§ 479].
convert father, 548 [§ 478].
delegation of the physical act of giving in adoption, 548 [§§ 477-478], 554 [§ 489(2)]. power to adopt, 548 [§ 477].
father, 548 [§ 475], 548 [§ 478].
grandfather, 548 [§ 474].
mother, 548 [§ 476].
step-mother, 548 [§ 474].
widow, adoption by. See under sub-head "Who may adopt".
will, disposal by, of adopter's property after adoption, 560-561 [§ 498]. works of authority on, 80 [§ 13].

Adverse possession— property obtained by, whether stridhana, 182 [§ 133].
widow against, 252 [§ 201].
by, 259-260 [§ 211].

Agreement— adopted son, curtailing rights of, 561-562 [§ 500].
marriage, agreement enabling wife to avoid, 520-521 [§ 442]. partition by agreement, 415-417 [§ 326].
partition, agreement not to, 406 [§ 319].

Alienation— by lease or licence, 302 [§ 242].
conditions restraining, in a deed of gift, 443 [§ 362].
will, 467 [§ 393].
coparcener, by—alienation of coparcenary property, Mit., 319-320 [§§ 255-257].
limitation, 327 [§ 261(3)]. alienation of his undivided interest, Day., 349 [§ 282], Mit., 320-322 [§§ 258-260].
setting aside alienation, equities on, 232 [§ 188], 336-340 [§ 268, 269].
limitation period for, 343-344 [§§ 271-271A].
mesne profits on, 336 [§ 268], 337 [§ 269]. to what extent, 336-340 [§§ 267-269]. who may set aside, 340-343 [§ 270].
debutter property, alienation of, 489 [§ 415]. (See sub-heads "Mohunt" and "Shebait").
father, by, Mit. 319 [§ 256], Day. 345 [§ 274].
antecedent debt, for payment of, Day., 392 [§ 302], Mit., 374 [§ 295].
not for payment of, 379 [§ 295].
attachment of son's interest after, 377 [§ 295(5)]. avyavaharika debt, for payment of, 385 [§ 298]. burden of proving immorality of debt, 376 [§ 295(2)].
debt contracted during his minority, for, 390 [§ 300].
immoral debts, for payment of, 384 [§ 296(2)].
what are, 385 [§ 298].

Alienation—contd.
legal necessity, for, 302-310 [§§ 243-245], 377 [§ 295(7)].
legal necessity, without, 381 [§ 296]. limitation period for suit to set aside, 343-344 [§§ 271-271A].
partition, after, 377 [§ 295(4)].
son's interest how far binding on, 376-377 [§ 295(3), (7)]. time-barred debt, for, 380 [§ 295], 389 [§ 299].
unliquidated damages, for, 380 [§ 295].
where part only of purchase money applied for antecedent debt, 385 [§ 297].
female member of the family cannot impeach an, 343 [§ 270].
guardian, by—benefit of the estate, for 578-580 [§ 528].
de facto and ad hoc guardian, by, 587 [§ 538].
guardian appointed by Court, 580 [§ 528], 586 [§ 536].
legal necessity, for, 578, 579 [§ 528].
limitation period for setting aside, 580 [§ 528].
natural guardian, by, 578 [§ 528].
testamentary guardian, by, 574 [§ 517], 584 [§ 532].
manager, by, 300-307 [§§ 242-244], 319 [§ 255].
benefit of the estate, what is, 303 [§ 243A].
coparcenary property of, 300 [§ 242], 310 [§ 246].
family business, for purposes of, 310 [§ 246].
for inadequate consideration, 308 [§ 245].
legal necessity, burden of proof of, 306 [§ 244].
what is, 302-303 [§ 243].
where proved in part only, 308 [§ 245]
mohunt, by—489 [§ 415].
lease by way of, 489 [§ 415].
legal necessity, what is, 490 [§ 415].
burden of proof of, 491 [§ 415A]. right of management, of, 496 [§ 420].
Shebait, by, 489 [§ 415]. [See sub-head "Mohunt"].
sole surviving coparcener, by, 320 [§ 257].
widow by—215-237 [§§ 178-191].
benefit of the estate, 223 [§ 181B(3)]. burden of proof of legal necessity, 224 [§ 182].
compromises and family arrangements involving alienation [See Compromises].
consent of reversioners, alienation made with, 227 [§ 183].
effect of, 230 [§ 184], 236 [§ 191].
alienation made without, 230 [§ 183(5)].
effect of, 231 [§ 185].
co-widow, alienation made by one widow without consent of, 223 [§ 181C].
equities on setting aside, 232 [§ 188].
estoppel, 235, 236 [§§ 190, 190A].
immovable property inherited from husband, of, 215 [§ 178].
inherited property, of, by will, 216 [§ 180].
lease, by way of, 232 [§ 186].
leave of court, with, 232 [§ 187]. legal necessity, for, 220 [§ 181B].
what is, 221-223 [§ 181B(2)].
where partial, 234 [§ 189].
without, 231 [§ 185].
mesne profits, 234 [§ 188].
mortgage, by way of, 223 [§ 181D].
mortgagee's duty in case of, 225 [§ 182].
movables inherited from husband, of, 215 [§ 179].
"part performance", doctrine of, applicable, 231 [§ 184A].
partial necessity, 234-235 [§ 189].
persons entitled to impeach unauthorised alienations, 231 [§ 185].
purchaser's duty in case of, 225 [§ 182].
religious or charitable purposes, for, 216 [§ 181A].
reversioners, with and without consent of (See sub-head "consent of", etc.) election by, 235, 236 [§§ 190, 190A].
spiritual necessity, for, 216 [§ 181A].
what is, 217 [§ 181A (2)].
trade debts, for, 242 [§ 194A].
unauthorised alienations, who may impeach, 231 [§ 185]. remedies against, 253-257 [§§ 202-207].

Ancestral business—287 [§ 234], 298 [§ 240], 300 [§ 241]. coparceners, liability of, for debts incurred for, 288 [§ 234], 298 [§ 240].
death of a coparcener, effect of, on joint family firm, 287 [§ 234(1)(i)].
debts contracted by manager for, 298 [§ 240].
heritable asset, whether a, 287 [§ 234].
insolvency of joint family firm, 335 [§ 266].
joint family firm distinguished from partnership, 287 [§ 234].
lease: license, 302 [§ 242].
manager, powers of, with respect to, 287 [§ 234], 298 [§ 240], 300 [§ 241], 300 [§ 242], 311 [§ 248A].
minor, liability of, for debts contracted for, 288 [§ 234(1)(v)].
necessity for loan, enquiry as to 298 [§ 240].
new business, 289 [§ 234].
new business of adult members, 289 [§ 234(2)].
new business with a stranger, 290 [§ 234(3)].
notice of severance in status, 292 [§ 234A].
parties to suits in respect of, 314 [§ 251(4)].
trading family: kulachara, 292 [§ 234].
widow, debts contracted by, 242-243 [§§ 194A-195].

Ancestral Property—See Coparcenary property. adopted son, rights of, in, 561 [§ 499].
authority of father, 275 [§ 224].
bequest of, by father, 445 [§ 368(3)(ii)].
essential features of, 270 [§ 223].
father's interest in, Dayabhaga, 345 [§ 274].
Mitakshara, 274 [§ 224].
father, alienation by, to pay his own debts, 374 [§ 295].
gift of, by father, Day., 438 [§ 357(3)]; Mit., 275 [§§ 225, 226].
gift of property by father to son on occasion of son's marriage, whether ancestral property, 272, 273 [§ 223(5)]. inherited property how far ancestral—from collaterals, 272 [§ 223(3)].
from females, 272 [§ 223(3)].
from maternal grandfather, 271 [§ 223(2)].
from maternal uncle, 271 [§ 223(2)].
from paternal ancestor, 270 [§ 223(1)]. movables, power of father over, 275 [§ 225].
partition, share allotted on, 272 [§ 223(4)], 336 [§ 268].
property given by paternal ancestor, 272 [§ 223(5)]. purchases made with, 274 [§ 223(6)]. recovery of, lost to family, 283 [§ 232].
release by father of his interest in, 274 [§ 224].
rights of son, Dayabhaga, 345-348 [§§ 273-277].
Mitakshara, 274 [§ 224].
savings of, 274 [§ 223(6)].
what is, Dayabhaga, 346 [§ 276].
Mitakshara, 270 [§ 223], 276 [§ 227], 278 [§ 228].

Antecedent debt—See Debts.

Anwadheyaka—
a kind of stridhana, 169 [§ 113(2)].
succession to, Day., 197 [§ 156]; Mad., 193 [§ 152(3), (4)]; May., 191 [§ 151].

Apararka— Apararka-Yajnavalkya-Dharmashastra-Nibandha, 49 [Introduction].

Appointment— power of, 470 [§ 398].

Apratibanda Daya—See Unobstructed heritage. is unobstructed heritage, 267 [§ 218(1)].

Arbitration— manager's power to refer to, 311 [§ 247].

Arthashastra of Kautilya— author of, 32 [Introduction].
not a source of law, 35 [Introduction].
source of knowledge of Hindu Law, 32 [Introduction]. style of, 35 [Introduction].

Arya Samajists—
application of Hindu Law to, 74 [§ 6].

Ascetic—
exclusion from inheritance, 166 [§ 111].
succession to, 140 [§ 58].

Asura—
a form of marriage, 508 [§ 428].
distinction between brahma and asura forms, 508 [§ 428].

Atma bandhus—
order of succession among, 132-134 [§ 54].
who are, 121 [§ 46(3)], 127 [§ 49], 132-134 [§ 54].

Attachment—
coparcenary interest, attachment of, 280 [§ 229(2)(ii)], 352 [§ 289].
property, attachment of, and remedies of son, 364 [§ 294A]. maintenance, arrears of, 615 [§ 578].

Aurasa— legitimate son, 523 [§ 446].

Avaruddha Stree—
maintenance of, 596 [§ 553].

Ayautaka—
a kind of stridhana, 195 [§ 154(4)]. succession to, Day., 197 [§ 157].

Bandhus—
are bhinna-gotra sapindas, 104 [§ 37].
atma bandhus, 121 [§ 46(3)], 127 [§ 49].
descendants of remoter ancestors, 137 [§ 55].
classes of bandhus, 121 [§ 46(3)], 127 [§ 49].
enumeration of, 121 [§ 46].
female bandhus in Bombay, 138 [§ 56].
in Madras, 138 [§ 56].
heritable bandhus, rules for determining, 122 [§ 47].
who are, 126 [§ 48].
matri bandhus, 121 [§ 46(3)], 127 [§ 49].
order of succession among bandhus, 132 [§ 54]. rules for determining order of succession, 128-132 [§§ 50-53B], 137 [§ 55].
table of succession, 136A.
pitri bandhus, 121 [§ 46(3)], 127 [§ 49].
relationship as bandhu how determined, 122 [§ 47].
summary of rules as to order of succession among, 132 [§ 53A].
who are, 120 [§ 46].

Benami Transactions—
advancement to wife and children, 635 [§ 605].
burden of proof, 636 [§ 605].
child, property bought in name of, 635, 636 [§ 605].
constructive notice, 637 [§ 607].
creditors, fraud upon, 637 [§ 608].
criterion of, 634 [§ 605].
decree against benamidar, 638 [§ 610].
definition of, 634 [§ 604].
furzee, known as, among Mahomedans, 634 [§ 604]. public policy, transaction against, 638 [§ 609].
purchase made benami at a court-sale or sale for revenue arrears, 636 [§ 606].
by member of joint Hindu family, 636 [§ 606].
from benamidar, 637 [§ 607].
real title, effect given to, and exceptions to the rule, 634 [§ 605].
suit by benamidar, 638 [§ 611].
transfer by benamidar for value, 637 [§ 607].
wife, property brought in name of, 635, 636 [§ 605].

Benares school—

female heirs according to, 142 [§ 62].
sub-school of Mitakshara school, 79 [§ 12(1)]. works of authority in, 49 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].

Bengal school—See Dayabhaga school.

Bequest—See Will.

alternative bequest, 464 [§ 388].
ancestral property, of, by father, 445 [§ 368].
bequeathable property, 445 [§ 368].
charity, to, 477 [§ 404].
class, to a, 462 [§ 386].
construction of, 452 [§ 377].
contingent bequest, 464 [§ 389].
coparcenary interest, of, Day., 349 [§ 282]; Mit., 445 [§ 368].
daughter or other female, to, 185 [§ 143], 472 [§ 401].
dharma to, 478 [§ 405], 618 [§ 582(2)]. executory bequest, 464 [§ 389].
father, by, to his son. 272 [§ 223(5)]. females, to, 185 [§ 143], 472 [§ 401]. idol, to, 484 [§ 410].
impartible estate, of, 446 [§ 368(3)(iv)].
legislation regarding, 477 [§ 404A].
person whose adoption is invalid, to, 568 [§ 511].
religious or charitable purposes, for, 477 [§ 404].
remainder, by way of, 466 [§ 390].
separate or self-acquired property, of, 445 [§ 368(3)(i)].
sole surviving coparcener, by, 445 [§ 368(3)(ii)].
stridhana, of, 446 [§ 368(3)(iii)].
subject-matter of, 445 [§ 368].
two or more persons, to, 471 [§ 400].
unborn person, to, 448-450 [§§ 372-373]. undivided interest, of, by coparcener, 445-446 [§ 368(3)(ii)].
widow or other female, to, 185 [§ 143], 472 [§ 401].

Betrothal—

minors, of, 518 [§ 437].
revocability of, 518 [§ 437].

Bhartridatta—

a kind of stridhana, 177 [§ 126], 191 [§ 150], 193, 194 [§ 152(2)].
succession to, according to, Mad., 193 [§ 152]; May., 191 [§ 151(1)(3)].

Bhinna-gotra sapindas—See Bandhus.

who are, 104 [§ 37].

Blindness—

whether effects exclusion from inheritance, 162 [§ 98].
from partition, 165 [§ 106].

Bombay school—

authorities in, 51-54 [Introduction].
order of succession, according to, 147-151 [§§ 71-77].
sub-school of Mitakshara school, 45 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12(1)]. works of authority in, 79 [§ 12(2)].

Bohras—

Sunni, of Gujarat, 619 [§ 582].

Brahma—

a form of marriage, 508 [§ 428(1)].
distinction between brahma and asura forms, 508 [§ 428(2)].

Brahmachari—

succession to, Mit., 140 [§ 58].

Brahmans—

endowment for feeding, 477, 479 [§§ 404, 405].
one of the four Hindu castes, 71 [§ 1].

Brahmo Samaj—
application of Hindu Law to members of, 74 [§ 6].
Breach of promise of marriage— suit for damages, for, 518 [§ 437].
Brihaspati—
Smriti of, 28-30 [Introduction].
Brother—
adoption, whether can give in, 548 [§ 474].
as an heir, Mit., 116 [§ 43(9)], 147 [§ 72(11)]; Day., 157 [§ 88(9)]; May., 116 [§ 43(9)], 150 [77(9)].
gift by, to sister, whether stridhana, 169 [§ 113].
half-brother. See half brother.
partition between brothers, 407 [§ 321(2)], 437 [§ 355].
stridhana heir to sister, Mit., 186-195 [§§ 145-153]; Day., 195-198 [§§ 154-157]. to sulka, 187 [§ 146].
Brother's daughter—
as a bandhu—
in Bombay, 138 [§ 56].
in Madras, 138 [§ 56].
gift or bequest to, 185 [§ 143].
property inherited by, from uncle, whether stridhana, 180 [§ 130(3)].
Brother's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mit., 133 [§ 54(11)].
Brother's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46(3)], 132 [§ 54(5)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(27)].
Brother's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(9)].
Brother's son—
as an heir to his uncle, Mit., 117 [§ 43(10)], 148 [§ 72(12)]; May., 151 [§ 77(10)]; Day., 157 [§ 88(10)].
as a stridhana heir, Dayabhaga, 196 [§ 155(9)], 198 [§ 157(9)]; Mithila 194 [§ 153].
Brother's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(8)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(28)].
Brother's son's son—
as an heir, Mit., 117 [§ 43(11)], 148 [§ 72(23)]; Day., 157 [§ 88(11)].
Brother's son's son's son—
as an heir, Mit., 119 [§ 43(22)], 148 [§ 72(24)]; Day., 155 [§ 84].
Brother's son's son's son's son—
as an heir, Mit., 119 [§ 43], 148 [§ 72(25)].
Brother's son's son's son's son's son—
as an heir, Mit., 119 [§ 43], 148 [§ 72(26)].
Brother's widow—
as an heir in Bombay, 148 [§ 72(28)].
whether takes a limited estate, 143 [§ 64(3)], 206 [§ 174(2)].
Burden of proof—See* Presumption. alienation of debutter property, 491 [§ 415-A].
of inherited property by widow, 224 [§ 182].
of joint family property by manager, 306 [§ 244].
benami transactions, 636 [§ 605].
custom, of, 84 [§ 19].
debt, where denied by sons, 376 [§ 295(2)].
gift, where made by a Hindu widow, 443 [§ 363].
joint family property, whether property is alleged to be, 284 [§ 233]. necessity of, 491 [§ 415-A]. property in possession of widow, 184 [§ 140].
will, of capacity to make, 444 [§ 367].

Business—
alienation by manager for purposes of, 310 [§ 246].
widow for payment of debts, 242 [§ 194-A]. ancestral, 287 [§ 234].
debts contracted by manager for family business, 298 [§ 240].
inherited by widow, 242 [§ 194-A].
new business, 289 [234(2)].

Caste—
adoption and, 549 [§ 480(2)].
Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850, 72 [§ 4(i)], 161 [§ 97], 577 [§ 524].
caste questions, 73 [§ 6].
civil rights not lost by degradation from, 72 [§ 4(i)]. diminishing importance of, 71 [§ 1]. enumeration of castes, 71 [§ 1].
Kayasthas, 71 [§ 1].
Komatis, 71 [§ 1].
loss of, whether affects rights of guardianship, 577 [§ 524].
of maintenance, 607 [§ 565].
of succession, 162 [§ 97].
Marathas, 71 [§ 1].
marriage and, 512-514 [§ 435].
principal castes, 71 [§ 1].
Sadgopes, 71 [§ 1].
son born after expulsion from caste, rights of, 162 [§ 97].
Vaidyas, 71 [§ 1].

Charitable endowments—See Endowments.

Chastity—See Unchastity.

Christianity— conversion to, whether effects exclusion from inheritance, 161 [§ 97].
and succession, 75 [§ 7(2)].
whether operates as dissolution of joint family, 427 [§ 334].

Collaterals—
daughters of, as heirs in the Bombay State, 146 [§ 70].
debts incurred by, 351 [§ 288].
property inherited from collaterals is not ancestral property, 272 [§ 223(3)].

Commentaries—
as a source of law, 77 [§ 9].
duty of courts to administer law as found in, 78 [§ 9].
importance of, 58-59 [Introduction].
schools and commentaries, 42-59 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].

Commentators—
virtual law-makers, 59 [Introduction].

Compromise—
father, by, 311 [§ 248].
guardian, by, 584 [§ 530].
widow or other limited heir, by involving alienation—claims made by next reversioner, of, 242 [§ 194].
where reversioner is a party, 237 [§ 192].
is not a party, 239 [§ 193].

Concubine—
maintenance of, 596 [§ 553].

Conjugal rights—
restitution of, 521 [§ 444].

Contracts—
manager of joint family business, by, 300 [§ 241].
married woman, by, 200 [§ 165].
natural guardian, by, 580 [§ 529].

Convert—See Conversion.
applicability of Hindu law to converts to Hinduism and their descendants, 73 [§ 6].
civil rights whether lost by conversion, 72 [§ 4(1)].
converts to Christianity, 75 [§ 7(2)]. converts to Hinduism, treated as Sudras for purposes of marriage, 513 [§ 435(2)]. converts to Mahomedanism, applicability of Hindu Law to, 76 [§ 7(3)].
converts to Mahomedanism; Khojas and Cutchi Memons, 617 [§ 582]. son born after conversion, rights of inheritance of, 162 [§ 97].

Conversion—See Convert.
Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850, effect of, 161 [§ 97].
Christianity, to, and succession, 75 [§ 7(2)].
civil rights whether lost by, 72 [§ 4(1)]. coparcener, of, and dissolution of joint family, 427 [§ 334].
Cutchi Memons, 617 [§ 582].
father, of, and guardianship, 577 [§ 525].
husband, of, and wife's right of maintenance, 600 [§ 557].
Khojas, 617 [§ 582].
Mahomedanism, to, and right to give in adoption, 548 [§ 478].
and succession, 76 [§ 7(3)].
marriage, whether dissolved by conversion, 519 [§ 441(2)(3)].
minor, of, and guardianship, 578 [§ 527].
mother, of, and guardianship, 578 [§ 526].
partition and, 427 [§ 334].
succession, right to, how far affected by, 161 [§ 97].

Coparceners—See Coparcenary, Coparcenary property. absent coparcener and partition, 402 [§ 313].
adoption of sole surviving coparcener, effect of, 556 [§ 494(2)]. alienation by manager, when binding on coparceners, 300 [§ 242].
alienation by—See also Alienation.
coparcenary property, of, 319-320 [§§ 255-257].
unauthorised, right to set aside, 336-343 [§§ 267-270].
undivided coparcenary interest, of, 320-336 [§§ 258-266].
attachment of coparcener's interest, 352 [§ 289]. bequest of coparcenary property by sole surviving coparcener, 445-446 [§ 368(3)(ii)].
undivided interest by a coparcener, Mitakshara, 445 [§ 368].
Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 282].
coparcenary interest, 266 [§ 216].
debts contracted by manager, coparcener's liability for, 288 [§ 234(1)], 298 [§ 240].
decree against manager, when binding on coparceners, 317 [§ 253].
devolution of deceased coparcener's share, Mit., 279 [§ 229]; Day., 349 [§ 281].
disqualified coparcener and partition, 406 [§ 318].
female coparceners and partition, Dayabhaga, 433 [§ 348].
females, whether can be coparceners with males, Mit., 267 [§ 217]; Day., 346 [§ 277].
gift of undivided share by a coparcener, Mitakshara, 320 [§ 258].
Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 282].
illegitimate children of a Christian father by a Hindu mother, whether Hindu law of coparcenary applies to, 74 [§ 6(iii)].
insolvency of, 331 [§ 265].
joint family firm, effect of death of a coparcener on, 287 [§ 234(1)(i)].
lease of undivided coparcenary interest, 321 [§ 260]. limitation, effect of addition of a coparcener after expiry of, 316 [§ 252].
maintenance of, out of coparcenary property, 591 [§ 543].
marriage expenses of male coparceners and their daughters, 518 [§ 440].
minor coparcener and partition, Mit., 398 [§ 308], Day., 433 [§ 348].
mortgage of undivided coparcenary interest, Mit., 321 [§§ 259-260]; Day., 349 [§ 282].
mortgage, suits on, and parties to, 313 [§ 251].
mortgagee from, rights of, 330 [§ 263].
non-separating coparceners on partition, status of, 420 [§ 328(3)].
parties to suit, 313 [§ 251].
partition, right to demand, 397 [§ 306]. See Partition.
presumption as to business carried on by a coparcener, 291 [§ 234(4)].

Coparceners—contd.

as to coparcenary and coparcenary property, 283 [§ 233].
purchaser of undivided share, rights of, Mit., 322 [§ 261]; Day., 349 [§ 280].
joint possession, to, 322 [§ 261(1)]. mesne profits, to, 327 [§ 261(6)]. partition, to, 325-327 [§ 261(2) to (5)].
specific performance, to, 328 [§ 261(7)]. renunciation of share by, 330 [§ 264]. rights of coparceners, 293 [§ 235]. accounts to demand, 297-298 [§§ 238, 239]; 396 [§ 305].
alienation of undivided interest, Mit., 294 [§ 235(6)], 321 [§§ 259, 260]; Day., 349 [§ 282]. defined share under the Dayabhaga, 348 [§ 279].
erecting building on joint family land with consent, right of, 293 [§ 235(2a)].
exclusion from joint family property, on, 294 [§ 235(3)]. income, whether entitled to specific share of, Mitakshara, 293 [§ 235(2)]; Day., 349 [§ 284].
joint possession and enjoyment, right to, Mit., 293 [§ 235(2a)]; Day., 348 [§ 279]. maintenance, right of, 296 [§ 237]. See Maintenance. partition, right to enforce, Mit., 294 [§ 235(5)]; Day., 350 [§ 285].
possession, unity of, 293 [§ 235(1)]. succession and survivorship, Mit., 294 [§ 235(7)]; Day., 350 [§ 281].
suing alone as representing family, right of, 315-316 [§ 251(5), (6)].
sale of undivided share by private contract, Mitakshara, 321 [§§ 259, 260].
Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 282].
sale of undivided share in execution, Mit., 352 [§ 289]; Day., 349 [§ 280].
separate property, rights over, 269 [§ 222].
share of, undefined, Mit., 266 [§ 216], 293 [§ 235(2)].
defined, Day., 348 [§ 279].
sole surviving coparcener—
devolution of property held by, 91 [§ 34(2)(ii)].
powers of, over joint property, 320 [§ 257].
son, after-born, of a disqualified coparcener, and partition, 166 [§ 109].
suits by, 313 [§ 251].
succession, devolution of deceased coparcener's share by, Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 281].
survivorship, devolution of deceased coparcener's share by, Mitakshara, 279 [§ 229].
unauthorised acts by, 293 [235(2a)].
who are, Mitakshara, 262-265 [§§ 213-215].
Dayabhaga, 346 [§ 277].

Coparcenary—See Coparceners, Coparcenary property.

composite family, 264 [§ 214].
definition of, 262 [§ 213].
formation of, Mit., 263 [§ 214]; Day., 346 [§ 277].
genesis of, Mit., 263 [§ 214], Day., 346 [§ 277].
how created, Mit., 263 [§ 214(2)]; Day., 346 [§ 277]. limits of, 264 [§ 215].
undivided coparcenary interest, features of, Mitakshara, 266 [§ 216].
Dayabhaga, 348 [§ 279].

Coparcenary property—See Coparceners, Coparcenary.

accretions to, 274 [§ 223(6)].
adopted son, rights of, in, 561 [§ 499].
adverse possession, 395 [§ 304].
alienation of, by father, 319 [§ 256].
manager, 300 [§ 242].
sole surviving coparcener, 320 [§ 257].
who can make, 319 [§ 255].
ancestral property, 270 [§ 223].
bequest of undivided interest Mitakshara, 320 [§ 257], 445 [§ 368].
Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 282].
bequest by father of his self-acquired property to son, 274 [§ 223(5)].
coparcenary interest, 266 [§ 216].
debts of coparceners, coparcenary property when liable for, 352 [§ 289].

Coparcenary property—contd.
devolution of, by survivorship, Mitakshara, 279 [§ 229].
by succession, Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 281].
distinguished from joint property of English law, 269 [§ 221].
father's power over ancestral property, Mitakshara, 274-276 [§§ 224-226].
gains of science, or learning, 281 [§ 231]. effect of Hindu Gains of Learning Act, 282 [§ 231A].
gift by father of his self-acquired property to son, 272 [§ 223(5)].
of ancestral property, 275-276 [§§ 225-226].
gift of undivided interest, Mitakshara, 320 [§ 258].
Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 282].
incidents of, 268 [§ 221].
income of, 296 [§ 237].
joint acquisitions, 278 [§ 228], 279 [§ 228A]. made with aid of joint family property, 278 [§ 228(2)].
without aid of joint family property, 278 [§ 228(3)].
male issue of coparceners, rights of, 269 [§ 221(1)(b)]. management of, 296 [§ 237].
marriage expenses, liability for, 518 [§ 440].
mortgage of—See 'alienation' above.
mortgage of undivided interest, Mitakshara, 321 [§§ 259-260].
Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 282].
Official Assignee, rights of, 331 [§ 265].
parties to suits relating to, 313 [§ 251].
partition, liable to, 393 [§ 303].
persons entitled to, 264 [§ 215].
share allotted on, 272 [§ 223(4)].
presumptions as to, Mitakshara, 283 [§ 233].
Dayabhaga, 350 [§ 286].
property inherited from—collaterals, 272 [§ 223(3)].
females, 272 [§ 223(3)].
maternal grandfather, 271 [§ 223(2)]. paternal ancestor, 270 [§ 223(1)].
property thrown into common stock, 276 [§ 227].
in case of Hindu female, 277 [§ 227(2a)].
purchaser of undivided share, rights of, 322 [§ 261].
sale of—See 'alienation' above.
sale of, by father for payment of his debt, 374 [§ 295].
in execution of decree against father, 363 [§ 294].
sale of undivided interest, Mitakshara, 321 [§§ 259-260].
Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 282].
setting aside unauthorised alienations of, 336-343 [§§ 267-270].
extent to which they may be set aside, 337-340 [§§ 267-269].
who may sue for, 340 [§ 270].
sole surviving coparcener, alienation by, 320 [§ 257].
son's interest in, Mitakshara, 274 [§ 224].
Dayabhaga, 345 [§ 273].
survivorship, devolution by, 269 [§ 221(1)(a)]. unobstructed heritage, 267 [§ 218], 268 [§ 219].
what is, Mit., 268 [§ 220], 270 [§ 223], 276 [§ 227], 278 [§ 228]; Day., 348 [§ 278].

Court-fee— declaratory suit by reversioner, 254 [§ 205].

Co-widows—
adoption by, 535 [§ 462(8)], 537 [§ 463(4)], 539 [§ 470].
alienation by one of, without consent of others, 223 [§ 181C].
joint tenants, whether take as, 112 [§ 43(4)]. partition between, 112 [§ 43(4)].

Creditor—See Debts. creditor's suit and limitation, 362 [§ 293].
for money lent, 492 [§ 416].

Custom— adoption, custom prohibiting, 523 [§ 445].
as a source of Hindu Law, 59 [Introduction], 77 [§ 8], 82 [§ 15].

Custom—contd.

basis of, 77 [§ 8(3)].
burden of proof of, 84 [§ 19].
can outweigh written text of Law, 61 [Introduction].
conflict between custom and text how settled, 82 [§ 15].
constituent part of Law, 59 [Introduction].
difficulty of establishing, 66-67 [Introduction].
discontinuance of, 84 [§ 18].
divorce by, 520 [§ 441].
essential attributes of, 61 [Introduction].
essentials of, 82 [§ 17].
exclusion from inheritance of daughter, by, 115 [§ 43(5)]. family custom, 84 [§ 17].
importance of, stressed by Smritikars, 60 [Introduction]. invalid custom, 84 [§ 20].
judgment relating to existence of custom when admissible in evidence, 83 [§ 17].
kinds of, 82 [§ 16].
local and family custom, distinction between, 84 [§ 18].
property impartible by, 621 [§ 585].
Sadachara, 60 [Introduction].
Smritis in part based on, 2 [Introduction].
stridhana by, 183 [§ 136].

Cutchi Memons—See Memons.

bequest in favour of unborn person, 618 [§ 582].
Cutchi Memons Act, and Mahomedan law of succession, 620 [§ 583].
Hindu law, how far applies to, 617 [§ 582].
inheritance and succession, 617 [§ 582(1)], 620 [§ 583].
joint Hindu family system, how far applies to, 617 [§ 582(2)].
marriage of, deemed to be in approved form, 619 [§ 582].
of Mombasa, 619 [§ 582].
Shariat Act, 1937, subject to the provisions of, 617-620 [§§ 582-583].
survivorship, principle of, how far applies to, 617 [§ 582(2)]. synopsis of Cutchi Memon cases, 618-619 [§ 582].
wills of, 618 [§ 582].

Damdupat—

capitalization of interest by subsequent agreement, 630 [§ 598].
definition of, 629 [§ 596].
fresh bond for principal and interest, 630 [§ 598].
Limitation Act, and, 629 [§ 596].
mortgage after Transfer of Property Act, 633 [§ 603].
mortgage of immovable property without possession, 632 [§ 602].
mortgage with possession, 632 [§ 602(2)].
persons entitled to claim benefit of the rule, 631 [§ 601].
places in which rule applies, 631 [§ 600].
pledge of movables, 632 [§ 602].
principal, what is for purposes of the rule, 630 [§§ 597-598].
suit, does not apply after date of, 630 [§ 599].
transactions to which rule applies, 632 [§ 602].
Usury Laws Repeal Act and, 629 [§ 596].

Dancing girls—

adoption of daughters by, 553 [§ 487].
sons of, application of Hindu law to, 74 [§ 6(vi)].
succession to property of, 199 [§ 164].

Datta Homam— ceremony of, and adoption, 554 [§ 490].

Dattaka adoption—See Adoption.

Dattaka Chandrika—

a work on adoption, 58 [Introduction], 80 [§ 13].

Dattaka Mimamsa—

a work on adoption, 58 [Introduction], 80 [§ 13].

Daughter—
as an heir to her father—Mit., 113 [§ 43(5)], 147 [§ 72(7)] Day., 157 [§ 88(5)].
exclusion from inheritance by custom, 115 [§ 43(5)].
illegitimate daughter, 114 [§ 43(5)].
priority among daughters, Mitakshara, 113 [§ 43(5)].
Dayabhaga, 157 [§ 88(5)].
survivorship among daughters, 89 [§ 31], 114 [§ 43(5)], 147 [§ 72(7)].
unchastity of, and inheritance, Mitakshara, 114 [§ 43(5)], 161 [§ 96].
Dayabhaga, 157 [§ 88(5)], 161 [§ 96].
whether takes an absolute or a limited estate: Bombay, 113 [§ 43(5)], 203 [§ 170(2)].
Other States, 113 [§ 43(5)], 202 [§ 168(4)].

as an heir to her mother's stridhana—
Dayabhaga, 196 [§ 155], 197-198 [§§ 156-157].
Madras, 193 [§ 152].
Mayukha, 191 [§ 151].
Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147].
Mithila, 194 [§ 153].
unchastity whether a bar to inheriting stridhana, 184 [§ 139].
whether takes an absolute or a limited estate: Bombay, 205 [§ 171].
Other States, 203 [§ 169]

bequest to, 185 [§ 143].
daughters of descendants and collaterals as heirs in Bombay, 146 [§ 70].
gift to, by father, 275-276 [§ 225-226].
by mother on occasion of marriage, 222 [§ 181B(2)(v)].
when absolute, 185 [§ 143].
illegitimate daughter and maintenance, 596 [§ 552].
maidenhood, property acquired during, 183 [§ 137].
maintenance of, 593 [§ 546].
marriage expenses of, 395 [§ 304], 518 [§ 440].
partition, suit for, and party, 425 [§ 333(2)(b)(iv)].

Daughter's daughter—
as an heir under Act 2 of 1929, 117 [§ 43(13B)].
before the Act in Bombay, 138 [§ 56].
before the Act in Madras, 138 [§ 56].
whether takes limited or absolute estate, 117 [§ 43(13B)], 201 [§ 168], 203 [§ 170].
as a stridhana heir—
Madras school, 193 [§ 152].
Mayukha, 191 [§ 151].
Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147].
Mithila, 194 [§ 153].
maintenance of, 593 [§ 547].
whether take per stirpes or per capita, 90 [§ 32], 198 [§ 160].
as tenants in common or as joint tenants, 198 [§ 159].

Daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46], 125 [§ 47].

Daughter's daughter's son's son—
whether a bandhu, 125 [§ 47].

Daughter's husband— as a stridhana heir under Dayabhaga, 196 [§ 155], 197 [§ 157].

Daughter's son—
as an heir to his grandfather, Mit., 115 [§ 43(6)], 147 [§ 72(8)]; Day., 157 [§ 88(6)]
as an heir to stridhana—
Dayabhaga, 196 [§ 155], 197 [§ 157].
Madras school, 193 [§ 152].
Mayukha, 191 [§ 151].
Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147].
Mithila school, 194 [§ 153].
whether take per stirpes or per capita, 90 [§ 32], 198 [§ 160].
whether take as tenants in common or as joint tenants, 198 [§ 159].
survivorship among daughter's son, 89 [§ 31], 115 [§ 43(6)], 271 [§ 223(2)].
whether take per capita or per stirpes, 115 [§ 43(6)].

Daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46], 132 [§ 54(2)].
as an heir, Dayabhaga, 157 [§ 88(6)].
Daughter's son's son's son—
whether a bandhu, 125 [§ 47].
Daughter-in-law—
maintenance of, 592 [§ 544], 606 [§ 564].
Dayabhaga—See Dayabhaga School. distinguishing features of Dayabhaga, joint family, 345 [§ 272].
inheritance, distinction between Mitakshara and Dayabhaga systems, 160 [§ 95].
principal work of authority in Bengal, 78 [§ 11].
Dayabhaga School—
ancestral property according to, 346 [§ 276].
authorities in, 56-58 [Introduction].
co-heirs who take as tenants in common and those who take as joint tenants, 90 [§ 31(2)].
debts, 392 [§ 302].
difference from the Mitakshara School, 78 [§ 11], 85 [§ 22], 85 [§ 24], 89 [§ 31], 103 [§ 36], 160 [§ 95], 161 [§ 96], 174 [§ 121], 433 [§ 347].
female heirs, 142 [§ 61].
inheritance of males, 152-159 [§§ 78-94].
partition, 433-437 [§§ 346-355].
principal school of Hindu Law, 45 [Introduction].
stridhana, according to, 173 [§ 120], 195-198 [§§ 154-157].
distinction between Mitakshara and Dayabhaga, 174 [§ 121].
succession to, 173 [§ 120], 195-198 [§§ 154-157].
unchastity of female heirs whether a bar to succession to males, 161 [§ 96].
works of authority in, 78 [§ 11].
Dayakrama Sangraha—
a work of authority in Bengal, 57 [Introduction].
Dayatatwa—
a work of authority in Bengal, 57 [Introduction].
Dayavibhaga—
rules of inheritance, 825
Deafness—
whether effects exclusion from inheritance, 162 [§ 98].
share on partition, 165 [§ 106].
Debts—
acknowledgment of, by guardian, 584 [§ 531].
by manager, 312 [§ 249].
by widow, 243 [§ 196].
alienation by father for payment of his debts, Mit., 374 [§ 295]; Day., 392 [§ 302].
neither for legal necessity nor for antecedent debt, 381 [§ 296].
by limited heir for payment of debts of last full owner, 219 [§ 181A(2)(iv)].
by manager for payment of family debts, 300 [§ 242].
by widow for payment of debts incurred in business, 242 [§ 194A].
antecedents debts, what are, 374 [§ 295].
burden of proof, 376 [§ 295(2)].
where proved in part only, 385 [§ 297].
attachment of coparcenary interest for coparcener's debts, 352 [§ 289].
attachment of coparcenary property for father's debts, 364 [§ 294A].
avyavaharika debts, 386 [§ 298(8) ].
business, debts contracted for, 298 [§ 240].
coparceners, liability of undivided coparcenary interest for debts of, 352 [§ 289].
coparcenary property, liability of, for coparcener's debts, 352 [§ 289].
discharge for debts, manager's power to give, 311 [§ 248A].
Dayabhaga, law of, 392 [§ 302].
execution proceedings, construction of, 372 [§ 294B(5)]. taken after father's death, 373 [§ 294C].

Debts—contd.
family business, manager may contract debts for, 288 [§ 234].
father's debts, 351-392 [§§ 288-302]. liability of sons for, 354 [§ 290].
wife for, 358 [§ 291A].
mortgage of family property by father for payment of his debts, 374 [§ 295].
sale of family property by father for payment of his debts, 374 [§ 295].
sale of family property in execution of decree against father, 363 [§ 294].
grandson's and great-grandson's liability for grandfather's debts, 354 [§ 290], 357 [§ 290A], 357 [§ 291].
heirs, liability of, for ancestor's debts, Mitakshara, 351 [§ 288].
Dayabhaga, 392 [§ 302].
immoral or illegal purposes, debts incurred for, 385 [§ 298].
burden of proof, 371 [§ 294B(4)], 376 [§ 295(2)].
joint family property, liability of, for father's debts, 354 [§ 290].
limitation and creditor's suit, 362 [§ 293].
maintenance, priority of debts over, 590 [§ 540], 611 [§ 570].
manager, power of, to contract debts for family, 298 [§ 240].
to give valid discharge for, 311 [§ 248A].
mohunt, power of, to contract debts, 489 [§ 415(1)].
partition, provision for family debts on, 394 [§ 304].
debts contracted by father after, 356 [§ 290].
pious obligation of son, etc., for payment of ancestor's debts, 354 [§ 290].
whether applies to wife, 358 [§ 291A].
relinquishment of debts, manager's power of, 313 [§ 250].
sale of coparcener's interest in undivided coparcenary property for payment of his debts, 352 [§ 289].
sale of coparcenary property for father's debts, 363 [§ 294], 371 [§ 294B(2)], 372 [§ 294B(5)].
separate property, liability of, for debts, 351 [§ 288].
shebait, power of, to contract debts, 489 [§ 415(1)].
son's liability for father's debts, 354 [§ 290].
after partition, 356 [§ 290(6)].
suit by creditor, against whom may be filed, 358-362 [§ 292(1) to (4A)].
suit for, contracted by father before partition, 354 [§ 290].
surety, son's liability for debts of father as, 385 [§ 298].
time-barred, 389 [§ 299].
widow, debts contracted by, 242 [§ 195].

Debutter property—See Endowments.
alienation of, 489 [§ 415].
meaning of, 485 [§ 413].

Decree— against benamidar, 638 [§ 610].
father for his personal debts, 352 [§ 289], 363 [§ 294].
as manager, 319 [§ 254].
manager, when binding on coparceners, 317 [§ 253].
minor without sanction of Court, 311 [§ 248].
mohunt, when binding on his successors, 492 [§ 417].
shebait, when binding on his successors, 492 [§ 417].
widow, when binding on reversioners, 250 [§ 199].
mortgage, against father, 371 [§ 294B(2)].

Dedication—See Endowments.

Devasthanam— distinction between devasthanam and math, 485 [§ 413].
meaning of, 485 [§ 413].
possession and management of property dedicated to, 485 [§ 413].

Dharam—
gift or bequest to, 478 [§ 405], 618 [§ 582].

Dharma— auxiliary indice of, 61-62 [Introduction].
definition of, 1 [Introduction].
Hindu Law as a branch of, 1 [Introduction].

Dharmasutras—13-18 [Introduction].
Apastamba Sutra, 14
Baudhayana Sutra, 15 chronology of, 17
Gautama Sutra, 14
Harita Sutra, 15 importance of, 16
other authors of, 16
Vasishtha Sutra, 15
Vishnu Sutra, 16

Disability—See Exclusion from inheritance, and Exclusion from partition.

Disciple—
as heir, Mit., 139 [§ 57]; Day., 159 [§ 91].
maintenance of, 488 [§ 414].

Diseases—
incurable, whether effect exclusion from inheritance and from partition, 162 [§ 98], 165 [§ 106].

Disinheritance— sons, wife, and other heirs, of, 445 [§ 368].

Disqualification—See Exclusion from Inheritance, and Exclusion from Partition.

Divesting of estate—
executory bequest, 464 [§ 389].
on adoption by widow, 563-566 [§§ 501-506].

Divorce—
conversion to Islam, and, 520 [§ 441].
custom, by, 520 [§ 441].
Hindu law, under, 519 [§ 441].
Indian Divorce Act (1869), 520 [§ 441].
Indian Majority Act not applicable to Hindus in matters of, 73 [§ 4(vii)], 574 [§ 516].
Native Converts Marriage Dissolution Act (1866), 519 [§ 441].

Donatio mortis causa— recognised in Hindu Law, 443 [§ 365].

Dravida School—See Madras School.

Dumbness—
exclusion from inheritance, 162 [§ 98].
share on partition, 165 [§ 106].

Durga Pujah— endowment for performance of, 477 [§ 404].

Dwyamushyana— rights of inheritance of a, in natural and adoptive families, 552 [§ 486].

Election— reversioner, by, with regard to alienation by widow, 235 [§ 190].

Endowments—
accumulations, direction for, and, 484 [§ 411A].
alienation of endowed property, 489 [§ 415].
burden of proof of necessity for, 491 [§ 415A].
charge in favour of, 482 [§ 408A].
creation of, 480 [§ 407].
creditor's suit for money lent against legal necessity, 492 [§ 416].
cy-pres, doctrine of, 498 [§ 421(4)].
debts, power of shebait, or mohunt, to contract, 489 [§ 415].
debutter property, alienation of, 489 [§ 415].
creditor, right of, against, 481 [§ 407A].
meaning of, 485 [§ 413].
decree against, shebait or mohunt, 492 [§ 417].
dedication, irrevocability of, 498 [§ 421(4)]. charge on estate, by way of, 481, 482 [§ 408 and § 408A]. evidence of, 483 [§ 409].

Endowments—contd.
dedication
may be complete or partial, 481 [§ 408], 482 [§ 408A].
rules of construction, 481-484 [§§ 407A-411A].
devasthanam and math, distinction between, 485 [§ 413].
management of property dedicated to, 485 [§ 413].
meaning of, 485 [§ 413].
dharam, gift or bequest to, 478 [§ 405].
dharamkarta, 488 [§ 414]. direction for accumulation, and, 484 [§ 411A].
female manager, 487 [§ 413].
founder, rights of, 497 [§ 421].
gift of right of management, 496 [§ 420(2)]. homes for disabled, 500 [§ 423A].
idol a juridical person, 486 [§ 413].
idol, bequest to, 484 [§ 410].
offerings made to, 499 [§ 422].
property held by, 486 [§ 413].
removal of, 497 [§ 420].
suit by or against, 486 [§ 413].
illusory, 481 [§ 407A].
income of endowed property, power of shebait or mohunt over, 487 [§ 414(2)]. limitation, suits relating to, 503 [§ 426].
lunacy of mohunt, 486 [§ 413].
of shebait, 486 [§ 413].
Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act (19 of 1951), 478 [§ 404A].
math, meaning of, 485 [§ 413].
object of, 485 [§ 413].
possession and management of property dedicated to, 485 [§ 413].
property held by, 486 [§ 413].
mohunt, decree against, 492 [§ 417].
devolution of office of, 492 [§ 418].
married in exceptional cases, 488 [§ 414].
meaning of, 485 [§ 413].
offerings made to, by his followers, 499 [§ 422].
office of, whether liable to partition, 493 [§ 418(3)]. position of, 487 [§ 414].
removal of, 499 [§ 423].
right of, to sue, 486 [§ 413].
new legislation by States, 477 [§ 404A].
Orissa Hindu Religious Endowments Act (IV of 1939), 478 [§ 404A]. partial dedication, 482 [§ 408A].
perpetuities, rule against, 461 [§ 385].
private endowments and public endowments, distinction between, 500 [§ 424].
pujari, devolution of office of, 496 [§ 419A].
Rajasthan Nathwara Temple Act (XIII of 1959), 478 [§ 404A].
Religious Endowments Act 20 of 1863, 502 [§ 424].
remainder, bequest or gift in, to endowment, 485 [§ 412].
removal of shebaits and mohunts, 499 [§ 423].
right to sue in respect of, 486 [§ 413].
sadabartas, 500 [§ 423A].
sale by shebait or mohunt of right of management, 496 [§ 420(1)]. scheme of management, 499 [§ 423].
shebait, decree against, 492 [§ 417]. adverse possession against idol, 487 [§ 414].
benami purchase of debutter property, by, 487 [§ 414].
devolution of office of, 493 [§ 419], 498 [§ 421].
meaning of, 485 [§ 413].
partition of office of, 494 [§ 419(3)]. position of, 487 [§ 414].
removal of, 499 [§ 423].
right of, to sue, 486 [§ 413].
right to nominate successor by will, 495 [§ 419(4)].
shebaitship, whether a female can succeed to office of, 494 [§ 419(2)].
shebaiti right, alienated by a widow, suit for recovery of, 506 [§ 426(5)]. subject-matter of endowment, 480 [§ 406]. suit, maintaining of by person in de facto possession of math properties, 491 [§ 415B].

Endowments—contd.
superstitious uses, validity of endowments for, 477 [§ 404].
tanks, of, 500 [§ 423A].
Transfer of Property Act, sec. 123, and endowments, 480 [§ 407].
transfer of right of management, 496 [§ 420].
Trusts Act 2 of 1882 whether applies to, 480 [§ 407].
trustees, interposition of, whether necessary, 480 [§ 407].
trustees, vesting of property in, 485 [§ 413].
will, endowments created by, 480 [§ 407(1)]. worship in temple, right of, 503 [§ 425].
fee for admission, 503 [§ 425].

Equities— on setting aside alienations, by a widow, 232 [§ 188].
by a coparcener in Bombay, Madras and Madhya Pradesh, 336 [§ 268(2)].
in Bengal and U.P., 338 [§ 269(2)].

Escheat—
maintenance, and, 592 [§ 544A].
when Government takes by escheat, Mit., 140 [§ 59]; Day., 159 [§ 92]; Stridhana, 198 [§ 158].

Estoppel—
adoption and, 569 [§ 513].
reversioner, to alienation by widow, of, 236 [§ 191], 237 [§ 192].

Exclusion from inheritance—
after-born son of disqualified heir, 165 [§ 105].
blindness, 162 [§ 98].
Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850, effect of, 161 [§ 97], 164 [§ 102].
caste, loss of, 161 [§ 97].
conversion from Hinduism, 161 [§ 97].
deafness, 162 [§ 98].
disability arising after succession, 164 [§ 103].
disability does not exclude heir of disqualified person, 164 [§ 102].
except where heir is an adopted son, 164 [§ 102].
disability only personal, 164 [§ 102].
disability, removal of, after succession has opened, 164 [§ 104].
dumbness, 162 [§ 98].
effect of, 164 [§§ 101, 102], 165 [§ 105].
females, grounds on which they may be excluded from inheritance, 164 [§ 100].
Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, 73 [§ 4], 163 [§ 98].
idiocy, 162 [§ 98].
lameness, 162 [§ 98].
leprosy, 162 [§ 98].
lunacy, 162 [§ 98].
maintenance of disqualified heirs, 166 [§ 110].
mental defects, 162 [§ 98].
murder and, 163 [§ 99].
physical defects and, 162 [§ 98].
religious order, adoption of, 166 [§ 111].
removal of disability, 164 [§ 104].
subsequent disability, effect of, 164 [§ 103].
unchastity of female heirs and, 161 [§ 96].

Exclusion from joint family property— limitation against excluded member, 294 [§ 235(3)]. rights of excluded coparcener, 294 [§ 235(3)].

Exclusion from partition—See Exclusion from inheritance.
after-born son of disqualified coparcener, 166 [§ 109].
disabilities which bring about, 165 [§ 106].
Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, 166 [§ 107(2)].
lunacy at time of partition and, 165 [§ 107].
maintenance of disqualified coparceners, 166 [§ 110].
religious order, adoption of, and, 166 [§ 111].
removal of disability, 166 [§ 108].

Executors
power of, to dispose of property, 452 [§ 376A].
probate, where necessary, 450 [§ 375].
vesting of estate in, 451 [§ 376].

Executory bequest—
executory bequest, 464 [§ 389].
Factum valet—
adoption, and, 512 [§ 434].
marriage and, 512 [§ 434].
Family business—See Ancestral business. a heritable asset, 287 [§ 234].
debts contracted by manager for, 298 [§ 240].
by widow for, 242-243 [§§ 194A, 195].
enquiries as to necessity for loan, 298 [§ 240(3)].
joint family firm, characteristics of, 287 [§ 234].
manager, powers of, 300 [§ 241].
minors, liability of, 287 [§ 234], 298 [§ 240].
Father—
adoption, alienations by adoptive father prior to, 566 [§ 508].
no bar to disposal of separate property by adoptive father by gift or will, 560 [§ 498].
right of father to give his son in, 548 [§ 475].
adoptive father, whether entitled to inherit to adopted son, 558 [§ 495].
adult son, when father bound to maintain, 592 [§ 545].
alienation by, of ancestral property—See Alienation.
ancestral immovable property, gift by father of, 275 [§ 226].
ancestral movables, gift by father of, 275 [§ 225].
ancestral property, father's interest in, Mitakshara, 274-275 [§§ 224-225].
Dayabhaga, 345 [§ 274].
as an heir to his son, Mit., 116 [§ 43(8)], 147 [§ 72(10)]; May., 150 [§ 77(7)]; Day., 157 [§ 88(7)].
bequest by father of his separate property to his son, 272 [§ 223(5)].
of ancestral property by father, 445 [§ 368]. change of religion by, and guardianship, 577 [§ 525].
compromise of suit by, 311 [§ 248].
decree against, as manager and res-judicata, 319 [§ 254].
gift by father of his separate property to his son, 272 [§ 223(5)].
gift of joint family property in general, 438 [§ 357].
gift by father to his daughter is saudayika, 185 [§ 143].
guardianship, right of father to, 575 [§ 518].
insolvency of, 332 [§ 265(2)].
liability of sons for debts of, 351 [§ 288], 354 [§ 290].
maintenance of minor sons and unmarried daughters by, 592-593 [§§ 545-546].
marriage, right of father to give daughter in, 510 [§ 433], 511 [§ 434].
partition between the sons, right of father to effect, 410 [§ 323].
partition, share on, between father and sons, 407 [§ 321(1)].
by will, 410 [§ 324].
sale by father of joint family property for payment of his debts, 374 [§ 295].
sale in execution of decree against father for his debts, 363 [§ 294].
separate property, power over, 269 [§ 222].
stridhana heir, as, 186-190 [§§ 145-157]. daughter's sulka, 187 [§ 146].
Davabhaga, 196 [§ 155], 197-198 [§§ 156, 157].
Madras school, 193 [§ 152].
Mayukha, 192 [§ 151(III)].
Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147].
Father's daughter's son—See Sister's son.
Father's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(7)].
Father's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 132 [§ 54(6)].
Father's father—See Father. as an heir, Mit., 117 [§ 43(13)], 149 [§ 72(34)]; May., 151 [§ 77(13)]; Day., 158 [§ 88(13)]. alienation by grandfather of joint family property for payment of his debts, 374 [§ 295].
debts, liability of grandsons for grandfather's, 354 [§ 290].
sale of joint family property in execution of decree against grandfather for his debts, 363 [§ 294].

Father's father's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(17)].
Father's father's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(24)].
Father's father's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(23)].
Father's father's father—
as an heir, Mit., 119 [§ 43(18)], 149 [§ 72(49)]; Day., 158 [§ 88(19)].
Father's father's mother—
as an heir, Mit., 119 [§ 43(17)], 149 [§ 72(48)]; Day., 158 [§ 88(20)].
estate taken by, in inherited property, 201-205 [§§ 168-171].
Father's father's sister's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 122 [§ 46(4)], 134 [§ 54(II 3)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(24)].
Father's father's sister's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 7)].
Father's father's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 20)].
Father's father's son's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(I 31)].
Father's father's son's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 29)].
Father's father's son's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 27)].
Father's maternal grandfather—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 1)].
Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 5)].
Father's maternal grandfather's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 2)].
Father's maternal grandfather's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 4)].
Father's maternal grandfather's son's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 8)].
Father's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 10)].
Father's maternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 135 [§ 54(II 20)].
Father's maternal grandfather's son's son's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 135 [§ 54(II 16)].
Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 11)].
Father's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 135 [§ 54(II 21)].
Father's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 12)].
Father's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 135 [§ 54(II 24)].
Father's maternal great-grandfather—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136A.
Father's maternal great great-grandfather—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136A.

Father's mother—
as an heir to her grandson, Mit., 117 [§ 43(12)], 148 [§ 72(13)]; May., 150 [§ 77(ii)]; Day., 158 [§ 88(14)].
whether takes a limited or an absolute estate, 201 [§ 168], 203 [§ 170].
as a stridhana heir, whether takes an absolute or a limited estate—in Bombay, 205 [§ 171].
in other States, 203 [§ 169].
partition, rights on, Mitakshara, 405 [§ 317].
Dayabhaga, 436 [§ 354].
suit for, whether is a necessary party to, 425 [§ 333(2)(ii)].

Father's mother's brother—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 2)].

Father's mother's brother's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46(3)], 134 [§ 54(II 4)].

Father's mother's sister—
as a stridhana heir to maiden's property, in Bombay, 186 [§ 145].

Father's mother's sister's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46(3)], 134 [§ 54 (II 5)].

Father's paternal uncle—
as an heir, Mitakshara, 119 [§ 43(19)]; Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(21)].

Father's paternal uncle's daughter's son—
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(31)].

Father's paternal uncle's son—
as an heir, Mitakshara, 119 [§ 43(20)]; Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(22)].

Father's paternal uncle's son's daughter's son—
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(32)].

Father's paternal uncle's son's son—
as an heir, Mitakshara, 119 [§ 43(21)]; Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(23)].

Father's sister—
as a stridhana heir to maiden's property in Bombay, 186 [§ 145].
as an heir in Bombay, 138 [§ 56], 143 [§ 64(2)].
in Madras, 138 [§ 56].
whether takes an absolute or limited interest in inherited property—in Bombay, 203 [§ 170(2)], 205 [§ 171].
in Madras, 202 [§ 168(4)], 203 [§ 169].

Father's sister's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 24)].

Father's sister's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46(3)], 133 [§ 54(I 17)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(18)].

Father's sister's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 122 [§ 46(3)], 133 [§ 54 (I 23)].

Father's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 132 [§ 54(I 5)].

Father's son's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 11)].

Father's son's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 9)].

Father's son's son's son's son—
as heir, Mitakshara, 119 [§ 43(22)].

Fellow student—
as heir, Mit., 139 [§ 57]; Day., 159 [§ 91].

Female Bandhus—

Bombay, in, 138 [§ 56].
Madras, in, 138 [§ 56].

Female heirs—

Benares and Mithila, in, 142 [§§ 61A, 62].
Bengal, in, 142 [§ 61].
Bombay, in, 143-146 [§§ 64-70].
daughters of collaterals, 146 [§ 70].
of descendants, 146 [§ 70].
half-sister, 144 [§ 66].
sister, 144 [§ 65].
widows of gotraja sapindas, 145 [§ 68].
of samanodakas, 146 [§ 69].
estate (limited or absolute) taken by, or succession to property inherited from—females, in Bombay, 205 [§ 171].
in other States, 203 [§ 169].
males, in Bombay, 203 [§ 170].
in other States, 201 [§ 168].
Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929, female heirs under, 142-144 [§§ 61A to 66].
Madras, in, 143 [§ 63].
Mitakshara school, under, 142 [§ 61A].
powers of, over inherited property, 206-253 [§ 174-201].
remedies against unauthorised acts of, 253-260 [§§ 202-211].
unchastity of, how far affects exclusion from inheritance, 161 [§ 96], 184 [§ 139].

Firm—

joint family, 287 [§ 234]. insolvency of, 335 [§ 266].

Fraud—

adoption, consent to, when obtained by fraud, 555 [§ 491].
benami transactions and fraud upon creditors, 637 [§ 608].
gifts in fraud of creditors, 443 [§ 364].
marriage brought about by fraud, 507 [§ 427(2)].
partition, reopening of, on ground of fraud, 429 [§ 337].

Funeral Expenses—

alienation by widow for, 216, 217 [§ 181A(1)(2)].
by manager for, 300, [§ 242], 302 [§ 243]. provision for funeral ceremonies of widowed mother on partition, 395 [§ 304].
widow, of, whether payable out of husband's estate or out of her stridhana, 608 [§ 566].

Gains of Learning: gains of science—

Hindu Gains of Learning Act, 1930, 282 [§ 231A]. whether separate or joint family property, 281, 282 [§§ 231, 231A].

Gandharva—

one of the unapproved forms of marriage, 508 [§ 428].

Gift—

acceptance, of, 439 [§ 358].
adopted son, gift to, where adoption invalid, 568 [§ 511].
adoption whether prevents disposal of separate property by adoptive father by gift, 560 [§ 498].
alternative and independent gifts, 464 [§ 388].
ancestral property, gift by father, 275 [§ 225], 438 [§ 357(3)]. burden of proof where gift made by a Hindu widow, 443 [§ 363].
class, gift to, 462 [§ 386].
conditional, 468 [§ 396]. construction of deeds of gift, 452-454 [§§ 377-378], 471-476 [§§ 399 to 401].
contingent, 467 [§ 394].
coparcenary interest, of, 320 [§ 258].
creditors, gift in fraud of, 443 [§ 364]. daughters, to, 185 [§ 143], 472 [§ 401].
defeasance, gift subject to, 464 [§ 389].
definition of, 438 [§ 356].
dharam, gift to, 478 [§ 405].

Gift—contd.
disposition in favour of unborn person subject to prior disposition, 460 [§ 384]. donatio mortis causa, 443 [§ 365].
estate unknown to Hindu law, 456 [§ 382].
females, gift to, 472 [§ 401].
gift over on failure of void prior gift, 464 [§ 387].
gift to a person whose adoption is invalid, 568 [§ 511].
gift to niece (Brat) on the occasion of her marriage, 222 [§ 181B(2)(v)].
gift to widow, daughters and other females, 185 [§ 143], 472 [§ 401].
gift to unborn persons, 440-442 [§§ 359, 360].
rule as modified by statute, 441 [§ 360].
rule of Hindu law, 440 [§ 359].
in cases governed by Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 441 [§ 360], 460-466 [§§ 383-390]. gift to unborn person subject to prior interest, 460 [§ 384].
rule against perpetuity in regard to gift, 461 [§ 385].
when unborn person acquires vested interest on transfer for his benefit, 461 [§ 385].
failure of prior disposition, 464 [§ 387].
in cases governed by the Hindu Transfers and Bequest Acts (Madras), 441 [§ 360], 460-466 [§§ 383-390].
grant of land made by Government limiting descent, 621 [§ 584].
idol, gift to, 484 [§ 410].
immoral conditions, in, 468 [§ 396].
impartible estate, gift of, 439 [§ 357(7)].
independent and alternative gifts, 464 [§ 388].
inherited property, gift by widow, of, 222 [§ 181B].
with consent of reversioners, 227 [§ 183].
life-interest, reservation of, to donor, 442 [§ 361].
malik, gift to a female as, 474 [§ 401(3)]. possession, delivery of, 439 [§ 358].
registration, 440 [§ 358(2)].
religion, for spreading, 478 [§ 405].
religious office, gift of, 496 [§ 420(2)].
religious or charitable purposes, gift for, 477 [§ 404].
remainder, gift by way of, 466 [§ 390].
repugnant condition, effect of, 443 [§ 362].
revocation of, 443 [§ 363].
rule against perpetuity in regard to, 461 [§ 385].
rule common to gifts and wills, 455-476 [§§ 379-401].
separate or self-acquired property, gift of, 438 [§ 357(1)].
son, to, by father, 272 [§ 223(5)]. 275 [§ 225].
Transfer of Property Act, 1882, 440 [§ 358(2)].
trust, gift through the medium of, 443 [§ 366].
two or more persons, gift to, 471 [§ 400].
unborn persons, to—See sub-head "Gift to unborn persons".
undivided coparcenary interest, gift of, Mitakshara, 320 [§ 258], 336 [§ 267].
Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 282].
widow, to, 472 [§ 401]. writing not necessary, 440 [§ 358].

Gonds— whether Hindu Law applies to, 75 [§ 6].

Gotra— females who enter the gotra of a Hindu by marriage, 180 [§ 130].
marriage with a girl of the same gotra, validity of, 514 [§ 436(1)].

Gotraja Sapinda—See Sapindas. adoption by a widow who has succeeded as a, 547 [§ 473].
definition of, 104 [§ 37].
widows of, as heirs in the Bombay State, 145 [§ 68].

Government—
escheat to, Mit., 140 [§ 59]; Day., 159 [§ 92]; Stridhana, 198 [§ 158].
grant of land made by Government limiting descent, 621 [§ 584].
maintenance, liability of the Government for, when property taken by escheat, 592 [§ 544A].
payment of Government revenue, whether a legal necessity, 392 [§ 243].

Grandchildren—
maintenance of, 593 [§ 547].
Granddaughter—See Son's daughter, Daughter's daughter.
Grandfather—See Father's father, Mother's father.
Grandmother—See Father's mother, Mother's mother.
Grandson—See Son's son, Daughter's son.
Great grandfather's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 3)].
Great grandfather's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 6)].
Great grandfather's son's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 13)].
Great grandfather's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 7)].
Great grandfather's daughter's son's daughter— as a bandhu in Bombay State, 138 [§ 56].
Great grandfather's son's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 135 [§ 54(II 14)].
Great grandfather's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(II 9)].
Great grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 135 [§ 54(II 17)].
Great grandsons—See Son's son's sons.
Great great grandfather—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136A,
Great great grandfather's daughter's son—
as a sakulya, Dayabhaga, 155 [§ 84].
Great great grandfather's daughter's son's son—
as a sakulya, Dayabhaga, 155 [§ 84].
Great great grandfather's daughter's son's son's son—
as a sakulya, Dayabhaga, 155 [§ 84].
Guardianship— adopted son, guardianship of, 577 [§ 521].
age of majority, 574 [§ 516].
alienation by guardian—See Alienation.
caste, loss of, and, 577 [§ 524]. conversion of father and, 577 [§ 525].
mother and, 578 [§ 526].
ward and, 578 [§ 527].
de facto and ad hoc guardian, 587 [§ 538].
father, right of, to guardianship of minor son, 575 [§ 518].
to appoint guardian by will, 584 [§ 532].
Guardian and Wards Act of 1890, 73 [§ 4(viii)], 586-587 [§§ 535-537]. guardian appointed by the Court, 585-587 [§§ 533-537].
alienations by, 586 [§ 536].
guardian de facto and ad hoc, 587 [§ 538].
guardian whether can bind minor by personal covenant, 580 [§ 529(1)].
illegitimate children, guardianship of, 577 [§ 522].
immovable property, contract for purchase of, 582 [§ 529(2)]. lunatic, de facto guardian of, 588 [§ 538A].
Majority Act 9 of 1875, 574 [§ 516].
marriage, guardian for, 510 [§ 433], 511 [434].
minor, capacity of, to act as guardian, 575 [§ 518].
mother, right of, to guardianship of minor son, 576 [§ 518].
natural guardians, 575-584 [§§ 518-531].
acknowledgment of debt by, 584 [§ 531].
alienations by, 578 [§ 528], 587 [§ 538].

Guardianship—contd.
natural guardian,
compromise by, 584 [§ 530].
contracts, power to enter into, 580 [§ 529]. effect of change of religion by father, 578 [§ 525].
by mother, 578 [§ 526].
by ward, 578 [§ 527].
loss of caste, 578 [§ 524].
remarriage of mother, 577 [§ 523]. person, of, 575 [§ 518], 578 [§ 527], 584 [§ 532], 586 [§ 534]. property, of, 575 [§ 518], 576 [§ 519], 584 [§ 532], 586 [§ 535], 586 [§ 537]. recovery of custody of minor, procedure for, 588 [§ 539].
testamentary guardians, 584 [§ 532].
alienation by, 584 [§ 532].
undivided coparcenary interest of minor and guardianship, 576 [§ 519].
wife, of, 521 [§ 443].

Halal Memons—
Hindu law, how far applies to, 617 [§ 582], of Morvi, 619 [§ 582].
of Porbunder, 619 [§ 582].

Half-brother— as an heir, Mitakshara, 116 [§ 43(9)], 147 [§ 72(11)]; Dayabhaga, 157 [§ 88(9)]; Mayukha, 116 [§ 43(9)], 151 [§ 77(13)].

Half-sister—
as an heir, in Bombay, 118 [§ 43(13C)(2)], 144 [§ 66], 148 [§ 72(15)], 150 [§ 77]. in Madras, 138 [§ 56].

Heirs—
co-heirs, when take as tenants-in-common, 89 [§ 31].
as joint tenants, 89 [§ 31].
per capita, 90 [§ 32].
per stirpes, 90 [§ 32].
debts, liability of heirs for, 351 [§ 288].
female heirs, 142-146 [§§ 61-70]—See Female heirs.
heirs according to—
Bombay school, 141-151 [§§ 71-77].
Dayabhaga, 152-159 [§§ 78-94].
Mitakshara, 107-141 [§§ 43-60].

Hermits—
succession to, 140 [§ 58].

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—
Act—adoptions after the Act to be regulated by the, 993-994, 995, 1036.
application of the, 980.
codifying, 989-990.
commencement of the, 990.
not retrospective, 994, 1036.
rules of interpretation of the, 990.
over-riding effect of the, 993-994.
title of the, 990.
act of adoption [S. 11], 1005, 1007. adoptee—
cannot be adopted more than once, 1002, 1003.
cannot be adopted simultaneously by two persons, 1005, 1007.
condition of adoption of a valid, 1004-1007.
deaf or dumb person, whether can be an, 1004.
if married, cannot be adopted in the absence of custom or usage, 1003, 1004.
if below fifteen, cannot be adopted in the absence of custom or usage, 1003, 1004.
restrictions on marriage of the adoptee in the natural family continue even after adoption, 1008, 1010.
same status in the adoptive family as the natural born child, 1008-1009.
when adopted by the widow, becomes the adoptive child not only of the widow but also of her deceased husband, 1009-1010.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.

adoption—
after the Act, to be regulated by the Act, 995.
all ties in natural family severed on, 1008-1009.
before the Act, not affected by the Act, 995, 1036.
by a minor void, 997, 998.
by a widow, 999, 1009-1010.
by any person not having the requisite capacity is void, 996.
cannot be cancelled if validly made, 984, 1015.
capacity of a male Hindu to take a son or daughter in, 982, 996-998.
capacity of a female Hindu to take a son or daughter in adoption, 982-983, 998-999.
ceremonies for, 1005, 1007. conditions as to the age of the child to be adopted, 983, 1003-1004.
condition as to the age of the adoptive father, 982, 997, 1006.
condition as to the age of the adoptive mother, 982, 998, 1006.
conditions for a valid, 1004-1007.
consequences of a valid adoption, 984, 1008-1012.
consequences of a void adoption, 995.
deaf or dumb person, whether can be given or taken in adoption, 1004.
divesting of estate how far on, 984, 1008, 1011-1012.
effects and results of a valid, 984, 1008-1012.
in Hindu Law, 979.
in Roman Law, 979.
no divesting of estate already vested before, 1008, 1011-1012.
not void because moneys given for it, 1002, 1016.
objects of, 983.
orphans can be given or taken in, 983, 1000, 1001-1002.
of a daughter, 979, 1002-1007. of a son, 979, 1002-1007. of an only son permitted, 1001.
persons who may be adopted, 1002-1004.
presumption as to a valid, 984, 1015.
prohibition of payment in connection with, 1016.
proof of, 984, 1015-1016.
prosecution for payment in connection with, 1016.
punishment for payment in connection with, 1016. requirements for a valid adoption under the old law, 981.
requirements for a valid adoption under the Act, 982, 996.
requisite formalities for, 983, 1005, 1007. restrictions on marriage in the natural family continue even after, 1008, 1010.
results and effect of a valid, 984, 1008-1012.
results and effect of a void, 995.
right of adoptive parents to dispose of their property, after, 1012-1013.
rights under previous adoption saved, 1036.
same child cannot be given in adoption twice over, 983, 1005, 1007.
simultaneous adoption of two sons or two daughters prohibited, 1005, 1007.
what is, 979, 1007.
who can give a child in, 983, 1000-1002.
who may be given in, 983, 1002-1004.

adoption by a widow, 999, 1009-1010.

adoptive father or mother—can claim maintenance from adopted son or daughter, 1024.
cannot cancel adoption validly made, 1015.
cannot give adopted son or daughter in adoption, 1000, 1001.
not prohibited from disposing of his property after adoption in the absence of any agreement, 1012-1013.

adoptive mother—see adoptive father. Also see determination of adoptive mother.

age—
of the adoptee, 1003-1004.
of the adopter, 996, 998.
of the adoptive father in relation to the adopted daughter, 1004, 1006.
of the adoptive mother in relation to the adopted son, 1004, 1006.

aged or infirm parents—see parents.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.
amount of maintenance—see maintenance.
application of the Act, 990-992—wide and extensive, 980.
arrogatio, 979.
Arya Samaj [S. 2]— follower of, is a Hindu, 990.
assessment of quantum of maintenance—see maintenance.
bachelor [S. 14]—
where a bachelor marries after adopting a child, his wife deemed to be the step-mother of the adopted child, 1013-1014.
Brahmo Samaj [S. 2]— follower of, is a Hindu, 990.
Buddhist [S. 2]—
is a Hindu for the purpose of the Act, 990-991. cancellation of adoption [S. 15]— not permitted, 984, 1015. capacity of a female Hindu to take a child in adoption [S. 8]—
See female Hindu. capacity of a male Hindu to take a child in adoption [S. 7]—
See male Hindu. ceremonies for adoption [S. 11], 1005, 1007.
datta homam or any other religious ceremonies not essential, 1005, 1007.
giving and taking essential, 1005, 1007.
changes brought about by the Act—in the law of adoption, 982-984.
woman treated as in equali jura, 981.
charge [S. 27], 988, 1034.
dependants' claim for maintenance is not a charge against the estate of the deceased, unless so provided by agreement, decree of Court, or will, 988, 1034.
child—
abandoned, 1000.
above fifteen cannot be adopted, in the absence of custom or usage, 1003-1004.
can be given in adoption only by father, mother or guardian, 1000-1002.
conditions for adoption of a, 1004-1007.
daughter can be given or taken in adoption, 1006.
existence of illegitimate, not a bar to adoption of another child, 1005, 1006.
illegitimate minor, entitled to maintenance, 1023-1024, 1028.
illegitimate, when a Hindu, 991.
married child cannot be given in adoption, in the absence of custom or usage, 1003, 1004.
of any caste can be given or taken in adoption, 1003.
only son or daughter, can be given in adoption, 1001.
orphan, can be adopted or given in adoption, 983, 1000, 1001-1002.
parentage not known, 1000.
personal obligation of a Hindu male or female to maintain minor legitimate and illegitimate children and unmarried legitimate or illegitimate daughter, 986, 1023-1024, 1028.
same child cannot be twice adopted, 983, 1005, 1007.
simultaneous adoption of two sons or two daughters prohibited, 1004, 1006.
welfare of including the wishes of the, to be taken into consideration by the Court before giving permission to the guardian for giving a child in adoption, 1001-1002.
who may be adopted, 1002-1004.
codification—
scheme of recent legislation to codify Hindu Law, 980.
codifying Act, 989-990, 993.
commencement and extent of the Act [S. 1], 990.
adoptions made after the commencement of the Act to be governed by the Act, 993-994.
adoptions made before the commencement of the Act not to be governed by the Act, 995-996, 1036.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.
concubine [S. 18], 985, 1017, 1020, 1028.
keeping of a, by the husband is ground for Hindu wife to claim separate residence and maintenance from the husband, 1017, 1020.
conditions of a valid adoption [S. 11], 1004-1007.
actual giving and taking essential for valid adoption, 1005, 1007.
age of the adopter, 996, 998.
age of the adoptive father in relation to the adopted daughter, 1004, 1006.
age of the adoptive mother in relation to the adopted son, 1004, 1006.
datta homam or any other religious ceremony not necessary for a valid adoption, 1005, 1007.
free consent, 1007.
in case of a daughter, 1005-1006.
in case of a son, 1005-1006. same child cannot be adopted twice over, 983, 1005, 1007.
simultaneous adoption of two sons or two daughters prohibited, 983, 1004, 1006.
consent—
valid adoption implies free consent of the persons giving and taking in adoption, and of the adoptee if he is major, 1007.
consent of the wife [S. 7], 996-998—for adoption by the husband may be implied, 997.
necessary for adoption by the husband, 996-998.
when can be dispensed with by the husband, 996, 998.
consequences of a valid adoption—See results of adoption.
consequences of a void adoption [S. 5], 995.
consideration—
for giving a child in adoption cannot be enforced in law, 1002.
for giving a child in adoption does not make the adoption void, 1002.
for giving a child in adoption by the guardian may be allowed with the sanction of the Court, 1000, 1002.
prohibition of, in connection with adoption, 1016.
punishment for taking or giving consideration in connection with adoption, 1016.
conversion—
converted wife can claim maintenance (but not separate residence and maintenance) from the husband while the marriage subsists, 1021.
disqualifies from claiming maintenance under the Act, 1032.
disqualifies a person from giving son or daughter in adoption, or giving consent in the adoption of son or daughter, 1000, 1001.
of the husband entitles the wife to claim separate residence and maintenance from the husband, 1017, 1020-1021.
of the husband or the wife is a ground for dispensing with his or her consent in case of adoption by the other spouse, 996, 998.
convert—See conversion.
coparcenary and coparcenary property—effects of adoption on—See results of adoption.
court—
can vary amount of maintenance if there is a change of circumstances, 1033.
discretion of, in fixing quantum of maintenance, 1028, 1030.
permission of, required by guardian in giving a child in adoption, 1000, 1001-1002.
permission may be given by, to a guardian for receiving payment in connection, with giving a child in adoption, 1000, 1001-1002.
presumption by, about the validity of adoption where adoption deed registered, 1015-1016.
to which application should be made by the guardian for giving a child in adoption or receiving payment in connection therewith, 1000, 1002.
when Court will give sanction to a guardian for giving child in adoption, 1000, 1001-1002.
cruelty [S. 18], 985, 1017, 1018-1019.
by the husband entitles the wife to claim separate residence and maintenance, 985, 1017, 1018-1019.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.
custom [S. 3(a)]—
definition of, 992.
may permit adoption of a son or daughter even if above fifteen or married, 1003.
datta homa [S. 11], 983, 1005—not necessary for a valid adoption under the Act, 1005.
dattaka—
form of adoption under old law, 979.
dattaka mimansa, 979—
work on adoption written by Nanda Pandit, 979.
favoured adoption of daughter, 979.
daughter—
adoption of, in ancient times, 979.
adoption of, favoured by Nanda Pandit in dattaka mimansa, 979.
adoption of, recognised under the Act, 979.
adoption of, permitted only if the adopter has no daughter or son's daughter, 1004, 1006.
bound to maintain aged or infirm parents, 986, 1023-1024.
difference of age between adopted daughter and adoptive father, 1004, 1006.
entitled to be maintained by father or mother until marriage, 986, 1023-1024.
entitled to be maintained as a dependent out of the estate of her deceased father or mother, or father's father or father's mother, or father's father's father or father's father's mother, until marriage, 1025, 1027.
existence of a daughter or son's daughter who has ceased to be Hindu not a bar to the adoption of a, 1006.
existence of an illegitimate daughter or a son's illegitimate daughter not a bar to the adoption of a, 1006.
existence of a son, son's son, or a son's son's son not a bar to the adoption of a, 1006.
illegitimate daughter entitled to maintenance from her mother or father until marriage, 985, 1025, 1027.
illegitimate daughter entitled to be maintained out of the estate of her deceased father or mother as a dependent, until her marriage, 1025, 1027.
widowed daughter entitled to be maintained by the heirs of her deceased father or mother's estate under certain circumstances, 1025, 1027.
daughter of a pre-deceased son—entitled to be maintained as a dependent out of the estate of her deceased father's father or father's mother, 987, 1025, 1027.
existence of, is a bar to the adoption of a daughter, 1004, 1006.
daughter of a pre-deceased son of a pre-deceased son—entitled to be maintained as a dependent out of the estate of her deceased father's father's father or father's father's mother, 987, 1025, 1027.
daughter-in-law [S. 19]— widowed, entitled to be maintained by her father-in-law, or the estate of her deceased father-in-law under certain circumstances, 987, 1021-1023, 1025, 1027.
debts [S. 26]—
of the deceased have preference over the claims for maintenance, 988, 1034.
dependants—claim for maintenance of, not a charge on the estate of the deceased male or female Hindu, unless created by agreement, decree or will, 988, 1034.
claim for maintenance of, not preferred to the debts of the deceased, 988, 1034.
discretion of the court in awarding maintenance to, 1030.
entitled to be maintained out of the estate of the deceased male or female Hindu, 987, 1024-1028.
liability of the heirs of a deceased male or female Hindu to maintain, 1025-1028.
principles on which amount of maintenance awarded to, 1028-1032.
who are, 987, 1024-1025.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.
desertion [S. 18], 1017-1018.
by husband entitles wife to claim separate residence and maintenance, 985, 1017, 1018.
what is, 1018.
determination of adoptive mother [S. 14]—See mother. discretion of the court in awarding maintenance [S. 23]—See court.
disqualifications of persons in giving or taking or consenting in adoption—conversion, 1000-1002.
minority, 1000-1002.
renunciation of the world, 1000-1002.
unsoundness of mind, 1000-1002.
divesting of estate [S. 12(b), (c)], 984, 1008, 1011-1012.
adoptee does not divest any one's estate by adoption, 984, 1008, 1011-1012.
adoptee not divested of any estate vested in him prior to adoption, 984, 1008, 1011-1012.
source of ruinous litigation under old law, 984.
dvyamushyayana—form of adoption not recognised by the Act, 1009.
effect—
of the Act on adoptions made after the Act, 980, 995.
of adoption—See results of adoption.
of registration of adoption deed—See registration of adoption deed.
of transfer of property on the right of maintenance, 1035.
over-riding, of the Act, 993-994.
estate—
divesting of—See divesting of estate.
extent of the Act [S. 1], 990.
father—(also see adoptive father).
adoptive father cannot give adopted son or daughter in adoption, 1001.
bound to maintain minor legitimate and illegitimate sons, 986, 1023-1024.
bound to maintain legitimate or illegitimate daughters till marriage, 986, 1025-1027.
bound to maintain his aged or infirm parents, 986, 1023-1024.
bound to maintain his wife, 985, 1016-1021. entitled to be maintained as a dependant out of the estate of his deceased son or daughter, 987, 1024.
if alive, alone entitled to give or take a son or a daughter in adoption, with the consent of his wife, 996-997, 1000-1001.
when can dispense with the consent of the wife in giving or taking a son or a daughter in adoption, 996-997, 1000.
when disqualified from giving or taking a son or a daughter in adoption, 1000-1001.
father-in-law [Ss. 19, 21, 22]— bound to maintain widowed daughter-in-law under certain circumstances, 987, 1021-1023.
heirs of father bound to maintain his widowed daughter-in-law out of his estate under certain circumstances, 1025.
female Hindu—also see mother, wife, widow, daughter.
adoption by a, who has not the requisite capacity, void, 998-999.
bound to maintain minor legitimate and illegitimate sons, 985, 1023-1024.
bound to maintain legitimate and illegitimate daughters until marriage, 985, 1025, 1027.
bound to maintain aged or infirm parents, 985, 1025, 1027.
can be given or taken in adoption, 983, 1002-1004.
capacity to take a son or a daughter in adoption under old law, 981.
capacity to take a son or a daughter in adoption under the Act, 981, 998-999.
entitled to be maintained as a dependant out of the estate of her deceased son or daughter, or of her deceased father's father or father's mother, or of her deceased father's father's father or father's father's mother, or of her husband, 1024-1028.
entitled to be maintained by her husband, 1016-1021.
minor, cannot adopt, 998.
of unsound mind, cannot adopt, 998.
treated as equali jura under the Act, 981.
formality [S. 11], requisite, for adoption—See ceremonies.
gifts to persons whose adoption is void, 996.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.
giving and taking [S. 11]— of the child essential for a valid adoption, 1005, 1007.
guardian [S. 9], 1000-1002—permission of the Court required for giving a child in adoption by, 1000, 1001-1002. permission of the Court required for receiving payment by a, in connection with giving a child in adoption, 1004, 1006.
when entitled to give a child in adoption, 1000-1002.
heirs [S. 22], 1025-1028—extent of liability of, of a deceased male or female Hindu to maintain the dependants of a deceased male or female Hindu, 1025, 1027-1028.
Hindu Marriage Act, 25 of 1955, 986, 1010, 1017, 1018. law prior to, 986.
Hindu Married Women's Right to Separate Residence and Maintenance Act, 19 of 1946, 985, 1018.
Hindu Succession Act, 30 of 1956, 981, 986, 1013.
Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, 986, 1022.
Hindus—
alone can be adopted under the Act, 1002-1003.
alone can claim maintenance under the Act, 1032.
who are, for the purposes of the Act, 990-992.
husband—also see male Hindu, father, son.
bound to maintain wife, 985, 1016-1021.
cannot adopt without the consent of the wife, except under certain circumstances, 997-998.
having another wife living entitles a wife to claim separate residence and maintenance, 985, 1017, 1019-1020.
heirs of, are bound to maintain his widow out of his estate, 1025-1027.
illatom—
form of adoption not recognised by the Act, 993.
illegitimate children—See child, daughter, son.
illegitimate daughter—See daughter.
illegitimate son—See son.
infirm parents—See parents.
interpretation of a statute—rules of, 990.
introductory note, 979-988.
Jain [S. 2], 990-991—
is a Hindu under the Act, 990-991. justifiable cause [S. 18]— wife may claim separate residence, and maintenance from the husband for a, 985, 1016-1021.
kritrima—
form of adoption, 979, 993.
not recognised under the Act, 993.
legitimate children—See child, daughter, son.
leprosy [S. 18], 985, 1017, 1019. of husband entitles the wife to claim separate residence and maintenance, 985, 1017, 1019.
Lingayat [S. 2], 990—
is a Hindu, 990.
maintenance—
amount of, variable by court on change of circumstances, 988, 1033.
arrears of, 1032.
assessment of quantum of maintenance, 1029-1030.
both male and female Hindus liable for, 980, 1024.
codification of the law of, 980.
claims for, not a charge on the estate of the deceased in the absence of agreement, decree or will, 988, 1034.
claims for, not entitled to preference over the debts of the deceased, 988, 1034.
claimant for, must be a Hindu, 1032.
debts of the deceased entitled to preference over the claims for maintenance, 988, 1034.
definition of, 980, 992.
discretion of the Court in awarding or fixing, 1028, 1030.
effect of transfer of property on the right of, 1035.
obligation to give, personal in character, 980, 1017, 1023.
of children, legitimate and illegitimate, 986, 1023-1024.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.
maintenance—contd.
of dependants, 979-980, 1024-1025.
of the deceased, 987.
of the widow of a predeceased son, 1021-1023, 1025.
of the widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son, 1025.
of parents, aged or infirm, 986, 1023-1024.
of unmarried legitimate or illegitimate daughters, 1025, 1027.
of unmarried daughter of a predeceased son, 1025, 1027.
of unmarried daughter of a predeceased son of a predeceased son, 1025, 1027.
of widow, 987, 1025, 1026. of widowed daughter-in-law, 1021-1023, 1025, 1027 of widowed daughter, 1025, 1027.
of wife, 985-986, 1016-1021. principles of awarding, 1028-1029.
quantum of, how determined, 1029-1032.
under the Act, 980.
under Hindu law, 979-980.
male Hindu—
adoption by, without requisite capacity, void, 996-998.
bound to maintain wife, 1016-1021.
bound to maintain legitimate and illegitimate sons, 986, 1023-1024.
bound to maintain legitimate and illegitimate daughters until marriage, 986, 1023-1024.
bound to maintain aged or infirm parents, 986, 1023-1024.
bound to maintain widowed daughter-in-law under certain circumstances, 1021-1023.
can adopt both son and daughter, 996-998.
capacity of a, to take a son or a daughter in adoption under old law, 979.
capacity of a, to take a son or a daughter in adoption under the Act, 979, 996-998.
capacity of a, to give a son or a daughter in adoption, 1000-1002.
capacity of a, to be taken in adoption, 983, 1002-1004.
heirs of a, bound to maintain his dependants, 987, 1025-1027.
minor, cannot adopt, 996.
of unsound mind, cannot adopt, 996—also see father.
Manu, 901.
married person—
cannot be taken in adoption in the absence of custom or usage, 1003, 1004.
marriage [S. 12], 1008-1010. restrictions on, in the natural family continue to bind the adoptee even after adoption, 1008-1010.
results in forfeiture of the rights of maintenance of the widow, 1025.
minor [Ss. 7, 8], 996-998—See child male person; female person. cannot adopt, 996, 998.
mother—also see female Hindu, daughter.
adoptive, cannot give adopted son or daughter in adoption, 1001.
aged or infirm, bound to be maintained by son or daughter, 986, 1023-1024.
determination of adoptive mother in certain cases, 1013-1014.
entitled to be maintained as a dependant out of the estate of the deceased son or daughter by the heirs of the estate, 987, 1024, 1027.
father cannot give son or daughter in adoption without the consent of, 996-997.
in the absence of father, alone entitled to give son or daughter in adoption, 1000-1001.
when disqualified to give son or daughter in adoption, 998-999, 1000.
Nanda Pandit, 979—author of Dattaka Mimansa, 979. permitted adoption of daughter, 979.
objects of adoption, 983, 1005.
orphans can be given or taken in adoption, 983, 1000-1002.
over-riding effect of the Act [S. 4], 993-994.
parents [S. 13, 20, 21, 22]— aged and infirm, bound to be maintained by the son or daughter, 986, 1023-1024.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.
parents—contd.
bound to be maintained as dependants by the heirs of the estate of the deceased son or daughter, 987, 1024, 1027.
right of adoptive, to dispose of their property not affected by adoption, 1012-1013.
payment [Ss. 9, 17]— not to be given to a guardian for giving a child in adoption except with the sanction of the Court, 1000, 1002.
prohibition of, in connection with adoption, 1016.
prosecution for, in connection with adoption, 1016.
punishment for, in connection with adoption, 1016.
persons—
capable of giving a child in adoption, 1000-1002. capable of taking a child in adoption, 996-999.
capable of being given or taken in adoption, 1002-1004.
no, except father, mother and guardian can give a child in adoption, 1000-1002.
who may be taken in adoption under the Act, 1002-1004.
who may be taken in adoption under old law, 1003.
persons governed by the Act [S. 2], 990-991.
Prarthana Samaj [S. 2], follower of, is a Hindu, 990.
preamble, 989.
presumption as to the validity of adoption, 984, 1015.
proof of adoption, 984, 1015—onus of proving adoption void, 1015. properties [S. 13], 1012-1013—
right of adoptive parents to dispose of their properties after adoption, 1012-1013.
prosecution [S. 17], 1016-1017—for making or receiving payment in connection with adoption, 1016-1017.
prior permission of State Government necessary for, 1016-1017.
punishment [S. 17], 1016-1017—
for making or receiving payment in connection with adoption, 1016-1017.
quantum of maintenance—See maintenance.
re-convert [S. 2], 991.
to Buddhism, Hinduism, Jainism or Sikhism is a Buddhist, Hindu, Jain, Sikh, 991. registration of adoption deed [S. 16], 984, 1015—effect of, as to presumption of validity of adoption, 984, 1015.
effect of, as to the proof of adoption, 984, 1015.
renounce world completely and finally [Ss. 7, 8, 9], 997-1000—where a male or female Hindu does, his or her consent not necessary for taking a child in adoption by the other spouse, 997-998.
where a male or female Hindu does, his or her consent not necessary for giving a child in adoption by the other spouse, 1000.
where both father and mother do, guardian of the child can give the child in adoption, 1000.
renunciation of the world complete and final—See renounce the world.
repeals of the Acts [S. 29], 1036. requirements for a valid adoption [S. 6], 982, 996—
under the Act, 982, 996.
under the old law, 981.
requisite formality for adoption—See formality.
residence [S. 18], 992, 1016-1021—
Hindu wife entitled to separate residence, and maintenance under certain circumstances, 1016-1021.
included in the definition of the word "maintenance" in the Act, 992.
results of adoption [S. 12]— adoptee has the same rights and privileges in the adoptive family as a natural born child, 1008-1009.
adoptee's ties in his natural family severed, 1009.
adoption validly made cannot be cancelled, 1015.
divesting of estate does not take place, 1011.
divesting of share in co-parcenary property in the natural family (see illustration), 1011.
on adoption by a deceased coparcener's widow, the adoptee does not become a coparcener in his adoptive father's family, nor does he get results of adoption—contd.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.
any share in the adoptive father's coparcenary property (see illustrations), 1011.
restraints in respect of marriage in the natural family after adoption, 1010.
under old law, 1009.
void adoption creates no rights, 995.
retrospective [Ss. 5, 30], 993-994, 1035—Act is not, 994.
reward for giving or taking a child in adoption—See payment.
right to maintenance—See maintenance.
Roman Law—adoption in, 979.
rules of interpretation of a statute, 990.
same child cannot be given in adoption twice over, 983, 1005, 1007.
savings [S. 30], 1036—
of rights in respect of adoptions made before the Act, 1036.
Scheduled Tribes [S. 2], 991—exempted from the operation of the Act, 991.
scheme—
of the chapter on adoption, 982.
of the chapter on maintenance, 985.
of recent legislation, 980-981.
separate residence and maintenance—of a Hindu wife—See residence, maintenance.
Sikh [S. 2], 991—
is a Hindu for the purposes of the Act, 991.
simultaneous adoption, 1005, 1007—of two sons or two daughters prohibited, 1004, 1005-1006.
son—
adoption of, can only be by a person who has no son, son's son, or son's son [S. 11(i)], 1004-1006.
adoption of only, permitted, 1001.
bound to maintain minor legitimate and illegitimate sons, legitimate and illegitimate unmarried daughters, and aged or infirm parents, 986, 1023-1024.
difference of age between adopted, and adoptive mother must be at least 21, 1004, 1006.
entitled to be maintained during minority by father and mother, 1023-1024.
entitled to be maintained during minority as a dependant by the heirs of the estate of his deceased father or mother, 1025, 1027.
existence of an illegitimate son, or a son's son, or son's son's son, or of a son, son's son, or son's son's son, who has ceased to be a Hindu is no bar to the adoption of a, 1005.
existence of a daughter or son's daughter not a bar to the adoption of a, 1006.
heirs of a deceased, bound to maintain his dependants, 1025-1028.
illegitimacy of, not a bar to maintenance, 1023-1024, 1025.
same, cannot be adopted by two or more persons, 983, 1005, 1007.
also see male Hindu; adoption; conditions of valid adoption.
son of a predeceased son [Ss. 21, 22]—
minor, entitled to be maintained as a dependant by the heirs of the estate of the deceased father's father, 1025.
son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son [Ss. 21, 22]— minor, entitled to be maintained as a dependant by the heirs of the estate of the deceased father's father's father, 1025.
statute, 912—
rules of interpretation of a, 990.
step-father—
cannot claim maintenance from the step-son or step-daughter, 1024.
cannot give step-son or step-daughter in adoption, 1001.
where a widow or an unmarried woman marries, her husband becomes the, of the child adopted by her prior to her marriage, 1014.
step-mother—
can claim maintenance from the step-son or step-daughter, 1024.
cannot give step-son or step-daughter in adoption, 1001.
when adoptive father is a bachelor or widower at the time of adoption,

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.
step-mother—contd.
any woman whom he marries after adoption deemed to be the adoptee's, 1013-1014.
wives other than senior-most wife deemed to be the step-mothers of the child adopted by their husband, 1013.
title of the Act [S. 1], 990.
Tribes—See Scheduled Tribes.
unchaste wife [S. 18], 1017, 1021. can claim maintenance under certain circumstances but not entitled to claim separate residence and maintenance, 1017, 1021.
unmarried daughter—See daughter.
unmarried daughter of a predeceased son [S. 21, 22]— entitled to be maintained as a dependant by the heirs of the estate of her deceased father's mother, 1025.
unmarried daughter of a predeceased son of predeceased son [Ss. 21, 22]— entitled to be maintained as a dependant by the heirs of the estate of her deceased father's father's mother, 1025.
unmarried woman [Ss. 8, 14], 998, 1014. entitled to adopt a son or daughter, 998.
where a child adopted by an, any man whom she may subsequently marry becomes her step-father, 1014.
unsound mind—
a male or female of, cannot validly adopt a son or a daughter, 996, 998.
a male or female of, cannot validly give a son or a daughter in adoption, 1000.
father may dispense with the consent of mother for giving or taking a child in adoption if mother is of, 996, 1000.
female Hindu may adopt and or give in adoption a child without the consent of her husband, where husband is of, 998, 1000.
where father and mother both of, guardian may give a child in adoption, 1000.
usage—see custom.
valid adoption—cannot be cancelled, 1015.
consequences of a, see conditions of a valid adoption; consequences of a valid adoption.
validity of adoption—See proof, presumption about validity of adoption; valid adoption.
variation of the amount of maintenance—See court, maintenance.
Vasistha, 979.
Virashaiva, [S. 2], 990—
is a Hindu, 990.
void adoption [S. 5], 995.
consequences of a, 995.
widow—
adopts, her subsequent husband is the step-father of the adopted child, 1014.
adoption by a, 999.
entitled to adopt a son or a daughter under the Act, 999.
entitled to be maintained as a dependant by the heirs of the estate of her deceased husband, 987, 1025.
forfeits right to maintenance on remarriage, 1025.
power to adopt under old law, 981, 999.
widow of a predeceased son—See daughter-in-law.
widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son—entitled to be maintained as a dependant by the heirs of the estate of her deceased husband's deceased father's father, or her deceased husband's deceased father's mother, 1025.
widow of a son—See daughter-in-law.
widowed daughter—See daughter.
widowed daughter-in-law—See daughter-in-law.
widower [S. 14], 1013-1014—adopts a child, his subsequent wife is the step-mother of the adopted child, 1013-1014.
wife—
can adopt, where husband is dead or disqualified, 998-999.
consent of, necessary when husband wants to adopt, 996-997.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956—contd.
wife—contd.
consent of all the wives necessary (if there is more than one wife) for adoption by the husband, 997.
consent of, when can be dispensed with by the husband for adoption, 996-997.
converted wife—See conversion.
duty of, to live with the husband, under Hindu law, 985, 1018.
entitled to be maintained by the husband, 985, 1017. entitled to claim separate residence and maintenance under the Act on certain grounds, 985, 1016-1021.
any other justifiable cause, 985, 1017, 1021.
concubine, keeping of a, by the husband, 985, 1017, 1020.
conversion of the husband, 985, 1017, 1020.
cruelty by the husband, 985, 1017, 1018. desertion by the husband, 985, 1017, 1018.
husband having another wife living, 985, 1017, 1019-20.
leprosy of the husband, 985, 1017, 1019. grounds for separate residence and maintenance similar to those under Hindu Marriage Act, 985-986.
interim maintenance to, when can be awarded, 1017.
position under Hindu Married Women's Right to Separate Residence and Maintenance Act, 1946, 985, 1018.
seniormost, in marriage deemed to be the adoptive mother of the child adopted by the husband, 1013.
unchaste wife—See unchaste wife.

Hindu Law—
a branch of Dharma, 1 [Introduction].
admixture of religion and ethics with legal precepts, 1 [Introduction].
appeal to the genius of, 63 [Introduction].
a living system, 64-65 [Introduction].
changes in, brought about by recent legislation, 69-70 [Introduction].
codification of, 67-68 [Introduction].
converts to Hinduism, application to, 73 [§ 6].
Cutchi Memons, 617 [§ 582].
enactments by which Hindu law is applied to Hindus, 73 [§ 5]. extent of application of, 72 [§ 3]. growth of, arrested, 65-66 [Introduction]. judicial decisions as a source of law, 63-64 [Introduction].
Khojas, 617 [§ 582].
legislation modifying or suspending, 72-73 [§ 4].
Native Christians, 75 [§ 7(2)].
new enactments, express mention in, of application of law to persons, 73 [§ 6].
not static but empiric and progressive, 64-65 [Introduction].
personal law: Rule of presumption, 80 [§ 13A].
persons to whom Hindu law applies, 73 [§ 6].
persons to whom Hindu law does not apply, 75-76 [§ 7]. power of Court to administer, how derived, 72 [§ 2]. principles of justice, equity and good conscience to be followed where law is silent, 62 [Introduction].
Smritis, the basic structure of, 2 [Introduction].
sources of—See Sources of Hindu law.

Hindu Law Women's Rights Act (Mys. 10 of 1933), 103 [§ 35A].

Hindu Marriage Act, 1955— adoption of religious order [S. 13]— ground for divorce, 742, 748.
advantage, taking of [S. 23]— one's own wrong or disability, 778, 785-786.
adultery, 702, 727-731, 741, 744-745 [S. 10, S. 13]— based on non-access, 728.
condonation of, 731, 787-789. confession of, 729.
connivance at, 786-787.
direct proof not necessary, 727-728.
ground for judicial separation, 702, 727.
living in adultery is ground for divorce, 744-745.
long period of gestation of a child born to the wife, as proof of, 728

Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—contd.
adultery—contd.
meaning of, 727.
not a ground for divorce in case of casual act of, 659, 744.
onus and standard of proof in, 727-728.
age of the parties to marriage, 684, 688, [S. 5]. alimony [S. 24, S. 25]—
pendente lite and permanent. See maintenance.
apastamba, 653.
appeal, 816-819 [S. 28].
forum of, 818.
from decree and order under the Act, 816-819.
interference by Appellate Court with findings of fact of trial Court, 819.
letters patent, 818.
on alimony, 814.
on costs, 817.
appellate Court—interference by, with findings of fact of trial court, 819.
application of the Act, 655, 670-671 [S. 2].
approbation, effect of, in nullity proceedings, 737.
asura form of marriage, 653-654.
bestiality [S. 13]—
by husband, ground for divorce, 742, 754.
bigamy [S. 13, S. 17]— before the Act, 742, 753.
ground for divorce, 742, 753.
punishment for, 765.
blood [S. 3]—
definition of full blood, half-blood, uterine blood, 673, 675.
Bombay Hindu Divorce Act 22 of 1947, 753.
Bombay Prevention of Hindu Bigamous Marriage Act, 25 of 1946, 822.
Brahma, form of marriage, 653-654.
Buddhist [S. 2]—
application of Act to, 670, 671-672. ceremonies [S. 7]—
for a Hindu marriage, 656-657, 686, 692, 693. certified copies of entries in register of marriage [S. 8]— evidentiary value of, 694, 695.
changes—
brought about by the Act, 661-662.
charge for maintenance or alimony. See maintenance.
children [S. 1, S. 26]— custody of, 814-816.
illegitimate, whether Hindus, 670-671, 672.
jurisdiction of Court in respect of, 814-816.
legitimacy of, in void and voidable marriage, 761-763.
presumption as to legitimacy of children, 693.
Civil Procedure Code [S. 21]— application of, to proceedings under the Act, 772-773.
codification—
need of, in Hindu Law, 654.
codifying Act,
See "Interpretation".
collusion—
in proceedings under the Act, 778, 793-794.
commencement [S. 1]— of the Act, 655, 670.
conception of Hindu marriage under the Act. See nature of Hindu marriage, see sacrament.
conditions of a valid marriage under the Act, 657, 684 [S. 5].
age of the parties, 684, 688. consent of the parties, 684, 688, 733, 739-740.
guardian's consent, 684, 689, 733, 739. mental capacity, 684, 687, 724-725, 738, 739-740, 742, 745-747. monogamy, 684, 687.
non-fulfilment of conditions—consequences, 733-741.
prohibited relationship, 684, 688.
sapinda relationship, 684, 689.
penalty for contravention, of conditions, 766-767.

Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—contd.
condonation [S. 23]— compared with forgiveness, 778, 788-789.
effect of, in case of adultery, 731.
effect of, in case of adultery and cruelty, 788-793.
effect of, in case of desertion, 715.
effect of, in case of resumption of sexual intercourse, 790.
effect of, in case of other matrimonial offences, 792.
is not a contingent contract, 791.
revival of matrimonial offence, and, 791.
conjugal rights—
See "restitution of conjugal rights."
connivance [S. 23]— effect of, at matrimonial offence, 778, 793-794.
consent [S. 5(vi), S. 6, S. 12(1)(2)]— by force or fraud, 733, 739-740. of the guardian, 684, 688, 689. of the guardian, whether necessary in case of a minor bride, 689.
of the parties to the marriage, 688.
constitution—
whether Act contrary to, 684.
constructive desertion—
See "desertion". consummation of marriage—
English Law as to, 736.
inference of impotency from wilful refusal to, 736.
under Special Marriage Act, 736. wilful refusal to, 736.
contract—
whether Hindu marriage is a—see nature of Hindu marriage.
contravention of certain conditions for a Hindu marriage [S. 17, S. 18].
punishment for, 765-767.
conversion [S. 13]—
ground for divorce, 742, 745.
co-respondent—
damages against 775.
joining of, 774.
corroboration, 730, 780.
costs—
in matrimonial proceedings, appeal on, 776, 802, 817.
court—
alimony or maintenance, 802-814.
appeals, 774, 814.
appeal on maintenance, 814.
appeal on order of maintenance pendente lite, 802.
appeal, forum of, 818.
application of Civil Procedure Code to proceedings under the Act, 772-777.
certified copies of entries in register of marriages, procedure before, 694, 695.
collusion in proceedings before, 793-794.
contents and verification of petition, before, 771-772.
corroboration of evidence of plaintiff, 780-782.
costs, 776, 802.
costs in maintenance, 802.
cross petition, 775.
custody of children, 814-816.
discretion of—
in decreeing relief under the Act, 783-785.
in directing custody of children, 814-816.
in hearing in camera, 777.
in granting damages against co-respondent, 775.
in granting permanent alimony, 804, 807-808.
in granting judicial separation on a petition for divorce, 785.
refuse relief in case of connivance, 786-787.
refuse relief in case of condonation, 787-793.
refuse relief in case of delay, 780, 794-796.
refuse relief in case of collusion, 780, 793-794.

Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—contd.
discretion of—contd.
in giving maintenance, 797-802, 804, 807-808.
in giving leave for divorce petition before expiry of a period of three years, 754-758.
in refusing relief under the Act, 783-785.
in restricting publication, 778.
disposal of joint property by, 816.
duty of Court, 663-664, 779-780, 797.
duty of Court in determining maintenance, 809-812.
duty of Court to bring about reconciliation, 779, 797.
in camera proceedings, before, 777. inherent power to stay of proceedings, 773.
injunction to prohibit marriage of a minor, 691, 692.
intervention by third parties, allowing by, 774.
maintenance or alimony pendente lite, 797-802.
permanent maintenance, 802-814.
quantum of maintenance, 800-801, 809-812.
petitions under the Act to lie to which Court, 767-771.
powers of Court under the Act—see "duties of court" above.
power to issue injunction to prevent marriage of a minor, 691, 692.
procedure of, 767-777.
proceedings in, 777-778.
proof—standard of, 780-782.
reconciliation, duty of court to bring about, 779, 797.
res judicata, 775-776.
restrictions on publication or printing of proceedings under the Act, 778.
cruelty, 701, 715-726 [S. 10]— condonation, in case of, 788-789, 790-792. cruelty and desertion, 714.
danger to health, 722-724.
defences to the charge of, 724-725.
definition of, 701, 715-718.
ground of judicial separation, 701.
insanity and, 724.
intention, 719-720.
justification and excuse for, 724-725.
legal concept of, 715-718.
matrimonial offence, cruelty as, 715-726.
mental cruelty, 718-719.
proof—sufficiency of evidence and corroboration, 725-726.
treated with cruelty, 721-722.
cross petition, 775.
custody of children—see "children", "court".
custom [S. 3(a)]— compared with English rule, 674.
definition, 673, 674.
essentials of a valid, 674-675.
forfeiting the right of an outcasted husband to the society of wife, 698.
marriage according to, 693.
damages. See co-respondent.
degrees of prohibited relationship—
See "prohibited relationship". delay [S. 23]—
ground for refusing relief by court, 778, 794-796, see "court".
desertion, 701, 703-715 [S. 10]—
compared with as in Special Marriage Act and English Law, 704.
condonation, doctrine of and, 715.
consensual separation, whether, 706.
constructive desertion, 708-710.
cruelty and, 714.
defences to the charge of desertion, 710-711.
definition, 703-706.
desertion and cruelty, 714.
ground for judicial separation, 701.
ingredients, 703-706.
offer of reconciliation and, 708-710.
onus and standards of proof, 714-715.

Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—contd.
desertion—contd.
period of, 707-708.
separation, whether necessary to constitute, 706.
termination of, 712.
what is, 703-706.
wilful neglect constituting, 708.
depravity [S. 14]—
excessive, ground for waiving three years bar for presenting divorce petition, 754, 756-757.
devala, 654.
discretion of Court—see "court".
disposal of joint property by Court—see "court", see "joint property".
District Court [S. 3(b)]— definition, 673, 675, 770-771, see "Court". divorce [S. 13], 741-754.
custom, divorce by, 743, 819.
discretion of court in allowing petition for divorce, before expiry of three years from the date of marriage, on the ground of excessive depravity or hardship, 754, 756-757.
distinction between judicial separation and divorce, 660.
distinction between nullity of marriage and divorce, 659.
grounds for divorce—adoption of Religious Order, 742, 748.
adultery, 741, 744-745.
bestiality, husband guilty of, 742, 754.
by a husband, 659, 741-742.
by a wife, 659, 660, 741-742.
co-habitation not resumed for two years or more after decree for judicial separation, 749.
conversion from Hinduism, 745.
husband having more than one wife alive, 753-754.
insanity, 745-747.
judicial separation, failure to comply with a decree of, 749.
leprosy, 747.
no resumption of co-habitation for two years or more after decree for judicial separation, 749.
rape, husband guilty of, 754.
restitution of conjugal rights, failure to comply with a decree of, 751.
seven years, spouse not heard of as alive for, 748-749.
sodomy, husband guilty of, 754.
venereal disease, 747.
history of, 654-655, 743.
judicial separation may be given, in a petition for, 785.
petition for, not before expiry of three years from the date of the marriage, 754-758.
remarry, when divorced persons may, 758-760.
starting point of operation of divorce decree, 758.
domicile—
law of, governs personal relations, 670.
duty of Court—See "Court".
exceptional depravity or hardship—See "depravity", "divorce", "hardship".
effect—
codifying Act, 655-666.
overriding, of the Act, 655, 682-683.
previous law, on, 653-654.
registration of marriage under the Act, 694.
retrospective, 683.
English decisions—comparison with, 662-663.
evidence—onus and standard of proof, 780.
in case of adultery, 730-731.
in case of cruelty, 719.

Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—contd.
evidence—contd.
in case of desertion, 714-715.
in case of insanity, 725-726.
statements in petition to be referred to as evidence, 771.
extent of the Act [S. 1], 670.
factum valet [S. 7], 694.
force [S. 12]— consent to marriage by force, 733, 739.
forgiveness—
effect of, in matrimonial offences, 791-792.
fraud [S. 12]— consent to marriage by fraud, 733, 739. full-blood [S. 3(c)]—
definition, 673, 675.
guardian [S. 6]—
consent in marriage of, 690, 691. consent of, by force or fraud, 733, 739.
effect of marriage without the consent of, 691.
who can be, in marriage, 690-691.
half-blood [S. 3(c)]
definition, 673, 675.
hardship [S. 14]—
exceptional, ground for waiving three years bar for presenting divorce petition, 755-758.
Hindus [S. 2]—
who are, 653, 671-672.
Hindu Marriage Disabilities Removal Act, 1946—repeal of, 822.
Hindu Marriages Validity Act, 1949, 822.
history—
comparison of the Act with Special Marriage Act, 1954 and English Law, 661, 662-663. of codification, 654.
of divorce, 654-655.
of marriage among Hindus, 653-654.
idiot [S. 5, S. 12], 684, 687-688, 733. ground for nullity of marriage, 733.
impotency [S. 12], 733, 734-738. cannot be raised by third parties, 735.
ground for nullity of marriage, 733.
inferred from wilful refusal to consummate marriage, 736.
impotency quoad hunc, 736.
marriage voidable on the ground of, 733.
medical examination, 735.
test, 735.
in camera proceedings under the Act, 777.
restriction against printing or publishing of, without the permission of the Court, 778. See "Court".
injunction [S. 6]— power of Court to issue, to restrain marriage of a minor, 692.
insanity [S. 5, S. 10, S. 12, S. 13], 684, 687-688, 701, 727, 733, 738, 742, 745-747—ground for divorce, 742, 745-747.
ground for judicial separation, 701, 727.
ground for nullity of marriage, 733, 738-739.
whether defence to a charge of cruelty, 724.
insincerity in proceedings for nullity, 737.
interpretation—
codifying Act, 665-666.
deeming provision, 763.
headings, 669.
how language to be constructed in case of sections referring to matrimonial offences, 702-703.
intention of legislature, 667.
literal construction, 667-668.
marginal notes, 669.
preamble, 665.
proceedings of legislature, whether can be referred to, 668.

Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—contd.
interpretation—contd.
recent enactments, 669.
reference to previous law, 669.
retrospective, 683.
rules of, 666-669.
intervention by third parties in proceedings before the Court, 774.
introduction, 653-664.
Jains [S. 2]—
are Hindus, 670-672.
joint property—
disposal of by Court, in proceedings under the Act, 816.
judicial separation [S. 10], 701-731—distinction between judicial separation and divorce, 660.
grounds for, 659, 701-702.
adultery, 727-731.
cruelty, 715-724. desertion, 703-715.
insanity, 724-726.
leprosy, 726.
venereal disease, 726.
how language of grounds for judicial separation to be construed, 702-703.
may be granted on a petition for divorce, 785. when it can be a ground for divorce, 742, 749-751.
what is, 702.
jurisdiction of Court [S. 19]— to entertain matters under the Act, 767-771.
katayana, 654.
legitimacy [S. 7, S. 16]—
presumption as to, of offspring of a Hindu marriage, 693.
presumption as to, of children of void and voidable marriage, 760-765.
leprosy [S. 10], 701, 726, 742, 747—
ground for divorce, 742, 747.
ground for judicial separation, 701, 726.
lunatic [S. 5, S. 12(1)(b)]—
ground for judicial separation, 701, 727.
for divorce, 742, 745-747. marriage of a, 687, 745.
Madras Hindu (Bigamy Prevention and Divorce) Act, 6 of 1949, 822. maintenance [S. 24, S. 25], 797-814—appeal from order awarding or refusing, 814.
pendente lite, 797.
can be in favour of unsuccessful spouse, 807.
charge for maintenance, 813. conduct of parties, 812.
costs of proceedings in, discretion of Court, 802.
discretion of Court in awarding, 800-801, 804, 807-808.
enforcement of order of, 802.
either husband or wife can get it, 797, 803.
pendente lite, 797-802.
permanent, 802-814. quantum of, 800-801, 809-812.
second appeal in case of, 814.
variation of order for maintenance, 813.
Manu, 653.
Marriage—See "conditions of a valid", "history of", "nature of a Hindu", "presumption about".
matrimonial offence—
collusion, 793-794.
condonation, 787-791. delay, 794-796.
knowledge of, 789.
reconciliation, 797.
revival of, 791-792.
medhatithi, 653.
mental capacity [S. 5], 684, 687. See "insanity", "lunatic".
minor [S. 5, S. 6, S. 12(1)(c)]—See age of parties, consent, conditions of marriage, guardian.

Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—contd.
minor bride—
consent of guardian whether necessary for, 689.
guardianship in marriage for, 689.
marriage without consent of a guardian, 691.
suit for injunction to prevent marriage of a, 692.
monogamy [S. 5], 654, 656, 684, 685-686.
does not contravene art. 25, 687.
Narada, 654.
Native Converts' Marriage Dissolution Act, 1866, 745.
nature of Hindu marriage under the Act, 656-657—conception of a Hindu marriage under the Act, 657, 685-686.
whether a sacrament or a contract, 653, 685-686.
neglect—See wilful neglect.
non-registration of marriage, consequences of—See registration.
nullity of marriage [S. 11, S. 12], 731, 731-741.
delay in instituting proceedings, 737.
distinction between nullity of marriage and divorce, 659.
effect of, on legitimacy of children, 760-765.
insincerity, on, 737.
approbation on, 737.
grounds of, 731
consent to marriage obtained by force or fraud, 739-740.
idiocy, 738.
impotency, 734-736.
lunacy, 738.
marriage void ipso jure, 731.
pregnancy of respondent by a person other than the husband, at the time of marriage, 740-741.
wilful refusal of the respondent to consummate marriage, 736.
offence—See matrimonial offence.
penalty [S. 8]—
for failure to register marriage, 694, 695, also see punishment.
pendente lite alimony or maintenance—See maintenance.
pending proceedings [S. 29]— in case of restitution of conjugal rights, 701.
savings of, 819-822.
permanent maintenance—See maintenance.
persons—governed by the Act, 655, 671-673. who are Hindus, 655, 671.
who can be guardians, 690-692.
petition—See Court, cross-petition.
polygamy, 654.
punishment for, 765.
powers of Court [S. 23]—
in proceedings under the Act—See Court.
preamble, 665—See introduction.
pregnancy—
effect of, at the time of marriage, 733, 740-741.
ground for nullity of marriage, 733, 740-741.
presumptions—
as to validity of marriage, 693.
as to legitimacy of children, 693.
printing or publishing of proceedings under the Act [S. 22]— restrictions against, 778.
proceedings under the Act—See Court, pending proceeding, procedure. prohibited relationship [S. 3(g)]—
definition of, 674.
degrees of, 674, 681, 688-689, 731.
proof—onus and standard of—
See court, evidence, procedure. property—
joint, disposal of, 816. punishment [S. 6, S. 17, S. 18]—
for bigamy, 765.
for contravention of the provision of the Act, 766-767.
for failure to register marriage, 695.

Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—contd.
rape [S. 13]—
by husband, ground for divorce, 742, 754.
reconciliation [S. 23], 779, 797—duty of court to, 779.
offer of, 712-713.
refusal to consummate marriage—See consummation of marriage.
registration [S. 8]— consequences of non-registration, 695.
of marriage, 694-695.
reliefs in matrimonial causes, 658.
religions order, 742, 748—See adoption of religious order.
remarriage—
before disposal of appeal against decree of nullity, 733, 759, 760.
effect of remarriage before expiry of one year, 759.
when divorced person may remarry, 758-759.
res judicata, 775-776.
repeal,
of other Acts, 822—See effect, savings. reside,
meaning of, 768-770.
restitution of conjugal rights—
basis, 696.
decree for, how executed, 700.
defences to the petition of, 698-699.
(a) reasonable or just cause, 698-699.
(b) separation by mutual consent, 699-700.
delay in instituting proceedings for, 699. effect of non-compliance with a decree of, 742, 751.
history of, 696.
importance of the decree of, 696.
pending proceedings for, the date of the Act, 701.
petition for, to the district court, 697.
when decreed, 697-698.
restrictions against printing or publishing proceedings under the Act [S. 22], 778.
retrospective—
whether the Act is, 683.
Rig-Veda, 653. sacrament—
whether Hindu marriage is a, 652-653, 685-686, 693. See contract, nature of Hindu marriage.
sagotra marriage, 684, 819.
sapinda marriage—prohibition against, 684, 689.
sapinda relationship [S. 3(f), S. 5]—
definition, 673, 676-681. effect of, on validity of marriage, 689.
sapta-padi [S. 7], 692—
whether an essential requirement for marriage, 692.
Saurashtra Hindu Divorce Act, 3 of 1952, 822.
Saurashtra Prevention of Hindu Bigamous Marriage Act 5 of 1950, 822. savings [S. 29], 819—See repeal, effect.
Scheduled Tribes [S. 2]—
exempted from the operation of the Act, 671, 672.
scheme of the Act—
different from the Special Marriage Act, 661. seven years—
ground for divorce, 742.
respondent not heard of for, 748-749.
sexual intercourse—effect of resumption of, 790-791.
Sikhs [S. 2]—
are Hindus, 670.
Special Marriage Act 43 of 1954, 656. comparison with Hindu Marriage Act, 661. decisions under, 662.
refusal to consummate, marriage under, 736.
scheme of, 661.

Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—*contd.
sodomy [S. 13]—
by husband, ground of divorce, 742, 754.
solemnization of a Hindu marriage—See ceremonies.
summary—of the provisions of the Act, 655-664.
taking advantage of one's own wrong or disability [S. 23], 785-786.
title of the Act, 670.
third parties—intervention by, in proceedings under the Act, before the Court, 774.
usage—See custom.
uterine blood [S. 3(d)]—
definition, 673, 675.
ultra vires—
whether Act is, 687.
valid marriage—
conditions to, under the Act. See conditions of a valid marriage.
venereal disease [S. 10, S. 13], 701, 742—
ground for divorce, 742, 747.
ground for judicial separation, 701, 726-727.
verification of petitions [S. 20], 771-772. See petitions.
void marriage [S. 11], 659, 731-733.
distinction between void and voidable marriage, 659.
grounds of, 731-733. See nullity of marriage.
legitimacy of children of, 760-765.
voidable marriage [S. 12], 658, 733-741.
distinction between void and voidable marriage, 659.
grounds of, 734-741.
legitimacy of children of, 760-765. See nullity of marriage.
wilful neglect [S. 10], 702, 708.
ground of judicial separation, 702.

Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act 32 of 1956— ascetic [S. 6]—See Yati or Sanyasi.
Act—
embodies the principle that welfare of the minor is the paramount consideration of the Court, 957, 976.
over-riding effect of the [S. 5], 956, 961-962.
supplements Guardians and Wards Act, 1890 [S. 2], 956, 959. to whom it applies [S. 3], 959-960.
adopted daughter [S. 7]—
guardianship of, 965.
adopted son [S. 7]—
guardianship of, 965.
application of the Act [S. 3], 959-960.
changes—
brought about by the Act, 956-957.
chartered High Court—See High Court. power to appoint guardians, under Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, in exercise of its ordinary original jurisdiction, 953.
power to appoint guardians in its inherent jurisdiction, 953.
power to appoint guardian of a minor's interest in coparcenary property not affected by the Act, 975.
child—
custody of a minor, with the mother if it is below five years, 962, 963-964.
illegitimate, whether Hindu, 960.
illegitimate minor, mother and after her the father is the natural guardian, 962, 964.
legitimate minor, father and after him the mother is the natural guardian, 962, 963-964.
married minor girl, husband is the guardian, 962, 964.
minor cannot be a guardian of the property of a minor, 973-974.
natural guardian of a minor, 962-965.
commencement of the Act [S. 1], 958.
conversion.
disqualification of woman acting as a guardian, 962, 965.

Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act 32 of 1956—contd.
coparcenary property [Ss. 6, 12], 962-963, 975.
guardian cannot be appointed of the interest of a minor in, under the Act, 975.
power of High Court to appoint in its inherent jurisdiction the guardian of, not affected by the Act, 975.
court—
forum for application for sanction of, 968.
power of Court to sanction any mortgage, charge or transfer of any immovable property of a minor, or lease thereof for a longer period, 965, 967-968.
to which an application should be made for sanction, 965, 969.
custody of minor below five years [S. 6], 962, 963-964.
de facto guardian—not to deal with a minor's property, 974.
powers of, abrogated by the Act, 957.
disqualifications [S. 6]—
for acting as natural guardian of a minor, 962, 965.
effect [S. 5]—
over-riding effect of the Act, 956, 961-962.
extent of the Act [S. 1], 958.
father—
ceases to be a natural guardian of his minor daughter on her marriage, 964.
does not include step-father, 963, 965.
natural guardian of a minor, 962-964.
not entitled to the custody of minor children below five, 962-964.
not entitled to be the guardian of illegitimate minor child while the mother is alive, 962, 963-964.
not entitled to be a guardian of undivided coparcenary interest of a minor, 962, 963.
power to appoint by will a testamentary guardian of the minor children, 970-973.
when disqualified from acting as a guardian of his minor children, 962, 965.
guardian—classes of, under old Hindu Law, 953.
definition of, 960-961.
in appointment of, by Court, welfare of the minor to be the paramount consideration, 976.
minor incompetent to act as a guardian of the property of any other minor, 973-974.
natural guardian, and their rights and power, under old Hindu Law, 954.
not to be appointed for minor's undivided interest in coparcenary property, 975.
personal covenants of guardian cannot bind minor, 965, 967.
powers of, 965-973.
restrictions imposed on the powers of, 956.
testamentary guardians under Hindu Law, 954-955.
Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, 953, 955.
does not affect powers of natural and testamentary guardians under Hindu Law, 955.
High Court and District Court can appoint guardians under, 953.
S. 8 of Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, saves right of appointment of guardians under Hindu Law, 953.
test to be applied by courts in appointing guardians under, 955-956.
guardianship to adopted daughter [S. 7], 965.
guardianship to adopted son [S. 7], 965.
hermit—
See vanprastha.
High Court—
power to appoint guardians under Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, 953. power to appoint guardian of undivided coparcenary interest of a minor unaffected by the Act, 975.
Hindus [S. 3]—
who are, 959-960.

Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act 32 of 1956—contd.
husband—
guardian of minor wife, 962, 964.
Indian Majority Act, 1875, 953.
illegitimate child—See child.
interpretation—
rule of, 958.
limitation of powers of a natural [S. 8], 965, 967-968.
Manu, 953.
minor—
can set aside unauthorised alienations by a guardian, 966, 968.
cannot be bound by personal covenants entered into by a guardian, 965, 967.
cannot be the guardian of the property of another minor, 973.
custody of a, below five years, 962, 963.
de facto guardian not entitled to deal with the property of a, 974.
definition of, 960-961.
natural guardians of a, under the Act, 962.
step-father cannot be a guardian of a minor child, 963, 965.
step-mother cannot be a guardian of a minor child, 963, 965.
undivided interest of a minor in joint Hindu family, guardian not to be appointed of, 975.
welfare of a, to be the paramount consideration in appointment of a guardian by Court, 957, 976.
minority—
under Hindu Law, 953.
under Indian Majority Act, 1875, 953.
mother—
ceases to be natural guardian of her minor daughter on her marriage, 962, 964.
does not include step-mother, 963, 965.
natural guardian of legitimate minor's person and property after the father, 962, 963.
natural guardian of illegitimate children in preference even to father, 962, 964.
right to the custody of minor children below five, in preference to the father, 962, 963.
right to act as guardian of minor children in the life time of the father where the father is disqualified to act as such, 962, 963.
power to appoint a testamentary guardian of her minor children, where father has predeceased the mother, 970, 971-972.
when disqualified to act as a guardian, 962, 965.
Narada, 953.
natural guardians—
alienations of immovable property by, without the sanction of the Court, voidable, 966-969.
definition of, 962-965.
disqualification for acting as a, 962, 965.
limitation on powers of a natural guardian to deal with minor's immovable property, 967-968.
limitation on power of a natural guardian to bind a minor by a personal covenant, 967.
of a Hindu minor, 962.
powers of, 965-967.
powers of, not affected by Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, 955.
restrictions imposed on powers of, 956-957.
rights of a natural guardian under Hindu Law, 954.
step-father not a natural guardian of a minor step-child, 963, 965.
step-mother not a natural guardian of a minor step-child, 963, 965.
under Hindu Law, 953.
over-riding effect of the Act [S. 5], 956, 961-962.
personal covenants—
guardian has no power to bind minor by, 967.
persons governed by the Act [S. 3], 959-960.
powers—
of de facto guardian abolished by the Act, 957, 974.
of a guardian under the Act to deal with minor's property, 965.
of a guardian under old Hindu Law to deal with minor's property, 954.

Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act 32 of 1956—contd.
powers—contd.
of a High Court to appoint guardian of coparcenary interest of a minor, 975.
of a guardian to bind a minor by a personal covenant, 967.
preamble, 958.
principal changes brought about by the Act, 956.
restrictions imposed by the Act on the powers of natural guardians to deal with minor's property [S. 8], 956-957, 967-968.
sanyasi [S. 6]— cannot be the guardian of a minor, 962, 965.
Schedule Tribes [S. 3]—
exempted from the operation of the Act, 960.
step-father [S. 6]—
not a natural guardian of a minor step-son, 963, 965.
step-mother [S. 6]—
not a natural guardian of a minor step-son, 963, 965.
supplemental enactment [S. 2], 959.
testamentary guardian—
powers of, 955, 970-973.
power of a father to appoint, 970-971.
power of a mother to appoint, 970, 972.
power of a widow to appoint, 970, 972.
powers of, under old Hindu Law, 954-955.
powers of, not affected by Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, 955.
restrictions imposed on powers of, 956.
title of the Act [S. 1], 958.
Vanprastha—
disqualified to be a guardian, 962, 965. welfare of minor—to be paramount consideration with Court in appointing a guardian, 957, 976.
widow—
power to appoint testamentary guardian, 970, 972.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—
Act applies to agricultural lands, 843.
Act not to apply to certain properties [S. 5,] 845-846.
acts repealed by the Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956 [S. 31], 951.
adopted daughter—
as the heir of a male intestate, in class I of the Schedule, 870.
as the heir of a female intestate, 915.
adopted son—
as the heir of a male intestate, in Class I of the Schedule, 866.
as the heir of a female intestate, 914-915.
adoption—
relative by, 864-865.
adoptive mother—
as the heir of a male intestate in class I of the Schedule, 871.
agnates [S. 3(1)(a)]— computation of degrees of relationship between the intestate and his, 889-890.
definition of, 837.
order of succession among, 860, 879-880, 887-890.
rules of preference determinative of order of succession among, 890-895.
agricultural lands—
Act applies to agricultural lands, 845.
aliyasantana Law [S. 3(1)(b)]—
definition of, 837.
devolution of interest in the property of a person governed by, 856-860.
order of succession in case of a male intestate, 928, 929-931.
order of succession in case of a female intestate, 928, 931-934.
repeal of, 856.
special provisions relating to succession to the property of a Hindu governed by, 928-934.
succession in case of a female intestate governed by, 928, 931-934.
succession in case of a male intestate governed by, 928, 929-931.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—contd.
application of the Act—
applies to agricultural lands, 845.
not to apply in certain cases, 845-846.
uniform and wide, 827, 836-837.
Arya Samajist [S. 2]—
is a Hindu, 836.
as full owner—See full owner.
Brahmo Samajist [S. 2]—
is a Hindu, 836.
brother—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the schedule, 874, 951.
illegitimate brother of a female intestate can succeed as the heir of her mother, 921.
uterine brother of a female intestate can succeed as the heir of her mother, 921.
uterine brother not included in the word "brother" mentioned in class II of the schedule, 874, 951.
brother's daughter—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the schedule, 876-877.
brother's son—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the schedule, 876-877.
brother's widow—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the schedule, 877.
effect of remarriage of, 877, 944-945.
Buddhist [S. 2]—
is a Hindu, 836.
capita succession [S. 19], 936-937.
succession is per capita generally under the Act, 936-937.
changes effected by the Act, 827-833.
abolition of impartible estate, 832.
coparcenary, 830-831.
distribution among heirs per capita, 831.
preference of full blood over half blood, 831.
stridhana, 829.
succession to the property of a male and female intestate, 828-830.
uniform and wide application of the Act, 827, 836-837.
wills, 831.
child—
illegitimate, whether Hindu, 836.
right of the child in the womb to inherit, 937-938.
codification—
necessity of, 826.
codifying Act, 834-835, 841.
cognates [S. 3(1)(c)]— computation of degrees of relationship between the intestate and his, 889-890.
definition of, 837.
order of succession among, 880-882, 888-889.
rules of preference determinative of order of succession among, 887, 890-895.
commencement of the Act [S. 1(2)], 835.
computation of degrees of relationship between the intestate and his heirs [S. 13], 889-890.
conversion—
effect of, on right to inherit [S. 26], 947.
convert—See conversion.
convert's descendants [S. 26]— disqualified from inheriting unless Hindus, 947.
coparcenary—Mitakshara—See coparcenary property.
changes in the law of, by the Act, 830-831.
how far modified by the Act, 846-856.
now becoming obsolete, 830, 848.
what is, 847-848.
coparcenary property, Mitakshara [S. 6]— computation of the interest of a deceased coparcener under the Act, 853.
debts of a deceased coparcener, 854.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—contd.
coparcenary property, Mitakshara—contd.
devolution of a deceased coparcener's interest in coparcenary property under the Act, 846-856.
parties to suit, 855.
power of a coparcener to will away his interest in coparcenary property under the Act, 831, 949-950.
separated member and, under the Act, 855-856.
subsequent partition between surviving members, 854.
court—
definition of, for purposes of S. 22, 939.
in which right of pre-emption under the Act can be exercised, 939.
custom [S. 3(1)(d)]—
definition of, 837.
daughter—
adopted, 870, 915.
as the heir of a female intestate, 915.
as the heir of a male intestate in class I of the Schedule, 870.
born of a void or voidable marriage, 871.
illegitimate daughter of a male intestate not entitled to inherit, 870.
can claim maintenance, 870.
illegitimate daughter of a female intestate can inherit, 915.
includes adopted daughter, 870, 915.
mental or physical defects do not disqualify a daughter from inheritance, 871, 915.
of a predeceased daughter as the heir of an intestate, 872, 916.
of a predeceased son as the heir of an intestate, 872, 916.
of a predeceased son of a predeceased son, 873.
physical or mental defects do not disqualify a daughter from inheritance, 871, 948.
posthumous daughter, 870, 937.
daughter's daughter's daughter as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 876.
daughter's daughter's son as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 876.
daughter's son's daughter as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 876.
daughter's son's son as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 876.
dayabhaga, 825-826.
dayavibhaga, 825.
death [S. 21]—
presumption in case of simultaneous, 938.
debts of a deceased coparcener, 854.
defect, not to disqualify from succession [S. 28], 948.
deformity, not to disqualify from succession [S. 28], 948.
degrees of relationship [S. 13]— computation of, between the intestate and heirs, 889-890.
devolution—
of interest in coparcenary property, 846-856.
of interest in the property of a tarwad, tavazhi, kutumba, kavaru or illom, 856-859.
of sthanam property, 857, 859-860.
disease, not to disqualify from succession [S. 28], 948.
disqualifications from succession [Ss. 24-28], 944-948.
disqualified heirs [Ss. 24-28], 832, 944-948. distribution of property among heirs—see heirs.
divided son, 867.
dwelling houses [S. 23]— special provisions respecting, 941-944.
effect—
of disqualification of heirs on succession, 947.
of the Act on coparcenary law, 830-831, 846-850.
over-riding, of the Act, 827, 841-843.
escheat [S. 29]—
on failure of heirs, 948.
failure of heirs and escheat [S. 29], 948.
father [Ss. 8, 15]—
adoptive father, 873.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—contd.
father—contd.
as the heir of a female Hindu, 919.
as the heir of a male intestate in Class II of Schedule, 873.
heirs of, when entitled to succeed to property of a female intestate, 920.
natural father not entitled to succeed to property of a son given in adoption, 873.
not entitled to interest by succession in the property of an illegitimate son, 873.
of a son born of a void or voidable marriage succeeds as heir of such a son, 873.
special order of succession in case of childless female intestate in respect of property inherited by her from her father or mother, 910, 922-924.
step father not entitled to succeed to property of step-son, 874.
father's brother—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 878.
father's father—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 877.
father's mother—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 877.
father's sister—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 878.
father's widow—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 877.
father-in-law—
special order of succession in case of childless female intestate in respect of property inherited from her father-in-law, 910, 924-926.
female Hindu—
childless, special order of succession, 910, 922-926. general rules of succession in the case of, 910-913.
manner of distribution of property among heirs of a, 926-928.
order of succession among heirs of a, 926-928.
property inherited from father or mother, 922-924.
property inherited from husband or father-in-law, 924-926.
property possessed by, absolute property, 896-910.
restriction on partition of, or residing in, inherited dwelling house, 941-944.
special order of succession in case of childless female intestate in respect of property inherited from her father, mother, husband or father-in-law, 922-926.
succession in case of a female intestate governed by Marumakkattayam or Aliyasantana Law, 928, 931-933.
female intestate, succession in case of—see female Hindu.
fragmentation of agricultural lands [S. 4]— law relating to prevention of, not affected by the Act, 841, 843.
full-blood [Ss. 3(1)(e), 18], 840, 934—
definition, 838.
preference of, to half blood, 934-936.
full owner [S. 14]—
female Hindu becomes full owner of all property possessed by her, on the coming into force of the Act, 896.
restricted estate of the female Hindu abolished by the Act, 898, 905-906, 909.
half-blood [Ss. 3(1)(e), 18]—
definition of, 838.
not preferred to full blood, 934-936.
heirs—
definition of, 838.
disqualified, 832, 944-948. effect of failure of, 947.
full-blood preferred to half-blood, 934-936.
normally confined to legitimate blood, 840.
preferential rights of certain heirs to acquire property in certain cases, 939-941.
heirs of a female intestate [Ss. 15, 16, 17], 910-934.
adopted daughter, 915.
adopted son, 914.
adoptive father, 920.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—contd.
heirs of a female intestate—contd.
adoptive mother, 919.
daugher, 915.
daughter of a predeceased daughter, 916.
daughter of a predeceased son, 916.
father, 919. 920.
general order of succession in the case of a female intestate, 914-921, 931-934.
heirs of the father, 920.
heirs of the husband, 917.
heirs of the mother, 920-921.
husband, 916.
illegitimate brother, 921.
illegitimate sister, 921.
illegitimate son, 914.
mother, 919.
son, 914-915.
son born of a void or voidable marriage, 914.
son of a predeceased son, 915.
uterine brother, 921.
uterine sister, 921.
special order of succession in case of childless female intestate in respect of property inherited by her from her father, mother, husband or mother-in-law, 922-926.
special provisions respecting females governed by Marumakkattayam and Aliyasantana Law, 928, 931-934.
heirs of a male intestate—categories of, recognised under the Act, 828-829, 951.
distribution of property among heirs in class I of the Schedule, 883-886.
distribution of property among heirs in class II of the Schedule, 886-887.
distribution of property among agnates, 887-895.
distribution of property among cognates, 887-895.
in class I of the Schedule, 866-873.
adopted daughter, 870.
adoptive mother, 871.
adopted son, 866.
daughter, 870.
daughter born of a void or voidable marriage, 871.
daughter having physical or mental defects, 871.
daughter of a predeceased daughter, 872.
daughter of a predeceased son, 872.
daughter of a predeceased son of a predeceased son, 873.
divided son, 867.
illegitimate son, 867.
mother, 871-872.
posthumous daughter, 870.
posthumous son, 866.
son, 866-868.
son born after partition, 867.
son born of a void or voidable marriage, 867-868.
son having physical or mental defects, 868.
son of a predeceased daughter, 872.
son of a predeceased son, 868.
son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son, 868.
widow, 869.
widow of a predeceased son, 869-870.
widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son, 870.
in class II of the Schedule, 873-879.
adoptive father, 873.
agnates, 879-880.
brother, 874-875.
brother's daughter, 876.
brother's son, 876.
brother's widow, 877.
cognates, 880-882. daughter's daughter's daughter, 876.
daughter's daughter's son, 876.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—contd.
heirs of a male intestate—contd.
daughter's son's daughter, 876.
daughter's son's son, 876.
father, 873-874.
father's brother, 878.
father's father, 877.
father's mother, 877.
father's sister, 878.
father's widow, 877.
mother's brother, 878.
mother's father, 878.
mother's mother, 878.
mother's sister, 878.
sister, 875-876.
sister's daughter, 876.
sister's son, 876.
son's daughter's daughter, 874.
son's daughter's son, 874.
order of succession among agnates, 887-895.
order of succession among cognates, 887-895.
order of succession among heirs of schedule, 866-879.
special provisions respecting males governed by Marumakkattayam and Aliyasantana Law, 928-934.
Hindus [S. 2]—
who are, 836-837.
Hindu female, see female Hindu.
Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, 832.
Hindu male, see male Hindu.
Hindu Widows' Remarriage Act, 1856, 869.
History—
of coparcenary, 846-847.
of codification, 826.
of joint family, 825.
of law of inheritance, 825-826.
of necessity for reform and codification, 826, 834, 846-847.
of ownership of property of a female, 829, 896.
of stridhana, 826.
husband—
as the heir of a female Hindu, 916.
heirs of, when to succeed to property of a female Hindu, 917-918.
special order of succession in case of childless female intestate in respect of property inherited from, 922, 924-925.
illegitimate—
brother of intestate female can succeed to her as heir of his mother, 921.
child related to the mother, 840.
child, whether Hindu, 836.
daughter of a male intestate cannot succeed as his heir, 870.
sisted of a female intestate can succeed to her as heir of her mother, 921.
son of a male intestate cannot succeed to him as his heir, 867.
illom—
devolution of interest in property of, 856-859.
testamentary disposition of interest in property of, 949-950.
inheritance—
defect, deformity or diseases not grounds of disqualification, 948.
effect of disqualification of heirs on, 947-948.
grounds of disqualification from, 944-947.
conversion, 947.
murder, 945-946.
remarriage of certain widows, 944-945.
history of the law of, 825-826, 847-848.
never in abeyance, 844.
old law of, based on theory of pinda, 825.
impartible estate—
abolition of, 832.
of rules not subject to the Act, 845-846.
interpretation, rules of, 835—
codifying Act, 834-835.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—contd.
interpretation, rules of—contd.
preamble, 834.
retrospective, 843.
rules of construction, 835.
statutory fiction how far carried, 851.
intestate [S. 3(1)(g)]—
definition of, 838.
introduction, 825-833.
Jain [S. 2]—
is a Hindu, 836.
jimuta vahana, 826.
joint Hindu family, see coparcenary—coparcenary property.
history of, 825.
how far modified by the Act, 847-848.
kavaru—
devolution of interest in property of, 856-859.
testamentary disposition of interest in property of, 949-950.
kutumba—
devolution of interest in property of, 856-859.
testamentary disposition of interest in property of, 949-950.
Lingayat [S. 2]—
is a Hindu, 836.
limited heir [S. 14].
surrender of estate by, 904-905.
male Hindu—see Heirs of a male intestate succession.
Marumakkattayam Law [S. 3(1)(h)]—
definition of, 838, 839.
devolution of interest in the property of a person governed by, 856-857
repeal of, 856-857.
special provisions relating to succession to the property of a Hindu governed by, 928-934.
succession in case of a female intestate governed by, 928, 931-934.
succession in case of a male intestate governed by, 928-931.
mitakshara—see Joint Hindu family, coparcenary, coparcenary property, history.
devolution of interest in mitakshara coparcenary property on the death of a coparcener intestate, 846-856.
devolution of interest in mitakshara coparcenary property, by birth, 830-831, 846-849.
coparcenary property whether can be disposed of by will, 949-950.
mother [Ss. 8, 15]—
adoptive mother, 871, 919.
as the heir of a female intestate, 919.
as the heir of a male intestate in class I of the Schedule, 871-872.
heirs of, when entitled to succeed to property of a female intestate, 920-921.
illegitimate children can succeed to, 840, 914.
illegitimate daughter's property, right to succession, 840, 919.
illegitimate son's property right to succession, 871.
includes adoptive mother, 871.
natural mother not entitled to succeed to property of a son given in adoption, 871.
remarriage not a bar to succeed to her children, 871, 919.
step-mother, 872.
succeeds as an heir to a son born of a void or voidable marriage, 871.
unchastity of, no bar to succeed as an heir, 871, 919.
mother's brother as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 878.
mother's father as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 878.
mother's mother as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 878.
mother's sister as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 878.
murder—see murderer.
murderer [S. 25].
disqualified from inheriting property of the person murdered, 945-947.
Nambudri Law [S. 3(1)(i)]—
definition of, 838, 839.
devolution of interest in the property of a person governed by, 856-860.
repeal of, 856.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—contd.
Nambudri Law—contd.
special provisions relating to succession to the property of a Hindu governed by, 928-934.
succession in case of a female intestate governed by, 928, 931-934.
succession in case of a male intestate governed by, 928-931.
nature of Hindu Succession Act—criticism of the Act, 832-833.
four categories of heirs, 828-829.
over-riding effect of the Act, 827.
property of a female Hindu to be her absolute property, 829.
scheme of the Act, 827.
succession to the property of a male intestate, 828.
succession to the property of a female intestate, 829.
uniform and wide application of the Act, 827.
notional partition, concept of [S. 6], 846, 850.
order of succession among heirs of an intestate Hindu, see heirs of a male intestate, heirs of a female intestate, female Hindu, male Hindu, Succession.
over-riding effect of the Act, [S. 4] 827, 841-843.
Palace Fund administered by the Palace Administration Board under Cochin Act IX of 1124 [S. 5], 845.
partition—
notional, for computing deceased coparcener's share, 850-853.
son born after, 867.
persons governed by the Act [S. 2], 836-837.
per stirpes succession [S. 19], 936-937.
possessed by a Hindu female [S. 14].
property, meaning of, 896-901.
posthumous daughter [S. 20], 870, 915, 937-938. posthumous son [S. 20], 866, 915, 937-938.
preamble, 834.
pre-emption [S. 22]— preferential right of heirs in class I of the Schedule to acquire property in certain cases, 939-941.
preferential right of heirs in class I of the Schedule to acquire property in certain cases [S. 22], 939-941.
presumption in cases of simultaneous death [S. 21], 938.
property—
distribution of, among agnates and cognates, 879-882.
distribution of, among heirs in class I of the Schedule, 866-873.
distribution of, among heirs in class II of the Schedule, 873-879.
distribution of, among heirs of a female Hindu, 926-928.
distribution of, among persons governed by Marumakkattayam and Aliyasantana Law, 928-934.
includes agricultural property, 863.
inherited by a female from her father or mother, 922-924.
inherited by a female from her husband or father-in-law, 924-926.
manner of distribution of, among heirs of a female Hindu, 926-928.
of a female Hindu, history of the ownership of, 896.
of a female Hindu, to be her absolute property, 829, 896-910.
of a female intestate, general rules of succession, 910-926.
of a male intestate, general rules of succession, 860-881.
order of succession among heirs of a male intestate, 866-883, 887, 929-931.
order of succession among agnates, 887-895.
order of succession among cognates, 887-895.
order of succession among heirs of class I of the Schedule, 866-873.
order of succession among heirs of class II of the Schedule, 873-879.
order of succession among heirs of a female intestate, 914-926, 931.
possessed by a Hindu female, 899-903.
preferential right to acquire in certain cases, 939-941.
consideration in such cases, how determined, 941.
court in which such right can be enforced, 939.
which of the two heirs has the first preferential right, 940.
right to dispose of, by will, 949-950.
sthanam, 856, 859-860.
to which the Act is not applicable, 845-846.
under the Act, the meaning of, 863.
with reference to a Hindu female, meaning of, 899-903.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—contd.
related [S. 3(1)(j)]—
definition of, 839, 840.
relative—
by adoption, 864-865.
remarriage—
effect of, on certain widows, 944-945.
ground of disqualification to succession in certain cases, 944-945.
of mother, 871, 919, 944.
repeal [S. 31] 951.
restricted estate [S. 14]—
of a female Hindu, abolished by the Act, 896-899.
can come into being even after the Act, 905.
restriction on partitioning of a dwelling house, see dwelling house.
retrospective—
whether Act is, 843, 863, 912.
reversioners—
reversion abolished, 903.
possess rights in some cases, 903.
ruler of an Indian State, when estate exempted from Act, 845.
rules of distribution and succession in case of female and male intestate Hindus, see heirs of a female intestate, heirs of a male intestate, female Hindu, male Hindu, succession.
schedule of heirs of a male intestate, 861, 951.
Scheduled Tribes exempted from the operation of the Act [S. 2], 836, 837.
scheme of the Act, 827-833.
four categories of heirs, 828.
not to affect law relating to prevention of fragmentation of land, 843.
persons married under Special Marriage Act not governed by the Act, 845-846.
property of a female to be her absolute property, 829.
succession to the property of a female intestate, 829.
succession to the property of a male intestate, 828.
separated member, 855-856.
simultaneous death—presumption in cases of [S. 21], 938.
sister—
as the heir of male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 875-876.
illegitimate sister of a female intestate can succeed to her as an heir of her mother, 921.
uterine sister of a female intestate can succeed to her as an heir of her mother, 921.
sister's daughter—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 876.
sister's son—
as the heir of a male intestate in class II of the Schedule, 876.
Sikh [S. 2]—
is a Hindu, 836.
son [Ss. 8, 15]—
adopted son, 866, 914.
as the heir of a female Hindu, 914-915.
as the heir of a male intestate in class I of the Schedule, 866-868.
born after partition, 867.
born of a void or voidable marriage, 867-868.
born to the adoptive father after adoption, entitled to same shares as adopted son, 866.
divided son, 867.
illegitimate son, 867, 914.
includes both natural son and adopted son, 866, 914.
mental defects do not exclude him from inheritance, 868.
natural son entitled to same share as a son adopted by father before his birth, 866.
of a predeceased daughter, 872, 916.
of a predeceased son, 868, 915.
physical defects do not exclude from inheritance, 868.
posthumous son, 866, 915, 937-938.
step-son, 868, 915.
son's daughter's daughter—
as the heir of a male Hindu in class II of the Schedule, 874.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—contd.
son's daughter's son—
as the heir of a male Hindu in class II of the Schedule, 874.
Special Marriage Act, 43 of 1954 [S. 5]— persons marrying under, not governed by the Act, 842, 845-846.
spes successionis—
not a vested interest, 845.
right of heirs to succession, 845.
transfer of, by the heir, 845.
status of women in respect of property under old law, 829.
sthanam property [S. 7]— devolution of, 856-860.
what is, 859.
sthanamdar [S. 7], 856-860.
step-mother—
can inherit not as the mother of the intestate but as the widow of the father, 872, 877, 919.
not disqualified to inherit on account of remarriage, 944.
not included in the term "mother", 872, 919.
stridhana—
early history of, 826, 896.
various types of, 829.
woman's now her absolute property, 896.
succession—
dwelling houses, special provisions respecting, 941-944.
effect of disqualification on, 947.
effect of failure of heirs on, 948.
grounds of disqualifications to, 944-947.
conversion, 947.
murder, 945-947.
remarriage, 944-945.
per stirpes or capita, 936-937.
restriction on partitioning of, or residing in, dwelling houses, 941-944.
special provisions respecting persons governed by Marumakkattayam and Aliyasantana Law, 928-934.
testamentary succession, 949-950.
succession to females—see heirs of a female intestate.
general rule of, 910-926.
mode of succession of two or more heirs, 936-937.
order of succession, 926-928.
property, meaning of, 896.
special order of succession in case of a childless female intestate in respect of property inherited from father, mother, husband or father-in-law, 922-926.
succession in case of a female intestate governed by Marumakkattayam or Aliyasantana Law, 928, 931-934.
succession to males—see heirs of a male intestate.
general rules of, 860-881.
mode of succession of two or more heirs, 936-937.
order of, among agnates, 879-880.
order among cognates, 880-882.
order of, among heirs in class I of the Schedule, 866-873.
order of, among heirs in class II of the Schedule, 873-879.
property of a male dying intestate, 846, 863.
surrender of estate [S. 14]— by a widow or a limited heir, 904-905.
tarwad—
devolution of interest in the property of, 856-859.
testamentary disposition of interest in property of, 949-950.
tavazhi—
devolution of interest in the property of, 856-859.
testamentary disposition of interest in property of, 949-950.
testamentary succession, 949-950.
title of the Act, 835.
uncle—see father's brother, mother's brother.
uniform law of succession, 329.
usage—see custom.

Hindu Succession Act 30 of 1956—contd.
uterine blood [S. 3(1)(e)]—
definition, 838.
uterine brother—
of female intestate, can succeed as the heir of her mother, 921.
uterine sister—
of female intestate, can succeed to her, as the heir of her mother, 921.
Valiamma Thampuran Kovilagam Estate [S. 5]— exempted from the Act, 845.
Vijnaneshwara, 825.
Virashaiva—is a Hindu, 836 [S. 2(1)(a)]. void or voidable marriage—right to succession of a daughter born of, 871.
right to succession by a father of a daughter born of, 873.
right to succession by a father of a son born of, 873.
right to succession by a mother of a daughter born of, 871.
right to succession by a mother of a son born of, 871.
right to succession of a son born of, 867-868.
widow [S. 8]—
as an heir of a male intestate in class I of the Schedule, 869.
conversion not a ground for divesting property inherited from husband, 869.
effect of remarriage on inheritance of certain widows, 944-945.
of a predeceased son as the heir of a male intestate in class I of the Schedule, 869-870.
of a predeceased son of a predeceased son as the heir of a male intestate in class I of the Schedule, 870.
remarriage not a ground for divesting property inherited from the husband, 869.
remarriage a bar to inheritance as widows in certain cases, 944.
surrender of estate by, 904-905.
unchastity of, not a ground now of disqualification to succession, 869.
widow of brother—see brother's widow.
widow of a predeceased son—see widow.
widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son—see widow.
will [S. 31], 831, 949-950.
see testamentary disposition, coparcenary.

Hindu Wills Act— application of, 446, [§ 369], 447 [§ 369A], 451 [§ 376].
repeal and re-enactment of, 446 [§ 369], 451 [§ 376].

Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act—[§ 35]. agricultural property, 97.
application of, 92, 641.
devolution of interest on the death of the widow, 102-103.
devolution of property, 92.
general effect of, 94-96, 346-347. heritable property, 92.
husband's death pendente lite, 102.
interest liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree against her, 102.
against a coparcener, 102.
main features of, 94.
quantum of share on partition, 100.
rights of a widow under, 94, 404.

Hinduism—
conversion from, 75 [§ 7], 617-620 [§§ 582-583].
conversion to, 73 [§ 6].
renunciation of, and exclusion from inheritance, 161 [§ 97].

Husband—See Wife. bequest to wife, 185 [§ 143].
conversion of husband, and dissolution of marriage, 519 [§ 441(3)]. effect of, on wife's right of maintenance, 600 [§ 557].
gift to wife, 185 [§ 143].
maintenance of wife, 590 [§ 542].
marital duties, 520 [§ 442].
saudayika, husband's power over, 185 [§ 143].

Husband—contd.
succession to stridhana—
Dayabhaga, 187 [§ 146(2)], 196 [§ 155], 197 [§ 156], 197 [§ 157].
Madras school, 193 [§ 152].
Mayukha, 191 [§ 151].
Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147].
sulka, succession to, 187 [§ 146].

Idiocy—
whether effects exclusion from inheritance, 162 [§ 98].
share on partition, 165 [§ 106].

Idol— bequest to, 484 [§ 410].
endowment for establishment of, 477 [§ 404].
gift to, 484 [§ 410].
idol a juridical person, 486 [§ 413].
mutilation of idol, 484 [§ 410].
offerings to, 499 [§ 422].
partition and provision for worship of, 394 [§ 303].
property held by, 486 [§ 413].
suit by or against, 486 [§ 413].

Illatom adoption— arising out of custom, 572 [§ 515A]. essential conditions of, 572 [§ 515A]. rights of the adopted son (son-in-law), 572 [§ 515A].
son-in-law, affiliation of, 572 [§ 515A].

Illegitimate Children—See Illegitimate son. Illegitimate daughter.
Christian father and Hindu mother, of, 74 [§ 6].
guardianship of, 577 [§ 522].
Hindu father and Christian or Mahomedan mother, of, 75 [§ 7(1)].
Hindu parents, of, 74 [§ 6(ii)].
inheritance, rights of, 108-111 [§ 43(1-3)(v)], 114 [§ 43(5)].
maintenance of, 594 [§ 551], 596 [§ 552].

Illegitimate daughter— inheritance to father, right of, 114 [§ 43(5)]. mother, right of, 199 [§ 163].

Illegitimate son—See Illegitimate children.
maintenance, 594 [§ 551].
of the three higher classes—
heirs of, 139 [§ 56A].
inheritance, rights of, 108 [§ 43(1-3)(a)]. maintenance, rights of, 108 [§ 43(1-3)(a)], 594-595 [§ 551].
partition, right to a share on, 401 [§ 312], 434 [§ 350].
of Sudras—
inheritance, rights of, 108 [§ 43(1-3)(a)]. partition, whether entitled to, 401 [§ 312], 434 [§ 350], 594 [§ 551].

Immovable property—
damdupat, rule of, and loans secured by mortgage of, 629 [§ 596].
gift of, and Transfer of Property Act, 440 [§ 358(2)]. gift of ancestral, by father to near relations, 320 [§ 258], 336 [§ 267].
guardian's contract for purchase of, 582 [§ 529(2)]. limited heir, alienation by, of, 215 [§ 178].
parties to suits relating to, 313 [§ 251].
purchase of, by widow, from savings of income of inherited property, 210 [§ 177(3)]. recovery of ancestral, lost to the family, 283 [§ 232].
stridhana, gift or bequest of immovable property by husband to wife how far, 177 [§ 126], 185 [§ 143(1)]. immovable property purchased with, 183 [§ 134].
trusts of, how created, 443 [§ 366(1)].

Impartible property—
accretion to, 622 [§ 586].
alienation of, 624 [§ 588].
bequest of, 446 [§ 368(3)(iv)].

Impartible property—contd.
coparcenary in, whether there is any, 623 [§ 587].
custom, by, 621 [§ 585].
gift of, 439 [§ 357(7)].
instances of, 621 [§ 584].
maintenance, and, 592 [§ 545], 624 [§ 589].
meaning of, 621 [§ 584].
succession to, 625-628 [§§ 590-595].
Infant—See Minor.
Informal adoption—See Adoption.
Inheritance—See Succession to males, Succession to females, Stridhana. adoption son, rights of, 556 [§ 494(2)].
after-born heir, when may affect estate vested in another, 87 [§ 28].
alteration of course of succession as known to Hindu law, 456 [§ 382].
Caste Disabilities Removal Act, 1850, 72 [§ 4(1)], 161 [§ 97], 577 [§ 524].
co-heirs, whether take as joint tenants or as tenants in common, 89 [§ 31].
conversion, right of inheritance whether lost by, 72 [§ 4(i)].
Dayabhaga law of—See Succession to males.
devolution of property, modes of, 85 [§ 24]. difference between Mitakshara and Dayabhaga, 85 [§§ 22, 24], 103 [§ 36], 160. [§ 95].
divesting of, 87 [§ 28(2)].
divided son, rights of, 400 [§ 310], 429 [§ 341].
estate inconsistent with general law of inheritance, 456 [§ 382].
exclusion from—See Exclusion from inheritance.
female heirs, 86 [§ 25], 142-146 [§§ 61-70]—See Female heirs.
females succession to—See Succession to female.
fresh stock of descent, what is a, 86 [§ 27].
general principles of, 85-90 [§§ 21-32].
heritable property, Mitakshara, 91 [§ 33]; Dayabhaga, 152 [§ 78].
Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act, 1928, 73 [§ 4], 163 [§ 98], 166 [§ 107].
Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929—See Acts. joint tenants, when heirs take as, 89 [§ 31].
males, inheritance to—See Succession to males.
Mitakshara law of—See Succession to males.
partition whether destroys rights of, 429 [§ 341].
per capita and per stirpes, principle of succession, application of, 90 [§ 32].
property descendible to heirs, Mit., 85 [§ 24], 91 [§ 34]; Day., 152 [§ 78].
propinquity as the governing factor in Mitakshara law of, 103 [§ 36].
representation, doctrine of, 87 [§ 29].
spes successionis, 88 [§ 30].
spiritual benefit as governing factor in Dayabhaga law of, 152-153 [§§ 79-80].
systems of, 85 [§§ 21-22].
tenants-in-common, when heirs take as, 89 [§ 31].
unchastity of female heirs, how far affects inheritance, 150 [§ 76], 184 [§ 139].
vesting of, whether can remain in abeyance, 87 [§ 28].
Insolvency— coparcener, of, and survivorship, 280 [§ 229(2)].
manager, father and other coparceners, of, 331 [§ 265].
minor member of joint family firm, of, 335 [§ 266].
Interpretation of a statute—
rules of, 666-669.
Interest—See Damdupat. rate of, and legal necessity, 307 [§ 244].
Jains—
adopted son, share of, 644 [§ 625].
adoption among, 642-644 [§§ 617-625].
age of boy adopted, 643 [§ 620].
ceremonies of, 644 [§ 624].
datta homam, necessity of, 553 [§ 488(3)]. daughter's son, of, 643 [§ 622].
orphan, of, 643 [§ 621].
sister's son, of, 644 [§ 623].
whether can be cancelled, 644 [§ 624A].

Jains—contd.
adoption, widow, by, 642 [§ 618].
second adoption, 643 [§ 619].
and their tenets, 640 [§ 612].
law relating to, 74 [§ 6], 640 [§ 613].
in Bombay, 641 [§ 614].
of succession, 641 [§ 615].
stridhana, succession to, 642 [§ 616A].
succession among, 641 [§ 615].
tenets of, 640 [§ 612].
widow, interest of, in husband's estate, 201 [§ 168], 641 [§ 616].

Jati Vaishnava— application of Hindu Law to members of the sect, 75 [§ 6].

Jats— succession among reversioners, 208 [§ 175].

Jimuta Vahana—
author of Dayabhaga, 56 [Introduction], 78 [§ 11(3)].

Joint family—See Coparceners, Coparcenary, Coparcenary property.

Joint family business—See Ancestral business.

Joint family property—See Coparcenary property.

Joint-tenants— daughter's son inheriting to their maternal grandfather, case of, 271 [§ 223(2)].
heirs taking as, 89 [§ 31].

Judicial decisions—
as a source of law, 63 [Introduction], 78 [§ 10].

Kanyadana— daughter given in marriage, 510-511 [§ 433].

Karta—See Manager. manager of joint family, 295 [§ 236].

Katyayana— smriti of, 30-31 [Introduction].
stridhana according to, 169 [§ 113(3)].

Kayashthas— whether they are Sudras, 71 [§ 1].

Khojas—
application of Hindu law to, 617 [§ 582].
maintenance of Khoja widow, 618 [§ 582].
partition, 617 [§ 582(2)].
principle of survivorship, how far applies to, 617 [§ 582(2)].
Shariat Act, 1937, subject to the provisions of, 617-620 [§§ 582-583].
succession among, how far governed by Hindu law, 617 [§ 582].
theory of joint Hindu family, how far applies to, 617 [§ 582(2)].
wills of, 618 [§ 582].

Kritima adoption— peculiar features of, 571 [§ 515].

Kshatriyas—
one of the four Hindu castes, 71 [§ 1].

Lameness—
whether effects exclusion from inheritance, 162 [§ 98].
share on partition, 165 [§ 106].

Legal necessity—See Alienation.

Legitimacy— presumption as to, 518 [§ 438].

Leprosy—
whether effects exclusion from inheritance, 162 [§ 98].
share on partition, 165 [§ 106].

Letters of administration—
when necessary, 450 [§ 375].
Life-estate—
creation of, by will or deed of gift, 456 [§ 381].
endowment to take effect after a, validity of, 485 [§ 412].
Limitation—[Note: I.L.A. denotes Indian Limitation Act, 1908 and L.A. denotes Limitation Act, 1963]. acknowledgment of debt by guardian, [L.A. s. 20(3)(a)], 584 [§ 531].
Manager, [L.A. ss. 18, 19], 312 [§ 249].
widow, [L.A. s. 21(3)(a)], 243 [§ 196]. adopted son, suit for possession by, [I.L.A. Art. 144], 567 [§ 509], [L.A. Arts. 65, 59], 567 [§ 509].
adoption, suit to declare the same valid or invalid, [I.L.A. Arts. 118, 119], 571 [§ 514], [L.A. Arts. 57, 58, 65], 571 [§ 514].
alienation, suit to set aside, when the same is made by—father, in respect of ancestral property, [I.L.A. Art. 126], 343 [§ 271], [L.A. Art. 109], 344 [§ 271].
guardian, [I.L.A. Art. 44], 580 [§ 528], [L.A. Art. 60(a)], 580 [§ 528].
mohunt, [I.L.A. s. 10 and Arts. 134B, 134A, B & C], 505-506 [§ 426(1), (2)], [L.A. Arts. 94, 95, 96], 505-506 [§ 426(1)(2)]: See also Chart, 504.
shebait, [I.L.A. s. 10 and Arts. 48B, 134A, B & C], 505-506 [§ 426(1), (2)], [L.A. Arts. 94, 95, 96], 505-506 [§ 426(1)(2)]. See also Chart, 504.
alienation by widow, and declaratory suit that same is void beyond her lifetime, [I.L.A. Art. 125], 257 [§ 208]. and suit by an adopted son for possession, [I.L.A. Art. 144], 567 [§ 509], [L.A. Arts. 65, 59], 567 [§ 509].
and suit by reversioners for possession, [I.L.A. Art. 141], 257 [§ 209], [L.A. Arts. 65, 109, 113], 257 [§ 209].
coparcener and exclusion from coparcenary, [I.L.A. Art. 127], 294 [§ 235(3)], [L.A. Art. 110], 294, 425 [§§ 235(3), 333(1)]. creditor's suit 362-363 [§ 293(1), (2), (3)]. declaratory suit against widow, [I.L.A. Art. 125], 257 [§ 208]. maintenance, 616 [§ 580(1)], [L.A. Art. 105], 616 [§ 580]. parties, addition of new, [L.A. s. 21], 317 [§ 252].
reversioner's suit for possession, on widow's death, [I.L.A. Arts. 120, 141], 252 [§ 201], 257 [§ 209], [L.A. Arts. 65, 109, 113], 253 [§ 201], 257 [§ 209].
widow, adverse possession against, [I.L.A. Art. 141], 252 [§ 201], [L.A. Arts. 65, 113], 253 [§ 201]. adverse possession by, against reversioners, [I.L.A. Art. 144], 259 [§ 211], [L.A. Art. 65], 259 [§ 211].
Limited heirs—See Widow, Widow's estate and Reversioners.
Lingayats—
application of Hindu Law to, 74.
are sudras, 74 [§ 6].
Lunacy—
inheritance, whether lunacy effects exclusion from, 162 [§ 98].
marriage of a lunatic, 507 [§ 427].
math, head of, whether forfeits his position by reason of, 485 [§ 413].
partition, whether lunacy effects exclusion from, 165 [§ 107].
shebait, whether forfeits his position by reason of, 485 [§ 413].
Madana Parijata—
work of authority in Mithila School, 51 [Introduction].
Madras School—
a sub-school of Mitakshara school, 45 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12(1)].
authorities in, 54-56 [Introduction].
female bandhus according to, 138 [§ 56].
heirs according to, 143 [§ 63].
stridhana according to, 171 [§ 118].
succession to, according to, 193 [§ 152].
works supplementing Mitakshara recognized as authoritative by, 79 [§ 12(1)].
Maharashtra School—See Bombay school.

Mahomedanism—
conversion to, 76 [§ 7(3)], 617 [§ 582].
how far affects the right to give in adoption, 548 [§ 478].
how far effects a dissolution of joint family, 427 [§ 334].

Maiden—
presents from bridegroom, 186 [§ 145].
stridhana, maiden's property how far, 183 [§ 137]. power to alienate, 185 [§ 142].
succession to maiden's property, 186 [§ 145].

Maintenance—
amount of, for widow, 607 [§ 566].
for others, 609 [§ 567].
whether may be increased or decreased, 609 [§ 568].
arrears, of, when Court may award, 615 [§ 579(2)].
attachment of right to arrears of and future, 615 [§ 578].
avaruddha stree, of, 596 [§ 553].
caste, loss of, whether affects right of, 607 [§ 565].
charge on property, whether maintenance is, 610 [§ 569]. effect of agreement of decree creating, 610 [§ 569]. effect of will creating, 611 [§ 569].
Transfer of Property Act, s. 39, provision of, 610 [§ 569].
concubines, of, 596 [§ 553].
coparceners and their families, of, 591 [§ 543]. daughters, legitimate, of, 614 [§ 574].
illegitimate, of, 596 [§ 552].
daughter-in-law, of, 591 [§ 544], 606 [§ 564].
death of widow pending suit for, 615 [§ 577A].
debts payable before maintenance, 590 [§ 540], 611 [§ 570].
decree for maintenance, execution of, 616 [§ 581].
devisees, rights of maintenance when may be enforced against, 612 [§ 571].
disqualified heirs, of, 166 [§ 110], 594 [§ 550].
donees, right of maintenance when may be enforced against, 612 [§ 571].
escheat and right of maintenance, 592 [§ 544A]. father, of, 593 [§ 548].
female members of joint Hindu family, of, 594 [§ 549].
future, attachment of right to, 615 [§ 578]. grandchildren, of, 593 [§ 547].
heirs, liability of, for, 591 [§ 544].
husband, conversion of, and wife's right of maintenance, 600 [§ 557].
illegitimate sons, of, 594 [§ 551].
daughters, of, 596 [§ 552].
legal obligation to maintain, extent of, 590-592 [§§ 542-544].
liability for maintenance (i) dependent on, and (ii) independent of, the possession of property, 590-592 [§§ 541-544].
limitation for suit for, 616 [§ 580].
lis pendens and maintenance, 612 [§ 572]. manager, liability of, 591 [§ 543].
moral obligation to maintain, 591 [§ 544]. mother, of, 593 [§ 548].
mother-in-law, of, 592 [§ 544].
parents of, 593 [§ 548].
partition and provision for maintenance, 394 [§ 304].
personal liability for, 590-592 [§§ 542-544].
persons entitled to maintenance, 592-607 [§§ 545-565]. sister, of, 591 [§ 544].
sons, legitimate, of, 592 [§ 545].
illegitimate, of, 594 [§ 551].
step-mother, of, 591 [§ 544].
stridhana, whether arrears of maintenance are, 179 [§ 129].
property given in lieu of maintenance is, 179 [§ 129].
suit for, 615 [§ 579].
transfer of property for payment of debts, and, 611 [§ 570].
of property pending suit for maintenance, 612 [§ 572].
of right of maintenance, 615 [§ 577].
widow, of, 600-601 [§ 558A], 601-606 [§§ 559-563]. on divesting of inheritance on adoption, 565 [§ 505].
widowed daughter-in-law, of, 606 [564].

Maintenance—contd.
wife, of, 597-600 [§§ 554-558].
statutory right to, 597 [§ 553A]. will, disposal of property by, and right of maintenance, 445 [§ 368], 610 [§ 569].
Majority—
adoption, 525 [§ 450].
age of, 574 [§ 516].
Indian Majority Act 9 of 1875, 73 [§ 4(vii)], 574 [§ 516].
marriage, 507 [§ 427].
Malik—
gift to a female as, 474 [§ 401(3)].
Manager—
account, liability to, on partition, 297 [§ 238].
during union, 297-298 [§ 239].
acknowledgment of debt by, 312 [§ 249].
alienation of joint family property by—See Alienation.
arbitration, power to refer to, 311 [§ 247].
business, joint family, 287 [§ 234], 298-300 [§ 240-241].
new, 289-292 [§ 234(2)-(4)], 299 [§ 240(5)].
compromise by, 311 [§ 248].
contribution from coparceners, 298 [§ 240(4)].
debts contracted by, whether take precedence over claim for maintenance, 611 [§ 570].
debts, power to contract, 298 [§ 240].
to give valid discharge of, 311 [§ 248A].
revival of, 312 [§ 249].
decree against, how far binding on other coparceners, 317 [§ 253].
decree against, in foreclosure suit, 314 [§ 251(1) ill. (2)]. discharge for debts, by, 311 [§ 248A].
family arrangement, 311 [§ 248B].
female manager of a religious endowment, 487 [§ 413].
gift by, of ancestral immovable property, 275 [§ 226].
income, power over, 296 [§ 237].
joint family business, conduct of, 287 [§ 234], 299 [§ 240], 300 [§ 241].
karta is manager of joint Hindu family, 295 [§ 236].
limitation, period of, and suit by manager, 316 [§ 252].
mother, whether competent to act as, 295 [§ 236].
mortgage by, of joint family property, 300 [§ 242].
necessities of the family, what are, 302 [§ 243].
parties to suit, 313 [§ 251].
powers of, Mitakshara law, 295-302 [§§ 236-242].
Dayabhaga law, 349 [§ 283].
promissory note passed by, parties to suit on, 298 [§ 240(4)]. relinquishment of debt, by, 313 [§ 250].
revival of debt, 312 [§ 249].
sale by, of joint family property, 300 [§ 242].
suits, parties to, 313 [§ 251]. who may be, 295 [§ 236].
Manu—
code or institutes of, 19 [Introduction], 77 [§ 8(2)(i)].
first patriarch, 19 [Introduction].
stridhana according to, 168 [§ 113(1)].
Manusmriti—
Corpus Juris of ancient India, 20 [Introduction]. identity of actual compiler, 19 [Introduction].
commentaries on, 21-22 [Introduction].
by Govindaraja, 22 [Introduction].
by Kuluka, 21 [Introduction].
by Medhatithi, 22 [Introduction].
Marathas—
belong to what caste, 71 [§ 1].
Marriage—
a sacrament, 653.
adopted son, whether can marry in his natural family, 557 [§ 494(3)].

Marriage—contd.
agreement enabling wife to avoid marriage, 520 [§ 442(1)].
anuloma marriage, 513 [§ 435(3)]. approved forms of marriage—
asura, 508 [§ 428].
brahma, 508 [§ 428].
asura form of marriage, 508 [§ 428].
betrothal, 517 [§ 437(2)].
brahma form of marriage, 508 [§ 428].
caste, identity of, 512 [§ 435].
ceremonial marriage, 656.
ceremonies, 517 [§ 437].
Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, 507 [§ 427], 1039 [App. III].
conjugal rights, restitution of, 521 [§ 444]. consent of guardian, marriage without, 511 [§ 434].
contract, marriage whether, 507 [§ 427(1)].
conversion and dissolution of marriage, 519 [§§ 441(2) and (3)].
converts to Hinduism regarded as sudras for purposes of, 513 [§ 435(2)].
Cutchi Memon women, marriage of, deemed to be in approved form, 509 [§ 429], 619 [§ 582].
daughter's, after suit for partition, 395 [§ 304].
while family is joint, 518 [§ 440].
dissolution of, by Court under Act 21 of 1866, 519 [§ 441(3)]. change of religion, whether operates as, 519 [§ 441(2)].
loss of caste, whether operates, as, 519 [§ 441(2)]. distinction between nullity of marriage and divorce under the H.M. Act, 659. distinction between void and voidable marriages under the H.M. Act, 659.
divorce, a thorny question, 654.
divorce, 519 [§ 441].
Divorce Act 4 of 1869, provisions of, 520 [§ 441].
expenses of, 395 [§ 304(2)], 518 [§ 440].
factum valet, doctrine of, 512 [§ 434].
father, right of, to give daughter in marriage, 510 [§ 433].
force or fraud, marriage brought about by, 507 [§ 427(2)].
forms of, 508 [§ 428].
giving in marriage, 510 [§ 433].
guardians for marriage, 510 [§ 433], 511 [§ 434].
husband's duty to wife, 521 [§ 442(2)]. identity of caste or of sub-caste, 512 [§ 435].
impotent, with an, 507 [§ 427].
injunction to prevent a marriage, 512 [§ 434(2)]. law of, need for codification, 654.
lunatic, marriage of, 507 [§ 427(1)].
Majority Act whether applies to Hindus in matter of, 73 [§ 4(vii)], 511 [§ 433].
male members, of, 395 [§ 304(2)], 518 [§ 440]. male minor, of, 510 [§ 433(2)].
marriage expenses, 395 [§ 304(2)], 518 [§ 440].
when a legal necessity, 222 [§ 181B(iv)], 303 [§ 243(c)]. minor, marriage of, 507 [§ 427], 510 [§ 433], 511 [§ 434].
minor widows, remarriage of, 511 [§ 433].
mixed marriages, 512 [§ 435].
mother, right of, to give her daughter in, 511 [§ 433], 511 [§ 434].
partition, provision for marriage expenses of unmarried daughters on, 395 [§ 304(2)]. partition, suit for, females entitled to provision for marriage expenses whether necessary parties to, 425 [§ 333(2)(iv)].
Pat, a form of, 510 [§ 429].
prathiloma marriage, 513 [§ 435(3)]. presumption as to form of marriage, 509 [§ 429].
as to legality of marriage, 518 [§ 438].
as to legitimacy, 518 [§ 438].
as to performance of ceremonies, 518 [§ 438].
prohibited degrees of relationship, 514 [§ 436].
question of, decided according to Hindu law, 72 [§ 3(2)].
remarriage of widows, 511 [§ 432].
Special Marriage Act, 518 [§ 439], 656, 661, 662.
sulka, what is, 177 [§ 126], 509 [§ 428].

Marriage—contd.
unapproved forms of marriage—
asura, 508 [§ 428].
gandharva, 508 [§ 428].
who may give in marriage, 510 [§ 433].
widows, remarriage of, 511 [§ 432].
wife's duty to husband, 520 [§ 442(1)]. will, whether revoked by marriage of maker, 448 [§ 370(3)].
wives, number of, permissible under Hindu law, 510 [§ 430].
woman can have only one husband at a time, 510 [§ 431].
Maternal grandfather—See Mother's father.
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 15)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(33)].
Maternal grandfather's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 19)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(37)].
Maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 26)].
Maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 25)].
Maternal grandfather's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 16)].
Maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 22)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 159 [§ 88(48)].
Maternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(I 38)].
Maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(I 36)].
Maternal grandfather's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 18)].
Maternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 28)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 159 [§ 88(49)].
Maternal grandfather's son's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 21)].
Maternal grandfather's son's son's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(I 35)].
Maternal great grandfather—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 135 [§ 54(III 1)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(38)].
Maternal great grandfather's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 6)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(42)].
Maternal great grandfather's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 3)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(39)].
Maternal great grandfather's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 10)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(40)].
Maternal great grandfather's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 5)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(40)].
Maternal great grandfather's son's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 18)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 159 [§ 88(51)].

Maternal great grandfather's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 11)].
Maternal great grandfather's son's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 9)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(41)].
Maternal great grandfather's son's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 19)].
Maternal great grandfather's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 13)].
Maternal great grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 22)].
Maternal great grandfather's son's son's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 17)].
Maternal great great grandfather—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136A.
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(43)].
Maternal great great grandfather's daughter's son—
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§§ 88(47)].
Maternal great great grandfather's son—
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(44)].
Maternal great great grandfather's son's daughter's son—
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 159 [§ 88(52)].
Maternal great great grandfather's son's son—
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(45)].
Maternal great great grandfather's son's son's daughter's son—
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 159 [§ 88(53)].
Maternal great great grandfather's son's son's son—
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(46)].
Maternal uncle—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 16)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(34)].
Maternal uncle's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 22)].
Maternal uncle's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(I 36)].
Maternal uncle's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 18)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(35)].
Maternal uncle's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 21)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(36)].
Maternal uncle's son's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 35)].
Math—See Mohunt.
devasthanam and math, distinction between, 485 [§ 413].
possession and management of math property, 485-487 [§ 413].
private institution, whether a math or may be a, 500 [§ 424].
Matri bandhus—
order of succession among, 132 [§ 54].
who are, 121 [§ 46(3)], 127 [§ 49], 132 [§ 54].

Mayukha—

age and authorship of, 52 [Introduction].
principal work of authority in Gujarat, Island of Bombay and North Konkan, 52-53 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12(2)].
stridhana, according to, 191-192 [§§ 150, 151].
succession to property of males, according to, 150 [§ 77].

Memons—See Cutchi Memons, and Halai Memons.

Mesne profits—

when allowed on partition, 396 [§ 305(3)].
whether purchaser of undivided interest entitled to, 327 [§ 261(6)].

Migration—

effect of migration of a Hindu family, 81 [§ 14].

Mimansakas—

exegetes and logicians, 40 [Introduction].
Mimansa of Jaimini, 40 [Introduction].

Minor—

adoption by a male minor, 577 [§ 521].
by a minor widow, 538 [§ 465].
age of majority, 574 [§ 516].
bethrothal of, 518 [§ 437]. change of religion by minor and guardianship, 579 [§ 527].
debts contracted for family business, liability for, 288 [§ 234(1)(v)], 298 [§ 240].
decree against, without sanction of Court, 316 [§ 252]. guardian, capacity of minors to act as, 575 [§ 518(4)].
guardianship of person and property of—See Guardianship.
insolvent, whether minor member of joint family firm can be adjudged an, 335 [§ 266].
limitation in suits relating to joint property, effect of minority of a member on, 316 [§ 252].
Majority Act 9 of 1875, 574 [§ 516].
marriage of, 507 [§ 427], 510 [§ 433]. guardians for marriage of, 510 [§ 433], 511 [§ 434].
minor coparceners, when necessary parties to suits, 313 [§ 251].
mortgage of coparcenary property by manager, when binding on minor, 301 [§ 242].
new business, whether minor liable for, 289 [§ 234(2)]. partition, right to sue for, 398 [§ 308], 412 [§ 325(1)], 433 [§ 348]. party to suits, 315 [§ 251(5)].
recovery of custody of, 588 [§ 539].
reunion, minor cannot be a party to, 431 [§ 344].
sale of coparcenary property by manager, when binding on minor, 301 [§ 242].
will, minor cannot dispose of property by, 444 [§ 367].

Mitakshara—

of Vijnaneshwara, 46 [Introduction].
paramount authority of all the sub-schools, 47 [Introduction].
principal work of authority except in Bengal, 78 [§ 11].

Mitakshara school—

coparcenary, difference between Mitakshara and Dayabhaga, 263-267 [§ 213-217], 346 [§ 277].
coparcenary property, distinction between Mitakshara and Dayabhaga, 267-287 [§§ 218-234], 348-349 [§§ 278-282].
devolution of property according to, 85 [§ 24]. difference between Bengal school and, 78 [§ 11], 85 [§ 22], 85 [§ 24], 89 [§ 31], 103 [§ 36], 160 [§ 95], 161 [§ 96], 174 [§ 121], 433 [§ 347].
female heirs, according to, 142 [§ 61A].
partition, difference between Mitakshara and Dayabhaga, 433 [§ 347].
principal school of Hindu law, 44 [Introduction].
sub-divisions of, 45 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].
succession to property of males: general principles, 85-90 [§§ 21-32].
order of succession, 103-141 [§§ 36-60].
to stridhana, 188 [§ 147].

Mithila school—

authorities in, 50-51 [§ Introduction].
female heirs, according to, 86 [§ 25], 142 [§ 62].
stridhana according to, 172 [§ 119].
succession to, according to, 194 [§ 153].
sub-school of Mitakshara school, 45 [Introduction], 78 [§ 12].
works supplementing Mitakshara recognised as authoritative by, 50 [Introduction], 78 [§ 12].

Mohunt—See Math.

alienation by—See Alienation.
decree against, when binding on successors, 492 [§ 417].
devolution of office of, 492 [§ 418].
income of endowed property, powers over, 487 [§ 414(2)].
legal incidents of office of, 487 [§ 414].
meaning of, 485 [§ 413].
offering by followers to. 499 [§ 422]. person in de facto possession of math properties, 491 [§ 415B].
power of, to contract debts, 489 [§ 415(1)].
to alienate endowed property, 489 [§ 415].
to maintain suit, 491 [§ 415B].
to sue, 486 [§ 413].
removal of, 499 [§ 423].
transfer of right of management, 496 [§ 420].

Molesalam Girasias of Broach—

how far Hindu law applies to, 619 [§ 582].

Mortgage—

coparcener, by, of his undivided share, Mitakshara, 321 [§§ 259, 260].
Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 282].
coparcener's interest, rights of mortgagee of, 330 [§ 263], 371 [§ 294B(2)]. decree against father, 371 [§ 294B(2)]. decree in foreclosure suit against manager, 313 [§ 251].
father, by, of joint property for payment of his own debts, 374 [§ 295].
guardian, by, appointed by the Court, 586 [§ 536].
manager, by, of joint family property, 300 [§ 242].
mohunts and shebaits, by, of endowed property, 489 [§ 415].
natural guardian, by, 578 [§ 528].
setting aside unauthorised mortgage of joint property, 336-337 [§§ 268-269].
suits on, parties to. 313 [§ 251].
testamentary guardian, by, 584 [§ 532].
widow, by, of property inherited from her husband, 216 [§ 181].

Mother—

adoption, right of mother to give her son, in, 548 [§ 476].
adoptive mother, whether inherits to adopted son, 558 [§ 496].
as an heir to her daughter—where daughter married, Day., 196-198 [§§ 155-157]; Mad., 193 [§ 152]; May, 191 [§ 151(iii)]; Mit., 188 [§ 147]; Mith., 194 [§ 153].
where daughter unmarried, 186 [§ 145].
sulka, heir to, 187 [§ 146].
unchastity, whether a bar to inheritance to daughter, 184 [§ 139].
whether takes absolute or limited estate: Bombay, 205 [§ 171].
other States, 203 [§ 169].
as an heir to her son—order of succession, Day, 157 [§ 88(8)]; May, 116 [§ 43(7)], 150 [§ 77(8)]; Mit., 116 [§ 43(7)], 147 [§ 72(9)].
remarriage, whether affects right to inherit, 116 [§ 43(7)].
unchastity, whether affects right to inherit, Day, 157 [§ 88(8)], 161 [§ 96]; Mit., 116 [§ 43(7)].
whether takes limited or absolute estate: Bombay, 203 [§ 170].
other States, 202 [§ 168(4)].
bequest to mother, when alienable by her, 185-186 [§ 142-144].
conversion of, and guardianship, 578 [§ 526].
gift to, when alienable, 185-186 [§§ 142-144].
gift from, to daughter is saudayika, 185 [§ 143].
guardianship of child's person, 575 [§ 518].
property, 575-577 [§ 518-519].

Mother—contd.

guardianship, and conversion of, 578 [§ 526].
illegitimate children, guardianship of, 577 [§ 522].
inheritance—See sub-heads "as an heir to her daughter", "as an heir to her son".
manager, of the joint family, whether a mother can be a, 295 [§ 236].
marriage, mother's right to give daughter in, 510 [§ 433], 511 [§ 434].
partition, share on, Mitakshara, 404 [§ 316]; Dayabhaga, 435 [§ 353].
omission to reserve share for mother, effect of, 404 [§ 316].
party to suit for partition, 425 [§ 333(2)].
provision for funeral ceremonies of mother, 395 [§ 304].
step-mother, whether an heir, 116 [§ 43(7)], 147, 148 [§ 72(9)(27)].

Mother-in-law—

when entitled to maintenance from daughter-in-law, 592 [§ 544, ill. (c)].

Mother's brother—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 16)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(34)].
property inherited from, whether ancestral, 271 [§ 223(2)].

Mother's brother's daughter's daughter's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(I 38)].

Mother's brother's daughter's son's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(I 36)].

Mother's brother's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46(3)], 133 [§ 54(I 18)].

Mother's brother's son's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46(3)], 133 [§ 54(I 21)].

Mother's father—

as an heir, Mitakshara, 122 [§ 46(3)], 133 [§ 54(I 15)].
Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(33)].
property inherited from, whether ancestral, 271 [§ 223(2)].

Mother's father's brother—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 3)].

Mother's father's brother's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 5)].

Mother's father's brother's son's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 9)].

Mother's father's father—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 135 [§ 54(III 1)].

Mother's father's father's son's son's son's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 17)].

Mother's father's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 16)].

Mother's father's son's daughter's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 22)].

Mother's father's son's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 18)].

Mother's father's son's son's daughter's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 28)].

Mother's father's son's son's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 21)].

Mother's father's son's son's son's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 134 [§ 54(I 35)].

Mother's father's sister's son—

as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46(3)], 136 [§ 54(III 6)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(42)].

Mother's maternal grandfather—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 135 [§ 54(III 2)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 4)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 7)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 12)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 8)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 14)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 25)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's son's son's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 21)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 15)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 26)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 16)].
Mother's maternal grandfather's son's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136 [§ 54(III 29)].
Mother's maternal great grandfather—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 136A.
Mother's mother—
inheritance to maiden's property, 186 [§ 145].
Mother's mother's brother's son—
as a bandhu, Mit., 121 [§ 46(3)].
Mother's mother's sister's son—
as a bandhu, Mit., 121 [§ 46(3)].
Mother's sister—
as a bandhu, Bombay State, 138 [§ 56].
Mother's sister's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 133 [§ 54(I 26)].
Mother's sister's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46(3)], 133 [§ 54(I 19)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(37)].
Mother's sister's son's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 122 [§ 46(3)], 133 [§ 54(I 25)].
Movable property— ancestral movables, power of father over, Mitakshara, 275 [§ 225].
ancestral movables, power of father over, Dayabhaga, 345 [§ 274].
partition of, 393 [§ 303].
widow or other limited owner's power to dispose of movable property received or inherited from husband or others, 215-216 [§§ 179-180].
Naikins—See Dancing Girls.
Nambudri Brahmins—
application of Hindu Law to, 74 [§ 6(iv)].
Narada—
code or institutes of, 24-25 [Introduction], 77 [§ 8(2)(iii)].

Naradasmriti—
advanced and progressive views of Narada, 24 [Introduction].
commentary on, 26 [Introduction].
compiler of, 26 [Introduction].
leading code, 27 [Introduction].
Native Christians—
how far governed by Succession Act, 1925, 75 [§ 7(2)].
principle of survivorship, how far applies to, 75 [§ 7(2)].
Native Converts Marriage Dissolution Act—
provisions of, 73 [§ 4(iv)], 519 [§ 441].
Necessity—See Alienation.
Nibandhas—
origin of, 77 [§ 9].
Nilkantha—
author of Mayukha, 79 [§ 12(2)].
Nirnayasindhu—
work supplementing Mitakshara in Benares and Bombay, 50 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12(1)].
Nyaya—
auxiliary indice of Dharma, 61 [Introduction].
Obstructed heritage—
what is, 267 [§ 218].
Orphan—
adoption of, whether permissible, 551 [§ 482].
Padavandanika—
a species of stridhana, 169 [§ 113], 177 [§ 126].
Parasara Madhava—
stridhana according to, 171 [§ 118].
work supplementing Mitakshara in Madras, 55 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12(1)].
Parasharasmriti—
author of, 28 [Introduction].
commentary on, 28 [Introduction].
Parents—See Father, Mother. adoption, right to give son in, 548 [§§ 475-476].
guardianship, rights of, 575 [§ 518].
maintenance of, 593 [§ 548].
marriage, right to give daughter in, 510 [§ 433].
Parties to suit—
relating to ancestral business, 316 [§ 251(7)]. coparcenary property, 313-317 [§§ 251-252].
partition, 425 [§ 333(2)].
Partition—
absent coparcener, share of, 402 [§ 313].
account, mode of taking, on, 396 [§ 305]. adopted son and right to demand partition, 401 [§ 311].
adverse possession of portion of the joint property, effect of, 395 [§ 304].
after-born son and partition, 399-400 [§§ 309-310], 428 [§ 336].
of a disqualified coparcener, 166 [§ 109].
agreement not to partition, 406 [§ 319].
agreement partition by, 414 [§ 325(2)], 415 [§ 326].
agreement to separate, whether writing necessary for, 416 [§ 326(2)].
allotment of shares, Mitakshara, 407 [§ 321].
Dayabhaga, 437 [§ 355].
ancestral movables, son's right to enforce partition of, 393 [§ 303].
ancestral property, share allotted on partition how far, 272 [§ 223(4)]. arbitration, by, 414 [§ 325(3)].
attachment of undivided share of a coparcener in a Mitakshara family, 413 [§ 325].

Partition—contd.
birth of a member pending suit, for, 423 [§ 330].
burden of proof as to, 417 [§ 327].
cessor of commensality, how far evidence of partition, 419 [§ 327(4)].
conversion from Hinduism, and partition, 427 [§ 334].
coparcenary property, partition confined to, 393 [§ 303].
coparceners, rights of, 397 [§ 306], 402 [§ 313], 406 [§ 318].
date of severance in status, 410 [§ 325].
death of a member pending suit, for, 423 [§ 330].
debt contracted by father after, 356 [§ 290(6)]. before, 356 [§ 290(7)].
debts, provision for, on partition, 394 [§ 304]. declaration of intention to separate, 410 [§ 325].
decree, partition by, 423 [§ 329].
definition of, Mit., 409 [§ 322]; Day., 433 [§ 347]. disability, how far effects exclusion from share on partition, 165 [§ 106].
disability, removal of, and re-opening of partition, 166 [§ 108].
disqualified coparceners, 406 [§ 318].
dwelling house, partition of, 428 [§ 335(2)]. effect of partition, 429-430 [§§ 340, 341]. evidence of partition, 417 [§ 327].
exclusion from share on partition, 165 [§ 106]. father's mother, rights of, Mit., 405 [§ 317]; Day., 436 [§ 354].
father, right of, to effect partition among his sons, 410 [§ 323].
female coparceners, rights of, Dayabhaga, 433 [§ 348].
funeral expenses of mother, provision for, 395 [§ 304].
grandmother, rights of, Mit., 405 [§ 317]; Day., 436 [§ 354].
grandsons, rights of, Mit., 397 [§ 307]; Day., 434 [§ 349].
great grandsons, rights of, Mit., 397 [§ 307]; Day., 434 [§ 349].
how effected, 410 [§ 325].
idols, partition of, 394 [§ 303].
illegitimate sons, rights of, Mit., 401 [§ 312]; Day., 434 [§ 350].
inheritance, rights of, whether affected by partition, 429 [§ 341].
intention the true test of partition, 410 [§ 325], 433 [§ 347].
jyesthabhagam, now obsolete, 407 [§ 321(2)]. liability of son for debt contracted by father before, 356 [§ 290(7)]. lunacy and partition, 165 [§ 107].
maintenance of dependants members and partition, 394 [§ 304].
manager, liability of, to account on partition, 297 [§ 238].
marriage expenses of female and male members, provision for, 394 [§ 304].
mesne profits when allowed on partition, 396 [§ 305(3)].
metes and bounds, by, 409 [§ 322], 414 [§ 325(4)].
minor coparcener, 398 [308], 411 [§ 325(1)], 433 [§ 348].
exercise of volition on behalf of, 410 [§ 325].
modes of division, 407 [§ 321].
modes of effecting partition, 410 [§ 325].
mortgagee of undivided interest, rights of, 330 [§ 263].
mother, rights of, Mit., 404 [§ 316]; Day., 435 [§ 353].
partial partition, 420 [§ 328].
parties to suit for, 425 [§ 333(2)].
Partition Act 4 of 1893, 428 [§ 335].
partition how effected, Mit., 410 [§ 325]; Day., 433 [§ 347].
passage, 394 [§ 303].
per stirpes, 407 [§ 321(3)], 437 [§ 355(3)].
person entitled to partition, Mit., 397-406 [§§ 306-318]; Day., 433-434 [§§ 348-351]. property liable to partition, 393-397 [§§ 303-305].
purchaser of undivided interest, rights of, Mit., 326 [§ 261(3)], 429 [§ 341]; Day., 434 [§ 351].
registration of deed of partition, 417 [§ 326(2)]. religious order, adoption of, whether effects exclusion from partition, 166 [§ 111].
re-opening of, 428-429 [§§ 336-339]. restraint against, 406 [§§ 319-320].
reunion—See Reunion. right of way, 394 [§ 303].
right to enforce partition, 294 [§ 235(5)], 350 [§ 285].
sale in lieu of partition, 428 [§ 335].

Partition—contd.

separation of one coparcener, 421 [§ 328(3)]. share acquired on, devolution of, 429 [§ 340].
whether separate property, 281 [§ 230(6)]. shares on partition, Mit., 407 [§ 321]; Day., 437 [§ 355]. shares on partition, variation in after preliminary decree, 407 [§ 321]. son born after but conceived before partition, rights of, 399 [§ 309].
son born of a void or voidable marriage under Hindu Marriage Act, 397 [§ 307].
son conceived as well as born after partition, rights of, 400 [§ 310].
sons, rights of, Mit., 397 [§ 307]; Day., 434 [§ 349].
son's son's rights of, Mit., 397 [§ 307]; Day., 434 [§ 349].
son's son's son's rights of, Mit., 397 [§ 307]; Day., 434 [§ 349].
Special Marriage Act and, 427 [§ 334A].
step-mother, rights of, Mit., 404 [§ 316(3)]; Day., 435 [§ 353(4)]. stridhana, whether share allotted to mother and father's mother on partition is, their, 178 [§ 128], 206 [§ 172].
suit, institution of, effect of, 412 [§ 325(1)].
births and deaths of coparceners pending, 423-424 [§§ 330-332].
hotchpot, 426 [§ 333(3)].
minor, by, 413 [§ 325(1)(ii)].
parties to, 425 [§ 333(2)].
property to be comprised in, 426 [§ 333(3)].
who may sue for, 425 [§ 333(1)].
way, right of, 394 [§ 303].
well, partition of, 393 [§ 303].
what constitutes partition, Mit., 410 [§ 325]; Day., 433 [§ 347].
widows, between, 112 [§ 43(4)].
wife, rights of, Mit., 403 [§ 315]; Day., 434 [§ 352].
will and restraint against partition, 406 [§ 320], 467 [§ 393].
will, partition by father or other coparcener by means of, 410 [§ 324].
partition by so-called, 431 [§ 345].
writing, whether necessary for, 416 [§ 326(2)].

Paternal uncle—

as an heir, Mit., 119 [§ 43(14)], 149 [§ 72(35)]; Day., 158 [§ 88(15)].

Paternal uncle's daughter—

as a bandhu, Bombay, 138 [§ 56], 143 [§ 64(1)].

Paternal uncle's daughter's son—

as an heir, Mit., 133 [§ 54(I 20)]; Day., 158 [§ 88(29)].

Paternal uncle's son's daughter's son's son—

as a bandhu, Mit., 133 [§ 54(I 29)].

Paternal uncle's son—

as an heir, Mit., 119 [§ 43(15)], 149 [§ 72(36)]; Day., 158 [§ 88(16)].

Paternal uncle's son's daughter's son—

as an heir, Mit., 133 [§ 54(I 20)]; Day., 158 [§ 88(30)].

Paternal uncle's son's son—

as an heir, Mit., 119 [§ 43(16)], 149 [§ 72(37)]; Day., 158 [§ 88(17)].

Paternal uncle's son's son's son—

as an heir, Mit., 149 [§ 72(38)].

Per capita—

partition, 407 [§ 321].
succession, 90 [§ 32].

Perpetuities—

Hindu law and rule against, 461 [§ 385].
rule against, in regard to bequest, 461-464 [§§ 385(2)-387].
in regard to endowments, 484 [§ 411].
in regard to gifts, 461, 462-464 [§§ 385(1), 386, 387].

Per stirpes—

partition, 407 [§ 321].
succession, 90 [§ 32].

persona designata—
adopted son, when may take as, 568 [§ 511, ill. (a)].
Pious obligation—See Debts.
Pitri bandhus
order of succession among, 134 [§ 54].
who are, 120 [§ 46(4)], 127 [§ 49], 132 [§ 54].
Posthumous son—
divesting of estate, 87 [§ 28].
Power of appointment—470 [§ 398].
Prajapatya marriage—
an approved form of marriage, 508 [§ 428].
Preceptor—
as an heir, 139 [§ 57]; Day., 159 [§ 91].
Presumption—
alienation with consent of reversioners, in case of, 227 [§ 183(1)].
business carried on by a coparcener, as to, 291 [§ 234(4)].
joint family and property, as to Mit., 283 [§ 233]; Day., 350 [§ 286].
legitimacy, as to, 518 [§ 438].
marriage, as to form, of, 190 [§ 147], 509 [§ 429].
performance of ceremonies, 518 [§ 438].
validity, 518 [§ 438].
partition, as to, 420 [§ 328].
property in possession of widow, as to, 184 [§ 140].
savings by widow of income of husband's estate, as to, 210 [§ 177].
school, as to, 80-81 [§§ 13A, 14].
when one coparcener separates, 421 [§ 328(3)].
Pritidatta—
a kind of stridhana, 168 [§ 113(1)], 176 [§ 126].
Probate—
when necessary, 450-451 [§§ 375, 376].
Probate and Administration Act—
application of, 451 [§ 376].
repeal and re-enactment of, 451 [§ 376].
Promissory note—
suit on, passed by manager, 298 [§ 240(4)].
Propinquity—
guiding principle of succession in Mit. law, 103 [§ 36], 128 [§ 51].
Prostitutes—
succession to property of, 199 [§ 164].
Pujari—
devolution of office of, 496 [§ 419A].
Pundits—
institution of, when abolished, 78 [§ 10].
Punjab—
adoption, in the, 553 [§ 488].
Purchaser—See Alienation. ancestral house, purchaser of, and widow's right of residence, 605 [§ 562].
burden of proof in case of sale by manager, 306 [§ 244].
widow, 224 [§ 182]. rights of purchaser of coparcener's share, Mit., 322 [§ 261], 349 [§ 280], 402 [§ 314]; Day., 434 [§ 351].
equitable rights on partition, 326 [§ 261(3)]. extent of share, 327 [§ 261(5)].
right subject to all charges and liabilities, 328 [§ 261(8)].
right to joint possession, 322 [§ 261(1)]. in Bengal, U.P. and Madras, 322 [§ 261(1)].
in Bombay, 324 [§ 261(1)].

Purchaser—contd.
right to mesne profits, 327 [§ 261(6)].
right to partition, 325 [§ 261(2)].
right to specific performance, 328 [§ 261(7)]. whether bound to sue for partition in coparcener's lifetime, 327 [§ 261(4)].

Registration— of authority to adopt, 529 [§ 456].
of deed of gift, 439 [§ 358].
of deed of partition, 417 [§ 326].

Religion, change of— adoption, effect on, 548 [§ 478].
civil rights, whether lost by, 72 [§ 4(i)]. coparcenership, effect on, 427 [§ 334].
dissolution of marriage, whether effected by, 519 [§ 441].
divorce, when brought about by, 519 [§ 441].
guardianship and change of religion by father, 577 [§ 525].
by infant, 578 [§ 527].
by mother, 578 [§ 526].
maintenance, effect on right to, 600 [§ 557].
restitution of conjugal rights, effect on suit for, 521 [§ 444].
succession, whether a bar to, 161 [§ 97].

Religious endowments—See Endowments.

Remainder— gifts or bequest by way of, 466 [§ 390].

Remarriage of widows—
adoption, power to give in, after remarriage, 538 [§ 467].
take in, after remarriage, 538 [§ 467].
divesting of husband's estate by remarriage, 111 [§ 43(4)].
guardianship, effect of remarriage on the right of, 577 [§ 523].
Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act, 1856, operation of, 73 [§ 4(ii)], 510 [§ 432], 577 [§ 523].
legalized by Act 15 of 1856, 73 [§ 4(ii)], 111 [§ 43(4)]. maintenance, whether widow loses right by remarriage, 605 [§ 563].
minor widow, when and whose consent necessary for remarriage of, 510 [§ 433].
succession, effect of remarriage on right of, 111 [§ 43(4)], 145 [§ 68(v)].

Representation— doctrine of, 87 [§ 29].

Residence, right of— unmarried daughter of deceased coparcener, of, 614 [§ 574].
widow, of, how affected by transfer of the house, 605 [§ 562], 613 [§ 573].
wife and unmarried daughters of sole owner, of, how affected by sale of the family house, 614 [§ 575].

Restitution— of conjugal rights, 521 [§ 444].

Reunion— difference between coparcenary formed by reunion and coparcenary by birth, 431 [§ 343].
intention necessary to constitute, 431 [§ 344].
minor coparcener and, 431 [§ 344].
persons who may reunite, 430 [§ 342].
results of, 431 [§ 343].
reunion a question of fact, 421 [§ 328(3)]. succession after reunion, Mitakshara, 141 [§ 60].
Dayabhaga, 159 [§ 94].

Reversioners— adverse possession against widow whether a bar to suit by, 252 [§ 201].
alienation by widow with consent of, 227 [§ 183], 230 [§ 184], 236 [§ 191].
without consent, of, 231 [§ 185].
for legal necessity, effect of, on reversioners, 230 [§ 184].
reversioner party to, 237 [§ 192].
compromise between widow and next reversioner, 242 [§ 194].

Reversioners—contd.
compromise by widow involving alienation how far binding on—where reversioner is a party, 237 [§ 192].
where reversioner is not a party, 239 [§ 193].
consent of, alienation by widow, 236 [§ 191].
debts contracted by widow and not charged on the estate, whether binding on, 242 [§ 195].
declaratory decree, who bound by, 258 [§ 210].
declaratory suit by, 254, 255 [§§ 203, 205, 206].
decree against widow, when binding on reversioners, 250 [§ 199].
definition of, 207 [§ 175(1)].
distinction between "next" and "remote" reversioners, 228 [§ 183].
election by, 235 [§ 190]; 236 [§ 190A].
estoppel of, 235 [§ 190], 236 [§ 190A].
injunction against widow in case of waste, 254 [§ 204].
limitation period of, declaratory suits, 257 [§ 208].
for suit for possession, 257 [§ 209].
possession adverse against widow, whether bars reversioners, 252 [§ 201].
ratification by, 236 [§ 190A].
remote reversioners, rights of, 255 [§ 207].
res judicata, decree in suit between widow and next reversioners, 250 [§ 200].
decree in suit between next reversioner and alienee, 258 [§ 210].
rights of reversioners, 253 [§ 202].
spes successionis, reversioner's interest is, 208 [§ 175(2)]. succession by, custom among Jats, 208 [§ 175].
surrender of estate by widow to reversioners, 243 [§ 197].
title derived from last full owner, 207 [§ 175(3)].
waste by widow, and injunction, 254 [§ 204].
will by widow of husband's estate, and declaratory suit, 255 [§ 206].

Revocation—
gift, of, 443 [§ 363].
power to adopt, of, 531 [§ 460]. will, of, 447 [§ 370].

Sakulyas—[Bengal School]—
enumeration of, 155 [§ 84].
order of succession among, 159 [§ 89].
principles governing order of succession among, 156 [§ 87].

Sale—See Alienation and Purchaser. in execution of decree against father for his debts, 363 [§ 294].
coparcener, 322 [§ 261].
widow, 250 [§ 199].
religious office, of, 496 [§ 420(1)].

Samanodakas—
according to Mitakshara, 105 [§ 38], 106 [§ 40].
Dayabhaga, 152-153 [§§ 80, 81], 156 [§ 85].
order of succession among, Mitakshara, 120 [§ 45], 150 [§ 73].
Dayabhaga, 159 [§ 90].
table of, Mitakshara, 106 [§ 41], 107 [Table].
widows of, as heirs in Bombay, 146 [§ 69].

Santhals of Chota Nagpur— application of Hindu Law to, 74 [§ 6].

Sanyasi— exclusion from inheritance and from share on partition, 166 [§ 111].
succession to property of, 140 [§ 58].

Sapindas—
according to Mitakshara, 104-106 [§§ 37-39].
Dayabhaga, 153 [§ 82].
adoption by widow and consent of sapindas, 532 [§ 462(2)].
bhinna-gotra sapindas, Mitakshara, 104 [§ 37], 536 [§ 463(2)].
gotraja sapindas, Mitakshara, 104 [§ 37].
half-blood. See sub-head "Whole blood".
marriage and sapindaship, 514 [436].

Sapindas—contd.
order of succession among, Mitakshara, 107 [§ 43].
Dayabhaga, 157 [§ 88].
principles governing precedence among, Dayabhaga, 156 [§ 86].
table of sapindas, Mitakshara, 107 [§ 42]. whole blood, sapindas of, when preferred to one of half-blood, 120 [§ 44].
Sapratibandha daya—See Obstructed heritage. means obstructed heritage, 267 [§ 218(1)].
Saptapadi—
a marriage ceremony, 517 [§ 437(1)].
Sarasvati Vilasa—
an authority in Madras, 55 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].
Saudayika—
a kind of stridhana, 173 [§ 120], 184 [§ 141], 185 [§ 143].
Savings— from income, 210 [§ 177].
Schools of law— authorities in different schools, 44-58 [Introduction].
Apararka, 49.
Dayatatva of Raghunandana, 57.
Madana Parijata of Vishveshwara Bhatta, 51.
Mitakshara of Vijnaneshwara, 46.
Nirnayasindhu of Kamalakara, 50.
Parashara Madhaviya, 55.
Sarasvati Vilasa, 55.
Srikrishna Tarkalankar, 57.
Subodhini of Vishveswara Bhatta, 51.
Smriti Chandrika, 54-55.
Vaijayanti, 49.
Viramitrodaya of Mitramishra, 48, 49.
Vivadachintamani, 50.
Vivadatandava, 50.
Vivada Ratnakara, 51.
Vyavahara Chintamani, 51.
Vyavahara Mayukha, 52-54.
Vyavaharanirnaya, 56.
Bengal or Dayabhaga school, 56 [Introduction].
Dayabhaga and Mitakshara schools, 44 [Introduction], 78 [§ 11].
migration and school of law, 81 [§ 14].
Mitakshara school, divisions of—Benares, 45, 49 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].
Bombay or Maharashtra, 45, 51 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].
Madras or Dravida, 45, 54 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].
Mithila, 45, 50 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].
origin of, 77 [§ 9].
stridhana according to different schools—See Stridhana.
succession according to different schools—See Succession to Males and Succession to Females.
works of authority in the two schools, 79 [§ 11].
in the sub-schools, 80 [§ 12].
Self-acquired property— accretions, 281 [§ 230(5)]. ancestral property lost to family, 281 [§ 230(4)], 283 [§ 232].
description of, 280 [§ 230].
gains of learning: gains of science, 281 [§ 230(9)], 281 [§ 231], 282 [§ 231A].
gift of, 438 [§ 357].
Government grant, whether, 281 [§ 230(3)].
heir entitled to, 269 [§ 222].
inheritance from collaterals, 272 [§ 223(3)].
from females, 201 [§ 166].
legal incidents of, 269 [§ 222].
obstructed heritage, 280 [§ 230].
partition, not liable to, 269 [§ 222], 393 [§ 303].
powers over, 269 [§ 222].

Self-acquired property—contd.
practice of profession or occupation, 281 [§ 231], 282 [§ 231A].
presumption as to, 283 [§ 233].
property given or bequeathed by paternal ancestor, 272 [§ 223(5)].
property thrown into common stock, whether joint or separate, 276 [§ 227].
separate earnings, 281 [§ 231], 282 [§ 231A].
share allotted on partition, 281 [§ 230(6)].
sole surviving coparcener, property held by, 281 [§ 230(7)].
what is, 280 [§ 230].

Separate property—See Self-acquired property.

Shebait—See Endowments. alienation of endowed property by, 489 [§ 415].
decree against, when binding on successors, 492 [§ 417].
devolution of office, of, 493 [§ 419].
female, interest in shebait, of, 494 [§ 419].
gift by, of right of management, 496 [§ 420(2)].
income of endowed property, powers over, 487 [§ 414].
legal incidents of office of, 487 [§ 414].
lunacy of, 486 [§ 413].
meaning of, 485 [§ 413].
position of, 487 [§ 414].
power of, to alienate endowed property, 489-491 [§ 415].
to contract debts, 490 [§ 415].
to sue, 486 [§ 413].
removal of, 499 [§ 423].
sale by, of right of management, 496 [§ 420(1)].

Shruti— source of Dharma, 3 [Introduction].

Sikhs—
application of Hindu law to, 74 [§ 6(iv)].

Sister—See Half-sister.
as an heir—
in Bombay, Mit., 118 [§ 43(13C)], 144 [§ 65], 148 [§ 72(14)].
May., 118 [§ 43(13C)], 138 [§ 56]. in Madras, under Act 2 of 1929, 118 [§ 43(13C)], 138 [§ 56]. before Act 2 of 1929, 138 [§ 56].
elsewhere under Act 2 of 1929, 118 [§ 43(13C)].
whether takes an absolute or a limited estate, Bombay, 203 [§ 170(2)].
Madras, 202 [§ 168(4)].
elsewhere, 118 [§ 43(13C)].
202 [§ 168(4)].
whether take as tenants-in-common or as joint tenants, 89 [§ 31], 144 [§ 65(2)].
as a stridhana heir—
Madras, as heir of the deceased's father, 193 [§ 152(4)].
Mayukha, as heir of the deceased's father, 191 [§ 151(iii)].
Mitakshara, as heir of the deceased's father, 188 [§ 147(2)].
succession to maiden's property, 186 [§ 145].
whether takes an absolute or limited estate: Bombay, 205 [§ 171].
elsewhere, 203 [§ 169].
maintenance, 591 [§ 544].

Sister's daughter—
as an heir in Bombay—inherits as a bandhu, 138 [§ 56].
takes an absolute estate, 203 [§ 170(2)].
as an heir in Madras—
inherits as a bandhu, 138 [§ 56].

Sister's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46], 133 [§ 54(I 7)].

Sister's daughter's son's son— whether a bandhu, 122 [§ 47], 133 [§ 54 (I 13)].

Sister's son—
as an heir—
Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(12)].
Mitakshara, 119 [§ 43(13D)], 121 [§ 46(3)], 132 [§ 54(I 6)].
as a stridhana heir—
Dayabhaga, 196 [§ 155], 197 [§ 157].
Madras, 193 [§ 152(4)].
Mayukha, 191 [§ 151(III)].
Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147].
Mithila, 194 [§ 153].
succession to maiden's property, 186 [§ 145].
Sister's son's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 121 [§ 46], 132 [§ 54(I 6)].
Sister's son's son's son—
whether a bandhu, 122 [§ 47].
Smriti—
as a source of Hindu law, 4 [Introduction], 77 [§ 8].
based in part on immemorial custom, 2 [Introduction].
basic structure of Hindu law, 2 [Introduction].
Brihaspati Smriti, 28 [Introduction].
conflicting texts of, how dealt with, 39 [Introduction].
divided into Dharmasutras and Metrical Smritis, 12 [Introduction].
hierarchy of courts mentioned in, 37 [Introduction].
Katyayana Smriti, 30-31 [Introduction].
Manusmriti, 19-21 [Introduction].
Metrical smritis, 12, 32 [Introduction].
Naradasmriti, 24-27 [Introduction].
nature of, 8 [Introduction].
Parasharasmriti, 28 [Introduction].
Sutras, a class of, 12 [Introduction].
Yajnavalkya's enumeration of, 18 [Introduction].
Yajnavalkasmriti, 22 [Introduction].
Smritikars—
exponents of the divine precepts of law, 10 [Introduction].
were great jurists, 11 [Introduction].
Smriti Chandrika—
stridhana according to, 171 [§ 118], 193 [§ 152].
rules of succession to, 193 [§ 152].
work of authority in Madras, 54-55 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12(1)].
Sons—See coparceners, Coparcenary property, adoption. adopted son—See Adoption.
adult sons, when father bound to maintain, 592 [§ 545].
after-born son and partition, 399-400 [§§ 309-310].
of a disqualified coparcener and partition, 166 [§ 109].
of a disqualified heir, 165 [§ 105].
alienation by father for payment of his debts, how far binding on, 374 [§ 295].
ancestral property and son's rights, Mitakshara, 270 [§ 223(1)], 274 [§ 224].
Dayabhaga, 345 [§ 273].
as heirs to their father—
Dayabhaga, 157 [§ 88(1)-(3)].
Mayukha, 150 [§ 77(1)-(3)].
Mitakshara, 108 [§ 43(1)-(3)], 147 [§ 72(1)-(3)].
as stridhana heirs—
Dayabhaga, 196-198 [§§ 155-157].
Madras, 193 [§ 152].
Mayukha, 191 [§ 151].
Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147(2)].
Mithila, 194 [§ 153].
coparceners, sons inherit as, 89 [§ 31].
disinheritance, 446 [§ 368].
father's debts, liability of sons for, 351 [§ 287], 351 [§ 288], 354 [§ 290], 356-357 [§ 290(7)]. alienation of son's interest by father for payment of his debts 374 [§ 295].

Sons—contd.
father's debts, immoral debts, sons whether liable for, 385 [§ 298].
sale of sons' interest in execution of decree against father, 363 [§ 294].
separate property of sons whether liable for, 351 [§ 287].
gift or bequest by father to his son, 272 [§ 223(5)].
guardianship of—See Guardianship. illegitimate—See Illegitimate sons.
joint tenants, sons inherit as, 89 [§ 31].
maintenance of parents, 593 [§ 548]. maintenance of sons, 592 [§ 545].
partition, right to demand, Mit., 397 [§ 307]; Day., 434 [§ 349].
shares on, 407 [§ 321]. son conceived and born after, 400 [§ 310].
son conceived before but born after, 399 [§ 309].
self-acquired and separate property of father, 269 [§ 222].
son in his mother's womb, 340 [§ 270].
take per stirpes on partition amongst themselves, grandsons and great-grandsons, 90 [§ 32], 108 [§ 43(1)-(3)]. will, whether revoked by subsequent birth of son, 445 [§ 368(3)].

Son-in-law—
as a stridhana heir, Mithila, 194 [§ 153].

Son's daughter— as an heir, under Act 2 of 1929, 117 [§ 43(13A)].
before the Act, in Bombay, 138 [§ 56].
before the Act, in Madras, 138 [§ 56].
whether takes absolute or limited estate, 117 [§ 43(13A)], 201 [§ 168], 203 [§ 170].

Son's daughter's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 132 [§ 54(I-4)].

Son's daughter's son—
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 132 [§ 54(I-1)].
as a sapinda, Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(25)].

Son's daughter's son's son
as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 132 [§ 54(I-4)].

Son's sons— as heirs to their grandfather, Mit., 108 [§ 43(1-3)], 147 [§ 72(1-6)]; May., 150 [§ 77(2)]; Day., 157 [§ 88(1-3)]. doctrine of representation as exemplified by, 87 [§ 29].
whether take as coparceners, joint tenants, or as tenants-in-common, 89 [§ 31].
whether take per stirpes or per capita, 90 [§ 32].
as stridhana heirs—
Dayabhaga, 196 [§ 155], 197 [§ 157].
Mayukha, 191 [§ 150], 191 [§ 151].
Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147(2)].
whether take as tenants-in-common or as joint tenants, 198 [§§ 159-160].
whether take per stirpes or per capita, 90 [§ 32].
debts, liability for grandfather's, 354-389 [§§ 290-298].
maintenance of, 593 [§ 547].
partition, rights on, 397 [§ 307].

Son's son's daughter's son— as a bandhu, Mitakshara, 132 [§ 54(1-4)]; Dayabhaga, 158 [§ 88(26)].

Son's son's son— as heirs to their great grandfather, Mit., 108 [§ 43(1-3)], 147 [§ 72(1-6)]; May., 150 [§ 77(3)]; Day., 157 [§ 88(1-3)]. doctrine of representation, 87 [§ 29].
whether take as coparceners, joint tenants or tenants-in-common, 89 [§ 31].
whether take per stirpes or per capita, 90 [§ 32].
as stridhana heirs—
Dayabhaga, 196 [§ 155].
Mayukha, 191 [§ 151].
partition, rights on, 397 [§ 307].

Son's widow—

as an heir, in Bombay, 145 [§ 68].
whether takes a limited or an absolute estate in inherited property, 145 [§ 68(iv)], 206 [§ 174(2)].

Sources of Hindu Law—3, [Introduction], 77-82 [§§ 8-15].

Arthashastra of Kautilya, 32-37 [Introduction].
commentaries, 77 [§ 9].
custom, 82 [§ 15].
judicial decisions, 78 [§ 10].
practical division of, 77 [§ 8].
smritis, 2 [Introduction], 77 [§ 8].
srutis, 3 [Introduction], 77 [§ 8].
veda, 3 [Introduction].

Special Marriage Act, 1954—

scheme of the Act different from that of Hindu Marriage Act, 661.
severance of status of person marrying under, 427 [§ 334A].

Specific performance— contract by manager, of, 302 [§ 242].

Spes successionis—

right of heir to succession, 88 [§ 30].
of reversioners to succession, 207 [§ 175(2)]. renunciation by heir, 237 [§ 192].

Spiritual benefit—

doctrine of, 152-153 [§§ 79-80].

Sraddha—

alienation of inherited property by widow for, 217 [§ 181A(2)]. parvana sraddha and right of inheritance, 152 [§ 80].

Srikrishna Tarkalankar—

author of Bengal school, 57 [Introduction].

Sruti—

as a source of Hindu law, 3, 5 [Introduction], 77 [§ 8].

Stepdaughter—

as a stridhana heir, Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147].

Stepmother—

adoption, right to give in, 547 [§ 474].
as an heir to her stepson, Bombay, 145 [§ 68], 148 [§ 72(27)].
whether takes a limited estate, 145 [§ 68(iv)].
as a stridhana heir, Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147].
whether takes a limited estate, 145 [§ 68(iv)].
maintenance of, 591 [§ 544].
partition, rights on, Mit., 404 [§ 316(3)]; Day., 435 [§ 353].

Stepson—

as a stridhana heir, Dayabhaga, 196 [§ 155].
Mitakshara, 190 [§ 147].

Stridhana—

adhivedanika, 169 [§ 113(2)], 177 [§ 126].
adhyagni, 168, 169 [§ 113(1), (3)], 177 [§ 126].
adhyavahanika, 169 [§ 113(2), (3)], 177 [§ 126].
adoption, stridhana whether divested by, 565 [§ 504].
adverse possession, property acquired by, whether stridhana, 182 [§ 133].
alienation of—See sub-head "Power of disposition over".
anwadheyaka, 169 [§ 113(2)], 177 [§ 126], 192 [§ 151(3)], 193 [§ 152(3), (4)], 195 [§ 154].
succession to, Day., 197 [§ 156]; Mad., 193 [§ 152(3), (4)], 195 [§ 154(3)] ayautaka, 195 [§ 154(4)], 197 [§ 157].
Benares school, stridhana, according to, 171 [§ 117].
Bengal school, stridhana, according to, 173 [§ 120]. bequest from relations, whether stridhana, 185 [§ 143]. bequest of, 185 [§ 143].

Stridhana—contd.
bhartridatta, 177 [§ 126], 191 [§ 150], 193 [§ 152].
succession to, Mad., 193 [§ 152]; May., 191 [§ 151(1)].
Bombay school, stridhana, according to, 171 [§ 116].
burden of proof as to, 184 [§ 140].
commentators, stridhana, according to, 170 [§ 114].
compromise, property acquired by, whether stridhana, 182 [§ 132].
contracts, liability under, whether limited to stridhana, 200 [§ 165].
custom, whether property may be stridhana by, 183 ]§ 136].
Dayabhaga, stridhana, according to, 173 [§ 120].
Dayabhaga, stridhana distinguished from Mitakashara stridhana, 174 [§ 121].
definition of Dayabhaga, 173 [§ 120].
Mitakshara, 170 [§ 115].
different kinds of property as stridhana, 176-184 [§§ 125-138].
disposition, power of, over stridhana, 184-186 [§§ 141-144].
earnings as stridhana, 181 [§ 131].
essential features of, 176 [§ 124].
estate taken by stridhana heir—when the heir is a male, 199 [§ 161].
a female, 199 [§ 162].
general principles of succession to, 188 [§ 147].
gifts and bequest from relations, whether stridhana, 177 [§ 126], 185 [§ 143].
from strangers, whether stridhana, 177 [§ 127], 185 [§ 143]. construction of gifts and bequest to females, 472 [§ 401].
gift of, 185 [§ 143].
improper stridhana, what is, 191 [§ 150].
succession to, 191 [§ 151(II)].
inheritance, property acquired by, whether stridhana, 174 [§ 122(1)], 180 [§ 130].
extent of estate in, 206-253 [§ 174-201]. powers of female heirs over, 206-253 [§§ 174-201].
succession to, 199-206 [§§ 161-171].
Madras school, stridhana, according to, 171 [§ 118].
maiden's property, 175 [§ 123(2)], 183 [§ 137].
maintenance, property given in lieu of, whether stridhana, 179 [§ 129].
Manu, stridhana according to, 168 [§ 113].
maurasi mokarari lease, grant of, 175 [§ 123(9)].
Mayukha, stridhana according to, 171 [§ 116].
meanings of, according to various schools, 168-176 [§§ 112-123].
mechanical arts, property acquired by, whether stridhana, 181 [§ 131].
Mitakshara, stridhana according to, 171 [§ 115], 174-175 [§ 121-122].
Mithila school, stridhana according to, 172 [§ 119].
non-technical stridhana, what is, 171 [§ 116], 191 [§ 150], 193-194 [§ 152].
succession to, 191 [§ 151(II)].
ornaments given by husband to wife, 169 [§ 113].
padavandanika, 169 [§ 113-(3)], 177 [§ 126].
partition, share obtained on, whether stridhana, 178 [§ 128], 206 [§ 172].
per stirpes, stridhana heirs whether take, 198 [§ 160]. power of disposition over stridhana—during coverture, 185 [§ 143].
during maidenhood, 185 [§ 142].
during widowhood, 186 [§ 144].
presumption against property being stridhana, whether there is a, 184 [§ 140].
pritidatta, 169 [§ 113(3)], 177 [§ 126].
proper stridhana, 191 [§ 150], 191 [§ 151]. property, different kinds of, as stridhana, 176-184 [§§ 125-138].
property purchased with stridhana, 183 [§ 134].
property unknown to ancient Hindu law, 175 [§ 123(9)].
saudayika, 173 [§ 120], 184 [§ 141], 185 [§ 143].
schools, stridhana, according to various, 175 [§ 123].
Smriti Chandrika, stridhana according to, 171 [§ 118].
Smritis, stridhana, according to, 168 [§ 113].
sources of women's property, 176 [§ 125].
special features of, 176 [§ 124].
succession to stridhana, 186-200 [§§ 145-165].
according to Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147].
Benares school, 190 [§ 148].
Bombay school, 190-193 [§§ 149-151].
(1) Mitakshara, 190 [§ 149].

Stridhana—contd.
succession to stridhana—contd.
(2) Mayukha, 191-193 [§§ 150-151].
Dayabhaga school, 195-198 [§§ 154-157].
escheat, 198 [§ 158].
illegitimate children as heirs, 199 [§ 163].
Madras school, 193 [§ 152].
maiden's property, succession to, 186 [§ 145].
Mithila school, 194 [§ 153].
prostitutes, succession to property of, 199 [§ 164].
sulka, succession to, 187 [§ 146].
sulka, what is, 168 [§ 113], 188 [§ 147], 191 [§ 150], 193 [§ 152], 194 [§ 153], 195 [§ 154].
succession to, 187 [§ 146].
survivorship, whether exists among stridhana heirs, 198 [§ 159].
technical stridhana, what is, 168 [§ 113], 171 [§ 116], 175 [§ 123], 191 [§ 150], 193 [§ 152], 194 [§ 153]. succession to, Mad., 193 [§ 152]; May., 191 [§ 151(1)]; Mith., 194 [§ 153].
tenants-in-common, whether stridhana heirs take as, 198 [§ 159].
transfer of—See above "power of disposition over".
unchastity, whether a bar to succession to, 184 [§ 139].
widowhood, property acquired during, 175 [§ 123(2)], 183 [§ 138].
Yajnavalkya, stridhana, according to, 169 [§ 113].
Yautaka, 191 [§ 150], 193 [§ 152(2)], 195 [§ 154].
succession to, Day., 197 [§ 155]; Mad., 193 [§ 152]; May., 191 [§ 151(1)]; Mith., 194 [§ 153].

Subodhini—
work of authority in Mithila school, 51 [Introduction].

Succession Act—See Acts.
Native Christians how far governed by, 75 [§ 7(2)].

Succession certificate— when necessary, 450 [§ 375].

Succession to females—
A—Succession to Stridhana—(See Stridhana). estate or interest taken by stridhana heir in stridhana—See Stridhana.
per stirpes, whether stridhan heirs take, 198 [§ 160].
tenants-in-common, whether stridhana heirs take as, 198 [§ 159].
B—Succession to the inherited property of a woman—
(1) in the Bombay State—
to property inherited from males, 203 [§ 170].
to property inherited from females, 205 [§ 171].
(2) in other States—
to property inherited from males, 201 [§ 168].
to property inherited from females, 203 [§ 169].

Succession to males—
A—Bombay school— female heirs in Bombay, 143-146 [§§ 64-70]. See Female heirs.
order of succession where Mitakshara prevails, 147-150 [§ 72-76].
where Mayukha prevails, 150 [§ 77].
B—Dayabhaga law— classes of heirs, 153 [§ 81].
doctrine of spiritual benefit, 153 [§ 80].
escheat, when Government takes by, 159 [§ 92].
female heirs, 159 [§ 93]. See Female heirs.
principle governing succession, 152 [§ 79].
property which passes by succession, 152 [§ 78].
reunion, succession after, 159 [§ 94].
sakulyas, enumeration of, 155 [§ 84].
order of succession among, 159 [§ 89].
principles governing order of succession among, 156 [§ 87].
samanodakas, enumeration of, 156 [§ 85].
order of succession among, 159 [§ 90].
principles governing order of succession among, 156 [§ 87].

Succession to males—contd.
Dayabhaga law—contd.
sapindas, enumeration of, 153 [§ 82].
female sapindas, 155 [§ 83].
order of succession among, 157 [§ 88].
principles governing order of succession among, 156 [§ 86].
strangers as heirs, 150 [§ 75].
C—Mitakshara law—
bandhus, meaning of, 120 [§ 46(2)]. classes of, 121 [§ 46(3)], 127 [§ 49].
descended from remoter ancestor, 137 [§ 55].
enumeration of heritable bandhus, 126 [§ 48].
female bandhus in Bombay, 138 [§ 56].
female bandhus in Madras, 138 [§ 56].
order of succession among, 132-137 [§ 54].
rules for determining heritable bandhus, 122-126 [§ 47].
rules for determining order of succession among, 128-132 [§§ 50-53B].
table of, 136A.
bhinnagotra sapindas, 104 [§ 37]. See sub-head "bandhu".
classes of heirs, 104 [§ 37], 105 [§ 38].
disciple, as heirs, 139 [§ 57].
escheat, when Government takes by, 140 [§ 59].
exclusion from—See Exclusion from Inheritance.
fellow student as heir, 139 [§ 57].
female heirs, 142-146 [§§ 61-70]. See Female heirs.
gotraja sapindas, who are, 104 [§ 37].
hermits and members of religious order, succession to, 140 [§ 58].
preceptor as heir, 139 [§ 57].
principle governing succession, 103 [§ 36].
property which passes by succession, 91 [§ 34].
reunion, succession on, 141 [§ 60].
samanodakas, meaning and enumeration of, 106 [§ 40], Table, p. 107.
order of succession among, 120 [§ 45].
sapindas, meaning and enumeration of, 105 [§ 39], Table, p. 107.
order of succession among, 107-119 [§ 43].
whole-blood sapinda, of, whether preferred to one of half-blood, 120 [§ 44].

Sudras—
adoption among, 647-648 [§§ 633-637]. ceremonies of, 553 [§ 488(3)], 554 [§ 489(1)], 647 [§ 633].
second adoption, 648 [§ 636].
son born after, 648 [§ 637].
who may adopt, 647 [§ 634].
who may be adopted, 549-551 [§ 480(3), (5)], 647 [§ 635].
ascetics, whether Sudras can be, 166 [§ 111], 647 [§ 632].
converts to Hinduism are, 647 [§ 631].
illegitimate sons of—
right of inheritance, 108 [§ 43(1)-(3)].
right to a share on partition, 401 [§ 312].
inheritance, 649 [§ 642].
Kayasthas, 646 [§ 628].
Lingayats are Sudras, 74 [§ 6].
maintenance, 650 [§ 643].
Marathas of Bombay, 647 [§ 630].
marriage, 508 [§ 428(3)], 648-649 [§§ 638-641].
anuloma, 649 [§ 640].
identity of caste, 648 [§ 639].
presumption as to form of, 649 [§ 641].
partition, 405 [§ 316], 649 [§ 642].
Sadgopes of Bengal are Sudras, 71 [§ 1].
Tanjore Rajas, 647 [§ 629].
Vaidyas of Bengal are Sudras, 71 [§ 1].
who are, 645 [§ 626].

Sulka—
a kind of stridhana, 168 [§ 113], 177 [§ 126], 508 [§ 428(2)].
meaning of, according to—
Dayabhaga school, 195 [§ 154].
Madras school (Smriti Chandrika), 193 [§ 152].
Mayukha, 191 [§ 150].
Mitakshara, 188 [§ 147].
Mithila school, 194 [§ 153].
succession to, 187 [§ 146].
Sunni Bohars of Gujerat—
how far governed by Hindu law in matters of succession and inheritance, 619 [§ 582].
Surety—
son's liability for debts of father as surety, 386 [§ 298(5)].
Surrender— of estate by widow or other limited heir, 243 [§ 197].
Survivorship—
as regards different kinds of property—
(1) coparcenary property—
among coparceners, Dayabhaga, 349 [§ 281].
Mitakshara, 279 [§ 229].
(2) property inherited from males—among co-widows, 111 [§ 43(4)].
daughter, 113 [§ 43(5)]; Bom. 114 [§ 43(5)], 205 [§ 171]. grandsons by a daughter, Mitakshara, 271 [§ 223(2)]. legitimate and illegitimate sons of Sudras, Mitakshara, 108 [§ 43].
sons, grandsons and great grandsons, Mitakshara, 279 [§ 229].
(3) property given or bequeathed to two or more persons—may pass by survivorship, 471 [§ 400].
(4) stridhana—
no survivorship among stridhana heirs, 203 [§ 169].
Cutchi Memons, 618 [§ 582(2)].
disability, 165 [§ 106].
extinction of right of, 279 [§ 229].
insolvency of caparcenary and survivorship, 280 [§ 229(2)(iii)], 331 [§ 265].
Khojas, 618 [§ 582(2)].
Native Christians, 75 [§ 7(2)].
right of survivorship takes precedence over—claims of creditors in certain cases, 352 [§ 289].
of devisees, 445 [§ 368].
of donees, 320 [§ 258].
unobstructed heritage devolves by survivorship, 267 [§ 218(2)].
Tables—
of sapindas and samanodakas, Mitakshara, 107.
showing order of succession among bandhus, 136A.
Tenants-in-common— joint donees and devisees, 471 [§ 400].
stridhana heirs whether inherit as, 198 [§ 159].
when heirs take as, on succession to males, 89 [§ 31].
Torts—
son's liability for father's, 288 [§ 234(1)(iv)].
Transfer of Property Act—
and benami transaction, 637 [§ 607].
endowments, 480 [§ 407].
gifts, 440 [§ 358(2)].
maintenance, 610 [§ 569].
Trust—
endowments, trustees whether necessary for creation, of, 480 [§ 407(2)].
Hindu law, trusts whether recognised by, 443 [§ 366], 466 [§ 391]. inheritance, course of, whether can be altered by interposition of trustees, 443 [§ 366(2)].
new legislations on, 477 [§ 404A].
Trust Act 2 of 1882 whether applicable to endowments, 480 [§ 407].

Unchastity—
as affecting—
adoption, 538 [§ 466].
maintenance of widow, 604 [§ 561].
wife, 599 [§ 556].
succession to males, 599 [§ 556].
to stridhana, 161 [§ 96], 184 [§ 139].

Uncle—See Paternal uncle, Maternal uncle.

Unobstructed heritage—See Obstructed heritage.
what is, 267 [§ 218].
not recognised by the Dayabhaga, 268 [§ 219].

Usage—See Custom.

Vaijayanti—
a commentary on Vishnusutra, 49 [Introduction].

Vaisyas—
Komatis of Madhya Pradesh are a Telugu caste of Vaisyas, 71 [§ 1].
one of the four Hindu castes, 71 [§ 1].

Vanaprastha of Hermit— succession to, Mit., 140 [§ 58].

Vedas—
source of Hindu Law, 5 [Introduction].

Vijnaneswara—
Mitakshara, author of, 78 [§ 11(3)].
stridhana according to, 170 [§ 115].

Viramitrodaya—
stridhana according to, 171 [§ 117].
work of authority in Benares, Bombay and Madras schools, 48, 50 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].

Vishnu—
stridhana according to, 169 [§ 113].

Vivada Chintamani—
stridhana according to, 172 [§ 119].
succession to, according to, 194 [§ 153].
work of authority in Mithila, 50 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].

Vivada Ratnakara—
work of authority in Mithila school, 51 [Introduction], 79 [§ 12].

Vivadatandava—
treatise on inheritance by Kamalakara, 50 [Introduction].

Vyavahara Mayukha—See Mayukha.

Vyavahara Chintamani—
work of authority in Mithila school, 51 [Introduction].

Vyavahara Nernaya—
work of authority in Madras, 56 [Introduction].

Waste—
injunction against widow for, 254 [§ 204].

Watan property—
and adoption, 547 [§ 472].

Widow—
absolute estate taken under a gift or will, 472 [§ 401].
by custom, 201 [§ 168].
accretions to husband's estate, 211 [§ 177].
accumulations of income of husband's estate, 210 [§ 177].
acknowledgment of debt by, 243 [§ 196].
acquisition of new property, from sale proceeds of property left by husband, 215 [§ 177A].

Widow—contd.

adoption by, 526 [§ 452]. See Adoption.
divesting of estate on, 563-565 [§§ 501-506].
under authority from husband, 527-531 [§§ 453-459].
without husband's authority, 532-538 [§ 461-463]. adverse possession against, 252 [§ 201].
adverse possession by, 259 [§ 211].
agreement not to adopt, 531 [§ 459A].
alienation by—See Alienation.
as an heir, Dayabhaga, 157 [§ 88(4)].
Mayukha, 150 [§ 77(4)].
Mitakshara, 111 [§ 43(4)], 147 [§ 72(4)].
bequest of inherited property by, 216 [§ 180]. bequest to a widow, 472 [§ 401].
business inherited by, 242 [§ 194A].
compromises and family arrangements by, 237-242 [§ 192-194]. See Compromises.
co-widows take as joint-tenants, 112 [§ 43(4)].
debts incurred by, 242-243 [§§ 194A, 195]. decree against, how far binding on reversioners, 250-253 [§§ 199-201].
disqualified heir, widow of, 164 [§ 102].
divesting of widow's estate, whether there is a, by reason of—adoption of a son to her husband, 563-565 [§§ 501-503].
remarriage, 112 [§ 43(4)].
unchastity, 161 [§ 96].
doctrine of blending, 215 [§ 177B].
equities on setting aside alienation by, 232 [§ 188].
estate taken by, in property inherited from—males, 201 [§ 168], 203 [§ 170(2)]. females, 203 [§ 169]; Bom., 205 [§ 171]. family arrangement or settlement, 311 [§ 248B].
family house, right of residence in, 605 [§ 562], 613 [§ 573].
female heirs, nature of estate taken by whether analogous to widow's, 201-203 [§§ 168-169]; Bom. 203-205 [§§ 170-171].
funeral expenses of, 608 [§ 566].
gift by widow of property inherited from her husband, 215 [§ 179], 222 [§ 181B(2)(v)], 229 [§ 183(4)].
gift to a widow, 472 [§ 401].
gotraja sapindas, widows of, as heir in Bombay, 143 [§ 64(3)], 145 [§ 68].
whether take a limited estate 203 [§ 170(2)], 205 [§ 171(1)].
Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 404 [§ 315A], 600 [§ 558A]. husband's estate representation by widow of her, 208 [§ 176].
immovable property, inherited from husband, disposition of, 215 [§ 178].
income of husband's estate, 210 [§ 177].
income of husband's estate held in suspense, 213 [§ 177(4)]. inherited property—alienation of. See Alienation.
bequest of, 216 [§ 180].
gift of, 246 [§ 197], 222 [§ 181B(2)(v)], 229 [§ 183(4)]. immovable, power of disposal of, 215 [§ 178].
income of, 210 [§ 177].
lease of, 232 [§ 186].
movable, power of disposal of, 215 [§ 179].
saving from income of, 210 [§ 177].
investment, power of, 249 [§ 198].
kritrima son, adoption of, 571 [§ 515].
lease of immovable property, 232 [§ 186].
legal necessity, 220 [§ 181B].
limited heirs, who are, 206 [§ 174].
estate taken by, whether similar to widow's estate, 208 [§ 176].
doctrine of blending, whether applicable, 215 [§ 177B].
maintenance of, 598 [§ 555A], 601-606 [§§ 559-563].
amount of 607 [§ 566].
on adoption, 565 [§ 505].
malik, gift to widow or other limited heir as, 472 [§ 401].
management, power of, 249 [§ 198].
mortgage of inherited property by, 223 [§ 181D].
mortgagee's duty in mortgage by widow, 225 [§ 182].
movable property inherited from husband, disposition of, 215 [§ 179].

Widow—contd.
necessity, alienation for 220-227 [§ 181B-182].
new property, acquisition of, from sale proceeds of property left by husband, 215 [§ 177A].
partial legal necessity, 234 [§ 189].
partition between co-widows, 111 [§ 43(4)].
partition, rights of widow-mother on, Mit., 404 [§ 316]; Day., 435 [§ 353].
possession, adverse, of, 259 [§ 211].
adverse, against, 252 [§ 201].
property inherited from males, whether widow takes a limited estate in, 201 [§ 168], 203 [§ 170(2)].
property inherited from females, whether widow takes a limited estate in, 201 [§ 169]; Bombay, 205 [§ 171].
purchaser, duty of, in sale by widow, 225 [§ 182].
remarriage of, 111 [§ 43(4)], 145 [§ 68(v)], 538 [§ 467]. and divesting of estate inherited from husband, 605 [§ 563].
and maintenance, 605 [§ 563].
residence in family house, 605 [§ 562].
reversioners, rights of—See Reversioners. rights enlarged by Hindu Succession Act, 438 [§ 357].
sale of inherited property, 216-223 [§§ 181-181C].
in execution of decree against widow, 250 [§ 199].
samanodakas, widows of, as heirs in Bombay, 146 [§ 69].
savings from income of husband's estate, rights over, 210 [§ 177].
spiritual necessity, 216 [§ 181A].
stridhana, property acquired during widowhood how far, 183 [§ 138], 186 [§ 144].
property inherited from husband whether, 174 [§ 122(1)]. share allotted to widow-mother on partition whether, 174 [§122(2)], 178 [§ 128].
divesting of, 565 [§ 504].
suits against, 253-257 [§§ 202-208]. effect of decrees in, 250-253 [§§ 199-201].
surrender of estate by, 243-249 [§ 197].
survivorship between co-widows, 112 [§ 43(4)].
tenant for life, whether widow is merely a, 208 [§ 176].
trade debts incurred by, 242 [§ 194A].
two or more widows. See Co-widows.
unauthorised acts and alienations of, remedies against, 253-257 [§§ 202-207].
unchastity of, and inheritance, 111 [§ 43(4)], 145 [§ 68], 161 [§ 96].
and maintenance, 604 [§ 561].
waste by, injunction to restrain, 254 [§ 204], 255 [§ 207].
widow's estate, special features of, 208 [§ 176].
will, whether widow has power to dispose of inherited property by, 216 [§ 180].
disposal of stridhana by, 185 [§ 143].
property inherited from husband, of, 255 [§ 206].

Widow's estate—See Widow.

Widower—
adoption by, 525 [§ 450(2)].

Wife—
adoption by, 526 [§ 451].
adoption, pregnancy of wife, no bar to, 525 [§ 450(2)]. agreement enabling wife to avoid marriage, validity of, 520 [§ 442(1)]. change of religion by husband and wife's right to maintenance, 600 [§ 557(1)]. disqualified heir, wife of, and exclusion from inheritance, 164 [§ 102].
and maintenance, 600 [§ 558].
divorce by, 519 [§ 441].
doctrine of pious obligation, how far applicable, 358 [§ 291A].
gift to, by husband, 185 [§ 143].
guardianship of, 521 [§ 443].
kritrima son, wife can adopt to herself a, 572 [§ 515(4)]. maintenance of, 597-600 [§§ 553A-558].
maintenance of wife forsaken by husband, amount of, 607 [§ 566].
marital duties of, 520 [§ 442].
number of wives, 510 [§ 430].

Wife—contd.
partition, whether wife entitled to demand, 403 [§ 315].
right of wife to a share on Mitakshara, 403 [§ 315(1)]; Day., 434 [§ 352].
suit for, wife whether a necessary party to, 425 [§ 333(2)(a)(ii)].
stridhana, liability of wife on a contract, whether limited to, 200 [§ 165].
property inherited from male, whether, 180 [§ 130(2), (3)]. saudayika, whether alienable at pleasure, 185 [§ 143(1)].
unchastity of, and maintenance, 599 [§ 556]. See Maintenance.
Will—See Bequest. accumulation, direction for 468 [§ 397]. direction inconsistent with Hindu law, 469, [§ 397 ill. (e)]. direction repugnant to the grant, 469 [§ 397 ill. (b)].
for benefit of minors, 469 [§ 397 ill. (c)].
for charitable purposes, 469 [§ 397 ill. (d)].
for marriage expenses, 469 [§ 397 ill. (dd)].
for payment of debts, 469 [§ 397 ill. (e)]. with object to create perpetuity, 469 [§ 397 ill. (a)].
adoption whether a bar to disposal of adoptor's property by will, 560 [§ 498].
alienation, conditions restraining, validity of, 467 [§ 393]. appointment, power of, 470 [§ 398].
alteration of, 447 [§ 370].
attestation of, 447 [§ 370]. bequest. See Bequest. burden of proof of capacity to make a will, 444 [§ 367].
condition subsequent, 464 [§ 389].
construction of, 452-476 [§§ 377-401].
caution against applying English rules, 471 [§ 399]. estate of inheritance, 455 [§ 380]. intention of testator, 452 [§ 377].
ordinary notions and wishes of Hindus to be considered, 454 [§ 378].
words of inheritance, 455 [§ 380].
contingent bequest, 464 [§ 389].
direction altering course of succession, 456 [§ 382] for accumulation, 468 [§ 397].
postponing payment to legatee, 467 [§ 394].
disinheritance, 446 [§ 368].
documents in the nature of wills, 447 [§ 369A].
election, doctrine of, 450 [§ 374].
endowment created by will, 480-481 [§§ 407-407A].
estate in tail-male, 456 [§ 382].
executors and vesting of property, 451 [§ 376]. estates repugnant to Hindu law, 456 [§ 382].
executors and vesting of property 451 [§ 376].
executors, estate and powers of, 452 [§ 376A].
executors bequest, 452 [§ 376A].
executory bequest, 464 [§ 389].
form of, 446 [§ 369A].
founded on law of gifts, 448 [§ 371].
as to persons, 448-449 [§§ 372-373].
as to property, 448-449 [§§ 372-373].
grant of absolute estate defeasible on happening of subsequent event, 464 [§ 389].
guardian appointed by will, 584 [§ 532].
Hindu Wills Act 21 of 1870, 446 [§ 369], 451 [§ 376].
repeal and re-enactment of, 446 [§ 369], 451 [§ 376].
idol, bequest to an, 484 [§ 410].
joint will, 444 [§ 367].
limited estate, grant of, 456 [§ 381].
limited heir and bequest of inherited property, 216 [§ 180]. maintenance, charge for, whether may be created by will, 610 [§ 569].
saving of right of, 445 [§ 368].
minor's will, 444 [§ 367].
partition, condition restraining, validity of, 406 [§ 320], 467 [§ 393].
by father by will, 410 [§ 324].
by so-called will, 431 [§ 345].

Will—contd.
perpetuity, rules against, 449 [§ 373], 460-464 [§§ 383-387].
persons capable of making wills, 444 [§ 367].
Probate and Administration Act 5 of 1881, 451 [§ 376].
repeal and re-enactment of, 451 [§ 376].
probate and succession certificate, 450 [§ 375].
property which can be bequeathed by, 445 [§ 368].
revocation of, 447 [§ 370].
adoption, by, 448 [§ 370].
marriage of maker of will, by 448 [§ 370].
subsequent birth of a son by, 448 [§ 370].
rules common to gifts and wills, 455-476 [§§ 379-401].
Succession Act, 1925—See Acts.
Tagore case, 455 [§ 379], 458 [§ 382 ill. (e)]. testamentary capacity, 444 [§ 367].
testamentary documents, 447 [§ 369A].
trusts, creation of, by will, 466 [§ 391].
unknown to pure Hindu law, 444 [§ 367].
what property may be bequeathed by, 445 [§ 368].
widow, will by, of husband's estate, 255 [§ 206].
writing when necessary, 447 [§ 369A].

Women's property—See Stridhana, Widow's estate.

Women—
right of, to be in equali jura, 69 [Introduction].

Yajnavalkya—
code or institutes of, 23 [Introduction], 77 [§ 8(2)(ii)].
commentary on Yajnavalkya smriti, 48-49 [Introduction].
stridhana according to, 168 [§ 113].

Yautaka—
a kind of stridhana, 191 [§ 150], 193 [§ 152(4)], 195 [§ 154].
succession to—
Dayabhaga, 196 [§ 155].
Madras school, 193 [§ 152].
Mayukha, 191 [§ 151(1)].
Mithila school, 194 [§ 153].

Yukti— as an auxiliary indice of Dharma, 61 [Introduction].

KASHMIR UNIVERSITY
Iqbal Library
Acc. No 12895
Dated 18.10.79

| BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE | BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |

| Borrower's No. | Issue Date | Borrower's No. | Issue Date |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |

| BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE | BORROWER'S NO. | ISSUE DATE |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |

| Borrower's No. | Issue Date | Borrower's No. | Issue Date |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |